
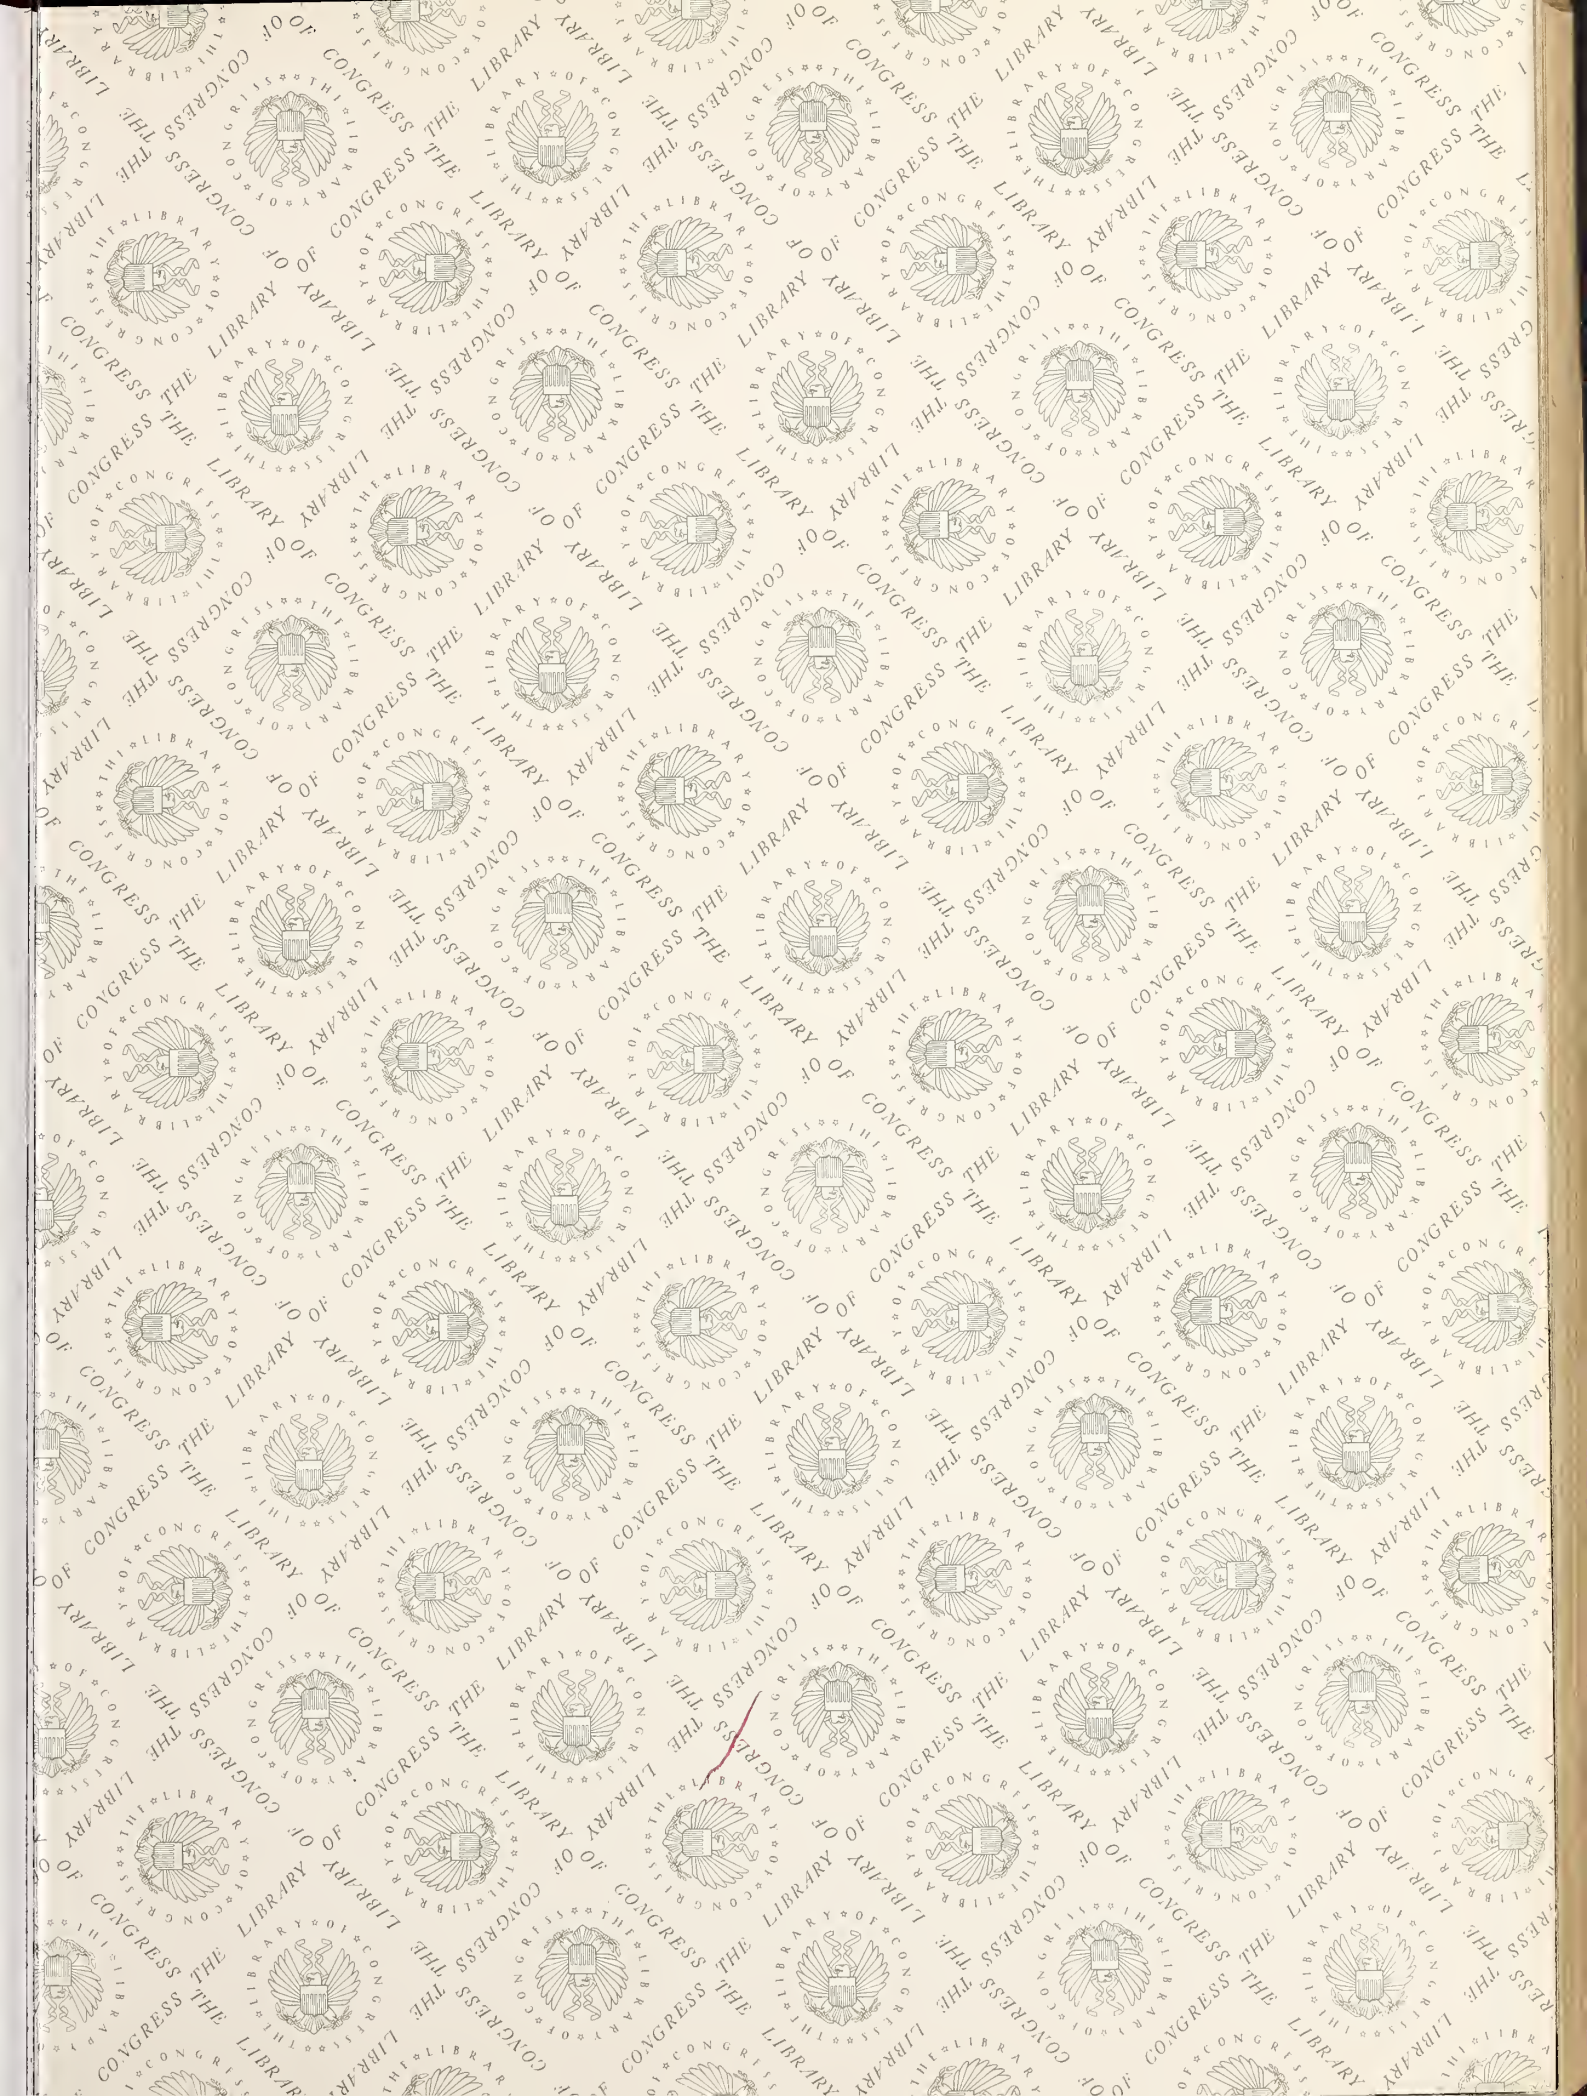
LIBRARY OF CONGRESS THE



Scanned from the collections of
The Library of Congress

Packard Campus for Audio Visual Conservation www.loc.gov/avconservation

Motion Picture and Television Reading Room www.loc.gov/rr/mopic

Recorded Sound Reference Center
www.loc.gov/rr/record

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS THE

MODERN SCREEN

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

DECEMBER

10

CENTS

RARY OF CONGRESS
C 10 1949
C.M.

NORMA SHEARER

NOTED DIRECTORS EXPOSE
TOP RANKING STARS!

It's easy to dress and live smartly, if you don't have to consider the cost. But to have chic clothes and a gracious life on a modern income, you must plan well and follow expert guidance. That's why FASHION was born.

By showing you clothes and accessories that are in the best of taste, of excellent value and still moderately priced, FASHION is a guide to buying.

By telling you about the latest trends in beauty, entertaining, travel, fun, people and living, FASHION keeps you up-to-date.

By helping you adapt these trends to your requirements, FASHION adds charm to the business of living.

If you wish to dress and live with distinction, follow FASHION every month.

• Do you want to be an Evening Star? November FASHION is full of suggestions for gay evenings—dresses, jewelry, shoes, wraps and accessories.

• Are you thirty and unmarried? Whether you are or not, you'll enjoy the amusing article which describes the difficult problem of choosing a husband.

• In the market for a really exciting afternoon dress and accessories? Or perhaps a wool dress that you can wear anywhere? You'll find what you want in November FASHION.

• Have you thought of giving a different look to your Thanksgiving dinner table? Then you'll want to duplicate one of the original centerpieces designed exclusively for FASHION. They are easy to make, cost next to nothing and are unbelievably beautiful.

• Other highlights: A Football Supper to serve guests in a jiffy . . . How to travel comfortably with a child . . . Make-up and coiffures for formal evenings . . . and other features that make the November FASHION well worth reading from cover to cover.

PN 1993
.M334

Lady Esther says "You're Invited to a 'COMING-OUT PARTY' for your NEW-BORN-SKIN!"

Your skin is growing, blooming beneath your old surface skin . . . waiting for the gift of beauty which you can do so much to bring it. Let my 4-Purpose Face Cream help you endow your new-born skin with its birthright of loveliness.

A NEW-BORN SKIN! Think of all the hope for new beauty that lies in those words. It's Nature's radiant promise to you . . . and a scientific fact. For right now, as you look in your make-up mirror . . . every hour of the day and night a new skin is coming to life.

As a flower loses its petals, so your old skin is flaking away in almost unseen particles. But there's danger to your New-Born Skin in these tiny flakes, and in the dirt and impurities that crowd into your pores.

Those dry flakes so often rob you of beauty. They cling in rough patches, keep your powder from looking smooth, and may give a faded appearance to your new-born skin. My 4-Purpose Face Cream helps Nature by gently removing these tiny flakes. Only then can your skin be gloriously reborn.

Did you know...says Lady Esther...that you can make your years of beauty longer if you always take care of your New-Born Skin? Let my 4-Purpose Face Cream help it grow in beauty. It soothes as it gently, surely lifts away the old skin flakes. It softens accumulated impurities—helps Nature refine your pores. Your skin can regain an appearance of youthful freshness!

Ask Your Doctor About Your Face Cream

Only the finest and purest of creams can help your skin to be as beautiful as it can be! Ask your doctor (and all the better if he is a specialist on the skin) about the face cream you are now using.

Ask him, too, if every word Lady Esther says is not true—that her face cream removes the dirt, the impurities and worn-out skin, and helps your budding skin to be more beautiful.

Try my 4-Purpose Face Cream at my expense. See how gently it permeates and lifts the dry skin and dirt—giving you a first glimpse of your beautiful New-Born Skin!

The Miracle of Reborn Skin

Your skin is constantly wearing out—drying—flaking off almost invisibly. But it is immediately replaced by new-born skin—always crowding upward and outward. Lady Esther says you can help make each rebirth of your skin a true Rebirth of Beauty!

★ PROVE AT MY EXPENSE ★

LADY ESTHER,
7110 West 65th St., Chicago, Ill. (62)
Please send me your generous sample tube of Lady Esther Face Cream; also nine shades of Face Powder, FREE and postpaid.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

(If you live in Canada, write Lady Esther, Toronto, Ont.)

DEC 11 1940 ©C1B 482035

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

No matter who is elected, there is no doubt about the People's Choice.

★ ★

Perhaps you should know some few facts about your favorite screen candidate. As follows:

★ ★

In the last 17 annual polls of the nation's critics, M-G-M produced 53 of the 170 best pictures.

★ ★ ★ ★

Of the 100 leading stars and featured players in the movies, 48 are under contract to M-G-M.

★ ★ ★ ★

These include—in alphabetical order—Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Joan Crawford, Robert Donat, Nelson Eddy, Clark Gable, Greta Garbo, Judy Garland, Greer Garson, Hedy Lamarr, Myrna Loy, Jeanette MacDonald, Marx Brothers, Robert Montgomery, Eleanor Powell, William Powell, Mickey Rooney, Rosalind Russell, Norma Shearer, Ann Sothern, James Stewart, Robert Taylor, Spencer Tracy, Lana Turner. To mention but a few.

★ ★ ★ ★

The M-G-M studios in Culver City are the world's largest. They occupy 157 acres and employ 4000 people.

★ ★ ★ ★

M-G-M pictures are produced on thirty giant sound stages, one of which, 310 by 133 feet, is 40 feet high.

★ ★ ★ ★

The laboratory annually prints enough film to encircle the earth at the equator with enough left over to reach from Los Angeles to Boston. No one has ever tried to do this however.

★ ★ ★ ★

Among the outstanding films M-G-M has produced are THE BIG PARADE, BEN-HUR, THE MERRY WIDOW, THE FOUR HORSEMEN, BROADWAY MELODY, ANNA CHRISTIE, THE BIG HOUSE, TRADER HORN, GRAND HOTEL, THE THIN MAN, SMILIN' THROUGH, DAVID COPPERFIELD, THE GREAT ZIEGFELD, MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY, SAN FRANCISCO, THE GOOD EARTH, CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS, BOYS TOWN, TEST PILOT, THE CITADEL, THE WIZARD OF OZ, BABES IN ARMS, GOODBYE MR. CHIPS, NINOTCHKA, NORTHWEST PASSAGE, BOOM TOWN, STRIKE UP THE BAND, and ESCAPE. How many have you seen?

For November we announce two outstanding productions. Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in Noel Coward's "Bitter Sweet". And Judy Garland in George M. Cohan's "Little Nellie Kelly".

★ ★ ★ ★

When the lion roars on the screen, you're in for a good time.

—Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

Modern Screen

Stories

KNEE HIGH TO AN "OSCAR"
Movie-fan Gloria Jean has hitched her wagon to a dozen stars!.... 6

EXPOSING WEAKNESSES OF TOP RANKING STARS
Ace directors turn the spotlight on hitherto invulnerable reputations.. 24

THE MOST MALIGNED WOMAN IN HOLLYWOOD
You thought Hepburn was a madcap? S'prise! She's endearingly normal 26

THE MAN HUNT IS ON!
Blasting the illusion that Hollywood's a gal's happy hunting-ground.. 28

LOVE AND LANA
The exclusive and incredible "inside" on the Turner-Shaw marriage!.. 30

BAD BOY MAKES GOOD
Hollywood's finally given the devil his due—Humph Bogart's a star! 32

CONFIDENTIALLY YOURS
Another nothing-but-the-truth session—this time with Linda Darnell.... 34

FUN IS WHERE YOU FIND IT
Life's a thrill a minute for Bob Cummings, who leads a double life! 36

HOLLYWOOD GANGS UP ON BRENDA MARSHALL
The saga of a star whose face is perpetually red..... 38

A DAY TO REMEMBER
Even if marquees didn't remind you of her, you couldn't forget Laraine 42

A SKIN THAT MEN ADORE
The most potent allure of all is yours practically for the asking..... 44

Fashions

GOING PLACES?
Enslave the stagline as you enter in a dazzling white woolly wrap!.... 53

CHRISTMAS STYLE SCENE FOR A GOOD GIRL
What-to-give hints for distracted Santas..... 54

STEP OUT, GLAMOROUS LADY!
Look like a star—without a star's salary..... 55

SIX GAY DECEIVERS
They'll make you look in the pink, without putting you in the red!..... 56

PROP SHOP
Twinkle and shine in these winter trimmings..... 58

Features

Information Desk..... 8
Movie Reviews..... 10
Modern Hostess..... 12
Our Puzzle Page..... 14
Movie Scoreboard..... 16
Portrait Gallery..... 19
Ice Follies of 1941..... 40
Good News..... 48
On the Set with "Kitty Foyle"..... 52
Crocheted Matchmakers..... 59
Behind the Scenes with "Virginia"..... 60

Cover Girl: Norma Shearer, natural color photograph by Erbit—Varady Studios

PEARL H. FINLEY ● Editor

ALTHEA RICKERT ● Fashion Editor OTTO STORCH ● Art Editor

Vol. 22, No. 1, December, 1940. Copyright, 1940, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single copy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscription price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscription $2.00 a year; foreign subscription $2.20 a year. Entered as second-class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the Postoffice, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. Additional second class entries at Seattle, Wash., San Francisco, Calif., Houston, Texas; Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301773.

Sweethearts

Of all the musical thrills your singing sweethearts ever gave you, here is the greatest! Ziegfeld's memorable stage triumph—crowded with romance and melody—becomes in glorious Technicolor a picture you'll never forget. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer proudly presents...

JEANETTE NELSON

MacDONALD · EDDY

in NOEL COWARD'S

Bitter Sweet

Photographed in Technicolor with

GEORGE SANDERS, IAN HUNTER, FELIX BRESSART

Original Play, Music and Lyrics by Noel Coward. Screen Play by Lesser Samuels

Directed by W. S. VAN DYKE II. Produced by Victor Saville

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

Songs: "THE CALL OF LIFE" "I'LL SEE YOU AGAIN" "WHAT'S LOVE" "TOKAY" "DEAR LITTLE CAFE" "LADIES OF THE TOWN" "ZIGEUNER"

KNEE HIGH TO AN "OSCAR"

BY KIRTLEY BASKETTE

Gloria's following right in the tracks of her Award-winning idols!

THIS year, when Gloria Jean went to Washington for the President's Birthday Ball, she conquered the capital like the British in 1812.

Mrs. Roosevelt fell in love with her at once and led her all around by the hand. The President himself told her his famous stories. She was shown their private quarters—a rare privilege; she had lunch in the dining room; she was toasted in Washington's great hotels and J. Edgar Hoover even escorted her through the government offices. She was fêted and fussed over by famous national figures on every side.

When Gloria got back to Hollywood, someone asked her what had thrilled her most. She sighed soulfully.

"Tyrone Power hugged me!" she breathed.

Yes, Gloria Jean Schoonover thinks she is the luckiest girl in the world and she probably is.

Less than two years ago she was living in a cheap New York rooming house with her ambitious mother, trudging the flinty city pavements hunting a break. Nobody had ever heard of her except a few folks in her home town, Scranton, Pennsylvania. They knew her as a talented, pretty little thrush billed at local benefits, shows and song festivals as "Baby Schoonover."

Today Gloria Jean's name is known wherever movies are shown. She is warm and well fed, golden from the California sun and, while not exactly rich, at the rate she's going she will be before long. She scored a solid hit in her very first picture, "The Underpup;" she co-starred with Bing Crosby in her next one, "If I Had My Way;" and she's starring all by herself in her third, "A Little Bit Of Heaven." She's following right in the fabulous footsteps of Deanna Durbin, guided by the same movie magician, Joe Pasternak, who made Deanna what she is today. All in all, Gloria is a cinch for a fat Hollywood future.

But that's not why Gloria Jean thinks she's lucky. Fame and fortune are things which just don't make her vibrate at all yet. She simply doesn't understand them applied to herself. When she travelled back to Scranton for the world première of "The Underpup," a newsbutcher hopped on the train before they arrived with a stack of Scranton special editions that had Gloria's picture plastered over every page. She flipped right through them without a glance and concentrated on Flash Gordon in the funnies! At the height of the welcome parade which passed her house, Gloria abandoned the cheering throngs to greet her mutt dog, "Wimpy."

The fact is, it simply doesn't occur to Gloria Jean that she's a star. What makes her pinch herself every now and then is the realization that she is actually in Hollywood, walking and talking with her own movie idols; hob-nobbing with Academy Award winners!

One day, while Gloria was making her first picture, Charles Boyer wandered over to her set to see someone or other. Gloria gazed in awe at the romantic Charles and finally was led up and introduced. She stood on tiptoes and quavered in his ear, "Oh, Mr. Boyer—will you do something for me? Will you just walk down the street with me alone, please?" Puzzled but smiling, Boyer offered Gloria his arm, and together they strolled up and down the "New York Street" on Universal's back lot, as all the other little girls in "The Underpup" cast gazed in rapt envy.

"Thank you," sighed Gloria Jean dizzily when the stroll was over. "Now," she said, "I don't care how many autographs you sign, Mr. Boyer. I've had you all to myself!"

The first time Gloria Jean met Deanna Durbin, one of her very special private idols, she stared awestruck and blurted, "Gee, but you're beautiful!"

I could have said the same thing quite easily the day I dropped in on Gloria Jean (Continued on page 81)

"I wish
I could say
I was sorry..."
BETTE DAVIS
in WARNER BROS.' glowing presentation of the brilliant novel and stage triumph by
W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM
The Letter
with
HERBERT MARSHALL
JAMES STEPHENSON
Frieda Inescort • Gale Sondergaard
A WILLIAM WYLER PROD'N
Screen Play by Howard Koch
Music by Max Steiner
A Warner Bros.-First National Picture

NOTE: If you desire a reply by mail, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Bob Warren, Albany, N. Y. Too bad you live so far away—for Helen Parrish is no longer engaged to Forrest Tucker. She's free-lancing and loving it! Rand Brooks is about her most constant suitor at present, but it's not a bit "serious," they say. At seventeen, Helen's a movie veteran, having débuted at the age of three. She's made dozens of pictures, but we hear her next one—"Six Lessons From Madame La Zonga"—is definitely her best. Helen, who's lately being dubbed "the girl with the Petty legs," (they're exactly like those of the famous "Petty girls") can be reached at Universal Studios, Universal City, Calif.

M. Lehocky, Blue Island, Ill. Did you know that if it weren't for a girl named Doris, "Gary Cooper" would probably be just a signature under mediocre cartoons instead of a top-billing name on theatre marquées the world over? It all began when Gary entered Grinnell College's art department and looked into the eyes of the above-mentioned changer of destinies. Their lines crossed, however. Her ambition was to go to California; his major aim—a career as a cartoonist and a home in the mountains of his native Montana. They quarrelled and compromised. Gary, sketch book under his arm, set out for Los Angeles, promising to send for Doris when he was famous. His cartoons failed to impress the Gold Coast, so just for a lark, he tried the movies and succeeded right off the bat. Almost overnight he was Hollywood's man of the hour, and Doris was a thing of the past. Today, more than a dozen years later, Gary's still doing all right. He's one of the busiest men around, but still finds time for sketching, riding and big-game hunting —to say nothing of night-spotting with his lovely wife, Sandra Shaw, and romping with his cunning little daughter. Statistically speaking, he's six feet two and one-half inches tall, weighs 175 pounds and was thirty-nine on May 7.

Clare Green, St. Mary's, Penna. We think it's grand that you have one favorite 'round whom to center all your interest, and who could be a better choice than lovely Ginger Rogers! She's exactly five feet four in her stocking feet, and has the enviable combination of flashing green eyes and red-gold hair. Her own name is Virginia McMath. There are flourishing fan clubs for both her and Paulette Goddard, so drop us a line if you'd like to know how to join either or both. If you'd like to start a club for a star who's not yet so honored, just say the word and we'll send you full instructions as well as a list of prominent "clubless" stars.

Jean Rogers, Cleveland, Ohio. Jeffrey Lynn was born Ragnar Godfrey Lind in Auburn, Mass., on February 16, 1909. He is not married and may be reached at Warner Brothers, Burbank, California. . . . Tony Martin's thirty-first birthday falls on Christmas Day, and he always demands both birthday and Christmas presents. His divorce from Alice Faye became final on March 22 of this year. Tony, who was discovered by no less a personage than Darryl Zanuck himself, was christened Alfred Morris, and may be reached at Columbia Pictures, 1438 North Gower Street, Hollywood, Calif.

Helen Weidaw, Delaware, Ohio. Spencer Tracy, that man who manages to be tough and tender all in one breath, first saw the light of day in Milwaukee, Wis., on the fifth of April, just forty years ago. He was educated in Milwaukee and Kansas City schools until World War I and enlistment in the Navy interrupted his junior year of high school. At the war's end, he continued at Ripon College, where in school dramatics he was first bitten by the "stage bug." Following his studies at the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York, Spencer gained invaluable experience touring with stock companies before his screen début in "Up the River." Unassuming in spite of two Academy Awards, he'd much rather talk about his charming wife, Louise Treadwell, and their two children, Johnny and Susy.

Virginia Black, Arlington, Mass. Leave it to the women to be curious about the ages of the stars! But we can't blame you, really, because it is so difficult to guess just how old most of Hollywood's

(Continued on page 85)

You just can't stump us! Write in for a personal reply

TURBULENT ADVENTURE...SET AGAINST THE RICH, ROMANTIC TAPESTRY OF EARLY ARIZONA!

The story of lovely Phoebe Titus, titan of a woman, and her love for dashing Peter Muncie, Sergeant, U. S. A.! Mighty spectacle! Tempestuous stampedes! War! Lawless raids! Intrepid men and women! At last, in all its wild, brave magnificence, the motion picture drama of Arizona's birth!

Created by a great picture maker... at incalculable cost ... with a superb cast of thousands ... in especially re-created Old Tucson!

Wesley Ruggles' ARIZONA

starring

JEAN ARTHUR

with

WILLIAM HOLDEN

WARREN WILLIAM · PORTER HALL and a cast of thousands

Based on the Saturday Evening Post serial and novel by Clarence Budington Kelland Screen play by Claude Binyon · Directed by WESLEY RUGGLES

A Columbia Picture

WATCH FOR THIS HIT PRODUCTION . . . AT YOUR LOCAL THEATRE

MOVIE REVIEWS

BY WOLFE KAUFMAN

Garland and Rooney clown in "Strike Up the Band."

Cooper and Goddard in "North West Mounted Police."

★★★½ STRIKE UP THE BAND

Though this picture has very little to recommend it except youth, it has so much of that—vital, exciting, exuberant youth—that you'll probably go for it! And the antics of Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney won't make anybody mad, either.

Do you remember "Babes in Arms?" Well, this could be called another version of it with different songs and different dialogue. It's the same basic plot—but Metro probably figured it was good the first time, so why not try it again? Okay, Mr. Metro, do it a third time as long as you keep Judy Garland in it! To our way of thinking, Judy is just about the ne plus ultra of all time. The kid's got everything. She can sing a song like a trouper, she can peddle a line with the best of 'em, and she can do a Conga that'll positively astonish you.

The story concerns the difficulties of an ambitious drummer-boy, Mickey Rooney, in organizing a band. It's not all plain sailing, but eventually he gets his band together for a radio contest and wins a prize offered by Paul Whiteman. Thus ends the plot of the tale, but the entertainment doesn't stop there! You'll love the dances and ditties, especially one swell song entitled "Our Love Affair." Directed by Busby Berkeley.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: A year from the day production began on "Babes in Arms," Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland started the first scene in "Strike Up the Band," directed by Bus Berkeley and produced by Arthur Freed. The same quartette have a date for 1941, to make "Babes on Broadway" . . . Mickey practiced his drum solo for the "Drummer Boy" number two hours a day for a month and two days. While waiting to have it shot, he began picking out the tune on a xylophone that was handy and wound up playing both in the picture . . . Mickey's dad, Joe Yule, who has played in a burlesque house in Los Angeles for a number of years, appears with his son for the second time. First time was in "Judge Hardy and Son" . . . Nine different orchestras are used in the film—a new high for a single picture . . . The miniature band made from various fruits and vegetables, seen in the "Our Love Affair" number, took a crew one month to complete and six men to operate . . . Mickey uses make-up for the second time since his mother applied burnt cork to make his hair suitable for the Mickey McGuire roles . . . During production of "Strike Up the Band," Judy celebrated her eighteenth birthday and her graduation from high school . . . Judy revives "Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl," the song that laughed every sentimental popular ballad off the market back in the days when Marie Dressler made her greatest stage hit . . . Paul Whiteman's "fatherly talk" to Mickey in the picture is virtually the story of Whiteman's own life.

★★★½ NORTH WEST MOUNTED POLICE

Pictures come, stars go, worlds change, but Cecil B. DeMille goes on forever. Here is another of those DeMille specials with his usual can't-miss formula—lots of action, lots of excitement, a terrific cast of stars, some top-notch and thoroughly excitable scenery—but this time it's all wrapped up in a cellophane bundle of beautiful Technicolor! It's a lot of movie, and all of it's swell.

You've probably heard the story many times about the North West mounted policeman who always gets his man. Well, DeMille has to go that yarn one better, of course, so he reminds you that the Texas Rangers used the same slogan. And when both Preston Foster, the Canadian, and Gary Cooper, the Texan, go out to knock off the same meanie, said meanie (George Bancroft) should know enough to give up right away. But he doesn't—the die-hard—not until the grand finale.

To complicate things just a little, both Preston and Gary fall in love with Madeleine Carroll—not that any one blames them—and the picture finishes with one of the boys getting his man and the other getting Madeleine. Now you can have yourself some fun guessing which gets who.

That's not the whole story, of course. There are lots of undercurrents caused by the fact that Madeleine's brother, Robert Preston (don't get the Prestons mixed up), is in love with a blue-eyed half-breed—Paulette Goddard, who is secretly Bancroft's daughter. Walter Hampden, as an Indian chief, Akim Tamiroff and Lynne Overman provide the humorous element, such as it is, and there are a half-dozen other well-known actors and actresses in the picture.

It's not one of those films that we intellectuals are likely to rave about, but it's a good movie. Some of the dialogue is pretty bad, and you have never heard quite such a collection of strange accents, but what's the difference?

The key to this film's success lies in the fact that it is two hours long and not a minute of it drags. Directed by Cecil B. DeMille.—Paramount.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Over 1,000 persons are in the cast, and there are 153 speaking parts . . . This is DeMille's 64th production as he enters his 28th year as a producer-director; this is his first all-Technicolor production although he was the first Hollywood producer ever to use color in a film (in 1917) . . . The Royal Canadian Mounted Police opened its official records to the filmers for research purposes and helped to drill DeMille's "troops". . . Walter Hampden underwent the most unusual bit of make-up for this film ever attempted. Blue-eyed Indians are out of the question, so the color of his eyes was changed to brown by way of invisible contact lenses; first time this has been done

Cagney loves Sheridan in "City for Conquest."

Basserman, Robinson, Best in "A Dispatch from Reuter's."

THERE'S A NEW HIGH IN HOLLYWOOD HITS BOUND TO PLEASE ALL YOU FLICKER FANS

for any film . . . Madeleine Carroll drives a team of half-wild horses in the picture; she did this difficult stunt herself, did not use a double . . . The scene that Lynne Overman got the greatest pleasure out of (plus a goodly number of scratches and black and blue marks) is the one in which he engages in a hand-to-hand fight with Paulette Goddard.

★★★½ CITY FOR CONQUEST

It has been many years since this particular reviewer of films has been so thrilled and excited by a movie. That, of course, is what is jokingly referred to as climbing out on a limb—but any way you want to look at it, in his opinion it is a sock, a smash, a click, a whiz, or whatever else you can think of.

The film gives you Heartbreak Town without missing a beat. It's a story of flying fists and twinkling toes, of gangsters and gals, of guys and goofs. It's everything that's good and everything that's bad. It's hokum and hilarity. It's New York.

There's acting in this picture and writing and direction. And all of it is first-grade. Jimmy Cagney is a prize-fighter who almost becomes a champ in spite of the fact that he hates prize-fighting, because he wants to be as much of a success as his girl, Ann Sheridan. And Ann wants to dance; she wants to be a star and see her name in lights. But that's not in the cards, and she winds up in a burlesque house, broke and hungry, at about the same time that Jimmy, blinded, begins to peddle papers for a living.

Well, it tears your heart out to see Jimmy as the blind newsboy towards the finish of the film. But it isn't sad. That's the strength of this picture. Jimmy, with his awful finish, and Ann, with all the kicking around she's gotten, learn something. They learn that New York has a heart, too—and music, a symphony. And there are good things in the big town. Jimmy's kid brother studies hard at his piano throughout the film, and it's Jimmy's hard-earned coin that helps put the kid through. At the windup he plays a big symphony at Carnegie Hall.

Now, let's hand out the laurels. Cagney and Sheridan are topnotch, and there are two brand new film actors whom you'll hear a lot from in the future—Elia Kazan and Arthur Kennedy. You didn't expect Anthony Quinn to be as good as he is here, and there's a honey of a small bit by Lee Patrick. The director is Anatole Litvak, who's become accustomed to taking bows, and he deserves a lot of them.

And let's not forget young Bill Cagney, Jimmy's brother; this marks his first appearance as a film producer, but not his last; the kid knows his stuff. Directed by Anatole Litvak.—Warner Brothers.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: This is Cagney's 52nd film fight but it's the first he's lost . . . Practically entire cast, as well as author, scenarist and associate producer, are New Yorkers. Even Josephine, the monkey used in the East Side hurdy-gurdy scenes, is one . . . Picture employed a number of unusual-job men; among them, a "piano-untuner," a "razor-duller" and a "wallpaper smudger" . . . Carnegie Hall set cost $12,000 . . . The Madison Square Garden set, including the rings, tunnels, lobby, aisles and dressing-rooms, cost $18,000 to build . . . Authentic scenes, photographed in New York, include Coney Island at night, approach to Williamsburg Bridge, tenements, hospitals, water front and lonesome street corner at 2 a.m. . . . Aben Kandel, author of original novel from which the film was adapted, described New York noises to composer, Max Steiner; result is the seven-minute symphony, "Song of the City," heard in the picture; 92-piece symphony orchestra plays it . . . Ann Sheridan is part Cherokee; her dancing partner, Tony Quinn, part Aztec . . . Three pairs of hose were kept on tap for Ann Sheridan at all times . . . Boxing gloves worn by Cagney and his opponents weighed only 4 ounces. The reason for not using the heavy regulation type was to prevent arm fatigue on the part of the actors.

★★★½ A DISPATCH FROM REUTER'S

You'd never forgive yourself if you let the title of this one keep you away, because here's a film which completely escapes the tedium of most pictures based on facts. Besides, there's a warm, deep, human love story that you will remember for a long time.

Eddie Robinson opened a lot of eyes when people saw what a fine and intelligent actor he was in "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet." Silly, of course, because he played Shakespeare and practically everything else before he ever came to Hollywood; and again in this picture he handles a role completely different from anything he has attempted on the screen before, that is—a genuine, warm, and exhilarating character.

Maybe you've already heard the story of Julius Reuter (Robinson), founder of the first international news-gathering service which still covers the world and is as well-known in Europe as our own Associated Press or International News Service.

It is an exciting newspaper yarn with a lot of thrilling historical background showing how Reuter originated the idea of sending messages by carrier pigeons; how he got the idea of gathering and selling news to papers for the first time. When telegraph outmoded pigeons, he was the first man to send a news story over the telegraph. He scooped the world on the occasion of Emperor Louis Napoleon's settlement of peace in Europe and scooped Europe at the time President Lincoln was shot.

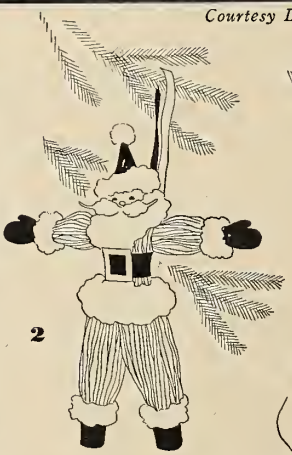
It's not just thrilling excitement that makes this an outstanding film, but the heart-warming (Continued on page 15)

In the light of Coming Events

Courtesy Dennison Mfg. Co.

1

3

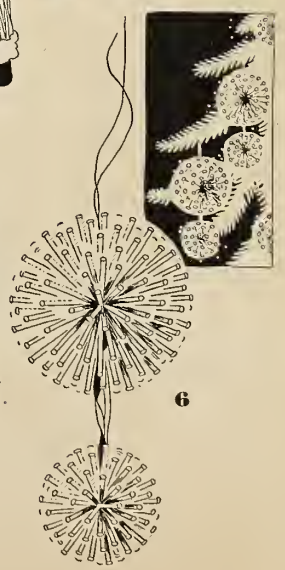


Start Now for a More Festive Yuletide

Don't you realize that it will be here before you know it! What will? Why Christmas of course. And it's none too soon to start planning and plotting for those important little things that pay such valuable dividends. We mean artistic gift wrappings, merry holiday decorations for your hearthside and gay trimmings to hang on the Tree.

You can get started immediately by simply filling in and mailing to us the coupon on the opposite page. In return, we'll send you, promptly and without cost, a detailed description of how to make (1) the wistful little angels and (2) the jovial Santa you see pictured here. There are so many different ways you can use them to decorate your home. For instance, let the angels spread glad tidings in a duet on the mantel, in a solo on each window cord or in mixed chorus with other décor on the dinner table. And you can put Saint Nick on the outermost limb of the tree. The older children will just love to make these figures, but they may find it even more fun and lots easier to fashion the tree ornament and package decorations shown on this page. These are made out of such familiar things as cellophane glassips, sealing wax, notarial seals, gummed labels and stars and both transparent and colored Scotch tape, all of which you can easily pick up at the stationery and gift counters of your local variety store. Get started now! Don't forget to mail the coupon on the opposite page for the instructions for the angels, Santa and gift wrappings.

For the other decorations pictured here, follow the



2

5

4

6

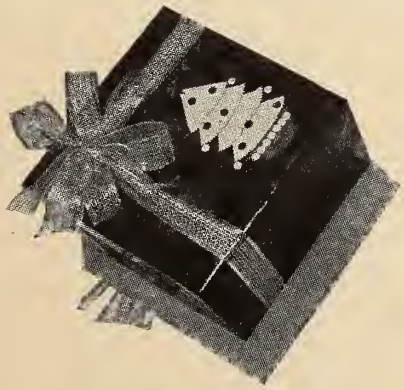
BY MARJORIE DEEN

directions below. You can't go wrong, especially with these cute Dennison sketches to guide you.

CLOWN'S HEAD (3)

Use a metal-rimmed tag for the head, and red and black gummed dots for the eyes and nose; red lawyers' seals form the mouth and cheeks. For neck ruff, fold two large notarial seals in half and fasten to head. Decorate with bow of silver ribbon. For the hat roll a notarial seal around your finger and join edges together. Slip a loop with a knot through hat before fastening it to head.

STAR ORNAMENT (4)



Place a length of silver ribbon between two notarial seals. Moisten two large gummed or silver stars and place one on each side of seal. Decorate loop with a bow of silver ribbon or cellophane. Make flocks of these single units for the tree; or fashion them into long garlands to loop over the branches or from one side of a window to the other.

MINIATURE TREES (5)

Make each tree out of a large colored tag (they are available in several colors). Measure up from the bottom three-quarters of an inch and draw a horizontal line from side to side. Measure in three quarters of an inch from each side and draw two vertical lines from the horizontal line to the lower edge of the tag. Cut out the two corner squares, thus formed, leaving the small center strip to form the trunk of the tree. Now draw a diagonal line from the center of tag, above the trunk, to both outer edges of the horizontal line. Score these lines with the point of the scissors and bend sides back to form a triangle. Fasten sides together in back with transparent Scotch tape. Decorate front with gold stars and use gold seals for tree base.

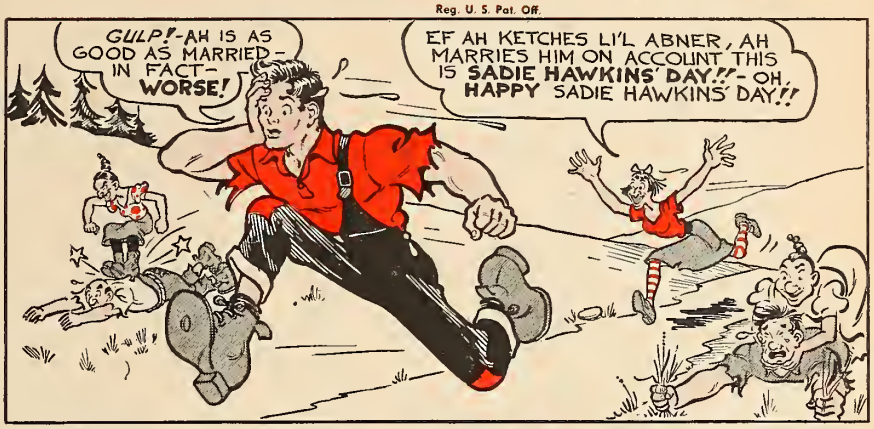
GLASSIP POMPONS (6)

Cut 25 glassips into three-inch sections. Top both ends with sealing wax—white wax on blue, red or other colored sippers, blue, silver or gold wax on the colorless sippers. Group the wax-tipped glassips together, ends even, and wind spool wire twice around the center. Pull hard on wire, fasten firmly with a twist and knot. As you pull on the wire, the glassips will spread out into a pompon. Leave an end of surplus wire for a loop of ribbon.

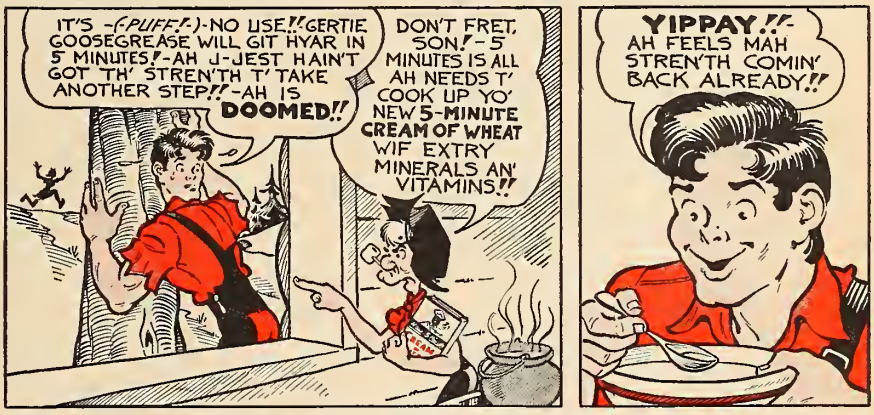
HOME SERVICE DEPARTMENT
MODERN SCREEN MAGAZINE
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Please send me free directions for making Santa Claus, Christmas Angels and fancy packages as illustrated.

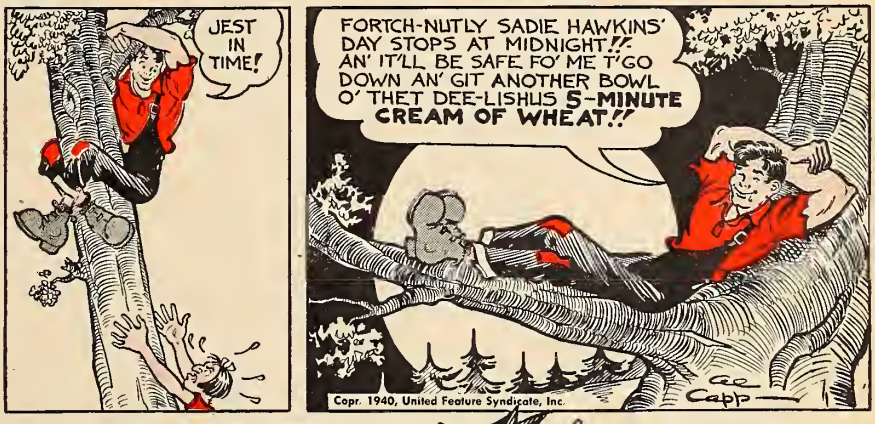
Name .....



Address ..... (Street, Number)



City ..... State .....



(Paste coupon on postcard)

LI'L ABNER by AL CAPP.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

MIXED-UP BY MAKE-UP? . . JUST

Be Yourself.. Be Natural!

ARE you going wild trying to find YOUR OWN shade of lipstick among the thousands of shades on the market? Use TANGEE NATURAL...actually the lipstick of a thousand shades...for Tangee changes as you apply it to your lips, from orange in the stick, to the ONE shade of red JUST RIGHT for your skin-coloring! For perfect make-up harmony, match your lips with Tangee Face Powder and Tangee Creme or Compact Rouge.

You'll find Tangee Natural helps END THAT PAINTED LOOK. And, once you've applied Tangee, the special cream base will keep your lips smooth and soft for hours and hours!

TANGEE Natural

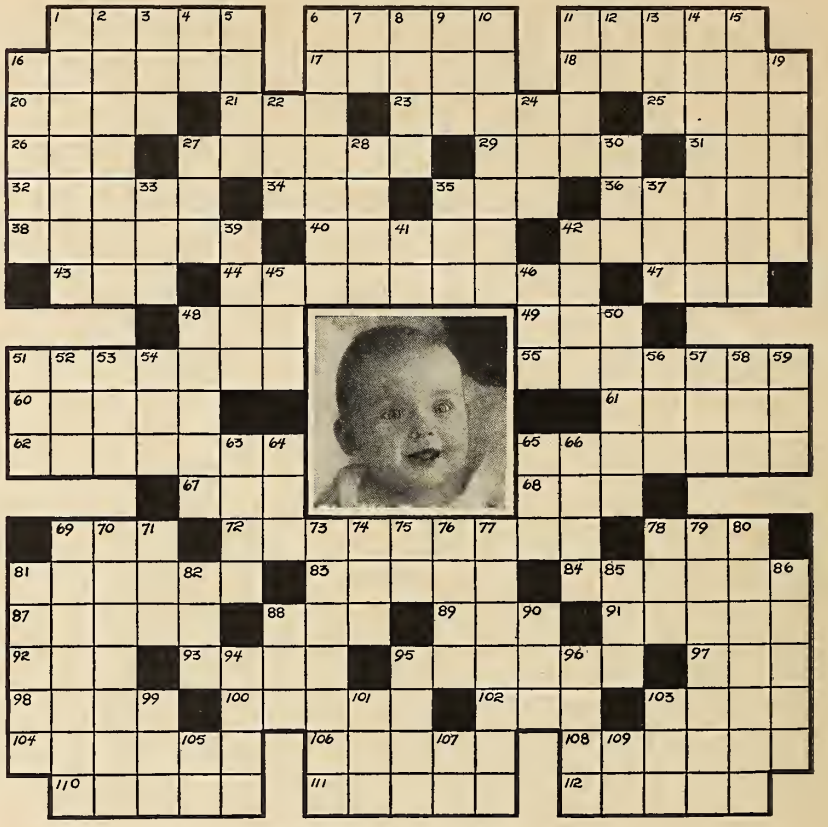
"WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS LIPSTICK"

SEND FOR COMPLETE MAKE-UP KIT

The George W. Luft Co. Dist., 417 Fifth Ave., New York City...Please rush "Miracle Make-up Kit" of sample Tangee Lipsticks and Rouge in both Natural and Theatrical Red Shades. Also Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). (15¢ in Canada.)

Check Shade of Powder Desired:



☐ Peach ☐ Light Rachel ☐ Flesh
☐ Rachel ☐ Dark Rachel ☐ Tan

*Name*_____
(Please Print)

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____ MM120

OUR PUZZLE PAGE

Puzzle Solution on Page 83

ACROSS

1. Hero of "Boom Town"
6. Dominant feature
11. Male lead of "Little Bit Of Heaven"
16. Michael - - - - - -
17. Femme in "Dance, Girl, Dance"
18. He stars in "The Californian"
20. Instrument Anita Louise plays
21. Shirley Temple's birthmonth: abbr.
23. Countess in "Escape"
25. Malt beverages
26. V- - - Zorina
27. Actress in "Lucky Partners"
29. - - - - Brooks
31. Jack - - - ie
32. "Lillian Russell"
34. Star of "I Married Adventure"
35. Fondle
36. Girl in "Brigham Young"
38. Right of holding
40. Duchess in "All This, And Heaven Too"
42. Dennis Morgan's former name
43. Fix firmly
44. Wife of Tyrone Power
47. Organ of hearing
48. Three: prefix
49. B - - - Lugosi
51. Heroine in "Virginia"
55. Star of "Wyoming"
60. One of the archangels
61. Star of "Diamond Frontier"
62. Overhanging
65. Femme lead of "Flowing Gold"
67. With Colbert in "Arise My Love"
68. Poetic for "evening"
69. Birthmonth of 72 across: abbr.
72. Popular actress pictured above
78. Sheep
81. Who starred in "Dr. Syn?"
83. William Powell's wife
84. Comic in "When The Daltons Rode"
87. Stems
88. A little child
89. High explosive: abbr.
91. Open country
92. Mad girl in "They Drive By Night"
93. Star of first "Way Of All Flesh"
95. First name of our star
97. Bud Abbott's comic partner
98. She's fun in "Pride And Prejudice"
100. Hint
102. Gr- - - Garbo
103. Encircle
104. Veteran in "Dr. Kildare Goes Home"
106. Employer
108. "Information, - - - - - -"
110. Sea eagles
111. Icelandic poems
112. World War battlefield

DOWN

1. "The Great Dictator"
2. Opposite "Foreign Correspondent"
3. Lofty mountain
4. The "Nancy D - - w" series
5. Evelyn - - - - p
6. Spanish girl in "Rangers Of Fortune"
7. "- -, Johnny, How You Can Love"
8. Zest
9. Stars meet at C - - -'s
10. Wise-cracking comedienne
11. Hal Roach's sad comic
12. "The Great McGin - -"
13. Constellation
14. He's in "Comin' Round The Mountain"
15. Bread mixer
16. Grain
19. Glacial ridge
22. For
24. Jessie - - - thews
27. Hindu weight
28. - - - - Bryant
30. Unclaimed fan letters go here: abbr.
33. Director's call to end scenes
35. Buster Keaton's missile
37. Anger
39. Newcomer in "River's End"
41. Initials of a ventriloquist
42. Actor in "Girl From God's Country"
45. Nothing
46. "Dr. Kildare"
48. Sidney - - - - -
50. "There's Magic In His Eyes" is his next
51. Mug
52. Exist
53. Dog, - - - Tin Tin
54. Ann Sheridan's nickname
56. - - - Chaney, Jr.
57. Aide-de-camp: abbr.
58. Letter in alphabet
59. "Forty Little Moth - - -"
63. Scolds
64. Norse god of war
65. Edith - - - lows
66. Actor: Phillip - - - -
69. Boy in "Swiss Family Robinson"
70. M-G-M dancing star
71. Command
73. Actor in "Turnabout"
74. Tiny insect
75. Southern state: abbr.
76. To the inside of
77. Falcons
78. Actress Arden
79. He's in "Those Were The Days"
80. Sanction
81. Elaine Barrie was called this
82. Compass point
85. Great dramatic actress
86. Musical exercise
88. RKO's new western hero
90. Small horse
94. Wire measures
95. He filmed North Pole scenes
96. A signal for soldiers
99. Girl's name
101. Cover
103. Jewel
105. "These Thr - -"
107. Actor in "Johnny Apollo": init.
109. Behold

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 11)

love story as well. You can't imagine Robinson in a romantic mood? Well, then, just look at him here in the scene where, as a young man, he is madly in love with Edna Best but is afraid to tell her so. You will want to take them both in your arms and hug them, they are so lovable.

Though the leads are in the hands of Robinson and Miss Best—and capable hands they are—much of the credit is due Albert Basserman, the 72-year-old gent who has been making a habit of running away with pictures; Eddie Albert, perfectly cast as Reuter's younger brother, a dreamy, flibberty-gibberty youngster who would rather write poetry than attend to business; Gene Lockhart, Otto Kruger, Nigel Bruce and Montagu Love. Directed by William Dieterle.—Warner Brothers.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: The actors and actresses, on an exact reproduction of the Ford Theatre stage in Washington, speak their lines from "Our American Neighbors" just as they were delivered the night Lincoln was assassinated . . . Carrier pigeons used in the film knew how to fly one way only—home—so sets had to be reconstructed at their owner's ranch, duplicating those built at the Burbank studio . . . Largest set of the picture was the wild, wind-swept Irish coast, where laborers struggle to complete the last section of Reuter's private telegraph wire . . . Robinson's make-up, less elaborate than that used for "Dr. Ehrlich," still required an hour and a half to apply . . . In honor of his tenth anniversary of employment at Warners, the crew presented Director Dieterle with a bronze-covered book of off-stage and production stills from his old pictures.

★★★ Spring Parade

A few years ago this film would have led the field without any possible quibbling. It is Deanna Durbin's newest film and should rank right along with the marvelous septette that preceded it. But, unfortunately, it bumps up against a strange psychological factor. It is gay, happy, full of life and fun—but it is set in pre-war Vienna. Consequently, the gayer it gets, the more happiness and life it exudes, the sadder you feel, sitting there in the theatre knowing that that carefree, wonderful way of life is dead and gone.

Joe Pasternak, the magician of Universal City, produced it, and it has all the usual Pasternak touches; impeccable taste, charm, vivacity. But for once, I am afraid, Mr. Pasternak guessed wrong. There was no reason to transport Deanna to Vienna; she's a good American girl and there are plenty of good American stories that don't have that overtone of tragedy.

Having gotten all of which off our chest, let us proceed to an examination of the many things about this film which are excellent. The story is a scatter-brained little item about a peasant girl (Deanna) who falls in love with a soldier-drummer (Robert Cummings). His trouble is that he wants to be a composer but nobody will let him, and her trouble is that she is just a country-maid who can't get used to city ways. It is that last which saves the day for both of them, for Deanna, with refreshing disregard for convention, goes directly to

(Continued on page 17)

JOAN BENNETT IN THE EDW. SMALL FILM "THE SON OF MONTE CRISTO"

JOAN BENNETT
chooses the easy way to alluring skin . . . a Woodbury Beauty Nightcap

Joan's hairdresser advises bed-time care with Woodbury Cold Cream, as told to Louella Parsons
Noted Movie Columnist

1. Recently, Joan's hairdresser exclaimed, "At the hairline, your skin is dry as paper!" He advised a Woodbury Beauty Nightcap. Now at bedtime Joan cleanses with Woodbury Cold Cream. Pats on a light film to soften skin overnight.

2. As her hairdresser predicted, Joan's Woodbury Beauty Nightcap helps keep her skin like velvet. At a "kid party" some weeks later, Joan took the bow when a toast was raised "To the girl who looks as young as her 'get-up'."

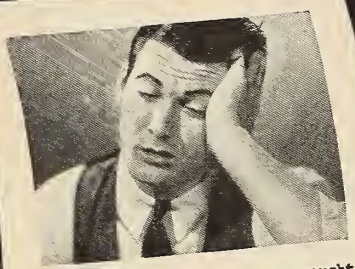
Night Time is "Beauty Refreshment" Time

Your skin has its best chance to grow refreshed while you sleep. So every night at bedtime use 3-Way Woodbury Cold Cream. 1. It cleanses . . . safely. 2. It lubricates, releasing rich oils to soften dry skin. 3. It gently invigorates the skin, cooling and refreshing as it cleanses. Get a jar of 3-Way Woodbury Cold Cream today! So little in cost . . . so much for your beauty! Only $1.00, 50¢, 25¢, 10¢ a jar.

CLEANSES safely
Smooths as it LUBRICATES
INVIGORATES

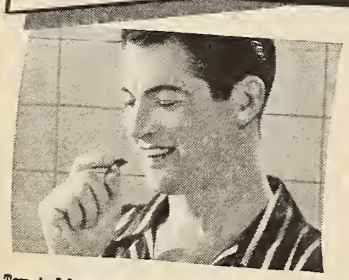
WOODBURY COLD CREAM
THE 3-WAY BEAUTY CREAM

MAIL NOW FOR GENEROUS TUBE . . . FREE!
(Paste on Penny Postcard)



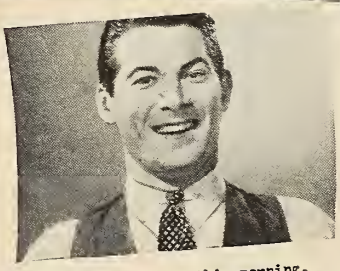
John H. Woodbury, Inc., 6619 Alfred St., Cincinnati, Ohio
(In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario

Please send me, free and postpaid, a generous-size tube of 3-Way Woodbury Cold Cream. Also 8 smart shades of exquisite Woodbury Powder.



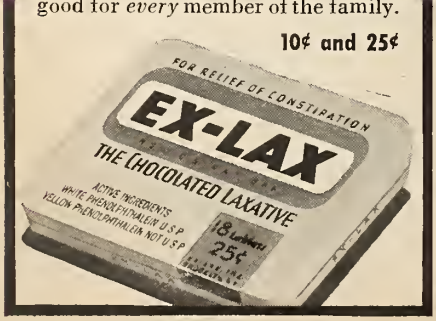
*Name*_____

*Address*_____



Mr. R--- makes a Confession

Almost got fired today. Boss caught me napping at my desk. The trouble is I need a laxative. But I hate to take the awful stuff.



Tom told me to try Ex-Lax and I bought a box on my way home. Took some before turning in for the night. A cinch to take - it tastes just like chocolate!

Feel like a million this morning. Ex-Lax worked fine. Didn't upset me or keep me awake last night. Boy, watch me tear into my work today!

The action of Ex-Lax is thorough, yet gentle! No shock. No strain. No weakening after-effects. Just an easy, comfortable bowel movement that brings blessed relief. Try Ex-Lax next time you need a laxative. It's good for every member of the family.

10¢ and 25¢

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

(200 pictures rated this month)

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and the authoritative newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on film not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

Picture	General Rating
Abe Lincoln in Illinois (RKO)	C 4★
Alias the Deacon (Universal)	2½★
All This, and Heaven Too (Warners)	4★
And One Was Beautiful (M-G-M)	2½★
Andy Hardy Meets Debutante (M-G-M)	3★
Angel From Texas, An (Warners)	2★
Anne of Windy Poplars (RKO)	2★
*Argentine Nights (Universal)	3★
Babies For Sale (Columbia)	2½★
Bad Men of Carson City (Universal)	2★
Beyond Tomorrow (RKO)	2½★
Bill of Divorcement, A (RKO)	3★
Biscuit Eater, The (Paramount)	3★
Black Diamonds (Universal)	2★
Blondie on a Budget (Columbia)	2★
Boom Town (M-G-M)	3½★
Boys from Syracuse, The (Universal)	3★
Brigham Young—Frontiersman (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Brother Orchid (Warners)	3★
Buck Benny Rides Again (Paramount)	3½★
Calling Philo Vance (Warners)	2½★
Captain Is a Lady, The (M-G-M)	2½★
Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise (20th Century-Fox)	3★
*Christmas in July (Paramount)	3★
City for Conquest (Warners)	3½★
Comin' Round the Mountain (Paramount)	2★
Courageous Dr. Christian, The (RKO)	2★
Cowboy From Texas (Republic)	2★
Cross Country Romance (RKO)	2½★
Curtain Call (RKO)	2½★
*Dance, Girl, Dance (RKO)	2★
Dark Command (Republic)	3★
Devil's Island (Warners)	2½★
*Dispatch From Reuter's, A (Warners)	3½★
Dr. Christian Meets The Women (RKO)	2★
Dr. Cyclops (Paramount)	C 3★
Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet (Warners)	3½★
Dr. Kildare Goes Home (M-G-M)	3★
Dr. Kildare's Strange Case (M-G-M)	2½★
Doctor Takes A Wife, The (Columbia)	3★
Earthbound (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Edison, the Man (M-G-M)	3½★
Flight Angels (Warners)	2½★
Florian (M-G-M)	2½★
Flowing Gold (Warners)	3★
Foreign Correspondent (United Artists)	4★
Forty Little Mothers (M-G-M)	2½★
Four Sons (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Free, Blonde and 21 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
French Without Tears (Paramount)	2½★
Gambling on the High Seas (Warners)	2½★
Ghost Breakers, The (Paramount)	3★
Girl from God's Country (Republic)	2★
Girl in 313 (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Gold Rush Maisie (M-G-M)	2½★
Gone With the Wind (M-G-M)	4★
Grapes of Wrath, The (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Great McGinty, The (Paramount)	3½★
*Great Profile, The (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Half a Sinner (Universal)	2★
He Stayed for Breakfast (Columbia)	2½★
Hidden Gold (Paramount)	2½★
Hired Wife (Universal)	3★
Honeymoon Deferred (Universal)	2½★
Hot Steel (Universal)	2★
House of Seven Gables (Universal)	2½★
Howards of Virginia, The (Columbia)	3½★
I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby (Universal)	2★
If I Had My Way (Universal)	C 3★
I Love You Again (M-G-M)	3★
I Married Adventure (Columbia)	3★
In Old Missouri (Republic)	2★
Irene (RKO)	3★
Island of Doomed Men (Columbia)	2★
Isle of Destiny (RKO)	2★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
It All Came True (Warners)	2½★
I Was an Adventuress (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Jahnny Apolla (20th Century-Fox)	3★
La Conga Nights (Universal)	2★
Ladies Must Live (Warners)	2★
Lillian Russell (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Little Old New York (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Lone Wolf Meets A Lady, The (Columbia)	2★
Lucky Cisco Kid (20th Century-Fax)	3★
Lucky Partners (RKO)	3★
Mad Men of Europe (Columbia)	2★
Mal He's Making Eyes At Me (Universal)	2½★
Man I Married, The (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Man Wha Talked Toa Much, The (Warners)	2½★
Maryland (20th Century-Fax)	3½★
Men Against the Sky (RKO)	3★
Midnight (Paramount)	3★
Money and the Woman (Warners)	2½★
Mortal Storm, The (M-G-M)	4★
Mummy's Hand, The (Universal)	2½★
Murder in the Air (Warners)	2★
My Favorite Wife (RKO)	3★
My Little Chickadee (Universal)	2½★
My Love Came Back (Warners)	3½★
My Son, My Son (United Artists)	3½★
New Moon (M-G-M)	3★
*North West Mounted Police (Paramount)	3½★
Northwest Passage (M-G-M)	4★
No Time for Comedy (Warners)	3★
Oklahoma Kid, The (Warners)	3★
One Crowded Night (RKO)	2★
One Million B. C. (United Artists)	C 3★
Opened by Mistake (Paramount)	2½★
Our Town (United Artists)	4★
Outside 3-Mile Limit (Columbia)	2½★
Out West With The Peppers (Columbia)	C 2★
Parole Fixer (Paramount)	2½★
Passport to Alcatraz (Columbia)	2★
Pastor Hall (United Artists)	3½★
Phantom Raiders (M-G-M)	2★
Pier 13 (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Pinocchio (RKO)	C 4★
Pioneers of the Frontier (Columbia)	2★
Pop Always Pays (RKO)	2½★
Prairie Law (RKO)	2★
Pride and Prejudice (M-G-M)	3½★
Private Affairs (Universal)	2½★
Public Deb No. 1 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Quarterback, The (Paramount)	2½★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Ragtime Cawboy Joe (Universal)	2★
Ramparts We Watch, The (March of Time-RKO)	3½★
Rangers of Fortune (Paramount)	3★
Rebecca (United Artists)	4★
Rhythm on the River (Paramount)	3½★
Road to Singapore, The (Paramount)	2½★
Safari (Paramount)	2½★
Sailor's Lady (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Saint Takes Over, The (RKO)	2½★
Sandy Is a Lady (Universal)	C 2½★
Saturday's Children (Warners)	2½★
Sea Hawk, The (Warners)	3½★
Sidewalks of London (Paramount Release)	3★
Sing, Dance, Plenty Hot (Republic)	2★
Slightly Honorable (United Artists)	3★
South of Pago Pago (United Artists)	2½★
South to Karanga (Universal)	2½★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal)	C 2½★
Sporting Blood (M-G-M)	2½★
Spring Parade (Universal)	C 3★
Stanley and Livingston (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Star Dust (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Strange Cargo (M-G-M)	3★
Stranger on the Third Floor (RKO)	3★
Strike Up the Band (M-G-M)	C 3½★
Stronger Than Desire (M-G-M)	2½★
Susan and God (M-G-M)	3½★
Swiss Family Rabinsan (RKO)	C 3★
Tear Gas Squad (Warners)	2★
They Drive by Night (Warners)	3★
Thase Were the Days (Paramount)	C 2½★
Three Faces West (Republic)	3★
Three Smart Girls Grow Up (Universal)	C 3★
Thundering Frontier (Columbia)	2★
'Til We Meet Again (Warners)	3★
Tom Brown's School Days (RKO)	C 3★
Torrid Zane (Warners)	3★
Tower of Landan (Universal)	2★
Turnabout (United Artists)	3★
Twenty Mule Team (M-G-M)	3★
Twenty-One Days Together (Columbia)	3★
Two Girls on Braadway (M-G-M)	2½★
Typhaan (Paramaunt)	3★
Untamed (Paramount)	2★
Vigil in the Night (RKO)	3★
Waterloo Bridge (M-G-M)	3½★
Way af All Flesh, The (Paramount)	3★
*Westerner, The (United Artists)	3★
We Wha Are Young (M-G-M)	3★
When the Daltans Rode (Universal)	3★
Women in War (Republic)	2½★
Women Withaut Names (Paramount)	2½★
Yau Can't Fool Yaur Wife (RKO)	2★
Young As You Feel (20th Century-Fax)	2★
Yaung People (20th Century-Fax)	C 2½★
Young Tom Edisan (M-G-M)	C 4★

(Continued from page 15)

the Emperor with her problems, and he is so kindly, sweet and understanding that everything turns out swell. (But here, too, Mr. Pasternak, just a word of reproach; there was no need to gush so much about what a lovely old gent the Emperor was; some of us can remember back twenty years or so, you know.)

Deanna is darling, of course. She grows histrionically with every film. Here she is a flirtatious and charming young vixen, with more poise, more appeal than ever before. And Cummings, opposite her, is an excellent choice, too. There are very few young men in town who can play a daft youngster quite as well as Bob.

Next acting bow goes to S. Z. Sakall, the Hungarian actor who was known in pre-Hitler Europe as one of the top players. He doggone near steals this film.

Anne Gwynne is another girl who is destined to go places. She reminds one a little of Marion Davies in her prime with that roguish twinkle in her eye. Her future depends on the kind of material she's given in the next few pictures.

There are a couple of lovely dance routines, some beautiful photography and four exciting songs, best of which is perhaps "It's Foolish But It's Fun." Directed by Henry Koster.—Universal.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: This is the eighth picture to star Deanna Durbin, all produced by Joe Pasternak . . . It is the fifth Durbin picture to be directed by Henry Koster . . . Three of the songs in the film were written by Robert Stolz, who made history with "Two Hearts in Three Quarter Time" . . . This is the first time Deanna has appeared in costume; also the first time she does any dancing to speak of; it took her (and 48 dancers) two weeks to learn the strenuous czardas dance which she does with Mischa Auer . . . The scenes inside Emperor Franz Josef's palace were made on the largest interior set ever constructed at Universal; 800 dress extras, garbed in authentic costumes of the period, are in this scene.

★★★ The Westerner

This is a swell, rip-roaring movie and you'll enjoy it. But here's a shock! Gary Cooper is the star—but Walter Brennan runs away with the acting honors in his

(Continued on page 87)

Sweet 'n' smooth are Nancy Kelly and Vera West's designs for "Caribbean Holiday," her latest stint.

PRESENTING

TUDOR PLATE

SERVICE WARE

BY ONEIDA COMMUNITY SILVERSMITHS

Three-Piece Service only $20

• This distinguished new Lakewood* pattern Service in Tudor Plate* includes coffee or tea pot, creamer and sugar. Tray, $10. Also available in the Haddon pattern.

ENTREE DISH $15. Henley* design. One of the most popular and useful pieces. The handle unlocks so cover can be used for second dish.

GRAVY BOAT AND TRAY $10. Haddon* design. Another ideal piece for gifts and personal use. Designed by Oneida Community Silversmiths.

*TRADE MARK

COPR. 1940, ONEIDA LTD.

34-PIECE SERVICE $19

The new Trousseau Service for eight is an outstanding value in quality silverplate. On budget terms in four popular patterns (June pattern illustrated*). Includes eight each of teaspoons, knives, forks, oval soup spoons and a butter knife and sugar spoon. Wearproofed guarantee assures extra years of service.

TYRONE POWER
Exciting as never before . . . in the most famous of all screen roles!
THE MARK OF Zorro
with LINDA
DARNELL
and
BASIL RATHBONE
GALE SONDERGAARD • EUGENE PALLETTE • J. EDWARD BROMBERG
ROBERT LOWERY • CHRIS-PIN MARTIN
MONTAGU LOVE • JANET BEECHER
Associate Producer RAYMOND GRIFFITH • Directed by ROUBEN MAMOULIAN • Screen Play by John Taintor Foote • Adaptation by Garrett Fort • Based on the story "The Curse of Capistrano" by Johnston McCulley
A TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX PICTURE
A masked adventurer . . . the jagged mark of his sword striking terror into every heart but hers!

Myrna Loy

A fugitive from wifedom, Myrna's a fashion editor in M-G-M's romantic comedy, "Third Finger, Left Hand"

Gary Cooper

You'll love him in Paramount's "North West Mounted Police" — he's terrific in Technicolor!

Carole Lombard

She's a mail order bride in RKO's new comedy-drama, "They Knew What They Wanted"

ENGSTEAD-HIGGINS

HURRELL

Errol Flynn

At his swashbuckling best as Jeb Stuart in Warner's colorful, pre-Civil War adventure story, "Santa Fe Trail"

HOLLYWOOD HEART TREATMENT!

Texas Ranger Gary Cooper gets his man, but loses his heart to Madeleine Carroll in "North West Mounted Police."

Exciting Paulette Goddard plays havoc with the heart of that gallant "Mountie" Robert Preston.

"Arise, my love, and fly away with me!" Ray Milland and Claudette Colbert, partners-in-love in Paramount's "Arise, My Love!"

Dear Joan--

Got your note about the difficulties you are having with Bill. That Reno-vation stuff is the bunk. I've a better idea. Take him to the moving pictures! Crazy? Not a bit of it. I've just glimpsed two of the most powerful demonstrations of the power of love even my experienced orbs have ever seen. First, Paramount's amazing new Cecil B. DeMille Technicolor drama of the big open spaces, "North West Mounted Police." The old master has managed to weave into his yarn about the gallant red coats not one but two of the most convincing love stories I've ever seen on the screen. Gary Cooper in his best, and I mean best, role to date and Preston Foster compete for the love of Madeleine Carroll in a romance that'll have Bill dewy-eyed. And Paulette Goddard and Robert Preston unravel a love story that would send an iceberg into thermostatic ecstatics.

If "North West Mounted Police" doesn't succeed in mellowing him, and I'm sure it will, you don't need to worry. Paramount's "Arise, My Love" is just about the answer to the lovelorn's prayer. Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland make this Mitch Leisen combination of the laughter of "Midnight," the heart appeal of "Farewell to Arms," into THE love picture of the decade. It's tender. It's titilating. It's terrific. Bill'll be holding your hand before the end of the first reel...kissing you by the fifth.

But you get the idea...so watch for these two great love pictures...collect Bill...and watch 'em knock Reno foolishness out of both your heads.

Yours helpfully,

Sallie

EXPOSING weaknesses of top ranking stars

Hollywood's most carefully guarded secrets are out as the men behind those megaphones tell you amazing truths!

Imagine Academy Award winning Paul Muni being a "problem actor!" According to Director Dieterle, he's too studied, too intense! What's more, he lacks an artist's imagination!

So you thought Joan Fontaine was a gorgeous genius! Well, like most stars, she's just a puppet, walking and talking exactly as her Svengali Alfred Hitchcock demands!

Director Al Hall was simply frantic. The cameras stood poised. The bit players and extras waited. The technicians hovered nervously.

For three hours the big scene in "Little Miss Marker" had been delayed. In this scene, Shirley Temple was supposed to burst into tears, which was simple enough except for one minor obstacle—Miss Temple wasn't in the mood.

"You've got to cry!" begged Director Hall for the two hundredth time.

"But I don't want to cry," replied Shirley brightly. "I feel happy."

Director Al Hall retired to a corner and, resembling Rodin's Thinker, brooded. In a moment he emerged, a sly smile on his face. An inspiration had been born. He asked Mrs. Temple what family possession Shirley liked most. Mrs. Temple mentioned the new car the family had recently bought. Director Hall smacked his lips.

Five minutes later the phone rang. Director Hall put the receiver to his ear and listened intently.

"What did you say, Mr. Temple?" he bellowed into the phone. "What? Your new car? Smashed to bits? Wrecked? In a ditch?"

Hall's quavering voice boomed through the quiet sound stage. He hung up the receiver and turned to Shirley. Her smile and dimples were gone. Her lips were tight. Tears welled in her brown eyes. Suddenly she sobbed, then began crying in earnest—and in that precious moment, Director Hall propelled her before the prepared cameras—and shot the scene!

After that historic example, if you still think that movie stars make the movies great, if you still suffer the illusion that Cary Grant or Vivien Leigh had more to do with the success of their last flicker than their directors, well, come with me, children, out of the valley of incredulity—and meet and listen to the men who really make the movies.

To begin with, meet that blubbering, lethargic idea-machine, that magician of mystery and suspense, soprano-voiced, 290-pound Alfred Hitchcock. Now meet him again. It always takes two introductions, there's so much of him.

While the great man settled himself into a chair like a dirigible easing into a hangar, we reviewed rapidly what we knew about him—that he was forty years old; that he'd started Herbert Marshall in pictures, saved Madeleine Carroll from obscurity by putting her in "Thirty-Nine Steps," helped give Robert Donat a name, proved Joan Fontaine was an actress; that his only exercise was walking up flights of stairs; that he once sent four hundred smoked herring to a friend on her birthday; that he ate steak and ice cream together; and that, after consuming tea, he threw the empty cup over his shoulder because it amused everyone.

And now, sitting opposite us, Hitchcock gave, in tabloid form, his philosophy of picture-making.

"My technique? Why, all I try to do is tell a story," explained Hitchcock, rubbing his third chin thoughtfully.

But the Hitchcock trade-mark is familiar. In one picture, he sent his camera, in a single motion, down the staircase of a hotel, across the lobby, into the dining room—to finish with a close-up of a man's eyes! In his first success, "The Lodger," he had the camera follow a pair of white hands down bannisters, flight after flight, until those hands tightened around a woman's throat! At another time he got into a battle with Sylvia Sidney because she wanted to be seen in her big dramatic moment when she was to stab her husband, and Hitchcock decided to photograph only her fingers and the knife!

"Those are my favorite scenes, the ones I like most to make," Hitchcock admitted. "Best of all, I like to photograph a man's mind, all of his mental processes told purely through his expressions. I directed Edmund Gwenn, as the assassin, in just such a scene in 'Foreign Correspondent.'"

A cup of coffee materialized. Hitchcock downed it in a gulp and began speaking of personalities.

"I find it difficult to direct former stage stars. They're often very bad, because they think only of projecting their voices instead of facial expressions and pantomime. I should like very much to work with Spencer Tracy. I don't think he has any bad camera habits, and I think he could play any character on earth without too much directorial effort.

"And you know, I've learned your glamour girls here aren't so glamorous. Whenever I see them, they seem to be eating hot dogs. I remember working with Joan Fontaine. She was quite eccentric. Always seemed to be eating. A fine girl though. Brilliant future. (Continued on page 62)

BY IRVING WALLACE

According to Ben Hecht, Doug Fairbanks, Jr. is ashamed of acting! He thinks it's just child's play, and has to swallow his pride before he can really give out!

The most maligned woman in Hollywood

She's daring! She's whacky!

But she's terrifically honest—so when Hepburn dishes the dirt, you can bet it's on the level

BY JAMES REID

Cary Grant said hotly, "If anybody's entitled to say anything about Katharine Hepburn, I am. I know what she's like, for I've made three pictures with her; this is my fourth. And I say she's the most maligned woman in Hollywood history! As an actress, she's a joy to work with. She's in there trying every minute. There isn't anything passive about her; she 'gives.' And as a person, she's real. There's no pretense about her. She's the most completely honest woman I've ever met."

Glowering darkly, Cary added, "The trouble is, people who know her don't write stories about her. The stories are all written by people who don't have the faintest idea what the girl's like, people who have never even met her."

It sounded as if he had the notion that writers had avoided meeting Hepburn for the past four or five years. Didn't he know that, as far as the Press was concerned, the lady was unapproachable?

"Tommyrot," said Cary.

It was barely possible that he was right and the Press wrong. Or that she had changed. So I asked for a Hepburn interview.

Back in her RKO days, such a request was greeted with morose head-shakings by the entire publicity department; the answer was that Hepburn talked only with God. M-G-M blithely took the request in stride. Sure, she'd talk. Just when, they didn't know. Maybe not till she finished "The Philadelphia Story," because she was working every day. But she'd talk.

And she did! What's more, she made a special trip into the studio to be interviewed—Hepburn, the unapproachable.

I had been warned that she was painfully shy and self-conscious with strangers. The warning was belied by her greeting: a cheery "hello," a straightforward handshake, a warm smile.

Until this meeting, I had seen her only at a distance. Consequently, I didn't know what to expect in a close-up, minus make-up. I found a tall girl, very slight, not given to curves. At least, the white slacks and white open-neck shirt she was wearing didn't reveal any. Her face was thin, ascetic and covered with freckles—unashamed, tomboyish freckles. Her hair, worn in a long loose bob, was dark auburn. Her eyes were either bluish-green or greenish-blue, and alert.

Watching Katharine as she talked, I thought of Cary's description: "She gives." Her face was expressive, not a mask. She spoke quickly, definitely, without hesitation. She left no doubt that she meant what she said.

I proffered her a cigarette. She started to take it, then noticed the brand, and said, "Thanks, but I think I'll have one of my own." This phenomenal Hepburn woman is definite even about what she smokes.

After our cigarettes were lighted, I told her that I was there to check up on—and, perhaps, correct—a few illusions of what she was like.

She laughed. (She has an odd, short laugh.) "That sounds ominous," she said. "It reminds me of a fan I once had. This boy developed a violent crush on me after seeing one of my pictures. To him, if to nobody else, I was Glamour Girl No. 1. He lived for the day when he could see me in person. And one day he did see me. Someone pointed me out to him. And what he said was, 'I don't know who that is, but it ain't Hepburn!' "

In other words, she never knew what reaction to expect from people when they learned the truth about her—but she was prepared for anything.

How did she explain her hermit tendencies? Was she "painfully shy," as rumored?

She frowned comically. "Call me anything but 'a shy actress.' Everyone's sick of the species. Shyness has been used to excuse too many sins. It has become the popular explanation for every kind of conduct. Everyone is becoming so shy, you don't know how they get on at all.

"My father says, 'I don't understand shyness in the young. None of my children ever wanted to go to a party unless they were going to be either a bride or a corpse.' And I'm afraid he's right.

"I'm not leary of other people. The explanation for me is I'm leary of myself. I get frightful nervous indigestion. Practically everything or anything can give it to me. But especially throngs of people. At parties I'm in agony. Maybe"—she laughed again—"maybe I'm terrified I'll be neither the bride nor the corpse.

"All this isn't something new with me. I've been cursed with it all my life. As a youngster, whenever (Continued on page 67)

Cesar Romero, 33, stunning ond a mognificent dancer. Wonderful sense of humor.

Desi Arnoz, 25, typicol glomour boy. Prosperous, goy. Divine Sponish occent.

Robert Preston, 23, sparkling conversationalist, good sport. A mighty fine catch.

HOLLYWOOD, that perennial cry-baby, is in the throes of the weeps again. Tears are flowing copiously and earnestly. It seems this time, that there just are not men enough to go around—either professionally or socially. Movie moguls, movie gals and the movie socialites are all in a panic. No men! And what are they going to do about it?

Well now, actually, the question is not what are they going to do about it, of course. First, the question is—how come? Is this something new? And if so, why?

Thinking about this for a moment, we realize that socially, the man market in Hollywood is considerably more complicated than it is in a normal city. A male star doesn't simply find a nice girl and marry her. When he starts his career he hasn't the money; when he has the money he can't find the girl—largely because he doesn't trust most of them. His pride prevents him from dating a star who earns more than he does, while he is on the road up. Once he has arrived, his snobbery prevents him from dating a girl who is beneath him.

Put yourself in the kid's position for a minute. His studio, his agent, his publicity man and his business manager all have something to say about his heart murmurs. And you, his fans, have a great deal to say about the girl he chooses to be seen with, too. Every time he buys a girl an ice cream soda he literally puts his career into jeopardy.

Hollywood prefers bachelors. But they must be good boys and not get into trouble or the newspapers. The result is that the marriageable men take refuge in a sort of implied engagement to a girl, or an engagement that implies eventual marriage. The ones who are married but are not working at it remain married legally in order to protect themselves from a too swift and ruinous re-marriage. Such tangled ties and vague but still threatening undercurrents surround every otherwise completely eligible man. You could safely say, in fact, without fear of contradiction that there are few really eligible bachelors in this movie town.

You don't believe it? Look at the list for a moment and study some of the outstanding cases.

Cary Grant: He has been rumored serious about Barbara Hutton. For years he kept Phyllis Brooks as a wall between himself and predatory females. He is definitely in the higher social brackets and not in the general run. He is also pretty usually a one-woman man.

Jack Carson: Just bursting through to success after his click in Ginger Roger's new picture, "Lucky Partners," although he's been around a long time. Married to Kay St. Germaine. Screen future swell. Socially, nil, unless you want to invite the missus, too.

Richard Carlson: Matured, the quiet, intellectual type, getting a break in "Too Many Girls" and "The Howards of Virginia." Has not progressed as rapidly as he might have; maybe because he handpicks his roles and hopes to quit acting altogether as soon as he can get himself started as a director. Practically useless, socially. Served as a publicity escort once for Janet Gaynor. Had a short and swift romance with Ann Sheridan. Then married a New York model and settled down.

Vaughn Paul: Definitely a good marriage bet, on his way to becoming a Universal producer, but tied hook, line and sinker to Deanna Durbin.

Howard Hughes: Supposedly going to marry Ginger Rogers. Has escorted Gene Tierney and numerous others, including Madeleine Carroll, but is pretty cagey. Definitely not a guy a girl could call up in a pinch.

John Payne: Newly arrived in "Maryland" and "The Great Profile." Married to Anne Shirley and father of a baby daughter. His domestic tranquility, his well-bred intellectual personality, have kept him from overnight success. Now he's on the ascending path, a credit to the industry, but a total loss to lonesome gals.

Dennis O'Keefe: A good marriage bet, but almost exclusively the property of Steffi Duna..

Richard Greene: Tagged romantically by the English star Virginia Field, for more than a year. Then came the war Hollywood's bachelor brigade is lovely to look at, but impossible to put in a marrying mood!

Bob Sterling, 24, ambitious, irresistible smile. Seldom dates for financial reasons.

Jeff Lynn, 31, interested in almost everything, but hates night clubs. Good listener.

George Brent, 36, mature, intriguingly unpredictable. A confirmed cynic. Moody.

Bill Holden, 22, bland Viking type. Whalesome, appealing, unspailed by fame.

The man hunt is on!

BY JAMES CARSON

Jimmy Stewart: Set for a high place in the film capital. Also seems to be set for marriage with Olivia de Havilland.

Laurence Olivier: A welcome addition to Hollywood from a screen-casting standpoint, but tagged by Vivien Leigh before he ever set foot in the place. Local girls didn't have a chance.

Bob Preston: A newcomer with box office appeal; flamed into romantic print with Dorothy Lamour; supposed to be engaged to Kay Feltus; future not really jelled yet. A possibility here for some smart girl who knows the ropes, but she'll have to be clever!

Dave Rose: A musical arranger with a good career ahead of him in pictures. Received considerable publicity through his marriage to and divorce from Martha Raye. Recently has been escorting Judy Garland. In the market for marriage.

Randolph Scott: Has a well-furnished niche in Hollywood's Hall of Fame, but legally married in spite of anything you may hear to the contrary.

Richard Ainley: Just arrived from Eastern Little Theatre. Exclusive property of Constance Bennett as this was being written. (These arrangements have a way of changing, you know.) Definitely unavailable for general escort service for the time being.

Gilbert Roland: Stock somewhat up cinematically at the moment. Severed from la Bennett. An accepted escort, but fairly choosy. He picks the gals, they don't pick him.

George Raft: Still married. After Norma Shearer, who has the courage to try to get (Continued on page 90)

Victor Mature, 28, sophisticated, a sender of archids. Southern accent. Conceited

Bill Lundigan, 26, shy, chivalrous, intelligent. Is definitely an idealist. Dimples!

Robert Wilcox, 31, flashy, glamorous. Has a vaguely sinister look. Philanderer.

Love and

Here for the first time, you have the real story behind the break-up of the tempestuous Artie Shaws!

BY HERBERT RADDEN

There was nothing wrong with the Lana Turner-Artie Shaw marriage, they say in Hollywood, that a good miracle wouldn't have cured. In a town where stars divorce so frequently that most of them have charge accounts in the divorce courts, this particular bust-up stood out like a sore thumb. What's more, it gave countless "I told you so-ers" a corroborative status they'd never had before. There was scarcely a soul in the film colony, at the time of the hectic elopement, who didn't foresee the marriage's early end, with guesses as to its duration ranging from two to six months.

But while everyone felt the break was inevitable, no one knew what would cause it. Few know even now! But before lining up the causes for the break, let's flash back to the events leading up to the wildest, most contradictory romance of any Hollywood year.

Lana and Artie met for the first time in 1939 during the filming of "Dancing Co-ed" when they immediately discovered they had something in common—an intense dislike for each other! To him, she was simply another "jitterbug chick" he'd heard or read about. To her, he was just a band leader with a head as large as a bass drum. Columnists generally made the most of this delightful feud, particularly since it wasn't studio manufactured.

Lana

Their Valentine's Day marriage got off to a gay start, but six months later Lana was tired of laughing at Artie's old jokes, wearing subdued colors (he hated red—her favorite), and being called "Turner" and "Carrots."

Lana at the time was very happy with Gregson Bautzer, young Hollywood attorney. They were the most talked of, most photographed, most widely written about couple in town. They enjoyed doing the things they liked together, and maintained a sensible balance of night clubs, outdoor life and intellectual diversion. And, what was very important to both, they were extremely popular with the press and photographers covering the Hollywood front.

Artie, during the corresponding period, was cavorting around with Betty Grable (who carried torches in both hands when he eloped). When Shaw was not busy seeing Betty, he found time to make the word "jitterbug" synonymous with "moron," in appreciation of all that jitterbugs had done to put him where he was. As far as marrying into any popular press relationship, Shaw preferred being a bachelor.

To understand the next stage in the Shaw-Turner horror-scope, you must know the individuals. Those close to him say that Shaw is one of the swellest persons you could ever meet—if you only have to meet him once! After that he's an act. Friends regard him as a would-be intellectual. In all matters concerning Shaw and society, Shaw gets first billing. If it's not given to him, he takes it. He is the ultimate in egotism; he likes good conversation, but to him good conversation begins and ends with Shaw. He's like the actor who said to a friend, "Oh, I've been talking about myself for hours. Let's talk about you now —what do you think of my pictures?"

Shaw has had a substantial education and is basically well-read. But when he's in the company of anyone with an admittedly inferior background—he is the first to take advantage. He delights in tantalizing such people by paving the way for them to say something insipid.

He hates corny musicians. He hates autograph seekers and won't sign his name to anything. It probably hurts him to sign his name to a check. Intimates say he does not have the first dollar he earned, but only because that large-type bill has since been withdrawn from circulation! In all business matters, he's (Continued on page 83)

Who said that crime doesn

Celluloid Black Sheep Hum

words. for the road to rui

Beware of a hubby with a hobby, says Mayo Methot. Last year she gave "The Bogeyman," as she calls Humph, a camera for a birthday-Christmas present (he was born Dec. 25, 1900) and he's been working her and Butch, the dog, overtime ever since!

Bad

BY GEORGE BENJAMIN

"There must be a little guy somewhere named Yehudi, sort of watching out for me," says Humphrey Bogart, talking out of the corner of his mouth that's twisted upward in an ironic grin.

This is his explanation for his sudden rise to stardom after all these years. The Big Event takes place in "High Sierra," the picture over which Warners and Paul Muni parted company. Muni walked out. Bogie stepped in.

Now the wags are calling him Humphrey "Weisenfreund" (Muni's real name). Wig manufacturers and purveyors of false beards, egged on by pranksters, are sending him samples of their wares. Everyone's wondering if he's going to start stealing Muni's stuff.

The answer is no. The make-up department has greyed his black hair slightly at the temples, but otherwise his appearance is unchanged. He still looks like a hard citizen. He's still carrying the prop revolver he has carried since way back. In fact, he's still playing a killer. But this time, the role is the biggest, juiciest one in the picture—meaty enough for an Academy Award winner!

Bogie doesn't mind that they originally thought of it as "something different for Muni." All that matters to him is that they eventually got around to thinking of it as something different for Bogart—a chance for bad boy to make good.

"An awful lot of things had to happen before I could get that role," he says. "But they did happen and that's why I think there must be a busy little man somewhere named Yehudi, who sort of plans things.

"Warners wanted me to go East and do six weeks of personal appearances with 'They Drive By Night.' I thought I ought to do it, just for practice. But Yehudi didn't think so. He made me haggle over terms. While I was still haggling, they sent George Raft instead. Then Muni walked out of 'High Sierra.' If George had been here, they would have given the role to him. As it was, they handed it to me.

"It's a funny thing about me," he mused. "Any time I think it's wise to do something, that turns out to be the one thing I shouldn't have done. The things I feel I shouldn't do always turn out for the best. It's been that way all my life. I'm getting around to the idea there's a pattern to it."

He shakes his head over the strange unreliability of his hunches.

"Why, I'm the guy who thought 'They Drive By Night' pay, and the wages of sin is death?

phrey Bogart's making them eat their has led him straight to stardom!

Boy Makes Good

would be a lousy picture and that the script for 'The Roaring Twenties' was no good!"

Mrs. Bogart (Mayo Methot), who's having lunch with us at the Lakeside Country Club, chimes in to say, "Warners ought to put Bogie on the advisory board that decides what stories would make good pictures. All the stories he doesn't like should be produced immediately."

"Yeah," says Bogie, appreciatively. "One time on the stage, I had a choice between a Joe Cook show and a little play called 'The Cradle-Snatchers.' My wisdom and my inclination said, 'Pick the Cook show. It has a big name for a star, it's a musical, and it will probably run a long time.' I still don't know why I picked the other. All I know is that the Cook show died on its tryout, never even got to Broadway, and 'The Cradle-Snatchers' ran two years.

"Another time, I hadn't worked all season. I said, 'I've got to get a little dough, if I want to go to Maine this summer.' So I stopped being fussy and took a role in a 'whodunit' mystery that I hoped nobody I knew would ever see me in. That's how much I thought of it. I played a heavy—something I'd never done before. I pulled wings off flies and led the audience to suspect I was the murderer. They didn't find out till the end of the third act that Rex O'Malley was the guilty guy!" He grinned reminiscently.

"Arthur Hopkins, the producer, came to see somebody else in the show. He remembered me in it. A few months later, when he was getting ready to produce 'The Petrified Forest,' he sent for me. When I dropped into his office, Robert E. Sherwood—who wrote the play and who was a friend of mine—was there. Hopkins said to me, 'I've got a good role for you. A gangster role.' Sherwood spoke up and said, 'Why, you must be crazy. He doesn't fit that part at all! What he ought to do is the part of the football player.' They argued back and forth, and I thought Sherwood was right. I couldn't picture myself playing a gangster.

"So what happened? I made a hit as the gangster. When Warners bought the play, they hired me to repeat my role on the screen. That's how I happened to get into the movies. And I've been busy ever since. Typed as a bad guy, yes. But busy."

He knocks on the table, to call Yehudi's attention to the fact that he's appreciative. Then he turns his own attention to his lunch for a few minutes. When he's ready to talk again, he says:

"I wasn't even responsible for (Continued on page 70)

Confidentially yours..

Throwing some light on a beautiful subject—Linda Darnell

Scotch plaid coat would indicate a wee bonny lassie. Not so—Linda's pure French with Monette Eloyse for middle names!

Bob Shaw makes the most of his privileged date—taking her to exclusive night spots and showering her with giant gardenias.

The other day, on the set of "Chad Hanna," Linda's mother and small brother and sister were busily occupied, keeping an eye on "Weedy!" Weedy is Linda's pet rooster, son of a pink-tinted Easter chick given her last Easter-tide by Ty Power, and he's making his acting début in Linda's new film. Weedy's toe-nails and beak are lacquered with red nail enamel. He walks around Linda's house exactly like a pet dog or cat and he comes when you call his name. Linda also has three turtles of the native Texas variety which she has taught to swim fancy strokes in the bath-tub. She thinks it would be fun to be a lion trainer!

When she flew to Salt Lake City for the premiere of "Brigham Young," she had her first realization of what it means to be a star. 150,000 people were on the streets; 150,000 pairs of admiring eyes were focused on her; frightening applause rang in her ears. The responsibility of stardom suddenly took form and shape. To keep faith with all these people, she thought, is a task not to be taken lightly.

And ice cream it shall be. Cro's desserts are Linda's ambition for the evening.

She really does paint! Far from being a mere dabbler, she does so well that her portraits decorate the homes of many stars.

BY JEANNE KARR

Linda has never been kissed—off the screen. She believes that kissing a man is part of being engaged. "They all ask me to kiss them," she admits, "but I always say, 'Let's wait a couple of months and see how we feel then.' At the end of two or three months, I—well, I'm glad we didn't."

Her hobby is drawing, and Linda specializes in pastels. She did one of Peverell Marley, her cameraman, which Pev's wife has hanging in the Marley living-room. She did one of Tyrone, one of Walter Lang, who directed her in "Star Dust," and one of a cunning black and white cocker spaniel which has merited the highest praise from accredited artists.

The studio calls her "The Little Hays Office" because she is that particular about her clothes, her stills and the things she does. Modesty is her watchword. She recently taught Frank Swann a new jitterbug step, and the lessons were photographed for a magazine layout. Feeling that the step revealed more of one shapely young limb than was quite seemly, Linda "killed" the sitting. She is considerably perturbed because in her latest picture she has to wear a cotton frock without a petticoat!

Linda is scared to death of radio microphones. She doesn't like anything she can't see and touch, such as the unseen audience of the air. And she's also afraid of the dark. So that she won't have to come home to a darkened house, Linda always leaves the lights on in her bedroom.

Her mother's pet name for her is "Tweedles." She calls her mother "Mama." When you see her playing with the neighborhood children and their pets, you realize how young she is. Rabbits are her favorite pets but, ironically, they give her hay fever!

"A Dream Come More Than True" is the way Linda describes her year and a few months in California, for Hollywood has held no disillusionment for her. She never had to fight for good parts. Seven "plums" have been literally laid in her lap. Everyone has helped her and seemed eager to do it, she says. There have been no headaches, no hindrances. "It's been pure Heaven," Linda adds happily.

A home movie-making maniac, Linda cuts her pictures, develops them, prints them and processes them from start to finish herself. She spends more time behind the camera than in front of it while on the sets and on location trips. During the making of "The Mark of Zorro," Tyrone wanted to know whether he was starring in a Darryl Zanuck Production or in "Darnell Pictures, Inc!"

Pev Marley says she is the most flawlessly beautiful girl in pictures. Every angle is perfect. She couldn't look anything but beautiful, he says, even if she made faces.

Her full name is Linda Monette Eloyse Darnell. She was born in Dallas, Texas, on October 16, 1923 and is the third from youngest in a family of four girls and two boys. Linda claims, "Being one of a big family is wonderfully helpful. It certainly knocks conceit right out of you!" She is five feet, four and three-quarters inches tall, weighs 109 pounds, has night-black hair, brown brilliants for eyes, golden tan skin and tooth paste ad teeth. She's never had a permanent, never dyed her hair and never uses any make-up outside the studio. Not even lipstick. She doesn't need to, for Nature, prodigal with Linda, gave her naturally scarlet lips, too.

"I'd like to say one special thing to girls," she told me. "It's this: don't you believe that 'opportunity knocks but once.' It's not so. If you just keep your chin up and your ears pasted to the door, you'll hear opportunity knocking again and again." Linda, you know, had to come to Hollywood three times before she was asked to stay.

Reading in bed at night is her favorite indoor sport. She can't read

(Continued on page 85)

He hates parties, rhumbas and cocktails. A dyed in the wool sour-puss? Far from it! Just Bob Cummings, a guy with different ideas who's found a new and thrilling way of life

Fun is where you

This is, let me sound the warning right at the start, a different kind of story because Robert Cummings is an unusual sort of fellow. He doesn't talk about any of the things that actors commonly discuss, but about flying, about conscription, about the fact that Hollywood is not a democracy, about his theory of how peace will come. In everything he said, there were overtones of a different perspective, a new awareness of what is important and what isn't.

We were lunching at Eaton's Ranch the day we talked, driving the few miles from the studio to the Ranch in Bob's dark red sports job (top down) which has, amazingly enough, the right-hand drive, English-wise.

"Made for the English market," Bob explained. "Now, of course, they're not shipping them over and have a lot of them on their hands. Consequently, I was able to get this one for $600 less than the regulation price." Smart? Yes. Very.

BY GLADYS HALL

Bob says he has two pets, Spinach III, his plane, and Susie Q, a ring-tailed monkey.

We lunched in the enclosed patio at Eaton's, and Bob, to my astonishment, ordered nothing but fresh fruits and vegetables!

"Ha," I said, "gastronomically abnormal, I see! I'm used to red-meat-eating actors. Bob Taylor always eats steak for luncheon; George Raft does, too; Clark Gable—"

Bob laughed. "I lead the clean life! Matter of fact, we are vegetarians, Viv and I," ("Viv" being Mrs. Robert Cummings, née Vivian Janis, these past five years) "except when we have guests. Then we join them over the fatted calf or barbecued beef, feeling like cannibals. And we're dyspeptic for days thereafter!

"We really do lead an abnormal life. We never go to night clubs except under pressure from the publicity department, and we only succumb to that a couple of times a year. Then we go to the Victor Hugo and have a whirl at doing a kind of a rhumba. We don't know what the inside of Chasen's looks like, or Ciro's. That's being abnormal, in Hollywood! We're not chummy with very many picture people. Most of our friends are fliers and my best friend out here is my lawyer and manager. I don't drink, ever. I smoke very seldom. We rarely go to the movies. We never go to the races or to the polo matches. We spend all of our spare time flying.

"Viv is as abnormal for a girl as I am for a man. She can't be persuaded to buy a piece of jewelry or even a new dress, except when actual necessity dictates. She'd rather spend her time making out a chart for our week-end trip. Just how much baggage we'll be carrying, how much time we'll spend here or there, exactly what minute of what hour we should be flying over this or that river or mountain range, visibility, ceiling, head winds and cloud conditions—all that sort of thing must be written down in easy, legible form

"Viv," his wife, studies rushes from "Caribbean Holiday" and seems to approve!

Bob was once a caddy, grew to hate the sight of a club, but plays occasionally now.

find it

Took up flying right after Lindy's famous flight—when he was in his teens.

before taking off. That's fun for us. Flying somehow makes us realize how important time is, so that we who fly learn not to squander it on things that don't really matter to us.

"The fact that I am able to say 'us' about everything," Bob said gratefully, "is very significant. Only marriages based on mutual interest and understanding can work out successfully today. I was married once before, you know, to a little girl from my home town of Joplin, Missouri. She was very sweet, very young, but she'd never been far away from home and couldn't understand the theatre or its people. We had such a hard time, living in one room, no money, all that sort of thing, that in the end, with no malice on either side, she went home to her mother.

"But to return to the question of our abnormality. We are not blue stockings, recluses, intellectuals or any of the popular types that shun the pastimes of the younger set. It's just that our interests and pleasures lie in other directions.

"I suppose the fact is I have two careers, flying and acting. And one is as important to me as the other. I love bomb-sites, controllable propellers and my blind flying instruments as well as I do scripts, cameras, sound stages, make-up boxes and the sight of my name in electric lights. Funny thing, though," mused Bob, "when you're up there, ten or fifteen thousand feet high, seeing your name in electric lights just doesn't seem very important."

Bob's flying is no mere hobby. He has been at it for more than ten years and is a lieutenant in the Reserve Air Corps. He holds not only a pilot's license but one with Instructor's Rating, the only license of its kind to be held by an amateur pilot. He is, in addition, a licensed radio operator with a station in his own ship (a Cessna, four-passenger, cabin monoplane) complete with a radio transmitter and receiver.

"Flying," Bob was saying, "minimizes the importance of a lot of things. For example, I could become very annoyed with Hollywood; it's not a democracy but a dictatorship. When you realize that the $16.50 a day 'dress' extras wouldn't dream of associating with the $5.00 a day 'crowd' extras, you know we live in a rigid caste system here.

"Not only that, but we are under control every second and have nothing to say about anything we do. Take my own case. If I go on the radio, I have to give 50% of what I make to the studio. If the studio doesn't want me to go on the air, I can't go on the air! The studio dictates the whole policy of my life. It can even tell me where to go evenings!

"I could work up a healthy little inferiority complex because Allan Jones, let's say, (he and Irene are good friends of ours) has a swimming pool, stables, a way of living I can't hope to compete with. This might make me miserable if greater causes and effects didn't remind me that it really doesn't matter too much.

"There are other bogeymen in Hollywood; one of them is the mistaken reputation we get of having great wealth. Salesmen of lots, bonds and diamond mines waylay you at every turn, and you have to learn to say 'no' in every language!

"Then there is the sure knowledge that when we're through in this business there is almost no other occupation open to us. Let me (Continued on page 78)

BRENDA MARSHALL was still new on the Warner Brothers lot when she entered the studio's Green Room one day for luncheon. Over there in the far corner she espied a shining white empty table. She seated herself and was ordering, when in came Jimmy Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh who pulled up chairs to join her.

They were wonderful, Brenda found; treated her just like one of themselves! How nice and chummy of them, she thought, to come over and sit with me when they might have taken a less secluded table. And here I am an unknown and not even acquainted with them yet! After all the stories she'd heard, too, about stars and actors being uppity to strangers. Brenda felt warm and friendly all over.

Later, she learned she had barged in on Cagney's reserved table, the one at which he'd been taking lunch for years! Cagney and the others had been polite enough not to mention the fact that girls traditionally never sat at that particular table!

Brenda still blushes furiously whenever she thinks of the episode. But that was only one of many embarrassing moments in her rise to stardom! Becoming a star, she's learned, has taken its toll. It isn't all glory.

Take the evening she attended a Warner's preview, for instance. On the way out of the theatre, she signed her name to fifteen or twenty autograph albums pushed into her hands. This was fun, being recognized and asked to sign your name, better by far than ordering about the natives on your father's plantation in the Philippines.

A moment later, dismay suffused her. She heard a fan shout, "There's Olivia de Havilland! Let's get her autograph." And immediately the fan, followed by two others, charged over to Brenda and held out autograph books!

Shortly after being placed under contract by the studio, Brenda received instructions to drop over to the photographic gallery for a sitting, her first on the lot.

Instantly, there flashed into her mind the glamorous portraits she'd seen of other players, in swanky evening gowns, smart afternoon and sports attire; exotic shots which spelled allurement and romance. She arrived at the gallery practically breathless at the prospect of turning into a glamour queen. This, she thought ecstatically, is the life!

Poor Brenda! She was put into some kitchen things, handed a pumpkin pie, and—horrors—was told to ride a turkey! All the studio wanted were a few Thanksgiving pictures, and not one solitary glamour pose was shot.

One evening during the run of "Espionage Agent," her initial picture, Brenda made a personal appearance in conjuction with the film at a beach town. Arriving home late from the studio, she barely had time to change and rush into a blue crêpe dress before a studio car called for her. She hastily pulled on an old coat and hurried out to the automobile, feeling far from smart.

But her horror and embarrassment knew no bounds when she stepped out onto the stage and discovered that in her hurry, she had put on her dress inside out!

Her young daughter was responsible for one of Brenda's more harrowing moments. She had taken the little girl for her first visit to the studio, where a dramatic scene from "The Sea Hawk" was being enacted before the camera. They stood in the background, but close enough so that the small one could see everything that went on.

During the rehearsal of the scene, the whole stage had been lighted, behind the cameras as well as on the set itself. When the actual "take" was called, however, only the set was illuminated, the other lights dimming.

Just as the players were swinging into action—Errol Flynn walking down the throne room to where Queen Elizabeth, in the person of Flora Robson, sat on the dais, and with all else dead quiet—Brenda's infant, terrified by the whole thing, gave a blood-curdling yell which carried over the entire stage. The "take" was completely ruined, and Brenda didn't linger on after the commotion died down.

One of Brenda's most embarrassing moments occurred during a visit to New York when, with a friend, she met Errol Flynn in a night club.

Now, she knew Errol only very slightly, but she did know she was to be his leading lady in "The Sea Hawk." What distressed her, however, and threw her into a perfect panic, was the fact that, when she saw him approaching her table, she didn't know whether it was proper to introduce him as Errol or as Mr. Flynn. She managed to mutter something unintelligible, Errol acknowledged the mumble-jumble graciously and all ended happily. But it was certainly a terrifying moment! (Continued on page 80)

HOLLYWOOD GANGS UP ON

If you, too, are a puller of boners, you'll appreciate these blushable high spots of Brenda's career!

Twenty-five-year-old Brenda claimed she was "through with men forever" when she filed suit for divorce, but Bill Holden (3 years her junior) has changed her mind!

BY WHITNEY WILLIAMS

"Half Pint" (that's Bill's name for her) is such a kid at heart, it's hard to believe she has a two-year-old daughter. She adores ice cream cones, picnics, low heels and hair ribbons, and admits she's afraid of the dark.

It's a matter of give 'n' take in thrills, as Hollywood's gay blades turn out for this premiere on ice

Irene Dunne beams now that husband Francis Griffin has given up his N. Y. practise. Up to now, he's been commuting to his Manhattan dentist's office!

Ronnie Reagan, who spends his spare moments modeling for the art students at U.C.L.A., played hookey for the occasion. The former sports announcer never misses an event like this—and he doesn't mind the autograph hunters a bit.

▲ Dancer George Murphy and wife take lessons in skating the light fantastic from the Follies retinue on opening night. Tempted to swap his dancing pumps for a pair of skates, George went around backstage after the performance was over to find out just exactly what the chances were.

A bleacher seat at the World Series may be somebody's idea of heaven, but we'll take a box at the Ice Follies for our money! Sonja Henie, who's no slouch on skates herself, enjoyed it so much she went practically nightly. So did the Harold Lloyds. And a certain Hollywood playboy fell so hard for one of the Folliettes, he attended forty consecutive performances!

On opening night, silver fox jackets and mink coats were a dime a dozen, and even the majority of sports jacket-loving males were resplendent in evening clothes. Jane Withers, who has more formals than Hedy Lamarr, was probably the fashion plate of the evening in a décolleté gown, a white fitted wrap and a huge camellia corsage.

During the intermission, almost everyone went outside to ogle and incidentally to thaw out numb tootsies. However, Bill Powell, feet wrapped in a blanket, stayed inside in a pseudo-sulk, because the skaters could do tricks he couldn't, and Jane Wyman—soon to become a mama—sat and ate peanuts and signed autograph books till the second half began. Part two, incredibly, was even better than part one. Comedians Frick and Frack rolled the customers in the aisles, and the finale had everyone yelling for encores.

Everyone, that is, but Cesar Romero, who could hardly wait for the whole thing to be over so that he could tear back stage and arrange for a few quick skating lessons. (From that cute little redhead, Evelyn Chandler, we betcha!)

By Jean Kinkead

Follies of 1941

Jeanette MacDonald and spouse, Gene Raymond, arrived half an hour late to watch the frozen frolics. Maybe they purposely snuck in under cover of darkness to hide Gene's newly-dyed coiffure. Since his movie comeback, ▼ he's been sporting jet black locks.

▲ Follies stars, Bess Ehrhardt's and Evelyn Chandler's explanations of "Arabian cartwheels" set Jane Withers to giggling. A whiz on her radio-equipped bike, Janie's a flop (and we do mean literally) on the ice.

Lewis Stone and ➤ his youthful wife No. 3, lovely Hazel Woof, roar at the antics of Comedians Frick and Frack. The Stones were in summer attire, but brought along a blanket for their feet.

Photos by Jules Buck

a DAY to remember

A girl who can talk herself out of a ticket for speeding is worth knowing, especially if she happens to be lovely Laraine Day!

A low slung coupé, red, slightly battered, with fenders twisted, bumpers askew streaks down the road like a flash of lightning, burning the concrete at eighty plus.

There's a shrill whistle as a motorcycle spins out of ambush!

A couple of miles and seconds later, the coupé pulls over to the side of the road, stops with a scream of breaks. The officer of the law mops his brow, leaps off his panting machine, a figure of furious determination. And then what happens? He deflates like a pricked balloon and puts the summons back in his pocket. He gulps, clears his throat, tries to deliver a few harsh words of warning, but ends by smiling fatuously at the young lady inside.

"You shouldn't ought to go that fast," he says apologetically. The young lady nods a mop of blonde curls in humble agreement.

"That's what everyone says."

"Well," the officer sees the innocent blue eyes, the black lashes waving hello. "Weee-el,—the next time,—" She smiles a "thank you," slips the car in gear and is gone.

"Whew!" The officer mops his brow again. What a looker, he thinks. And that smile! Wasn't there something familiar about that? Hasn't he seen her somewhere before?

Of course! He remembers now. He's seen her in the Kildare series as a student nurse; he's seen her in "My Son, My Son" as Maeve, a young actress; and in "Foreign Correspondent" as the girl Joel McCrea keeps afloat after the plane crash.

The lady, as you may have guessed, is none other than Laraine Day in her favorite role of speed demon. Miss Day, you see, is just naturally in a hurry. Speed is in her blood! She loves airplanes, and the dizzier and higher and faster they fly, the better. She pedals a bicycle like a householder rushing to save hearth and home from a three-alarm fire. And as a hiker, she'd make a swell cross-country track star! When Laraine and her twin brother, Lamar, set out for a cross-country walk of a quiet Sunday morning, there's no dawdling for them. They take it on the lam!

Speed is the keynote of her career. Remember that this Day dream is only nineteen years old, and you'll realize that she has been in a hurry ever since she was born. Just look at her! Not only does she rate a juicy contract with Metro, but Maestros Small and Wanger bid for her services in gilt-edged pictures; Alfred Hitchcock says she's a wonder to direct, and the critics thumb the dictionary for fresh adjectives to do her justice.

She and Lamar were five years old when they decided, quite seriously and firmly, what work they intended to do in this world. Lamar said he was going to be a printer. Laraine said she was going to be an actress. Father and Mother Johnson—Johnson is Laraine's real name—took the statements with a grain of salt. Frankly they were not impressed. They figured that the twins, like other children, would change their ambitions with the seasons. But they didn't realize that Lamar and Laraine were such full-speed-ahead hellions! Here they are though! A couple of years this side of voting age, and both well launched on their careers; Lamar a master of type-setting, and Laraine a brilliant young actress with a terrific future!

Like the traffic cop, we mop our brow and say "Whew!"

Laraine did not spend her school days dreaming about her career. Quietly determined and bluntly practical, she started to prove her versatility in this acting business in kindergarten. She was an angel in a Christmas play and one of the evil spirits in Pandora's Box. In grade school she was Cinderella, Beauty and The Knave of Hearts. In high school she earned all the dramatic club's best parts. Word flew around that a whizz of a young actress was knocking audiences for a loop at a high school in Los Angeles, and that's how Laraine got a crack at tiny parts with The Players Guild.

Count one, two, three, and there's Laraine leading lady of this professional group, while at the same time she keeps up her high school studies and fetches home straight A's so the parent Johnsons can't find cause for just complaint.

Cross two months off the calendar, and look who's here. A talent scout! Result? A couple of walk-ons, bit parts and then the Day was cast as Maeve in "My Son, My Son."

The studio sent Laraine a script at five-thirty of a Tuesday afternoon. Wednesday at nine A. M. she was plunging headlong into a tense scene with Brian Aherne. This was just her speed. She knew her lines cold. She'd figured out Maeve's character and reactions to a T. She played the part with assurance, warmth and deft eloquence. Overnight, Laraine was well on her way to picture stardom. No two ways about it, the girl is uncanny!

But don't, on any account, think of her as a "greasy grind," the graphic college term for a student who crams and works and frets and stews. Don't imagine that Laraine hasn't a second to give to anything but her work. Nothing could be farther from the truth. She can utilize minutes so fully, do things so quickly and so thoroughly, that she has more time for play and fun than anyone we know.

She manages to spend a good many hours a week lolling on the beach and playing in the ocean. She and Lamar take their sports seriously, and keep their swimming, tennis and golf up to scratch no matter how arduous their working schedules. Consequently, Laraine's skin is a bright nut brown and contrasts vividly with her sunny hair and her blue eyes; her figure is slender, strong and graceful, and there are never any unhappy dieting problems in her active, strenuous life.

Laraine eats, she'll tell you frankly, like a horse. Her favorite food is a big, juicy hamburger on a soft toasted roll. The "a" is a miracle of understatement, for Lamar says he once observed his little sister toss off eight of them, without batting an eye! "Of course," Laraine apologizes, "that was after an active day." And when Laraine calls a day active, you can bet your boots it was downright hysterical!

In the Johnson's large, casual house in Cheviot Hills, the ice box is always well stocked with hot dogs and hamburgers, ginger ale and milk. At almost any hour of the day or night, Laraine and Lamar are likely to show up with a group of their buddies in tow,-all of them practically starving. Laraine rolls up her sleeves, greases the grill and goes to work. She piles the hamburgers high with onions, relish and catsup, and the group guzzles. Then they play games: hop scotch, charades, darts, ping pong, and a number of wild novelties they have invented. The Johnson parents are prepared for almost anything.

One night not long ago, for instance, the senior Johnsons were returning from the neighborhood theatre where they had gone to see one of Laraine's pictures—they refuse to attend previews, wait calmly for daughter's shows to come to them. As they approached their house they heard weird shrieks emanating from the interior. They opened the front door to find the place pitch (Continued on page 79)

BY MARY HAMMAN

A Skin that Men Adore

Whoever started that yarn about sleeping beauty didn't know much about modern girls. You've got to be awake, alive and alert these days, morning, noon and night —most of all at night. You may be a careerist all day long, but come evening, and the man in your life has a way of expecting to see you gay and glamorous, and if you don't look that way you certainly aren't going to feel it. That's a tall order, you may say, for a girl who's been cooking or typing or reciting lessons most of her day.

But if you want to persuade the man of the moment that you can be the girl of his dreams, it's well worth your while learning a beauty trick or two that will stand you in good stead come five o'clock of a winter's evening. And the happy truth is, it can be done. That has been demonstrated over and over by girls from coast to coast, and particularly by your favorite movie heroines. There's the lovely Joan Bennett, Paulette Goddard, Nan Grey, Jane Wyman, Claudette Colbert, Anne Shirley, Jean Arthur, Diana Lewis, Ida Lupino, Barbara Stanwyck and Joan Fontaine, for example, who are successful careerists by day, happy and beautiful wives at home.

Then don't forget the bright young members of the unmarried set who make Hollywood history from 9 to 5, are the life of the town by night and still manage to be sparklingly beautiful no matter when you see them. Mary Beth Hughes, Twentieth Century-Fox's engaging young star, Betty Grable, Mary Healy, Judy Garland, Peggy Moran, Rosalind Russell, Madeleine Carroll, Helen Parrish and Brenda Joyce are just a few who manage to be as distractingly lovely after five P. M. as they are conspicuously successful during "business" hours.

There is one big asset which these girls have in common, and which you, too, can have—and that is a clear, radiant, beautiful complexion. If, after long fatiguing hours of work in grease paint, under hot lights, subject to continual nervous strain and emotional tension, these lassies of the lenses can still look fresh and clean and lovely, we maintain that any girl anywhere can do the same.

If you work all day, a small but completely equipped kit full of complexion aids tucked away in a desk drawer or locker shelf will do the trick of erasing tired lines and that "working girl look" in time for that big date with your best boy friend. You may be a modern young realist who says to yourself some evenings, "Oh, I'm tired. If he really loves me, he won't care how I look." Well, all we know is what we've heard our beaux say on the subject and we'll pass that along for whatever it's worth. One man, perhaps more articulate than the rest, summed it up brutally but frankly when he said, "I don't know anything more abominably conceited than the girl who thinks that she can look like a scarecrow and still expect men to be devoted to her. Most men don't want their women to be elaborately turned out, but they do yearn for a charmingly feminine companion who shows by her good taste and grooming that she considers the feelings of the man who devotes his attentions to her." The consensus of opinion is that no young man wants to see his girl look wan and bedraggled. And in these days—and evenings—there's too much competition around for any girl to risk deliberately flying in the face of a yen as easily met as that one.

So in your desk or locker keep a cake of mild soap, a jar each of cleansing and foundation creams, a box of compressed cotton, a little bottle of fresh scented cologne or skin freshener, rouge, powder, lipstick and eye make-up. At the stroke of five, cleanse your skin as thoroughly as possible, first with soap and water, then with cream. A finishing fillip with the cotton dipped in freshener gives you a sense of positive luxury. Now, on with your foundation, rouge, powder, lip stick and eye beautifiers and watch his eyes light up when you appear fresh and lovely. Dust and city soil make any girl appear uninteresting, but a clean, clear skin makes her look both gay and charming.

Of course, you have to know how to give your skin the basic home care it needs as well as the last minute emergency touches. It must be cleansed, stimulated and softened regularly if that final flourish is going to be effective. You see, a skin, to be beautiful, must be healthy, and to be healthy, it must be clean. A warm bath, topped off with a cold rinse, should be as regular as rations at your house. Keep a special cake of mild soap for your very own use. Bath salts, a long-handled brush or a friction mitt are helpful accessories, too. But at least be sure to use a thick, coarse wash cloth, for you can't have cleanliness without friction. Clean, heavy Turkish towels are also a decided bath and beauty aid. If you can follow your toweling by a brisk all-over rub-down with cologne or dusting powder, so much the better. Your skin is a hard-working organ of elimination, you know, besides being a protective sheath and a basic necessity for your (Continued on page 74)

BY CAROL CARTER

Mary Beth Hughes, 20th Century-Fox's beauteous new blonde starlet, guards her skin with creams and lotions, and breathes deeply to keep that sparkling glow of youth and good health.

The languorous age of Sleeping Beauty is past. You have to be alive, alert and awake these days—and evenings too!

Our snooping snapster, Jules Buck, takes hot to the trail of skylarking stars and shoots 'em night-lifing in Hollywood lairs!

Brian Aherne and Joan Fontaine are such fight enthusiasts, they're even staging them at home. Just lovers' quarrels, we hope!

The Fred MacMurrays temporarily abandon their adopted adored one, 4-months-old Susan, to appear at another war-relief party.

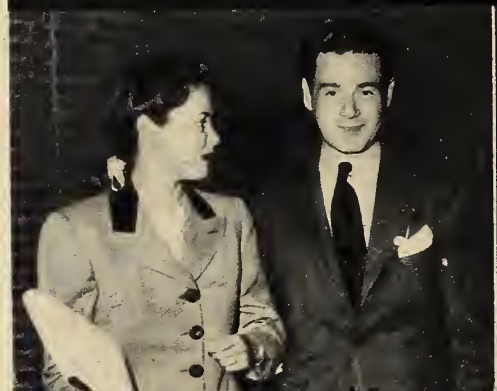

Table-hopping Roz Russell leaves escort Freddie Brisson to tweak the Montgomery chin at Ciro's.

Bob and Babs Taylor tear themselves away from their home on the range for a ballgame and Ciro's.

Now that John's completed his 2,500 flying hours, he and Mrs. Payne are buying a ranch from which they'll commute by plane.

Gene Tierney, who made such a hit in Broadway's "Male Animal," once-a-weeks with agent Barron Polen.

Fay Wray nabbed Al Hall on the Lucille Ball rebound, and it seems she's made a very happy substitute.

Buddy Rogers is congratulated by wife Mary and Elsa Maxwell on his decision to give up his band to direct and act in the movies.

Hollywood's No. 1 bachelor, Greg Bautzer, reportedly's giving up a cherished independence for L'Amour.

The Dick Hallidays took the marriage knot literally. No one's ever seen their hands unclasped.

Elusive Edgar Bergen, famous for Charlie McCarthy and impregnable bachelorhood, keeps current lady, Josephine Heller, guessing plenty.

Now that Gracie's presidential aspirations are in the past, she and George Burns relax and toast the Harry J. Browns' 7th anniversary.

Rog Pryor hears about Ann Sothern's latest yen—to sing in her next film! Her 250-lb. mother, a voice instructress, is the Coach.

Ginny Simms, Kay Kyser's girlfriend, expects big roles as a result of her nose-innovation.

While Chaplin's away, Goddard will play. Here she is dining at Ciro's with Director Litvak.

Alice Faye deserts Cesar Romero and dazzles Greer Garson with her egg-size sapphire ring and breath-taking diamond bracelet.

Solacer Peggy Moran cheers Joe Pasternak after a sad adieu to his Brooklyn fiancée at the airport.

Betty Grable is jubilant as she pinch-hits for absentee Lucille Ball, in the rhumba with Desi Arnaz.

Rumor has it that Judy Garland and Dave Rose will make an altar trek any time now. They've been dating nightly for ages 'n' ages.

Ad-libber Fields does it again as he puckers lips to give Mrs. Spitz a peck of birthday wishes.

'Tis rumored the Bill Powells will soon be focusing their attention upon an adopted junior Powell.

'Tisn't just crêpe suzettes that makes the Herbert Marshalls beam. They're sparkling in expectancy of a Third Marshall sometime soon.

GOOD NEWS

BY SYLVIA KAHN

Chitchat to tickle your funnybone and keep you Hollywood-wise!

VIC(TORY FOR) MATURE

The Lana Turner-Vic Mature coupling is the hottest item in Hollywood's romantic fires, but we don't believe anyone's reported how it all began. For the records, then, here goes: Vic was at Ciro's with a party, one evening, when Lana, accompanied by her agent, came in and sat at a table near the men's "powder" room. Vic had never met Lana but, as soon as he spotted her, he realized two things—that she was a girl he'd have no trouble going for, and that he knew the man she was with. That was enough for Vic. He promptly jumped up from his own table and bee-lined for the "room." On the way there, however, and on the way back, he paused at the Turner table for a little chat with the agent and each time, with as much subtlety as a dive bomber, angled for an introduction to the beauteous Lana. No luck at all. However, that didn't discourage Mr. Mature! Ten minutes later and a dozen times after that, he repeated the routine—the Turner table, the "powder" room, the Turner table and home—but absolutely no dice. That night Lana and Vic went their separate ways, technically strangers. However, an honest man always finds a way. The following morning, Vic all but choked Lana's phone number out of a mutual friend and—well—just reread our opening sentence!

FIT TO BE TRIED

Cutest twist to the Turner-Mature romance is the pair's "Mike-and-Ike-they-look-alike" gag. Lana and Vic, early in their "friendship," bought duplicate swim suits and play clothes but, now that they know each other better, are expanding their wardrobes to include tailored suits made of identically the same fabrics and cut along similar lines—and there's no assurance they'll stop there. The other afternoon, we ankled into Gladys Parker's swank dressmaking establishment and came upon Lana clad in straight pins, basting stitches and something skin-hugging and décolleté which answers to the name of evening gown. You guessed it. We marched into the next dressing-room looking for Mr. Mature! He wasn't there, we are sorry to say, but the middle-aged woman who was, put us in our place by remarking sarcastically that we "might find him at Adrian's."

NAMES'LL NEVER HURT YOU!

Many men find Lucille Ball disturbing—but not in the same sense Orson Welles does. To Orson, Lucille's curves and appeal are as negligible as Elsie the Cow's. He'd be happy if he never laid eyes on the lady again, and is conscious of her only as the female who transformed him from a Plain Genius to a Mad Genius. Addressing the mighty Mr. Welles as "Stinky" one day, Lucille discovered it made him furious—and discovered, at the same time, that making Mr. Welles furious made her feel fine! Consequently, she now follows him all over the RKO lot, pounces on him in the commissary and even hunts for him when he ducks her, just to hurl her "pet" name and watch him squirm. Orson's begged her to stop, but Lucille's having too much fun and, unless something's done about it, Orson, who recently found himself laid up with a broken leg, may soon find himself laid up with apoplexy!

THE FABULOUS INVALID

But don't let Orson's allergy to unflattering nicknames disillusion you. He's really a very wonderful guy—as evidenced by his performance at Ciro's the other evening. Still "suffering" from that broken leg, Orson hobbled into the cafe, supported by crutches and Dolores Del Rio. Motioning for a waiter, he permitted himself to be helped across the room to his table, and lowered gently into his chair. Then, to the astonishment of everyone, he handed his crutches to the waiter, rose unassisted and, with Dolores on his arm, made a dash for the dance floor and a rhumba! And that isn't all! When he was ready to leave, he demanded the return of his crutches and, with face absolutely expressionless, he limped calmly across the dance floor, out the door and into the night.

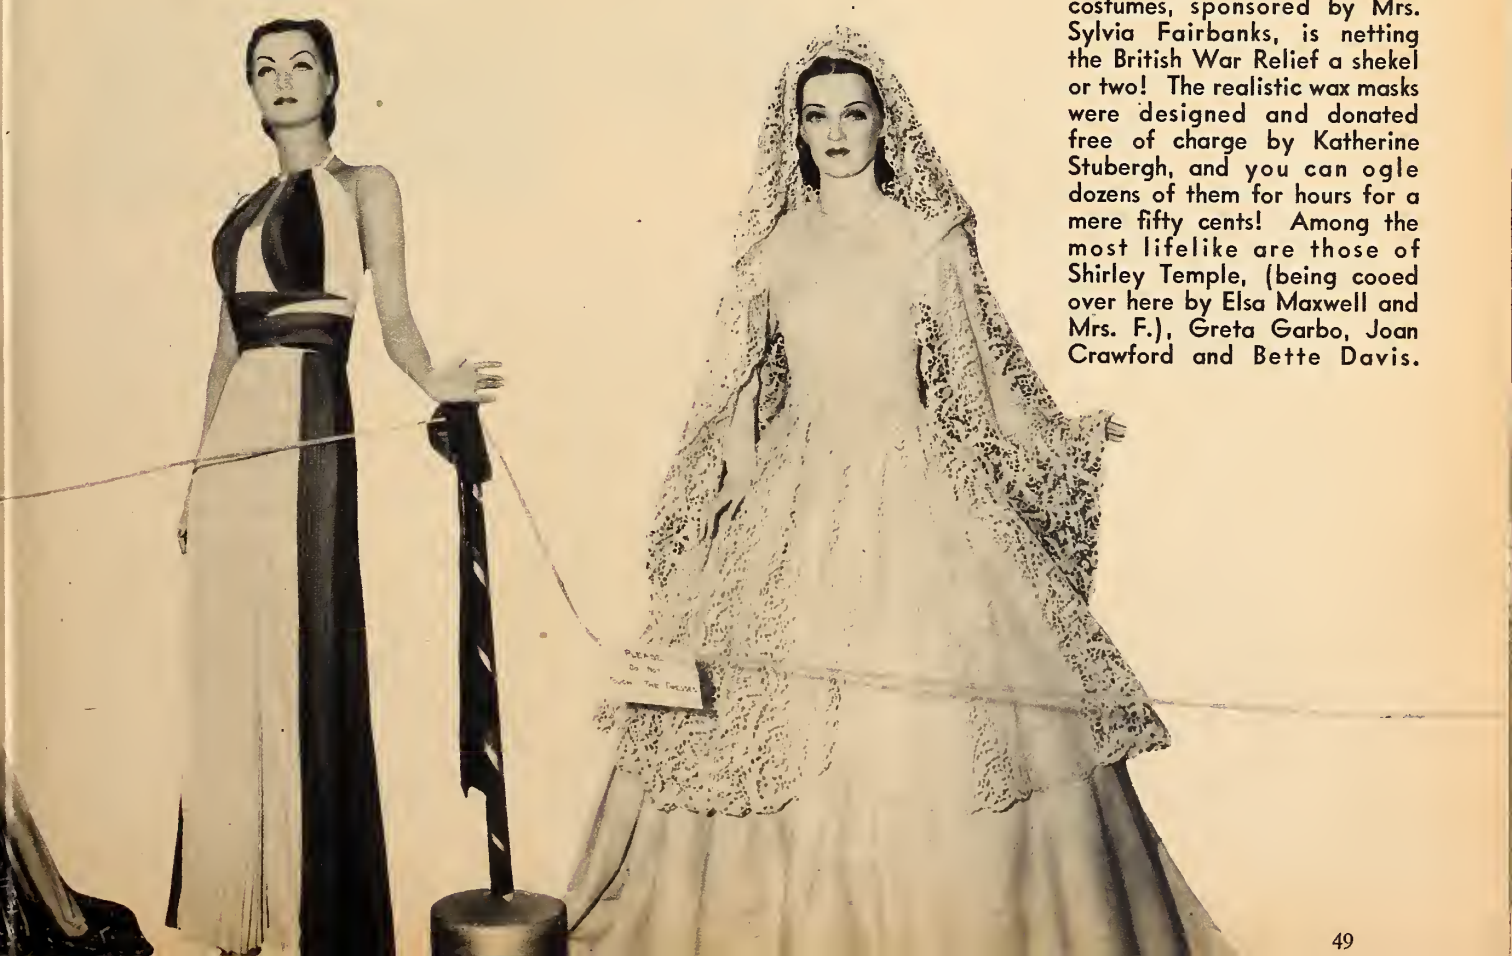
HERE COMES THE GROOM!

Arleen Whelan probably knew it all along, but we've just learned that when the 26-year-old redhead eloped to Las Vegas with Alexander D'Arcy, her on-again-off-again heartbeat of many months standing, she took unto herself more than a mere male. She married the "world's best-dressed man!" The smooth and handsome Alex, a 31-year-old French-Egyptian, was handed the title recently by a noted Movietown designer who cites as proof, the actor's 130 suits, 61 pairs of shoes, 42 hats, 37 sports ensembles and a few hundred other assorted items. And, as though that were not enough, Arleen's groom is also known as "Hollywood's Numba One Rhumbamaniac!"

KNOCK BEFORE YOU LEAP

The funniest story to come out of Hollywood in a dog's age is the one Claudette Colbert's telling on herself. It's one of those embarrassing moment tales, but don't let that scare you. This one's different. . . . It all happened when Claudette's house was being redecorated for the winter. Claudette had moved down to the beach with some friends but, one day, agreed to pose for a magazine photographer in the garden of her own home. Forgetting there were people working in the building, she drove up to the house, let herself in with her personal key and went directly to her dressing-room, closing the door, behind her. Within a few minutes she had laid out a fresh costume and, after peeling off her clothes piece by piece, stood clad in —nothing. She was just about to slide into a negligée when the door opened and in strode a man! "He was there less than a moment," Claudette relates, "and I think he was even more scared than I. At any rate, he found his legs first and bolted like a shot. I found out later he was one of the house painters, but he never came back to finish his job! As far as I know, he's still running!" Away from what, may we ask?

HIS PLACE IN THE SUN



Anecdotes linking W. C. Fields with a certain beverage, referred to as scotch and soda, are slated for extinction. Fields has actually grown sensitive about them and about the legends which surround his stop-light nose. It's tough to believe, but we're convinced since we learned that the morning W. C. was scheduled to begin wardrobe fittings for "The Bank Dick," he woke up with a flaming red schnoz and flatly refused to go to to the studio! "I got this firecracker at the beach," he swore, "and I'm not going down there and let everyone say Fields was plastered before he even started!" P. S. Fittings were held up until the nose had returned to its own lovely pink.

JUDY DONNING ROSE-COLORED GLASSES?

M-G-M's bulging with the tender emotion these days, what with Lana and Vic, Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville, Norma Shearer and George Raft, and Mickey Rooney and Dolly Thom all apparently on the verge of something serious. The Metromancer closest to the altar, however, is little Judy Garland. Intimates insist that Judy and musician Dave Rose are so in love they can't see straight and that despite the objections of her advisers, Judy will become Mrs. Rose as soon as Dave's divorce becomes final in May. Of course, Judy's still very young and older people who want her to contradict her own heart have her slightly mixed up at the moment. Nevertheless, she and Dave are a bright pair and you can bet your bankroll that the matter will be wound up in whatever way makes them happiest.

CONSERVATIVE CROSBY

More important to a script writer than food is material for good gags—and Bing Crosby's script writers are starving! There's nothing funny about Bing anymore! For one thing, he's sold all but one of his thirty poky race horses which were always good for a

The exhibition of original movie costumes, sponsored by Mrs. Sylvia Fairbanks, is netting the British War Relief a shekel or two! The realistic wax masks were designed and donated free of charge by Katherine Stubergh, and you can ogle dozens of them for hours for a mere fifty cents! Among the most lifelike are those of Shirley Temple, (being cooed over here by Elsa Maxwell and Mrs. F.), Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford and Bette Davis.

GOOD NEWS

laugh and, for another thing, he's turned Beau Brummell! Yup, nightmare shirts and hats a milkman's nag would disdain will never again adorn Mr. Crosby! Last week a friend read a nasty crack about Bing's sloppy attire, clipped it and sent it to Bing with a note. Bing proved that he could take a hint, and the next morning he went out and bought himself an entirely new and very elegant wardrobe!

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

We're not trying to start a new influx of females to Hollywood's already overcrowded pastures, but we've just learned of a job in town that's good enough to lure many a young femme to the Cinema City. We're talking about waiting on tables at the Brown Derbys. Most visitors to the restaurants sympathize with the girls who serve them there, feeling they must be discontented with their lot and consumed with envy every time they plant a pork chop or a hot fudge sundae in front of a famous face. The laugh, of course, is on the visitors. The girls are perfectly well satisfied—and who wouldn't be, earning from $60 to $75 a week, every week! We're not kidding. Their basic salary combined with fat tips adds up to that sum and the only expenses they have in connection with their jobs are the costs of a weekly hair set and manicure which the Derby management insists upon, plus an average of at least three pairs of stockings a week, because they are asked never to serve at tables with as much as a single snag in their hose.

THE CORRECT THING

Emily Post, who has been telling befuddled folks for lo, these many years, not to eat peas with a knife or drink out of fingerbowls, would have fallen over in a faint had she been present at the home of the Chico Marxes one night last week. Chico, it appears, invited some friends over for a bite of supper and a game of gin-rummy, which was perfectly conventional. What wasn't conventional, though, was the sight of Mr. Marx ushering his assembled guests into the dining room at precisely the same moment Mrs. Marx was ushering herself out the front door, headed for the Brown Derby and her evening snack! The reason for this curious Hollywood etiquette? Mrs M. is getting a divorce from Mr. M. and, though she still shares her husband's roof, she didn't want to be in his way at the party!

ANNIE KEEPS IT CLEAN

Remember when the Harvard "Lampoon's" nasty cracks about Ann Sheridan being the "least likely to succeed" spattered the front pages of the country? Well, one of the school's graduate students has just penned a humorous sequel to the incident. He's written to the star and asked permission to use her as the subject of his Ph.D. thesis! Annie has a hunch it's a gag but will nix the proposition personally, nevertheless. Says she slyly: "No Harvard man's going to drop a blot on my good name!"

DATA AND DISA

The engagement ring and wedding band Greg Bautzer purchased for Lana Turner are locked in his bank vault, awaiting Dotty Lamour's "Yes" . . . Mary Livingstone's new nose cost $1,000 . . . "Love me, tolerate my cocker spaniel," says Constance Bennett who never turns up on a set without the beige-colored pup which reputedly set her back $1,500 . . . Attention, Screen Actors Guild! The ranch home of Bob Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck is in the movie business, too. It'll be the background for most of the Jane Withers picture, "Golden Hoofs" . . . Six-year-old Casey Johnson's stand-in in "Little Men" is a thirty-two-year-old midget who spends his leisure moments puffing away at a big, black cigar . . . Music-loving Eddie Albert owns well over two thousand phonograph records, and among them are many discs of French, Russian, Italian and Austrian folk songs . . . New High in Modernism: Herbert Marshall and his ex-frau, Edna Best, played opposite each other in a recent Hollywood production of Noel Coward's "Still Life" . . . The wedding bands that Bob Young and his wife wear are identical, except that hers is platinum and his is gold . . . Andrea Leeds is yanking all available strings in order to cancel her contracts with Sam Goldwyn. She and Bob are expecting an heir to the Howard fortune, and she'd like to retire from the screen forever and devote herself to wife-and-mothering . . . Laurence Olivier tied Vivien Leigh to him with a wedding band that's a half-inch wide!

FILM FUN

Shemp Howard, whackiest of the Three Stooges, was Universal-contracted the other day, and handed one of those form questionnaires which all newcomers fill out for publicity purposes. These questionnaires snoop as far into a player's personal life as the law allows, and seldom bring up anything lively. But leave it to a Stooge! The following excerpts from Shemp's questionnaire will give you a hint of what Universal's up against. Q. Any of your ancestors or members of your family distinguished in any field of endeavor? A. My brother, Curly. He was the first in the family to get a divorce. Q. Are any of your children theatrically inclined? A. God forbid! Q. What is your educational background? A. I attended the Brooklyn Plumbers' College. Q. List degrees received. A. Third degree burns. Q. Describe highlights of your early youth. A. I'll need about eight more pages for that. Q. How do you keep in condition? A. By sleeping and acting nervous at fights.

NEGATIVELY SPEAKING

When Barbara Hutton was stricken with a siege of the flu recently, local photographers were overjoyed. They've nothing against Barbara—in fact, think she's a grand girl. But ever since she rode into the Hollywood scene, they've been unable to flash-bulb Cary Grant! Seems Barbara got her fill of candid cameras long before she cut her first tooth and has asked all the Hollywood lens hounds to snub her completely and train their little black boxes on Gloria Glamour, instead. The boys respect her wish but, since Cary seldom appears without her, shots of Grant at play are growing scarcer than peace on earth! Naturally, when Cary squired Virginia Field to an important movie the other night, the camera boys rushed at the pair only to find a new obstacle in their path of duty. Virginia, whose British fiancé Richard Greene—now seeing service overseas—is still very much on her mind, feared that her date with Cary might be misconstrued and refused to pose at his side! Not until agent Johnny Maschio and Lady Moore, who was visiting Barbara Hutton at the time, had been sandwiched between them, would she face the birdie!

John Barrymore recently immortalized his hands, feet and profile in cement at Grauman's Theatre.

He had planned to use a cast of his face for the dirty work, but Sid insisted upon the real McCoy.

ALLEN A PINCH-PENNY?

Fred Allen is a plain guy. Night clubs bore him and show-offs give him a pain in the neck, but there's not one Hollywood wiseacre who can understand that. The wags interpret Fred's passion for simple living as stinginess and, all through the Allens' Movietown stay, had a fun-poking field day because Fred and the Missus cold-shouldered Ciro's and lived in a small apartment where Mrs. Allen did all their cooking. When word leaked out that Fred, preparing to leave for the East, had smashed his knuckles trying to help an expressman get his trunk through the door, the quipsters roared themselves silly. Fred came through all this ribbing completely unruffled, but not unaware and, when he got to New York, he made up his mind to lay it on even thicker. Hustling ever to the radio station from which he broadcasts, he dug out the station-owned story of his life and wrote the following addenda: "Regarding my marriage to Portland Hoffa, we had no extended honeymoon, but we did spend a few days in Waterbury, Connecticut, to make it seem longer!"

Mary Beth Hughes (his wife in "The Great Profile") made him beautiful as 2,000 fans cheered.

The finished product! John first signed his name "Jon," and had to do the whole thing over again.

GREER'S MR. THAU

Can you conceive of any man escorting a beautiful film star to the theatre, and then smuggling her out a side door to prevent people from seeing him with her? Seems kind of strange, in fact, slightly on the screwy side, doesn't it? But that's exactly what publicity-shy Benny Thau does when he dates Greer Garson. Thau, as you may know, is the man Greer's name's been linked with so persistently, of late. He's a small person, fortyish, acting assistant to Louis B. Mayer and nephew of Metro's president Nicholas Schenck. Greer's known him about three years—ever since the evening he and Mayer wandered into a London theatre and beheld her, for the first time, in a play called "Old Music." And, though rumor has it they'll be altarbound any moment, from a source close to Greer, we hear that whether or not Mr. Thau has any such idea, Miss Garson, who's still recuperating from a very unhappy marriage, has not!

SHORT SHOTS

Note to Ann Sheridan: A marine painting, presented to George Brent by Greta Garbo, is still hanging over George's mantelpiece . . . Katharine Stevens, who plays Ginger Rogers' friend in "Kitty Foyle," is the daughter of Sam Wood, who's directing the picture . . . Fred MacMurray gifted Cesar Romero with a watchdog, but the dog gets lonesome for Fred and keeps running back to the MacMurray home . . . Ex-child star, Mitzi Green, owns over 1,500 pictures of Jimmy Stewart and is plenty upset over the Olivia de Havilland menace . . . Australia has banned two Joan Crawford pictures, "Strange Cargo" and "Susan and God." No reason's been given . . . Students enrolled for the art and composition courses at Hollywood High's night school have Olympe Bradna for a classmate . . . They're featuring a new sandwich in the 20th Century-Fox commissary, called a "Jack Oakie." Its ingredients are ham and limburger . . . Just about every star in Hollywood donates 1% of his salary to the Motion Picture Relief Fund . . . Dan Topping, Sonja Henie's groom who owns the Brooklyn Football Dodgers, is rumored to have a weekly income of $15,000 . . . And have you heard Bob Hope's newest complaint? Says he: "I have so many bags under my eyes, my nose resembles a pack horse!"

GOLDWYN STORY

Now it can be told. Before Gary Cooper's "The Westerner" was released to the public, Producer Sam Goldwyn called for an immediate showing of the picture and summoned Director William Wyler, Writer Jo Swerling and his 14-year-old son, Sam, Jr., to his private projection room to view it with him. The picture had been running for about ten minutes when Goldwyn suddenly ordered it stopped. "It's terrible!" he bellowed. "It's all mixed up! I don't understand what it's all about! No one could understand what it's all about!" Wyler and Swerling promptly protested. The action was so smooth, they declared, even a child could follow it. But Goldwyn was stubborn. The picture must be changed. Wyler and Swerling bravely stuck to their guns. "Look, Mr. Goldwyn," they pleaded. "Here's your son. Let's ask him. Sam, did you understand the picture?" Young Sam snickered. "Of course I did," he said. "It's simple." Wyler and Swerling were relieved. "See, Mr. Goldwyn?" they said. "Even the kid understood it!" "What!" roared Goldwyn. "That makes it even worse! What are we doing now? Making pictures for children!"

STRANGE CARGO

Nothing in Hollywood's bag of tricks can get a raised eyebrow out of RKO's new Swedish importation, Miss Signe Hasso. Signe bid a temporary farewell to an engineer husband and a six-year-old son to take a crack at a U. S. movie career and, due to war conditions, arrived in the film capital by way of Russia and Japan. En route, she enjoyed every danger-fraught and unique adventure this frenzied world can offer and, as a consequence, finds Movietown antics mild, kindergarten stuff by comparison. What, after all, could top her Pacific crossing? According to Signe, she made the entire trip with an Oriental, male variety, as her cabinmate! The Japanese, it seems, think nothing of assigning a man and woman to the same stateroom and, when a slanty-eyed gent marched in and told Signe that the room she thought was her own was his, too, there was nothing she could do but grin and share it!

TAMING OF THE SHREW

Maybe it's true, and maybe it's not, but word's going round that fiery Miriam Hopkins has at last met her match. For years, Miriam's been known as one of the screen's most difficult actresses because she persists in directing her directors, but Kurt Bernhardt, who's megaphoning her "Lady With Red Hair," is said to have discovered how to humble her. After a single week of enduring his star's overbearance, Bernhardt strolled up to the belligerent Miss Hopkins with his salary check in hand. "Here," he said. "You take it. You earned it!" The sarcasm was not lost on Miss Hopkins. She gulped and stalked away, but we hear she's scrapped the dictatorial manner and has been obedient ever since.

UNDERCOVER WORK

Hollywood's due for the shock of a decade when the divorce of a top-ranking director finally clears the courts. The reason behind the action is not his wife's "mental cruelty" as was charged, but a certain South of the Border spitfire who's dating another man heavily just to throw the gossips off the track! Among her friends, however, the spitfire's playing another game. She's betting cold cash she'll be the director's wife immediately after he's freed!

(Continued on page 75)

Dennis Morgan and Ginger were pals from the start, as both have a wide mischievous streak!

Ginger chats with Jim Craig—said to be a cross between Jimmy Stewart and Cary Grant!

Another sensational best-seller has been nabbed by the movies!

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY'S novel, "Kitty Foyle," was published in November, 1939. In December it was bought by RKO at a cost of $50,000. By February, 1940, 100,000 copies of the book had been sold and to date, more than 250,000 people have paid $2.50 to read about the adventures of the white collar girl, Kitty Foyle.

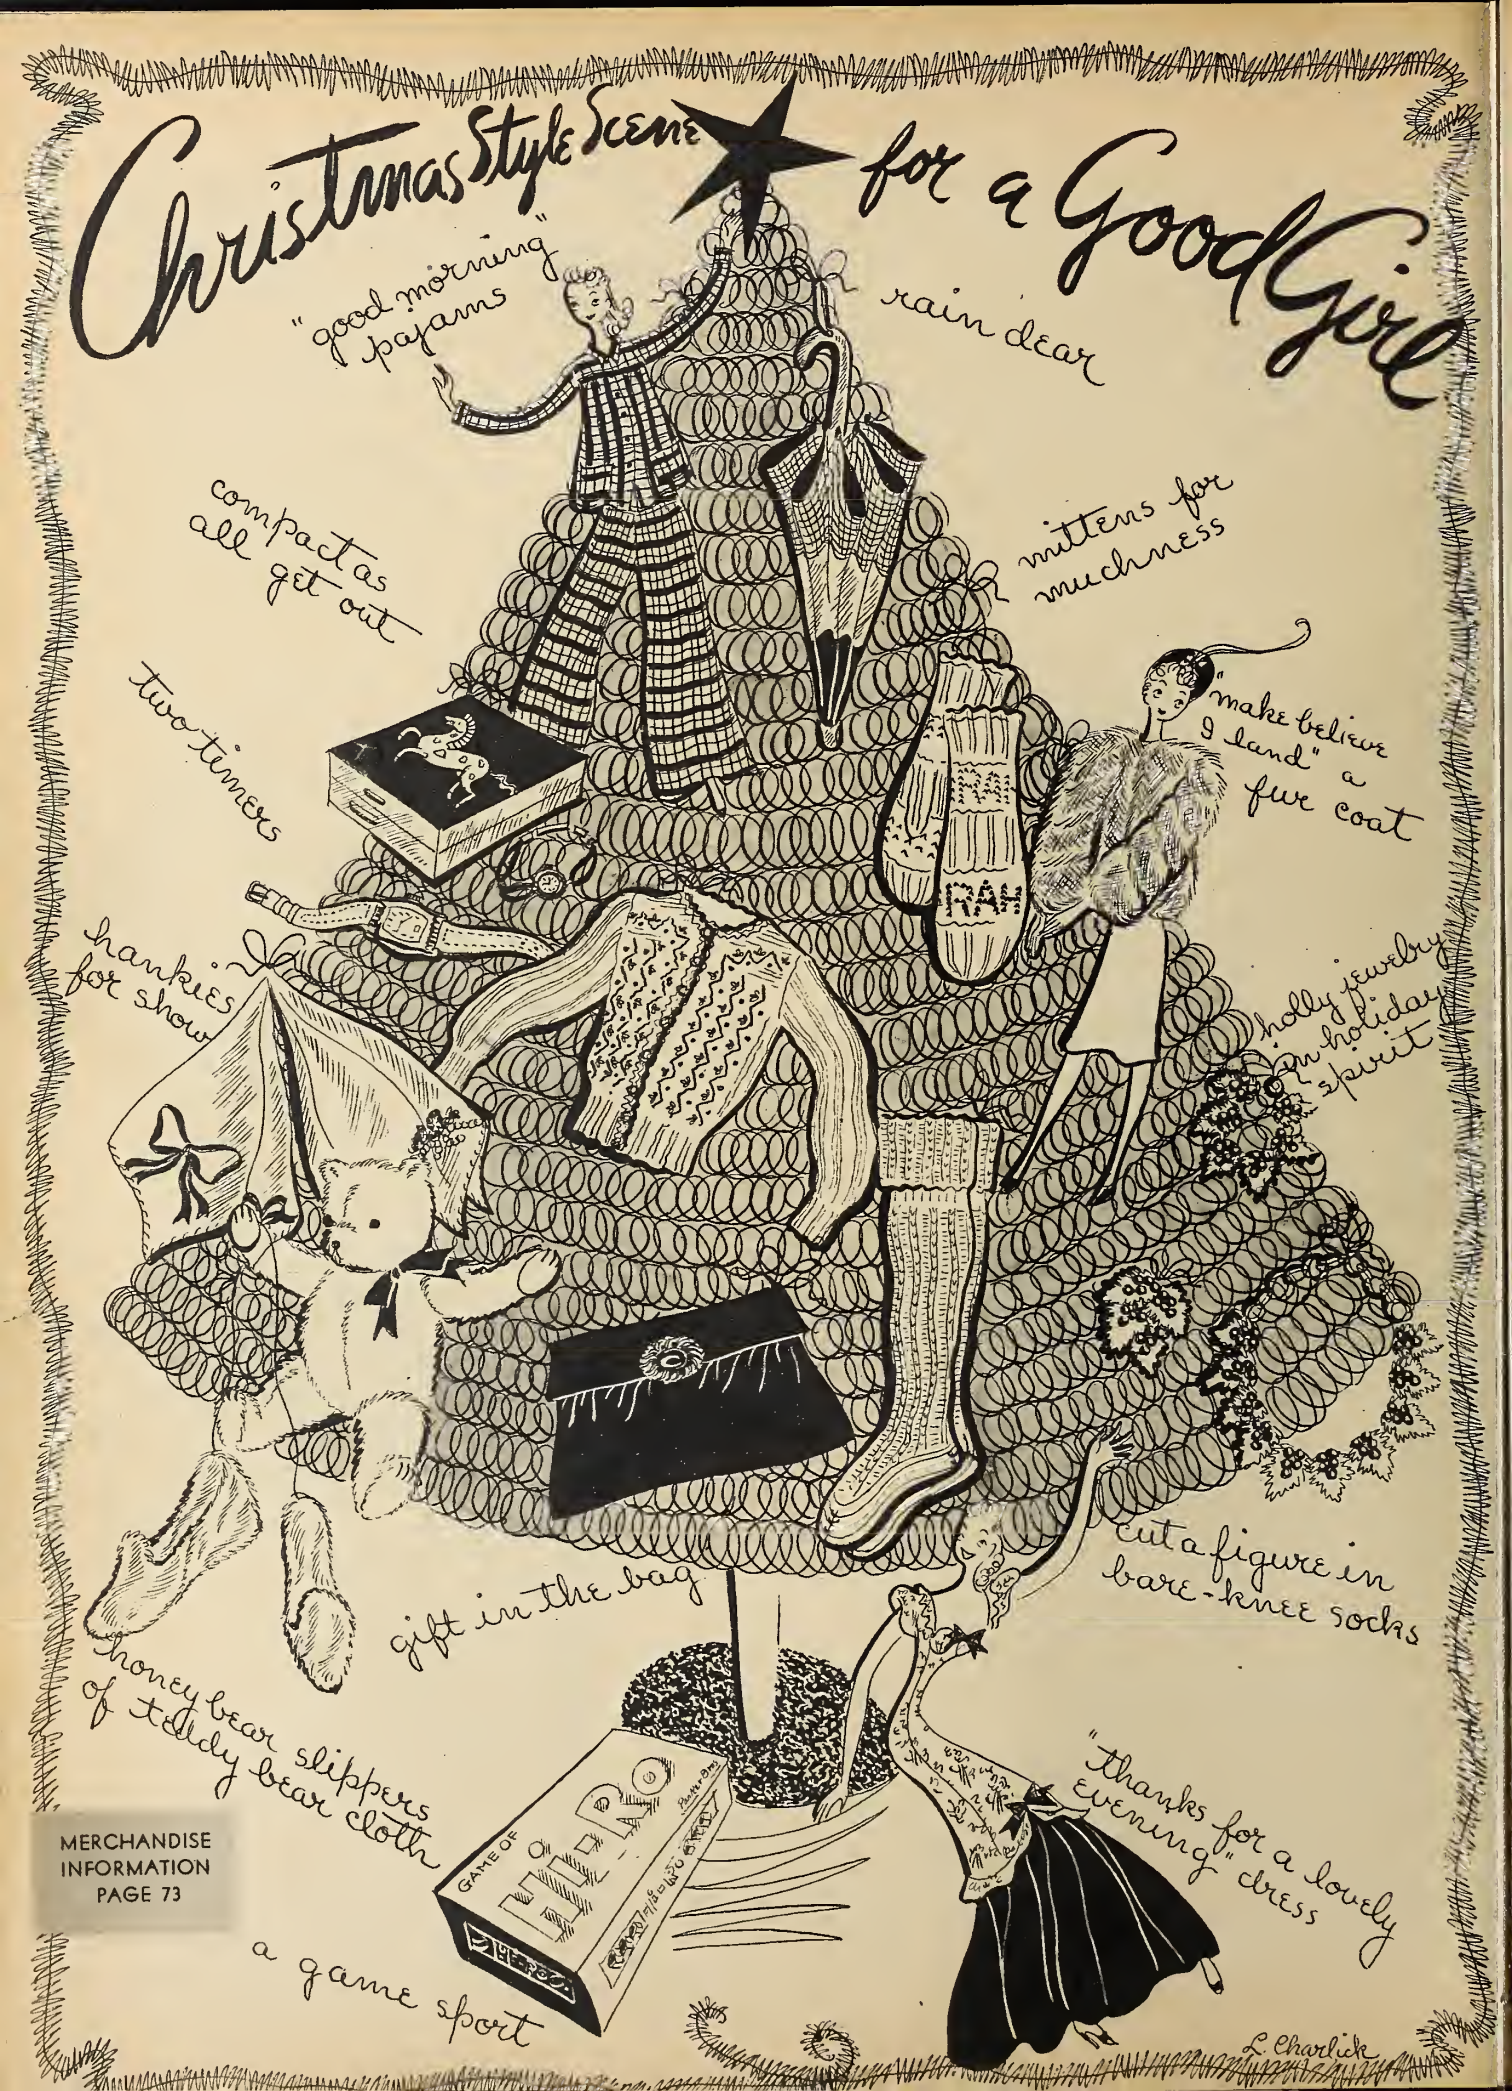
The script, which took three months to prepare, was written by Dalton Trumbo, himself a novelist and author of the best-seller, "Johnny Got His Gun," and Donald Ogden Stewart, well-known screen writer. To make the screen play pure enough to pass the Will Hays Office the story had to be changed in part. The picture opens showing Kitty in New York, unable to decide between a marriage with Mark, a young interne played by James Craig, or a life as mistress to Wynnewood Strafford VI (Dennis Morgan). The film then cuts back to Philadelphia, showing Kitty when she was fifteen and takes her through her love affair with Wynn and her career in New York, ending with her decision to marry Mark.

To portray Kitty at the age of fifteen, the wardrobe department outfitted Ginger Rogers in a blue middy and black cotton stockings and the make-up department plaited her hair (golden red for this picture) into long braids, tied by bows. The rest of her wardrobe consists of clothes that any stenographer or secretary might own. Only expensive gown that Ginger wears is an evening dress fashioned of gold lamé imported from France at a cost of $24 dollars a yard. Because the material used in the gown was the last of its kind to come out of war-torn France, Bonwit Teller, exclusive New York store, wired the studio asking for it. RKO refused to yield the cloth, preferring to gown their star in it.

To assure authenticity of the sets, a large amount of research was done for the film. Photographs of the exterior of the Philadelphia Bellevue-Stratford Hotel were made and sets were later reproduced from the photos; the original 21 Club in New York was used as the model for Giono's Speakeasy in which Kitty and Wynn met often; and the shabby Frankford house on Griscom Street in Philadelphia was reproduced exactly, down to the sun-baked yard in the front and the outhouse in the back.

The casting of the female lead was not difficult since Producer Henderson had had Ginger Rogers in mind when he bought "Kitty Foyle," but the male leads caused the studio enough headaches to make an aspirin factory prosperous. Practically every male star in Hollywood was asked to play the role of Wynn, but because of other studio commitments all were forced to refuse the part. Dennis Morgan, Warner Brothers star, was finally borrowed after several days of dickering with his home studio. Morgan, who has played in several unimportant Warner films, gets his first chance to play a leading role in a top-budgeted picture. The role of Mark, the young interne, was given to James Craig, handsome six-footer who was last under contract to Universal, where he appeared in minor roles.

Strangely enough, the real lives of Morgan and Craig parallel those they play in "Kitty Foyle." Dennis really comes from a family of Wisconsin lumber kings, while Jim has worked as a truck driver, newspaper vendor and gasoline station attendant.



Katharine Stevens, who plays Kitty's roommate, has her first chance to sink her teeth into a good role. However, she has appeared in pictures before. When she was three years old, she had a small part in "Peck's Bad Boy," a picture directed by her father, Sam Wood. Upon graduation from high school, she changed her name (to avoid charges of cashing in on her father), played in summer stock, and eventually landed the role of understudy to Martha Scott in the Broadway production of "Our Town."

On the set, the technicians and crew are divided into two camps—Willkie boosters and Roosevelt boosters. Each group resents working with the other and both break into very frequent heated arguments to the annoyance of long-suffering Director Wood.

NIGHT and DAY FASHIONS

Bright green or red velveteen adds a dash of glamour and glory to yoke and hood. The crisp rayon taffeta lining is matched in the same gay tones. $19.95. Lord & Taylor's second floor. New York.

MERCHANDISE INFORMATION PAGE 73

ALL DRESSED UP LIKE A CHRISTMAS TREE . . AND HEADING OUT IN HOODS!

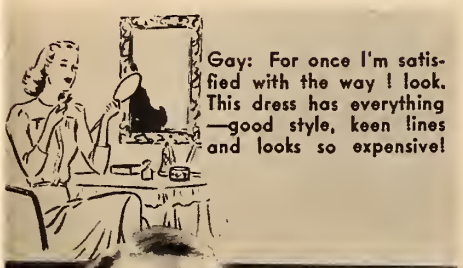
LEADING lady dazzles her public in a charming formal taffeta with pin-point waist. Rhinestones sparkle flirtatiously on straps and pockets. Sizes 9-17. $10.95. Saks at 34. New York.

White angel goes glamorously to dinner in rayon jersey . . . multi-colored sequins stud the halo hood. Sizes 10-18. $7.95. Ohrbach's. New York.

Late dater in her party-going wrap . . . white galyak fur-cloth top, velvet skirt. A charmer and a warmer. Sizes 10-18. $14.95. At Stern's. New York.

1. . . and 2. . . and 3. . . and 4. . . and 5. . .

Short and sweet! The fur jacket you've always craved and thought you couldn't afford, at a believe-it-or-not price. Skunk-dyed or sable-dyed Opossum. Sizes 12-20. Only $38. At I. J. Fox, New York.



Rise and shine at the office in this sueded rayon jersey—with self buttons and buttonholes all over the place! Heavenly colors, too! All for $3.98 in sizes 12-18. Sold at McCreery, New York.

Who's just a fair weather friend? Your rumpus coat frolics with you rain or shine. Water-repellent cotton gabardine, red collar and hood lining, zipper pocket. Sizes 12-20. $4.94. Macy's, New York.

and 6 add up to stay under Seventy-five dollars

Gay: For once I'm satisfied with the way I look. This dress has everything—good style, keen lines and looks so expensive!

Like an expensive English classic with its impeccable tailoring, soft wool and cashmere jersey, ribboned cardigan front. A natural for year 'round wear. Sizes 10-20. $7.95. Lord & Taylor, New York.

Ginny: I wish I could find a dress like my summer Pinafores.

Gay: I saw a Fall Pinafore dress that would be darling on you.

P stands for pinafore frock, pleated ruffs 'n' pockets a-plenty. In other words, Perfection! Delicious shades of crêpe, contrasting graduated buttons. Sizes 9-17. $10.95. McCreery's New York.

Butch: What an evening dress! I love it.

Ginny: It's day-time, too, when I wear a short skirt.

Wait till he sees you in this! The all-important gold-embroidered dinner blouse, startling in scarlet with black skirt. Blouse sizes 32-38. $3.98. Skirt sizes 12-18. $3.98. Franklin Simon, New York.

PROP SHOP

PRETTY PENNY is mighty busy these days scouting for extra special Xmas values! She calls them "nifty-gifties" and she'll have lots more next month.

DASHAWAY
. . . for daytime

Ask for football colors in this casual and thoroughly grand Year Rounder of fleece-finished felt. $1.99. Available at Gimbel Bros.

POMPONS
. . . for madcaps

Puff-balls go to your head making a witty hand-crocheted wool yarn hat. Adjustable for all sizes. $2.95 at Bloomingdale's.

RINGS
. . . and earrings

New! These silver loyalty rings for friendship. Nice! These decorative plated beauties for pretty ears. $1 each. Saks at 34.

BOWKNOTS
. . . and flutterbys

Tiny glamorous novelties made of ribbon, lace and flowers. Bow'n earring set $1.39; posy comb 47c; butterfly 94c. Macy's.

MAGIC
. . . . for misses

Yankette, a slip that becomes your length by a yank at a thread. Crown-tested Seraceta rayon. $1.69. James McCreery.

A MUFF
. . . . . for stuff

To protect your paws and hold all of your gadgets. Surprise! It's a pocketbook, too. Persian fur fabric on cloth. $3 at Gimbel's.

LINES
. . . for waistlines

Stunning stone-studded gold or silver mesh belt. $1.95. Macy's. Daytime suedester with tiny ring trim. $1.00 at Altman's.

CLASS
. . . for classmates

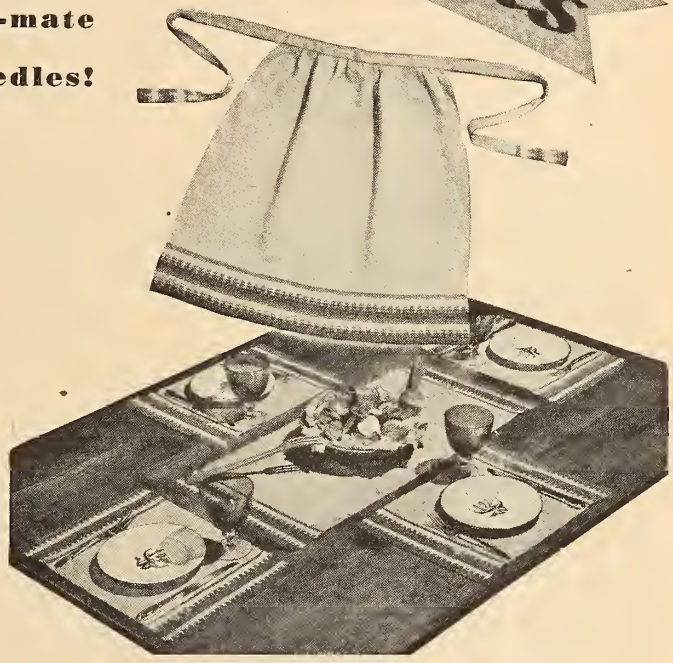
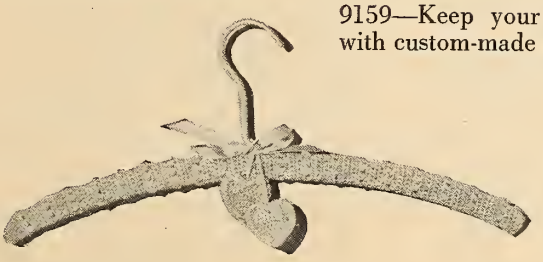
Kayser's glove "Good News" and Joyce's bucko oxford "Knave" ensembled for campus or sports. Glove $1. Kayser Shops.

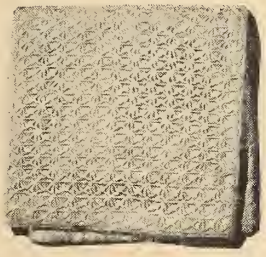


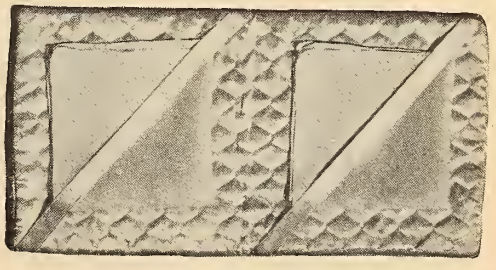
For information concerning fashions write to the Fashion Editor of MODERN SCREEN magazine.

Crocheted matchmakers



It's fun to match-mate your wits and needles!





7205—Don a cute crochet-bordered apron and set your table with table mats and matching glass jackets.

9159—Keep your closet up to snuff with custom-made hangers and sachets.

9168—This crocheted satin case is as swish as your best hankie inside.

Send in the coupon below with a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Instructions are absolutely free.

ANN WILLS, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Kindly send, at no cost to me:

Directions for No. 7205.....

Directions for Nos. 9159-9168.....

I enclose a stamped, self-addressed (large) envelope

Name .....

Street ....

City..... State.....

Use your heads! Use your hands! What your needlework needs is more imagination. Crocheting is all very fine and delicate and ladylike just by its lonesome, but hooking it to ideas like the ones above is positively a stroke of genius! But you don't have to be a genius to do it, it's that easy! And good news to you career girls, you can accomplish all this in your spare moments on your spare change.

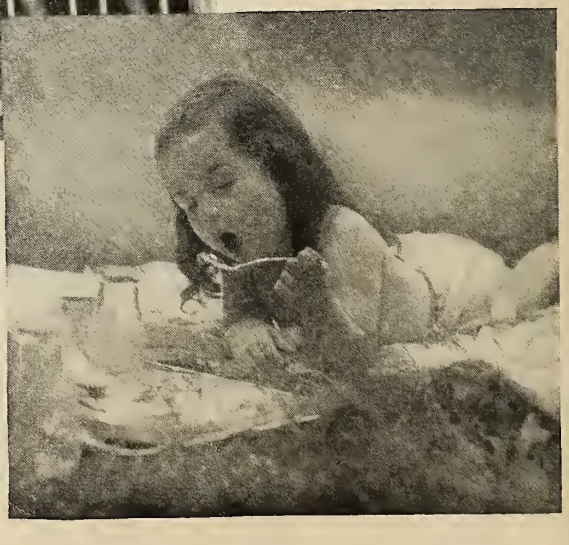
In whipping up a firelight supper on holiday eves, add a note of whimsy to your background with a crash apron and table mats, both trimmed with a crochet pattern that matches the glasses' "jackets." Just watch this sparkling combination whet your guests' appetites! They're simple to make and bound to impress the ultra ultra of visiting notables.

To solve that problem of the gift for "the girl who has everything," sharpen your wits 'n' needles and give her a bit of fact and fancy—a crocheted handkerchief case with dress hangers to match. They're everlastingly useful, and she'll love owning 'em!

BEHIND THE SCENES WITH "VIRGINIA"

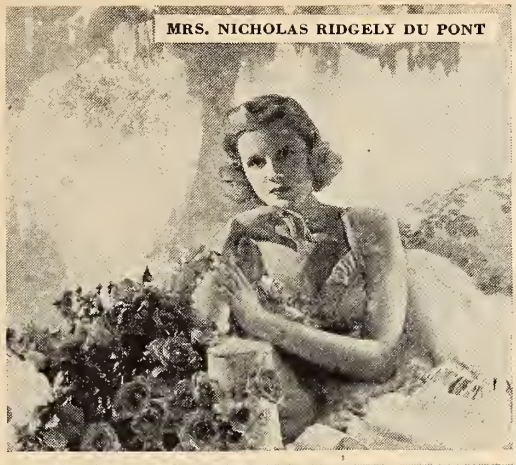
Hollywood comes to the serene old South and produces this vivid, romantic love story

Just stepped out ➤ of a bandbox? No, a trailer—which served Madeleine Carroll as a dressing-room on the set of "Virginia."



➤ Madeleine's not peering at Fred MacMurray's molars—she's helping him with his make-up. It must be absolutely perfect, for this film's in Technicolor.

➤ Turn about is fair play! Miss Carroll, looking like the 20th Century instead of the 18th, turns the lenses on a bevy of syndicate photographers, who obligingly give her an inviting "cheesecake"—leg picture to you.



➤ Marie Wilson, known for long eyelashes and humorous parts, plays her most serious role to date—a comedy part with an undertone of seriousness. This marks her comeback after a two-year absence from films.

On the set of "Virginia," the cast ate, lived ➤ and acted outdoors. In bad weather, covered sets were used. Here's Carolyn Lee (the only cast member who didn't lose pounds on location) taking a snack in the sunlight between scenes.

MRS. VICTOR DU PONT, III

MRS. NICHOLAS RIDGELY DU PONT

MRS. EUGENE DU PONT, III

MRS. ERNEST DU PONT, JR.

AMERICAN GIRL 1941

Eyes bright as stars . . . Hair brushed to shining . . . Cheeks—clean, fresh, sweet as a newly flowered rose . . . Attire trim as a uniform, or—a benison of grace and soft enchantment.

Thus stands our American Girl. Eager. Spirited. Swift to serve as today's swift events demand.

That jewel brightness is part of her unchanging tradition of high health and personal beauty.

In her primer of true breeding are five flaming requisites to the care of her face, the treasured edicts long laid down by Pond's:—

BATHE the face lavishly with luscious Pond's Cold Cream. Spank its fragrant unctuousness into the skin of face and throat. Spank for 3 full minutes—even five. This swift and obedient cream mixes with the dried, dead surface cells, dirt and make-up on your skin, softening and setting them free.

WIPE OFF all this softened debris with the caressing absorbency of Pond's Tissues. With it you have removed some of the softened tops of blackheads—rendered it easier for little plugs of hardened sebum to push their way to the surface.

SPANK again with fresh fingerfuls of gracious Pond's Cold Cream. Again wipe off with Pond's Tissues. This spanking enhances both the cleansing and the softening. Your skin emerges from it infinitely refreshed. Lines seem softened. Pores seem finer.

COOL with the faint, intriguing astringence of Pond's Skin Freshener.

MASK your whole face, for one full minute, with a blissful coating of Pond's Vanishing Cream. This delectable cream has as one of its chief missions in life the duty of dispersing remaining harsh particles, chappings, aftermath of exposure. When you wipe it off, it leaves a perceptible mat finish. Then with what enchantment your powder goes on. How surprisingly it holds.

Perform this Pond's ritual in full once daily—before retiring or during the day. And again in abbreviated form as your skin and make-up need freshening. Guard your skin's tender look and feel, as do so many members of America's most distinguished families—with Pond's. Already some thirteen million women in the United States use Pond's.

GIVE-AWAY for the thrifty minded—FREE (for a limited period) a tempting supply of Pond's authoritative hand lotion, DANYA, with each purchase of the medium-size Pond's Cold Cream. Both for the price of cream! At beauty counters everywhere.

BOTH FOR THE PRICE OF CREAM

Copyright, 1940, Pond's Extract Company

MRS. VICTOR DU PONT, III . . . MRS. NICHOLAS RIDGELY DU PONT . . . MRS. EUGENE DU PONT, III . . . MRS. ERNEST DU PONT, JR. . . . members of the brilliant family whose aristocratic heritage, whose vast and varied industries, are almost an American legend. All have for years followed the Pond's ritual

EXPOSING WEAKNESSES OF TOP RANKING STARS

(Continued from page 25)

Another fine one is this Laraine Day. She'll go far. She has a good range, a retentive memory. I can go over the script with her, mention a pause in a certain bit of dialogue and a week later, when we get to that dialogue, she'll remember the pause!

"I'd call Robert Donat the easiest man I've ever worked with. His Mr. Chips was mere child's play. Why, once on the stage in London, I saw him enact, in successive scenes, a lad of eighteen and an old man of eighty! Match that!"

Returning to his own methods, Hitchcock said that he mapped out the movies he directed entirely in advance; made quick pencil sketches of each scene and never deviated from his original plan. He revealed how he got the most out of his players. He indulged in trickery!

THERE was the time, in "Thirty-Nine Steps," when Madeleine Carroll and Robert Donat were to be handcuffed and devote hours to dragging each other up and down hills, over meadows—and even spend a night at an inn.

To make matters even more interesting, they didn't know each other. They came to the set one morning at nine and Hitchcock, in his own amiable manner, introduced them and immediately handcuffed them together. Neither had had breakfast. Neither was exactly the chummy type. Yet Hitchcock kept them shackled for two hours.

"Take these darn handcuffs off!" wailed Madeleine.

"Can't," sighed Hitchcock. "Lost the key."

After four hours, the handcuffed stars hated each other, hated the world. Hitchcock turned to his cameraman. "Twirl 'em!" he shouted. The camera rolled. The scene was realistic. It created a sensation.

"You have to be tricky and sometimes even cruel," said Hitchcock. "In 'Foreign Correspondent,' there's that big scene where the airplane is shot down, and the players have to hang on to a wing in the water while the waves break over them. I never warned them when the waves were coming, and so their reactions were real. That $160,000 scene took ten days to film! I knew that the stars would grumble about being in the water a week and a half, so I applied a little psychology. I hired a sixty-nine-year-old lady, Miss Gertrude Hoffman, to go into the water with the others. As long as a woman her age didn't complain, well, Joel McCrea and Laraine Day couldn't either. And the scene went off smoothly. Not bad, eh, what?"

Not bad at all. But, before leaving Mr. Hitchcock, we must repeat a story we recently heard about him.

It seems that a few weeks ago Hitchcock was lured to a swank dinner party. All of Movieland was there—producers, actors, relatives, everyone. After the coffee and dessert, the guests grouped off to play poker. Hitchcock, not being familiar with the game, promptly settled himself into a nearby easy chair and fell asleep.

After a couple of hours Mrs. Hitchcock came over and shook her husband until he opened his eyes.

"Wouldn't you like to go home, Alfred?" she asked.

"Oh, heavens no," murmured Hitchcock. "Why, that would be rude!"

Which, we feel, explains enough about the pudgy Englishman—so that we can now go over to a white house on the side of a hill, and chat with a giant German.

The German, a self-educated, ex-shepherd named William Dieterle, slumped in his wicker chair and stared out over Burbank below and the Warner Brothers studio, where he had manufactured his great hits on Pasteur, Zola, Ehrlich and the Hunchback. We gazed upon Dieterle with respect. He had given the movies something more than pretty legs. He had given the movies brains.

Now, he straightened his lank, strong body and, speaking in a curious, slow mixture of Teutonic-accented English and American slang, he analyzed some of the stars whose names he had made household words.

Priscilla Lane, youngest and smallest of the Lanes, steals Santa's stuff. Imagine finding her under your tree!

"The best actress I've ever worked with? Bette Davis. By far. She's so flexible, so intelligent, a thoroughbred who reacts to the most subtle of suggestions. Of course, she isn't perfect—she has nervous habits like fluttering her eyelids and clasping her hands, which must be watched.

"It is more difficult for me to select the best actor I've ever worked with. Most men, I find, are extremists. Either totally empty, with nothing to give, or too intellectual. Both types are difficult to work with.

"Perhaps Paul Muni comes closest to my ideal. However, I sometimes think he carries his thoroughness to extremes. I understand that for 'The Good Earth' he worked on a Chinese farm in California to get in the mood. I don't think such experiences are necessary to understand a role. An artist's imagination should be sufficient.

"Very few people know it, but there are two Paul Munis. The one who, as Emile Zola, stands in front of the camera speaking and acting, and the other who stands behind himself constantly and critically whispering in his ear, 'No, no, Muni, that's not right. Zola wouldn't have done it that way. Try it again. Try it again.' This constant looking at himself as he acts, this too intellectual approach often hampers Muni.

"In fact, to keep him spontaneous, I often print the first take of his big scenes. I'll let you in on a secret. Remember the famous seven minutes speech Muni made to the jury in Zola? I put three cameras on him and told him to run through it. He did—but as usual—wasn't satisfied. I permitted him to do it over three or four times but, between us, I used the first take. It was the jerkiest—but the most natural. And now it's famous."

Dieterle, renowned for his eccentricity of directing pictures while wearing white gloves, now passed his big, bare hands over his semi-bald head, settled back and mentioned a fellow eccentric.

"Charles Laughton is the most eccentric person I have ever met," admitted Dieterle. "But in his case, it's an asset. Laughton, nervous, hyper-sensitive, is really a Feast for Freud, a 365 day experiment for a psychologist.

"He's full of unusual ideas about his scenes. And you have to hold the reins on him, or soon you find him not only acting in his pictures but also directing them. He never plays a scene the same way twice. And because the only time he relaxes is at rehearsals, I feel he often gives his best performances then when. unfortunately, the camera isn't looking.

"Laughton has one curious quirk. Whenever I approach him to begin a scene, he replies, 'I am not in the mood.' This, I learned, is not temperament, but fear. He actually has an inferiority complex about getting in front of the camera. He always thinks he just won't be good enough. Yet he's touched with genius

ONE more thing about him. Like Muni, he, too, believes he must feel and experience an emotion before he can portray it. When we were shooting the final scene of 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame,' Laughton was supposed to be on top of a 350-foot cathedral, looking down. Naturally, we intended to fake the shot, by shooting a close-up on the ground, with Laughton on a platform ten feet high. Well, before the scene, Laughton strolled up to me and said, 'Bill, I can't feel the scene. I've got to experience it. I've got to get up on top of that 350-foot cathedral for a few hours and get the feeling. Then you can fake it, after I'm in the mood.' I knew better than to argue with him. So Laughton began climbing up the 350-foot structure. A big eater, he had just completed an enormous lunch, and when he had climbed halfway up, I saw him waver, look down, sway—and suddenly he was ill to his stomach. We helped him down and put him on a cot. And take it from me, sir, Mr. Laughton didn't have to feel the scene that afternoon. He was happy to have it faked!"

William Dieterle, with ten years of guiding the professional emotions of Hollywood stars behind him, wound up the

(Continued on page 64)

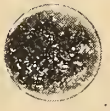
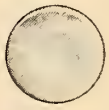
I was petrified!



FROM across the room his eyes flashed a dare I could not accept! My heart responded! But I ran away. He must not see that dandruff kept me from being lovable. That was two months ago, before a beauty operator advised me to use Fitch's Dandruff Remover Shampoo each week. I discovered that beauty operators depend on the Fitch guarantee to remove dandruff with the first application, and on the evidence of the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval. They know that Fitch Shampoo reconditions dry, oily and normal hair, because it penetrates and cleanses the tiny hair openings. If you're worried about dull lifeless hair, and humiliated by dandruff, ask for a bottle of Fitch Shampoo at your favorite toilet goods counter, as I did. And I hope you have as good luck as I did — we're being married in June!



Listen to the
FITCH BANDWAGON
presenting your favorite orchestras every Sunday evening, 7:30 p. m., E. S. T., over 84 NBC Red Network Stations.

GOODBYE DANDRUFF

1. This photograph shows germs and dandruff scattered but not removed, by ordinary soap shampoo.

2. All germs, dandruff and other foreign matter completely destroyed and removed by Fitch Shampoo.

3. Microphoto shows hair shampooed with ordinary soap and rinsed twice. Note dandruff and curd deposit left by soap to mar natural lustre of hair.

4. Microphoto after Fitch Shampoo and hair rinsed twice. Note Fitch Shampoo removes all dandruff and undissolved deposit, and brings out the natural lustre of the hair.

- After and between Fitch Shampoos, use Fitch's Ideal Hair Tonic. It stimulates the scalp, and keeps the hair neat and good looking!

Fitch's
TRADE MARK

Tested and Approved 4580 Good Housekeeping Bureau

DANDRUFF REMOVER SHAMPOO

Copyright 1940 F. W. Fitch Co.

interview by discussing actors in general.

"Many actors are difficult creatures, refusing to submerge themselves into a role. They fight for the lens, for close-ups. But many are gentlemen, and Edward G. Robinson is one of these. He's a great man who can take criticism well, but even he has one bad habit. In his portrayals of Ehrlich and Reuter he was like a thousand-armed Buddha, gesturing much too much. I told him about it, and he toned down.

"Personally, I like actors who will fight. I don't like people who 'yes' me and who are too easy to get along with. I need opposition to produce my best, and criticism keeps me on my toes.

"But all things considered, I love actors. They're crazy and harassed—but interesting."

AT this point, he led us into his private study, walls lined with books printed in German, French and English. He showed us one of his working scripts—with pages upon pages of notations, scribbled out in advance, and an outline of the movement of the picture.

"This outline, however, is only a blueprint," explained Dieterle. "I try to keep my mind open to any new suggestions or inspirations that may come up. For example, that scene in Ehrlich where the blind boy gets his sight back, where the unfocused lens of the camera becomes clearer and clearer to show the return of his sight, was purely inspired. There are no special scenes I prefer to shoot. Because I love the complexity of life, I also love all types of scenes.

"My ambition," he concluded, "is to make the intelligent A pictures of today the ordinary and accepted B pictures of tomorrow. Then, at last I'll know we've advanced."

Having left the outspoken Mr. Dieterle among his books, we moved over to a huge sound stage at M-G-M, where two-fisted Woody Van Dyke was directing Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in "Bittersweet."

This was unusual, and we sensed it. After all, Woody Van Dyke, a marine who had shot a charging rhino in Africa, who had quelled a mutiny in Alaska, who had thrown Max Baer into a swimming pool—Woody Van Dyke directing a musical—well!

"I suppose it does seem crazy," Van Dyke confessed, when we pointed it out "But hell, I've directed musicals before Of course, I don't know a darn thing about music except the scale—you know, do-re-mi—but I've got an ear, I know what sounds good, so what the devil!"

Today, at the age of fifty-two, Woodbridge Strong Van Dyke, as he was originally christened, could look back upon an exciting, topsy-turvy career. He first became interested in dramatics at the age of five when he appeared in "Ruth, The Blind Girl." He was Ruth.

During his teens, Woody Van Dyke took an active part in politics, wandering up and down the Pacific coast giving fiery talks on Socialism. On three different occasions he was jailed as a radical. Finally, his famous uncle, Dr. John C. Van Dyke, of Rutgers University, hearing of his escapades, wrote to Seattle and asked relatives to stop Woody from ruining the renowned family name. Immediately, Woody's grandmother replied to the protesting uncle, "Dear John: You better let the kid alone with his radical ideas. When you were his age you had no ideas at all!"

Meeting Van Dyke, we realized that he hadn't changed since his youth. He was still a radical—in the sense that, in a city of pretentions, he had none. We had heard that once he was scheduled to do some re-takes with Greta Garbo. He was warned that Garbo wasn't in the best of humor, and that he had better treat her with kid gloves. Whereupon Van Dyke breezed onto the set, spotted the great Garbo, clapped her on the back and exclaimed, "Hiya, kid!" (P.S. She loved him for it.)

"Aw, there's a lot of nonsense written about stars," Van Dyke told us, "and most of it is bosh. They're just regular folks Take Wallace Beery. Before being assigned to one of his pictures, I was warned that he was tough to work with, that he wouldn't do a lick of labor on Sundays and that he liked to sleep until ten in the morning. So, the first day on location, I went up to him, stuck out my chin and said, 'Wally, we work seven days a week on this picture, and that includes Sundays. And we start in at seven-thirty in the morning. Does that suit you?' Beery grinned, 'Woody, that suits me fine.' And after we'd had our understanding, there was never a better guy to work with."

Hedy Lamarr, victim of two unfortunate marriages, is beginning to think that dog is man's best friend.

Van Dyke nodded toward a big fellow wearing horn-rimmed spectacles. "Now Nelson Eddy over there is really easy to direct. That's because he's serious, only interested in singing. Though, when he gets too serious, I kid around with him and he relaxes. My favorite feminine star is Norma Shearer. She's like putty Reacts to the slightest bit of direction.

"Part of a director's job is understanding peculiarities of the stars, no matter how minor. Take Bill Powell, for instance. I always call him a half hour before I need him, and then he shows up on time because, by the clock, he's always a half hour late. Jeanette MacDonald always takes coaxing to get on the set. She's invariably powdering.

"I think the biggest problem I ever faced was Hedy Lamarr. After 'I Take This Woman' was shelved, she was at the crossroads of her career. I was scheduled to re-shoot the picture, and Hedy was a stickler. Directors didn't seem to be getting the most out of her. Finally, I figured it out. I learned that the trouble was they were giving her too much dialogue at once, and it confused her. You see, when Hedy reads or hears an English word, she thinks it out in German and then slowly translates it into English again. Too much dialogue gives her mental indigestion, so I fed her the stuff in small pieces—and she turned out swell!

"My credo is never to try to change the personality of a star. I let them all be themselves, remembering that's exactly what made them famous."

Studying this man of whipcord and steel, we remembered the picture that, overnight, lifted him to the summit of fame. It was "Trader Horn." M-G-M asked Van Dyke to lead a Hollywood expedition into the matted green of the Belgian Congo and there shoot the film. Taking thirty-eight white men and women, two hundred African blacks, ninety-two tons of luggage, fourteen small trucks, two seven-ton sound wagons and a nine-ton generator machine, Van Dyke traveled nine thousand miles through the heart of Africa! There, for twenty-five cents worth of salt and olive oil, he hired pygmies to turn thespian. There, he was acclaimed a great warrior because the natives found 250 human skulls in his trunks (not knowing they were cardboard skulls from the M-G-M prop department!)

"Trader Horn," of course, elevated Woody Van Dyke to the genius class, and "The Thin Man" series solidified his lofty reputation.

We asked Van Dyke how he worked.

I DON'T break down a script. Hell, I read it over once and forget about it. Then, when the picture starts, I walk on the set, look at the scene I'm supposed to shoot and shoot it. I'm prejudiced in favor of nice, sweet love scenes. I don't like risqué ones, because I never know how far to go with them. Whenever I make a borderline scene, I think of how the Parent Teachers' Association, my favorite organization, will look at it, and shoot accordingly. . . . Advice to those who want to be actors or directors? Simple enough. Figure out how you would naturally do a thing and then do it naturally some other way!"

For a session with another picture pilot, we invaded Columbia and found 47-year-old Ben Hecht, once labeled "Pagliacci of the Fire Escape," straddling the top of a ladder, chewing gum furiously, and guiding the emotions of Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Rita Hayworth and Thomas Mitchell in a little thing called, "Before I Die."

This was Ben Hecht's fifth crack at directing an opus, his best previous effort having been a minor classic, "The Scoundrel" with a gent named Noel Coward. Hailed variously for authoring a book, "Erik Dorn," and a play, "The Front Page," Ben Hecht had also made a reputation by calling Hollywood the "Mecca of Moronity" and the "Palace of Platitude," and by writing this poem, with Charles MacArthur, for his picture, "Soak the Rich".

"We're the gents that wrote the yarn
And here's what it's about.
Class ideas don't mean a thing
When Love Kicks 'Em Out!"

We coaxed Ben Hecht, his moustache and his battered brown felt hat down from the directorial ladder, and led him to a nearby chair. We asked him about personalities.

Hecht was curt, but colorful.

"Doug Fairbanks, Jr., is by far the best actor I've ever worked with in Hollywood. Why listen, he can take a scene cold, and in fifteen minutes he'll not only have it memorized, but he'll understand the character backwards. Also, he's the finest mimic in town, though no one realizes it. I'll tell you one inside fact about Fairbanks. It's his only fault. He's ashamed of acting! He thinks it's child's play, and he feels he has too much brains for this kind of hocus-pocus. But when he swallows his pride, he's magnificent.

"The only other person who'd compare with Fairbanks on the screen would be Noel Coward, who is really a synonym for polish."

At the time we saw Hecht, his antics had Columbia in a bit of an uproar. He had his picture nine days ahead of schedule, a thing unheard of; he persisted in playing the violin before crucial scenes; he insisted on insulting his players too. But—cardinal sin!—in an interview, he had called all producers nitwits. This prompted the studio owner, Mr. Cohn, to call Mr. Hecht on the carpet.

"What's the idea calling all producers nitwits?" he demanded. "I'm a producer."

"Naw, you're not a producer," grunted Hecht, "you're a money-bag!"

And Hecht wheeled and left, returning to his violin, which gave rise to the now classical saying in Hollywood, "Hecht fiddles while Cohn burns!"

But back to the interview, and to a potpourri of exclusive Hechtisms:

"I don't believe in working on a script in advance. It ruins spontaneity. I work on a movie as if it were a play. Rehearse a scene cold and then shoot it. This makes performances more realistic . . . I don't believe in fancy close-ups and all the artistic trimmings. They detract . . . The only shots I don't like to direct are those involving extras, because they take too much time to organize. I believe in only two takes to keep a scene natural . . . I believe the big trouble with actors is that they are too insanely serious about their face-making . . . If you wish to be happy in Hollywood, you've got to have a sense of humor."

And having concluded his speech-making, Ben Hecht left us, left the picture itself in charge of his cameraman, and

Old smoothie Adolphe Menjou is a slap-happy comedian in his latest film—Hal Roach's side-splitting "Road Show."

Brunettes! answer these 3 questions and look your loveliest

Paper and ink cannot match the beauty of our shades. Send for free samples today and see for yourself.

MRS. ANTHONY J. DREXEL, III

There are three questions for you to ask yourself when trying to choose, from the perplexing number of powder shades, the right one for yourself:

Shall I lighten my skin?

Shall I match it?

Shall I warm it?

It's simply a matter of this:

Are you more beautiful when your skin looks frail shell-pink against your brunette hair?

Are you lovelier when your skin looks ivory-pale to contrast with the dark velvety lights in your eyes?

Are you more stunning if your skin is a warm, rosy tone to dramatize your brunette coloring?

One of these effects you will choose as rightly yours. And Pond's has 3 superlative brunette shades to provide you with that desired effect.

MRS. ANTHONY J. DREXEL, III is a dramatic beauty with dark hair and eyes and a pale-ivory skin. She uses Brunette-Rachel because it adds a creamy warmth to her skin.

A light cream shade, with a little pink in it—Rose Dawn. It is light enough to match fair-skinned brunettes. Slightly darker brunettes by the thousands use it to lighten and brighten their skin.

A deeper cream—Brunette-Rachel—but all cream and no pink. Countless brunettes use this to match their natural creaminess of tone. Some use it to add warmth to a pale ivory skin. Dark brunettes use it to lighten their skin when they prefer an even beige tone without pink in it. By far our most popular brunette shade.

A deeper, sunnier shade—Rose Brunette — in which there is more rose than cream. This is the powder that matches most successfully the brunette skin with a great deal of warmth. Darker brunettes use it to lighten their skin. A third group finds that the pink in the powder takes the dull yellowy tones out of the skin.

And there is also our new Dusk Rose, the darkest, rosiest of our shades. It brightens muddy tans. It matches a deep, rosy tan. Other brunettes who dislike growing paler in winter keep a warm, sunny tan with Dusk Rose.

Pond's Powders give a smooth-as-baby-skin finish to your face. They keep away shine for hours without giving that powdered look. They are faintly, delightfully perfumed.

Brunettes will find their 3 shades and Dusk Rose grouped together on the counter. Blondes will find an equally successful group for them, too. You can pick your own shade easily.

Free → Or write to Pond's, Dept. 9MS-PM, Clinton, Conn., and state whether you are a blonde or brunette—you will receive generous samples FREE.

Copyright, 1940, Pond's Extract Company

DAY AND NIGHT I WAS WRACKED WITH PAIN!

THE AFFLICTION OF THOUSANDS!

Simple Piles may sound like a light thing, but they are an awful agony.

They make your every move a torment. They even hurt or itch while you are sitting or lying down. The torture drags you down and makes you look old and worn.

TO RELIEVE THE PAIN AND ITCHING

What you want to do to relieve the pain and itching of simple Piles is use Pazo Ointment.

Pazo Ointment really alleviates the torment of simple Piles. Its very touch is relief. It quickly eases the pain; quickly relieves the itching.

Many call Pazo a blessing and say it is one thing that gives them relief from the distress of simple Piles.

AH! WHAT COMFORT!

Pazo does a good job for several reasons.

First, it soothes simple Piles. This relieves the pain, soreness and itching. Second, it lubricates the affected parts. This tends to keep the parts from drying and cracking and also makes passage easier. Third, it tends to shrink or reduce the swelling which occurs in the case of simple Piles.

Yes, you get grateful effects in the use of Pazo!

Pazo comes in collapsible tubes, with a small perforated Pile Pipe attached. This tiny Pile Pipe, easily inserted in the rectum, makes application neat, easy and thorough.

(Pazo also comes in suppository form for those who prefer suppositories.)

TRY IT FREE!

Give Pazo a trial and see the relief it affords in many cases of simple Piles. Get Pazo at any drug store or write for a free trial tube. A liberal trial tube will be sent you postpaid and free upon request.

Just mail the coupon or postcard today.

FREE!

GROVE LABORATORIES, INC.
Dept. 121-MO-2, St. Louis, Mo.
Gentlemen: Please send me free PAZO.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

This offer is good only in U. S.

wandered off to listen to some new Paul Robeson records.

Slightly in a daze, we decided to chat with one more director to prove our original point—that sense of direction is the most important single factor in celluloid production.

We went to Universal and visited Tay Garnett, a slight individual, bearing a resemblance to Roscoe Karns. With such successes as "One Way Passage," "Trade Winds," "Eternally Yours," and Marlene Dietrich's thrilling new picture —"Seven Sinners"—behind him, Garnett was in a talkative and mellow mood. He opened the top of his trick cane, propped himself on it and repeated our first query.

"How does it feel to be a movie director?" Garnett grinned. "It feels this way: years ago I was making "Our Gang" comedies out at Hal Roach Studios. One day I was summoned off the set for a long telephone conversation, and when I returned I found the duskier member of "Our Gang," little Sunshine Sammy, sitting in my director's chair ordering the others around. I walked up to him, scratched his kinky head and said, 'Well, Sammy, I suppose you're going to be a director when you grow up?' Sunshine Sammy rolled his big black eyes, flashed his white teeth and snapped back, 'Shucks, no, Mr. Garnett, it's tough enough being colored!' . . . Which should answer your question."

We asked Tay Garnett about some of the stars he's worked with. He admitted that Bill Powell and Kay Francis were probably the most able and the most cooperative. "They work so hard and they're such nice people," was the way he put it. We pressed Garnett for more info.

He massaged his cheek thoughtfully and then spoke.

"I'm finding Marlene Dietrich good to work with. You know, she thinks it's bad luck to be late on a set, and as a consequence she's always hours early, just sitting around waiting. Jean Harlow used to be like that, too. I remember Ann Sothern for her violent enthusiasm over her job. She was almost through when I played a hunch and put her in 'Trade Winds'—which put her back among the stars. After the picture was released, she took an hour's drive to my place, burst in while I was asleep, shook me out of bed and exclaimed, 'Poppy, you did it; M-G-M just signed me to a new contract! I'm a star again!' There aren't many stars as appreciative."

We wondered if Garnett ever had to employ trickery to get the most out of his charges. Garnett admitted he did.

I REMEMBER directing a scene in which Joan Bennett was meant to look horrified. In the picture her sister was to have been killed or something like that. But Joan wasn't in the mood, and I couldn't make her register horror. Finally I applied the old gray matter. I got the camera rolling, zoomed it down for a close-up of her, and then screamed, 'Joan, I just heard, your daughter's been hit by a truck!' Her immediate reaction was a thing to behold, the horror on her face exactly what I wanted. It was a cruel lie, but necessary."

Turning the interview inward and speaking of himself, Garnett added:

"My ambition today is to make the best picture of the year every year. But I want to make each picture for the people, those who read movie magazines and not for the critics. I think Frank Capra is the one man in Hollywood today doing the proper job—mixing entertainment with worthwhile Americanism. He's not a preacher but a magician. My one ambition is to do a modern up-to-the-second movie on national defense."

A technician interrupted us and handed Garnett a tumbler bubbling with champagne. Garnett licked his lips. "This is Joe Pasternak's one eccentricity. At the start of each picture he opens a bottle of excellent champagne and insists that everyone from the prop boy to the star take a sip. Even being a director has its compensations."

And so there we have interviewed our five representative picture pilots. And in chatting with them, we have learned that a director must have the courage of a lion tamer, the nerves of a brain surgeon, the mentality of a mathematician.

FURTHERMORE, each director must be an individual with an independent mind. To prove how directors differ, we would like to show you how each of the five men we interviewed would attack one historic scene.

The Scene: William Tell has refused to bow to the tyrant Gessler's hat in the public square. For this crime, he has been arrested, and to save his life he must take bow and arrow and shoot an apple off his son's head. Now let each of the five directors film this famous scene.

Alfred Hitchcock: "I would shoot this without a word of dialogue. It would all be camera angles. I would show the confidence of the son in his father's aim. I would show the hands of the father, the eyes of the son, the apple itself. I would film William Tell inserting the arrow in the bow, slowly pulling the bow back. I would obtain suspense by having the arrow quiver up and down in the bow, unnerving the audience into feeling it was not being aimed right. And then, for the final shot, I would place my camera behind the boy's head, with the arrow driving toward the camera."

William Dieterle: "So much depends on who would play William Tell. I would direct Albert Basserman or Paul Muni or Spencer Tracy each differently. I think, on the stage and in acting, this scene has been wrecked by overplaying, by making William Tell a big hero instead of a mere human. I would handle it naïvely with Tell an easy-going peasant man. Will Rogers, in my opinion, would have been the perfect William Tell, a jolly, homey fellow. I don't think I'd want Paul Muni in the lead. He wouldn't be good. You see he just would never shoot the apple off his son's head, because he would think too much and never hit the apple. I would handle the entire story in folk-lore fashion, remembering that the big issue of the picture must be the Swiss fight for liberation, with this particular scene a dramatic highlight."

Woody Van Dyke: "Frankly, I don't know what I'd do with this scene until the minute I stepped on the set. I think, though, I'd make it grim and hardboiled."

Ben Hecht: "I would play the entire thing for comedy. Sure. After all, how can the shooting of an apple off someone's head possibly be serious? It's always struck me as extremely funny. Besides, I've always thought William Tell a lousy story, and you can quote me!"

Tay Garnett: "I don't think it should be played straight. I can only visualize it with 'Babe' Hardy, as William Tell, shooting the jumpy apple off Stan Laurel's noggin. That's my picture of the scene."

Which, citizens, gives you an idea of how five famous film physicians operate. And all of which, in summary, shows you how the men who do the dirty work think and toil.

Incidentally, do you still think actors do most of the work in making a movie?

THE MOST MALIGNED WOMAN IN HOLLYWOOD

(Continued from page 27)

I was invited out to dinner and wanted desperately to create an impression, I'd sit there tongue-tied with self-consciousness, physically unable to talk. Sooner or later I'd have to get away from the table, go somewhere and lie down. I'd be ill. I made up my mind then that I was going to find a kind of life for myself where I'd never have to go to dinner.

"People can't seem to understand how, if I really am self-conscious (which they doubt), I could become an actress. And I can't understand why they can't understand. It is the most natural thing in the world. Acting, I can get out of myself. No other profession offers me such an exciting way of escape."

She interrupted her rush of words to smile persuasively.

"Most people on the stage," she continued, "have a curious kind of self-consciousness. Playing a part, you have smart lines to say, or dramatic lines, or amusing lines—and you move around in a pink spotlight, which flatters you, glamorizes you. But when you step out of the spotlight, you're just an ordinary person. Your looks aren't spectacular, you play lousy tennis, and you don't say clever things. You have to have a colossal ego, or be a colossal ham, not to be self-conscious."

THERE were tales that she took acting more seriously than any other actress alive. How about those reports?

"I deny them," she said airily, crushing out her cigarette for emphasis. "I submit in evidence the fact that I limit my acting to stage and screen. I don't carry it over into private life. I relax after working hours.

"As a job, I take acting seriously, yes. There's no other job I'd rather do. There's a tremendous sense of excitement about it. And I'm hyper-critical of myself as an actress; that story is true. But I also give myself praise when I think I deserve it. When I watch something I've done, I'm very cold-blooded, very impersonal. Almost everyone is, who has terrific ideals, who cares desperately how a thing comes out, and how everybody comes out in it. I admit I care."

But she doesn't care to be a Glamour Girl, or she wouldn't wear slacks. Or would she?

"A Glamour Girl—with my long, scrawny neck?" she demanded. She shook her head. "I have definite ideas about what looks well on me and what doesn't, but glamour doesn't enter into it. Before I go into a scene, I try to look as well as I can; then I try to forget my appearance. Unless I'm comfortable, God spare everyone.

"As for my much-mentioned slacks"—she raised her eyebrows—"I just loathe wearing skirts. And I'm so uncomfortable in a short one, I can't think. I go mad. All rumors to the contrary, I don't have as many as most of the men out here. I have seven of these"—she indicated the outfit she was wearing—"and four slack suits. I did have only one but the Department of Sanitation objected." She paused, then added provocatively, "I have a street dress, too, believe it or not!"

There were two conflicting stories about her first descent on Hollywood. One had it that she lay awake nights, thinking of ways to get her name in print;

Between my husband and his mother ...I was going crazy!

1. When Jim and I were married, and his mother came to live with us, I had my fingers crossed. His mother is full of old-time ideas. We don't see eye to eye on lots of things. But we hit it off great and everything was swell till little Judy was born.

2. That's when the fireworks began! Morning, noon, and night my mother-in-law was fussing. "You'd think that child was a hot-house flower," she kept raging. "Special diapers—special foods—good glory, even a special laxative! That baby gets so mollycoddled, it's a crime."

3. Then Jim began to side in with her! Said his mother was bringing up babies before I was born! Boy—did I see red! Did I tell him! "This baby is my baby and she's going to be brought up the modern way. Nobody's going to tell me what to do for her except the doctor!"

4. Finally it got so bad, I had to do something to make mother stop stirring up trouble. "I don't want to hurt your feelings," I said, "but the doctor's orders are orders. He says a baby's system is delicate—you can't treat it like an adult's."

5. "That's why I wouldn't dream of giving the baby anything but Fletcher's Castoria. It's made especially and only for infants and children. It's safe—there isn't a harsh drug in it. The doctor says you couldn't want a better laxative than Fletcher's Castoria for a child."

6. "And golly, mother, you've seen how pesky Judy acts when she has to take any medicine. But she loves the swell taste of Fletcher's Castoria." Well, just then the baby smiled and settled it! We haven't had a squabble since.

Chas. H. Fletcher

CASTORIA

The modern —SAFE— laxative made especially for children

FLAME-GLO*
LIPSTICK only 10c & 25c
AT ALL 5 & 10¢ STORES

Your lips can be oflome with fire of yauth sa magnetic to men, when yau use FLAME-GLO LIPSTICK! Its radiant glow . . . its glamorous, satiny lustre . . . its bewitching fragrance ond captivating, thrilling new fashian colars . . . all cambine ta keep you kissoble langer . . . for FLAME-GLO is seoled to your lips by a woter-repellent film. Try FLAME-GLO today!

IN NEW FASHION SHADES:
CANDY STICK RED · MEDIUM ROYAL WINE · ORCHID · FLAME RASPBERRY · LIGHT · RED RUST GLAMOUR RED · DYNAMIC RED SENSATIONAL OFFER...

We'll gladly send you extra size samples of two popular shades, Royal Wine and Glamour Red . . . with sample of Flame-Glo Rouge in a shade that blends perfectly with either lipstick . . . together with pack of handy Lipstick Tissues. Just send 10c ta cover mailing costs!

REJUVIA BEAUTY LABS., Inc., 116 W. 14 St., N.Y. Dept. D2
Enclosed find 10c for mailing samples of two different color Lipsticks, Rouge with Puff and Lipstick Tissue Pack. (15c in Canada.)
Name .....
Address .....

*REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

with this remarkable, new

HAND CREAM

Women are raving about this new beauty cream for hands. Contains the fragrance of costly perfumes. No stickiness—no greasy feeling—quick disappearing. Big value for your money—in 10¢, 25¢ and 50¢ jars, at toilet goods counters.

Campana HAND CREAM

the other, that she was emphatic about not wanting any publicity whatever. Which was correct?

"I wanted absolutely no ballyhoo," she said. "I didn't want the public to be told that a great creature had arrived when that great creature might very well lay an egg. Before I had started my first picture, RKO agreed not to mention me till it came out. And as soon as I finished my part, I headed for Europe. When the picture was previewed, nobody knew anything about me except that I was 'an heiress to $17,000,000', a marvelous bit of misinformation. It made a friend of mine, who actually was wealthy, perfectly furious. She had never been credited with more than $11,000,000, herself. Hollywood found it easy to believe I was an heiress. Only someone very rich would dare to dress as badly as I did, or look as horrible," she laughed.

Did she know in advance that she was going to do "A Bill of Divorcement," or was that first break a lucky accident?

"Oh, I knew what I was going to do all right. For two years I had been getting screen offers, and turning them down because they didn't promise me any specific part. I was holding out for a leading role. Or, at least, a very good part, one that would give me a chance to do something. That was very, very definitely arranged before I ever headed for Hollywood.

I HAD the best deal was ever given to an unknown. Only a very ignorant person would have done what I did. I asked for everything. And I was so definite about what I wanted, they were appalled. So I got everything. Now that I know more about the business, I too, am appalled by what I asked. And amazed that I got it."

Perhaps she didn't want any publicity before her first picture. But after it was a hit, didn't she do everything possible to convince people that she wasn't the usual type? Like wearing overalls to work. And sitting on studio curbstones, reading her mail.

She took time to light another cigarette before she answered. "I've been guilty of a lot of things," she said, "but one thing I can't be accused of is thinking up stunts to attract attention. I don't have the right kind of stomach for that sort of thing. Remember my nervous indigestion. Nothing brings it on so fast as a feeling of being conspicuous.

"But—there's a large amount of stubborn Yankee in me. If I'm criticized for doing something that seems natural to me, nothing can make me stop doing it—no matter how conspicuous it makes me, or how much bicarbonate of soda I have to swallow.

"It seemed natural to me to wear overalls to work. I had been doing it for years and nobody had ever criticized me for it. But now, suddenly, my overalls were horrible examples of what no girl should wear. So were my dungarees. They weren't 'feminine.' They were 'mannish,' 'affected' and 'ridiculous.' If I wanted to wear something in the line of trousers, why didn't I wear women's slacks? For the simple reason that women's slacks weren't comfortable. In those days they had crotches down to the knees. Now they're tailored like men's slacks. And every girl in her right mind wears them. I was simply ahead of the times.

"As for my sitting on curbs, that seemed natural, too. Studios don't put benches along their sidewalks. They aren't like college campuses. And I couldn't do all my sitting indoors. I had a two-by-four dressing-room guaranteed to give anybody claustrophobia. Not to mention out and out melancholia.

"People who drove around in town cars, as if this were New York, accused me of putting on an act because I drove around in 'a truck.' That's what they called it. Now they all drive station wagons.

"The story went out that I was acting in my stocking feet. No explanation went with it, so people assumed there wasn't any. Here was more proof of the fact that Hepburn was a freak, if not a maniac. No one bothered to explain that I was five feet seven and had to do something to look shorter than my leading man."

When it first became apparent that she didn't intend to mingle with Hollywood society, she was accused of "trying to pull a Garbo." Did she resent that?

"No," she said bluntly. "It was nice to be compared to Garbo. It sort of hitched my wagon to a star. Even if the two of us couldn't be more different."

Didn't it ever occur to her that it might be smart politics to attend Hollywood parties?

"I didn't—and don't—have anything against Hollywood parties in particular. I just loathe all parties; whisking from one person to another, engaging in glassy-eyed conversation with people with whom I have nothing in common. And I don't believe in politics. I don't like people who aren't sincere, so why should I expect people to like me if I'm not sincere, myself? It isn't too difficult to be nice to people. But to be calculatedly nice is exhausting, and it has a horrible effect on you finally. If you set yourself to please others, God help you. You can't be true to yourself at the same time.

"I was perverse enough to think I might fall for the racket if I started listening to the flatterers and eager advisers. That explains why I was rather belligerent to people, when it would have done me more good to be sweet and helpless.

She laughed at a sudden thought.

THEY told me I should do this or that, because people expected it from Hepburn. One time I went to Catalina with a small group of friends in a motorboat. Just outside the breakwater at San Pedro the motor cut out and we started drifting. Nearby, the battleship Maryland was riding at anchor and we started drifting toward it. An officer shouted over, 'Don't come alongside.' We shouted back, 'We can't help ourselves.' He called back, 'Throw out your anchor.' We had an anchor, but no rope to attach to it. I conveyed that information to the officer. 'Don't you have a mechanic who could fix our motor?' I yelled. He came over, finally, in a small boat with an engineer and a mechanic. I wanted him to be impressed with our gratitude. So when I thanked him I added, 'I'm Katharine Hepburn.' He took one look at me—with no make-up and my hair done up. 'Yes,' he said, 'and I'm Greta Garbo.' That was the only time I ever tried to make my name do any good. And"—she smiled self-deprecatingly—"where did it get me?"

Heading for Catalina in a small motorboat wasn't the safest, surest way of getting there. But then, wasn't it true that she had never had a double in any picture, and had done every physically difficult stunt, herself, including that swimming rescue of Natalie Paley in "Sylvia Scarlett?"

"I don't know if I have a talent for acting," she said, "but I do have a talent for sports. I have a terrific urge for athletic exploits. It's a holdover from trying to keep up with a couple of brothers as a youngster. I had to prove that I could do anything they could. Now I have to prove—to myself, if to nobody else—that I can do anything a double might. So far I've done all my stunts, myself. And I'm proud of it.

"But Natalie Paley was the courageous one, making that scene for 'Sylvia Scarlett.' She didn't know how to swim a stroke, yet she wouldn't hear of using a double. She trusted me to take care of her. Both of us had to go into the water fully dressed, and the water was the Pacific in November—freezing cold. The camera had just started turning when a big wave hit us and threw us both against a rock. She banged her head and was completely knocked out. I managed to get her part way to shore, and Cary Grant took her the rest of the way. When she came to, she said, 'Shall we try again?' That's my idea of courage."

How did she prepare for a role?

"It's a long process. I have the script on my mind for weeks, sometimes months. First I read it over once—quickly. I don't attempt to remember every scene accurately. I turn my imagination loose and try to picture what each scene should be like. I build up from my hazy recollection of what I've read. I do that until it's almost time to start work. Then I read the script slowly and carefully, and find out what each scene is really like. That way, I make myself super-conscious of what the author put into each scene; and once in a while I find I've thought of something that he hasn't. That's how I did 'Morning Glory,' 'Alice Adams' and 'Stage Door.'

SHE won the Academy Award for "Morning Glory." But what role had she enjoyed most?

Without a second's hesitation, she said, "'Alice Adams.' I had more of a hand in that than in any of the others. I feel as if I know her better than any other character I've ever played. For one thing, I grew up in a small city, just as she did. And for another, there are so many people like her—people who have a terrific desire to create impressions, who don't realize the importance of being comfortable. Girls exhaust themselves making conscious efforts to be terribly popular with men, and they exhaust the men too. They don't let men relax or give them a chance to know them as they honestly are."

What would she tell a young girl who wanted to be an actress?

"I'd tell her to remember that acting rules are made to be broken. No two people are alike and the rules which apply to me may be the very ones which she should ignore. I'd tell her that she can learn more about acting from directors than from actresses. And I'd tell her that the greatest asset is a well-developed sense of discernment. It's more important than a well-developed figure. Believe me! Beginners invariably get ninety per cent bad advice, and ten per cent good advice. It takes discernment to sort out what applies to you, personally, and what doesn't. The way most people start acting is by imitation—but it takes discernment to know what to imitate, and how much, and when."

Something most people, especially writers, couldn't understand was why she had avoided talking for publication for so long. What made her so allergic to interviews?

"The interviews," she said, quick as a flash. "The first ones. After 'A Bill of Divorcement,' as I said before, I went to Europe, and I went steerage. Why should I pay $500 to throw up, first class—when I could go steerage and throw up for $400 less? I was in Vienna when a cable caught up with me: 'Come back at once. You are a spectacular hit.' I had a hunch that I'd better come back first class, be-

Pledge

(Choose your enamel shade by the color on the cap)

Now...just SQUEEZE a manicure ...the tube is the brush!

● Good-bye to expensive manicures! Good-bye to bottles! Here's a thrilling new "easy-squeezy" way. Perfect nails every day. Carry the light little tubes in your handbag, keep a set in your desk. Whip out a tube of PLEDGE Enamel wherever you are, for quick repairs. A few easy squeezes, and your nails are beautiful again! Be the first to paint your nails with a brush-tube . . . see how easy it is, even for your left hand. Choose from 15 thrilling new colors. At leading variety chain store cosmetics counters.

★ TUBES GIVE YOU A FIRMER GRIP!
★ TUBES WON'T SPILL OR DRY UP!
★ TUBES ARE LIGHT, EASY TO CARRY!
★ NO MESSY SWABS NECESSARY!

THE OHIO COSMETICS CO. • FREMONT, OHIO • NEW YORK CITY

LIQUID NAIL ENAMEL
Almost applies itself... from new brush-tube.

POLISH REMOVER
Felt-tip tube does the job... no cotton necessary.

CUTICLE SOFTENER
Flows from tube into small NYLON brush-tip.

NAIL CREAM
Felt-tipped tube, cleverly shaped to massage the nails.

20¢ a tube

NEW LOW PRICE!

FIBS*

THE KOTEX* TAMPON

NOW ONLY 20¢ FOR 12

Not six, not ten, but a full dozen for 20¢

Ideal internal protection. Fibs are more comfortable, more secure, easy to use! No artificial method of insertion necessary!

Special "Quilting" keeps Fibs from expanding abnormally in use—prevents risk of cotton particles adhering—increases comfort and lessens possibility of injury to delicate tissues.

The Kotex Tampon... Fibs merit your confidence! For trial supply mail 10¢ to FIBS, Room 1465A, 919 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago.

Accepted for advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association.

(★Trade Marks Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

for CHAPPED LIPS

TAKE the right steps to relieve the discomfort of chapped lips or chapped hands right now. Use Mentholatum. Its cooling, soothing ingredients are medicinal and therefore not only give relief and comfort but also promote proper healing of the skin so as to leave it in a healthy condition. Jars or tubes 30c.

MENTHOLATUM

Gives COMFORT Daily

cause if by any chance reporters met the boat and found me in steerage, it might be catastrophic. It's lucky I followed my hunch, for both reporters and photographers covered my arrival. I checked into a hotel and the place swarmed with interviewers. They asked questions that seemed to me to have no bearing on the fact that I was an actress, which was, presumably, their reason for interviewing me. How many times had I been married? How many children did I have? There was a facetious note in their questioning, so I put a facetious note in my answers. I might have said, 'I'm sorry, but I don't want to answer that,' and they would have thought, 'What a dreary girl!' So I replied humorously—or so I thought. I told one interviewer that I was a rabid old maid, and another that I had seven children. But they printed my answers dead seriously, with the result that I sounded as if I were just one jump from a lunatic asylum. When I reached Hollywood, I gave a few more interviews, and again I was misinterpreted. So I gave up for a while.

AND then I got in bad with the press because I wouldn't let them take my picture indiscriminately. I didn't mind at premières and other public functions. But when I was trying to be a private individual, I loathed being made conspicuous, with flashlight bulbs attracting attention I didn't want. They didn't seem able to understand that, so I started running. And they didn't understand that. They said it was an act. After they said that, I couldn't stop running. The old Hepburn integrity was at stake."

Now that she had squelched all her critics with her tremendous success on the stage in "The Philadelphia Story," and had been welcomed back to Hollywood with open arms to do the screen version, what was she going to do next? Marry and retire? Or do another play?

"I'm going on the road for twelve weeks. After that, I have no definite commitments. I'm going to try to go back and forth between the stage and screen—combine the two. Change of scenery, I've always heard, does things for a person's vitality. And I place a high value on vitality."

But where are her ambitions leading her? What is her goal?

"I can't tell that," she said, smiling. "I know, but I can't talk about it. I'm afraid if I discuss my plans they'll never get accomplished. Just as a writer with plans for a story never gets it written if he tells it to someone else first. The element of surprise is gone."

That is Katharine Hepburn, 1940 A.D.

BAD BOY MAKES GOOD

(Continued from page 33)

my becoming an actor in the first place. That was Yehudi's doing, too.

"There wasn't a drop of theatrical blood in me. My father was a doctor and my mother was an artist. I never played theatre as a kid, and I didn't like boys who did. They were sissies. One time I portrayed Columbus in a school play, but I tripped on my sword and fell flat on my puss. They never asked me to act again.

"I remember being taken to the theatre just once. That one time, I saw Eva Tanguay and those legs—a rather frightening experience for a child. It might have marked me for life.

"We lived in New York. Next door lived William A. Brady, the theatrical producer. But we didn't know the Bradys, and they didn't know the Bogarts. We were typical New York neighbors—till one time Mr. Brady had a touch of ptomaine and called in my father. After that, I started playing with young Bill. Every day, from the time I was ten till I was about fifteen, we played together. Evenings we used to go over on Riverside Drive, where there was a lot of construction going on, and shoot the globes out of red lanterns with air rifles—which our families didn't know we had. We had secret hideouts for the guns, secret signals to warn each other of the approach of cops. That was the kind of fun I went for as a kid. Adventure stuff.

"When I was about fifteen, some escapade or other—I've forgotten which one—caught up with me. I was sent away to prep school, with the family devoutly hoping I'd be able to keep out of the Reformatory. I lasted there till I thought it would be a good idea to duck an assistant prof, a very unpopular gent, in a fountain. There was a whole gang of us in on the plot, but it was a dark night, and he didn't recognize anybody but me. The school asked me to leave. If that hadn't happened, maybe I wouldn't have joined the Navy. Or maybe I would have. Anyway, I did, and saw two years of war.

"When I came out of it I was eighteen, and I wanted a job; it didn't matter what kind. At young Bill's suggestion I asked his father for one, but he couldn't use me. I finally went to work in a brokerage house 'way downtown. But I got tired of getting up so early. Every few days I'd have Bill call up, imitate my father's voice, and tell them I was 'sick.' After a while they decided they didn't need me any more, and again I began hitting Mr. Brady for a job. He put me to work as an office boy and I worked up to stage manager.

I WENT on the stage the first time as a gag. I'd been kidding Neil Hamilton about the soft life of an actor. 'Acting doesn't look very hard to me,' I'd said. The funny thing—typical of Bogart—was that that was what I actually thought. The last night of the play, he dared me to go on in his place. I took the dare, and it was all a horrible fiasco. In one scene, an actor was supposed to be mad at me, and I thought he was really mad; he scared the hell out of me. It was the first time I had been face to face with actors at work. I didn't realize how convincing they could be!

"After that experience, I thought, 'Never again.' What changed my mind was finding out I'd never get rich as a stage manager. I was twenty and I wanted to get ahead in the world, so I went to Mr. Brady and told him my problem. He said, 'Why don't you become an actor? Actors earn good money.' So, to make a fortune, I became an actor."

He turns to Mayo. "Honey, do you know how long I've been trying to get enough money together for a boat?"

"Yes, dear," she sighs, as if the subject is very old-hat, indeed. "I know—years."

Sometime or other, couldn't he have muscled into the Front Office and said, in his most tight-lipped gangster manner, "I want more dough, or else!"

"Yeah," Bogie says, "but I wouldn't have scared anybody. I'm not a big name

—yet. Besides, I'm known as the guy who always squawks about roles, but never refuses to play one.

"That's for two reasons. I admit I'm no picker of what's good for me, and I don't believe in taking suspensions. When you go on suspension for refusing a role, you go out of circulation. And what usually happens when you go back? You get the same part in another picture.

"I've never forgotten a piece of advice Holbrook Blinn gave me when I was a young squirt and asked him how I could get a reputation as an actor. He said, 'Just keep working.' The idea is that if you're always busy, sometime somebody is going to get the idea that you must be good."

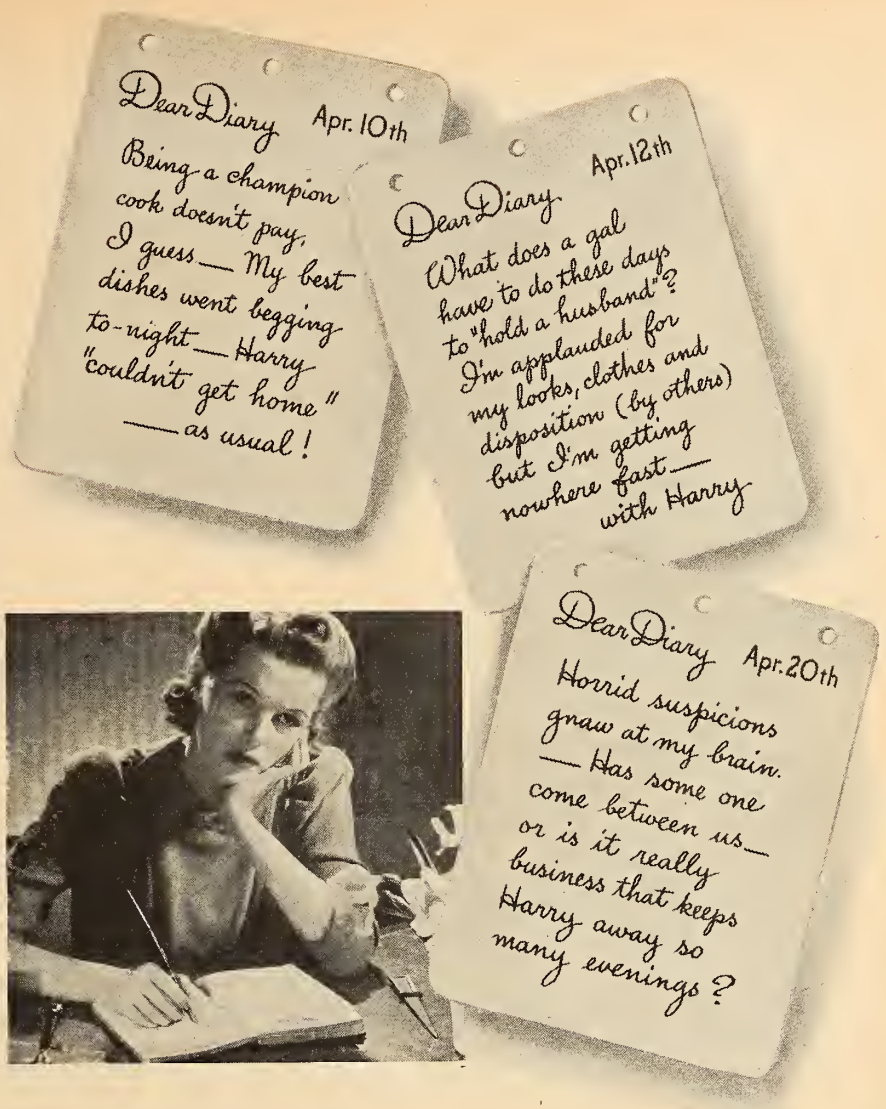
To keep busy, Bogie has had to make ten to fourteen pictures a year. ("It has been like doing one long picture with different characters walking in.") But it has started to pay dividends. It started, in fact, with "It All Came True." That was originally offered to George Raft—who decided he'd rather do "House Across the Bay." Looking around for a substitute actor, the studio wondered if Bogie wouldn't do.

"Yehudi—there's that man again—was right on hand that time. And he certainly was looking out for me when 'High Sierra' came up!"

In the picture, you'll see Humph doing several things he hasn't done before—for example, making violent love to Ida Lupino. He used to say that love-making was something he'd never be seen doing on the screen. Now he may have to eat his words.

HE asserts, "They won't make a Great Lover out of me if I can help it." However, there is evidence to support the contention that he has sex appeal. The Career Girls' Club of Hollywood recently voted him the actor they would most like to marry if they could!

He's also going to put up a fight against being a glamour boy, now that he's a star. "I'm allergic to glamour. It's all they can do to keep shoes on me. I have exactly three suits. It's my stand-in who has eighteen."



And stardom isn't going to make him more dignified—if he has anything to say about it. "Where's the fun in being dignified?" he demands. "Remember that old phrase 'going Hollywood?' What people meant was 'putting on false dignity.' That's gone out of fashion. A few years ago, everybody tried to be dignified, and everybody was bored stiff. Nobody dared to take a drink, nobody dared to do anything a producer might not like. Nowadays, if people don't like producers, they walk up and sock 'em on the nose. And they still have their jobs next day, too."

There isn't any danger, either, of his going "arty" now that he has taken over a role intended for Muni. Not so long ago, he was working with a young actress who will be nameless. She resented the speed with which the director was getting scenes on film. She finally said to Bogie, "Everything's going too fast. There's no time to work up a mood. And the picture will probably be a sensational success. . . . Sometime, wouldn't you like to do an artistic flop?" His answer was typical—a thunderous, "Gawd, NO!"

What is his goal in life?

"To own a boat. It doesn't have to be a big, super-colossal yacht. It can be just one size larger than a dinghy. After I get it, I suppose my goal will be to find time to use it.

"I don't have any great acting ambitions. I just want to do a good job, if possible. I bump into people on sets who have seventeen other things on their

If her Diary could only talk back!

It would tell her of the

"ONE NEGLECT"

that mars many marriages . . .

Let "Lysol" help you avoid this

BEAUTY, brains, charm and good cooking should be enough to keep any husband captivated—but they aren't—as many "perfect" wives sorrowfully discover. Carelessness about feminine hygiene is something that even the most tolerant husbands find it hard to overlook. More women ought to use "Lysol" in their routine of intimate cleanliness. "Lysol" is cleansing, deodorizing, germicidal.

6 Special Features of "LYSOL"

1— Non-Caustic . . . "Lysol", in the proper dilution, is gentle and efficient, contains no harmful free caustic alkali. 2—Effectiveness . . . "Lysol" is a powerful germicide, active under practical conditions, effective in the presence of organic matter (such as dirt, mucus, serum, etc.). 3—Spreading . . . "Lysol" solutions spread because of low surface tension, and thus virtually search out germs. 4—Economy . . . Small bottle of "Lysol" makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. 5—Odor . . . The cleanly odor of "Lysol" disappears after use. 6—Stability . . . "Lysol" keeps its full strength no matter how long it is kept—no matter how often it is uncorked.

Lysol Disinfectant

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

PASTE THIS COUPON ON A PENNY POSTCARD!

What Every Woman Should Know

SEND COUPON FOR "LYSOL" BOOKLET

LEHN & FINK PRODUCTS CORP.
Dept. M. S. 412, Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Send me free booklet, "War Against Germs," which tells the many uses of "Lysol".

Name _____

Address _____

Copyright, 1940, by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

*ROGERS SILVERPLATE by Oneida Ltd. silversmiths

*Oneida Ltd. lines, bearing the Trade-Marks:
1881 ROGERS
WM. A. ROGERS
Simeon L. & George H. Rogers Company

Means EXTRA SILVER WHERE YOU NEED IT
LOOK FOR ONEIDA LTD. ON THE BACK-

HAVING A BABY?

Regular medical care during pregnancy is vitally important. Your doctor can regulate diet to provide minerals, iron and vitamin content so essential to good teeth and sound physical development in the baby. Ask his advice on feeding infant.

HYGEIA NURSING BOTTLE AND NIPPLE
SAFER... because easier to clean

See Your Doctor Regularly

Don't let baby wear outgrown shoes. Baby feet grow so fast you must change to new shoes often. Baby doctors all over America tell mothers to buy Wee Walkers, those CORRECT baby shoes which cost so little. Infants' Wear Dept. of the following low-profit stores. Birth to shoe size 8.

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. Sears, Roebuck and Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. Schulte-United Stores
I. Silver & Bros. F. & W. Grand
G. R. Kinney Company

WEE WALKER Shoes

FREE: Baby foot measuring scale in pamphlet on fitting. Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKERS for the wee walker minds. They're thinking about how to get in better with the director, how to get more close-ups, or about some party tonight. A lot of people think I'm a stuffed shirt, think I don't have any fun because I don't party when I'm working. But I can't bat around at night lapping up champagne cocktails and do good work the next day. Which is the thing I want to do most. As far as I'm concerned, work is not just a dull interlude between parties."

He also suspects that a lot of people think he's a sour-puss. "They've seen me with my face set hard for gangster roles and don't stop to think that maybe there's a trick to setting it hard, and that I can unset it, too." He gives an exaggerated, toothsome grin to illustrate. "Anyway, even a sour-puss can have a sense of humor. That's what I liked about 'It All Came True.' It gave me a chance to prove it. Mind you, I'm no wit. I've got to have some very brilliant man write me devastating things to say. I'm no clown, but a lot of things strike me terribly funny."

ONE of the things is—that he has to work hard on the screen to prove he's tough and has to work hard off the screen to prove he isn't. "You should see me working in my garden when the photographers come around!" he says. "Somebody from some big garden magazine interviewed me at the studio one time, and I told him about the petunias I'd grown. 'Six feet tall,' I said. He said, thoroughly awed, 'Amazing!'"

Mayo interrupts to say, "I nearly died when he came home and told me what he'd said to the man. You know how close to the ground petunias grow!"

He wishes that some kind soul would assure the public that he doesn't say "dese" and "dose" except in the movies.

As a rule, he's easy-going, but he really boiled over when he was charged with being a Communist. And he's still mad.

"A screwball, who was branded by Dean Landis of Harvard Law School as a 'pathological liar,' told a Los Angeles County Grand Jury that I was a Communist. He named some other actors, too. Without even giving me a chance to deny the accusation, the politically ambitious District Attorney of Los Angeles made the charge public. It was the worst blow I have ever had in my life.

"I was fighting mad—determined to right this injustice. And in a hurry. I happened to see that Congressman Martin Dies, head of the Congressional committee investigating un-American activities, was in Los Angeles. I called him that night, told him the situation and asked him if he would give me an immediate hearing. At 10 o'clock the next morning I appeared before him, answered all his questions, and my business manager also took the stand and testified that I have never contributed any money to any political cause whatsover.

"Congressman Dies not only exonerated me completely but he said that during his committee's three-year investigation of un-American activities, my name had never been mentioned. That's something. But I'm still burned that my whole future was jeopardized by one man's charge that I was a Communist—and that I had to request a hearing to clear myself. I consider myself a citizen of Los Angeles. I own a home here, and I maintain my mother in a home here, and my sister in another. I pay taxes like any other citizen. And I consider myself entitled to the same rights as any other citizen."

The home he refers to is on a little dead end street at the edge of Beverly Hills, just off Sunset Boulevard. He and Mayo call it "Sluggy Hollow." He's partial to the word "sluggy." It's one of his pet names for Mayo.

He also likes being interviewed. Says, "It's like being psychoanalyzed."

Just ta hurry 1941 alang, Baby Sandy dresses up ta greet it weeks ahead of time. She has such a big future ahead af her that she'd just as soan skip the intervening years entirely!

CHRISTMAS TREE SUGGESTIONS

(Continued from page 54)

Pajamas
In plaid cotton flannelette by Kayser. Butcher-boy top may be worn as blouse with ski-trousers, too.

Compact
A Volupte snuff-box in black enamel adorned with a decorative horse.

Watches
Styled for men and women by Raleigh. Natural yellow rolled gold plate; non-tarnishable metal backs; jeweled movements.

Handkerchiefs
Hand-rolled, pure silk chiffon for evening. One is sequin-trimmed; the other has set-in velvet bows.

Slippers
Joyce wedgie mules in teddy-bear cloth. Pink, blue or white.

Hiro
Exciting new game for indoor sportsters and distracted hostesses.

Bag
Soft suede envelope by Wilder, with startling jeweled clasp. In black or brown.

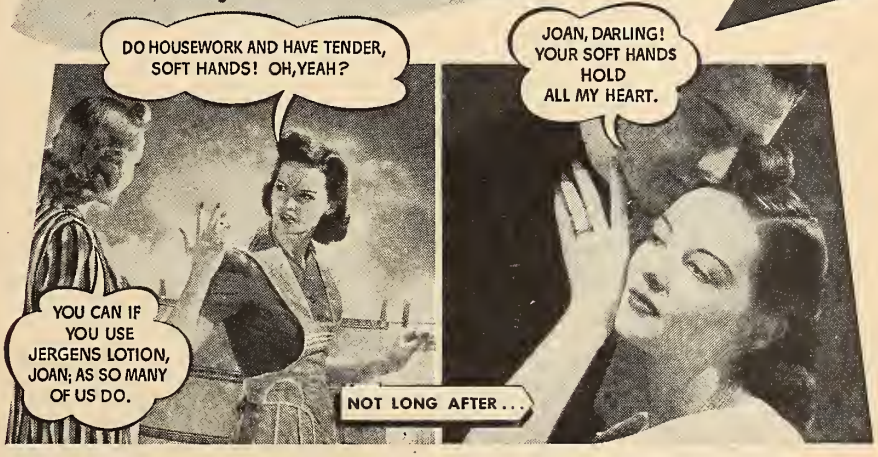
Sweater
Gay "Swissie" cardigan, colorfully embroidered.

Evening Dress
Important dance frock in white rayon brocade with deep black velveteen flounce.

Socks
Knee-highs by Kayser, for winter sportswear. Of extra-heavy pure wool.

Jewelry
Martha Sleeper's new creation—"Holly Wreath"—in green and red light-as-air plastic. Bracelet, pin and necklace set.

Fur Jacket
Waist length with swirl sleeves. In skunk-dyed or sable-dyed Opossum.



Mittens
All wool made to look like hand-knits, by Wear-Right. In children's sizes, too.

Umbrella
Waterproofed Celanese rayon taffeta in gay colors and handles.

*Arleen Whelan and George Montgomery —romantic featured players for 20th Century-Fox Films.

"When a woman loves... HANDS must be tenderly soft," says ARLEEN WHELAN* (Lovely Hollywood Star)

How thousands of Adored Women help prevent unlovely Rough, Chapped HANDS

ADORABLE SOFT HANDS—every girl can keep them all her life! In spite of housework, constant use of water, or outdoor exposure, which cruelly rob your hand skin of its natural softening moisture. It's so easy to furnish new, beautifying moisture for your skin—with Jergens Lotion.

This Lotion contains 2 ingredients many doctors use to help smooth and soften harsh skin. No stickiness! For silken-soft hands, use Jergens Lotion.

JERGENS LOTION
FOR SOFT, ADORABLE HANDS

FREE! YOUR CHANCE FOR LOVABLE HANDS

MAIL THIS COUPON NOW
(Paste on penny postcard, if you like)
The Andrew Jergens Company, 3718 Alfred Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. (In Canada: Perth, Ontario)
Let me see how Jergens Lotion helps keep my hands tenderly soft. Please send my purse-size bottle of Jergens Lotion, free.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

DON'T BE "THE GIRL WITH A RUN"

Always carry RUN-R-STOP in your purse. Comes in smart colored vanity. Just one drop of this amazing clear liquid stops runs and snags instantly, permanently — even in the new "nylon" stockings. It's the only product of its kind — a stocking life-saver. And it leaves no black marks after washing. Get it today at any drug, dept, shoe or 10c store —or send coin or stamps to

RUN-R-STOP
49 E. 21st St., N.Y.
Dept. N

Guaranteed as advertised by Good Housekeeping
(15c each in Canada)

10c Complete, tube in vanity

Brush Away
Gray Hair
..and Look 10 Years Younger

● Now, at home, you can quickly and easily tint telltale streaks of gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Used for 28 years by thousands of women (men, too)—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless. No skin test needed, active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch as new gray appears. Easy to prove by tinting a test lock of your hair. 60c at drug or toilet counters on a money-back guarantee. Retain your youthful charm. Get BROWNATONE today.

FOR DELICATE SKINS
EXTRA SOFT!
YET THEY COST NO MORE

Betty Lou
POWDER PUFFS
AT ALL 5-AND-10¢ STORES

A SKIN THAT MEN ADORE

(Coninued from page 44)

beauty, so treat it with the kindness and care it really deserves.

In winter, winds and fluctuating temperatures—dry artificial heat one minute and damp blustery cold the next—water, soil, everything seems to conspire to roughen and redden your skin as well as to generally ruin its comfort. So arm yourself with a generous supply of rich emollient creams and lotions. Before and after every exposure protect your skin with a filmy application of one or the other. Use a foundation cream under your make-up and, at night, after a thorough cleansing, massage one of the richer creams into your face and neck.

KEEP a cream or lotion, not only on your dressing table, but also on the shelf above your kitchen sink, in the bath-room and at your place of business. Don't forget it when you go traveling, too. You need such beauty pick-ups more than ever when you get away from your old familiar brand of water, weather, food and sleeping habits.

Fine, fluffy, non-drying face powder is an important winter beauty accessory, too. Pat it on lightly—never rub it on as if it were so much lacquer.

And don't be tempted to leave off eating fresh fruits and vegetables just because they are a little harder to get in winter. There's nothing so disastrous to a beautiful complexion as a steady diet of heavy meats, starches, pastries and canned fare without a proper balance of fresh beans, tomatoes, oranges, apples and all the other vitamin-laden farm products that you can get your hands on. Sleep is a real ally to a lovely complexion, too, and so are copious quantities of drinking water, outdoor exercise, deep breathing and all the other health-promoting practises.

When you massage your face—and you should frequently—always use a lubricating cream and stroke up and out with deep, firm, rotary motions, never down or inward. But remember this, that wrinkles which come from worry, "nerves," poor circulation or even poor lighting cannot be erased by any amount of massaging. They must be attacked at a very different source. Relax, be gay, alert and active, both physically and mentally. Let your pet peeves and worries go and watch the subtle change that comes over your complexion. Never before in our history have we had such truly wonderful cosmetics to guard that first line of beauty's defense—our priceless complexions. But be sure you give your own an equal chance to profit by the application of these aids to nature. Then you will indeed have the kind of skin that men adore.

It's funny how a blot of ink is more conspicuous than all the clean paper that surrounds it and, similarly, how a rough, red hand will distract your attention from a face that may, in itself, be perfectly lovely. You won't ever have to worry about that, though, if you're smart enough to keep a jar of that remarkable Barrington Hand Cream on your dressing table and another at your place of business—whether that's an office, hospital, shop or just the kitchen sink. For Barrington is one hand cream that actually does more than its makers claim. It not only softens, whitens and protects your skin. Barrington really soothes rough, chapped, even cracked, hands—and works in double quick time, too. Considering its consistent effectiveness we're constantly amazed at its modest price. Barrington Hand Cream is something to write home about any time of year—but, with the chapping season now getting into full swing, it's a simple necessity for skin health and beauty.

By the way, the makers of Barrington Hand Cream are now presenting an excellent new all-purpose face cream which not only cleanses but softens and protects, and can even be used as a make-up foundation. It is delightfully smooth and delicately fragrant. Although it is new to the market, this fine cream has been tried, tested and improved in the laboratory until its makers believe it to be practically perfect. Ask for Barrington All Purpose Face Cream the very next time you go shopping.

When your mother was a girl we'll bet two to one that she used—and got good results from—a remarkable deep pore cleanser called Pompeian Milk Massage Cream. Well, that same old beauty stand-by is still winning friends and influencing the younger generation. Made of 70% milk, this unusual cream brings dirt and grime simply rolling out of clogged-up pores, leaving your skin silken smooth and radiantly clean. Mother knew a thing or three about cleansing and protecting her complexion for, after all these years, we must agree that neither she—nor you—could make a wiser choice than this same delicately smooth, efficient cleanser still known as Pompeian Milk Massage Cream. Look for it in your neighborhood store and see if you aren't delighted with your discovery.

AFTER a winter's bath, did you ever give yourself a rub-down with Woodbury's Almond Rose Lotion? No? Then you have a real treat in store. All that dry, itchy skin that tingled for lack of moisture will become soft and velvety—and besides, the fresh, clean scent is too lovely and luxurious for words! Apply Woodbury's Almond Rose Lotion generously to arms, elbows, knees, heels and ankles and, of course, use it freely on face, neck and shoulders. Woodbury's Almond Rose Lotion smooths into your skin evenly, without a trace of stickiness, and its genuinely feminine fragrance will give your spirits a real lift. Its healing qualities will prevent that "wintry weathered" skin so unnecessarily uncomfortable. Don't say we never told you!

We are now about to let you in on something really different—and we think that you'll be as excited as we are about this new—of all things—cosmetic bracelet! Every girl likes to wear jewelry, but it isn't every pretty bracelet you find that can actually be put to work. Believe it or not, though, with a flick of your finger, this one can be transformed into a complete make-up kit! A turn of the band and there you have a lovely natural shade of powder, lipstick, rouge, three puffs and two mirrors—all concealed right inside one bracelet! The bracelet itself is very nicely designed and comes in a variety of colors to match your winter wardrobe. Such a decorative bit of costume jewelry is grand for dates, too, because it does away with stuffing your purse jam full with a lot of miscellaneous cosmetics. Oh, yes, and you can even buy refills. Would you like to know more about this cosmetic novelty? Your name and address on a penny postal will bring the good news post haste.

GOOD NEWS

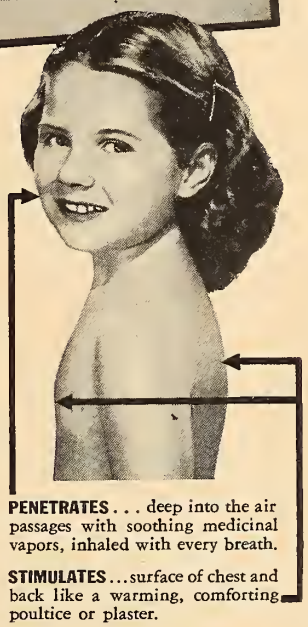
(Continued from page 51)

'TIL STUDIO US DO PART

Hollywood "know-it-alls" were appalled when Albert Basserman asked to be released from his Warner Bros. contract merely because the studio did not give his actress-wife a job. They branded him "ungrateful" because the Warners had offered him his first opportunity in this country and "impractical" because his working permit states he may be employed by no one but the Brothers while he's in the United States. But, curiously, no one tried to understand what lay behind his action. Not a soul stopped to consider that Basserman is 72 years old, that before coming to America he and his wife had worked together for more than a quarter of a century, and that, furthermore, he was not the first actor to take his stand on the side of loyalty. Charles Laughton, for example, refused to appear on a recent Bing Crosby broadcast unless Elsa Lanchester was invited to star on a subsequent program, and also asked that Miss Lanchester be signed for a picture at RKO before he'd put his signature on a contract of his own. Both Miss Lanchester and Mrs. Basserman are competent actresses and their husbands know it. And, knowing it, they have no desire to overshadow the women they love. To them, there are things more important than their own careers.

THE RETURN OF FRANK APPEAL

Sex appeal is booked for a return engagement in Hollywood. After several years of hiding behind such misnomers as "oomph" and "glamour," good old S. A. is staging a comeback in the person of gorgeous Veronica Lake. Blonde, blue-eyed, exactly twenty-one, Veronica is an Arthur Hornblow discovery and so pregnant with allure that Paramount, who refers to her role in "I Wanted Wings" as the "hottest spot" in films, admit they mean it in more ways than one! They've just one complaint to make about their new star. They charge she's interfering with the work of the men on the lot. Not that she means to, of course, but studio chieftains are up in arms because technicians, "props" and others spend too many business hours in the studio projection room, running off the celluloid-sizzling screen tests that landed Veronica a contract.



OAKIE'S JACK

A year ago, Hollywoodites used to get a few beers under their belts and sit around and wail for "poor Jack Oakie, a swell guy who can't get a break." But they're not wailing any more. Ever since word seeped out that he was great in "The Great Dictator," Oakie's been "hot." New jobs have been rolling at him and, at the moment, he's the highest paid person in the cast of "Tin Pan Alley!" True, Alice Faye's the star, but Alice earns only $4,000 a week, or thereabouts, while Jack, who's contracted for six weeks, is doing his stuff for $6,000 per. What's more, if his talents are required for two weeks over the contracted term, he'll be upped to $7,500 and, if he's needed beyond the eight week period, he'll be paid $9,000 weekly till the picture's completed! Poor Jack Oakie! Why doesn't someone give that guy a break!

I want every young mother to know...

About this IMPROVED Vicks Way that Relieves Misery of CHEST, COUGHING COLDS

Now when your child is suffering with a cold, get right after misery... in a hurry... the improved Vicks way.

This wonderful treatment — perfected by Vicks staff of Doctors — is a better way to use time-tested Vicks VapoRub and make its valuable poultice-and-vapor action more effective. It's called the "VapoRub Massage" and it's remarkably simple, remarkably quick.

First massage Vicks VapoRub for 3 minutes on IMPORTANT RIB-AREA OF BACK as well as throat and chest. Spread a thick layer on chest, cover with warmed cloth. Then let this MORE THOROUGH treatment go to work!

It eases bronchial irritation, coughing, muscular tightness or soreness, helps break up local congestion in upper air passages, makes breathing easier... and so relieves the child's misery, relieves you of worry!

BE SURE! To get the benefits of this improved Vicks treatment use only genuine, time-tested Vicks VapoRub.

PENETRATES . . . deep into the air passages with soothing medicinal vapors, inhaled with every breath.

STIMULATES . . . surface of chest and back like a warming, comforting poultice or plaster.

THIRD TIME THE CHARM?

The status of the Cary Grant-Barbara Hutton romance still has round-towners confused. They don't doubt that the pair are "gone" on each other but, remembering Barbara's two previous unhappy marital adventures, (the first is said to have ended with a settlement of $2,000,000 on Prince Alexis Mdivani, and the second, in a settlement of $1,500,000 on Baron Kurt Haugwitz von Reventlow who is still dissatisfied) they wonder if she'd contemplate another jump. Noncommittal Babs has only this to say: "Knowing Cary has been the biggest thrill of my life. He's the first man who ever showered me with candy, flowers and trinkets—without sending me a bill at the end of the month!"

COPS AND RIBBERS

The ribbing Gene Autry's taking these days is enough to drive a lesser man to drink. Gene's got it coming, though, for after playing-the rootin', tootin', shootin' hero of countless cowboy dramas he proved a miserable bust in a little drama of his own. Returning home late the other night, Gene stepped into his drawing room in time to see a lone robber slipping out a window with the most valuable gun in the Autry collection clutched in his hand. And did the intrepid star, who has single-handedly routed scores of desperadoes, tear after the villain and, unassisted, bring him to justice? Nothing like it! Gene flew to the phone and called the cops! Probably figured they've got to earn a living, too.

MEET THE CHAMP

And speaking of Gene, did you know that "Champion," the horse on whom he cinematically rides to glory, is the current glamour boy of the equine world? Horse-fanciers, country-wide, have begged Gene to sell him and have actually submitted offers for the animal totalling over $100,000. That's more than most racing steeds are worth, but Gene's not biting. He paid only $150 for the big fellow eight years ago and, according to Gene, "Champ," who was the first horse to take a transcontinental air trip, "isn't even a thoroughbred. He's just small part Arabian and most part plain horse, but we've seen plenty together and that's the way it'll always be."

HOLLYWOOD TRADING POST

Newest wrinkle in Hollywood's charitable crazy quilt is Ann Lehr's "Memento Mart," a shop at which gadgets and clothing owned

...new sparkling shade
...new matched make up

RUBY RED
by Irresistible

You'll look lovely in Irresistible's new sensational lipstick . . . for "Ruby Red" is a rich, sporkling red . . . the season's liveliest, mast flattering calor. Blends brilliantly with oll the fashianoble new clothes calors. Applies smoothly and stoys on far haurs becouse af the secret new Whip-Text process. Get Irresistible "Ruby Red" Lipstick taday, with motching Face Powder, Rouge and Pawder Foundatian, and knaw the superb flottery of o complete Irresistible moke-up.

USE IRRESISTIBLE LIPSTICK
IT'S Whip-Text
LASTS LONGER
SMOOTHER

10¢ AT ALL
5 & 10 C STORES

Good Housekeeping Bureau

USE IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME

by stars and craved by fans may be purchased at a fraction of their original cost. The "Mart's" been open just a few weeks but has already assembled the screwiest assortment of articles ever embraced by four walls. And how the fans are going for it! They're swamping Miss Lehr with requests for everything from Lana Turner's sweaters to Dotty Lamour's teeth braces! Items most in demand are empty perfume bottles, dress clips and hosiery, but Miss Lehr is also attempting to fill orders for Gene Autry's old spurs, a belt Clark Gable wore in "Boom Town," a battered fender from Tyrone Power's car, the sash of a dress Loretta Young wore in "The Doctor Takes A Wife" (for a male moviegoer) and the costumes that decked Doug Fairbanks, Jr., in "Gunga Din" (for an exclusive girls' finishing school!) The most unusual request of all, however, has come from a young woman in St. Louis. She, heaven only knows why, wants Gary Cooper's toothbrush!

THE MAN I MARRIED—NO. 2

They're saying it was a severe case of careeritis that put the skids under the Carole Landis-Willis Hunt marriage. Carole, if the stories are to be believed, revelled in the publicity she received prior to her altar trek, and it took her only two moon's time to decide that magazine and newspaper editors thought her better copy as a Miss than as a matron. Whether or not a divorce will restore the publicity she's said to desire, only the future will tell, but it's our guess that a good performance and not single-blessedness is the thing that will again make Carole the pet of the press.

OUR TOWN

Talk about feminine vanity! There's been a hot feud on in town ever since a swashbuckling hero at a major studio grew jealous of the "beauty" of a dark-eyed male player cast in his last picture. The trouble arose when both were assigned to a dueling sequence and the leading man, realizing his opponent's tumbling black curls would make feminine hearts thump harder than his own red-blonde crop, insisted that said opponent wear a helmet throughout the scene although he himself appeared bareheaded!

NOT FOR PUBLICITY

When Mary Beth Hughes first made her Cinema City début, she cut through the town's stagline like a bolt of unsheathed lightning. Every attractive bachelor in Hollywood was on her date list, and for two months she whirled from party to party and night club to night club. Then, suddenly, it all stopped. Mary Beth discovered leading men bored her to tears and leaped off the merry-go-round. She stayed off it, too, until her press agent suggested, a few weeks ago, that she pose for some publicity shots with another of his clients, a Mr. Robert Stack. That did it. Mary Beth has a different slant on leading men today. She's dated Bob every night since they met, except for those few days he had to spend out of town on business—and then she received one special delivery letter, two air mail-special deliveries and four wires from him in a single morning! Neither will admit it's serious, but Mary Beth's sporting a new diamond solitaire and it's rumored they're secretly married. Yessir, it looks as though Miss Hughes is back on the merry-go-round—but this time it's exclusive!

DIDJA KNOW

That Patti McCarty uses boss Dorothy Lamour's old sarongs as head scarves . . . That Gary Cooper is shopping around for a plane . . . That Shirley Temple's brother, Jack, is an instructor of dramatics at Stanford University . . . That Jack Carson, considered a newcomer to the screen, is now appearing in his 56th picture . . . That Priscilla and Rosemary Lane, who have always shared sleeping quarters, are to have separate bedrooms at last . . . That Josef von Sternberg continues to be Marlene Dietrich's No. 1 adviser in all matters concerning her career . . . That Florette Debusky of Pottsville, Pa., was given the name Dana Dale by Walter Winchell . . . That Andy Devine is replacing his station wagon door with a sliding panel that will allow him more room to get in and out . . . That the story of "Citizen Kane" is suspiciously like the life story of William Randolph Hearst . . . That Maria Korda, Alexander's ex, is bringing Maurice Maeterlinck, author of "The Blue Bird," to Hollywood . . . That William Holden won't go into a scene without money in his pocket of MODERN SCREEN, published monthly at New York, N. Y., for October 1, 1940.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACTS OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912, AND MARCH 3, 1933

State of New York } ss
County of New York, N. Y. }

Before me, a Notary Public, in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared Helen Meyer, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that she is the Business Manager of MODERN SCREEN and that the following is, to the best of her knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1933, embodied in section 537, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business manager are: Publisher, George T. Delacorte, Jr., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Editor, Pearl H. Finley, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Managing Editor, None; Business Manager, Helen Meyer, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

2. That the owner is: Dell Publishing Company, Inc., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; George T. Delacorte, Jr., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Margarita Delacorte, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by her.

HELEN MEYER, Business Manager,
Sworn to and subscribed before me this 19th day of September, 1940.
ALFREDA R. COLE
Commission Expires March 30, 1942.

because he claims that makes him feel important . . . That Cesar Romero tripped and fell flat on his face while dancing at Ciro's one evening . . . That Paramount allocated a measly $250,000 for the publicity and exploitation campaign on "North West Mounted Police" . . . That Alfred Hitchcock reduced thirty pounds in nine weeks, but his dressing-room door still bears a sign reading "Mr. Hitchcock's Corral?"

MR. PRODUCER GOES TO THE MOVIES

Movieland producers, generally, scorn the customary method of entertaining guests. Instead of inviting friends over for a simple supper and a rubber of bridge, they serve elaborate nine-course dinners and, when the last fingerbowl has been cleared away, escort their visitors to their private projection rooms where they unreel their latest celluloid triumphs. One such producer is Twentieth Century-Fox's Sol Wurtzel who played host to a group of mid-western "little theatre" directors recently and after dinner presented his latest opus, an amusing something called "The Bride Wore Crutches." The directors sat in silence for an hour and, when the film was ended, rose from their seats and gathered around Mr. Wurtzel to offer their opinions, but before they could spout forth one of them had to tap Mr. W. gently on the shoulder—to wake him up!

JIMMY'S HOUSE-PEST

Jimmy Stewart's been a soul in torment since Burgess Meredith arrived to share his bed and board, for Burgess has a habit that's driving his host to the booby-hatch. He invites beautiful blondes to dinner and then fails to show up himself! Jimmy, left alone with a lot of strange women, tries ducking out side doors and rear windows, but the blondes always pull him back. They mistake his annoyance for shyness and, having been fed, feel it their duty to spend the evening putting the steaming Mr. Stewart right at ease!

PASSION BY PROXY

Brought up to be courteous to guests, Jimmy has said little to Burgess about the blondes, and only once has he called his maddening visitor on the carpet. That was the time Burgess, after his first meeting with Olivia de Havilland, asked her to the house and forgot to turn up. It wasn't that Jimmy objected to entertaining Olivia. Far from it! But he didn't think his best pal had any right to stand up his best girl. The next morning, therefore, he buttonholed Burgess and demanded that a formal apology be made to Olivia. Meredith was genuinely contrite, and, when Jimmy had walked away, instructed his valet to send Miss de Havilland some flowers and an appropriate note. The valet, knowing nothing of the Stewart-de Havilland romance, assured his master everything would be taken care of. And everything was. The following day Olivia found buried in a bouquet of roses a note which read—"My own darling: It was unpardonable of me to have forgotten so precious a rendezvous. I know you will forgive me and adore me always. With all my love, Burgess." And now poor Jimmy's madder than ever!

SHE'D CARVE A NEW MAP

If Carole Lombard ever slits Clark Gable's throat, a little lady in Milwaukee won't be surprised. She's been expecting that to happen ever since the afternoon she came upon Carole on the "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" set, and noticed the beautiful Mrs. G. fondling a murderous-looking straight-edged razor, a lunatic gleam burning in her eyes. "What are you thinking of, my dear?" the little lady asked. And Carole looked up. "Thinking of?" she repeated absently. "Oh, just how much I'd enjoy wrapping this around my old man's neck!" The little lady paled and ran away, but she need not have, because what Carole failed to add was that she'd spent a full week learning to manipulate the instrument for a scene in "Mr. and Mrs."—and that she wanted to test her skill on Clark who, for a sequence in "Comrade X," will have his chin decked out in a black beard!

THE MAN I MARRIED

There are those who say the frequent marital rifts of the John Barrymores smell faintly of publicity. However, according to Elaine, there was nothing phony about their last big, beautiful bout. Mrs. Barrymore reports that she and John actually had a terrific argument, (the subject of which she prefers not to divulge) and that when it reached its peak John shrieked, "Get out of my house!" "Oh, yeah!" return-shrieked Elaine. "You get out of my house!" And John got. Funny thing about these bust-ups is the fact that whenever John moves out, his mother-in-law moves in and, whenever John returns, his mother-in-law moves right out again!

"But I can't explain!"

BROKEN DATE, BROKEN FRIENDSHIP because of "REGULAR" PAIN

Explaining is difficult when you have to break appointments because of menstruation's functional pain. Yet how easy many women now find it to relieve such pain—to carry on in comfort—with the aid of Midol!

Midol contains no opiates. It is a new formula, developed for its special purpose. One Midol ingredient is prescribed frequently by many doctors, probably by your own. Another ingredient, exclusively in Midol, increases the comfort most users enjoy by reducing spasmodic pain peculiar to the menstrual period.

If you have no organic disorder needing surgical or medical care, don't hesitate to try Midol. It should help you. If it doesn't, consult your doctor. Get Midol at any drugstore. Five tablets, enough for a convincing trial, only 20¢. Forty cents for 12 tablets.

MIDOL

RELIEVES FUNCTIONAL PERIODIC PAIN

FREE WEDDING RING

with every simulated diamond engagement ring ordered now. Smart, new yellow gold plate wedding ring set with brilliants given as get-acquainted gift FREE with every Flashing simulated Diamond Solitaire Engagement ring ordered at our Anniversary Sale offer of only $1.

SEND NO MONEY with order, just name and ring size. 10 days' approval. Your package comes by return mail.

EMPIRE DIAMOND CO., Dept. 254 W, Jefferson, Iowa

WHEN YOU NEED TISSUES CALL "SIT-TRUE" FOR

look for the blue & gold box

SOFTER • STRONGER MORE ABSORBENT

AT 5 AND 10¢—DRUG AND DEPARTMENT STORES

FUN IS WHERE YOU FIND IT

(Continued from page 37)

cite the case of a once famous star who got a job selling shoes. He was an excellent salesman, but customers avoided him. Eventually he lost the job. Why? Because it is embarrassing to the public to look at a has-been!

"These are some of the things that flying helps you rationalize. I don't mean that it minimizes the importance of matters like your job and your home. Our new place is very important to us. It's a little house—twenty-five years old, with a little old stable and corral on three acres of land. You know, the kind of a place that rates the old slogan 'a place where you can raise a carrot and keep a bee!' We are paying for it on the F.H.A. plan, and we have all early-American furniture in it. Another thing that we think is important is saving for the future. Though we have no idea what medium of exchange we'll all be using a few years from now, we're taking a chance on saving.

KIDS? Not yet. Not when you know there's a chance they may be cannon-fodder."

Bob changed the subject abruptly. "I hope people won't think fliers have a high-hat attitude toward the things everyone else thinks are fun. The reason, for instance, that Viv and I don't go to night clubs is that we worked in them so long that we lost our taste for them. I don't drink because I don't like the stuff and also because a flier's first duty is to keep sober. In the old days, pilots were known as slap-happy guys with chronically bent elbows. Nowadays, it's different; every six months there's a physical exam and we have to pass that test. The round of social pleasures is out of our lives, not because we're anti-social, but because flying takes so much time. You need 150 hours a year in the air in order to keep your license. Blind flying takes more time. Then there's my instructing. I've taught Viv to fly, and now I'm teaching Cap'n James Smith.

"There's still another phase of our life which might be called abnormal. We keep no servants—partly for reasons of economy (flying is expensive) and partly because we hate the ignominy of having to order our fellow human beings about. Viv does all the cooking and Cap'n Jim does the dishes and the general cleaning. Jim is a Negro, pleasant-faced, clean-cut, a college graduate. He is our friend, not our servant. He has all his meals with us. We have a 'Be kind to Jim' week at our house, just as we have a 'Be kind to Bob' week, and a 'Be kind to Viv' week. During the 'Be kind to Jim' week, we wait on him.

"The color of a man's skin," said Bob, as the hour ticked by and the time came for him to drive back, "is another thing that doesn't seem to matter—up there. The things that do count are the ones that concern everyone. Conscription, for example. I'm all for it. I think we should have had it long ago. The manufacture of munitions should be speeded up. We should have the greatest air force in the world. There should be a ring of steel around the Americas. And I don't believe that conscription means the downfall of democracy and the setting up of a dictatorship either. I have too much faith in the soundness of the American people to believe that anything like that could exist here.

"I have had a pet theory for years which is now being put into practice. It is that the two things that will contribute most to eventual lasting world peace are radio and flying. Flying will bring us closer together, physically; radio will bring us closer together, ideologically. Each in its way will help make us neighbors. When we can all rub elbows and trade dreams one with the other, we will be friends, on the old premise that to know all is to forgive all."

"And if you should have to go to war?" I said.

"If there must be war, I'll go gladly. After all," he laughed, "a lot of other 'juveniles' will have to go, too! I won't be alone. That's the whole thing, you see, we aren't alone anymore, any of us. The thought of it doesn't worry me, not for myself, at least. I couldn't do anything but go, so I might as well be gay about it. We've got to look at things that way now in order to be happy."

Then we drove back to the studio. And after I left him I couldn't help wondering—is this what it's like, being a young man in the world today?

Sculptress Hedi Hollander tells Claudette Colbert (time-outting from "Arise My Love") how she chose her profession. Seems her song-writing hubby was driving her mad with his piano pounding, so she retired to a studio behind their house, began sculpting and founded a million-dollar business.

A DAY TO REMEMBER

(Continued from page 43)

black. From the cellar came a spooky cry; from the attic a sinister howl. Another family might have fainted, but the twins have conditioned the Johnsons to drama and the unexpected.

"It must be one of their games," said Mrs. Johnson placidly. And that's just what it was. Laraine, Lamar and their friends had resurrected one of their childhood favorites—"Sardines." First they had blacked out the house. Then one member of the clan had dashed away to hide. The rest of the group were hot on the trail, yelling and screaming through the dark. As, one by one, they discovered the hiding place—in this instance a linen closet—they hid there, too, until the last lone wanderer found them all together, packed tight as sardines on top of the Johnsons' clean sheets and towels. Mrs. Johnson is a philosopher about things like laundry and sudden guests, dancing in the living room and the interminable blare of the radio. She thinks it's all very jolly.

ANYBODY would think these assorted activities would keep even Laraine panting, but there is more to the story. Laraine writes poetry. How or when is a mystery we shan't try to solve. We can only report that she does, and that the poetry is quite good at that. She has had a number of pieces accepted by literary magazines, and on the work table in her large, sunny bedroom you can always find a couple of lyrics simmering gently, waiting for revision and a last fond polishing. Laraine writes musical comedies, too, and several of these have been produced by the Wilshire Playhouse group. She's pretty glib about her favorite authors, Ogden Nash, Jules Verne, Knut Hamsen, so we wouldn't be surprised if she even races through a book now and then. She admits, however, that she never gets a chance to shop. She loves clothes, but somehow can't find time to collect them. If she sees a pretty dress in a window, she'll dash in and buy it. Later, of course, she discovers that she hasn't a hat, coat or pair of shoes to wear with it. By the time she has assembled the right accessories, the dress looks like a relic of yesteryear. Consequently, she sticks mostly to slacks and shorts, spruces up only for big evenings.

So now you see how it is. When you have so many interests, so many things to do, when you have come so far in nineteen short years, when you plan to go so much farther in the years just ahead, you can't mark time. You can't stall. You can't proceed in low gear. No, sir! You hit the pike at eighty plus. You burn up the road, but you get there safe and sound with no accidents, and with even the law rooting for you. You do if you are Laraine Day, the cyclone on sixteen cylinders!

INFORMATION DESK
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State.....

HELP YOURSELF TO BEAUTY THESE 5 WAYS

See how much this medicated cream may do for your skin!

NURSES first discovered the unusual qualities of Noxzema! Now millions of women use it regularly to help keep skin clear and smooth. Give yourself a new beauty experience—try Noxzema these 5 important ways...

1. AS A NIGHT CREAM. Notice how cooling and refreshing this medicated cream feels... how it softens rough, dried-out skin.
2. POOR COMPLEXION. Noxzema aids in healing externally-caused blemishes—its mildly astringent action helps reduce enlarged pore openings.
3. AS A POWDER BASE. Noxzema keeps your make-up fresh and lovely for hours; helps protect your skin from sun and wind.
4. AS A HAND CREAM. Noxzema helps heal the tiny cuts and cracks in chapped hands; helps keep your hands soft, smooth, white.
5. AS A SKIN COMFORTER. Use Noxzema for Chafed Skin, for skin Reddened, Roughened by wind or sun, for painful Scalds and Burns.

Try this medicated, greaseless cream today! Get a jar now at the special bargain price—remember, money refunded if you're not delighted with results.

Special! 75¢ NOXZEMA Only 49¢

NOXZEMA DOUBLE ACTION COLD CREAM?

A new Noxzema product—a sensation in skin freshness! It's Noxzema Medicated Cold Cream. Cleanses so thoroughly ... makes skin feel fresher—look softer, lovelier. Delightful to use—feather-light! Try it! 25¢ trial jar. Larger 50¢ and $1 sizes at all cosmetic counters.

FREE ENLARGEMENT

For MODERN SCREEN READERS. Just to get acquainted, we will beautifully enlarge any snapshot, photo, Kodak picture, print or negative to 5x7 inches FREE—with this ad. Please include color of hair and eyes for prompt information on a natural, life-like color enlargement in a free frame. Your original returned with your free enlargement (10c for return mailing appreciated). Look over your pictures now and send us your favorite snapshot or negative today as this free offer is limited. DEAN STUDIOS, Dept. 284, 211 7th St., Des Moines, Iowa.

FASCINATING ENTERTAINMENT

FOR ONLY 10¢!

CROSSWORD PUZZLES, America's Leading Puzzle Magazine, will provide many an evening's entertainment at home or while traveling. This handy sized magazine offers over 96 pages of a variety of captivating puzzles to suit novice and veteran alike.

Try CROSSWORD PUZZLES! You'll be surprised how it will brighten up a dull evening and banish boredom or worry. Ask for the big November issue at your favorite newsstand or 10c store today.

CROSSWORD PUZZLES... 10c

HOLLYWOOD GANGS UP ON BRENDA MARSHALL

(Continued from page 38)

Later, during the course of the picture Brenda felt like expiring on the spot after one of her love scenes with Flynn. Flynn didn't help matters at all and definitely proved himself no gentleman and a scoundrel of the first order by ribbing her about what happened.

She had ordered one of the specials in the Green Room for luncheon, a dish of particular delectability. Not until she went into the first afternoon close-up with Flynn did she know there had been a liberal amount of disguised garlic in the dish. Flynn promptly and elaborately swooned, nor would he allow her to forget her innocent faux pas for one minute during the entire afternoon.

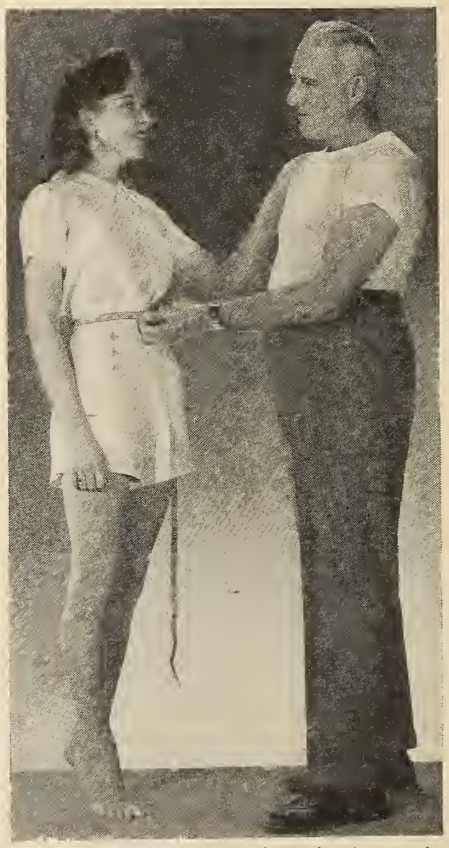
When she talked with her first Hollywood writer, Brenda learned that a magazine interview wasn't as simple as she'd thought.

The interviewer insisted upon delving into her past life, asking intimate questions which caused Brenda to fairly curl and shrivel. How was she to know that the writer meant nothing personal? To him, the questions were altogether natural and normal. He simply was trying to ferret out facts which would make an interesting story. Inasmuch as she had always tried to keep her affairs to herself, Brenda found exploration into those affairs a matter of deep concern.

For this very reason, the penalty of fame struck her amidships when a Hollywood columnist printed the news that Brenda and William Holden would marry within ten months. At that date, Brenda's divorce from Richard Houston Gaines, stage actor, would become final and she would be in a position to marry again.

Brenda was frightfully embarrassed by the episode, for she and young Holden weren't even engaged, much less planning any date for a wedding. Granted they went around together and Hollywood thought they were in love; no formal announcement had been made of any such betrothal. Brenda is a young woman of breeding and refinement, and she believed it particularly bad taste on the part of the columnist.

Had Brenda known beforehand what lay in store for her in Hollywood, she might have hesitated before deserting the stage, at least until she had acquired more poise and experience.



PAINFULLY shy, she didn't know how to meet the situations into which she was almost immediately plunged. Valiant attempts at sophistication in the Hollywood manner even now haven't radically changed this young actress who was reared in the solitude of a tropical sugar-cane plantation.

Born of Danish parentage on the island of Negros in the southern Philippine group, her childhood was passed far from the progressive tide of civilization. Brenda lived in the realm of her father's rather extensive library, and dreams didn't give way to reality until she was sent to an aunt's in San Antonio, Texas, for her education.

Interest in dramatics commenced with her enrollment at Texas State College, where she acted in class plays and proved herself an adept performer. She became so engrossed in the idea of a theatrical career that after two years at Texas State—which, by the way, Ann Sheridan also attended—she left to join Madame Maria Ouspenskaya's Dramatic College, then located in New York City.

Following her training there, Brenda became a member of a "straw hat" summer stock in Peterborough, N. H., and finally appeared in the Federal Theatre Project's production of George Bernard Shaw's "On the Rocks," which played Broadway for a very nice run. It was in this play that Hollywood talent scouts saw her and recommended her to their respective companies. Warner Brothers chanced to see one of these tests rejected by another studio and wired the youngster, "Take next westbound plane arriving here tomorrow."

When she arrived, Brenda resembled nothing quite so much as a luminous-eyed Spanish señorita. There's a certain deep, smouldering fire about her that, despite her Scandinavian ancestry, gives her an unmistakable Latin look.

Hold your breath girls! Ida Lupino's waist is 21¼ in.—Filmland's tiniest!

That is one reason why she filled the role of Doña Maria in "The Sea Hawk" so perfectly.

Hollywood scared the living daylights out of Brenda. It was so vastly different from anything she had ever encountered. Everyone seemed so utterly self-sufficient, so certain of himself. She found it difficult to accustom herself to flattery, to the delving into her personal life, to pushing herself forward when she would have preferred to remain in the background. What Brenda needed was a big dose of egomania, particularly to bridge over those embarrassing interludes she seemed ever to be drawn into.

After making four pictures, however, she was just beginning to feel a little bit more important, when she had another deflating experience. Holden had told her that Barbara Stanwyck wanted to meet her, but the opportunity had never presented itself. Therefore, when Barbara came on the Warner Brothers lot to work in Frank Capra's "Meet John Doe," Brenda decided that the time for the meeting had come. Accordingly, she went to pay her a call.

She did not, however, reckon with the gateman! Capra sets are always closed, visitors being admitted only with special permission. The gateman wasn't at all impressed with the fact that she was Brenda Marshall and under contract to the studio. She had no business on the set, so she wasn't going to pass. That year in the studio didn't signify a thing to the gate custodian and she had to leave without even a peek at Barbara!

NOT long ago she appeared on Bing Crosby's radio program. Memory of that broadcast lingers still, and not pleasantly, either.

An hour or so before the broadcast she fell and injured her back, but believed she could go through with the scheduled appearance. She stood with Bing and several others before one of the microphones on the stage.

Suddenly, while awaiting her lines, the top page of her script fluttered out of her hands. When she went to stoop for it, however, she discovered to her alarm she couldn't even bend! With her cue less than a minute away, she grew desperate. No one seemed aware of the fact that she had dropped her script, and there she was, unable to do anything about it. Finally she did get down on the floor crawfish-fashion to pick up the fallen page. It was one of her worst moments, for no one could know her awkwardness was caused by her fall; torn sacroiliac muscles had made her practically helpless.

Transcending by far all these adventures in embarrassment, however, because it served as a deep and searing blow, was an incident which occurred her first day on a movie set, the day she started "Espionage Agent."

During the morning Brenda had appeared in several scenes; then lunch was called. When she returned to the set, she received a terrific shock!

There before the camera, in clothes exactly like hers, stood another girl—and she was acting out the scene Brenda knew she was supposed to enact directly after lunch!

Brenda didn't know what to do, what to say. She felt like sinking through the floor; apparently, she had failed in her baptism-by-fire before the camera, and another actress had to be called in to replace her.

No one said anything; no one uttered words of sympathy or commiseration. For this, at least, she was grateful. It was as though the world had come to an end, and she felt frightfully ashamed.

She needn't have been, poor child! For that girl in clothes exactly like hers was her stand-in, going through her paces for the benefit of a camera set-up!

Every young actress experiences certain embarrassing moments in the realization of stardom, but few can duplicate those Brenda Marshall endured on her way up. She believes firmly, though, and perhaps rightfully, they contributed to her poise and presence. Certainly, she is one of the most composed young women on the screen today.

KNEE HIGH TO AN OSCAR

(Continued from page 6)

at Universal Studios. Gloria is twice as pretty in person as the camera allows. Symbolically enough, she was dolled up in an old dress of Deanna's, a blue taffeta affair, much too long for Gloria, but that didn't matter. Gloria was in the portrait gallery for a sitting of head close-ups. While she waited for the lights to be set, she passed the time ripping open a stack of fan letters. Every now and then Gloria giggled. Finally she shoved one letter at me and smiled.

When Gloria Jean smiles her dark blue eyes draw up in little violet slots and her eyelashes look like zippers. Her round, pink-and-white face topped by a neat mop of naturally wavy titian tresses smiles right along with her generous mouth. It was hard to concentrate—but I made it.

"Dear Gloria," said the letter. "I am only thirteen and I know I am too young for love but I can't help it, you are the prettiest girl in the world. Will you marry me? Donald."

She's a siren, this twelve-year-old! Why, some months ago Bing Crosby brought his kids on the set one day to watch pappy work. The next morning, bright and early, Gary, the eldest offspring, stalked into Bing's bedroom and woke him out of a sound sleep.

"Well, Dad," stated Gary, "it's happened!"

"What's happened?" inquired Bing, wide awake and wondering what epic event had arrived in the life of his son and heir.

"Judy Garland's out," declared Gary. "I've got a new girl—Gloria Jean."

Mesmerized young males by the thousands may moon over Gloria Jean, but right now Gloria isn't doing any mooning back. She's too busy savoring the wonders of Hollywood. And with all the real flesh and blood screen gods stalking around her sets (and being a terrific movie fan) Gloria is having a few crushes herself.

Dangling from the charm bracelet on her wrist is a gold medallion embossed with the classic profile of Basil Rathbone. Gloria raved about Basil so much when she made the picture with Bing that The Groaner had the little gold gadget made for a parting gift. Gloria was faithful to Basil for a long time, even after her Charles Boyer affair, but recently the autographed picture which hung over her bed was given away to Brian Aherne's romantic face, also lovingly autographed. What's more, Gloria has a big box of candy from Brian to prove his devotion, whether Joan Fontaine likes it or not. John Sutton, a handsome young Universal newcomer, is now looming large in Gloria's daydreams, as are Spencer Tracy and Errol Flynn, and it's to be expected that almost every dashing movie hero who visits Universal to make a picture will have his brief but blazing day in Gloria's worship.

To Gloria all this is a fantastic, wonderful dream come true—a dream that began quite a while ago back in Buffalo, N. Y., where she was born.

When Gloria was too young to dream about Hollywood, her pretty, energetic mother did it for her. For if you ask Eleanor Schoonover, she will swear she knew Gloria Jean had a rare voice when she was only fifteen months old. The record reveals that at that age Gloria actually showed up on a Scranton radio program, and at five she made her début in a big Scranton theatre officially classified as a coloratura soprano!

From then on about all Gloria Jean did, outside of wolf her oatmeal and learn her ABC's, was to burst into song at the slightest provocation. Gloria Jean was pretty famous locally by the time Paul Whiteman came through on tour with his band and, after one audition, offered her a contract.

BY that time there wasn't much doubt that Gloria was destined for a singing career, but Mama Schoonover and Gloria's Uncle Jack, a voice expert who really discovered Gloria's professional pipes, were set on grand opera. It took a lot of moxie to say "no" to Paul Whiteman, creator of stars, but they did, and lucky for Gloria, too. Because right after that she had her tonsils out, and complications set in that had her lying around a hospital for almost a year. Everyone thought she'd lose her pretty voice for sure—but when she got well, her singing was better than ever! Then Gloria's mother knew there was only one thing to do—get Gloria to New York where the big breaks were.

They started out broke and had absolutely no trouble staying that way, for there wasn't enough money in the Schoonover family to maintain two homes. Gloria finally got a job with a little one-horse New York opera company but, when they worked her too hard and threatened to ruin her voice, Mama S. didn't hesitate to pound the pavements again. Just when it looked like back to Scranton for keeps, the good Hollywood fairy waved her wand with a swell sense of timing.

Whether they wished upon a star or what, I couldn't say—but all of a sudden things certainly began happening.

Larry Waterman, assistant to the president of Universal, was in New York and saw Gloria at a tryout. He liked her! The next day Larry told Joe Pasternak, who was in the East on a pleasure trip, that he'd seen another Deanna Durbin. Pasternak clapped his brow. The last thing in the world he wanted to see or even hear about was another Deanna Durbin. Everybody he talked to had one. He wasn't interested in interviewing young hopefuls and mama's darlings—not this trip. He was on vacation and he meant to stay that way. No mix-ups with moppets!

But there's a funny thing about Hollywood producers. When they think they are on vacation, they're often spinning their brains around a mile a minute over some future epic. Joe had bought an I.A.R. Wylie magazine story called "The Underpup," but he didn't have a typical American kid to play in it. Consequently, it was a cinch for Larry Waterman to break him down to an interview with Gloria Jean.

She didn't even have to sing for Joe. She just played a couple of her records and turned on her smile. It was a ticket to Hollywood!

Long before this, Gloria had started making scrapbooks of her particular movie favorites and dreaming about Hollywood as some sort of Seventh Heaven. She'd always pictured it as a lush, tropical place, where cocoanuts rolled around in the streets, green palm trees swayed and glamorous stars pattered around in a paradise of luxury. Well, it was sort of a shock to find Movieland just another big city full of noises, hard-working people, lots of traffic and practically no cocoanuts. Undaunted, Gloria Jean made up her mind to concentrate on the movie studios and their glamorous stars, and so far they

Women welcome this exciting new nicety introduced by Marlboro. Smarter, cleaner smoking is yours with the pert red Beauty Tip. Enjoy superb Marlboros! No extra cost for this extra luxury. Now Only 20¢

MARLBORO

America's Luxury Cigarette

YOU CAN STILL OBTAIN FAMOUS IVORY TIPS — ALSO PLAIN ENDS

New 11 Minute Shampoo

Specially Made for Blondes—Helps Keep Light Hair from Darkening—Brightens Faded Blonde Hair

1. Not a liquid! It's a fragrant powder that quickly makes a rich cleansing lather.
2. Instantly removes dingy, dust-laden film that makes blonde hair dark, old looking.
3. Called Blondex, it gives hair attractive lustre and highlights—keeps that "Just Shampooed" look for a whole week.
4. Lightens hair with absolute safety. Fine for children's hair, too. Largest selling blonde hair shampoo in the world.

Get BLONDEX at drug, department or 10c stores.

TYPEWRITER 1/3 PRICE

STANDARD OFFICE MODELS
1/3 MFRS. ORIG. PRICE
Easiest Terms as Low as 60¢ a Week
All late models completely rebuilt like brand new. FULLY GUARANTEED.
No Money Down—10 Day Trial
Free price-smashing catalog shows all makes in colors. FREE COURSE IN TYPING INCLUDED. See catalog before you buy. SEND NOW.
INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCH.
Dept. 126! 231 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

10c A DAY

SEND NO MONEY

WATCH GIVEN

Your CHOICE of Lady's or Man's guaranteed 1941 WRIST WATCH given at no extra cost with every ½ carat simulated solitaire diamond ring when ordered and paid for on our purchase privilege plan. Payments $2.00 down, within 20 days after arrival, at your post office. Balance of $2.00 anytime within a year. (Total only $4.00.) Ring has scintillating imported stone set in rhodium silver finish. Adjustable band. Send NO money with order. Extra surprise free gift enclosed for promptness. Rush name, address, ring size. It comes by return mail.

$1 A WEEK A YEAR TO PAY

R. HAMILTON JEWELERS, Dept MM-124 Topeka, Kansas

Lemon Juice Recipe Checks Rheumatic Pain Quickly

If you suffer from rheumatic or neuritis pain, try this simple inexpensive home recipe. Get a package of Ru-Ex Compound, a two week's supply, mix it with a quart of water, add the juice of 4 lemons. Often within 48 hours—sometimes overnight—splendid results are obtained. If the pains do not quickly leave you, return the empty package and Ru-Ex will cost you nothing to try. It is sold under an absolute money-back guarantee. Ru-Ex Compound is for sale by druggists everywhere.

WATCH YOUR STEP!

Play safe and use QUEST (the Kotex deodorant powder). It positively eliminates all body and sanitary napkin odors.

haven't let her down even a little bit.

Universal hasn't kept her too busy, for Joe Pasternak believes in bringing kids along slowly. She's had lots of time for running around collecting autographs, gasping, goggling and meeting mobs of dream men and women who are still eighth wonders of the world to her. By now the scrap books have reached mountainous proportions, and the autograph collections and screenland souvenirs have forced the Schoonovers into larger living quarters. When she returned to Scranton last year, reporters queried her about the thrills of Hollywood and Gloria replied that among the greatest was meeting people like Nan Grey, C. Aubrey Smith, El Brendel, etc., all of whom support Gloria in her own starring pictures.

After almost two years, studio sets still lure her like enchanted palaces. Mrs. Schoonover has given up trying to keep Gloria at home between pictures. Whether she's working or not, she manages to duck over to Universal daily, and one of her favorite between-picture pastimes is taking her sister, Lois, (Gloria's stand-in) and her baby sister, Bonnie, out to the abandoned sets on the back lot and putting on "plays." The other day a Universal picture company, setting up for some outdoor shots among the gaunt ruins of the ancient "Hunchback of Notre Dame" sets, was surprised to hear a voice crying "Heathcliffe! Heathcliffe!" They rushed inside and found Gloria Jean, Lois and Bonnie deep in a dramatic scene obviously filched from "Wuthering Heights!"

Going to the movies, by the way, is Gloria's never-ending delight. If, in the evening, the answer is a firm family "no," Gloria can sometimes be content to stay at home and dress up like her favorite screen sirens, Marlene Dietrich, Greta Garbo and Joan Crawford, before the long mirror in her bedroom. But she'd a lot rather coax her way to the neighborhood theatre. Gloria's taste in movies at this point runs mainly to outdoor slam-bang pictures like "When the Daltons Rode" and "The Sea Hawk." She's also wild about horror films. The other day Gloria Jean trotted over to rehearse for an appearance at the Los Angeles Policemen's Ball. They put her up on an impromptu platform that carpenters were hammering together. To Gloria it suggested a scaffold. "Oh," she cried happily, "just like a hanging!"

Outside of this slight Jane Witherish touch, Gloria Jean is as nice and normal a young lady as you'd care to know. She collects dolls, helps her mother with the dishes, makes her own bed, cooks Baby Bonnie's breakfast and can whip up very yummy peanut cookies, according to family testimonials.

On the athletic side, she pedals a bike and bumps around occasionally on a horse chased by her fox terrier, "Pat," a gift of Director Dave Butler. In a swimming pool Gloria's a regular fish, and she can take care of herself very well in the neighborhood running, jumping and ball-playing kid games. For that matter, Gloria Jean can take care of herself under most circumstances.

She was up for a radio program with Edgar Bergen a while back. Bergen took Gloria to lunch after the deal was set to get to know her, so he could write up a clever script. One of the most amusing gents in Hollywood, Edgar's a great kidder, and he was bantering Gloria all around the table. Finally he happened on the favorite subject of his hair. Bergen hasn't any, of course, and though he kids about it, he's really sensitive. "How do you like my long curly locks, Gloria?" he inquired facetiously.

"I like it the way it is in the movies," came back Gloria. That's when Bergen wears a toupé!

Gloria's weaknesses are ice cream, which she tries to have at every meal, five-and-ten cent stores, trains, frilly frocks and a player piano which she pretends to play herself but really can't. Since she's been made a star, her little thirteen-year-old boy friend next door is having a terrible time getting any attention. Gloria used to join him in marbles and BB gun shooting in her "off" hours. Now she just climbs up into a tree with a pillow and dreams.

Mostly the dreams are about Messrs. Boyer, Rathbone, Aherne, Sutton, Flynn and company. But sometimes Gloria has nightmares, too. The other day she rushed into the house looking like a ghost. She'd dreamed that she was leaving Hollywood!

"Oh, Mother," sobbed Gloria, "if I had to do that I think I'd rather die."

But there's not much chance of Gloria Jean leaving her Hollywood Wonderland for a long time to come.

Wouldn't you love to live in Studio City? Smiley Burnette's the new mayor! That's screen-pal Gene Autry (right) admiring his impressive seal of office.

LOVE AND LANA

(Continued from page 31)

sharp and quick. He hates previews and premières. His two loves are Shaw and music, but Shaw's his favorite of the two.

Now Lana: Because she is publicized by her studio as a glamour girl, people immediately assume that she is a sophisticate. If wanting to have a good time denotes sophistication, we suppose, then, that Lana is a sophisticate. But the public doesn't seem to realize that the only difference between youngsters in Hollywood and those in other parts of the country is that the latter don't get hyped-up publicity, and their lives are not bared in daily print. The public, too, cannot seem to realize that a nineteen-year-old Hollywood girl can have perfectly normal desires, normal intelligence and a normal education. (As a matter of fact, Lana's formal education stopped when she was sixteen, at which point she entered pictures.)

She is just as naïve in her way as the cute college sophomore next door and, despite the suddenness of her ill-fated elopement, she faced the future with wide-eyed openness and determination to make a go of it.

That February night this year when Artie and Lana dated for the first time, the two drove to the beach. The details of the drive have never been fully bared, other than that it wound up in an air jaunt to Las Vegas. But Shaw's friends will tell you of the wonderful line he casts. That night he was evidently in rare form. He gave forth first with the "I'm sick of it all" routine. This was followed by the "futility of it all" barrage, then "the chaos of the world," "the desire for the tranquillity of a home and family."

AS Artie kept spouting, Lana kept lapping it up. To a romantic youngster who—believe it or not—didn't know her own drawing power in the world of men, marriage and children as outlined by Shaw sounded intriguing. When finally he suggested marriage, and she agreed, Shaw almost collapsed! At the airport he was stunned by her continued willingness to become his wife. He could hardly believe it even when she told the justice of the peace that she accepted him as her lawfully-wedded husband. If the public was surprised at the newspaper headlines, you can be sure that those same headlines were a double jolt to Shaw!

The subsequent newspaper publicity was terrific! The morning following the marriage, the Hollywood Reporter, carrying the "angle" follow-up, said:

> "Speculation on why Lana Turner suddenly upped and did it is still the topic of the day—but that's Hollywood as the whole stunt goes to show. Dailies missed the gun completely on the inside yarn. Monday was Lana's mother's birthday, which they celebrated at dinner alone, after which she joined Artie Shaw, too late to catch the opening of "The Man Who Came To Dinner," which is why seats "Left Center K 1 and 3" were empty. Lana and Shaw then went for a drive, it being their first date since his return, and along about three ayem, after he'd given her a spiel about a home and family, they decided to be married immediately. On returning to town yesterday, they sought refuge from reporters, studio press agents and photogs at Bellows and Company, (wine merchants on Wilshire Boulevard) where Edgar Selwyn's nephew, Billy, is an associate. Billy hid them in the "tasting room," called Billy Seymour and got 'em a wedding ring, and the four then had a champagne breakfast. Then, to duck reporters, the couple sneaked off to Edgar Selwyn's home, where they slept until six yesterday evening."

FROM there Lana went to Artie's Benedict Canyon home and an entirely new life. No matter what anyone says, when Lana entered that house for the first time, she was in love with Shaw. Once inside the mansion, she came face to face with a stranger, and she directed all her efforts toward understanding and pleasing him. She learned how to run his home smoothly. She did the things a maid would more properly have been called upon to do, and did them cheerfully and whole-heartedly.

She soon became aware of the fact, however, that Shaw did not live up to their romantic elopement. Here was a man of temperament and moods such as she'd never known. Because she loved him, she did her very best to unravel the mystery that kept enveloping her. She tried to conform to his way of life, although it meant changing completely from her previous self.

Shaw hated night clubs. He hated dancing. He disliked crowds. His greatest amusement consisted of having his musician friends to his home, where they'd talk about subjects completely foreign to Lana. She pretended an interest, but in her unfamiliarity with "their world" she was continually embarrassed by Shaw, who tossed her "ignorance" in her face whether friends were present or not. He also taunted her for her comparative lack of education. In trying to "lift" her intellectually, he tossed education at her in bulk, giving her books to read that would have been a strain on college professors. These heavy psychological abuses did much to bring about the breakdown which sent her to the Santa Monica hospital with nervous exhaustion. It is said, however, that during her hospital siege, she was permitted to read some of the more popular magazines.

On their infrequent trips to night clubs, he'd never ask her to dance. Here was a girl longing for a whirl, and he'd sit tight

Solution to Puzzle on Page 14

	C	L	A	R	K		M	O	T	I	F		S	T	A	C	K
W	H	A	L	E	N		O	H	A	R	A		T	Y	R	O	N	E
H	A	R	P		A	P	R		N	O	R	M	A		A	L	E	S
E	R	A		S	P	R	I	N	G		R	A	N	D		O	A	K
A	L	I	C	E		O	S	A		P	E	T		L	I	N	D	A
T	E	N	U	R	E		O	N	E	I	L		M	O	R	N	E	R
	S	E	T		A	N	N	A	B	E	L	L	A		E	A	R
			T	R	I						E	L	A
C	A	R	R	O	L	L						W	A	L	L	A	C	E
U	R	I	E	L									L	O	D	E	R
P	E	N	D	E	N	T						F	R	A	N	C	E	S
			R	A	Y						E	E	N
	F	E	B		G	R	A	N	V	I	L	L	E		E	W	E
A	R	L	I	S	S		D	I	A	N	A		D	E	V	I	N	E
R	E	E	D	S		T	O	T		T	N	T		V	E	L	D	T
I	D	A		E	M	I	L		B	O	N	I	T	A		L	O	U
E	D	N	A		I	M	P	L	Y		E	T	A		G	I	R	D
L	I	O	N	E	L		H	I	R	E	R		P	L	E	A	S	E
		E	R	N	E	S		E	D	D	A	S		S	O	M	M	E

AVOID H·H· HOUSEHOLD HANDS!

...get acquainted with this easier way to have

SOFT, SMOOTH HANDS

BARRINGTON is a dainty cream, unusually delicate, delightful to use, made especially for keeping hands softer, smoother, whiter than ever before. Use it—daily—regularly—and you may be amazed at their noticeably quick improvement. Don't be embarrassed by red, rough hands any longer. Buy a jar of Barrington Hand Cream and enjoy hand comfort.

Sold in most 5c to $1.00 stores. Now available in 10c, 25c and 39c jars.

North American Dye Corporation
Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Barrington HAND CREAM

A NADCO QUALITY PRODUCT

YOU'LL ALWAYS BE CONSTIPATED UNLESS—

You correct faulty living habits—unless liver bile flows freely every day into your intestines to help digest fatty foods. SO USE COMMON SENSE! Drink more water, eat more fruit and vegetables. And if assistance is needed, take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They not only assure gentle yet thorough bowel movements but ALSO stimulate liver bile to help digest fatty foods and tone up intestinal muscular action.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! Used successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards in treating patients for constipation and sluggish liver bile. Test their goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢ and 60¢.

SKIN CLEAR and Exquisitely LOVELY

DR. C. H. BERRY'S FRECKLE OINTMENT—used for 40 years for freckles. $1.25 & 65c at drug and Dept. Stores. For FREE sample, address KREMOLA, Dept. M-4, 2975 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

U.S. GOVERNMENT JOBS

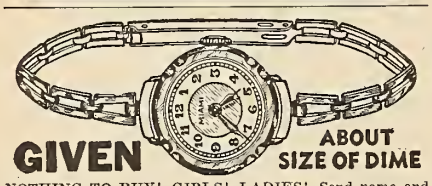
START $1260 TO $2100 YEAR

Men—Women

Get ready now for 1941 Examinations.

Mail Coupon today sure

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE,
Dept. K257, Rochester, N. Y.



Sirs: Rush without charge (1) 32-page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.

COUPON

Name .....

Address .....

GIVEN ABOUT SIZE OF DIME

NOTHING TO BUY! GIRLS! LADIES! Send name and Address. Charming Watch or Big Cash Commission. Send No Money. Given for SIMPLY GIVING AWAY FREE Big Colored Pictures with our well known White Cloverine Salve, used for burns, chaps, sores, easily sold to friends at 25c a box (with pictures FREE) and remitting per catalog. SPECIAL: Choice of 20 gifts for returning only $3. Be first, 44th year. Write today for order of Salve and Pictures, postage paid.
WILSON CHEM. CO., Inc., Dept. 10-19, TYRONE, PA.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

NEURITIS

Relieve Pain In Few Minutes

To relieve the torturing pain of Neuritis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, or Lumbago in few minutes, get NURITO, the fine formula, used by thousands. No opiates. Does the work quickly — must relieve cruel pain to your satisfaction in a few minutes or your money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for trustworthy NURITO on this guarantee.

CORNS?

Try This NEW Amazingly Quick Relief!

Relieves pain faster; prevents shoe friction and pressure; keeps you FREE of corns. 630% softer than before. Separate Medications included for removing corns. Cost but a trifle. Sold everywhere.

NEW Super-Soft

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

hour after hour in conversation with friends. All evening long Lana would peer enviously toward the dance floor where her old friends were having a whale of a time. Shaw never allowed her to attend her own previews or give any autographs. Deep in her heart, Lana liked Clyde McCoy's music. That, to Shaw, was sacrilege! When she asked to go to Lombardo's opening at the Grove—wow!

When they were home alone in the evening, Artie would bury himself in a book. She, returning from a hard day's work at the studio and longing for companionship, would run into a stone wall of morose silence, when for hours on end Shaw would offer punctual yawns as fragments of conversation.

He was jealous of any attentions showered on her. Even Lana's personal maid drew his wrath because she paid more attention to Lana than she did to him. When his manservant began to follow suit, Shaw was furious!

He cut off all her friends with the result that it was all Lana could do to eke out a jovial "hello" as she passed her former companions on the street and in restaurants. Shaw's friends, on the other hand, were all-important. He'd bring them to his home for jam-sessions and gabfests that would last until early morning. Lana was expected to sit around at Artie's beck and call, despite six A. M. studio calls. He'd order her around as one would a servant. "Turn on the radio," "mix a couple of drinks for the boys," and so on and on—and all these things she'd do. Half the time she didn't know what they were talking about, the other half she was too tired to care. To Shaw and his friends, four bars of Bobby Hackett meant more than Hitler walking into Paris. There's no telling what eight bars meant.

Although Lana admired his talents, Shaw would rarely offer to play his clarinet for her. He felt she couldn't appreciate it or didn't have the proper capacity to understand it, as did his friends.

When she still had a week of retakes to do on "Two Girls On Broadway," Shaw suddenly decided they ought to go to New York and to hell with the retakes. The studio had an awful time with him but finally won out. He did take her to New York later to show her to his buddies there.

He wanted her to break her film contract to go on a personal appearance tour with him. Fortunately, her advisers jumped in and nixed that idea promptly.

During their marriage, Lana's mother, who'd always been closest to her, saw little of her daughter. Shaw didn't make his home inviting to a mother-in-law and, with a mother's understanding, Mrs. Turner made no effort to dissuade Lana from her decision to keep on and make a go of the ill-fated marriage. Mothers can take a lesson from Mrs. Turner. She felt the couple's problems could best be worked out by themselves, and she never interfered. Lana would see her privately away from Artie's home, but pride prevented the girl from admitting even to her mother what was going on.

It was during these infrequent meetings with her mother—when the kid was choked with all these pent-up emotions—that Lana would leave her with, "Don't forget, Mummy, I love you very much, no matter what happens."

Lana shared her misery and troubles with no one and, as one hurt after another continued to pile up, she finally upped and left him. There was no scene. She simply told him she was going, and she went!

The fact that she left him, that the marriage was over, didn't mean a thing to Shaw. His friends will tell you that he carries no torch, is not in the least perturbed about anything that occurred. At press time, he was running around town with a new girl, Frances Neal, who was formerly Artie's friend's girl.

The studio shipped Lana off to Honolulu immediately after the break to forget. The trip helped assuage the pain a little, but she's still hurt.

When Lana returned from Honolulu, she was kept under close surveillance by her studio and agent. The latter saw to it that she went on no dates but those he approved of at the time.

But it's open season for dates with Lana Turner now. At this writing, she's hitting the town with Vic Mature and enjoying it. The studio is happy about her revived energy. They're not worried about her being burned again.

Pals from way back in New York, Franchot Tone and Sylvia Sidney reminisce on one of their weekly dates during Sylvia's temporary stay in Hollywood.

INFORMATION DESK

(Continued from page 8)

"four hundred" actually are. Myrna Loy is 35; Fred MacMurray, 32; Don Ameche, 30; Priscilla Lane, 23; sister Rosemary, 24; Brenda Joyce, 24; Olivia de Havilland, 24; Joan Crawford, 32; Barbara Stanwyck, 33; and Loretta Young, 27. We couldn't find any star who's birthday coincides exactly with yours (October 30 must have been reserved especially for you), but Fanny Brice and Douglass Montgomery come under the same astrological sign. Both were born on October 29.

Blanche Townsley, El Paso, Texas. Frances Dee is one of the few stars who was born right in the shadow of the cinema factories. Los Angeles is her home town and she'll be 33 on November 26. When she was seven, the family moved to Chicago where she was educated right through to a B. A. at the University of Chicago. While spending a summer vacation in Hollywood, she became so interested in "extra" work that she stayed on and eventually landed the lead opposite Maurice Chevalier in "Playboy of Paris." Frances is taking time out from looking after hubby Joel McCrea and their two lively children to make one of her rare pictures—United Artists' "Flotsam."

Charles Clark, Superior, Wis. The rumor that a little blonde usurper will take Shirley Temple's place on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot is just one of those whisperings. Joe Pasternak, Deanna Durbin's fairy godfather, will probably produce Shirley's next picture. Yes, it's true that Sonja Henie's contract with Twentieth Century-Fox is up.

Jeanette Syverlsen, Chicago, Ill. Louis Hayward's career has been an unusual one right from that nineteenth of March in 1909 when he was born in Johannesburg, South Africa, the son of a gold mining engineer. After a sound education in French and English schools, Louis turned down a position in his uncle's London brokerage to enroll in an English dramatic academy. In order to obtain actual stage experience, Louis bought an interest in an impoverished little stock company which withstood the rigors of financial malnutrition just long enough for the young man to get his chance. Talent scouts saw his excellent performance in the Lunt's "Point Valaine"—and that's the story of how Louis Hayward came to Hollywood.

YIPPEE, FANS!

At last we have it for you—that biographical chart of your favorite "westerns" that you've been begging for! Imagine having at your fingertips the real names, birthplaces, birthdates, heights, weights, how they got their start and studio addresses of over sixty of those rough-riding heroes, leering villains and wide-eyed heroines of your pet "horse operies!" Made up in a most attractive form, it will make your album proud as anything. Just send five cents in coin or stamps with the coupon below and your chart is as good as lassoed!

Information Desk, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York City
I am enclosing five cents in stamps or coin for which kindly send me your chart of the Western Stars.
Name.....
Street.....
City..... State.....
Please print name and address plainly

CONFIDENTIALLY YOURS

(Continued from page 35)

sitting in a chair. She's either flat on the floor on her tummy or in bed. She always studies her scripts in bed. She likes popular novels, but plans this year to have her teacher make her a list of the classics she should read—and she'll read 'em! She doesn't like murder mysteries, as she's afraid they'll give her nightmares. She's beginning to collect books. "I want to have my own library," she declares, "with my own book-plate in every book so that I'll be known as 'well-read' and as 'Linda Darnell, Bibliophile.'" Being one of those people who have to have their sleep, and plenty of it, Linda always goes to bed at ten o'clock (except when she has dates and then she has to be home by twelve). "And how I love to sleep, just love it!"

Collecting records is her other hobby. She indulges in what she calls "record binges" and often goes to Bob Shaw's house (Bob has an enormous library of records) for an evening of "discing."

When she first came to Hollywood, her salary was said to be $150 a week. The latest report is that it's been raised to $450. When she made her trip to New York less than a year ago, the studio did something it has never done before and (mark this well, girls) will probably never do again. It bought her $3000 worth of clothes! For free! Which serves to indicate what they think of Linda!

She drives a modest little car, a Pontiac Six, and lives in a $50 a month, rented house. According to Linda, there's no foreign car, no caviar, no champagne, no swimming pool and no projection machines in her life just yet. She would, she says, "rather build up to that gradually." She believes, "The way things are at home helps to keep my feet on the ground. Coming home to a little house in a not-too-elegant neighborhood is just what I need." Linda has her own room, furnished in blonde wood, with soft blue for drapes. She likes "a sleepy-colored room" to sleep in. The children, Calvin Jr., and Monte, aged about eleven and twelve, have another of the bedrooms, and Mrs. Darnell has the third. They keep no servant but a Japanese woman who comes in three days a week to do the laundry and cleaning. Linda's mother gets the dinner every night and the children help with the dishes. Linda loathes servants.

Help Restore Natural Throat Moisture with Pertussin

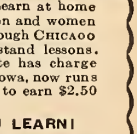
Have you noticed how a cough due to a cold gets worse when you're in hot, dry rooms?

Pertussin combats this dry-air irritation. It stimulates the tiny moisture glands of the throat, helping them pour out their soothing natural moisture. Then you can easily raise that sticky phlegm—and your cough is quickly relieved!

Prescribed by many physicians for over 30 years. Safe for babies. Ask for Pertussin!

A scientific formula based on the therapeutic properties of Thyme.

CONSTIPATION



NEEDS ATTENTION IN YOUNG AND OLD

Even "temporary" constipation is nothing to trifle with. Why delay when Stuart's Laxative Compound helps bring such quick welcome relief without bad after-effects? Stuart's is wonderful for all ages—really works safely for adults, yet gentle enough for children. Dosage can be reduced as it helps "regularize." To feel bright, keep bowels right. Try Stuart's Laxative Compound right away for its safe, gentle results. At all drug stores 25c and 60c under maker's money-back guarantee. For free sample write F. A. Stuart Co., Dept. 2, Marshall, Mich.

Marvel WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women
At Drug Counters Throughout the World
Free Booklet—The Marvel Co., Dept. 415, New Haven, Conn.

Earn $25 a week

AS A TRAINED PRACTICAL NURSE!

Practical nurses are always needed! Learn at home in your spare time as thousands of men and women—18 to 60 years of age—have done through CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING. Easy-to-understand lessons, endorsed by physicians. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Nurse Cromer, of Iowa, now runs her own nursing home. Others prefer to earn $2.50 to $5.00 a day in private practice.

YOU CAN EARN WHILE YOU LEARN!

Mrs. B. C., of Texas, earned $474.25 while taking course. Mrs. S. E. P. started on her first case after her 7th lesson; in 14 months she earned $1900! You, too, can earn good money, make new friends. High school not necessary. Equipment included. Easy payments. 41st year. Send coupon now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 2312, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name_____ Age_____
City_____ State_____

New POWDER BASE . . . for Lasting Loveliness

1. Holds powder on for hours.
2. Banishes nose shine.
3. Hides minor blemishes.
4. Easy to apply . . . easy to remove.
5. A greaseless, non-caking liquid . . . in 4 skin tones.

Choose your most flattering shade today!

MINER'S Liquid MAKE-UP

50¢ at cosmetic counters; trial size at 10¢ stores

FREE Generous Sample

Good Housekeeping Bureau

Send coupon and 3¢ stamp

PEACH . . . .☐
RACHELLE .☐
BRUNETTE .☐
SUNTAN . . .☐

MINER'S 12 E. 12th St., Dept. M22, New York, N.Y.
I enclose 3¢ stamp to cover mailing cost. Send me generous sample of Miner's Liquid Make-up FREE!
Name
Address

NOW YOU'LL LIKE YEAST

IF you are one of the millions who know what Fleischmann's Yeast can do for you, but never stayed with it long enough to get its full benefit, you'll now find it easy to take this new pleasant way. Mash a cake of Fleischmann's Fresh Yeast in dry glass with fork. Add ¼ glass cool milk or plain tomato juice or water. Stir till yeast is fully blended. Fill with liquid, stir and drink.

Remember, for daily use, Fleischmann's Yeast is one of the richest of all common foods in the amazing vitamin B complex. Drink it last thing at night . . . first thing in the morning.

Copyright, 1940, Standard Brands Incorporated

Before and After

Read this new book about Facial Reconstruction. Tells how easy it is for noses to be re-shaped—protruding ears, thick lips, wrinkles and pouches corrected. Plastic Science explained. Elaborate illustrations.

160 Pages. Only 25c—mail coin or stamp to—Glennville Publishers, 507 5th Avenue (Dept. BE), N.Y.C.

BECOME AN EXPERT

ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $2,000 to $10,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. About 20,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U. S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C. P. A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C. P. A.'s, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession That Pays."

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 12318-H, Chicago
A Correspondence Institution

ITCH STOPPED QUICKLY

Use D.D.D. Prescription

Quick relief from itching of eczema, rashes and other externally caused skin troubles

35c bottle, at druggists, proves it or money back

LOOK AT THIS AMAZING WATCH and RING OFFER

LEATHER OR LINK BRACELET

Smart Jeweled Accurate

One Year TO PAY IN FULL

Choice of ELGIN WALTHAM ILLINOIS Movement

LATEST styled 1941 ring. 1/20 14K Rolled Gold Plate shank. Genuine Sterling Silver top, set with ½K. 50 point, Simulated Diamond and six brilliants

SEND NO MONEY WITH ORDER

YOUR CHOICE of Jeweled Elgin, Waltham or Illinois wrist watch. New styled size 0 case. Reconstructed movement. Accuracy guaranteed. Given with every Simulated Diamond ring when ordered and paid for on our purchase privilege plan. Payments: $3.50 down, within 20 days after arrival, at your post office. Balance of $3.50 anytime within a year (total only $7.00). Remember, the cost of watch is included in price of the ring. Extra surprise free gift enclosed for promptness. Send NO money with order. Just rush name, address, ring size. It comes by return mail in special gift box, postpaid.

A. HAMILTON JEWELERS
Topeka, Kansas Dept. MM-120

Linda loves to drive; she just gets in her car and whips off to the beach or into the hills all by herself. She always drives for a while after work, because it relaxes her completely.

She has no use for anyone who "puts on an act" and believes that naturalness is the most important quality a girl can have if she's hoping for a break in pictures. "Because," she reasons wisely, "they're always looking for new people and new faces, not copies of old ones. And so I think it's a great mistake to try to act like Alice Faye or Norma Shearer or anyone but your own self."

She has had crushes, has thought she was in love, but Linda knows she never has been, really. She's heard the "you're too young, you don't know what you're talking about" line so often that now she believes it. She takes advice. Naïvely, but very earnestly, she'll tell you, "Mother knows best. Why shouldn't I do as she says?"

The nicest compliment she ever had, in her opinion, was paid her when she was making her trip to New York. An old gentleman on the train told her, "You are the most wholesome young girl I have ever seen." It was the word "wholesome" that pleased her. Linda dislikes cheap words, words used often and carelessly. She prefers praise from older people "because then it's so real."

Linda speaks wistfully of a pre-Hollywood romance, the lad in question being a Spanish refugee from Barcelona whom she hasn't seen for several months. She believes he may be in Mexico but she is "still carrying the torch for him." He is "the sweetest boy I know and he comes closest to the 'real thing' in my life."

Mrs. Darnell insists that Linda has no idea how beautiful she is. "I'll tell her something nice someone has said about her looks, and she'll answer, 'Oh, Mama, don't believe all that stuff you hear.'"

She had a crush on Don Ameche and on Tyrone Power before she came to Hollywood. She "fell in love" with Don Ameche when she heard him in the "First Nighter" broadcasts. When she saw him on the screen, "I was so excited I nearly died!" Part of this fairy tale of being in Hollywood is that she happened to get into the very same studio with Don and Tyrone!

Of an economical disposition, Linda doesn't have to be given a stated allowance. Part of her money goes into a trust fund, some into a savings account and the balance into a checking account. She is equally frugal with her temper. She saves it and saves it, goes along calmly for months and then, for some trivial reason, she "blows all to pieces." She likes to surprise people with gifts. Never gives them on the usually prescribed occasions but just when the spirit moves her. She always sits with her hands loosely linked, either in her lap or on a table. She looks you squarely in the eye when she speaks.

Her mother makes her go out with the same four boys all the time, Louis Blau, a young attorney, Alan Gordon, Frank Swann and Bob Shaw. Lots of "playboys" call her up, her mother says, "but they don't get past me!" Mrs. Darnell's formula for Linda's dates is that they must be "nice, young men" and she does a thorough character-analysis before Linda may have any dates with them.

Even with the four who have been "passed by the Board of Censors," Mrs. Darnell makes her rotate her dates so that by the time she goes out with the first boy again, there has been such a lapse that the columnists can't attach any romance to her. Linda often turns down a date for Saturday afternoon or Sunday in order to take the kids to the beach.

Her favorite color is red, not a brilliant red, but an exotic, sub-shade red. She always turns to the "funnies" first when she reads the papers. She doesn't smoke and never takes a cocktail. She doesn't admire sophistication "until a girl is thirty-ish," so doesn't try to acquire it. Among "a million pet hates" which she claims to have, the "hatingest" is pictures that hang slightly askew on the wall.

"I'll never marry an actor!" is young Linda's slogan. Her mother insists it is one she'll never go back on. When she reads of a divorce among movie people she always says, "One of those Hollywood marriages—nothing like that for me!" A good, steady husband is what she wants, with a home founded on rock, not on glamour and headlines. There will be children, lots of them, and emotional as well as financial security. She hates men who "leer" and "ogle" and thinks women who "flirt shamelessly" are just as bad. All of "that kind of cheap fun," she says, "is making light of something sacred."

Like any normal girl, she is "simply mad about clothes" and, when she sees something she likes in a shop window, she "just has fits" until she gets it. Once a year she conducts a general housecleaning in her own room, accompanied by a perfect orgy of straightening out closets and bureau drawers. At this time she sternly admonishes her mother to be sure that all her gloves are kept in this compartment, all her scarfs in that one, et cetera. By nightfall, laughs Mrs. Darnell, the usual wild disorder again prevails! Incredibly enough, Linda is fanatically and spotlessly neat in her dress. Her mother says she sends things to the dry cleaners "that aren't even out of breath!"

When she does go out with her "nice, young men," she likes especially to bowl, to attend the theatre, and to go dancing at Ciro's or at the Beverly-Wilshire. She has dates "for fun and to relax, but they mean absolutely nothing more than that."

Her food preferences run to Spanish and Italian dishes which her mother cooks to perfection. Also barbecued meats, cooked over hickory wood or in a barbecue like the one which her father made at home. Her dancing lessons as a child, she feels, were the most valuable preparation she made toward her career, because "dancing gives you so much poise." Although she studied ballet dancing, she never wanted to be anything but what she is. Single-minded in her purpose, Linda never went off on tangents, thinking she would be a trained nurse, a buyer, an aviatrix, etc.

Making a person-to-person canvas of various people who know Linda—Tyrone Power, Pev Marley, Director Walter Lang, Director Henry King, Henry Fonda, John Carradine, Dean Jagger, John Payne, Jane Darwell, Elsa Maxwell and Mary Astor—I asked them this one question: "Confidentially, has Linda Darnell any faults?" The answers, unanimous and monosyllabic, were, "None!"

(Continued from page 17)

unforgettable characterization of the Judge.

As the film starts, Gary Cooper is being led into a small, rough town in Texas charged with stealing horses. He doesn't get a chance to defend himself, and it looks like curtains until he tricks the Judge in a very amusing manner to gain his freedom. Gary's about to leave town when he bumps into Doris Davenport, who tells him what a tough time decent citizens are having in the vicinity because of Brennan's nefarious activities. Yes, you're right. He stays and cleans up the mess.

Now all this is pretty routine, of course, and you've seen it a dozen times, at least. But what makes it outstanding and different is Brennan's portrayal of a cantankerous, cruel and eccentric gent with real color.

He could have been just a mean old buzzard, but then you would have had just a cowboy picture. As played by Brennan (and as written, of course) he is a live human being, who vitalizes the whole film and changes all the actors from puppets to real persons.

Gary is still a honey of a performer in his own right and, as usual, he makes a terrific impression as the good badman, but no matter how well he handled his part it would still be another performance of a familiar role.

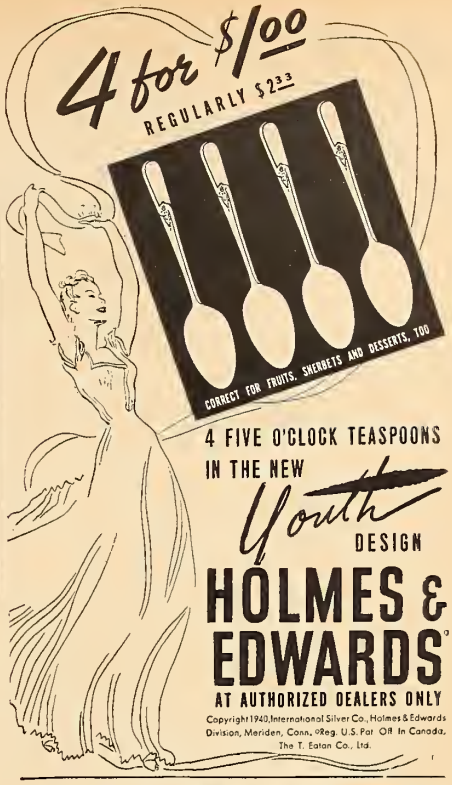
There are a number of other good bits of acting, for Fred Stone and Doris Davenport (a delectable dish if ever we saw one), are both outstanding in supporting roles. Directed by William Wyler.—Samuel Goldwyn-United Artists Release.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Based on historical fact, this film was originally entitled "Vinegaroon" after the name of the town in which the story is laid . . . There actually was a Judge Roy Bean, played here by Walter Brennan. In the film, one of the big moments is when he meets Lily Langtry, just before he dies; actually, he died two years before the Jersey Lily visited Vinegaroon . . . All the outdoor scenes were made in Goldwyn City in a location community set up near Tuscon, Arizona . . . During the making of the film, Gary Cooper was laid up with water on the knee, sustained in a fall immediately after a fight scene with Forrest Tucker . . . While the 250 members of the cast were at Goldwyn City, "the daily rushes" were sent by air mail to be passed on by Samuel Goldwyn, who then gave his opinion to Director Wyler by telephone . . . This is the first important part handled by Doris Davenport; some years ago she had a very small bit in an Eddie Cantor musical, but couldn't get started in films. She changed her name to Dorothy Jordan and went to New York, where a talent scout saw her and signed her again for Goldwyn, the only stipulation being that she change her name back to the original . . . As a result of the interest in this film, Texas has made a shrine to Judge Roy Bean, consisting of his former bar and court, which were two ends of the same room.

★★★ No Time for Comedy

One of the strangest anomalies about Hollywood is that no one out here has ever discovered that just because a play is good on Broadway it does not necessarily follow that it will be good on the screen. This is a case in point. It was a successful play, and it's not a bad movie, but you won't paste the program in your scrapbook to look fondly at and reminisce about in years to come.

Maybe the trouble is that every possible backstage formula has been used up. In spite of the fact that this is from Broadway and has a high-brow background, it is still, essentially, another backstage story. And kind of corny.



Jimmy Stewart is a playwright and is married to Rosalind Russell, who is an actress and stars in all his comedies. Everything is fine until Jimmy meets Genevieve Tobin, who is a rich lady with "ideas," and she convinces Jimmy that he ought to try writing a play with "meaning" and "importance." Yeah, he does. It flops and he comes back to Roz a wiser and saner playwright.

Roz and Jimmy are swell troupers, of course, and they make an interesting romantic combination, but both of them are miscast. Roz is a terrific comedienne, but is forced to play a beautiful glamour girl (albeit with brains) here. It's good, but it's not our Roz. And Jimmy as the egotistic, cocksure young playwright is okay, but not our Jimmy.

And wait until a certain section of our United States sees the way Louise Beavers acts in the parlor! You can't do it, pals, you just can't.

Isn't there anything really good, without reservations, that we can say about anyone in this picture? Sure. Allyn Joslyn does a peach of a hunk of acting; he deserves a break. Genevieve Tobin is swell in a new kind of characterization that ought to take her places. And Charlie Ruggles—oh, dear, he's miscast, too. Directed by William Keighley.—Warner Brothers.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Jimmy and Roz both had birthdays during the filming of "No Time for Comedy," and gave parties for each other on the set. Bette Davis, close friend (!) of Rosalind's, sent her a huge wreath, decorated with highly spiced vegetables . . . Charlie Ruggles collects pipes and has over 260, some dating from the 16th century . . . Genevieve Tobin collects lipsticks, has specimens from 47 different countries . . . Roz wears moccasins whenever she can on stage; has over thirty pairs in a variety of colors . . . Jimmy Stewart receives hundreds of letters daily giving him advice on how to gain weight (as if he wants to!) . . . Allyn Joslyn laughed so loud during the filming of a humorous scene he was ousted from the set.

Help Kidneys If Back Aches

Do you feel older than you are or suffer from Getting Up Nights, Backache, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Dizziness, Swollen Ankles, Rheumatic Pains, Burning, scanty or frequent passages? If so, remember that your kidneys are vital to your health and that these symptoms may be due to non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles—in such cases CYSTEX (a physician's prescription) usually gives prompt and joyous relief by helping the Kidneys flush out poisonous excess acids and wastes. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose in trying Cystex. An iron-clad guarantee wrapped around each package assures a refund of your money on return of empty package unless fully satisfied. Don't take chances on any Kidney medicine that is not guaranteed. Don't delay. Get Cystex. (Siss-tex) from your druggist today. Only 35c. The guarantee protects you.

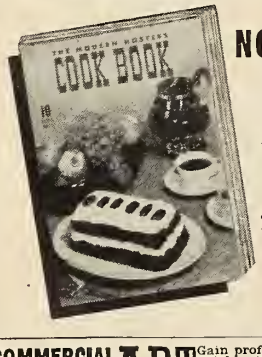
Cystex Helps Flush Kidneys

RECIPE FOR ROMANCE!
SEND FOR FREE SAMPLE
Write Sayman, Dept. 12-C, St. Louis, Mo.

No man can resist a clear, fresh complexion! Help yourself to beauty and happiness with the pure cleansing lather of Sayman's Soap!

FREE CLUB PIN & RING CATALOG
PINS 30¢ up—RINGS $1.50
Quality made . . . silver, gold plated, etc. Our new book shows over 300 handsome, smart, up-to-the-minute designs by Bastian craftsmen . . . oldest, largest makers. Write for your Free copy today!
BASTIAN BROS. Dept. 52, Rochester, N. Y.

WRAP cotton around the end of an orangewood stick. Saturate with Trimal and apply to cuticle. Watch dead cuticle soften. Wipe it away with a towel. You will be amazed at the results. On sale at all cosmetic counters. Trimal Labs., Inc., Los Angeles.



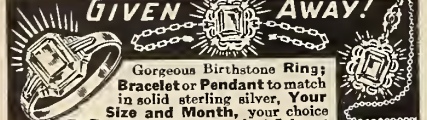
REAL HELP WITH YOUR COOKING PROBLEMS

Delicious, well-bolonced wholesome meols thot leove the whole fomily sotisfied ond hoppy ore not difficult to prepore. The New Modern Hostess COOK BOOK, edited by your own Morjorie Deen, will help you to moke oll your meols completely successful. More thon just o collection of recipes, this convenient Cook Book offers you:

- NEW DISHES to inspire you, to pleose everyone . . .
- FOOD COMBINATIONS thot ore interesting, unusuol, procticol . . .
- STAND-BYS—those fomilior bosic recipes everyone wonts . . .
- BUYING GUIDE to help you in your morketing selection . . .
- MENUS to oct os o storting point in plonning better meols . . .
- IDEAS for porty ond speciol occosion dishes . . .
- HINTS to moke food preporotion eosier, foster.

All recipes—carefully planned and compiled by experts—are thoroughly home-tested by housewives like yourself. Directions are easy to understand and follow, with the ingredients clearly listed in order of use. It's the biggest value ever offered in a cook book—don't fail to get your copy!

MODERN HOSTESS
COOK BOOK



NOW ON SALE at your favorite dealer or 10c store

ONLY 10¢

LEARN COMMERCIAL ART This is age of color and beauty—a golden era for illustrators and designers. Turn your drawing talent into money! Become a Professional Artist! Gain professional skill quickly in spare time at home. Send for free booklet and full details. Amateurs, here's your chance! Write SCHOOL OF APPLIED ART Dept. 890 10 E. Huron St., Chicago, Ill.

GIVEN AWAY!

Gorgeous Birthstone Ring; Bracelet or Pendant to match in solid sterling silver, Your Size and Month, your choice FOR selling 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25c each. Order 4 salve and new catalog. Send No Money. ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., BOX 34, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND.

Did "Diamond Jim" Have Stomach or Ulcer Pains?

It is hardly likely that Diamond Jim Brady could have eaten so voraciously if he suffered after-eating pains. Sufferers who have to pay the penalty of stomach or ulcer pains, indigestion, gas pains, heartburn, burning sensation, bloat and other conditions caused by excess acid should try a 25c box of Udga Tablets. They must help or money refunded. At drug stores everywhere.

Joslyn collects funny hats, wears a different one to the studio every day.

★★★ Hired Wife

There's an old gag in Hollywood to the effect that the story's the thing, but, if nobody's looking, the truth is it's all a lot of humbug. And this picture proves it. It has one of the silliest stories you ever heard tell. But it's an A-1 movie, nevertheless.

"What is it about?" you ask. Well, it seems that Rosalind—is there a better comedienne in films?—is Brian Aherne's secretary, and like all good secretaries (especially in the movies) she's in love with her boss. But like all bosses he's blind as a bat and doesn't realize this. He is in love with a blonde and beautiful model who, like all models, is really just a gold-digger. Now, Robert Benchley is Aherne's lawyer (and a more improbable lawyer you never even dreamed of) and John Carroll is a pleasant gigolo that Roz uses to lure Brian's blonde siren away from him. And everything ends just too, too perfectly for everybody, as it does in this kind of story.

There's no way of describing the crazy antics or humorous situations, so you'll simply have to accept our simple statement to that effect. It's a roar from start to finish.

Miss Russell is in top form and so is Benchley. Brian Aherne unbends a good deal and is very pleasant in the light comedy role. Virginia Bruce has never looked more desirable and lovely, or acted with more gusto. And this guy John Carroll proves at long last that he is no flash in the pan; he's going places, important places—if he can only get a few more juicy assignments like this one. Directed by William Seiter.—Universal.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Two platina fox furs, each valued at $1,500, were flown from New York for Virginia Bruce to wear in one scene . . . Roz Russell wears a pair of pliable glass shoes, with purse to match, as a costume novelty . . . Miss Russell served cold drinks to everyone on the set during a warm spell . . . She brought a cake of ice into her dressing-room and had an electric fan blow across it . . . Both John Carroll and Virginia Bruce took rhumba lessons every day for a week for one of their scenes . . . Robert Benchley, during the filming of "Hired Wife," happened to mention he was pretty good with a mandolin, back in his college days. Seiter took him up on his boast, had a bit written in which required Benchley to make good his boast.

★★★ Rangers of Fortune

It's a shame this picture doesn't have a better title; it deserves one.

Yep, it's a western, but it's not like any you've seen. There are three rootin', tootin' gents named Fred MacMurray, Albert Dekker and Gilbert Roland who wander around the countryside spreading consternation and confusion wherever they go. They're three lads without conscience and completely devoid of common sense, but they're good natured and—yes, they have hearts of gold. You might call it Robin Hood in triplicate.

It seems there's a small town somewhere in the west which is being victimized by a dastardly group of villains and our three lads clean things up. It's all done tongue in cheek, and there is more emphasis on comedy than action.

MacMurray in spurs, hip boots and toting a couple of six-shooters may strike you as somewhat strange. But partner him with Gilbert as a silver-tongued, twinkle-in-the-eye caballero, add Dekker as a slug-nutty comic (uh huh, the same Dekker who has always been a heavy up to now) and you have a hunk of imaginative casting! Are they successful? So much so that the studio has decided to put all three into a sequel even faster than you can read this.

There are a number of other swell troupers including Patricia Morison, Dick Foran and Joe Schildkraut. But the name you want to learn at this stage of the game is Betty Brewer. She is about 13 years old and a bit o' all right—star-dust if ever we've smelled it. Directed by Sam Wood.—Paramount.

POSTSCRIPTS: Little Betty Brewer was found singing for pennies in front of a Hollywood night club; has had no dramatic traininy . . . Since her work in "Rangers of Fortune" she's been cast by Paramount in the forthcoming "The Roundup," with Preston Foster, Richard Dix and Patricia Morison . . . Locale of film is supposed to be Texas, but is really the Mojave Desert, 100 miles from Hollywood . . . Albert Dekker, who portrays a pug of the '70's, had to trail along behind a covered wagon, shadow boxing. He lost 16 pounds . . . The town itself was constructed within two huge sound stages in Hollywood.

★★★ Argentine Nights

What do you expect from a movie? If it's sense—stay home, don't see this one. If it's fun, well, then, this is your dish.

The billing tells you that this picture stars the Ritz Brothers. What's more important is that the picture introduces the Andrews Sisters. That gives you two trios, to which you may add Constance Moore with an all-gal swing band, a bunch of corny gags and a lot of hot rhythm, which should be anybody's ducat's worth. In fact, it's right down the groove.

Those Andrews gals. They're not much to look at, but when they begin exercising their tonsils—wow! What they can do to swing is nobody's business. It is hot and hotcha. And how!

The story? A bunch of guys named Ritz get mixed up with a bunch of girls named Andrews and a bunch of other girls without any special names, and they all go to South America to play a date in a fancy hotel. But when they get there, there isn't any hotel, and it's our guess at that point somebody up and threw away the script. That doesn't make any sense? Well, neither does the picture. But who cares?

The Ritz Brothers are pretty funny and the Andrews Sisters are very hot. And Connie Moore is an eyeful. There are a half dozen good songs which you'll be hearing on your favorite juke box this winter. Swing it, men! Directed by Albert Rogell.—Universal.

POSTSCRIPTS: This is the Ritz Brothers' first picture since their return from a coast-to-coast personal appearance tour which, incidentally, was a box-office wow . . . They are actually the brothers Joaquin, changed to Ritz because we all know how to pronounce that . . . Brave boys; they used no doubles for the knife throwing scenes, in which they are nailed to a wall by steel blades . . . "The Brooklynonga," which the three boys sing and dance, is a combination of the Brooklyn jitterbug and the conga . . . The Andrews Sisters are the girls whose warbling of "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen," "Well, All Right," "Hold Tight," etc., sell nearly two million records each year . . . Constance Moore was selected as the ideal "American Girl" by five of the nation's most distinguished artists . . . Screen newcomer, George Reeves (other half of the romance) is the boy you may have noticed as one of the Tarleton twins in "Gone With the Wind."

★★★ Christmas in July

About a year ago Preston Sturges got tired of being just a writer, went to Paramount's bosses and told them that he wanted to be a director. First they laughed at him, then they compromised by letting him direct one of his own stories. When "The Great McGinty" was finished, they stopped laughing and assigned him to write and direct another film. This is it, and it's a honey. It has a warm, lovable, human quality which is rare in filmdom. Every one of the characters will remind you of somebody you know, they are all so incredibly true to life.

When you begin analyzing the story you realize there isn't so very much to it. It's really a fantastic sort of modern fairy tale, but all the characters are believable, so you swallow the whole yarn. Sturges has managed to get A-1 honest performances out of Dick Powell and Ellen Drew, so that you're rooting for 'em all the way through.

This is a new Dick Powell, by the way. You've never seen him as good as this. If he can get a few more parts like this one, he will be the most perfect example of "comeback kid" in town. There is none of that pretty-boy phony that held him back some years ago. He's just a guy named Jimmy and it seems like you've known and liked him for years.

Jimmy is a nice kid who dreams a lot and one of his dreams is that he may marry Ellen Drew, who lives in the next tenement and works at the next desk in the office. Another of his dreams is that he will win a big $25,000 slogan contest. He gets both wishes, of course, but via the screwiest set of circumstances imaginable. Totally impossible. Utterly ridiculous. But anyway, it's fun.

There are a lot of acting credits to hand out, but tops go to Dick and Ellen. Miss Drew is more surprising in each film. If she is not an absolute leader among filmdom's stars in another year, it will be astonishing.

Give a quick acting nod to Raymond Walburn, Alexander Carr, William Demarest, Harry Hayden and Julius Tannen. Directed by Preston Sturges.—Paramount.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Ellen Drew was a waitress at Brown's, Hollywood candy shop, when William Demarest discovered her. He was then an agent and he fought for months to get her a break; this is the first film they've acted in together . . . Demarest is an ex-vaudevillian; he tried hard to become an agent but every time he went to a studio to sell actors, they said no to his list but yes to himself . . . Ernest Truex was the first leading man ever employed by Paramount, oldest of the still-going movie companies; 27 years ago he was Mary Pickford's vis-a-vis in "The Good Little Devil" . . . Writer-director Sturges appears in the film, just as a lark. He is the man getting his shoes shined in a short sequence. Dick Powell directed the scene. . . . Midway in the picture Ellen Drew was thrown by a wooden hobby horse and sustained quite an injury . . . The black cat figuring prominently in a number of sequences is Sturges' own pet, Hamlet . . . Julius Tannen, who plays a short character bit, will be recalled by many as one of the glibbest vaudeville comics of a few years ago.

★★½ The Quarterback

Here, kiddies, is a surprise package; a real, pleasant little piece of entertainment. It makes no pretensions; it's just a movie—but you'll enjoy it.

There are two factors involved. In the first place, someone had a swell story idea—a new twist in the old football theme. In the second place, it presents a youngster named Wayne Morris who, while still not a star, is on his way. A few more pictures like this and he'll be one!

Timed perfectly to coincide with the opening of the football season, this is frankly a rah-rah Joe College yarn. But that new twist! Are you all agog with curiosity? Well, Wayne Morris is a studious kid who really wants to learn his lessons, but he can't afford the tuition. His twin brother (Wayne plays both parts) is no great shakes scholastically, but he's admitted to college on his football record. The twins make believe they are really one person, and while one studies and gets all A's, the other plays football and wins all the games. Trouble starts when they both fall in love with Virginia Dale!

The Morris boy will make himself a lot of friends. Virginia Dale is a sort of road company edition of Betty Grable—blonde and cute, but not history-making.

Lillian Cornell is another girl who has almost clicked for a long time—but she doesn't quite make it this time, either. Bill Frawley and Walter Catlett are very funny in supporting roles, and Frank Burke is a kid with a big future. He's a little bit of a shrimp with a very funny map and beautiful delivery. Watch him! Directed by H. Bruce Humberstone.—Paramount.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Wayne Morris went through all sorts of rough tactics for this picture without any cuts or bruises; but wound up in the hospital a week later as the result of an auto crash. . . . Barbara and Bob Pittes, 20-day old twins, make their movie bow here; they worked a total of two hours in the film. . . . Campus scenes were made at U.C.L.A., but the movie makers didn't think it looked like a college, so they plastered phony ivy on most of the lovely buildings before they camera-ed 'em . . . Alan Mowbray was the only actor to get temperamental during filming. He had one long scientific speech to make, so a prop man lettered it on a blackboard for him, to help out; Mowbray was enraged! Seems he's got an infallible memory and doesn't need help in remembering his lines. . . . This is the eighth time William Frawley has played a movie football coach—and his teams have never lost a game! . . . Frank Burke broke into films as a youthful edition of Jimmy Cagney.

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send today for the new, up-to-dote list of Hollywood stors with their correct studio oddresses. It is o convenient size to hondle or keep in o scrop-book. To receive a list, oll you hove to do is write to us ond osk for it, enclosing o lorge, self-oddressed ond stomped envelope. Don't forget that lost item, as no request con be complied with otherwise. Pleose send request to Informotion Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

Beautiful NAILS AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

BROKEN, SHORT —Ugly

LONG, TAPERING —Lovely

DON'T ENVY long, tapering, smart nails — have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU-NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half-moons. Helps check nail-biting habit. Protects fragile nails while they grow strong again. Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores.

Nu-Nails, Dept. 15-N, 462 No. Parkside, Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails

NEW! $1 COSMETIC BRACELET

Gift Boxed

A flick of your finger instantly transforms this unique bracelet into your complete make-up kit! Here 8 cleverly hidden compartments offer you neutral shades of Powder, Rouge, Lipstick; 3 Puffs and 2 Mirrors. Exquisitely designed! Ultra-smart! Assorted colors. $1 postpaid. 9 extra refills 50c. Guaranteed.

HOUSE OF GIFTS, Box 2008-EE, Miami Beach, Fla.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys — and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

Use DERMOIL

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on Psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing true photographic proof of results also FREE.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Generous trial bottle sent FREE to those who send in their Druggist's name and address. Make our famous "One Spot Test" yourself. Write today for your test bottle. Print name plainly. Results may surprise you. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547, Northwestern Station, Dept. 1409, Detroit, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

THE MAN HUNT IS ON!

(Continued from page 29)

George unhitched from Grace Mulrooney?

George Brent: Cinematically perfect, romantically a toughie. Disillusioned, cynical, experienced. Apparently content and happy to romp with Ann Sheridan for the present. Doesn't hand his telephone number around. Never did!

John Carroll: Being groomed for big things cinematically. A success in "Hired Wife." A good film future. Ex-husband of Steffi Duna. Family on the society side. Won't be snagged very easily.

Bob Cummings: Handsome, talented—and married.

Well, those are a few of the typical cases. It gives you some notion of what has been going on. Remember that actors groomed for romantic leads have a fatal tendency to getting married—which upsets all sorts of plans. For one thing, it almost always lessens their box office appeal. Also it makes a romantic build-up by the studios an impossibility.

John Shelton, M-G-M's white hope, is another problem to harried hostesses. They can't even count on him as an occasional fourth for bridge, he's so wrapped up in his career! He studies his tests and his movies; he studies other men's acting technique and is constantly trying to improve himself. He explained recently to a close friend that he didn't think a young actor should ever play around or go to night clubs. He'll be a good catch for some gal as soon as his divorce is final, but he's burning up the town with midnight oil, not a cigarette lighter.

THE case of Bob Sterling, who's being groomed for leads at Twentieth Century-Fox, is typical and to the point. In a candid moment recently he explained that he doesn't earn enough money to take a girl to Ciro's and he doesn't dare take her anywhere else. Well, he and several of his friends have solved the problem—if solution is the word—by going stag to night clubs and cutting in on a dance here and there. But this doesn't help the girls any.

Bob also says that he shies away from the woman question because he doesn't want the town to think that he's trading on any female star's publicity. At the same time, he doesn't want some little nobody using him. If you read in the gossip columns that he was out with anyone, you may be pretty sure that it was on a studio order.

The same is true of George Montgomery. Not so long ago he took Marjorie Weaver to a preview. He'll probably knock my head off for telling you this, but he took her there because the studio ordered him to. And the studio had to lend him the fancy clothes because he simply couldn't afford to buy them.

Notable among the poor but famous youths is Bill Holden. He and Brenda Marshall happen to be in love. Well, Brenda actually offered to pay the expenses when they had to make publicity appearances, because she knew how broke Bill was. But, of course, he would not have any of that.

Remember this. These young fellows who are star material have a lot of pride. They like to pay their own way. In Holden's case, poverty and pride have probably combined into a distinct case of protection. The feminine stars who need gigolos can't get anywhere with him.

Jeffrey Lynn, who after years of minor parts is getting a break, is another case in point. Jeff is a New Englander and very strait-laced. He goes places with Dana Dale now, because she shares his preference for ping-pong and rides in the country. He's been quoted to the effect that he would never be a sucker for the night clubs—just doesn't like them. He's a number one catch for some film gal, but he's not buying orchids or making transatlantic phone calls to any cuties.

Dennis Morgan, who made a triumphant appearance in Los Angeles in the light opera, "The Student Prince," singing the title role, and whom Warners have kept neatly in the shadow ever since, has several handicaps, socially. For one thing, he's married. For another, he's keeping right on with his singing lessons. And that means that he leads a pretty normal life and doesn't do any Errol Flynn-ing hither and yon.

Bill Lundigan and Robert Wilcox are an interesting case. They both started out together at Universal in bit parts. The flashy Bob rose very rapidly to leads, was borrowed by another studio for a picture, fell in love transcontinentally with Joy Hodges, spectacularly and suddenly married Florence Rice, was divorced, and ended in a Beverly Hills jail on suspicion of forgery—which takes him at least temporarily out of circulation.

Lundigan, on the other hand, worked hard for several years at Universal, studying the business of acting, going out quietly with girls, but never with any of the spectacular ones. Eventually he got a Warner contract. He fell in love with Margaret Lindsay, and she has taken him off the available list. Bill goes to a few more night clubs now than he used to, but he has never been the silk hat type. He has always stuck pretty carefully to the limits of his pocketbook.

The hitherto untold story of Orson Welles' incredible year in Hollywood!
Don't miss the January MODERN SCREEN

Victor Mature seems to have switched from Liz Whitney to Lana Turner which definitely takes him off the general market. Hal Roach had a lot of trouble with Vic when he had his first success in "1,000,000 Years B.C." His hats didn't fit him for a while and he began flitting around with various flashy gals. These by-paths held him up, but everything is okay now. However, it looks like he's holding out for the upper crust and no little stock player is going to get much of a break.

Orson Welles, who brought new blood into the old stream of the town, was not around very long before he got snagged by Dolores Del Rio; and he has stayed that way. In spite of the ribbing he has taken, "Citizen Kane" will probably be a smash hit and Hollywood will have one more top-ranking star to sell.

Robert Stack, Universal's socialite white hope, who made good in Metro's "The Mortal Storm," is seriously interested in Mary Beth Hughes. Bob is impatient with the progress he has made in films so far. He wants to get places fast. Actually, of course, he's done very well, considering his newness to the game, and he should be a permanent addition to the professional colony. But it appears that he may marry Mary pretty soon and, consequently, will be off the available bachelor list, socially.

Desi Arnaz, the Cuban dancer who will be a rage when "Too Many Girls" is released, had been in Hollywood barely a week before Lucille Ball snagged him. Professionally, he will undoubtedly be a profitable addition to Hollywood; socially, he is available for marriage but is far too astute to be snapped up hurriedly. Whether he will go the way of Cesar Romero, who has made himself indispensable to many stars and an accessory of none, no one knows, of course. Desi is a little less calculating than Cesar, and he'll probably get married pretty soon.

CESAR ROMERO, perennial playboy, is what Hollywood needs more of, according to the complaints of the stars. He has a position on the screen that is adequate, if not spectacular. He can be trusted as a confidant and called upon at the last minute for a date. He dances divinely, but avoids marriage like the plague.

And Reginald Gardiner can best be described as a British Cesar Romero.

Analytically, and from a professional standpoint, there is good reason for the fact that there is a man shortage in Hollywood. In the first place, it has always been true that fewer men want to be actors than women want to be actresses. A man cannot be prettied up very much before the camera. A romantic lead—and this is where the scarcity is so very pronounced—simply must appear to be worth the heroine's struggles to make him marry her. He must be either handsome or virile.

Another reason is that actors have more individuality and it is harder to find good stories for them. Roz Russell is a steno in "Hired Wife" and an actress in "No Time for Comedy." She can be a lot of different types of heroine. But Spencer Tracy's story material is limited to the general character he has built up in the public's mind.

For many years Bob Montgomery was a smart-aleck wisecracker, and it almost ruined his professional career because he fought so hard to get away from this characterization.

Men get typed faster than women. John Garfield is a good illustration of this. He has been a jailbird in six of his last seven pictures.

In order to be good box office an actor should have a touch of Flynnomania or a Barrymorian flair for the unusual. At the very least, an actor must be willing to live up to the publicity which his studio pins on him. And men are less willing to be made a public fool of than women. They are more likely to be businessmen, less the flaming butterfly.

Gossip, blackmail and scandal hover over the actor, always. In divorces it is noblesse oblige so that he must take the brunt of the accusations. If he socks some annoyer, his publicity is bad. If he gets into an accident, he is accused of being drunk and disorderly.

And so it is really a wonder that any of them come through the box office success. Many thousands are tested—but the fact remains that the Hollywood man market is much below par and any young man from Dubuque, Iowa, or points East, West, North or South who photographs half-way decently can have the town plus all the trimmings.

If he wants it, the sucker.

Printed in the U. S. A. by the Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

DURA-GLOSS

Choose your color by the Fingernail Cap

A secret message to a man's heart—that only your flawlessly groomed fingernails, resplendent in the gem-lustred beauty of Dura-Gloss, so gloriously betray! Yes, those beautiful hands, those excitingly pagan fingernails tell him the thrilling story of your fastidious daintiness! Possess—yourself—these spectacular, these vivid fingernails—with Dura-Gloss, the nail polish that's new, that's different! And be surprised, amazed, to discover that Dura-Gloss—that was created for the most beautiful fingernails in the world—doesn't cost a dollar—just a tiny ten cent piece in every fashion-right color, at cosmetic counters everywhere! Switch your affections to Dura-Gloss—this very day!

The New and Better Nail Polish by LORR

Look for the life-like fingernail bottle cap—colored with the actual polish! No guess-work: you get the color you want!

10¢

FASHION BULLETIN
NEW COLORS
Zombie, Indian Red, Red Wine

Lorr Laboratories
Paterson, N. J.
FOUNDED BY E. T. REYNOLDS

Cut this out (along dotted line) and put in your change-purse to remind yourself.

Luckies' finer tobaccos mean less nicotine!

FORREST LEWIS (above) is an independent tobacco expert. Like most other independent auctioneers, buyers and warehousemen, he smokes Luckies.

These men see with their own eyes that Luckies buy the finer tobaccos.

That's important—for Luckies' finer tobaccos mean less nicotine. Yes, authoritative tests reveal that, for over two years, the nicotine content of Luckies has been 12% less than the average of the four other leading brands—less than any one of them.★

You see, Luckies analyze tobacco samples before buying—so we can pick out leaf that is ripe and mellow yet mild—low in nicotine.

Only Luckies give you such genuine mildness. Try them for a week. Remember—with men who know tobacco best, it's Luckies 2 to 1

Copyright 1940, The American Tobacco Company

★NICOTINE CONTENT OF LEADING BRANDS

From January 1938 through June 1940
Lucky Strike has averaged

9.46% less nicotine than Brand A
20.55% less nicotine than Brand B
15.55% less nicotine than Brand C
4.74% less nicotine than Brand D

For this period Lucky Strike has had an average nicotine content of 2.01 parts per hundred.

Luckies—the smoke tobacco experts smoke

MODERN SCREEN

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

NUARY
10
CENTS

ERIODICAL DIVISIO

SCOOP! A MESSAGE FROM AN ADMIRING FATHER IN TOKYO TO HIS FAMOUS DAUGHTERS, JOAN FONTAINE AND OLIVIA de HAVILLAND

PRISCILLA LANE

FASHION magazine

PRESENTS

The Christmas shopping problem won't stagger you—if you let FASHION'S exciting gift portfolio take the load from your shoulders!

Twelve pages of attractive and reasonably priced gifts for men, women, girls and children.

Also, clothes for holiday parties and winter trips;
special features on Christmas entertaining;
and a number of interesting articles.

FASHION magazine • DECEMBER ISSUE ON SALE NOW • 15¢

HIS EYES SAID:

"YOU'RE MY DREAM COME TRUE!"

UNTIL, ALAS, SHE SMILED!

Don't risk the charm of your own precious smile. Help keep your gums firm, your teeth sparkling with Ipana and Massage.

IN HIS EYES she saw her hopes come true! And her heart beat fast to read his thoughts..."How lovely, how truly lovely you are"!

Her moment of magic!—but then she smiled...and lost! For dull teeth...a lifeless smile... are a poor invitation to love and romance.

YES, IT'S TRAGIC INDEED for a girl to let her beauty be dimmed by a dull and dingy smile! And often so needless! If you would make yours a smile that invites and never repels, heed this expert advice: Give your gums as well as your teeth regular daily care... and never ignore the warning of "pink tooth brush"!

THAT TINGE OF "PINK" may not mean serious trouble... but the minute you see it, see your dentist! He may simply tell you that your gums, denied hard chewing by today's soft foods, have become weak and flabby from lack of exercise. And, like so many dentists these days, he may suggest, "the healthful stimulation of Ipana and massage."

FOR IPANA, WITH MASSAGE, is specially designed to aid the gums to health as well as clean teeth thoroughly. So, every time you brush your teeth, massage a little extra Ipana onto your gums. Feel that invigorating "tang"—exclusive with Ipana and massage. It tells you that gum circulation is improving—stimulating gum tissues—helping gums to sounder health.

TRY IPANA TOOTH PASTE today. And begin now the faithful, every day use of Ipana and massage. See for yourself how much this sound and sensible dental habit helps make your gums stronger and firmer, your teeth brighter and your smile more radiantly attractive.

Get the new D. D. Tooth Brush too—specially designed with the twisted handle for more thorough cleansing, more effective gum massage. A "plus" for aiding your smile.

IPANA TOOTH PASTE

©C1B 479424 DEC 12 1940

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

The grand total circulation of this column is 30,936,879. To every one of our readers in the twenty-nine national magazines, the lion roars a Merry Xmas.

As a pre-holiday treat we present you with one of those dashing affairs with Clark Gable doing most of the dashing.

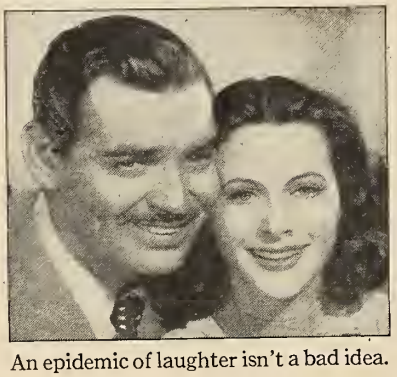
★ ★ ★ ★

And Hedy Lamarr is something to dash after.

★ ★ ★ ★

"Comrade X"—that's Clark—is a mysterious correspondent who attempts to smuggle news past the censor and Hedy Lamarr past the immigration.

★ ★ ★ ★



He is caught smuggling Hedy.

★ ★ ★ ★

The film is a confection of suspense, speed and merriment. The screen play, written by Ben Hecht and Charles Lederer, has a pace that is Hechtic.

★ ★ ★ ★

Our studio spies send us a warning that "Comrade X" is a most dangerous picture. People laugh themselves sick and the laughter is contagious.

An epidemic of laughter isn't a bad idea.

★ ★ ★ ★

Knee-bends to those great characterizations (in addition to Gable and Lamarr) by Oscar Homolka, Felix Bressart and Eve Arden.

★ ★ ★ ★

King Vidor, whose direction is direct, has not missed on this one. Long live King!

★ ★ ★ ★

It's a great job, M-G-M. More "Comrade X"es, say we all of us.

★ ★ ★ ★

In fact, there'll be a movement afoot to rename the merry season.

★ ★ ★ ★

They're thinking of calling it—

★ ★ ★ ★

Comrade Xmas. — Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

Modern Screen

Stories

"DEAREST OLIVIA AND JOAN . ." 24
Sharing same intimote memaries with the man wha knew them when

HOW LOVE HAS CHANGED! 26
The ald technique ain't whot it used ta be and Mary Astor praves it!

A RIGHT GUY! 30
Lats of people defy canventian—but Gory Caaper gets away with it!

TAKE CARE OF YOURSELF, MY DARLING 32
A letter ta Dick Greene fram ane fon wha isn't fargetting—Ginny Field

PAGING DENNIS MORGAN 34
The mon af the haur gives yau even mare reasans far raving!

IT'S IDLE GOSSIP! SAYS BETTE 36
But there's a twinkle in her eye when she dismisses yaur favarite rumor

IT'S ALL OVER BUT THE SHOUTING 40
Checking up on the year's big maments—befare and behind the camera

THE DOCTOR VIEWS HIS CASE 42
How Dr. Kildare soved Lew Ayres fram possing aut of the pictures

IT'S AN OLD SOTHERN CUSTOM 46
Ann keeps her hubby in groy hoirs, and the rest af the warld in stitches

HOLLYWOOD'S BANKRUPT GENIUS 51
Here's the lawdown an why Orson's gaing brake in a millian dallor town!

CONFESSIONS OF A CAMPUS CUTIE 68
A sheepskin fram a dazen movie calleges—na wander Betty's warldly-wise

Fashions

WOOLLY WITCHERY 8
Elegant gifts far favarite cronies—ond o bit af glamaur far your Butch

UNDER THE MISTLETOE 47
Be o gargeaus menace in this slim 'n' snaky negligée

WELL DRESSED UNDRESSED 48
Frathy finery ta bring out the strip-tease in the best af us

PROP SHOP 50
Same darling "nylan fillers"—big in oppeol, but wee in price

Features

Lucky Stars 6
Information Desk 10
Movie Reviews 12
Modern Hostess 14
Whooping It Up! 16
Portrait Gallery 19
Fun in Filmville 28
On the Set with "Flotsam" 38
Beauty Notes for Christmas Belles 52
Good News 54
Our Puzzle Page 69
Movie Scoreboard 72

Cover Girl: Priscilla Lane, natural color photograph by Scotty Welbaurne

PEARL H. FINLEY ● Editor

SYLVIA KAHN ● Hollywood Reporter OTTO STORCH ● Art Editor

Val. 22, Na. 2, January, 1941. Copyright, 1940, the Dell Publishing Ca., Inc., 149 Madisan Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office af publicatian at Washingtan and Sauth Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single copy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscriptian price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscriptian $2.00 a year, foreign subscriptian $2.20 a year. Entered as secand-class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the Postaffice, Dunellen, N. J., under Act af March 3, 1879. Additianal secand class entries at Seattle, Wash., San Francisca, Calif., Haustan, Texas, Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept na respansibility far the return af unsalicited material. Names af characters used in semi-fictianal matter are fictitiaus. If the name af any living persan is used it is purely a caincidence. Trademark Na. 301773.

With the Gratefully Acknowledged Cooperation of the ★ UNITED STATES NAVY ★
METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER
presents

ROBERT TAYLOR IN FLIGHT COMMAND

THE FASTEST THING ON FILM!

THE PICTURE OF THE MONTH!

Ever since M-G-M gave to the public its memorable production "Hell Divers", this famed studio has sought a drama equally thrilling and romantic, with a spectacular background of America's fighting ships of the air. Here it is, surpassing highest hopes for a successor! It is the story of the "Hell Cats" of the Navy's Armada of the skies... excitingly filmed at Pensacola, San Diego and Pearl Harbor... a romance of air-devils and the beauties who love them... a picture that will electrify America with its breath-taking unfolding!

WITH RUTH HUSSEY ★ WALTER PIDGEON

PAUL KELLY · SHEPPARD STRUDWICK · NAT PENDLETON

A FRANK BORZAGE PRODUCTION

Screen Play by Wells Root and Commander Harvey Haislip
Directed by Frank Borzage · Produced by J. Walter Ruben

WALTER PIDGEON
as the Commander
and...
RUTH HUSSEY
as the girl who made the "Hell Cats" purr!

LUCKY STARS

Lucia Corroll | Tonyo Widrin | Potricia Van Cleve | Kay Leslie | Jayne Hazard | Morilyn Merrick

Lorraine Elliott | Lois Ranson | Joan Leslie | Peggy Diggins | Ello Bryon | Gay Parkes | Sheila Ryan

After a ten-year lapse the Wampus Baby Star contest sprang to life again and pointed an encouraging finger at the ingénues most likely to succeed in 1941. Luck and judges favored dark tresses and an average of 115 pounds, 5'4", 18 years of age, 24½" waist, 34½" bust and 35½" hips.

Guests of honor at the affair were past Wampus stars, the majority of whom became well-established in pictures just a year or two after the contest. One such instance was Dolores Del Rio who confided that she was amazed at the talent displayed by this year's crop. Said she, in her day the "Babies!" had beauty but none of the stage experience and ability to sing, dance and emote that these kids have!

NAME	AGE	HOME TOWN	HEIGHT	WT.	HAIR
Joan Leslie	16	Detroit, Mich.	5' 4"	116	Auburn
Sheila Ryan	19	Topeka, Kan.	5' 2"	107	Brown
Ella Bryan	22	Zurich, Switz.	5' 3"	110	Lt. Brown
Jayne Hazard	18	Tampa, Florida	5' 5"	118	Blonde
Marilyn Merrick	17	Fort Worth, Tex.	5' 4"	119	Blonde
Lois Ranson	18	Hollywood, Cal.	5' 3"	110	Lt. Brown
Lorraine Elliott	19	Detroit, Mich.	5' 2"	110	Black
Tanya Widrin	20	San Francisco, Cal.	5' 4½"	117	Brown
Peggy Diggins	18	New Rochelle, N. Y.	5' 7"	118	Black
Kay Leslie	21	Fresno, Cal.	5' 6"	124	Red-Brown
Gay Parkes	22	Nashville, Tenn.	5' 3"	109	Gold
Lucia Carroll	24	Wausau, Wis.	5' 5"	118	Brown
Patricia Van Cleve	19	New York City, N. Y.	5' 6½"	115	Blonde

Wonder if former "Babies" Blondell, Carol and Eilers thought it so funny way back when!

Old guards Janet Gaynor, Dolores Del Rio and Fay Wray with Sally Blane and Helen Ferguson

It's Here!

The thundering story that challenges all filmdom to match its excitement!

"Iron Rails to Kansas . . .
Iron Nerves from there on!"

WARNER BROS. PRESENT

ERROL FLYNN
OLIVIA DeHAVILLAND

in

Santa Fe Trail

A thousand miles of danger with a thousand thrills a mile!

Original Screen Play
by Robert Buckner
Music by Max Steiner

with RAYMOND MASSEY
RONALD REAGAN · ALAN HALE
Wm. Lundigan • Van Heflin • Gene Reynolds
Henry O'Neill • Guinn 'Big Boy' Williams

DIRECTED BY MICHAEL CURTIZ

WATCH!
The big hit right after 'Santa Fe Trail' will be 'FOUR MOTHERS.' It's the wanderful new Warner Bros. picture starring the 'Faur Daughters'!

Woolly Witchery

Witches don't have a monopoly on sorcery nowadays. Try a little enchanting on your own wardrobe with these hand-knit togs. They'll add a caldron of oomph to every skirt, jacket and coat, and people's eyebrows will "up" when they see you've conjured it all with an innocent pair of knitting needles. Don't break the spell and tell 'em, but it's as easy as pie! We send you directions for every blessed move you have to make, so you can't possibly fall into the pearly deep. And the price is the most bewitching fact of all. Practically all you do is rub a few pennies together to obtain the yarn! And when you're finished, you can make magic from daybreak till next morning's milkman in chunky "Cock o' the Walk" or "Glengarry" scarf and cap. For special occasions, like your best beau's cocktail party, go Circe-like in "Cafe Society," and for more informal bedevilment verve up your blacks and browns with gala "Mexicana."

1228—As quick as you can say "Mumbo Jumbo," you can whip up this sturdy cable-stitched "Cock o' the Walk" in a variety of shades.

1190—Only a wizard could design this festive zippered "Mexicana" cardigan! But it's simple to make in the smart new jiffy-knit stitch!

2389—Cast a spell on your special date with "Glengarry" scarf and Bonnie cap crocheted of bunny-soft yarn in a choice of colors.

1223—It doesn't take Voodoo to knit "Cafe Society," a lacy three-color sweater blouse with scalloped yoke. Elegant by day and by night.

Send in the coupon below with a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Instructions are absolutely free.

ANN WILLS, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Kindly send, at no cost to me:

Directions for Nos. 1228-1190.....

Directions for Nos. 2389-1223.....

I enclose a stamped, self-addressed (large) envelope.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

THE GLORIOUS SEQUEL TO "LITTLE WOMEN" BECOMES THE GRANDEST COMEDY-ROMANCE OF THE YEAR!

Only Louisa May Alcott, author of "Little Women," the picture millions will always remember, could write this sequel you will never forget. More laughs . . . more romance . . . more downright enjoyment than you've had since you can remember!

INFORMATION DESK

Follow Linda Darnell's example and drop us a line. We promise to answer!

NOTE: If you desire a reply by mail, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

W. E. Ramshaw, Fort Davis, Canal Zone. To settle that argument about Mae West —she's 5′ 4″ tall and averages 116 pounds of appeal.

Teresa Jaskolshi, Two Rivers, Wisconsin. David Niven and Dick Greene have gone to war in England . . . Spencer Tracy is 40 years old, would you believe it? . . . Bing Crosby's most recent picture was "Rhythm on the River," and he's appearing in "Road to Zanzibar" in the near future . . . Charles Boyer is married to Pat Paterson . . . Bette Davis is divorced, but is still very friendly with her husband whom she sees on her New York jaunts.

Helen Owen, Camden, New Jersey. Nope, Billy Halop was not found in the New York slums. He's the son of a well-to-do Long Island lawyer and plans to retire on $100 a week by the time he's 35! Getting his start on the air waves, he leaped to fame via the stage show, "Dead End," and the movie of the same title. 5′ 10″ tall, he weighs 155 pounds. Girls are just girls to him at this stage, but watch the columns for the inevitable capitulation at the feet of one of those Hollywood Durbins!

Constance Van Voorhis, Washington, D. C. You can reach Franchot Tone at Universal Studios, Universal City, California. Send birthday cards on February 27th, 'cause that's the big day when he was born in Niagara Falls, New York, thirty-five years ago. He's six feet tall and weighs an even 160 pounds.

Mabel Higgs, Fitchburg, Massachusetts. Ruth Chatterton's ex-husbands are Ralph Forbes and George Brent, who have become very good friends in Hollywood. At present, Ruth is touring the country with a stock company, and performs in "Private Lives" among other stage plays.

Turner Byrd, Barney, Georgia. Don't miss John Payne in "The Great Profile" and "Tin Pan Alley," and Jackie Cooper in "The Aldrich Family in Life With Henry." Jackie wants to change his name to plain "Jack," but his studio stands in the way!

Roma Ann Heath, Andover, Ohio. You can write to Warner Baxter at 20th Century-Fox, Box 900, Beverly Hills, California. They'll be only too glad to send you an autographed picture for twenty-five cents in either stamps or coin.

Gremain, St. John's, Newfoundland. Glad to hear from you way up there in the snowy north! Deanna Durbin's next picture is nothing but a gleam in Joe Pasternak's eye right now, but when it's put upon the screen it'll be called "Nice Girl." Deanna's warbling was never better than in "It's Foolish But It's Fun," "Waltzing in the Clouds," "When April Sings" and "Blue Danube Dream," all heard in "Spring Parade" . . . Gloria Jean's playing opposite that cute Bobby Stack in her latest film, "A Little Bit of Heaven" . . . The other rising star you asked about, Leni Lynn, is a singer just as you guessed. This little 15-year-old got her start when her schoolmates in Passaic, New Jersey, chipped in their pennies to pay her way to Hollywood!

Jeanne Dye, Los Angeles, California. It's a pleasure for us to tell all about Eddie Albert, 'cause we think he's just about as slick as you do! Good news is—he's thirty-two and unmarried! Eddie is the only nickname for his christened "Edward." In the sports field he's happiest playing golf or watching an ice-hockey game, but in the more leisurely pursuits, prefers reading books and listening to symphony music. As for size, he's five feet eleven inches tall and weighs 160 pounds. He has blue eyes and brown hair. Since his departure from the Broadway stage he's made five pictures and is scheduled for two more in the near future.

Mrs. Helms, Port Arthur, Texas. Sorry to pronounce you the loser in your little bet, but Myrna Loy was never William Powell's off-screen wife.

Katherine Dassos, New York City. Joel McCrea is one of those happier mortals who's realized a childhood ambition. He owns a 1,000-acre rancho where he spends every spare moment riding his buckin' broncs and rounding up cattle like a regular cowboy. Part of his love of the plains is inherited from his forefathers who pioneered in the West and set up prosperous homesteads there. By the time Joel came along his family was wealthy and established as one of the first names in Hollywood, and so they felt it only proper to send their son to a private school. The sole private kindergarten in the city was unfortunately called "Hollywood School for Girls," and it was there that poor Joel was forced to go! Doug Fairbanks, Jr., was another victim, so the two boys necessarily struck up a close friendship which has lasted to this day! After high school our blue-eyed Irishman went to Pomona College where he majored in dramatics and met his first stroke of real luck. Playing the lead opposite Sam Wood's daughter, he naturally came under the eye of the great director and received hearty encouragement from him. After two years of intensive training in stock and bit roles he landed a big part in "The Jazz Age" in 1929. He's six feet two inches tall and weighs 185 pounds, towering over all the other screen stars except Gary Cooper who reaches the same height. Born on Nov. 5th in 1905, he's been lucky in everything, especially love. Married to Frances Dee for 7 years, he's the proud papa of two rugged boys.

Margie Monroe, Cincinnati, Ohio. Although Fredric March was born with the unromantic name of Frederic Ernest McIntyre Bickel in Racine, Wisconsin, on August 31, 1897, his looks compensated for whatever he lost in title. Brown-haired and brown-eyed, he grew to six feet in height and weighs 170 pounds. After graduation from the University of Wisconsin he pursued a career on the stage until the talkies came in. At that time he went to Hollywood and became one of the leading stars of the screen. His biggest hits include "Anna Karenina," "Mary of Scotland" and "The Buccaneer." Watch for him with Betty Field in the soon-to-be-released "Victory." Married to Florence Eldridge, he has two good-looking kids, Penelope and Anthony.

Dorothy Powers, Staten Island, New York. Richard Denning was the lad who played the part of Bill Crane in "Golden Gloves." No wonder you're interested and well you may be. He's one of the up-and-coming stars on the horizon! Born in Poughkeepsie, New York, right next to Vassar College, he early in the game acquired his way with the women. He's six feet one inch tall and weighs 180 pounds, has dark brown hair and blue eyes. His first picture was "Hold 'Em Navy" in 1937, and his most recent was "Those Were the Days."

Adeline Riese, Aurora, Indiana. Here are the matrimonial facts! Dixie Lee is Bing Crosby's first and only wife . . . Bill Boyd's twice divorced (from Elinor Fair and Dorothy Sebastian) and is currently married to young and beautiful Grace Bradley . . . Mary Astor's first husband was Kenneth Hawks, since deceased . . . Irving Wheeler was Carole Landis' first hubby. Her second was Willis Hunt, Jr., whom she divorced after two months of heated squabbles.

A friend, Erie, Pennsylvania. Laraine Day's played in "My Son, My Son," "And One Was Beautiful," "Foreign Correspondent" and all the Dr. Kildares. You can get a photograph of her at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, California.

Helen Schmuck. Youngest "Son of the Pioneer" is Lloyd Perryman who's 23 years old. Pat Brady and Hugh Farr are both 26, Carl Farr's 30 and Bob Nolan, the leader, is a mellow 32 years. All the boys go by their real names except Brady, who shortens his Robert Ellsworth to a Pat! Do you blame him?

Louise Morrisey, Ho-ho-kus, New Jersey. Roy Rogers, Leonard Slye, B. M. (before movies) has been hiding his happy home life from us till now. Seems he's been married for about two years to a simple, naïve, wholesome cowgirl who has the same tastes as Roy and prefers to stay home in the background of her husband's fame. She's very pretty, madly in love with her husband, and they're supremely happy together. Recently they adopted a little one, Cheryl Darline, who'll be celebrating her six months birthday before long.

Phyllis Welty, Miskawaka, Ind. Laraine Day was born in Roosevelt, Utah on October 13, 1920, one of five children. She and her twin brother Lamar are the "babies" of the family. When Laraine was in the fifth grade (she was Loraine Johnson then) her family moved to Long Beach, Calif. Laraine joined the Players' Guild when she was just a youngster, and by the time she was entering her teens she was considered a veteran and was playing really important roles. She has had the unique honor in movietown of being discovered three times by talent scouts! The first time was when she was a junior in high school; the second, when she was a senior, and the last time was in December, 1939. Her first two movie ventures weren't too successful. She was horribly miscast as a hard-riding horse-opry queen. This time, though, she seems to be on the right track, and her role in "Foreign Correspondent" definitely establishes her as a star. She has an infectious sense of humor, but occasionally enjoys what she calls a "good brood." She loves hamburgers and onions, writes poetry and has one ambition—to win an Oscar! She's five feet five, weighs 112 pounds, has green eyes and chestnut hair.

Jean Torpe, Berkeley, Ill. She used to be advertised as "Dixie's Dainty Dewdrop," but she first attracted the attention of Hollywood by her ability to imitate the sound of a machine gun. Know who she is? Why, who else but Jane Withers! Jane's first movie roles were downright bratty and, after a few pictures in which she appeared as the enfant terrible, people began to think of her affectionately but persistently as "that awful child." Just when everybody had her typed as a tomboy, Jane added three inches, tossed away twelve pounds and set about becoming a glamour girl as enthusiastically as she does everything else. With blue eyes and dark brown hair, Jane now is exactly five feet three and a half inches tall and weighs 115 pounds.

June Ayres, Lawrenceburg, Ind. Don (Red) Barry was born in Houston, Texas on January 11, 1912, and his real name is Donald De Costa. He's five feet eight and one-half inches tall, weighs 160 pounds and has grey eyes and red hair. He's not married yet, but is engaged to cute little Peggy Stewart. "The Tulsa Kid" is his latest film . . . The Sons of the Pioneers include: Bob Nolan, the leader and business manager, who is thirty-two; Hugh Farr, who's twenty-five; Carl Farr, thirty; Pat Brady (the apple pie-eating comedian of the group) who is twenty-five; Tim Spencer, thirty-two; and Lloyd Perryman, twenty-three. As far as our records show, none of them is married. You can write to them at Columbia Studios, 1438 N. Gower Street, Hollywood, Calif.

Jeri Kidd, Pasadena, Calif. That tale that's going round that Mary Lee is Gene Autry's child is untrue. Gene is only thirty-one and Mary's fifteen. You can reach her at Republic Studios, 4024 Radford Avenue, Hollywood, California. . . . Deanna Durbin is still seventeen, but she'll be eighteen—and of marriageable age—on December 4 . . . Ann Rutherford is just about twenty; her birthday's November 2nd. She was born in Toronto, Canada, and is a little bit over five feet three. (Continued on page 65)

Lovely Brides Thrilled by this Great New Improvement in Beauty Soaps!

● "I'm just thrilled by new Camay's wonderful mildness," says Mrs. F. M. Smith, Jr., Jackson Heights, L. I. "I always take extra care with my skin—so I like a very mild beauty soap. New Camay is so mild it actually seems to soothe my skin as it cleanses. And that new fragrance is just marvelous!"

Camay now Milder than other Leading Beauty Soaps!

At your dealer's now, no change in wrapper!

● "When I tell you that Camay is even more wonderful than ever, that means something!" writes Mrs. R. C. Hughes, Yeadon, Pennsylvania. "I wouldn't ask for a milder soap."

NO WONDER women everywhere are talking about this wonderful new Camay—for tests against 6 of the best-selling beauty soaps we could find proved that new Camay was milder than any of them, gave more abundant lather in a short time.

If, like many beautiful women, you have a skin that seems rather sensitive, try new Camay. See for yourself how much its extra mildness . . . its more gentle cleansing . . . can help you in your search for a lovelier skin!

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

MOVIE REVIEWS

Claudette Colbert rescues fellow American, Ray Milland, from a Spanish firing squad in "Arise, My Love."

Sailor John Wayne makes merry with Carmen Morales, Caribbean boat girl in "The Long Voyage Home."

★★★★ ARISE, MY LOVE

Here is one of the finest pictures of the year and Claudette Colbert's best performance ever—not forgetting "It Happened One Night." It is both timely and entertaining and should get a lot of attention.

As the film starts, Ray Milland is an American volunteer with the Loyalist army in Spain, and Claudette is an American newspaper gal who puts on the weeps to save Ray from being shot at sunrise by making believe she's his wife.

From here on it's a two-skeined story with our two leads battling both romance and principles. At the end they decide there are more important things in the world these days than the love of two humans for each other.

The story is told poignantly and excitingly and, though the sinking of the Athenia is a bit reminiscent of the Lusitania business in "Cavalcade," it's first-class thrill stuff.

Claudette is positively inspired; she's never been as good, as true, as believable, as lovely. And Ray Milland is not a number two Cary Grant any more. He's Ray Milland, a personality on his own.

There are a half dozen other good performers, most exciting of which is Walter Abel in an old-fashioned newspaperman role, and Ann Codee is tops in one strong emotional scene. Directed by Mitchell Leisen.—Paramount.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: The title of the picture comes from the Song of Solomon, Chapter 2, verse 13 . . . This is the third time Milland plays the part of a pilot (which he actually is), with a fourth to come in the currently shooting "I Wanted Wings" . . . Claudette saved the day by digging an old Maxim's menu out of her trunk, when the studio couldn't get any . . . Director Leisen has his own idea of a signature; he puts a live bird of some sort into every film; this time there are doves in the Compiegne love scene; very appropriate, too.

★★★★ THE LONG VOYAGE HOME

It's a little early to begin distributing the Academy Awards for 1940, but there is no possible doubt that this film will get the Oscars in at least two and perhaps three classifications. To this reviewer's mind it is the finest film in a number of years. It is real cinema, real art.

John Ford, who inaugurates his production career with this picture, managed the astonishing task of integrating script, direction, camera and acting as the four have never been jelled before. The result is not a film in which all the portions are well done but a completely well-formed unit.

Taking as his base four one-act playlets by Eugene O'Neill, Ford and his writer, Dudley Nichols, have managed to evolve an exciting saga of the sea. Greg Toland is an astonishingly fine cameraman. Never before have you seen such black and white etching on the screen and several shots will thrill you to the point of applause.

This flawless script and photography are set off by a whole series of A-1 acting performances by Thomas Mitchell, John Wayne, John Qualen, Ian Hunter, Barry Fitzgerald, Ward Bond and Arthur Shields. Each of the characters is carefully thought out and true. Each is better than you have ever seen him before. As a matter of fact, these virile men of the sea are so vividly

Carole Lombard meets Chas. Laughton after a courtship via the mail in "They Knew What They Wanted."

In "The Great Dictator," Charlie Chaplin succeeds in nabbing Paulette Goddard's heart as well as her locks.

BY WOLFE KAUFMAN

portrayed that you women will forget all about the lack of boy-girl romance. The only girl in the film who has any kind of a scene is Mildred Natwick—and you won't forget her easily, either. Directed by John Ford.—Wanger-United Artists.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Dudley Nichols and John Ford have teamed together on ten pictures previous to this one . . . John Wayne first won fame as Duke Morrison, USC football star . . . Thomas Mitchell owns one of the most valuable collections of paintings in the country, including two Picassos and an original Rembrandt . . . Arthur Shields and Barry Fitzgerald are brothers and were formerly members of the famed Abbey Players in Dublin . . . Wilfred Lawson came over from England for this role and went right back at the end of the filming; he is now in active service with the RAF . . . Ward Bond has been in pictures for many years, but his death scene here will get him a lot of renewed attention . . . John Qualen used to play a flute in a symphony orchestra, so his flute playing in this picture is genuine; he is also a painter . . . Jack Pennick and Wayne suffered broken ribs and concussions while filming the storm sequences . . . The S. S. Glencairn was really the S. S. Munami of the McCormick Line . . . The camera never moves in this production and less light was used for the filming than in any previous picture.

★★★½ THE THIEF OF BAGDAD

Every once in a while along comes a picture like "The Thief of Bagdad," which none of the critics' regulation formulas fit. This one's way off the beaten track. It's a beautifully and imaginatively conceived spectacle taking place in ancient Bagdad and involving a series of fantastic happenings. There's a magic carpet and a magic horse which flies through the air. To say nothing of genies and a lovelorn prince and princess. Whether you'll like it or not depends on your willingness to play a game with producer Alex Korda. If you'll abandon yourself to his mood and let him spin you a yarn, he'll guarantee you a good time.

Sabu is perfect as a little ragamuffin who is the bane of all Bagdad with his thievery, but lovable nonetheless. Conrad Veidt is such a villain he'll frighten you for weeks afterwards. June Duprez is a bee-utiful princess, but John Justin is a mite too pretty as a prince. Rex Ingram, one of the picture's few American actors, is perfectly cast and gives a gem of a performance as the genie.

The Technicolor is astoundingly beautiful. Directed by Ludwig Berger, Michael Powell and Tim Whelan.—Korda-United Artists.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Rights to the story were bought by Korda from the late Douglas Fairbanks, who made a version of it once with himself in the role that little Sabu plays here . . . About a year's work was done in London and the film was to be finished in Africa, but was completed in Hollywood instead . . . A pack train of 40 mules, carrying 30 persons and $40,000 in equipment, made the pilgrimage to the Grand Canyon floor for the film . . . The minute the picture was completed, John Justin flew back to England to join the Royal Air Force; Basil Bleck, Korda's counsel and vice-president, went with him on the same errand . . . You saw Sabu last in another Korda picture, "Drums" . . . This is Korda's first Hollywood production, though six others are en route; he is married to Merle Oberon.

★★★½ THE GREAT DICTATOR

This is unequivocally a great picture. If you grant Charlie Chaplin the privilege of saying what he wants to, then you must admit that there is no better way he could have said it. If the critics had been patient, if they had avoided making up their minds, if they had avoided writing their opinions in advance, they would have been thrilled by this truly great and important movie. Everyone expected a comedy and Charlie crossed them. He gave them instead a bitter, satiric-comic treatment of a shocking world phenomena. He starts off with as truly and vigorously funny an old Chaplin sequence as you can imagine. It is the end of the first World War, and he is trying desperately to operate a big Bertha. There's a time transition, it is today, and Chaplin plays a dual role—a timid little Jewish barber in Berlin and the great Hinkel (Hitler).

Slowly, as the film progresses, there is less and less comedy as pathos and bitterness replace the burlesque. There are some grand satiric scenes—the one where Charlie does a bubble dance with the globe of the world; the one where Charlie shaves a man in tempo with Mendelssohn; the one where Charlie and Jack Oakie (as Mussolini) try to outmaneuver each other in a grab of another nation, to mention only a few—which are spaced with ever-widening interruptions from the truly dramatic and brutal scenes.

And suddenly it seems as though Charlie can't stand it any longer. He stops all the action. He looks out at the audience, and there is a six-minute close-up of him (Continued on page 17)

No matter how individual your guests' tastes may be, everybody at your party will find a favorite fudge in this four-fold serving with its different flavors.

Virginia Weidler, who recently sprang to fame by her performance in "The Philadelphia Story," always includes red "apples on a stick" for her young friends.

BY MARJORIE DEEN

Right in the middle of your own steam-heated home, you can have a snow-bedecked Christmas tree that will last all the way through the most gala holiday season.

Courtesy, Lux Flakes

Courtesy, Karo

YULETIDE delights

This promises to be the happiest Christmas ever for little Virginia Weidler, not only because it coincides with the most successful appearance of her young career, in the role of Dinah Shore, the bright-eyed effervescent scamp in "The Philadelphia Story," but also because this will be her very first Yuletide as a teenster. This means, of course, that she'll have lots of extra freedom but no troublesome responsibilities. And you will love to follow her suggestions!

For example, in trimming her tree this year, Virginia will spend delicious minutes of indecision over the correct placing of each and every shiny ornament, because at thirteen you just can't be haphazard about such things! With all the freedom of her advanced years, she intends personally choosing gift wrappings and gifts for all her friends and relatives.

Most appreciated of all her newly-acquired privileges is that of throwing her own parties. She anticipates an afternoon orgy of candy-making in which the most likely candidate for the young gathering's choice will be fudge. She also plans to make the old-fashioned favorites, candied apples "as good as those they sell in that place on Hollywood Boulevard." So I promised her my recipe for these shiny "apples on a stick" in exchange for the secret of her favorite fudge. Other refreshment pets in her crowd include marshmallows, fashioned into snow men, to serve as table decorations before they're eaten.

If you'd like to have some of these treats on hand during the holidays, for your friends, try the candy recipes that follow shortly. Then, too, if you want to have a really distinctive tree to show them—one that looks for all the world as if Jack Frost himself had paid you a visit—top the branches with what appears to be a coating of real snow. But the nice part about this snow is that it will last as long as the tree. Here's how it's done:

Directions for Making and Using "Soap-Foam Snow"

Empty the contents of a large (12½-oz.) box of Lux flakes into a dishpan or large mixing bowl. Add 2 scant cups of lukewarm water. Now take your rotary egg beater and beat the mixture until it is the consistency of whipped cream. In case you use an electric mixer, prepare just one half the quantity at a time because even the largest bowl would be likely to overflow if the full amount were to be made up at one mixing.

Take a tip from a 13-year-old on how to concoct a "tasty" Xmas!

Take handfuls of this "snow" and spread it with your fingers along the branches of your Christmas tree. Occasionally put it on in "blobs," as the effect should be that of a natural and heavy snowfall.

For a more glittering appearance, sprinkle on some of the shiny artificial snowflakes (sold in boxes at Christmas-tree-decoration counters) while the mixture is still moist.

All this should be done before you put the ornaments and lights on the tree. This soap-foam snow will reflect the lights delightfully and fewer ornaments will be needed. In fact you can have a really lovely looking tree by using no decorations other than the strings of vari-colored electric lights along with the snow. Probably the most admired tree in all Hollywood last year was so easy to carry out that you can be sure it will be extensively copied this year by all who saw it. Strung with a considerable number of blue bulbs, the soap-foam snow reflected the soft light and sparkled from every branch. A large quantity of those inexpensive little "icicles" made in silver, and a few larger silver ornaments were placed on the ends of branches and in dark spots where the pine needles were thickest. The whole effect was set off with a large lighted star at the very top of the tree.

APPLES ON A STICK

6-8 medium size red apples
6-8 wooden skewers
2 cups sugar
⅔ cup water
4 tablespoons white karo
a few drops red food coloring

Wash apples to remove any oil coating. Dry thoroughly. Stick skewers into stem end of apples. Combine in a saucepan the sugar, water and karo. Cook, stirring constantly, until sugar is dissolved. Continue cooking, without stirring, to the hard crack stage (300°F. on candy thermometer). Remove from heat, add a few drops of red vegetable coloring. Hold apples by the skewers and dip them into syrup, one at a time, twirling them around to make sure they are thoroughly coated. Place on oiled pan or prop upright to cool. (Continued on page 81)

BLONDES! these 3 questions settle a vital problem

MRS. HUNTINGTON ASTOR, the former Mrs. Vincent Astor, who devotes much time to the cause of the Musicians' Emergency Fund, is a lovely ash blonde. She chooses Pond's Light Natural because it matches her complexion perfectly.

When trying to choose the right powder shade for yourself, you need ask yourself only three questions.

1. Shall I make my skin *fairer?
2. Shall I keep it the same shade?
3. Shall I deepen its color?

The matter comes down to this:

Do you look your most attractive when your skin has delicate baby-pink tones?

Are you lovelier when your skin has creamy shades that contrast with the dark lights in your eyes?

Does a warmer, rosier shade make your face bewitching against your honey-pale hair?

You will answer "yes" to one of these questions—and Pond's 3 superlative blonde shades will provide you with the right shade for your effect.

A delicate pink shade—Light Natural—our lightest shade. It matches the transparent skin of ash blondes. Pure blondes love it because it lightens their skin.

A light powder, but creamier, with less pink—Rose Cream (Natural). The most popular of the blonde shades because it tones in so perfectly with the average blonde skin. Many, very many, darker blondes use it to add delicacy and lightness to their coloring. Red blondes who want to tone down their color use it to add a needed creamy glow to their skin.

A warm sunny shade with a rosy glow over it—Sunlight. Girls who are not quite sure whether they are blondes or brunettes find it matches their skin. Other blondes use it because it gives warmth. Sophisticated blondes are particularly fond of the exotic depth it gives their skin.

Pond's Powders give a smooth-as-baby-skin finish to your face. They keep away shine for hours without giving that powdered look.

Blondes will find their 3 shades grouped together on the counter. And Brunettes will find their 4 brunette shades.

Free Write to Pond's, Dept. 9MS-PA, Clinton, Conn., and state whether you are a blonde or a brunette—you will receive generous samples FREE.

Copyright, 1940, Pond's Extract Company

WHOOPING IT UP!

The stars have a hot time in the old town Saturday nights—and here's how!

◄ Cutting capers with the younger set, 17-year-old Rita Quigley gets such a whirl at the Venice Fun House in Hollywood that she's reduced to hugging her date's legs to keep her equilibrium!

It's a big night for Judy ► Garland and Dave Rose who desert their diet of home played vic music for night-clubbing to celebrate the end of hostilities 'twixt Dave and Judy's parents.

Freddie Brisson wishes Roz Russell would celebrate a little less fashionably! Her chic Lily Daché feather tickled his eyes until he saw red and chucked it in the checkroom for the remainder ▼ of the dancing!

◄ Hollywood folk are betting two to one that wedding bells will ring out soon for Nancy Kelly and dancing partner, Edmund O'Brien.

While painting the town red with South American Reni Rodriguez, "Butch" Romero showers her with the same "undivided" attention he gives all the gals. ▼

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 13)

while he makes a straight, dramatic appeal to the world for more sanity.

Jack Oakie is topnotch as Mussolini, Paulette Goddard is swell as the Jewish girl, Billy Gilbert is excellent as Goebbels and the late Maurice Moscovich is imposing in a character part—but no name stays with you when you leave the theatre except that of Chaplin. Which is as it should be. Directed by Charles Chaplin.—Chaplin-United Artists.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: It is five years since Chaplin's last picture, "Modern Times"; work on this one started early in 1937 . . . It cost a fraction over $2,000,000 to produce this picture, the biggest amount Chaplin ever spent—and all his own, too, no collaborators . . . Over 500,000 feet of film were shot (with a single camera) and later cut down (by Chaplin) to 12,000 . . . Chaplin wrote the story and dialogue, directed, played a dual role, edited picture and scored the music; it was completed in 171 days of shooting time . . . It's the first time he speaks in a film, but he had considerable speaking experience on the English stage before coming to Hollywood 20 years ago . . . The action in the ballroom dance with Madame Napaloni and Charlie had to be stopped time and time again because the rest of the cast ruined takes with their laughter . . . The forty or fifty cats in the Ghetto scene were given a party of hamburger, fish and milk upon completion of their "work" . . . practically all shatterable glass used in scenes where it had to be broken was fine sugar cane candy; at picture's end, the surplus was given to Los Angeles orphanages . . . Paulette Goddard inaugurated a golf team, including prop men, actors, electricians and technicians which played in tournaments during the filming . . . Charlie includes the same familiar faces of his friends whom he always remembers in his productions.

★★★½ Knute Rockne—All American

This is a frank and humble tribute to the football coach who has become a legend throughout America. It is big, honest and exciting and almost becomes a history of football. Those interested in sports will enjoy every second of it; those who are not, will be entertained by the dramatics of the man's life.

Rockne's story is told from the time he came to this country as a little boy of four through his slow rise in the field of sports, and up past the time he was killed in an airplane accident. It is full of incident and detail, and if the picture has any real fault it is that there isn't enough romantic element for you girls. There is the constant and unflinching love of Knute and his wife, Bonnie, but that is straightlined and not very exciting.

You have never seen such a perfect character portrayal in your life as Pat O'Brien dishes out in the Rockne role. He is "the Rock" to the very marrow. His make-up is astonishingly good but, more to the point, his mannerisms and entire delivery seem to be carbon copies of the coach. There are a number of other excellent performances, tops being those of Gale Page as Rockne's wife and widow, Ronald Reagan as George Gipp, and Donald Crisp as Father John Callahan.

A quick bow, in passing, to those responsible for the very exciting and real staging of the football plays; they're A-1. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.—Warner Bros.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Much of the film was made on the Notre Dame campus, including the funeral ceremony made in Sacred Heart Church, site of the actual rite. Notre Dame year books were making their appearance when O'Brien and the company were on the campus, so O'Brien autographed approximately 1,000 a day, along with textbooks, hats, letters, etc. . . . Rights to make the picture were obtained from the famed football coach's widow, Bonnie Skiles Rockne; she approved the script, and personally assisted in production. All of the family except Mrs. Rockne got into the picture; Rock's children, aged 23, 21, 19 and 14, were among the university students who were used in some scenes . . . During the filming of the picture Pat O'Brien's fan mail trebled . . . Robert Buckner, author of the screen play, used the fruits of two years research in the story; the wealth of material at his disposal necessitated the sign in his office reading, "Thanks, we're sure it's true—but we can't put all the Rockne incidents in one picture."

★★★½ They Knew What They Wanted

Here is adult entertainment such as the movies have not dished out in many a day. Taken from the famous play by the late Sidney Howard which won a Pulitzer Prize, this late filmization results in vigorous, true drama that you will find difficult to forget.

There are at least three sterling performances in the leading roles which rank with the best seen on the screen in many a moon, but the big news is Charles Laughton! For the first time in a number of films he completely dissociates himself from his person to turn in a really gripping characterization—as Tony, the Italian farmer. Carole Lombard, opposite Laughton, has a very difficult assignment. Although she tries very hard she is simply too intelligent to play the role of the ignorant little slavey convincingly. Bill Gargan's been good in small parts for a long time, but here he has a big part; and he's terrific!

And so with three such performances, plus an exciting adult script, plus highly imaginative direction and good (very good) photography—the total is an A-1 film even if the finish is mystical and the final speech is in the wrong person's mouth.

There are some rough hurdles to manage from the moral code standpoint, but the film is tastefully directed by Garson Kanin. RKO-Radio.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: The company of 100 spent two weeks in Napa Valley, 550 miles north of Hollywood, filming all exterior scenes in the exact locale of the story . . . It was Napa's first glimpse of film stars in the flesh, and the erstwhile placid community went overboard with excitement and hospitality; the chief of police issued an order that "Anyone caught annoying our guests for autographs will be run in"; the company's train was met at the station by 4,000

(Continued on page 61)

*KATHERINE ALDRIDGE and BUDDY ROGERS in 20th Century-Fox hit, "Golden Hoofs". Your hands, too, can have soft charm, if you use Jergens.

"Have Love-Worthy Hands," advises Kay Aldridge* (20th Century-Fox Star)

IT'S SO EASY! And quick! Smooth on Jergens Lotion regularly—especially after handwashing. This famous Lotion furnishes beauty-giving, softening moisture most girls' hand skin needs. (Water, wind and cold are so drying to your hand skin!) Two of Jergens' fine ingredients are relied on by many doctors to help harsh, "crackable" skin to lovely smoothness. No stickiness! The first application helps! Start now to have soft, romantic hands—with this popular Jergens Lotion.

JERGENS LOTION

FOR SOFT, ADORABLE HANDS

FREE! PURSE-SIZE BOTTLE

Mail this coupon now. (Paste on penny postcard)
The Andrew Jergens Company, 3719 Alfred St., Cincinnati, Ohio. (In Canada: Perth, Ontario.)
Please rush my free purse-size bottle of Jergens Lotion!

Name_____
Street_____
City_____ State_____

THE MUSICAL OF OUR EXCITING TIMES!
BIG AS ITS STARS! GREAT AS ITS SONGS!

Alice FAYE

Surpassing her "Alexander's Ragtime Band" success!

Betty GRABLE

The "Down Argentine Way" star ... more torchy, more dazzling!

TIN PAN ALLEY

... the unbelievable street where songs are born!

Jack OAKIE

The comic who's just come into his own!

John PAYNE

A new romantic thrill when he makes love to K-K-Katy!

and

Allen Jenkins • Esther Ralston
Nicholas Brothers • Ben Carter

Directed by Walter Lang

Associate Producer Kenneth Macgowan • Screen Play by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan • Based on a story by Pamela Harris • Dances staged by Seymour Felix Tin Pan Alley's Greatest Songs!

New—

"You Say the Sweetest Things (Baby)" by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren

Old—

"K-K-K-Katy", "When You Wore A Tulip And I Wore A Big Red Rose", "Moonlight Bay", "Good-bye Broadway, Hello France", "The Sheik of Araby", "America I Love You"!

Coming soon

From 20th Century-Fox!

HENRY FONDA
DOROTHY LAMOUR
LINDA DARNELL
in
"CHAD HANNA"
In Technicolor

•

PAUL MUNI
in
"HUDSON'S BAY"
with Gene Tierney

ALICE FAYE

She's the impractical half of a vaudeville sister act in 20th Century-Fox's musical — as song-laden as its title — "Tin Pan Alley"

GENE KORMAN

Fred Mac Murray

If you're partial to handsome farmers with southern accents, you'll love Fred in Paramount's "Virginia." It's in Technicolor!

RAY JONES

She's a New York model who gets mixed up with magic and John Barrymore in Universal's mystery yarn, "The Invisible Woman."

Virginia Bruce

CLARENCE SINCLAIR BULL

M-G-M's "Bittersweet" has everything—Technicolor·music·drama.

— and Nelson in the most romantic role of his career!

NELSON EDDY

"BUT, MY DEAR, HAVE YOU HEARD THE LATEST?"

...Paramount has actually got Jack Benny and Fred Allen to appear together on the screen for the first time in Paramount's big holiday show, "Love Thy Neighbor." Yes, and they've finally agreed to bury the hatchet . . . in each other's necks!

...Paramount has the first picture in which Paulette Goddard dances . . . and, do you know whom she's dancing with? Fred Astaire! Wait'll you see them do the "Dig It" in Paramount's big New Year's show, "Second Chorus."

...Yes, and did you know these big musicals are coming to your favorite theatre right in time for the Christmas holidays. You sure can do your Christmas movie shopping early!

Paramount presents

JACK BENNY · FRED ALLEN

in

"LOVE THY NEIGHBOR"

with MARY MARTIN · Verree Teasdale
The Merry Macs · Virginia Dale and "ROCHESTER"

Produced and Directed by MARK SANDRICH

Paramount presents

FRED ASTAIRE · PAULETTE GODDARD

in

"Second Chorus"

with
ARTIE SHAW and his Band
CHARLES BUTTERWORTH
BURGESS MEREDITH

Produced by Boris Morros
Directed by H. C. Potter

No one but a father could write a letter like this! It's so touching.

"Dearest

A romance of over a year's standing. Olivia and Jimmy Stewart both love to fly and play practical jokes.

In 1922, Olivia was chubby and impish. Joan—always the frailer of the two—was sickly and extremely shy.

"So you're from Hollywood!" said the elderly man, pushing his spectacles up the bridge of his nose. "And you want to know about my two daughters? Well, I haven't seen them for six or seven years. Hollywood, you know, is a long way from Japan . . . But I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll give you something new. I've been wanting to write the girls. Instead, I'll dictate the letter to you. Would that be an interview?"

"Definitely."

"Then let's begin," said the elderly man, quietly. "Let's begin the usual way—'Dearest Olivia and Joan . . .'

This is the letter I've long wanted to write. It came to me yesterday evening, of a sudden, that sooner or later I must write it. Because, yesterday evening I was strolling along the Ginza—you remember the Ginza, Joan—Tokyo's busiest shopping avenue, with peddlers in glorified bathrobes under canvas booths, selling roasted chestnuts and colored kimonos and whatnot.

Well, I was walking along the Ginza, pushing through a good animated portion of Tokyo's six million souls, when suddenly I saw it—the billboard in front of the little Japanese movie theatre, heralding the stars of the pictures being shown. One name on the billboard was Olivia de Olivia was 6 when she whipped this one off, fancying herself something of an artist! She and Joan sketch well, nowadays.

At 17, Olivia—short on glamour, but long on ambition—was "Puck" in a high school senior play.

Olivia and Joan..."

Havilland. The other was Joan Fontaine. Both of you, my daughters, on one program. I paid the 25 sen—6 cents in America—and went in.

And there both of you were on the screen. Beautiful! Exciting! Over a bridge of 5,500 miles you had come to perform before me. Amazing magic!

Sitting there, I was filled with a nostalgia and flooding remembrance of things past and done. I wondered, at once, if either of you—now famous movie stars—remembered your old father in Japan, despite the years that had intervened.

You may not have kept count, girls, but your father is now sixty-nine years old, and before it is forever too late I am sitting here in a fantastic place called Tokyo and writing to you in an even more fantastic place called Hollywood—I am writing, by proxy, the letter I have long wanted to write.

I want you to know, that while you may have gotten your good looks and your flair for the dramatic mostly from your mother, Lilian—it was from me and from my old English family that you inherited steadiness, poise, culture and a few other good qualities.

All that, however, isn't what I started out to say. I really just want to chat about old times with you. Reminiscing, somehow, makes you both seem closer to me.

I remember you, Olivia, my darling, as an infant, lying flat on your back on the floor, sucking a gigantic hairpin—which your mother thought was cute, but which gave me a case of nerves. I remember you (Continued on page 60)

BY IRVING WALLACE

When Joan's mother (left) married Mr. Fontaine, Joan took his name. Last year, Mr. Aherne gave her a brand new monicker.

Olivia (left) and Joan wore identical clothes for years. Here, they're off for a California garden party in 1933.

Photogenic at 3 months! That's Joan Fontaine napping in the arms of her pretty mother, who's wearing a Japanese kimono.

A recent picture of Joan's and Olivia's aging father, W. A. de Havilland, who is a patent lawyer in Tokyo, Japan.

Mary Astor, survivor of the "sexy silents," traces fashions in kisses right up to today!

HOW LOVE HAS CHANGED!

It all started because a trip to New York is like a trip to the hospital. When you come home, you like to talk about your experiences. That was what Mary Astor—still recuperating from three whirlwind weeks in New York—was doing.

"The Museum of Modern Art called me up one day," she was saying, "and asked me if I wouldn't like to see one of my old pictures. I was not only flattered; I was delighted. They have a marvelous library of old films, the most complete in the world. I asked, hopefully, 'Do you have a print of "Beau Brummel?'" They said they did. So I dropped everything else and rushed over to have a nostalgic look at my favorite of all the pictures I had ever made."

She puckered up her face in mock dismay at Mary Astor, Sentimentalist.

"Do you remember 'Beau Brummel?'" It was considered really something in its day. John Barrymore was the star and I was the leading lady, and the love scenes were supposed to be some of the most beautiful ever filmed. A little tingle went up my spine at the thought of seeing them again.

"So I saw them again. And I don't know when I've been so embarrassed. Thoroughly, excruciatingly embarrassed. It taught me a lesson. Never again will I go back and try to relive a memory.

"The print was in perfect condition. That was the agonizing thing. I couldn't kid myself that the picture must have been different once. It was just the same as when it was made. All I could say to myself, as I sat there in the merciful darkness watching it unreel, was: 'How did people ever go for this?'

"Just to give you an idea, let me tell you about one scene that once thrilled millions. John took my hand in both of his. One by one, gently, tenderly—oh, so tenderly—he uncurled my fingers. Then, looking deep in my eyes, he said, in a subtitle, 'I place my heart in the palm of your little hand.'"

Mary closed her eyes in reminiscence and shuddered. "How love has changed!" she said, feelingly.

Was she insinuating that movie love "ain't what it used to be?"

She tossed her head back in a short laugh. "I'm not only insinuating it," she said. "I'm stating it as a fact. I've seen it change."

This sounded like something that the chroniclers of Hollywood have missed; something that future historians would want to know about; and something that everybody else might find instructive. So I pursued the subject.

Mary protested that she wasn't the only actress in Hollywood who could talk about it. But she was just being modest. There's no other top-flight actress in Hollywood today whose movie experiences have covered as much romantic territory, or go back as far as Mary Astor's.

You wouldn't think it to look at her, minus make-up, wearing a simple sports dress, but Mary Astor has been in the movies twenty years!

That makes her sound ancient. She isn't. On her last birthday (May 3rd) she was thirty-four. She is a contemporary of Claudette Colbert, Greta Garbo, Carole Lombard, Myrna Loy, Katharine Hepburn, Joan Crawford and sundry other big names. She simply started earlier than they did—when she was fourteen.

She was born with the non-marquée name of Lucile Langhanke in Quincy, Illinois, the daughter of a high school language professor. She finished grammar school in Quincy, then was packed off to the Kenwood-Loring School for Girls in Chicago, to get the finishing touches. Instead, she got a movie contract.

The school had a reputation for pretty girls, which made Mary's cameo-like features a matter of school pride. The other girls begged her to enter a certain beauty contest. She didn't have the nerve. So they sent in a picture of her and it won first prize. Publication of it brought discovery by Jesse Lasky. And, suddenly, she was in the movies—a schoolgirl barely in her teens who hadn't stopped growing yet.

She didn't look like a schoolgirl, however, any more than she looks like the mother of an eight-year-old today. There was, and still is, a curious ageless quality in her face. Between scenes she had to attend regular classes on the set, but they didn't give her child roles to play. They gave her grown-up roles.

She doesn't try to cover up the fact that she has been in films so long. She told me, with a candid smile, "I always say I started in 1920, but actually I didn't get on the screen until 1921. Nothing I did in 1920 ever came out. I played a bit in 'Sentimental Tommy,' which was scissored, and I made a one-reeler which was never released. I strongly suspect that I wasn't sensational.

"My first appearance on any screen was in the feminine lead of a picture called 'The Beggar Maid,' opposite Reginald Denny. The very title dates it. Can you imagine anybody making or going to see a picture with such a title today?

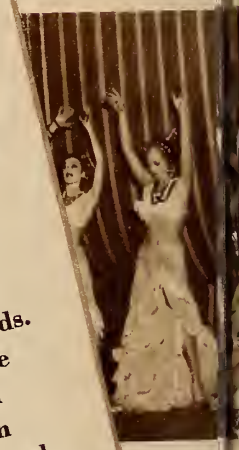
"That was the first time I was ever kissed by a man—either on the screen or off. I was fifteen years old, and it was quite an event. I didn't sleep for two nights before the scene. All I could think of was: 'He's going to kiss me.' And every time I thought of it I had terrific palpitations. I was terribly nervous—and terribly eager.

"What made me so nervous was the fact that I was supposed to be shy in the scene, and I was afraid the camera would give me away and reveal that I had a violent crush on Reggie. That crush lasted at least a week, with the kiss somewhere in the middle of it. Reggie spent most of that week running. He (Continued on page 63)

BY JAMES REID

The Hays office came into existence in 1922, and films were pure for a while. By 1932, vigilance had relaxed and clinches like this one from "Red Dust" (Clark Gable and Mary Astor) got by. A year later a terrific wave of censorship set in.

FUN IN FILMVILLE



Producers aren't heels and they're not skinflints. They consider charity a beautiful thing. But they think it's gone too far in Hollywood. You can't blame them, either, for when Mischa Auer ruins a $1,000 scene by yawning so wide his tonsils take a bow, and when Rita Hayworth does all of her acting with her face because her torso's too tired to budge—even a producer deserves sympathy. At any rate, pooped-out performers were the order of the day when André Charlot raided every studio in town and enlisted talent for the star-dripping Revue he presented recently on the boards of Hollywood's famous El Capitan Theatre.

With nearly all of Filmville horning in, the Revue, staged for the benefit of the British Red Cross, was a better example of good nature than of good theatre. Rehearsals were haphazard, the opening night show as casual as an old hat, and the backstage shindigs even more extraordinary than those shown the audience. Alan Mowbray, who m-ceed one-half of the two-act production, had a bar erected in his dressing-room and lured many a grateful colleague in for a snort between acts. Reggie Gardiner, who m-ceed the other half, spent hours shooting frantic phone calls around town, trying to locate performers who forgot to turn up. Mr. Charlot tore his hair because Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville sneaked off to a dark corner to hold hands and let a little item like their skit slip their minds. Chester Morris pouted because his magic routine was scissored from the show and insisted upon "entertaining" anyway. And Rita Hayworth was kept busy rejecting the invitations of local playboys who had fallen for the rumor that she and husband Eddie Judson had tiffed.

On stage, there were no fewer than twenty-seven numbers, all packed solid with famous names, ranging from Fanny Brice's "Baby Snooks" to a "Cads' Chorus" composed of Henry Fonda and Reggie Gardiner among others. In the words of Mr. Mowbray, the Revue was "a killer" and since it's been suggested that Charlot screen it maybe you'll be seeing it yourself!

BY SYLVIA KAHN

Anna Neagle's voice is so soft, she had to use a "mike" to make her famous "Alice Blue Gown" number audible!

Charlot's All-Star Revue won't make history, but it did make its all-star audience mighty happy!

The "Cads' Chorus," composed of ten actors with senses of humor, always brought down the house as, grim-faced, they extolled their vices in verse.

Even the Charles Boyers, upset by news that their French chateau had been bombed, were grinning broadly before long.

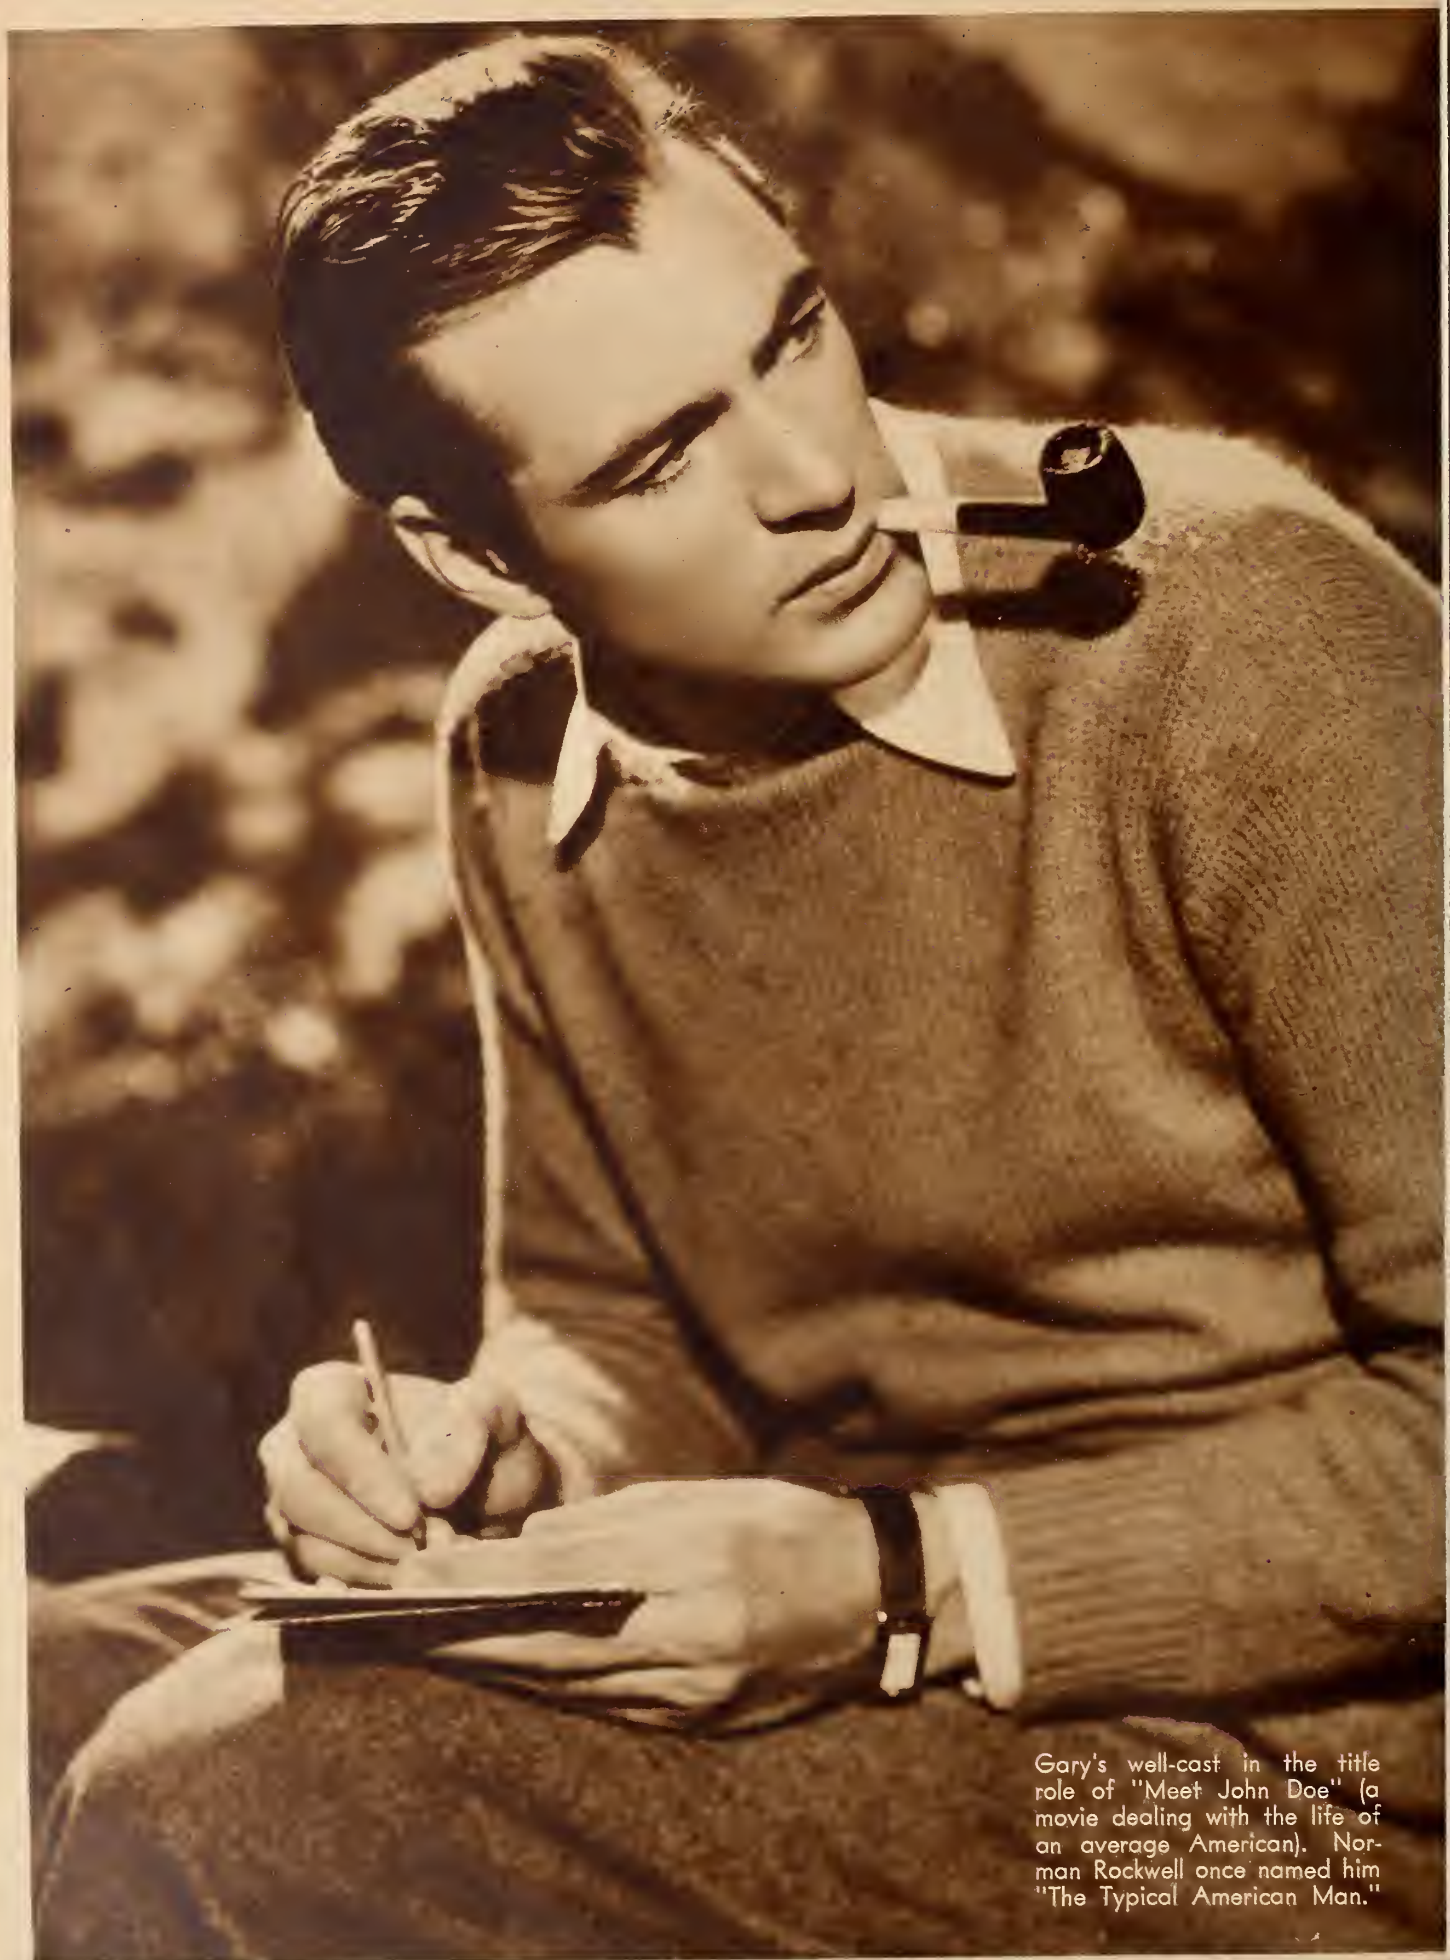
June Clyde's hilarious attempts to "get familiar" with dead pan Mischa Auer drew the biggest guffaws of the entire evening!

Rita Hayworth, who danced professionally for years, led the La Conga becomingly clad in the Revue's most revealing costume.

Small wonder Nick Grinde's jaw is dropping. That sequin-studded gown on cute Marie Wilson is definitely an eye-knocker-outer!

British-born Binnie Barnes played hooky from her honeymoon long enough to accompany countryman Alan Mowbray to the Revue.

Janet Gaynor (gown by Adrian) and her designing hubby take a rare night off from pampering their six-month-old son Robin.



When not doing their song 'n' dance act, Bonita Granville and Jackie Cooper held hands back in the next to the last row.

Ten percenter Vic Orsatti squired two lovelies, Betty Grable and Linda Darnell. This agent stuff is nice work if you can afford it!

PHOTOS BY JULES BUCK

Gary's well-cast in the title role of "Meet John Doe" (a movie dealing with the life of an average American). Norman Rockwell once named him "The Typical American Man."

BY GLADYS HALL

When the super Cooper gives out on life, love and the pursuit of happiness, he's worth listening to!

A Right Guy!

It seems that in his quiet way, with the least amount of fuss, he gets just what he wants out of life. That's what they say about Gary.

Why, they have even circulated the rumor that he is deaf in order to account for his reticence and of seeming to hear very little of what other people say. Others report that he pretends not to hear in order to protect himself from answering questions he doesn't want to answer.

During the making of Frank Capra's "Meet John Doe," Barbara Stanwyck, co-starring with Gary, said of him: "Don't fool yourself; he's a fox, that one! He sees more, hears more and knows more than anyone else in this business."

Hollywood, however, must have its legends. And Gary is by way of being one of them. Along with Garbo, the Sphinx, Hepburn, the Firebrand and Ginger Rogers, the Recluse, Gary is labeled the Strong, Silent Man. But strangely enough his silences are not construed as unfriendliness. His reticence is not pooh-poohed as an "act," put on because of a swollen head or an unwillingness to cooperate. By some sound instinct, everyone seems to understand that he is simply not the "Hi-ya" type of individual and they try to bother him as little as possible.

But though they understand Gary, the man, they don't understand how, with so little pother and ado, so little throwing about of weight, he has gotten where he is, without anyone being particularly conscious that he was getting up there.

Now, I've always found that the shortest distance between two points is the straight line, conversationally as well as geometrically. It seemed to me that the way to find out Gary's formula for success was to ask him. So, lunching with Gary at Lucey's in Hollywood the other day, I took my courage into my bare hands and did just that.

His blue eyes were twinkling as he launched his answers: "As for not talking much—well, I don't kid myself. If I weren't a movie star, I wouldn't be asked out for my scintillating conversation! I try, Lord knows, though I'm not very good at it, to hold up my end of the stick. But a glib talker is a person with a special aptitude or gift, and I haven't that gift. If I think I have anything to say which will contribute to enjoyment or interest, I say it. But if others have more interesting things to say than I have, I keep quiet. I don't 'assume' reticence or silence. I don't pretend to be deaf in order not to hear things. When you are among friends, I don't believe you should assume a part or a pose; that comes under the heading of being pretty phony. The only time I assume a part," smiled Gary, "is when I am on a sound stage, at work.

"As for avoiding publicity, I may have frozen up at some silly questions asked me from time to time. Then, too, certain personalities click, you know, and others don't. I have to feel comfortable when I'm talking with someone. If I'm uncomfortable, I'm not very adequate. Every business is salesmanship, one way or another. I have to sell acting. An interviewer has to sell the idea of doing a story. I guess you might say that if it's good salesmanship, I buy; if it's not, I don't. On some occasions, too, I've gotten off a plane or train dirty and tired and ducked the cameramen. I guess that was partly out of vanity," laughed Gary, "and partly out of respect for 'my Public' who, I'm told, likes its stars to look 'glamorous.' But," he added, with emphasis, "I enjoy making public appearances when I'm prepared for them. I like going to out-of-town premières, as we recently did with 'The Westerner.' We had a wonderful time. The people in Texas are swell. Real people. I like all that sort of thing. It's a pleasure to have people say 'hullo' to me, call me by my first name. A fine, friendly feeling. I like it.

"No, I haven't any special secret or formula for living or for success. Something Will Rogers once said, slightly altered, may apply to me, however. Will said, 'I'm just an old country boy. I have been eating pretty regular and the reason I have is because I stayed an old country boy.' Well, I was a Montana cowboy," smiled Gary, "and I have been eating pretty regular, too, and I think it's because I've stayed a Montana cowboy at heart. The things I like to do are still pretty simple, fundamental things, thank God! I like to get out in the hills, out in the Rockies somewhere. After 'John Doe' was in the box, my wife and baby and I went to Idaho for a hunting and camping trip. I don't do much hunting, really; just shoot a few ducks and things, enough to eat. I just like to be outdoors, get on a horse and ride.

"I've got everything I want in life; yes, I'm perfectly happy and contented. But I'm also very fortunate because the things I like to do and the things I want to have are the simple, easily obtainable ones. For example, when I'm home Rocky and I usually play a few sets of tennis before dinner; that gives me a workout. We keep a couple of saddle horses on a ranch a half hour's drive from our house. We go up there and ride in the hills. Once in a while we go to a night club. I like to dance," admitted Gary, sheepishly. "Very often we have our friends in for dinner—Ty Power and Annabella, the George Murphys and the Fred MacMurrays. We just sit around and gab. The point is, if a man wants only the things he can have, then he's certainly got everything. (Continued on page 78)

Virginia Fiels

Monday night

Dearest,

Thanks heaps for the cablegram. It certainly saved me lots of sleepless nights. For, if I hadn't received it before the news flash reached here recounting how you and Les Howard were nearly killed by that bomb, I would have been dreadfully worried. As usual, your thoughtfulness saved me.

I couldn't understand, at the time, why you should be cabling for the second time in a week and saying nothing especially new. But when the news broke about the bomb bursting three hundred yards from the apartment where you and Leslie were staying, and breaking all the windows, I knew you were trying to tell me that you were okay. Incidentally, it took two days for that news to pass the censors and reach this country.

Your letter, too, helped me considerably. That line about the "cheerful activity" at the station, together with a sentence from father's letter, "Your mother and I are leading a very quiet life," reassured me somewhat about conditions in London.

Speaking of father, it's a good thing you didn't meet up with him the other morning when a bomb made him thirty minutes late to the House of Lords to plead a case. It's the first time in thirty-five years he's ever been late and how he must have been fuming!

There's no lack of excitement here, although it's a different kind, but it's sort of sad to pass the old places you and I used to haunt—and pass them alone. The "wolves corner" at Chasens misses you badly. Reg (Gardiner), Coota (Bob Coote), Rolly (Roland Young) and Jim (Stewart) hailed me the other night and wanted to know how it went with you and what was the latest word.

But that's not all. You've no idea how many friends you have in Hollywood. All that terrible talk which went on before you sailed has disappeared, and everybody has nothing but nice words to say about you. I'm stopped continually on my way to the set, or on the boulevard, by people wanting to know how you are, and asking to be remembered to you. She wrote me an awfully cute letter saying she was sorry for me. I don't know her, so I concluded she was one of your fans.

That reminds me. Do you know Maybelle Duke? Is this a girl who's been writing to you?

Presume that you've received the money for your car by this time. Don't ever buy a big automobile again. I had a dreadful time unloading it. Walter (Pidgeon) seems well pleased with it, but next time get a second-hand light car—if I'm going to have to sell it.

Now that "Hudson's Bay Company" is about finished, I have more time to work with Merle and Sylvia (Fairbanks) and Mary (Pickford) for the Ambulance Corps. We had a committee meeting yesterday at the Victor Hugo. And had you heard that Korda turned over the entire proceeds of the premiere of "Thief of Bagdad" to charity? Half goes to the British Ambulance Corps, the other half to the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

Muriel (Angelus) stopped by for a moment en route to New York to do a play. She was doubly patriotic with an American flag on one lapel and a British flag on the other—both jeweled.

Saw John (Van Druten) at the opening of "Spring (Continued on page 80)

TAKE CARE OF YOURSELF, MY DARLING

Out of sight, out of mind? Not in Dick Greene's and Ginny Field's case!

Here's one pair of long-distance romancers who aren't drifting apart

Hollywood's just not the same since Dick went away, for he and Ginny were one of its gayest and most decorative couples.

BY GEORGE BENJAMIN

Dennis grins like an Irishman, but when he talks it's strictly sans blarney. He's one of the most sincere people in Hollywood.

BY WILLIAM ROBERTS

You amateur Columbuses discovered him cinematically ages ago, but

Up to two years ago, Hollywood couldn't see that Dennis Morgan was a large order of he-man—even if he did know the difference between an aria and an oratorio. Now, everybody is beginning to see it. Warners, particularly, has had an eyeful. They sent a photographer out to Dennis' house to give the girls an idea of how he looked around home, in a pair of shorts, and had to kill the pictures. He looked too muscular.

It would seem, however, that the girls are already convinced of his appeal from seeing him, fully clothed, on the screen.

They seem to have noticed him even though, up to now, his screen appearances have been confined largely to B's. That state of affairs is likely to be altered by "Kitty Foyle"—for which RKO borrowed him to play Ginger Rogers' lover. And please be advised that there is more love story in the picture than there was in the book!

Funny thing about Dennis—everybody thinks he's an Irishman.

"I think Warners must have picked my name out of a hat," he says, with a broad grin, "because I'm about as Irish as chop suey. My father is Swedish and my mother is a mixture of Scotch and Dutch."

It's just possible that Warners didn't pick the name out of a hat, but decided deliberately that anybody with his infectious grin, brown hair and mischievous blue eyes ought to be Irish even if he wasn't.

He signs his checks "Stanley Morner." That's the name he was born with, on December 20, 1910, in Prentice, Wisconsin—about 40 miles from Lake Superior, in the North Woods country.

He was supposed to grow up to be a banker and lumberman like his father, and very nearly did. Only two things stopped him. The depression and a love of singing, inherited from his mother.

"She wasn't a professional, but she liked to sing in the church choir, and so did I," he says. "I was a boy soprano," he adds, just to get a rise out of you.

He can't remember a time when he didn't feel like singing. Except maybe the day he and another eleven-year-old decided to run away from home. They clambered aboard a freight train parked on a siding. In the dark box-car, they discovered a bum. A lecturing bum. He lectured them about home and mother. They got off disillusioned about the joys of associating with the Knights of the Open Road and convinced that parents were preferable.

"Besides singing in church," Dennis recounts, "I was in all the amateur theatricals that came along, especially after we moved to Marshfield, where I finished high school. But I didn't think about singing or acting as a life work.

PAGING DENNIS MORGAN

Ginger Rogers and Dennis Morgan make violent love for the camera's benefit in "Kitty Foyle," but off the set confine themselves to casual chats over a couple of commissary Pepsis.

here, at long last, is your chance for that personal introduction!

Somehow, you don't when you're that age. They're just things you like to do. Like playing football.

"I was a little over six feet tall then, so they made me center on the football team. That led to my getting a scholarship to play football at the University of Wisconsin. But I didn't like the set-up, so I switched to Carroll College. I intended to stay just a year; instead I stayed four—mostly because of the excellent drama department. The person who got me interested in dramatics was a teacher named May N. Rankin—who had the same effect on Alfred Lunt when he went there." He adds, in a hurry, "Not that I've turned out to be another Alfred Lunt."

Carroll also had a good music department—and a voice teacher who wanted him to quit athletics and really concentrate on singing. "I couldn't see it. I wasn't going to make singing a career. I sang just for the love of it. I was satisfied singing with the glee club and partially paying my way through college, singing in churches."

He had a big football ambition, however—to graduate from the line to the backfield. He wanted to be a fullback and carry the ball. The only trouble was he couldn't hang onto it.

"I used to spend my summers in my dad's lumber camps in northern Wisconsin, getting in shape, while I learned the lumber business from the ground up. I chopped trees, sawed trees, blew out stumps and had fights every Saturday night with tough Swedes. One summer a pal of mine, who played football at Northwestern, went up to one of the camps with me, and I practised catching that ball and hanging onto it. Then, in the very first scrimmage that fall, I fumbled the first ball that was thrown to me—without even being tackled. The coach decided I'd be more valuable as a tackle and running guard. Dropping players, instead of footballs."

Under questioning, he says he "probably" fell in love several times during those four years. "Everybody does. But I ended up by marrying the girl I had gone with in high school—Lillian Vedder."

When the four years were over, he received a certificate in dramatics, in which he had minored. But he didn't receive a degree in economics, in which he had majored. He was short three hours of science. "And I'm still short those three hours. I never went back."

When he got out of school, he was invited to join four other ex-college singers on a Chautauqua tour in a condensed version of "Faust."

"I didn't think of that as a job," he says. "It was just a sort of lark. Sixty consecutive one-night stands, spread all over the Middle West, with most of the towns we played about 125 miles apart, and with everybody singing about three or four roles.

"When the tour ended, I said, (Continued on page 82)

IT'S IDLE

BY

IDA ZEITLIN

You've heard before this that Bette Davis is beloved of the press. One reason is that, given a job on Bette, you don't have to play true-and-false games with yourself. Her method is simple—so simple that you wonder it hasn't been discovered by others, who prefer to scream over misstatements than to supply facts. Maybe because they can make more noise that way! With Bette, you ask the questions and she gives you the answers.

Current rumors concerning her are three: She's at odds with her studio—the old reliable that crops up every now and then like the sea monster of Loch Ness; she's feuding with Ida Lupino, because Ida Lupino played Bette Davis in "They Drive By Night," and she's in love with Bob Taplinger, publicity executive at Warners.

Bette sat on the sofa of a New York hotel, hands linked behind her head, and hooted at all three. She'd come down from New Hampshire for a week to see plays and people, and her mood seemed as blithe as the Roman-striped trousers of the pajamas she wore.

"Shall I answer them in order, as put, or skip around for the fun of it? As put. Okay. Then for once in my life I can honestly say that there's no dissension at the studio. Which, for me, should be news. Everything's lovely between me and Warner Brothers. I liked 'The Letter.' I liked wearing short skirts. I'd been carrying fifty pounds of fabric around for a year and barely recognized my legs in modern clothes. I also like 'January Heights,' which I'm to do next. There's been some talk of 'Calamity Jane,' which I politely trust I shall not do. In any case, I'm being loaned to Mr. Goldwyn after 'January Heights,' for 'The Little Foxes.' In view of which blessing, I'm at peace with the world.

"Next? Feud with Miss Lupino. I stand lost in admiration for whoever dreamed that one up, since I've never met Miss Lupino. Or am I supposed to be boxing with her shadow? Neither have I seen 'They Drive By Night,' because I've been buried in New Hampshire for three months. I hear it's a swell picture and a swell performance, and I'm going to catch it, first chance I get. I also hope to meet Miss Lupino, and this is what I'd tell her if the subject came up.

"When I worked in 'The Man Who Played God,' Mr. Arliss insisted that I put my hair up. It was so short that the only way I could put it up was thus-and-so, which happened to be the way Constance Bennett was doing her hair at the time. I soon learned to my horror that I was supposed to be imitating Miss Bennett—the last thing that had ever entered my head!

"I don't know whether this talk bothers Miss Lupino as the other bothered me for a while. Till a friend said: 'Forget it. You've just one thing to worry about. Get in there and slug. Make every performance the best you're capable of. The rest is incidental. Today they say you're aping Miss Bennett. Next year they may say somebody's aping you. None of that matters. The industry will absorb as many of you as are worth your salt. Only one thing will keep you in—performance. Only one thing will jolt you out—lack of performance.' Well, all that sounded like good sense to me then and still does. Miss Lupino's good work won't make mine bad, and turn about, if I may say so.—Sorry." She smiled affably. "I know a hair-pulling match would make better copy."

Which brought us around to Bob Taplinger. Bette's smile deepened. "I hate to do this to you, but Bob and I are just good friends. There is such a thing as being good friends, you know, and since that's what we are and all we are, what else can I do but hand you a chestnut? Tell you what, though." Her hands went behind her head again. "I'll bend my mind toward coining a phrase that means the same thing but sounds different. I'll have it all ready for you next time you ask—say, twelve months from now?" she suggested sweetly.

So you've put your questions and been given your answers, and you're stuck with a lot of space to fill.

"Look," says Bette. "I'm not battling with Warners; I'm not biting chunks out of Ida Lupino; I'm not falling in love. But that doesn't mean I'm exclusively negative. Why don't you ask me what I have been doing?"

"What?" you inquire helpfully. (This kind of thing is known as a lazy man's interview, with the other fellow doing all the work. It happens infrequently.)

Among other things, she's been doing what most of us have been doing—feeling helpless and horrified over the state of the world. Newspaper men would come on the set where she was working with (Continued on page 70)

For months now it's looked as if Bette and Bob Taplinger were Romeo and Juliet-ing. Here, at last, is the real low-down!

GOSSIP!

says Bette

But in completely squelching this year's crop of lurid rumors,

Bette Davis quite unwittingly starts some bigger and better ones!

ON THE SET WITH "Flotsam"

Cast and crew frolic when the movie camera's back is turned!

In 1807, Mr. Noah Webster penned his famous dictionary and defined "flotsam" as "objects cast from a vessel and found floating on the sea." In 1939, Mr. Erich Maria Remarque penned a novel about Europe's political refugees and, with a nod toward Mr. Webster, entitled it—"Flotsam." Today Mr. Remarque is stealing the jump on Mr. Webster and is watching his book acquire thrilling celluloid life as the maiden production of the Loew-Lewin Corporation.

Despite its uncheery title and its tragic inspiration, "Flotsam," surprisingly, is not another movie preachment against the evils of Nazi-ism! Instead, it's a punchy tale of high adventure and rich friendships, with the refugee situation serving merely as a back-drop for the love affairs of its principals. Surprisingly, too, it's not being filmed on a handful of sorry-looking sets, but is actually employing more sets than "Gone With The Wind!" Since its main characters migrate from Austria, through Czechoslovakia and Switzerland, to France, over a hundred and twenty backgrounds are required to keep up with their travels!

Varying from vegetable markets to circus tents, these backgrounds even include a movie-style Swiss forest (birch bark and leaves pinned to several hundred local trees), the snow-blanketed Alps (the High Sierras, 150 miles outside of Hollywood, which look more like an American's idea of Switzerland than Switzerland itself) and a reproduction of the Prater, known in pre-Nazi days as the "Coney Island of Vienna."

Of all sets, it was the Prater which gave Director John Cromwell his worst moments. Built on an indoor stage, it had to be bathed in klieg lights to give the illusion of daylight—and klieg lights, if there are enough of them, can be hotter than a thousand hells. In this case, there

This is Glenn Ford—definitely not a pretty boy but, nevertheless, dynamite with dames. He's six feet two, weighs 165 pounds, has gray eyes and red-brown hair. Used to be a parachute jumper, but has been in "the profession" since 1938, when he understudied John Beal in a flop called "Soliloquy."

Though his part in "Flotsam" is as important as Fredric March's, he's still working for peanuts, and has to stick pretty close to a budget. Has but one extravagance, his hopped-up racer, in which he hits the local salt flats at 140 miles an hour. His studio's forbidden him to drive it until the film's finished.

He got the thrill of his life when he recently received his first fan letter! He'd just about given up hope of ever getting one, having gone fanlessly through 150 plays and eight movies. It was a role in "The Lady in Question" that fished him out of obscurity and started a huge influx of mail.

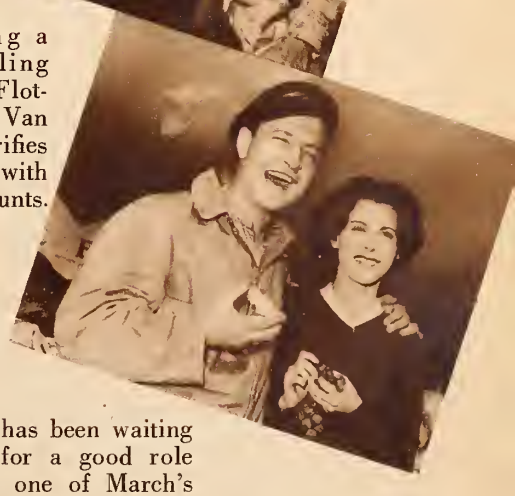
"Flotsam's" crew watches Director Cromwell (left, sitting) put Fred March in the mood for a big scene.

Fred forgets the serious stuff for a while, dons prop pigtails and eats ice cream with Fran Dee.

were enough of them. As a result, some seals needed for one particular scene spent five hours barking for relief (or their mates), the leaves on the Prater's phony trees kept wilting and fresh ones had to be tacked on before each "take" and, most exasperating, the melting performers, sometimes as many as thirty-five at a clip, sneaked off to Fredric March's elegant air-cooled dressing-room to become literal refugees from an inferno-like sound stage!

Item most worth noting about "Flotsam," however, is that, although it stars such film biggies as Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan and Frances Dee, it also offers a break to a pair of players who previously have been shoved into the background. Player Number One is "Sally," a sharp, little wire-haired terrier, for years the unsung stand-in for "Asta" of "Thin Man" fame. Player Number Two is Glenn Ford, a clean-cut, snub-nosed youngster cast as the romantic lead opposite Miss Sullavan, and introduced in the pictures on this and the foregoing page.

BY SYLVIA KAHN



Between takes Sullavan motorcycles and trades chat with Fred.

After doing a tricky juggling scene for "Flotsam," Philip Van Sandt electrifies Glenn Ford with some more stunts.

Frances has been waiting months for a good role like this one of March's wife. Fred, by the way, discovered Fran in 1930.

He's in constant "dutch" with his bosses, because he spurns all studio dates. Only has eyes for a certain little blonde secretary, and admits he's going "almost steady." He phones her nightly. Won't divulge her name, for her family frowns on actors and would bounce him if he gave her any publicity.

Glenn's an early-to-bedder. He loathes night spots, and his idea of a big time is an evening of Chinese checkers with "his girl." Has no movie friends except Bill Holden and they double-date on Saturday nights. Week nights, he studies lines with his mother, with whom he lives in a three-room apartment.

IT'S ALL OVER

How did the Stars behave during the

FINEST ACTOR

Charles Laughton for his Tony in "They Knew What They Wanted."

FINEST ACTRESS

Greer Garson for her interpretation of Elizabeth in "Pride and Prejudice."

GREATEST FUTURES

Versatile Betty Field made the headlines in all four of her movies.

Lovable Tom Mitchell matched his 1939 Award-winning performance.

BEST DIRECTOR

John Ford for his latest masterpiece—"The Long Voyage Home."

FIND OF THE YEAR

Wistful Martha Scott for her fine screen performance in "Our Town."

FINEST SUPPORTING PLAYERS

Ida Lupino for that magnificent emoting in "They Drive by Night."

William Gargan for his realism in "They Knew What They Wanted."

BEST PICTURES OF 1940

The Long Voyage Home (John Ford)

Our Town (Sol Lesser)

Arise, My Love (Paramount)

Rebecca (Selznick)

The Grapes of Wrath (20th Century-Fox)

Foreign Correspondent (Walter Wanger)

The Mortal Storm (M-G-M)

All This, and Heaven Too (Warner's)

They Knew What They Wanted (RKO-Radio)

Waterloo Bridge (M-G-M)

Three Faces West (Republic)

Abraham Lincoln in Illinois (RKO-Radio)

BY WOLFE KAUFMAN

BUT THE SHOUTING

year 1940, and just where are they heading?

When future film historians go through the books, and count up the scores, they will probably give the year 1940 a once-over lightly and pass on to years with more meat, more action. Nothing much happened. There were labor conditions which shook the industry; there was a war which changed the business completely; some of the best films of all times were made; the industry's number one prodigy, Shirley Temple, was fired; the industry's number one character player, Paul Muni, switched studios—but nothing much happened. Things were quiet.

One thing you can be sure of. The year coming up, 1941, will afford much more excitement, from a Hollywood standpoint. It must. Because, in spite of the fact that Hollywood is simply a timid little community in which 30,000 people earn a living by working for the movies, the general public throughout America likes to cling to its notion of Hollywood as the center of the world's gossip and scandal. And that's where Hollywood fell down badly during 1940—there wasn't a single major scandal. Poor, poor Hollywood. It has grown too respectable.

Well, don't worry, world, there are some nice, juicy scandals on the way. Mind you, everyone is trying hard to avert them, but chances are that you will be hearing in the very near future about the strange escapades of at least two of your famous movie stars, both of which have a good chance of landing in all the newspapers in all the countries of the world!

But enough of prognostication. Instead, let's take a glance back.

Well, Margaret Sullavan had a good year, George Brent had some swell pictures and Pat O'Brien had a poor year, ending up in a cloud of glory. Lucky boy, Pat. He wasn't getting very many good parts; he was too thoroughly typed (has been for years, of course) and was just about ready for a slide, when Warners came along with an idea for a two-reel short subject based on the life of Knute Rockne. Would Pat play the part? Pat said sure so fast that everyone at the studio wondered—but when he got through telling the bosses what he intended to do with the part, and how the story ought to be handled, they boosted the budget from $40,000 to $700,000 and the footage from two reels to eight. The result is "Knute Rockne—All American," one of the top Warner pictures of the year, and the high point of Pat's acting career. Lucky lad, Pat. Or is it luck?

Barbara Stanwyck, too, had a very swell year, winding up with the best assignment of her life, the femme lead in Frank Capra's "Meet John Doe," which won't be seen until 1941. Incidentally, the old saw about ill winds might come out of the mothballs here, but in reverse. Capra first asked for Ann Sheridan for the part. The Warners took the matter under advisement, but said nothing. So Capra hunted up Barbara. And several months later, when a new contract for Sheridan came up for discussion, she balked and argued and drew a suspension, with the Warners completely surprised and not knowing to this day what it was that was eating their little Annie. She was simply heartbroken at not getting the chance.

Tony Martin had wife trouble on one hand and studio trouble on the other. He couldn't get any pictures that suited him—if such there be—and decided to quit Hollywood. He went out on the road in a series of personal appearances and broke world records from here to there. Metro was so impressed, it grabbed him for another film try. The lad has fans, no doubt of that, but Metro will find that tailoring vehicles for him is certainly no cinch.

Joan Bennett became Mrs. Walter Wanger and starred in three pictures, two of which were good. Charles Laughton had a horrible year and had the skids all greased for him until "They Knew What They Wanted" put him back on top, stronger than ever. Charles' trouble seems to be that he isn't satisfied with acting alone; he wants to direct, too. You can't do it, Charles, old man—but you're a magnificent actor under the proper direction.

Fred Astaire struggled hard for a comeback, but didn't find the proper vehicles. Eleanor Powell was getting along swell until she fell seriously ill.

Carole Lombard is suffering from a serious problem—she's tired of being a zany and wants to really act. The old Hamlet motif, remember? "Vigil In the Night" turned out to be a problem child and "They Knew What They Wanted" was bad casting—although she does the best acting of her life in it. A tough year, so come on back to comedies, honey—we love 'em.

Anne Shirley got a break in "Saturday's Children," after Olivia de Havilland had turned it down. She impressed nicely in this, but hasn't consolidated these gains as yet. She may go places next year if she gets some good parts.

Mae West is definitely out for the moment, largely through a failure to change pace. She still has a big fan following, but the picture she made with W. C. Fields, "My Little Chickadee," did Fields a lot of good, but not Mae. Looks like a rest for a couple of years, unless some especially good vehicle shows up, of course.

Victor McLaglen had one of his very poorest years. Jon Hall is having a tough climb up the ladder, but is doing very nicely; he's worth watching. Frances Farmer tried again, in two pictures, after a spell of New York and legit. No dice. She still looks terrific and acts magnificently, but just won't bother watching her diction and mechanics.

Greer Garson, the most patient of them all, finally picked up "Pride and Prejudice" on a rebound from a Shearer rejection. A swell break for Greer, and it may win her the Academy Award for acting. Laurence Olivier did very well and is distinctly in the ascendant. He should be a top movie star in 1941, if he doesn't march off to war.

Errol Flynn continued swashbuckling his way through life and films, and had his usual swell year.

Anna Neagle firmly established herself among the American public's favorites. Her director-producer, Herbert Wilcox, brought her to Hollywood for one film. The war trapped them here and both have remained, while Anna caught on nicely.

Ann Sothern had the best year of her career, largely because she happened to be standing there as the "Maisie" bus came by. It turned out to be a perfect fit for her and, after several years of trying to find a spot, she is in—but solid.

Brian Aherne got stronger as the year went along, with the most diversified list of characterizations in his life, running the gamut from deep emotional roles to downright comedy.

Rita Hayworth had a pleasant year and seems to have been hit by a hunk of luck-lightning just as the year waned. She'll owe her big break (if it turns out to be a break, as it should) to Ann Sheridan, who balked on the "Strawberry Blonde" assignment, giving Rita a chance to pick up the script.

Clark Gable romped merrily through another okay year, and Spencer Tracy was probably (Continued on page 65)

'Twas a happy day for Lew when he graduated cinematically from collegiate roles to a full-fledged M.D.

BY JOHN FRANCHEY

Lew Ayres, who flashed to a meteoric success exactly ten years ago, slid into a decline and then popped back into circulation, swears it wasn't done with mirrors. The comeback which has catapulted him higher than he ever rose in his three previous careers in pictures has a definite logic and pattern to it.

He told us all about it over a Hollywood breakfast in his chalet perched high on top of Lookout Mountain. Over wondrous coffee and the most incredible blueberry muffins, Lew launched his explanation of an astonishing comeback which has ended in a seven-year contract with Metro.

"As a kid in my late teens I did a trick at Pathé and got canned just when I thought I was going good. I was all set to forget this brief fling in the movies when the late Paul Bern, then a director for Metro, showed Garbo a test I had made. Thanks to this kind gesture, I landed the young romantic lead in "The Kiss," opposite Garbo. There was no doubt about it. I was on my way. Not long afterward, I managed to bag the part of the bewildered young soldier, ignorant of what he's fighting for, in "All Quiet on the Western Front." The picture was a sensation. The gilded era for Ayres was ushered in.

"But it didn't linger. Worse than that, I realized all of a sudden that I had hit the toboggan, that I was playing in B pictures and contributing nothing startling even to these innocent numbers.

"Then I got sort of frantic. And the harder I fought, the faster I slipped. The faster I slipped, the harder I worried. I got myself in to such a turmoil that I wasn't much good to anybody, including myself. At which point I took time out to study my case quietly, and I finally arrived at a conclusion: I was pushing success, and that's a losing game.

"I shrugged, made an about-face and decided that

the Doctor Views His Case

He had a long siege of career-itis, but Lew Ayres took a dose of his own medicine and made a spectacular recovery!

Laraine Day had had two false movie starts when she was cast as Dr. Kildare's nurse. Looks like a steady job, for she's been in all six of the series!

if I had anything on the ball, the right chance was bound to come along. If not, what good would it do hurrying myself into high blood pressure and a case of acute despondency?

"Whereupon I proceeded to forget pictures entirely and to devote myself to picking up neglected interests. I found they were countless—and diverting, too. As a youngster, I had always been interested in astronomy, so I rigged up a homemade telescope. Always a sucker for that upper corner of the front page of a newspaper which predicts 'fair and warmer' or 'cloudy with showers,' I set up an amateur weather bureau. I had a helluva lot of fun.

"But eventually I woke up to the fact that my bank balance was getting low and not a nickel was coming in. I had almost hit bottom when Metro up and offered me a test for the character part of Henry in 'Rich Man, Poor Girl.' Did I snap it up? Of course I did. And it turned out to be a real characterization and not one of those sappy college boys I had been playing, varied on occasions by an Ayres portrait of a baby-faced gangster."

It seems that at this point, just when the Ayres stock began to go up on the Hollywood exchange, Metro decided to do a little epic all about an idealistic young interne and a cantankerous old sawbones of a professor hiding a heart of gold beneath his rough exterior. Offered the interne's part, Lew brooded over it and shook his head doubtfully. He finally left it up to a coin. Heads he'd play it, tails he wouldn't.

Heads it was.

Well, when the opus left the cutting room it was definitely on its own. It received neither a God-bless-you from Lew Ayres nor the customary publicity fanfare from the studio. Just another movie—that's all it was.

As it happened the unpretentious film, the first directing job of Harold Bucquet for Metro, caught on. In fact it received such a rousing reception everywhere that the startled Metro magnificoes decided to do a series. The picture—you guessed it—was "Young Dr. Kildare."

Today, riding higher than ever, Lew Ayres of the wistful expression and youthful appearance is grateful for the public's sudden interest in medicine. He's thanking his lucky stars for the overnight discovery by film-goers that there's drama in fighting death and romance in the white-coated man with the stethoscope.

One of Hollywood's most unique characters, he's no more the typical glamour boy in his ways and means than he is professor of Egyptology at Oxford University. Not that the subject of Egyptology would pall on him!

Anything but! For Lew Ayres, the man who was once married to Ginger Rogers and Lola Lane, has one of the most curious minds in Hollywood. He's fascinated by every subject imaginable—skirts cut on the bias and Aztec architecture, geology and photography, meteorology and dancing.

He's passionately fond of music—the living room of his home is evidence enough of that. Two huge record shelves are teeming with albums of classical music—symphonies, concertos, tone poems and what have you. Then there's a miniature organ which he plays at all hours of the night if he feels like it, and cater-cornered across the room is a baby grand piano. At this piano Lew Ayres, the musician-dreamer, sits for hours, poking away at fragments of half-remembered melodies, in search of a few pleasing chords which he can whip up into a theme for a composition. Anything but a dabbler, he's written a "Symphonic Fantasy," which has received high praise from critics. He's also written sundry tangos and pop tunes just for the fun of it.

His weather bureau is rapidly acquiring a sort of notoriety around town, but to hear Lew tell it, as a weather prophet he's a nifty handball player! As we said, the whole thing started when Lew decided to take life easy. His first piece of apparatus was (Continued on page 79)

Camera-angling Jules Buck reels 'em in from the Holly-wood social swim!

Ann Rutherford, haunter of bowling alleys and rifle ranges, dons evening togs for a dignified date with composer Gus Kahn's son, Don, who wants to lead a band.

Since their return from a Caribbean cruise, the Allan Joneses have been keeping up the suntanning with frequent sunbaths beside their real swanky swimmin' pool at home!

We all thought Dana Dale's case was cinched when Jeff Lynn gave her a sparkler. But what about his frequent N. Y. phone calls to old flame Doris Carson?

Helen Parrish, whose former fiancé, Forrest Tucker, eloped with Sandra Jolley, Earl Carroll beauty, forgets it all at the Florentine Gardens with Charlie Lang.

Though Vic Mature and Liz Whitney still play "on-again, off-again," Vic's definitely "on" in movies, having been picked for the lead in Anna Neagle's next film.

Claudette Colbert, who is on "trial" separation from Doc Pressman after five years of matrimony, threes-a-crowds it with William Goetz and his wife at Ciro's.

Since her front-page romance in New York fell short of marriage, Arline Judge has returned to a Hollywood film career. Here she is with Lloyd Pantages at Ciro's.

Here's the exception to all Hollywood rules! The Stuart Erwins defy columnists and gossiping home-wreckers by remaining uniformly blissful for eight long years.

Since his return to Hollywood, songster Tony Martin's been having a time for himself and Natalie Draper on the $5,000-a-week salary he gathered during his tour!

Though Don's considerably jarred 'cause the missus, Honore Ameche, up and sheared her braids, he can't stay solemn when Benny's around. The minute they see each other, it's a question of who can get the first laugh.

Jack Huber savors the sunny side of law! He insured Dotty Lamour's constancy to law partner Bautzer by taking exclusive charge of her social life during Greg's absence!

Wild and woolly westerner Tim Holt and wife, the former Virginia Ashcroft, celebrate their second wedding anniversary with Tim's handsome pop, Jack Holt, who doesn't look a day over 21—in spite of being a grandpa!

Looks like Laraine Day may yen for intrigue, the way she strays from M-G-M hairdresser, Sydney Guilaroff, for frequent rendezvous with Bob Shaw, the Linda Darnell heartbeat.

The lovable Ann fancies herself a glamour girl, hence those evening gowns with plenty of Sothern exposure!

it's an old SOTHERN custom

This business of making people laugh is one of a dozen swell Sothern traditions!

"But darling, it's so simple," Ann Sothern expostulated to the feverish and bewildered carpenter. "All you have to do is move the walls out eight feet, put in a new floor and raise the roof."

She sighed complacently, smiled sweetly and gave herself over to a completely new set of musings. As far as Ann was concerned, the little problem of enlarging her living room had been solved.

Needless to say, in a couple of weeks the room was handsomely altered, and in due time Ann's Crescent Drive house, formerly occupied by the Ritz Brothers, had developed into a showplace. She knows what she wants, this lady, and she usually gets it!

Make no mistake in classifying Ann. Despite that ridiculously turned-up nose, bee-stung lips that rate her "most kissable" to Franchot Tone, Burgess Meredith, Robert Young, Francis Lederer and Cesar Romero (in the movies, of course) Ann Sothern is an ingenuous soul. She's as individual as a gown by Schiaparelli, as friendly as a neighbor's kitten, as ambitious as Wendell Willkie. She firmly believes that anything is possible, and nine times out of ten she proves the truth of that conviction.

While "Maisie" made her what she is today, Ann is nothing like her screen self. "Maisie" has all of Ann Sothern's fine qualities, but Ann has none of "Maisie's" bad ones. Ann is a fine student. Her prized possessions are medals for original piano compositions. She is the last word in chic and femininity. She stands for meticulous living, but she has grown to depend a lot on the slap-happy "Maisie." Recently, when Ann and Mal (Mrs. Ray) Milland visited New York, "Maisie" was really a heroine! But let Ann tell it in her own melodramatic way.

BY JERRY ASHER

"We had dinner at Ruby Foo's. Then we went to see 'Foreign Correspondent.' We were so thirsty by the time we finally got out, we just had to have a drink. Well, we stopped and asked a policeman where we could buy a soda. He gave us that 'Oh, yeah?' kind of a look and sent us on our way.

"Finally we found a drug store still open way over on the other side of town. We leaned out the car window and asked another policeman, who was standing on the corner, whether they sold ice cream sodas. He gave us a knowing wink, assured us we certainly could get a "soda," then went whistling on his way.

"By this time we were laughing so hard, we almost fell out of the car. Just as we started to cross the street, I felt someone grab my arm. Turning, I looked into the toughest face I have ever seen. 'So you're looking for an ice cream soda,' he said knowingly, as he gave my arm a familiar squeeze. Suddenly, and quite unexpectedly, I became 'Maisie Ravier.'

" 'On your way, brother!' I yelled in a voice that Mal says sounded like Wally Beery's. She was as surprised as the man. He backed away. He tipped his hat. You never saw anyone so taken aback. We laughed about that incident for days, and I've had great respect for 'Maisie' ever since."

If Ann Sothern didn't possess a natural, lovable, down-to-earthiness, she never would have been able to breathe her lust for life into "Maisie." Yet, she sees herself as a glamour girl. Actually she looks the part. Those Bernard Newman gowns leave little to the imagination. She goes in for bizarre jewelry and hair-dos that look like French pastry. She's everything Hollywood (Continued on page 62) holiday greetings and a happy one 'twill be in this specialized-for-prettiness Saybury house-coat of slipper satin and velvet. $10.95 at Stern Brothers in New York.

Fashions in Gifts

Well dressed UNDRESSED...

A MERRY IDEA for Christmas!

What kind of Xmas gifts do YOU like to get? We've been asking that question for weeks . . . and the answers are almost equally divided! Half, "Practical, please!"—half, "Pretty, please!" Here are two pages of both kinds . . . all designed to give a lift to loveliness.

She'll love you for a rose printed double-quilted cotton robe with balloony sleeves 'n' billowy skirt. $3.98 at Stern's. And we could break into poetry on these "Baby Bunting" pajams in red that keep a gal warm from tiptoe to head! A precious gift at $3.95 at A. Harris & Co., Dallas, Tex.

A Bali Bow-Bra both beautiful and dutiful. Inserted net bow on cotton broadcloth. $1. Ribbon and lacy petty-skirt in rayon satin by Seamprufe, as sturdy as it is dainty. $2 at leading New York stores.

Gift trio: Charming Rhythm Romancer slip. $2. Blackton Shops. Flattering lacy rayon crêpe nightie. $3. Arnold Constable. "Petalskin" rayon bed jacket by Van Raalte, $2. McCreery's arcade. New York.

A long-sleeved nightie for cozy-dozy comfort. Beautifully tailored of rayon crêpe. $3 at Arnold Constable. For her toes these twinkling "Dotty d'Orsay" slippers in two-toned rayon satin. $1.98 at Saks 34th. Last, not least, a Mary Barron slip that's flounced 'n' bosomed in lace—fits like a dream. Rayon crêpe. $1.98. Oppenheim Collins, New York.

PROP SHOP

Jingle Bells, Jingle Bells,
Will Jingle Christmas Day;
If you buy your presents
In the Prop Shop value-way!

SANTA ANITA BRACELET

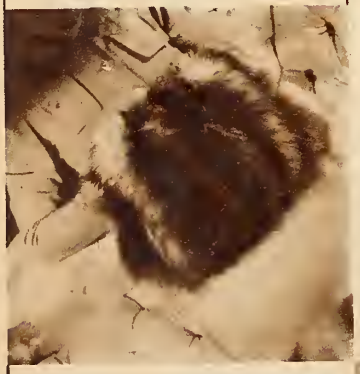
Looks like a lot, costs but a little. A modern motif for a modern miss. $1. Franklin Simon, New York.

SHE'S SMITTEN WITH MITTENS

A gay idea for day 'n' datetime. Drawstring doeskins in new colors! $2.00. Saks 5th Ave., New York.

HAND 'N' HEART

Just imagine! Big, beautiful silver-fox tail muff bag—a find at $14.98. Macy's, New York.



Eaton's famous Highland Papers for Christmas gifting in a delightful keepsake box. $1. Lord & Taylor.

ACCENT FOR EVENINGS

Pure silk chiffon hankie, with colorful sequin corner. Hand-rolled. $1 at Stern's, New York.

IT'S TINY BUT MY, OH, MY!

This baby mesh bag steps out at night all dressed up in gold or silver. $2. At leading stores.

A SPARKLING HEADLINER

Glitter glamour for beanie lovers! Sequins all over the place! $1.95. Lord & Taylor, New York.

Wiseacres who said Welles was taking Hollywood are due for a terrific shock—it's just the reverse!

BY DECLA DUNNING

It's a svelte and smooth-shaven genius that's seen around Hollywood nowadays. Above, with Del Rio.

HOLLYWOOD'S BANKRUPT GENIUS

Orson Welles is broke. The fabulous young genius from New York, Hollywood and Mars has spent his last fabulous dime. "Don't heckle me about my grocery bills," he said recently to one of the four lawyers who are on the payroll of Welles, Inc. The lawyers hadn't meant to heckle him. It was nothing more than the natural curiosity of a counselor who is confused by red ink.

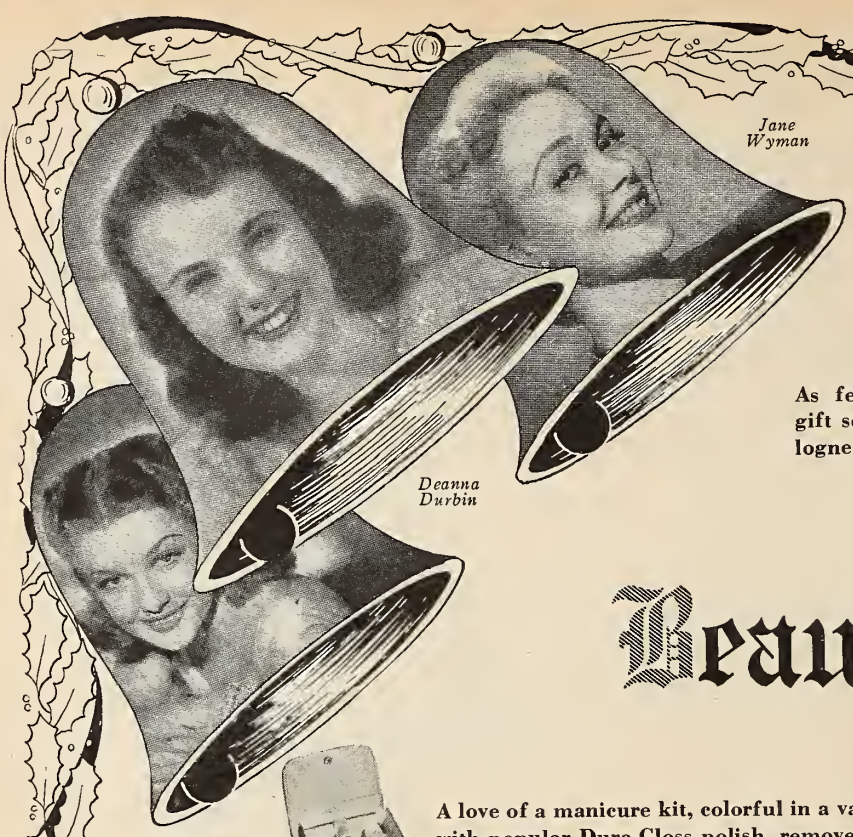
He came out here a little over a year ago to make a picture for RKO. Welles was then, and is now, a corporation in which stockholders share their respective interests. RKO offered the Welles corporation a hundred and fifty thousand dollars to make a picture. Welles himself was to write, act in and direct the production.

Hollywood gasped! "How does he get that way?" was the substance of local opinion. The green-eyed monster of jealousy joined the reception committee, and "—so he's smart, is he!" said the know-it-alls. "Well, let's see what he can do."

The first picture was announced, "Heart of Darkness," but it wasn't made. The second picture was announced, "Smiler With the Knife," but this, too, was set aside. Months passed. "Wasting money," criticized a town which has long since perfected the business of prodigality. Well, perhaps Welles was wasting money, but he wasn't wasting RKO's. He was wasting his own.

His contract stipulated that the money would not be paid until the picture was completed. No film, no dough, as we say on Vine Street.

Welles had a radio commitment in New York and he had to make bi-monthly appearances there. His transcontinental flights were a strain on his budget. And, although he was paid well for the Mercury Theatre of the Air, his net profits were negligible.



Why? Because Welles is a perfectionist, and anything just mediocre is not good enough for him. He wanted a larger orchestra than the sponsors had paid for, more actors and more rehearsals than those mentioned in the expense account. It isn't in Welles' nature to bicker about the difference between fifty dollars and a hundred, or five hundred and a thousand, so he simply paid the difference himself.

He is impatient of delay. More than once, when the salaries of actors working on his WPA productions were held up by government red tape, Welles wrote personal checks for the money. "Why not?" he would reply to any criticism that such generosity was unorthodox. He said the same when reproached by those who think he "hires" too frequently and "fires" too seldom. Or to the cryptic reminder that he is too broke to play Santa Claus.

"Wire a thousand immediately. Love, Orson" is the telegram which has all of his four lawyers rushing for the bromo-seltzer. "You can't do that," is their favorite, though futile, remonstrance. He can, and he does.

Where does the money come from? Well, once upon a time there was a young man who inherited a sizable sum from his father's estate. Welles spent the greater part of it taking the rap for the stockholders who had put their money into his stage production, "Five Kings." It was an artistic failure and Welles did not think that his stockholders should share the failure. The rest of his inheritance was pared down by taxes, and further depleted by legalities over the estate. He was left with twelve dollars in cash. That's right, the money doesn't come from there.

From radio, personal appearances or the theatre? Not now. Welles has been off the air for several months. He's been too busy working on his new picture, "Citizen Kane," to do a New York play. He plans to pick up a few pennies on a radio show but nothing (Continued on page 68)

Jane Wyman

Deanna Durbin

Ann Sheridan

BY CAROL CARTER

Beauty Notes

As feminine as flowers—Lady Esther's three-piece gift set contains face powder, cream and delicate cologne, beautifully boxed in rose-coral—a mere $1.00.

A love of a manicure kit, colorful in a variety of simulated leathers, completely equipped with popular Dura-Gloss polish, remover, cuticle remover, cotton, orange stick, file and emery board—a perfect stocking stuffer that looks much more than a modest fifty cents.

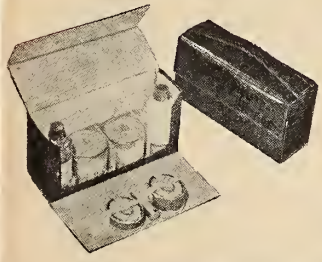
Irresistible is the word for this colorful holiday box full of props for loveliness—talcum, cold cream, skin freshener, lipstick and an amazingly pleasing little bottle of perfume—all for the astonishing sum of fifty cents—indeed well named Irresistible.

A sturdy, useful men's leatherette traveling kit, that can be used over and over again, is filled with three of those perfect Palmolive shave preparations—cream, lotion and talc, together with a tube of Colgate's dental cream. Substantial and good looking for $1.50.

A festive red and white sleeve, with black eyes sprinkled in gold stars, slips over this original green Kurlash box containing that excellent eyelash curler so dear to the heart of every girl who has used one. A gift of glamour that's gay and different—$1.00.

It's June in January for the lucky recipient of this fragrant box full of fresh-scented Spicy Apple Blossom talc, perfume and cologne so daintily packaged by Lander of New York and yours anywhere in exchange for one-quarter of the well-known American dollar.

A gift from Hollywood—as thrilling and beautiful as the glamour girls who use it—is Max Factor's Special Make-up Set containing powder, rouge, cleansing cream, lipstick and liquid Brillox in shades for blonde, brunette, brownette or redhead types—$3.55.



Hand it to Hinds Honey and Almond Cream for the prize repackaging trick of the year! This grand, fragrant and efficient old stand-by has been put into luxurious new white and fuchsia bottles, stunning to look at, easy to handle, a decorative yet practical gift—$1.00.

A Christmas star full of exquisite Cheramy gifts—April Showers perfume, toilet water, new perfume applicator, to be worn on a lapel, and a generous box full of fluffy Cheramy powder—loveliness enough to gladden any feminine heart—and a good buy for $2.00.

for Christmas Belles

For that extra special friend who loves luxury, give Hudnut's de luxe blue or maroon leather Week-ender Travel Kit with washable lining, completely outfitted with skin and cleansing creams, foundation lotion, freshener, powder, rouge and lipstick—all for $5.00.

A dressing table darling—this Cutex Fair Lady Set is slim as a whistle when closed, yet snaps open with all four bottles in upright position—polish, foundation, cuticle and polish removers plus five implements and cotton. Pearl finished fabric and gold case—$2.75.

A box full of glamour—that's what you're giving when you choose this smart, gold-colored metal Maybelline vanity containing that beautifier supreme—solid Maybelline Mascara in either black, brown or blue—to suit the personality of its recipient—75c.

Schoolmates, business friends and favorite relatives—all will adore you more for thinking of them in terms of this delightful pink and blue box of Pond's famous two creams, their fine Danya cream lotion, color-perfect face powder and cleansing tissues—50c.

Give a man a gift he can use and let who will be clever—that's our motto and here's our suggestion: Woodbury's smart leather-colored kit containing four delightfully masculine toiletries—shave cream, lotion, talcum and dental cream—all for one little lowly dollar.

Exquisite perfume by Djer-Kiss, stunning box by famous designer Lester Gaba—put them together and you have a charming gift for the prime sophisticate on your Christmas list—a gift that bespeaks good taste, high regard and belies the reasonable $2.50 it costs.

George Raft so firmly believes that a suit in the trunk is worth two in the closet that he actually totes along six trunks even on four-day trips!

HAVE YOURSELF A PEEK AT THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE THROUGH OUR FOOLPROOF KEYHOLE!

GOOD NEWS

RAFT GOES BUY-BUY

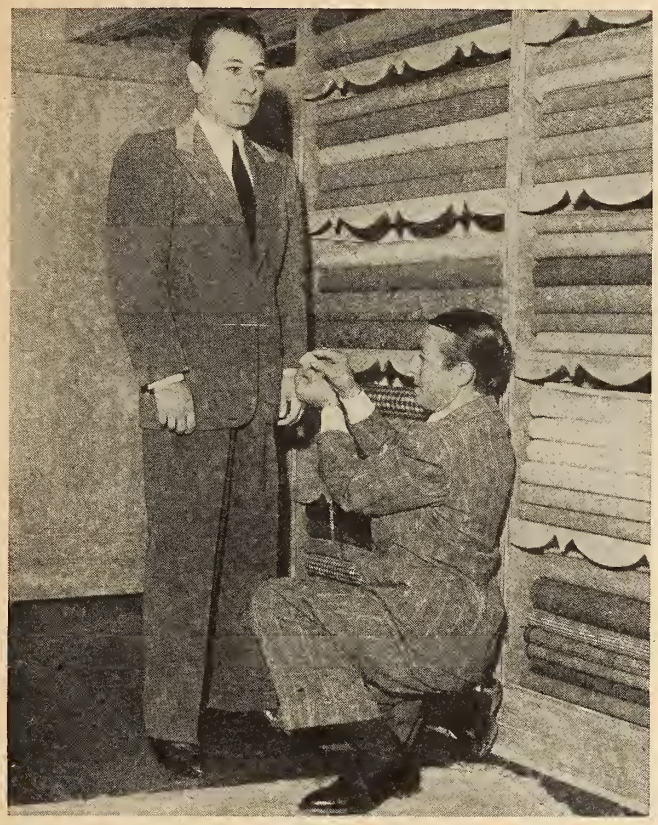
George Raft never has his suits cleaned. He doesn't have to. He just wears an outfit a half-dozen times or so, and passes it on to a friend! According to tailors Mariani and Davis, it's this little habit that enables Mr. Raft to annually run through 30 suits (at $140 per); 4 top coats ($150-$250 ea.); 5 sports jackets ($100 ea.); two tuxedos ($175 ea.); and 10 pairs of slacks (at $40 the pair). Mariani and Davis stitch all of these fancy duds, and for years have been the authorities on the famed Raft wardrobe. They kept George in the pink of fashion long before he could keep himself—financially, that is—because they knew he'd be a winner some day, and today he's their best cash customer. From them we learn that George is such a clothes-conscious fussbudget, he spends entire days having the buttons on a coat shifted until they "set" right; he refuses to wear green; he insists on tails two inches longer than the conventional length (to give him height); he never wears a vest and, no matter how successful a third fitting is, he demands at least six. Since George is their pet, Mariani and Davis don't mind humoring him. To keep him happy, they even send their sales manager up to the Raft home once a week for an afternoon of ball slinging with the baseball-batty Mr. R.!

BOTTLE BABY

Don't be surprised if a major studio and one of its top femme stars part company shortly. The lady's been hitting the bottle with too much vigor lately and the studio's tired of covering up for her. Her last "severe cold," the third in a few months, was nothing more than a good old-fashioned case of "d.t's" and held up an expensive production for several days. Her bosses don't think it'll influence her much, but they've warned the star the next time she slips they'll buy her a case of hooch and send her home forever.

DOUBLE-TAKES

The Lana Turner-Vic Mature romance, though dead these many months, was beautiful while it lasted. And like many a beautiful romance before it, it is being immortalized in a new Hollywood fad. Taking its place beside the hair-do fashioned after Juliet's and the hats adapted from Lillian Russell's is the craze they started for wearing similar clothes. You remember, when their affair was still blazing like an election eve bonfire, Lana and Vic matched everything but their nighties. Well, the idea caught on and scores of Hollywood kids—Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville included—have taken it up. What's good for a snicker these days, though, is the sight of Lana, garbed in a sleek Mature-era suit, dining at a neighborhood eatery with her newest blood-tingler, Tony Martin, and trying to look casual while the identically-garbed Mr. Mature sits nearby swearing love eternal to either Liz Whitney or Betty Grable.



THIN MAN

Bing Crosby has found a snake in the bosom of his own family. His kid brother Bob (of Dixieland Band and Crosby Bobcats fame), has been recruited from the airways and the danceways to appear in RKO's "Let's Find a Song." Bob's only been in town a few weeks but, judging by his fan mail, in that short while has developed into a formidable threat to Bing's popularity with the dowagers and debutantes. The reason, we suppose, is that he can give the gals something Bing never could—a miraculous, reducing diet. When Bob took his first screen test, it was discovered that he had too many chins and too many inches around the middle to become a movie hero. He hurried home and two weeks later returned to the studio 28 pounds lighter. Now he's receiving hundreds of letters from female fatties who want to know how he did it! Bob's getting a bang out of the letters, but not out of cracks like the one Kay Kyser let fly the other day. Said Kay: "I never expected to see Skinnay Ennis out here!"

LOVE ON ICE

From the inside, we hear that all's not sunshine and light in the romantic garden of Robert Stack and Mary Beth Hughes. The trouble started when the pair attended a party tossed by the Hollywood

Raft numbers his suits at 45 . . . prefers conservative tweeds, maroon ties, imported white hankies . . . closets trousers and jackets separately . . . dons newly pressed togs every morn.

Because a lapel ran one-half inch afoul, tailor-made George once tossed away a brand-new $140 suit and ordered another at the same price with the lapel one-half inch higher!

BY SYLVIA KAHN

Models' Guild. In the course of the evening, Bob disappeared and when Mary Beth found him he was being more polite than she deemed necessary to several of his gorgeous hostesses. To retaliate, she dropped an extra wink in the direction of Bob's best friend who tumbled fast. Now frosty glances are flying in every direction and unless something unexpected melts them, we have a pretty good hunch that both of these kids will again be hanging from the free-lance line.

SHORT SHOTS

Ida Lupino has written 13 new waltzes . . . There's a $40,000 insurance policy covering Paulette Goddard's gems . . . Two pairs of shorts are up for sale at the Hollywood Memento Mart—the contribution of Orson Welles . . . Ty Power nixed p.a. guarantees of $5,000 a week because he preferred an uninterrupted holiday with his wife . . . Josef von Sternberg is writing the story of his life . . . The Clark Gables share their ranch with 20 alley cats . . . Jeanette MacDonald knows less than nothing about present-day music . . . Jean Arthur personally makes her own bed . . . Devoted wife Merle Oberon lights her husband's cigars . . . Andy Devine owns more than 100 racing pigeons . . . Frank Morgan boasts he's never written a letter in his life . . . The almost unbearable heat of the set made a "Chad Hanna" elephant faint dead away. The great, big sissy had to be sprayed with a fire hose for hours before he'd come to!

LOVE GLANDS

If movie stars consulted their glands instead of their hearts, fewer Hollywood romances would wind up in a Reno graveyard. Anyway, that's the opinion of gland expert George Antheil who believes that two glands beating as one make for greater happiness than two hearts doing the same thing. For example, he claims Rosalind Russell should pick a mate of the Edward G. Robinson variety; Katharine Hepburn would be happy with a man like Leopold Stokowski; Deanna Durbin and Henry Fonda are sympathetic types, and so are Laurence Olivier and Bette Davis, Lucille Ball and Jascha Heifetz, and Ginger Rogers and Don Ameche. Mr. Antheil's glands give him other tip-offs, also. He says that Bette Davis' life is paced too fast, that Betty Grable ought never be sure of anything, and that Ginger Rogers' practicality is her downfall with men!

SLIP PARADE

Blondes and yachts aren't the only ingredients that make up a director's life. The big boys have a few worries tossed in, too. Take those over at Universal. On Monday, Director Allan Dwan sent Franchot Tone, Brod Crawford and several hundred cast and crew members of "Trail of the Vigilantes" on a costly thousand-mile location trip to the mountain region of Mexico. On Wednesday, the entire mob was back. Seems nobody bothered to find out that the mountains were so steep they couldn't get the equipment up! On Thursday and Friday, Director Eddie Cline shot some difficult saloon scenes for "The Bank Dick," and with the aid of signs and dialogue, the locale was established as Kansas. On Saturday, someone remembered that the Kansas of the "Bank Dick" period was bone dry and didn't have a legal drop of giggle water within its borders! On Sunday, we hear, Directors Dwan and Cline got together to figure out a good one to tell the stockholders.

DESI'S PROVING GROUNDS

Those who take Lucille Ball's heart affairs to heart hope her crush on Desi Arnaz isn't as serious as it looks. They expect no good will come of it, for there's a clause in Desi's new movie contract which prohibits marriage for three years. And everyone knows it takes a mighty strong love to survive that length of time! Furthermore, there's a rumor drifting in from the east that Desi's toting the torch for a well-known Broadway dancer whose husband no likee. Lucille's undisturbed by these items, however. Since Desi left for New York, he's nearly drowned her in letters, telegrams, phone calls and gifts—and that's all the proof she needs that she is, and will continue to be, head gal in the handsome Cuban's life.

Pat Morison modeled these satin pajamas at the Chinese Festival that was recently held at "Pickfair" by the Chinese Aid Council.

Aviatrix Lee Ya Ching, Roz Russell (Council chairman), Jane Withers and Mary Pickford sign the guest book for Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek.

No one would have recognized Dotty Lamour in her exotic Oriental make-up if they hadn't spied her handsome escort, Greg Bautzer.

DOPE FROM THE DOUGHBOYS

Garbo and Gable are replacing the Salvation Army and the Y. M. C. A. Sounds silly, doesn't it? But it's true. At least, in the army. Once upon a time those organizations, with their hymn sings and prayer meetings, were responsible for keeping up the morale of the American soldiers. Recently, however, the Government formed its own Morale Division and, in a poll taken among them, discovered that doughboys would rather have their spirits lifted by a movie than a Bible reading. As a result, hundreds of new theatres are being set up in army camps all over the country. To make the boys happier still, a second poll was taken to determine their picture preferences. Hold tight for the scores! The boys voted their top favorites to the Westerns, Hedy Lamarr and Ann Sheridan, and their top peeves—Connie Bennett and English actors!

MR. AND MRS. OLIVIER

The conduct of the newly-wedded Laurence Oliviers is responsible for many a lifted eyebrow on the set of "Lady Hamilton." The pair simply don't behave like people in love! When they were assigned the roles of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson, two of the most torrid lovers in all history, everyone thought they'd catch the spirit of the play and coo between takes, kiss behind prop stairs and scorch the sets with their clinches. Thanks to their British reserve, however, they treat each other as impersonally as Laurel treats Hardy. In fact, the only reminder that there's anything between them is the expression in Larry's eyes when he looks at his bride. It's sizzling—according to Mrs. Olivier. In one sequence, Larry portrays the battle-scarred Nelson after he has lost an eye, and wears a false lid and orb over his own. Shrugged Vivien when asked what she thought of her husband's disguise: "What does it matter? Larry can do more with one eye than most men can with two!"

OUR COUNTRY COUSINS

Public appearances on the part of rancher Clark Gable and his wife are as rare as tenth anniversaries in Hollywood. And they're due to become rarer still for the Gables, who already live well out of town, are now shopping for a home in another state. Their present ranch is too small to accommodate the thousands of heads of cattle they'd like to adopt and, when they find the right spot, they'll probably do a complete fadeout on the Movietown social scene. The last time they stuck their famous noses out their own door, they wound up at the Brown Derby and caused so much buzzing and comment that a friend finally picked up enough courage to ask them how come. Explained Clark: "We milked the cows, fed the chickens and horses, put the cats out—and came to town to see the rest of the animals eat!"

CAPTAIN, MY CAPTAIN

Look for a second long-distance marriage for Madeleine Carroll. Her French fiancé, Count Richard de la Rosier, is expected to land in New York in a few weeks and will make the Big City his permanent headquarters. The Count was a Parisian stock broker before becoming an air force captain and, it is said, would rather earn his own way in the East where he has established business contacts, than travel to Hollywood and become another movie husband. Incidentally, there's nothing curious about Madeleine's leaning toward a Frenchman. Though we think of her as a typical Englishwoman, her father, John O'Carroll, was an Irishman and her mother was born deep in the heart of France.

MARLENE HOLDS A CONFERENCE

Here's another "now-it-can-be-told" story. When Joe Pasternak put Marlene Dietrich's last picture into production, he called it "Seven Sinners" because he knew the sexy title was sure business bait. Only one thing was wrong with it. The title didn't belong to him. It was owned by Warners and Warners wouldn't relinquish it. After begging and bargaining for several months, Pasternak was forced to admit he was beaten and announced that his picture would be released under the title of "Tropical Sinners." However, Pasternak reckoned without Miss Dietrich. The persuasive Marlene ran into Jack Warner at Ciro's the other evening and, when you see the film on your neighborhood screen, it will be called—"Seven Sinners."

The proceeds of the Festival went to poor Chinese families, so the Dick Hallidays bought several autographed copies of Dr. Lin's books.

Starlet Mary Healy, who is engaged to Peter Lind Hayes, was another gorgeous model in the fashion show sponsored by Dolores Del Rio.

PRESIDENTIAL TIMBER?

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Abraham Lincoln and George Washington were good names in their day—so good, in fact, that thousands of mothers have blessed their newborns with one or the other of these titles in the hope that a distinguished tag would give them the right start in life. But, now, a new idol has cast his shadow over the maternity ward—Gary Cooper. Mrs. Rex Lease, wife of the cowboy actor, gave birth to her first child the other day, and named him Gary, after the star. In Fort Worth, an expectant mama shook her hero's hand at the première of "The Westerner" and hurried home to give birth to a nine-pound boy whom she named—Gary. And the original and most famous of all Cooper name-sakes is, of course, Gary Crosby, seven-year-old son of a singer called Bing. Young Crosby, by the way, idolizes Cooper and has most of his mannerisms down pat.

TALL STORY

Excess weight isn't the only figure fault that greys the hair of Hollywood's boys and girls. Excess height's another problem. Forrest Tucker who's 6′ 4″ nearly landed a part in "Legacy" but lost it because he's too big. The story calls for four brothers who are about the same size and the producers of "Legacy" couldn't find three other actors to match him! Stirling Hayden, Paramount's new charm dispenser, encountered a similar difficulty the other day. He tried to enlist in the U. S. Naval Reserve but was rejected because he's 6′ 4″ in his stocking feet. Too tall, said the Navy, probably because they were afraid his length would abash the other sailors! And while we're on the subject, 6′ 4″ is the height limit for male actors. Taller men can't find feminine (screen) mates and, besides, the present motion picture film wasn't designed for giants. The height headache often catches up with women, too. Lanky lovelies are as hard to cast as lanky leading men, and the limit for the frail sex is generally 5′ 6″. That's why 20th Century-Fox officials pray nightly that Linda Darnell will stop adding the inches. Linda's almost 5′ 5½″ now—and is still a growing child!

HOLLYWOOD FABLE

Last year, Walter Wanger paid a healthy sum for the movie rights to Vincent Sheean's "Personal History" and hired a fancy-salaried writer to do the screen adaptation. When the picture emerged not one single situation or line of dialogue from the original story had been used, so Mr. Wanger changed its title to "Foreign Correspondent" and shipped it out. The other day, Mr. Wanger announced that his next production would be—of all things—"Personal History!" We can't help feeling that this is where we came in.

SALTY HAM

The maddest man in Hollywood is Mr. John Barrymore. John, it appears, is making "The Invisible Woman" over at Universal, just a few doors down from W. C. Fields "The Bank Dick" set. On his first! day at work an inspired press agent approached John and asked him if he wouldn't please embrace W. C. for a publicity shot. John said he darned well would not. However, the agent was so insistent he finally broke down and agreed to stand still for "just one picture and no more." Now he's sorry someone didn't shoot him first. When he arrived on "The Bank Dick" set, the astonishing Fields lent an ear to the agent, glanced quickly at the Profile, and roared: "Take that man away! I'm in no mood for silly stuff today!"

THE AFFAIRS OF ANATOLE

Ever since Paulette Goddard and Anatole Litvak discovered each other so spectacularly, the gossips have been hungering for some comment from Miriam Hopkins, Litvak's one-time frau. Miriam, naturally, has issued no public proclamations but we have it on good authority that she's highly amused by the whole situation. In fact, she feels responsible for it! When she and Litvak split, Miriam confides, she sat down and wrote out a long list of the things he had done that were wrong during their wedded life. To her list she added a series of suggestions on how to treat a woman, and then sent the whole business to him. From that day forth, claims she, Anatole Litvak has been the most successful playboy in Hollywood!

GOLDEN BOY

The golden stream of prosperity flowing into Gene Autry's lap has the town's top-notchers sour with envy. Without benefit of ballyhoo, Gene built his yearly income into a figure well beyond the six zero mark and the citizens are scratching their scalps trying to dope out his formula. Well, here's how Gene explains it to the income tax boys: for eight pictures a year, $800,000; for advertising testimonials on products ranging from hair oils to pop guns, $100,000; for fifty weeks of broadcasting, $50,000; for Gene Autry records, $25,000; for a twelve week p.a. trek and three weeks in a rodeo, $90,000. You add it up. We're too busy wondering what (Continued on page 75)

Confessions of a campus cutie

Betty Grable, the long-stemmed American beauty, looks back on her hey-de-hey days!

BY JAMES CARSON

In "Down Argentine Way," Betty (seen here with co-star Don Ameche) has the Ginger Rogers-ish sort of role she's always wanted.

Director "Wild Bill" Wellman is Betty's second favorite Conga partner, but Fred Astaire has a slight edge on him.

Betty Grable didn't get a chance to go to college—but don't worry about her; she'll get by. She is one little cookie who will always get by. She has known what the score is, to hear her tell it, for many a day.

"I've been in Hollywood eleven years now," she says. "That's a lot of years. I think I know how to handle the town. I think I know the angles."

Eleven years. It doesn't make sense. Why, the kid's only— "How old are you, Betty?"

"Twenty-three. I started in the movie business when I was eleven, at Fox. . . ."

It was back in 1929. Betty arrived in town with her mother. They were on a vacation from St. Louis. Somebody mentioned that Fox was looking for specialty dancers for a movie called "Let's Go Places." Back home Betty had been taking dancing lessons since she was five. She thought it would be fun to try for the movie job.

She made a test, but the studio said it wasn't good enough. However, they did need some chorus girls for a picture called "Happy Days."

So Betty Grable, aged eleven, lied valiantly about herself, insisted she was going on fifteen and got away with it!

"Happy Days." It was a good omen. Betty's first movie. The beginning of a new life.

She stayed at Fox eighteen months. Then somebody raised a rumpus about too many minors on the lot and all of them got thrown out, Betty included.

Out of Fox about a minute and a half, she got a job singing with Ted Fio Rito's band. That kept her in the public eye. More important, it kept her in the producers' eyes.

Pretty soon RKO was getting ready to shoot a picture called "The Gay Divorcee," starring Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire. They wanted a girl in it to sing a number with Edward Everett Horton, "Let's Knock Knees." Betty got the job. Also an RKO studio contract.

She still wasn't started. She kept moving, but nothing important happened, nothing big. After three years, RKO dropped her. And wouldn't you know that just at this time Paramount was starting a whole slew of college pictures? Betty moved in.

She became Josephine College, the girl with the million-dollar legs, the campus cutie.

But two years later she graduated—in other words, she was out of a job.

Lots of ups and downs, huh? Not so many downs, really. Changes, maybe, but not tough spots. In all her eleven years in pictures she has been off the payroll only two months. Not bad!

After Paramount, she went out on a personal appearance tour with Jack Haley. Buddy de Sylva saw her in San Francisco. He was casting (Continued on page 80)

MRS. DAVID S. GAMBLE, JR. (the former FREDERICA VANDERBILT WEBB)

THE COUNTESS OF WINCHILSEA (granddaughter of the late CORNELIUS VANDERBILT)

MRS. VANDERBILT PHELPS

BEAUTY PRIMER...de luxe

If A stands for American and B stands for Beauty, then C stands for Cleanliness!

American Beauty, no matter how luxuriously nurtured, is always touched with the white wand of a puritan, almost bandbox daintiness! Hair is shining. Skin is visibly cared for, sweet and clean—like fruit blossoms after a shower.

In many of America's leading families, the rites with which this exquisite flower freshness of skin is wooed are the simple and adequate ones of Pond's beauty primer de luxe:—

BURY your face under sleek layers of Pond's Cold Cream—and smack your skin all over briskly with your cream-coated fingers. Do this for 3 full minutes. This cream serves two needs—it cleanses and softens, by mixing with the dead surface cells, dust and make-up on your skin.

CLEAN OFF all this softened debris with the absorbent purity of Pond's Tissues. Wiped off, too, are the softened tops of some of the blackheads, rendering it easier for the little plugs of hardened sebum to push their way to the surface.

COVER and BRISK UP a second time with Pond's Cold Cream. Again wipe off with gracious Pond's Tissues. In your softened, glowing skin, lines seem softer, pores finer.

FRESHEN now with the cool, astringent splash of Pond's Skin Freshener. Then COAT your cool, clean face with its final benediction—Pond's Vanishing Cream. This cream has the specific function of dispersing remaining harsh particles, little chappings caused by exposure, and endowing your skin with a flattering mat finish. Wipe off after one full minute. Then observe with what favor your skin receives—and holds—its powder.

Perform these simple yet luxurious Pond's rites in full—before retiring or during the day. And again in briefer form as your skin and make-up need freshening. Already some thirteen million American women use Pond's!

CHARMING CHRISTMAS BEAUTY BOXES

Beauty Gifts

in 3 sizes and assortments of Pond's authoritative Creams, Powder, Danya and Pond's "LIPS"- especially packaged for Christmastime-giving in boxes of lovely design. Priced 29¢ to 59¢. See them now at your favorite beauty counter.

Copyright, 1940, Pond's Extract Company

MRS. DAVID S. GAMBLE, JR. (the former FREDERICA VANDERBILT WEBB)... THE COUNTESS OF WINCHILSEA... MRS. VANDERBILT PHELPS... all great-great-grandchildren of the famous COMMODORE CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, founder of the family fortune. Each has for years followed the simple yet luxurious Pond's precepts of skin care and your younger sister, Joan, one evening when we were having a dinner party, opening the door of your bedroom and running out before us—in your birthday suits, utterly nude—to the amazement and amusement of everyone!

Diana Lewis, who's Jeanette MacDonald's arch rival for Nelson Eddy's affections in "Bittersweet," primps up before starting her pilfering!

"DEAREST OLIVIA AND JOAN . ."

(Continued from page 25)

I recall, too, that even though you were so young I never tried to impress any religion or creed or bigoted ideas upon you—except one word—tolerance. And from what I have heard you took the lesson well, because movie people who visit Japan tell me the two of you are decent, broad-minded, intelligent girls.

Then there were long years, while you grew into womanhood, when I didn't see either of you. That was when you were in Saratoga, Calif., and your mother had married Fontaine and I had married again in Japan.

And Olivia, the last time I saw you—remember?—when I crossed the Pacific and met you in Carmel, California, that delightful resort. Remember the wonderful week we had together, and how we vowed to repeat the experience again one day? You were seventeen at the time, stage-struck, and when your mother spoke of money difficulties I decided to send you fifty dollars a month to go to dramatic school. I also decided to take Joan back to Japan with me to help her gain a broader view of life.

And Joan, remember that trip across the ocean, from San Francisco to Yokohama? Does your memory go back the seven years? Once in the ship's bar, I found you drinking cocktails and acting very sophisticated amidst a group of men—and I hinted to you that a girl of sixteen shouldn't touch cocktails and stay up long past midnight and you replied, "I may be sixteen but I feel twenty!"

Then we got to Japan, Joan. Remember? You remained for a year and a half, all the while trying to persuade me to return to America. And when I refused, explaining it was not legally possible, you were angry, and wouldn't eat, walk or swim with me. And those days when you went to American School in Tokyo, where I had once been principal, and you were never interested in your homework—but you were interested in dancing and make-up and make-believe. I won't forget the morning, during a school vacation, Joan, when I asked how you would like a position in a Tokyo department store when your school days were finished—and you took it as an insult insisting you wanted to be an actress.

AND then there was the time you asked me how long it would take to learn chess. And I told you that, to become really expert at it, about five hours of practice a day. And later I found a letter on your table, a letter you were writing to a girl friend, saying, "I am leaving Japan and coming home because W. A. wants me to spend five hours a day learning to play chess, and I positively refuse to!" I reproached you a little about this, but you said you had to find some excuse for returning to America—and I realized that you had a marvelous imagination and might become some kind of artist after all.

And now, Joan, you are in Hollywood. You are the famous actress, Joan Fontaine, who recently made such a tremendous hit in "Rebecca." Now you are married to a famous actor, Brian Aherne, and it hurt me that I didn't know about your marriage at all, not a word from you. I learned about it from a reporter on one of the local newspapers. Immediately I wrote you my deepest congratulations, and Brian Aherne, a real gentleman, replied with a letter thanking me and telling me that "Joan is the finest woman that ever lived." So it must be love and I'm glad you got such a man.

Today in Japan here, hundreds of Japanese come up to me and say, "You are the father of Olivia de Havilland and Joan Fontaine, aren't you? Do tell us some inside things about your daughters!"

But what can I tell them, girls? I can only give my candid opinion about trifling things—that, for example, I don't like the way you usually fix your hair, Olivia, and I object to the sameness of your smile on all photographs, and that I think you, Joan, will in the long run become the greater actress because you have more spirit than Olivia, though she is the brighter.

Neither of you, unfortunately, have inherited your mother's voice. She had a lovely voice and an ear for music. I know the two of you can't sing and can't dance with professional skill. However, you have a flair for sketching—and are fairly good actresses, though I hope you will become much better.

YOUR main fault, Joan, in my opinion, is that you are over-sensitive. You lack, also, a healthy sense of humor or, at least, you used to. For example, you could never take my kidding about romance. And you were always a bit literal thinking I must be a gangster because I was in business. In America you'd heard all business men were gangsters of a sort.

Well, girls, I didn't mean this to be quite so long. I had wanted only to remind you once more while there was still time, of our days together, and of the fact that still, in a far corner of the muddled earth, you had a father who often reads about you and thinks about you and bears only feelings of good will toward you both.

I have lived to see the two of you, despite your faults and various handicaps, become famous and wealthy cinema lights. I have seen you, Joan, married. And by next year I hope you, Olivia, will be married, too, to Jimmy Stewart or some other decent young actor fellow.

I have heard from neither of you for years—I am not referring to money—but to mere postcards or letters. And this, despite the fact I have mailed you cards on every Christmas week. Perhaps you haven't seen my cards. Maybe that's it.

But I am proud, believe me, to be the father of a Joan Fontaine who could make "Rebecca" and an Olivia de Havilland who could make a living thing of Melanie in "Gone With The Wind." And, somehow, sitting here in my cheap Bunka Apartments in Tokyo, with the streets dark outside because of practice air-raid precautions, I am glad that I have begun—and finished—this aimless interview-letter I have long wanted to write.

Good luck, daughters, and may married happiness be with you both!

The elderly man sighed, took off his spectacles and massaged his nose.

"Sign the letter," he said. "Sign it—'Your father, W. A. de Havilland.' And there's your interview. Now, what about a good, tough game of chess?"

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 17)

citizens and two bands . . . Inhabitants' hysteria was climaxed by the arrival of Clark Gable who came up to have a little vacation fishing while wifie Carole slaved . . . Frank Fay completed his role before the rest of the cast, so went home and plagued the rest of them with telegrams about the joys of leisure. Carole and Gargan learned that Fay's hay fever is allergic to cats, so they sent him twelve live kittens at one-hour intervals.

★★★ Too Many Girls

This is a tough one to tag. Although stage producer, George Abbott, filmed the play without sufficiently adapting himself to the cinematic medium, it's really swell entertainment in spite of itself.

The plot is thin—the regular Joe College stuff—but it has a new twist and amusing situations. The four best football players in America enroll at small-time Pottowatamie College, in order to keep their eyes on Lucille Ball. There is some slick dialogue, and Lucille and all four boys are good entertainers: she's a beauty; Richard Carlson is convincing as the romantic element; Desi Arnaz enthralls the women theatre-goers; Hal LeRoy does some superb dancing and Eddie Bracken gives excellent comedy relief. Ann Miller and Frances Langford are already enrolled at the school to supply romantic complications, plus dancing and singing.

You will want to know about Bracken and Arnaz. The former is a new comic who will be heard from because of his natural and youthful comedy pan and his masterful timing. Arnaz is the woman-killing young Latin about whom you've heard so much gossip lately.

It doesn't add up to much, but—oh, heck, go see it; you'll have fun. Directed by George Abbott.—RKO-Radio.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: The musical comedy from which the film was made ran eight months on Broadway; Arnaz, Bracken and Le Roy were in the original cast . . . Desi Arnaz developed a very bad charley horse from the football sequence; his hands, though used to playing the conga drums, were so puffed when the number was finished that he had to spend two hours soaking them and receiving first aid treatment to reduce the swelling . . . Ann Miller attended Hollywood High night school to acquire her knowledge of Spanish . . . All the stage songs are in the film, plus one new tune by Rodgers and Hart, "You're Nearer" . . . Ann Miller worked in films once before, but all the studios let her slip away, they weren't interested; she went to New York, got into the George White "Scandals" and now they're all fighting for her . . . Desi Arnaz's real name is Desiderio Alberto Arnaz y de Acha.

★★★ Little Bit of Heaven

Here is a lovely little unpretentious film which will afford you a pleasant evening of genuine fun. The studio has not figured out a formula for Gloria Jean

(Continued on page 73)

"How I won my stepchild's confidence"

1. I'm John's second wife. And when I married him, I married his little girl, too. It's worked out beautifully, except . . . well . . . you know how it is in a small town. If Nancy should happen to be crying when some busybody passes by, the whole town hears about how I "mistreat that poor motherless child."

2. I love Nancy and I refuse to spoil her. So this morning, when she refused to take her laxative, I forced her to. She flew into a rage and cried, "My real mommy never made me take that nasty-tasting stuff—you don't love me!"

3. That hurt so much I burst into tears. When my sister, Laura, dropped in later, I told her how Nancy kicked up a fuss every time she had to take a laxative. Then Sis explained how her doctor solved the same problem for her.

4. "I used to force Roy to take a bad-tasting laxative," Laura said. "But, according to the doctor, that may shock a child's delicate nervous system. He said children should never get an adult laxative, but one made especially for children. He recommended Fletcher's Castoria."

5. "And it's wonderful!" Laura went on. "Fletcher's Castoria is thorough . . . yet it's always mild and safe. There isn't a single harsh drug in it. It works mostly in the lower bowel so it isn't likely to upset a child's digestion. I wouldn't dream of giving Roy anything else."

6. The minute Laura left, I went out and bought a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria. It's everything she said it was, PLUS a peacemaker. Nancy loves the taste of it, and our laxative tussles are ended. Now we're always friends.

HERE IS THE MEDICAL BACKGROUND

Chief ingredient of Fletcher's Castoria is senna.

Medical literature says: (1) In most cases, senna does not disturb the appetite and digestion or cause nausea . . . (2) Senna works fundamentally in the lower bowel . . . (3) In regulated dosages it produces easy elimination and has little tendency to cause irritation or constipation after use.

Senna is processed in Fletcher's Castoria to eliminate griping and thus allow gentle laxative action.

Chas. H. Fletcher CASTORIA

The SAFE laxative for children

IT'S AN OLD SOTHERN CUSTOM

(Continued from page 46)

expects a star to be, and it's an exciting demonstration. However, where glamour leaves off, Ann Sothern really begins.

One day she went out on a shopping spree. In a glamorous mood she bought a sensational thirty-five dollar nightgown. It was sheer and sexy. It was trimmed with Alençon lace. Ann wore it to bed that night. Her feet were cold. So she pulled on a pair of two-bit cotton foot warmers. Sleep just wouldn't come. Ann covered her eyes with a heavy black blindfold. The next day she went out and bought yards and yards of batiste. Her conscience bothered her for being so extravagant, so she copied the pattern and made dozens of gowns for three ninety-eight a piece! No self-respecting glamour girl would ever tell this on herself.

THERE was that night before her mother's housewarming. Ann was supervising the decorating. Suddenly she decided the new house must have new lamps. Barker Brothers on Hollywood Boulevard was open until nine. There was all next day to shop, but knowing she wouldn't sleep a wink with things undone, Ann jumped into her car, wearing old slacks, tennis sneakers, no make-up and a none too becoming snood. An hour later she emerged triumphantly from Barker Brothers both arms loaded with packages.

Just at that moment the Noel Coward plays at the El Capitan Theatre next door had intermission. Dozens of famous stars dripping with jewels and ermine poured out. Fans swarmed all over the place. Hedy Lamarr, Claudette Colbert, Marlene Dietrich were besieged by autograph hounds. Ann was shoved back and forth until she almost fell on her fanny. Juggling her lamps she ploughed through a million dollars worth of glamour and climbed into her little Ford coupé. Not one person had paid her the slightest attention! Wild horses couldn't have kept Ann from telling that one on herself.

Ann's shopping tours are traditional. Invariably when she buys something new, something old must be moved out to make room. She makes a big thing out of finding a place for it and always winds up saying to Roger Pryor, who has long since resigned himself to the routine, "Poppy, you know that old spinning wheel I bought at that auction? Don't you think it would just look adorable in your room?"

Needless to say at his stage of the game, "Poppy" has to dig his way out when he gets up every morning. Ann loves to shop for her friends, too. If she sees something she thinks they'd like, she just has it sent right out—C.O.D.

Ann and Roger, dressed to the teeth one night, were on their way to a swank opening at the Santa Monica Miramar Hotel. Taking a shortcut, they went through Westwood Village—which was Roger's great mistake. As they passed Sears-Roebuck, Ann, seeing the store lit up, grabbed Roger's arm and cried:

"Look, Poppy. Sears-Roebuck is open. This is a good time to get the tent to cover Carlo's doghouse. It may rain any day now, and I don't think we should put it off."

So Roger in white tie and tails, Ann in gold lamé and silver fox, went into Sears-Roebuck and bought a tent. Besides Carlo, there is also Doonie, a Scottie, and Budgie, a fox terrier, that Ann lovingly calls her "old maid."

Dogs and little boys can always find a warm spot in the heart of "Maisie" Sothern. Occasionally she still finds herself wandering into little David's room. It has never been touched since the day he was taken from her. Ann's love for the poor little boy was truly great, and had his family allowed him to remain with her, Ann had plans to make him independent for life.

Ever since Ann, the George Murphys and Cesar Romero started out in show business, they have kept in touch with each other. Today all their dreams are realized. Each owns his own home. Each is famous and successful. During their weekly get-togethers they never fail to talk about the time when the Murphys danced in a Chinese restaurant in exchange for their dinner; when Butch Romero did a corny vaudeville routine with top hat, high kicks and a cane; when Ann was broke and slept in an all-night movie. Ann loves these evenings. More than the swankiest Hollywood party.

Judy Garland raises some smoke at the Motion Picture Mothers' dinner dance by peddling cigarettes!

Whenever her sisters, Bonnie and Marion, come over, Ann has something new cooked up. Long ago they learned to be prepared for anything. Ann, who says she is a frustrated hairdresser, cut bangs on herself. So they had to have bangs or else. Ann bought a sewing machine (and promptly called herself Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl) and took lessons. Her first little garment was a pinafore. So Bonnie and Marion wore pinafores. Ann called them, "My little Mädchen in uniform." Ann has names for herself for all occasions. During the period that she suffered from anemia, she referred to herself as "Bloodless Sal." When she was in New York with Mal, she sent telegrams to their friends and signed them "Rosetta and Vivian."

Her most cherished possession is an old pongee make-up robe. It's faded and baggy. The belt hits her some place around the knees. But life wouldn't be complete without it. She panics herself every time she puts it on and refers to herself as "a fugitive from Adrian."

Recently Ann took to gardening. She may run out of "Moment Supreme" but never Vitamin B. Roger insists she uses it to spike his scotch and soda. One night when Rhea Gable invited her to a card party, Ann called up apologetically:

"I'm so sorry, darling, but I can't come over. I'm working out a perennial border for mama."

While she was jobless for a year Hollywood gave her the brush-off. "Elephant Annie" isn't forgetting. She knows that her "Maisie" pictures are making more money for the studio than some of their artistic flops. Modestly, she realizes that she has carried the burden herself—with the possible exception of Robert Young. Still Ann can't be induced to go in and ask for a raise. She is grateful for the chance to prove her ability. She has faith enough in herself to believe she will eventually be rewarded. Recently a well-known Hollywood producer, who forgot he once told her she'd always be a lousy actress, came to her and said:

"Ann, you're a fool to let them shove you around. Why, you're one of their biggest stars and they don't appreciate you. Your last 'Maisie' did more business at the boxoffice than their A pictures."

"Yeah," cracked Ann. "What other picture was playing on the same bill?"

The disarming manner Ann employs is a constant source of amusement. Quite seriously she confides that before the war, in her nightly prayers, among other things she asked to do a picture for Ernst Lubitsch. She always seems surprised when you laugh at her.

ON that New York trip Ann and Mal arrived on a Sunday. They could hardly wait to start their shopping. Bright and early Monday morning they drove up in front of Saks Fifth Avenue. The doorman recognized Ann and bowed her to the entrance. Salesladies recognized her and came forward eagerly. A Hollywood movie star on a New York shopping trip. What could be sweeter!

"May I assist you, Miss Sothern?" asked the head saleslady solicitously.

"Why, yes, thank you," Ann beamed.

Opening her bag, she took out a long list of things that even included a silver fox cape. Her eyes focused on the very first item. With all the aplomb of a lady who was about to purchase the Empire State Building, Ann exclaimed:

"I'd like one blond hair net."

If "Maisie Ravier" warms your heart, makes you laugh and cry until you want to reach out and embrace her, perhaps this will give you a rough idea of how she got that way.

HOW LOVE HAS CHANGED!

(Continued from page 26)

was terrified of the moon-calf look in my big brown eyes. He was a happily married man. Not only that; he was the father of a new-born baby. When I found out about that baby, I was very, very unhappy. I just couldn't hang onto my illusions . . . That baby has grown up to be Barbara Denny, the beautiful Earl Carroll showgirl.

"But we were talking about love scenes—"

"When I first started," Mary resumed, "love scenes were on the stiff and formal side. Heroines were stiff and formal. 'As pure as the driven snow,' to quote an early subtitle. I think the vamps and the villains must have sold the pictures. Audiences could not possibly have paid to see those heroines. And the heroes were just as pure.

"Virtue isn't exciting, dramatically speaking, until it's threatened by wickedness. Women in the audience got a vicarious thrill out of the efforts of the villain to seduce the virginal heroine. And men in the audience got a vicarious thrill out of the efforts of the vamp to entice the innocent hero. The men, particularly, got their money's worth. Or maybe you don't remember Carmel Myers in a Turkish harem dress, consisting chiefly of a G-string, a veil and two beads; or Louise Glaum in a tiger skin; or those two super sirens, Theda Bara and Nita Naldi, in shimmering black satin, absolutely skin-tight.

Nowadays they make films about heroines who hold their men by out-vamping the vamps. But in those days heroines and vamps were not sisters under the skin. Heroines expressed love one way, and vamps expressed it another way, and there was no happy compromise. If you were a female heavy, you were strong on the bodily contact; if you were a heroine, you were strong on the spirituality. The idea was to look demure and unsophisticated. That wasn't too hard for me.

SOMETIMES the hero kissed me, sometimes he didn't. If he did, it was with reverence for my purity. And if he didn't, it was because he loved me soulfully, if you know what I mean. I didn't mind. In fact, I rather enjoyed being 'The Revered Type.' I didn't realize the fun I was missing."

Mary laughed at the recollection.

"Then came Valentino. He ushered in a new era, in which the heroes made love passionately. For the heroines, that was an era of back-breaking embraces and love scenes that were wrestling matches.

"Then there was the flaming youth cycle, started by F. Scott Fitzgerald's novels. That was the era of showing what wild parties and necking were doing to the younger generation. I remember one picture in which I tossed away all my inhibitions and did a swan dive off a balcony. A stunt girl did the actual dive, but it looked as if I did it, and the effect was terrific.

"Then there was the day of 'The Problem Drahmah.' Heroines regularly broke their hearts either over their own sins or the transgressions of the men they loved. They wept their way to happiness.

"There was a time when every heroine was a flirt and made love frivolously. There was another time when every heroine was a pretty little toughie who thought she didn't want anything to do with love—until the right man forcefully kissed her. And still another when the heroes were shy and the heroines did the pursuing. And every so often there would be a return to the poetic, tender type of love.

"Right now I'd say the tendency is to express love by suggestion, rather than actual physical illustration. In 'All This, and Heaven Too,' for example, Charles Boyer and Bette Davis never touch each other, but you don't doubt the depth of their love. In 'Spring Parade,' you don't see Robert Cummings kiss Deanna Durbin because a pillar gets in the way, but your imagination tells you what happens. In 'Brigham Young,' the big love scene has Tyrone Power and Linda Darnell talking to each other through a curtain. Their love is something you sense, rather than see.

"I haven't been kissed on the screen for so long, myself, that I've forgotten what it's like. In 'Brigham Young,' I played the favorite wife of a man who had twenty-seven wives, yet he and I never so much as held hands. The depth of our love was only suggested—by looks and tones of voice. Things were different the last time Dean Jagger and I were teamed together. That was in a little number called 'The Woman from Hell,'

How to Fall in Love-

WITH GINGER ROGERS

HAVE FUN at the movies—know what happens behind the scenes! For example, January SCREEN GUIDE shows not only Ginger Rogers' greatest love scene, but the backstage stuff that made it great. Get "inside" Hollywood with SCREEN GUIDE.

OTHER SCOOP FEATURES

FIFTEEN FAVORITES are photo-storied in January SCREEN GUIDE. Among the exclusive scoops are:

"What Has Changed Mickey Rooney?" (See for yourself whether the screen's "Little King" can do no wrong!)

"Judy Garland: The Girl She Is Today" (Easier to love!)

"Kisses Come Back!" (By censors' grace, love lives again!)

"Fashions from Filmland" (See how to look really star-like.)

Full-Color Photos: Gable, Lamarr, Astaire, Goddard, Grable! Plus pages of intimate gossip, beauty advice, film reviews!

FREE—If you haven't seen a copy recently, write to SCREEN GUIDE, Dept. M, 731 Plymouth Ct., Chicago, for a recent issue.

SCREEN GUIDE JANUARY ISSUE Now on Sale at ALL NEWSSTANDS 10¢

Katie Hepburn wears this Adrian-designed wedding gown in the film version of "The Philadelphia Story." Fashion Note: Instead of a bouquet, she carries a mousseline de soie muff trimmed with clusters of cornflowers!

in which he was a lighthouse-keeper and I the chippy who was the come-on for a Coney Island concession called 'Hell.' He made a good woman out of me with his love. And kisses.

"Ah, yes, times have changed. It takes a little more acting and a little better acting to express emotion today."

Mary paused to arm herself with a cigarette from a box at her elbow before she plunged, by invitation, into an actress' impressions of some of the Great Lovers.

"I never worked with John Gilbert, I'm sorry to say, though I knew him personally. He had great charm and intense enthusiasm. It would have been exciting to play opposite him.

"I didn't know Valentino. I met him only once, when we worked on adjoining sets. I found out about back-breaking embraces, however, when I worked with John Barrymore in 'Don Juan.' That was a mad experience. Before the camera, he doubled me backward with his ardor and behind the camera, he doubled me forward with his wit. You can say that I got a little lumbago and a lot of laughs out of working with Barrymore.

"The closest I came to being the feminine half of a love team was when I made several pictures with Lloyd Hughes, who was a pre-Buddy Rogers type. We did the shy kind of stuff. And we must have done a fair job of it, because we were suspected of being That Way in real life—to the embarrassment of both of us. Lloyd was married. But it was fatal in those days for a screen lover to let the public know he had a wife. And it was even more fatal for a screen heroine to have a husband and children. That made her an old lady.

"One of my early thrills was the chance to work with Richard Barthelmess in 'The Lash,' after getting a crush on him in 'The Bright Shawl.' But that crush went the way of the Reginald Denny one. Mary Hay Barthelmess got herself born about that time.

"I worked up a crush on Ronald Colman after seeing him in 'The Dark Angel,' but I didn't get a chance to work with him until 'The Prisoner of Zenda.' By that time I had met him many times socially and we were good friends, so the excitement of the occasion was dimmed. Life is like that.

"When Eugene O'Brien kissed me under the chin in one picture, women all over the country fainted—but I don't recall having any emotions at the time.

ONE of my earliest favorites was Thomas Meighan. He was the type who was two-fisted with men, tender with women, sort of the Clark Gable of his time. Except that I think he took himself more seriously than Clark, who is apt to kid everything he does.

"I know a lot of kidding went on when I did 'Red Dust' with him. Remember? I played the other woman. The vamp era was past, so I didn't have to be a slinky siren. I just wore clothes that were a little smarter, and made up my mouth more heavily. But my scenes with Clark were really something. I practically attacked him."

Mary crushed out her cigarette and went on to some of the hazards of love scenes.

"Girls still have to worry about leaving lipstick on the hero's face and spoiling the glamorous illusion of a romantic kiss," she said. "At least, I've never found a lipstick that wouldn't smudge—under pressure. Though there's a trick to eliminate most of the smudging. You simply powder your lips dry before a kiss.

And you have to think about not crushing your dress, particularly if you are wearing a creation that cost the studio several hundred dollars. And you must be especially careful if you're wearing anything lacy. One take that I did once was ruined, and so was a lacy gown I was wearing, when the lace caught on one of the hero's coat buttons.

"You have to think about the angle at which you are to hold your face when kissed—to get the effect the director wants, and to keep the hero's nose from casting a shadow that makes you look as if you have a black eye. Nowadays you also have to think of the lines you're to say. You don't get much chance to think about the thrill of being in the handsome hero's arms.

I HAVEN'T found it possible to get a kick out of a kissing scene since the very first one—and that was a novelty. I ask you—how can you thrill to a kiss when it's work? How can you abandon yourself to a kiss when fifty people on the set are watching you, coldly and critically, wondering if you'll get it in one take? Also, don't forget there's a time limit to every kiss these days. The censors hold a stop-watch on you. Back-breaking embraces are only a memory now. So are horizontal love scenes—like those that helped to make John Gilbert famous."

More soberly, she added:

"If you're serious about acting, you take love scenes seriously—but no more seriously than you take any other scenes. They're all part of your job. You can't afford to be self-conscious about them.

"Love scenes used to be much tougher to do in silent days than they are now, even with dialogue added. You weren't allowed to express love as you would naturally express it. Directors operated on the theory that anyone who was a movie actress was beautiful, but dumb—and needed guidance every inch of the way through an emotional scene. 'Now turn toward him,' the director would say. 'Now look in his eyes. Now part your lips. Now throw your arms around his neck. Now kiss him. Now close your eyes in ecstasy.' That sort of thing was maddening. The talkies have done one thing. They've shut up the directors when the camera is actually grinding.

"In the old days, there was more to-do about getting in the mood for a love scene. There had to be mood music on the sidelines through the scene. The music was supplied by a trio, usually a violin, a piano and a cello. But if you were making a B picture, you had to do without the cello. Sometimes they played classical music; sometimes popular stuff. I remember my favorite mood-producer for a long time was 'Songs My Mother Taught Me.' During 'Beau Brummel,' Barrymore and I registered emotion to the tune of "Waters of Minnetonka.'

"We weren't given lines to say in silent days. Sometimes we didn't even know what the subtitles would be. We made up our own dialogue as we went along. I understand lip-readers had a lot of fun, discovering what lovers actually said in their romantic moments.

"When talkies came along I found myself out of a job. So I went on the stage. Then Hollywood wanted me back—at $200 more a week than I had been getting before, even though I was still the same girl, with the same voice, the same everything. Hollywood said, surprised, 'Why, the girl can act!'

"I say: If a girl can stick around long enough, she can't help but learn a lot about acting, just by keeping up with the changes in love."

She has something there.

INFORMATION DESK

(Continued from page 11)

Linda Conniston, Framingham, Mass. Virginia Bruce, christened Virginia Briggs, is literally Lady Luck's favorite godchild. She was signed for a film contract when a Hollywood director spotted her walking to high school one day! She's five feet six and one-half inches tall and weighs 123 pounds, has blonde hair, milky white complexion and large blue eyes. She never diets to keep that perfect figure, but exercises by swimming, tennis and riding. Her hubby's J. Walter Ruben, prominent director. Her next picture is "The Invisible Woman" with John Barrymore and Charlie Ruggles . . . 'Tis still just a rumor that Dennis Morgan and wife have split. Their friends are hoping for a patch-up.

Jane Chappell, Canajoharie, N. Y. Yes, it's true that Judith Barrett and Andrea Leeds are expecting family additions in the near future . . . Most of the stars not only read their fan mail but actually answer the most interesting letters received. Some, such as Claudette Colbert, Mickey Rooney and John Hubbard reply to practically every single fan!

Wont to see your own Hollywood honey in our GALLERY SECTION? Just send us his or her nome on the coupon below, then watch the next few issues!

Information Desk, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York City

I'd like to see a gallery picture of

.....

in a forthcoming issue of Modern Screen.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

Mothers Delighted —

To check coughing, clear up clogging stuffiness, soothe irritation and relieve misery of colds—more and more mothers are finding that a "VapoRub Massage" fills the bill.

With this MORE THOROUGH treatment, the good old poultice-and-vapor action of Vicks VapoRub more effectively PENETRATES deep into irritated air passages with soothing medicinal vapors . . . STIMULATES the chest and the back like an old-fashioned warming poultice or plaster . . . and so starts in bringing relief right away. The results delight even old friends of Vicks VapoRub!

To get this "VapoRub Massage" with all its benefits—massage VapoRub for 3 full minutes on IMPORTANT RIB-AREA OF THE BACK as well as chest and throat. Spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. BE SURE to use genuine, time-tested Vicks VapoRub —the same Vicks VapoRub that is today a family standby in millions of homes.

IT'S ALL OVER BUT THE SHOUTING

(Continued from page 41)

the most potent box-office name, starring in three smash films out of four.

Claudette Colbert solidified her position pleasantly by way of two smashes, "Boom Town" and "Arise, My Love."

Hedy Lamarr started off the year in the doghouse, trying to get a raise out of Metro. She went back to work without the raise after a couple of weeks, and has been a good little girl ever since. A lot of people still believe in Hedy, but a lot of others are reaching the "show me" stage.

William Powell got back into action after a lengthy illness and proved himself better than ever in "I Love You Again," a smasheroo.

Myrna Loy had an okay year, but her friends will begin to worry soon if there isn't a distinct pick-up. Bob Burns practically washed himself out of pictures with a couple of lamentably bad scripts.

Loretta Young is picking her own parts these days and doing it very well indeed, thank you. Jean Arthur ditto and not so successfully.

Ginger Rogers is still in the front row, despite a couple of pictures which got mixed reactions. Ginger had a little trouble adjusting herself to the dizzy heights she has reached in the past couple of years, but all she needs now is a picture or two.

Mary Martin is a girl who probably will become tremendously important in 1941. She's rising very rapidly. Joel McCrea had the best year of his career, winding up with a sensational performance in "Foreign Correspondent." From present plans, it would seem that he will continue right on and up next year.

CARY GRANT is probably the most sought-after actor in town, from a casting standpoint. Everybody wants him, which probably explains why he was so badly miscast in "The Howards of Virginia." In spite of this, he had a good year and should continue on the upgrade.

Jackie Cooper is rapidly building himself into one of the top names, at the same time proving that he is a solid and capable actor. He seems to have passed the awkward age, and 1941 should see him firmly entrench himself.

Betty Field who played in four nicely varied films is another youngster who should zoom 'way, 'way up.

Rosalind Russell had the best year of her career, but right now there are disturbing rumors floating around to the effect that she would like to abandon comedy and try being a glamour girl. Please don't do that to us, Roz honey.

Jimmy Stewart remained one of the front row lads, with three very nice performances, and has nothing to worry about. James Cagney did well, and even strengthened his position somewhat by an extra fine performance in "City for Conquest." Mickey Rooney had another good, solid year.

Nancy Kelly started out with a big boom, but got nowhere fast; just couldn't get the right pictures. Lucille Ball is a girl on the way up and one to watch. After a couple of years of solid grounding in the minor leagues, she has finally hit the big time.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is still floundering. A grand guy, Doug, but too ambitious, seemingly. He wants to be a director, he wants to be a producer—meantime his work as an actor is suffering.

Madeleine Carroll had a very good year in spite of herself. She is in serious trouble because she has to go hungry practically all the time in order not to look fat in pictures. This sometimes makes her irritable and hard to handle. Also the war, and the fact that her sweetheart is in France, and her family in England, has given her the jitters through most of the year.

Edward G. Robinson, after a temporary eclipse, climbed back to the front row and, in fact, forged considerably ahead in his career. Vivien Leigh failed to consolidate her "GWTW" position and stepped considerably backward during Miriam Hopkins turns back a few eras to leg-o-mutton sleeves and a parasol to play Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Lady With Red Hair."

1940, with only one picture, "Waterloo Bridge."

Joan Fontaine and her sister, Olivia de Havilland, had similar years. Olivia started off absolutely on top of the bus as a result of her work in "GWTW," so the first crack out of the box she turned down a couple of scripts at Warners, insisting that she was not going to be shoved into just anything, but would pick her parts carefully. As a result she appeared in only one picture during the year and is in danger of being forgotten if she doesn't get back into the public eye pretty quickly.

JOAN FONTAINE, on the other hand, stepped out of limbo early in 1940 with her first important characterization in "Rebecca." The impression among critics is that her good work there was directly traceable to Alfred Hitchcock, her director, and not to herself, but we will have to wait until she makes another picture to find out—and she isn't making any. She turned down "Back Street" as unsuitable, although Margaret Sullavan was glad to grab it on the rebound. Joan's future and her public all will depend on what, if anything, she does next.

Ray Milland is coming up fast and had an excellent year, picking up some of the marbles that Cary Grant was too busy to play with. Ray needs direction and has a terrible habit of forgetting to watch his wardrobe but, nevertheless, he ought to move way up in the near future.

Ellen Drew is moving forward, after a fair to middling year. 1941 should establish her.

George Sanders and Thomas Mitchell are two of the fastest climbing men in Hollywood. Both of them made tremendous strides during the year, and both have made themselves practically indispensable to the Hollywood scene.

Fred MacMurray had a difficult year, mostly from lack of material, but is doing okay as the year finishes. Bing Crosby goes merrily on, way up in front. Dorothy Lamour continues to ride the sarong trail to box-office success.

Bob Hope, Jack Benny and Jack Oakie had excellent years, all three of them moving several notches upward in the parade, despite the fact that comedians generally (Eddie Cantor, Joe E. Brown, Joe Penner, the Ritz Brothers) had a very difficult time of it.

Tyrone Power slipped considerably, but his studio thinks that he will make a new and important impression on his fans in "The Mark of Zorro," "Blood and Sand" and pictures of that sort; swashbuckling, colorful, full of action. It's an experiment, of course, and may do the trick.

Joan Crawford had her best year in a half dozen or so, largely due to a change of pace. George Murphy is a young man very much worth watching. He's never had a really important film break, but when just the right picture comes along, watch his smoke.

Ida Lupino is the surprise girl of the year. Every once in a while Hollywood re-discovers Ida, says "ah," and begins raving about her future—but nothing happens. During the past year she was discovered again, but this time it looks as though it may stick. She got her break in "They Drive By Night," a surprising bit of casting in which Ida was given the sexy dame role opposite Ann Sheridan. Ida should go places in 1941, but one gets tired of predicting this.

Scanning the news of 1940, we find that Warners, as usual, had trouble with its contract players. A half dozen of them including John Garfield, Eddie Albert, Olivia de Havilland and Ann Sheridan drew suspensions, but the cute thing was that Jimmy Cagney, always a stormy rebel, went peacefully through the whole year!

Warners was not alone. Metro had some difficulty with players, Lana Turner drawing one suspension and Hedy Lamarr another. Fox had battles with Don Ameche, Jed Prouty and Alice Faye, while Paramount battled with William Holden and John Howard—the latter eventually packing up and leaving the lot. Not to be overlooked are the Muni and Temple affairs. Over at Warners it got to be a gag that every time Paul Muni scratched his beard the studio lost a million dollars. Nevertheless, it was admitted that Muni films brought Warners and the movie business as a whole a great deal of honor and dignity. The studio and Muni couldn't agree on scripts and the actor left. He had no trouble getting another job, going immediately to Fox—whereupon Warners handed his beard to Eddie Robinson.

The Temple affair is a bit more of a problem. For five years or so, the youngster has been the most potent box-office figure in film history. Suddenly she slipped. "The Blue Bird" was a terrible flop. Is it the kid's fault, or the studio's? The studio decided to make the pain short-lived; it paid on the line for the duration of the contract and waved the youngster goodbye. A parade of smash hits and hip-hip-hooray; one flop and goodbye. That's the movie business. Shirley doesn't have another job as this is being written, but she will have. And she will go on to bigger and better films without trouble—she's a real trouper.

Hollywood's number one headline grabber during the past year was John Barrymore, with Lana Turner and Hedy Lamarr as the runners-up. John was the first public example of a great actor trying as hard as he could to make the world believe that he had reached his dotage—and Lana and Hedy were just two girls who didn't know what they wanted. They got married, they got divorced, they'll probably be married again. Not too exciting, but it made good reading in newspapers full of war.

THE war itself, of course, was tremendously important to Hollywood, both in a personal and a business way.

For a number of years all the Hollywood film companies, with the sole exception of Warner Brothers, have been hanging on grimly to a rapidly diminishing market in Germany and finally, towards the end of the year, they all had to give up. One by one a number of very profitable markets throughout the world were taken away from the film moguls, until today there is practically none of Europe left, and very little of Asia.

That meant a number of serious and important adjustments on the home lot, namely, an attempt to develop the South American market more strongly and a re-evaluation of home consumption. The world market (outside of the United States) amounted to 40-60% of the total gross of films a couple of years ago. Obviously, it's quite a sock on the chin to have to forego this money.

It was good policy only a year or so ago to make a considerable number of pictures with various European backgrounds and locales, but now there are only two markets which America is watching in its film production—America and South America.

Another very interesting development, a bi-product of the war, was a conscious attempt by the film companies to get acquainted with America. In the past, visits of stars and executives to Broadway or Chicago have been very occasional, but last year a whole series of "premières" in out-of-the-way cities were arranged and carried through. This was not completely a new notion, but during the year this became a custom, rather than an accident.

Thus, the citizenry of Orange, N. J., got the first showing of "Edison, the Man," plus a parade of stars; Boise, Idaho, got the première of "Northwest Passage"; "Maryland" was shown in Baltimore; Salt Lake City got "Brigham Young"; Denver had "Kit Carson"; "Tugboat Annie" sailed up to Seattle; Regina, Canada, was proud of "North West Mounted Police"; San Francisco had a first peek at "They Knew What They Wanted"; "The Westerner" unveiled in Dallas; "Knute Rockne" was honored in South Bend; "Virginia City" went to Reno; "The Biscuit Eater" to Albany, Georgia, and "Dark Command" bowed at Lawrence, Kansas.

The procedure proved not only novel but important; it made various communities even more aware of movies and it gave the actors and producers a chance to talk things over with Mr. and Mrs. General Public and get a better notion of what was wanted in the way of film entertainment. Chalk this up as the healthiest and most adult Hollywood move to date.

The war has affected surprisingly few movie personalities. John Farrow, director-husband of Maureen O'Sullivan, was the first to quit the Hollywood scene in order to join the fighting ranks. David Niven, after he offered his services to his country and was turned down, ran into a raft of newspaper sarcasm. Eventually he had to flee America, a fugitive from an anti-climax, and practically had to force himself on the British Army. A few months later, Richard Greene found himself in the same predicament and had to resort to the same escape.

A half dozen or so other British actors managed to quit the Hollywood scene without much publicity or fanfare. Charles Boyer left his French army uniform in France with the collapse of his country and returned to the movie business in Hollywood.

Robert Montgomery hopped into an ambulance and drove it around the fields of Flanders for a month or so, then came home to America. And Madeleine Carroll managed to drive her studio mildly nuts by insisting on flying in and out of the European war games for the sake of a few minutes with her handsome aviator boy friend.

Madeleine, incidentally, was the second movie person and the first movie personality to feel the ravages of war, her sister Marguerite having been killed during a raid on London. Previously, Ralph Hanbury, the RKO general manager in England, and his entire family had been killed by a Nazi bomb. By the time you read this, Madeleine may again have Clippered to the war zone. She has said she intends to, and she has always been a girl to do exactly as she pleases, in spite of anybody or anything.

The movie company which made the most consistently worth-while film products during the year was Warner Brothers, with Metro a close second. Warners, during the year, had not only a greater number of box-office successes, but also a greater variety, and what is called "change of pace." There were prestige pictures such as "The Magic Bullet" and "A Dispatch From Reuter's"; there was genuine entertainment in such pictures as "City for Conquest" and "My Love Came Back." And there was sheer box-office in "All This, And Heaven Too."

IT is a strange coincidence that Warners, which once led the field in musicals, produced no song-and-dancers of importance during the year. The top studio in the production of musicals and light comedies during 1940 was Paramount, with its Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Jack Benny films. Paramount, as a matter of fact, came mighty close to being the top studio in Hollywood for the year, pushed into third place only by the fact that it seems to have the ability to produce a "Ghost Breakers" one day and two heartbreakers the next.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in the number two niche, still manages to keep very near the top by the strongest roster of star talent ever to be gathered under one lion's roar. And Shearer, Crawford, Gable, Tracy, Rooney and Co. are a mighty potent antidote to any sort of depression.

A curious situation developed during the year when it became evident to all the studios that there were not enough leading men available. There were usually plenty of girls to choose from, but casting males was a distinct problem, and quite a number of pictures had to be shifted back and forth before they could be filmed, because male stars were unavailable. Considering which fact, it is interesting to note that the hardest-working star in Hollywood during 1940 was a girl—Ann Sheridan. She was starred in five films during the year, "Castle On The Hudson," "It All Came True," "Torrid Zone," "They Drive By Night" and "City for Conquest."

In the next bracket, tied for second place as the hardest working star in Hollywood, are six gents and no gals, all six of them with four star credits each for the year. They are George Brent, Brian Aherne, Spencer Tracy, Gene Autry, Ray Milland and Boris Karloff.

This is about as good a place as any to make very clear what the word "star" means, for no word is more frequently misused. Actually, a star is a person whose name appears on the film's title-sheet ahead of the name of the picture. Henry Fonda in "The Return of Frank James" is a star. "Lillian Russell" with Henry Fonda, on the other hand, means that Fonda is not a star.

The most interesting new personality introduced during the year was Martha Scott, who made her debut in "Our Town" and who was starred first in "The Howards of Virginia." Ellen Drew, first starred in "Christmas in July," is a close second.

On the male side of the ledger, Dean Jagger in "Brigham Young" made the most notable impression, but has yet to be starred.

The greatest feminine career progress was made by Ida Lupino.

And to wind up the roll call—among the males, the greatest progress-makers were Messrs. Bob Hope and John Wayne.

INFORMATION DESK
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

HOLLYWOOD'S BANKRUPT GENIUS

(Continued from page 51)

very definite has been set. So who pays his bills? His agent, who like many other unpublicized people who know him, believes in Orson Welles.

It would be effective to say here that twenty-five-year-old Orson is chastened by his present encounter with reality. Effective, but untrue. It would also be dramatic to say that his personal tastes are monastically frugal. This, alas, is also untrue. Welles has an energy of spirit, mental and physical, which makes chastening an impossibility. He has the fatalistic idea that anything can and probably will happen tomorrow. Today's the day.

He is extravagant in the only way he cares to be extravagant. Other men invest in yachts, guns, cameras, fishing tackle, airplanes and cars. Not Welles. He has a hobby, but it's his work. He is probably one of the very few men in the world who don't yearn for a vacation from what they're doing. Welles wants to do exactly what he's doing. His tremendous vitality carries him from one day to the next with very little of the sleep which most people crave. He regards sleep as a flagrant waste of time. He considers four hours sufficient.

He enjoys fine living, but circumstances have forced him to give up the eight-hundred-dollar-a-month home he rented in Brentwood and take a two-room apartment in Beverly Hills. Food is an obsession with him. "You can't pay too much for good food," he says. Pick out the best restaurant in town and you'll find Welles. Or, better yet, find Welles and you'll have the best restaurant. When he had his establishment in Brentwood he ordered meat flown out from the east for household consumption. Despite recent reverses he still smokes eighty-five cent cigars.

Currently he does not drink. He has become addicted to tea of which he consumes great quantities. A friend gave him a pint-sized teacup. He keeps this at the studio and takes time off every afternoon to indulge.

He employs a chauffeur which may or may not come under the heading of extravagance. Welles drove a car once and the experience haunts him. A natural impatience with the precision of machinery prevented him from driving a car as a car should be driven. He ran into a telegraph pole and he hasn't driven since. A chauffeur, therefore, should be listed under personal necessities.

WELLES is working, but he's broke. By this I mean that the picture is being shot. It isn't another Hollywood rumor. I saw it with my own eyes.

"Heart of Darkness" was discarded because RKO dubbed it sensational to the point of being shocking. "Smiler With the Knife" was discarded for two reasons. First, Welles cast himself as the villain and, second, Carole Lombard, for whom the heroine's role was designed, refused to play in it at all.

"Why should I?" she said. "If it's good, Welles gets all the credit. If it's bad, well—" Lombard is tops, why should she take a chance? But "Citizen Kane" evidently fills the bill.

Welles had his first success at the age of seven when he played the White Rabbit in a Chicago department store advertising stunt. He went from there to several years of child parts in the Chicago Opera Company, a period terminated when Martinelli, as Samson, found him too heavy to lift. At eleven he was music critic for a local newspaper. At twelve he was lecturing his own grammar school on art.

At sixteen he played character roles (mostly of men past fifty) for the edification and delight of Irish audiences in a Dublin theatre. At seventeen he visited Africa and house guested with a native chieftain while he wrote a school edition of Shakespeare. At eighteen he was trouping with Katharine Cornell. At twenty-one he had his own repertory theatre in New York.

His success in radio was instantaneous. Born with a knack for hair-raising characterizations, he frightened people for many months as the voice of "The Shadow." Everyone knows, of course, how he scared the wits out of those who listened to his broadcast of the invasion from Mars.

Virginia Grey believes that leading ladies should return to the soil between films, and illustrates her point on her San Fernando Valley ranch.

His favorite costume is a pair of bathing trunks and a bathrobe. He sleeps in topless pajamas personally designed by Orson. His neckties are few and colorful. He would rather go barefooted but grudgingly concedes to shoes.

He hates exercise. A giant of a man, weighing two hundred pounds and looming well over six feet, he would seem a natural for any sort of sport. Golf he considers idiotic. He can swim and ride but declines to do either. He flies of necessity but has no desire to pilot a plane of his own. He once took a trip through Scotland and Ireland in a donkey cart, and he contends that this is the closest he's ever come to undue physical activity.

His friends, who last year called him Monstro, now call him Pancho. There may be some connection between this and the fact that his name is linked romantically with that of Dolores Del Rio, estranged wife of art director, Cedric Gibbons. The beautiful Mexican actress is a runner-up for the title of Hollywood's Best Dressed Woman. Just how this will effect Hollywood's most casually dressed man remains to be seen.

The rumors about Welles' temperament are never started by those who work with him. He has a peculiar system of discipline. He hangs upon the studio wall a report card bearing the names of the entire cast. When anyone misbehaves, a black star is pasted next to the culprit's name. Some of the crimes listed are telling dull stories, muffing lines and inability to ad lib during party scenes. Good Deeds are limited to gifts, each of which merits a gold star.

MEANWHILE bills roll in. He supports a destitute actor now marooned in Buffalo because, as he says, "The man has to eat, doesn't he?" He supports his two-year-old daughter, Christopher, for whom he is also buying an annuity. He pays the expenses of a New York, Chicago and Los Angeles office for Orson Welles, Inc., and he weekly hands out salaries to his personal staff of legal and financial advisers, though he rarely takes their advice.

When "Citizen Kane" is finished, he will receive whatever remains of the hundred and fifty thousand dollars promised him, plus a small percentage of the profits of the picture. Government taxes will take their share of his share and the agent will be paid back. When simple mathematics have finished with the sum, it is very possible that there won't be much left for Orson Welles.

Far from being worried Welles has guaranteed to make his second picture for nothing, purely on a percentage basis. The third picture, which is also mentioned in his contract, is subject to an arrangement not yet planned. Up to his ears in debt and having spent every cent of his own money, it is no wonder that Welles grins at the legends which have sprung up about him.

Wasteful! Lavish! Extravagant! He has been publicized from Vine Street to Culver City as the glittering young man who is really putting something over on Hollywood. "One year on salary before the cameras even began to grind," they say.

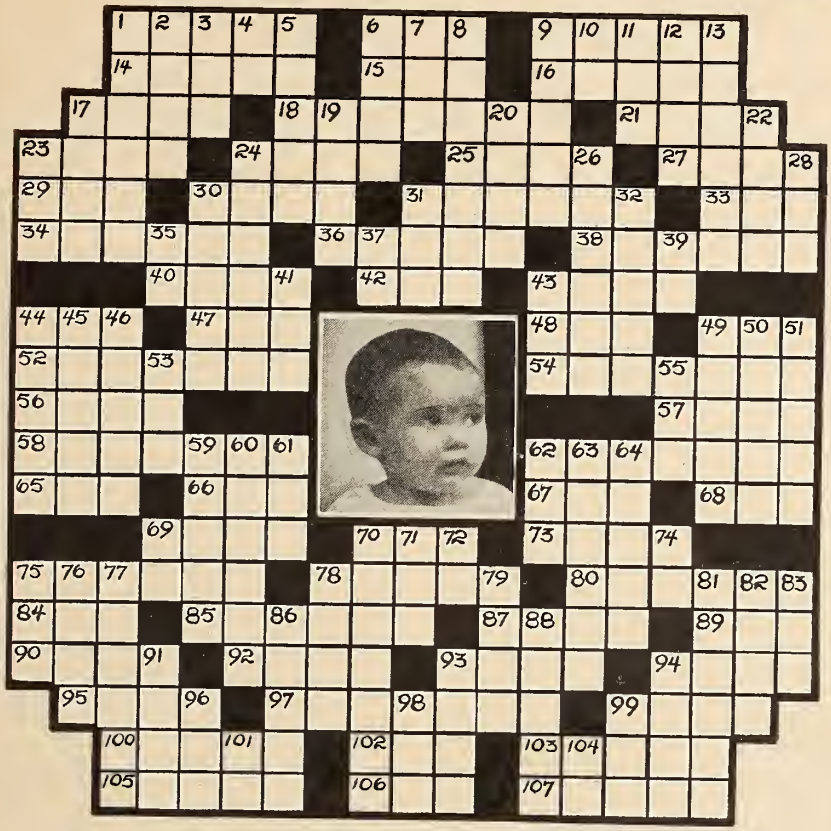
But Welles doesn't care. He's doing what he wants to do and, from the looks of things at RKO, he's doing it well.

YIPPEE, FANS!

At last we have it for you—that biographical chart of your favorite "westerns" that you've been begging for! Imagine having at your fingertips the real names, birthplaces, birthdates, heights, weights, how they got their start and studio addresses of over sixty of those rough-riding heroes, leering villains and wide-eyed heroines of your pet "horse operies!" Made up in a most attractive form, it will make your album proud as anything. Just send five cents in coin or stamps with the coupon below and your chart is as good as lassoed!

Information Desk, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York City

I am enclosing five cents in stamps or coin for which kindly send me your chart of the Western Stars.



Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

Please print name and address plainly

OUR PUZZLE PAGE

Puzzle Solution on Page 76

ACROSS

1. Lovely actress pictured
6. Dolores - - - tello
9. Heroine of "The Howards Of Virginia"
14. Duchess in "All This, And Heaven Too"
15. Fuss
16. Star of "Charlie Chan At The Wax Museum"
17. Siren in "Strike Up The Band"
18. Femme in "He Stayed For Breakfast"
21. Beverages
23. Actress - - - - Wilson
24. English actress in "The Letter"
25. Robert Wild - - - -
27. A girl's name
29. Exclamations of wonder
30. Deanna's pal in "Spring Parade"
31. Comedienne in "Comin' Round The Mountain"
33. Lady in "Wagons Westward"
36. Draws closer
38. Sad-faced comic
40. Big guy in "Tug boat Annie Sails Again"
42. - - - ne Overman
43. Cornelia - - - - Skinner
44. Birthmonth of 1 across: abbr.
47. French coin
48. Lillian - - - nell
49. Bud Abbott's comic partner
52. Crown
54. Sisters in "Argentine Nights"
56. An epic poem
57. Football hero in "Knute Rockne-All American"
58. Male lead of "Second Chorus"
62. Obtruder
65. "The Jo - - - Family"
66. Female ruff
67. "Meet John - - -"
68. Bitter vetch
69. Heroine of "Arizona"
70. Standing Room Only: abbr.
73. Movie lights
75. Lamour's costume in "Moon Over Burma"
78. She's in "The Villain Still Pursued Her"
80. Director of "They Knew What They Wanted"
84. Maid in "He Stayed For Breakfast"
85. Merited
87. Husk of wheat
89. Wine cup
90. Singer in "New Moon"
92. "The Man With - - - - Lives"
93. Played "Brigham Young"
94. Kiln
95. Period of time
97. Last name of 1 across
99. Shakespeare's home
100. Mountain ridge
102. Goddess of dawn
103. Star in "Daytime Wife"
105. Beneath
106. 506: rom. num.
107. Star of "The Return Of Frank James"

DOWN

1. Girl in "Captain Caution"
2. Hotels
3. By birth
4. - - ana Lewis
5. Star of "Magic In Music"
6. Boy's name
7. Poem
8. She's in "Dulcy"
9. Deanna's leading man in "Nice Girl"
10. Together: prefix
11. Mary B - - - nd
12. Membrane
13. Heroine of "Dark Command"
17. Male star in "Star Dust"
19. Priscilla Lane's ex
20. Sailors
22. Term in trigonometry
23. Actor Carrillo's first name
24. Entangle
26. A "pert" actress
28. Salt
30. Funny man in "Love Thy Neighbor"
31. She's in "Four Mothers"
32. Scotch lord
35. "The Philadelph - - Story"
37. Comic in "Captain Caution"
39. Pronoun
41. Fruit of the oak
43. Peruvian plant
44. Sea
45. Grove
46. Jogs
49. Rent
50. Possessor
51. Employers
53. Siren in "Honeymoon For Three"
55. Orson Welles' studio
59. Star of "My Favorite Wife"
60. Popular actor in "Santa Fe Trail"
61. Even: poet.
62. Girl in "High Sierra"
63. Actor in "Flotsam"
64. Nut
69. - - Ann Sayers
70. Scorned
71. Free
72. "Charter Pil - -"
74. Senior: abbr.
75. Cora Collins' middle name
76. Richard Arlen's screen partner
77. Raft
78. "Irene"
79. Walter - - - -
81. Palatable
82. Augury
83. Gloria's sis in "Little Bit Of Heaven"
86. What Roy Rogers is
88. - - - - - Morgan
91. Story
93. Newcomer in "Too Many Girls"
94. Above
96. Color
98. November: abbr.
99. Beard of wheat
101. Our star's birthplace: Dallas, - - xas
104. Whirlwind off the Faro Islands

Matchless MAKE-UP

TO MATCH YOUR BUDGET

Exquisite Elmo cosmetics in Indian Love Call Colors are introduced for the first time in fifty-cent sizes.

Ask for the Varsity size Climatized* Lipstick in these daring, high fashion shades. It is made from the same exclusive formula as the luxury size, and gives your lips the same protection from harsh weather. The dry rouge to match comes in a lovely enamel case. INDIAN PAINT BRUSH, a flame red; NAVAJO, a vivid true red; POW-WOW, a deep, exotic red.

Indian Love Call

DRY ROUGE and LIPSTICK

50¢ EACH

by Elmo

Luxurious sets of Elmo $1.00 Lipstick, Dry Rouge and Ralo Face Powder in the romantic, new Indian Love Call Colors make lovely Christmas gifts, $3.00

*Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

ELMO • PHILADELPHIA • SAN FRANCISCO

Heated Rooms often make COUGHS worse!

Pertussin Helps Restore Natural Throat Moisture

A parched, dry, indoor atmosphere easily aggravates a cough due to a cold.

Pertussin is amazingly effective in fighting this dry-air irritation. It helps throat glands pour out their soothing, natural moisture. Then the sticky, tickling phlegm is easily raised. Your cough is quickly relieved!

Prescribed by many physicians for over 30 years. Safe for babies. Try Pertussin today!

A scientific product based on the therapeutic properties of Thyme.

High School at Home

Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Equivalent to resident school work—prepares for entrance to college. Standard H. S. texts supplied. Diplomas awarded. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. Free Bulletin on request.

American School, Dept. H-114, Drexel at 58th, Chicago

4 5 O'CLOCK TEASPOONS FOR $1.00

(REGULARLY $2.33)

IN THE NEW Youth DESIGN

CORRECT FOR FRUITS, SHERBETS AND DESSERTS, TOO

AT AUTHORIZED DEALERS ONLY

HOLMES & EDWARDS®

Copyright 1940, International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Division, Meriden, Conn.

®Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. In Canada, The T. Eaton Co., Ltd.

IT'S IDLE GOSSIP

(Continued from page 37)

the latest bulletins from writhing Europe, slump in their chairs and growl: "What the hell's the use of writing a column? Who gives a damn if Miss A. breaks her neck or marries a man with vegetable juice in his veins?"

For a while Bette was infected with the same disease. "Why do I kill myself making this scene? What can it possibly matter in a world gone mad?"

She snapped out of it—partly through common sense, partly through the première of "All This, And Heaven, Too."

YEARS ago she attended the preview of her second picture. She was just an ingenue and small responsibility rested on her, but she found the experience so nerve-racking that she vowed she'd never attend another. Her family would go to her previews, while Bette chewed her fingers at home and waited for them to report.

A première differs from a preview. It's a gala first night, all jewels and furs and glitter. Holding it at the Carthay Circle Theatre is like stamping the picture a diamond of the first water. Bleachers, built round the circle, are filled before noon. The crowds munch sandwiches and patiently wait for night to work its magic. Bette had heard of these phenomena, but never seen them. "Oh, yes," she'd thought. "Uh-huh, I suppose so," discounting three-quarters of it as Hollywood fantasy.

It was her first picture to be premiered at the Carthay. Such an occasion, minus the presence of its stars, is like an eye without light. Boyer was going. The studio wanted Bette there, too. She decided she'd be a nice girl and say yes.

When the day came, nobody felt very festive. The newspapers bannered headlines: FRANCE FALLS. Hollywood lay deep in gloom. Perhaps for the first time within memory, something had happened which was more important to the industry than itself. Boyer arrived, looking pale green. Bette, spared the ultimate thrust of anguish that must have been his, felt miserable enough.

She stepped out of the car, and gasped. Tier on tier they rose, a solid mass of faces, gleaming white under the searchlights. She was unprepared for the sight, and equally unprepared for the roar that followed—as the crowd spied her and rose to its feet cheering.

For a moment she stood, her arm in that of Johnny Favor, her young cousin and escort, her face a quivering mirror of mixed emotions. Then instead of turning into the long, canopied lane that leads to the theatre, she moved toward the grandstands. Until it was time for the picture to start, she stayed out there, shaking hands with those she could reach, signing autograph books, lifting her shining face, unashamed of her falling tears, toward the upper rows.

"Quaint," murmured a colleague, who'd have given her eyeteeth for something similar, "but a little undignified, darling, don't you think?"

"Maybe," darling agreed cheerfully. "Myself, if people yell for me, God bless 'em, I'm undignified enough to run all the way to China, yelling right back!"

The rest of the evening was less pleasant. A kind of shudder ran through the theatre as the words PARIS, FRANCE, were thrown on the screen. Background shots of the city of light were rendered poignant through the knowledge that it was taken by the forces of darkness.

Just the same, Bette went back to work next day both humbled and refreshed. "If that's how they feel about you," she resolved, "then you've darn well got to kill yourself, making better scenes. Your routine may not seem important. What is important is that we keep on going. If the British can do it, with their world in literal ruins around them, then phooey to us for whining before we're touched!"

Last year Bette bought two houses. She's a child of the East. She loves its changing skies, the gold and scarlet of fall, the winter snows, the bare trees breaking into green with the spring. California has charms but they don't include the aforementioned, and Bette has never lost her nostalgia for them.

"I always said I'd never buy a house in Hollywood because of a dread, completely childish and unreasoning, that it would tie me to the West. Then I found this place in New Hampshire, and the moment it was mine I lost that other silly fear and promptly bought a house in Glendale for practical reasons. I was tired of moving around, tired of using other people's furniture. It's a small brick house, pseudo-Tudor, five minutes from the studio, and the agent clinched it by telling me how easy it would be to sell when the movies decided to throw me out."

On finishing "The Letter" early in July, she dashed to New Hampshire. The house she bought there is near Franconia set among ninety acres of woods. Abetted by her mother and Ted Macomber, a decorator, she spent three happy months making it over, adding a kitchen, garages and bedrooms, turning it into a place that will be habitable all year round, for she plans some day to make it her permanent home. At the local shops they unearthed treasures in cherry wood, and amazed the townsfolk by importing a Pullman lavatory from California.

THEY'RE silent," explains Bette gravely, "and they've never been heard of, let alone seen, in the north country. The furor was terrific. There were long articles in the papers, and people gathered in knots to talk it over. One morning before we were in the house, I arrived early and heard this piercing whisper: 'Jess! C'mon up and see the Pullman lavatory.' I sneaked behind a tree and giggled to myself until they'd gone."

She'll be furiously disappointed if "January Heights" isn't finished in time to let her spend Christmas at Butternut, and she'll be irked with Butternut unless it snows. It's years, she says wistfully, since she's had a snowy Christmas. Skiing interests her only moderately. Should there be a small slope handy, she'll probably use it to practice falling flat on her face. What she really craves is a return to childhood—red cap and mittens, toboggans and bellywhoppers, brilliant blue overhead and crunching white below, the swoop that tears the breath from your body, the long pull up, going home to crumpets and tea at dusk.

Only one week of her holiday was spent in New York—to see plays and people. Definitely not to shop. Shopping for clothes bores her. When she poses for fashion pictures at the studio, she generally finds two or three numbers she likes and buys them. Simple, tailored things are the only ones that tempt her. She prefers dark clothes to bright and goes in for gaiety only in pajamas. She avoids eccentric styles—hates herself in them and finds them too quickly dated. She grows fond of a dress or suit and won't give it up often wearing it for two or three years. There's a Mr. Falkenstein who designs irresistible sports clothes and shows them in California twice a year. "Orry-Kelly took me to him, blast his hide," says Bette softly but with vehemence. "Did you ever see a nail try to get away from a magnet? That's me and Mr. Falkenstein's clothes." Otherwise Bette can take clothes or leave 'em.

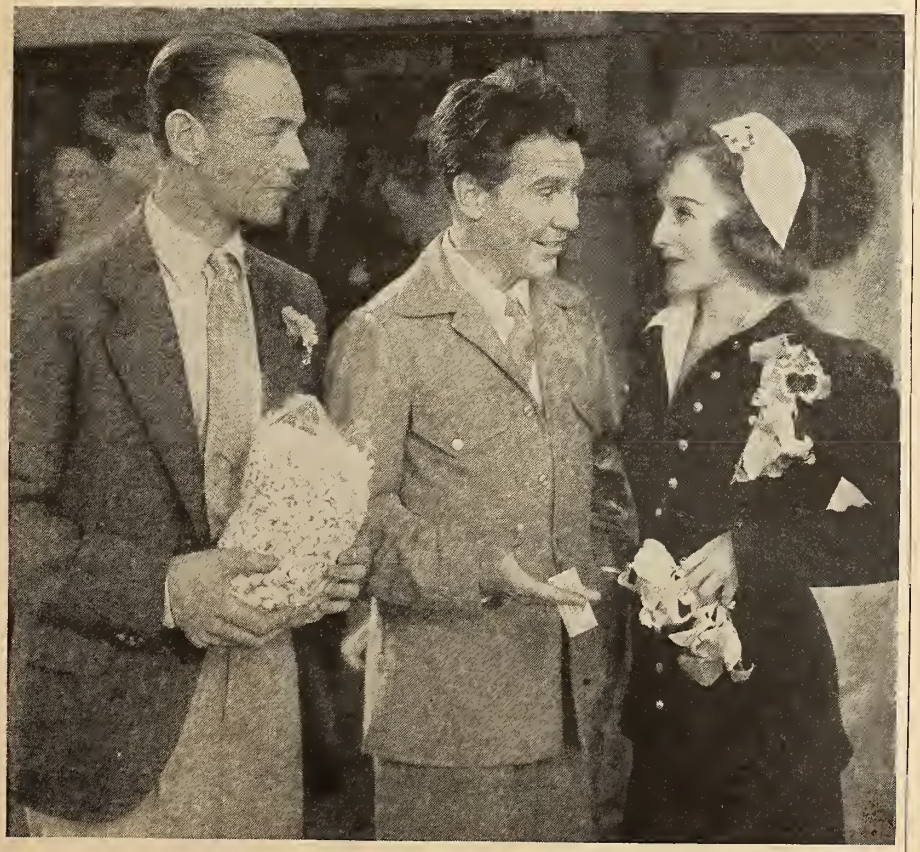
APART from the general excitement of rebuilding and furnishing her home, Bette's summer was further enlivened by the arrival of Bill Jones. Bill is fifteen and his name isn't Bill Jones. We're calling him that because Bette feels that his family may consider him too young for publicity.

Not that Bill did anything reprehensible. On the contrary. He showed himself a lad of character throughout. A columnist with imagination and no material ran an item indicating that Bette was about to start a dramatic school at Butternut, pupils welcome. Bill, who wants to be a director, read the item and announced to his family that he aimed to train under Miss Davis. They expostulated to no avail and finally washed their hands of the whole affair.

"It will teach you one lesson anyway," they assured him. "You'll never get within ten miles of Miss Davis."

He boarded a bus in New York and traveled seventeen hours, sitting up all night. Bette's mother came on him as he climbed the hill to the house, eager-eyed and fresh for all his vigil, an extra pair of trousers, neatly pressed, over one arm and a notebook in the other hand.

"I've come to study in Miss Davis' school," he told her. It was she who had to break the news that there was no school. When Bette came in Bill was sitting on the living room couch, the extra pair of trousers crumpled at his feet, bawling his eyes out.



She sat down beside him. She told him of her own disappointments. She said that a setback should serve as a spur and a challenge. She concluded by expressing her admiration for his gumption. "With so much of it at your age, you're likely to do great things some day. And I'll probably come around begging you for a job as an old character woman."

That made him laugh. "All right, laugh your head off," said Bette. "But funnier things have happened in this business."

They fed him and saw him off on the bus. He was quite cheerful again by that time. As the bus started rolling he stuck his head out of the window. "Wish you could see my family's face," he yelled, "when I tell 'em I sat right next to Bette. Boy, will that be something!"

He wrote her a letter, describing the "family's face" and including an earnest pledge that, thanks to her, his feet were planted more firmly than ever in his chosen path. Perhaps her reply will be found some day among the mementos of a famous theatrical man. The gist of it was what she'd often told herself: "If you want to do it badly enough, you'll do it."

There was one thing Bette wouldn't talk about. When the name of her ex-husband was mentioned, she shook her head. Maybe I imagined that a new sparkle came into her eyes. Maybe I imagined that she still hopes they'll get together and that she won't take other men seriously till the hope is gone. Liking both Bette and Ham, maybe all this is something I doped out from nothing. Only I doubt it.

College boys Fred Astaire and Burgess Meredith turn themselves inside out for the favor of Paulette Goddard in the rollicking film, "Second Chorus."

New under-arm
Cream Deodorant safely
Stops Perspiration

1. Does not harm dresses—does not irritate skin.
2. No waiting to dry. Can be used right after shaving.
3. Instantly checks perspiration for 1 to 3 days. Removes odor from perspiration.
4. A pure, white, greaseless, stainless vanishing cream.
5. Arrid has been awarded the Approval Seal of the American Institute of Laundering for being harmless to fabric.

More than 25 MILLION jars of Arrid have been sold...Try a jar today.

ARRID

39¢ a jar

AT ALL STORES WHICH SELL TOILET GOODS
(Also in 10 cent and 59 cent jars)

WAKE UP YOUR EYE BEAUTY!

No matter what you've tried, see how much more inviting and glamorous your eyes look with the amazing new CAMILLE CREAM MASCARA. Gives you shimmering, longer-looking lashes. Makes your eyes irresistibly appealing. No water needed; smearproof, stingproof, tearproof. And the smart colored vanity keeps your purse clean. Try CAMILLE today!

Brown, Black, Blue at all 10c stores, or send 10c (15c in Canada) coin or stamps to Dept. M.

CAMILLE

49 EAST 21st STREET, N. Y. C.

10¢ Complete with tube, brush and vanity.

Good Housekeeping Bureau 6046

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

(200 pictures rated this month)

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and the authoritative newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on film not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

It surely is heartening to see that credit has come where credit is due for Carole Landis has the leading role in Hal Roach's rollicking new comedy, "Road Show."

Picture	General Rating
Alias the Deacon (Universal)	2½★
All This, and Heaven Too (Warners)	4★
Andy Hardy Meets Debutante (M-G-M)	3★
Angel From Texas, An (Warners)	2★
*Angels Over Broadway (Columbia)	2½★
Anne of Windy Poplars (RKO)	2★
Argentine Nights (Universal)	2½★
Arise, My Love (Paramount)	4★
Bad Men of Carson City (Universal)	2★
Beyond Tomorraw (RKO)	2½★
Biscuit Eater, The (Paramaunt)	3★
Black Diamands (Universal)	2★
Boom Town (M-G-M)	3½★
Boys from Syracuse, The (Universal)	3★
Brigham Young—Frontiersman (20th Century-Fax)	3★
Brother Orchid (Warners)	3★
Calling Philo Vance (Warners)	2½★
Captain Caution (United Artists)	2½★
Captain Is a Lady, The (M-G-M)	2½★
Charlie Chan at the Wax Museum (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise (20th Century-Fox)	3★
*Christmas in July (Paramaunt)	3★
City for Conquest (Warners)	3½★
Colorada (Republic)	2½★
Comin' Round the Mauntain (Paramount)	2★
Cawboy From Texas (Republic)	2★
Crass Country Romance (RKO)	2½★
Dance, Girl, Dance (RKO)	2★
*Dancing on a Dime (Paramaunt)	2★
Devil's Island (Warners)	2½★
Diamond Frantier (Universal)	2★
*Dispatch From Reuter's, A (Warners)	3½★
Dr. Christian Meets The Women (RKO)	2★
Dr. Kildare Gaes Hame (M-G-M)	3★
Down Argentine Way (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Earl of Puddlestane (Republic)	2★
Earthbound (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Edison, the Man (M-G-M)	3½★
Flight Angels (Warners)	2½★
Flawing Gald (Warners)	3★
Fareign Correspandent (United Artists)	4★
Four Sans (20th Century-Fax)	3★
Free, Blande and 21 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
French Withaut Tears (Paramaunt)	2½★
Gambling an the High Seas (Warners)	2½★
Gay Caballera, The (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Ghast Breakers, The (Paramaunt)	3★
Girl fram Avenue A (20th Century-Fox)	C 2★
Girl from God's Cauntry (Republic)	2★
Girl from Havana, The (Republic)	2½★
Girl in 313 (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Gold Rush Maisie (M-G-M)	2½★
Gone With the Wind (M-G-M)	4★
Grapes of Wrath, The (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Great Dictator, The (United Artists)	3½★
Great McGinty, The (Paramount)	3½★
Great Profile, The (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
He Stayed far Breakfast (Columbia)	2½★
Hidden Gald (Paramaunt)	2½★
Hired Wife (Universal)	3★
Honeymoan Deferred (Universal)	2½★
Hat Steel (Universal)	2★
Hause af Seven Gables (Universal)	2½★
Howards of Virginia, The (Columbia)	3½★
*Hullabaloo (M-G-M)	2★
I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby (Universal)	2★
If I Had My Way (Universal)	C 3★
I Love You Again (M-G-M)	3★
I Married Adventure (Columbia)	3★
I'm Still Alive (RKO)	2½★
In Old Missouri (Republic)	2★
Irene (RKO)	3★
Isle of Destiny (RKO)	2★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
I Want A Divorce (Paramount)	3★
I Was an Adventuress (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Knute Rockne—All American (Warners)	3½★
La Conga Nights (Universal)	2★
Ladies Must Live (Warners)	2★
Last Alarm, The (Monogram)	2★
Lillian Russell (20th Century-Fax)	3★
*Little Bit of Heaven (Universal)	C 3★
Little Old New York (20th Century-Fcx)	2★
Long Voyage Home, The (United Artists)	4★
Lucky Cisco Kid (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Lucky Partners (RKO)	3★
Mad Men of Europe (Columbia)	2★
Mal He's Making Eyes At Me (Universal)	2½★
Man I Married, The (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Man Wha Talked Too Much, The (Warners)	2½★
Maryland (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Meet the Wildcat (Universal)	2½★
Men Against the Sky (RKO)	3★
Midnight (Paramount)	3★
Money and the Waman (Warners)	2½★
*Maon Over Burma (Paramount)	2½★
Mortal Storm, The (M-G-M)	4★
Mummy's Hand, The (Universal)	2½★
Murder in the Air (Warners)	2★
My Favarite Wife (RKO)	3★
My Little Chickadee (Universal)	2½★
My Lave Came Back (Warners)	3½★
My San, My Son (United Artists)	3½★
New Maon (M-G-M)	3★
*Narth West Maunted Police (Paramount)	3½★
Northwest Passage (M-G-M)	4★
Na Time far Comedy (Warners)	3★
Oklahoma Kid, The (Warners)	3★
Oklahoma Renegades (Republic)	2½★
One Crowded Night (RKO)	2★
One Million B. C. (United Artists)	C 3★
Opened by Mistake (Paramount)	2½★
Our Town (United Artists)	4★
Out West With The Peppers (Columbia)	C 2★
Pastor Hall (United Artists)	3½★
Phantom Raiders (M-G-M)	2★
Pier 13 (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Pinocchio (RKO)	C 4★
Pianeers of the Frontier (Columbia)	2★
Pap Always Pays (RKO)	2½★
Prairie Law (RKO)	2★
Pride and Prejudice (M-G-M)	3 ½★
Public Deb No. 1 (20th Century-Fax)	2★
Quarterback, The (Paramount)	2½★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Ragtime Cawbay Joe (Universal)	2★
Ramparts We Watch, The (March of Time-RKO)	3½★
Rangers of Fortune (Paramaunt)	3★
Rebecca (United Artists)	4★
Rhythm on the River (Paramount)	3½★
Raad to Singapore, The (Paramount)	2½★
Safari (Paramount)	2½★
Sailar's Lady (20th Century-Fax)	2★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Saint Takes Over, The (RKO)	2½★
Sea Hawk, The (Warners)	3½★
Sidewalks of Londan (Paramount Release)	3★
Sing, Dance, Plenty Hot (Republic)	2★
Slightly Honarable (United Artists)	3★
South af Pago Pago (United Artists)	2½★
South to Karanga (Universal)	2½★
Sa Yau Wan't Talk? (Columbia)	2½★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal)	C 2½★
Sparting Blood (M-G-M)	2½★
Spring Parade (Universal)	C 3★
Stanley and Livingstone (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Star Dust (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Stranger on the Third Flaar (RKO)	3★
Strike Up the Band (M-G-M)	C 3½★
Stranger Than Desire (M-G-M)	2½★
Susan and God (M-G-M)	3½★
Swiss Family Rabinson (RKO)	C 3★
They Drive by Night (Warners)	3★
They Knew What They Wanted (RKO)	3½★
*Thief af Bagdad, The (United Artists)	3½★
*Third Finger, Left Hand (M-G-M)	3★
Those Were the Days (Paramount)	C 2½★
Three Faces West (Republic)	3★
Three Smart Girls Grow Up (Universal)	C 3★
Thundering Frontier (Columbia)	2★
Tom Brown's School Days (RKO)	C 3★
*Tao Many Girls (RKO)	3★
Torrid Zone (Warners)	3★
Tawer of London (Universal)	2★
Triple Justice (RKO)	2★
*Tugboat Annie Sails Again (Warners)	2½★
Turnabout (United Artists)	3★
Twenty Mule Team (M-G-M)	3★
Twenty-One Days Together (Columbia)	3★
Typhaon (Paramount)	3★
Untamed (Paramount)	2★
*Victory (Paramaunt)	3★
Vigil in the Night (RKO)	3★
Waterloo Bridge (M-G-M)	3½★
Way of All Flesh, The (Paramaunt)	3★
Westerner The (United Artists)	3★
We Who Are Young (M-G-M)	3★
When the Daltons Rode (Universal)	3★
World in Flames, The (Paramount)	3★
Wyoming (M-G-M)	3★
Yaung As Yau Feel (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Young People (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Yaung Tom Edison (M-G-M)	C 4★

(Continued from page 61)

yet; the kid has a lot of stuff but for the time being, she simply cavorts through these light little pictures taking things the easy way.

Do you happen to remember "The Underpup," Gloria Jean's first picture? Well, this is a sort of follow-up. She's a little Irish ragamuffin with a big heart and a bigger family. Hugh Herbert is her pop; Nan Bryant is her mom; Frank Jenks is Uncle Dan; C. Aubrey Smith is Grandpa and she has eight more uncles who are either street cleaners, gate-watchers, zoo attendants or cops.

The entire family revolves around Gloria and when she gets a job as a radio singer they all live off her earnings and turn into pretentious make-believes—till Gloria snaps them out of it!

It's the homey, natural atmosphere of this whole picture that sells it. It'll remind you of Jane Withers' best films—except that Gloria Jean sings and sings beautifully. One only wishes that her songs were selected with greater care.

There are some swell actors in supporting roles but the honors go to a gent who has been saving films for years by appearing at the right moment for a laugh, without rating much notice—Billy Gilbert.

Oh, and there should be mention, too, of Butch and Buddy, two crazy little youngsters who remind you of the Katzenjammer Kids, and of Bob Stack, Nan Grey and Eugene Pallette; they're swell. Directed by Andre Marton.—Universal.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Director Marton, who formerly directed for Joe Pasternak, in Europe, makes his American debut with this film . . . Gloria Jean's mother designed her clothes for this picture; her 11-year-old sister Lois (Gloria Jean is 12) was her stand-in . . . Seven famous ex-stars play the roles of Gloria Jean's uncles—Charles Ray, Noah Beery, Maurice Costello, Monte Blue, Pat O'Malley, Kenneth Harlan, William Desmond . . . "Eli, Eli." sung by Gloria Jean here, is supposed to be the oldest melody known and was the first song ever heard on the talking screen . . . C. Aubrey Smith celebrated his 77th birthday and 25th anniversary in films on July 21.

★★★ Victory

Here you will find some of the finest acting you've seen in a long time. Betty Field is one of the best actresses in Hollywood, and this performance should land her much of the credit she deserves. Freddie March, too, is a swell trouper and this is mighty close to being his finest role. Sir Cedric Hardwicke is another A-1 actor who tops himself, and Jerry Cowan has never been as good as he is here. Beyond the superb acting, however, the film cannot be thoroughly recommended.

It's a tough movie to analyze. It's like an elegant dish of food containing the very best ingredients but lacking salt and pepper. The script is slow-moving, but the major fault lies with Director John Cromwell, who concentrated on getting unbelievable results out of his troupers at the expense of necessary atmosphere. Joseph Conrad is difficult to bring to the screen, and this picture is convincing proof of the fact. What makes him such strong and excitable reading is his haunting and brilliant mastery of language and atmosphere. He builds up a scene to the point where you almost burst with tension. And this is where the picture falls down. It doesn't concentrate enough on the shadings and background and is consequently pretty much black and white.

Freddie March and Betty Field live on an island minding their own business when along come Hardwicke and Cowan, who play the villains. Betty kills Cowan, Freddie kills Hardwicke and the Chinese servant of the heroes slays the moron servant of the bad men. Directed by John Cromwell.—Paramount.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Imagine a South Seas yarn without a sarong, an earthquake or a tidal flood! The day of miracles, indeed! . . . Fredric March has been described as the collar ad who made good; he's one of the few Hollywood actors who does just as he pleases, has no contracts and takes only the roles that appeal to him . . . This is the fourth film for Betty Field, young Bostonian, and all four of them have been completely different in tempo—"What A Life," "Of Mice And Men" and "Seventeen" . . . Sir Cedric Hardwicke won a "most beautiful baby" contest at the age of 14 months.

★★½ Angels Over Broadway

Ben Hecht feels that nothing good will ever come of this movie manufacturing racket until somebody breaks the rules and starts all over again on a new track. But the trouble is that he keeps moving the same old trolley car over on that new track.

There are some good actors in this film, and they try very hard. You have never seen either Tom Mitchell or Rita Hayworth as good as they are here. And John Qualen, who gets a chance to show off his wares, will astonish some of you. On the other hand Doug Fairbanks Jr., though he has only himself to blame for it, is totally miscast as a New York toughie (with an Oxford accent).

Hecht wrote, produced and directed the picture with Fairbanks as co-producer and star. It's a sentimental bit of hokum dressed up in big words.

One final word of warning. Although the dialog is occasionally very funny and sometimes close to brilliant, for the most part, it's stagey and unsuitable. And one final word of praise. The photography is excellent and the really fine musical score by George Antheil helps a whole lot. Directed by Ben Hecht.—Columbia.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: Formerly titled "Before I Die," this is the fifth picture in which Hecht carries triple credits as writer, co-producer and director; one of them, "The Scoundrel," won him the 1935 Academy Award for best original story . . . Sets had walls only eight feet high because Hecht believes big, expensive sets serve no worthwhile purpose and often detract from the telling of the story . . . Picture was completed considerably within the prescribed budget and shooting schedule; this was accomplished by doing most of the work before shooting started . . . Entire action of the story takes place within 10 hours —all of it in the rain . . . Of the 21 sets, only one is an actual exterior. Docks, New York streets, etc., were built indoors . . . This is Rita Hayworth's second dramatic role, a field towards which she is veering as much as she can . . . John Qualen is the fastest climbing character actor in pictures; he startled the critics with topnotch performances in "Knute Rockne" and "Long Voyage Home" . . . Thomas Mitchell, who was one of show biz's original triple-threat men, having been a writer and director before he tried acting, is the only one in the film who sticks to a single job—acting.

Soft AS A BUTTERFLY WING

Haven't you often wished you could make your complexion perfectly lovely—smooth, soft as a butterfly wing? Well, you can, because HAMPDEN POWD'R-BASE... gives your skin a soft, smooth, more youthful appearance • keeps your make-up fresh and lovely for hours • helps conceal lines and blemishes • prevents nose shine. HAMPDEN POWD'R-BASE "makes" your make-up. It is light, non-greasy, easy to use and comes in your own complexion shade. Try it today.

POWD'R-BASE hampden

25c in Drug and Dept. stores also in 50c and 10c (trial) size. Over 12 million sold

Lemon Juice Recipe Checks Rheumatic Pain Quickly

If you suffer from rheumatic or neuritis pain, try this simple inexpensive home recipe. Get a package of Ru-Ex Compound, a two week's supply, mix it with a quart of water, add the juice of 4 lemons. Often within 48 hours—sometimes overnight—splendid results are obtained. If the pains do not quickly leave you, return the empty package and Ru-Ex will cost you nothing to try. It is sold under an absolute money-back guarantee. Ru-Ex Compound is for sale by druggists everywhere.

GIVEN AWAY!

Gorgeous Birthstone Ring; Bracelet or Pendant to match in solid sterling silver, Your Size and Month, your choice FOR selling 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25c each. Order 4 salve and new catalog. Send No Money. ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., BOX 34, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE) Use DERMOIL

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on Psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing true photographic proof of results also FREE.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Generous trial bottle sent FREE to those who send in their Druggist's name and address. Make our famous "One Spot Test" yourself. Write today for your test bottle. Print name plainly. Results may surprise you. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547, Northwestern Station, Dept. 1509, Detroit, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

In oddition to this ultro ultra ski suit, Koy Froncis' wordrobe for her newest picture, "Ploy Girl," includes o soble coot rented by the studio ot $100 o doy!

★★½ Moon Over Burma

Let's make believe this is a question bee. In a story with a tropical background what role does the female star always play? Answer: Either a native girl or a stranded show girl. How many men fall in love with her? Two, both white. Which actress plays the part of the girl? Well, if you can get Dorothy Lamour and her sarong——

Okay, the lesson is over for the day. The lads who wrote this script obviously know all the proper answers. Burma provides the tropical background; there's Dotty Lamour as the stranded show girl—and two males, both white. But an innovation—aha!—no sarong. Which is just about all the novelty there is in the film. And even here, a compromise. For you lads who want an eyeful—and why shouldn't you?—Dorothy shows up in short trunks and abbreviated uppers.

There is a considerable amount of exciting action in the film if you are not bothered by the fact that you've seen it all in previous pictures, too. The jungle stuff is mixed neatly with the love story, and there's a nice hot forest fire for thrills.

There is no sense in talking about the quality of the acting here. Dorothy Lamour, Preston Foster and Robert Preston are all exactly what you expect them to be. Albert Basserman does a swell piece as a blind man. Directed by Louis King. —Paramount.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: A new Dorothy here—she's bobbed her hair and discarded her sarong, also traded her chimpanzee for assorted cobras and elephants. . . . When the news got around that Dottie bobbed her hair, nearly 5000 requests were received for samples of the famous locks. . . . Despite the log jams, forest fires and other thrill scenes, the most difficult to film was an apparently simple one where an elephant lies down to permit Robert Preston and Dorothy to dismount from a howdah. After fifteen rehearsals and a dozen takes, they managed it. . . . Every actor in the picture was injured at some time or other. . . . Sally and Queenie, last of the movie-trained elephants were burned to death when the farm at which they were housed caught fire; two other elephants were made up to double for Sally and Queenie for the finish of the film. . . . Most of the herd used in the picture belong to the Hagenback-Wallace Circus . . . The lodge shown in the picture was furnished in the style of Burma; more than $80,000 worth of rare art objects and fine furniture were used.

★★½ Tugboat Annie Sails Again

Here is a new series of pictures about Tugboat Annie, and Warner Brothers thinks that this one will catch on and go over as big as it did years ago when Marie Dressler played Annie. We doubt it unless the succeeding films improve a great deal.

What's wrong with the picture? Well, for one thing, the story—which is dull, unimaginative. And for another, the direction. Director Seiler seemingly let all the actors have a field day; they all overact, from Rambeau on down, including Alan Hale, Ronald Reagan and Jane Wyman. But maybe the greatest fault of the picture is that you can't help trying to compare every second of it with something you saw and thoroughly enjoyed years ago. Directed by Lewis Seiler.—Warner Brothers.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS:—Norman Reilly Raine wrote twenty-six Tugboat Annie stories before he gave up, some years ago. . . . The Annie character was inspired by a real person, the late Theo Foss of Tacoma. . . . Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan always try to get into the same picture, if they can; they're married. . . . For a big freighter scene the Nordpol, large Danish motorship, was used; the boat and its crew were stranded in the Pacific by U. S. immigration restrictions so were happy to make the movie deal. . . . 18,000 gallons of fuel oil were used by the movie flotilla.

★★ Dancing on a Dime

There has been a trend in Hollywood towards building up youth of late. Almost all film companies are attempting to make a few pictures with young people. Well, it's a noble notion and a step in the right direction—but this is not the one that you will want to see, or talk about or remember. It's pretty unfortunate.

Hard to know at whose step to lay the blame here; the whole business just doesn't come off. It tells of a bunch of actors on the late, lamented WPA Theatre Project who are left stranded and try to get back on their feet. None of it is very inspired, although everybody tries hard.

Grace McDonald is best of the troupers but it's a tough break for her to make her Hollywood bow this way. Eddie Quillan and Frank Jenks manage to get a few laughs into the proceedings—for which all thanks. Directed by Joseph Santley. —Paramount.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: The old Garrick theater was reproduced as accurately as possible for this film. . . . Grace McDonald, who makes her film bow here, after clicking solidly on Broadway, started her theatrical career at 14 as a magician's stooge. . . . Though Frank Jenks and Eddie Quillan were hoofers years ago when they were on the stage, neither had danced in ten years. They both swear that these roles were the hardest they ever played. . . . Quillan, just before this picture started, was fresh from a half-starved Okie role in "The Grapes of Wrath." Nevertheless he lost 10 pounds in four days on this pic.

★★ Hullabaloo

If it were not for the fact that there are some very swell actors in this picture turning in some very swell performances, the kindest thing would be to just skip the whole thing. But Frank Morgan is better than he has ever been—which is covering a lot of good, solid territory—and there are two newcomers whom you will not forget in a hurry named Virginia O'Brien and Charles Holland. All three of them deserve a better fate.

Do you want proof that there is something seriously cockeyed in the manufacture of this picture? Well, think on this for a moment; two grand actresses like Billie Burke and Sara Hadden are thoroughly wasted, have only a few minutes each and get over no effective scenes at all! Directed by Edwin Marin—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

PREVIEW POSTSCRIPTS: When Virginia Grey was signed at Metro for "The Great Ziegfeld" it was because of her dancing, but she gets her first chance to use her twinkling tootsies here. . . . Dan Dailey, Jr., came to films as a song and dance man; he doesn't do either one in this film; never has in any pictures.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 57)

he's got that we haven't—besides a voice, a horse and a grin!

CHISEL OF THE MONTH

Every state in the union grows its annual crop of chiselers, so maybe Hollywood oughtn't to be surprised at finding one of the species in its own midst. Nevertheless, everyone's commenting about the cheap trick pulled by a little star whose salary runs into the thousands weekly. The star, so the story goes, was the guest of an important studio on one of those out-of-town-premiere junkets. The studio always pays all expenses on premiere trips, and before the star left she was told to remember to charge her taxicab, food, hotel and cocktail bills, etc., to her hosts. The star smiled sweetly and said she'd remember all right. And how she did! Ten minutes after her train arrived at its destination, she was seated in the swankiest store in the city, airily instructing a dumfounded salesgirl to charge $200 worth of hose to the studio! The studio paid the bill, of course, but we think we can name one lady who will be off their guest list till hell freezes over!

A VOICE IN THE MATTER

Two of the funniest-sounding men in Hollywood, Walter Brennan and Andy Devine, didn't need expensive coaches to give them "grate" voices. Walter acquired his in a gas attack during World War I, and Andy when he was a boy, fell on a stick which punctured his neck and injured his larynx. Happily, their voices haven't stopped either of them from getting along. Walter's a two-time Academy Award winner and Andy, who has worked for the same studio since 1925, currently pulls in the very neat sum of $100,000 per annum none of which is being squandered on voice specialists!

RELATIVELY SPEAKING

Not much chance Helen Parrish will grow lonesome while doing and dying for dear old Universal. Her brother, Bob, works in the studio's cutting room and her best beau, Charles Lang, has just been signed to a contract there. Joan Leslie, Warners' remarkable 15-year-old siren discovery, is another who's not alone on a great movie lot. Joan was at Warners only a few weeks when she wangled contracts for both her older sisters! Watch that little girl, by the way. The studio's concentrating on not giving her publicity, but when she bursts from the screen in "High Sierra" and "Carnival" she's going to out-oomph Annie!

HEDY AND JOHNNY ARE SWEETHEARTS

The Hedy Lamarr-John Howard romance which was strictly publicity when it started, is now going like a house afire. The two paired up originally when John's agent got the idea his client was receiving the go-by from producers because he lacked male oomph. "If I fix him up with the most glamourous woman in town," figured the agent, "those boys will have to admit he's got what it takes and sign him up pronto!" With the help of a mutual friend the agent arranged John's first date with Hedy, never expecting there'd be a second. To his delight there's been a third, fifth and twelfth! The only persons more amazed than he are Hedy and John who, for the first time in their career lives, are singing the praises of the world's most abused creature—the lowly press agent.

DEBUNKING DIVISION

Ginger Rogers' mother is circulating the story that Ginger will wed an unnamed Mr.

Peggy Moron, ploying opposite boy friend Fronchot Tone in "The Trail of the Vigilontes," checks up on her blood pressure after an ordent love scene!

*ROGERS SILVERPLATE by Oneida Ltd. silversmiths

*Oneida Ltd. lines, bearing the Trade-Marks:
1881 ® ROGERS ®
WM. A. ROGERS
Simeon L. & George H. Rogers Company

Means EXTRA SILVER WHERE YOU NEED IT
LOOK FOR ONEIDA LTD.
ON THE BACK-

LOOK AT THIS AMAZING WATCH and RING OFFER
LEATHER OR LINK BRACELET
Choice of ELGIN WALTHAM ILLINOIS Movement
One Year TO PAY IN FULL
Smart Jeweled Accurate
LATEST styled 1941 ring. 10K 14K Rolled Gold Plate shank. Genuine Sterling Silver top, set with 1/6K, 50 point, Simulated Diamond and six brilliants
SEND NO MONEY WITH ORDER
YOUR CHOICE of Jeweled Elgin, Waltham or Illinois wrist watch. New styled size 0 case. Reconstructed movement. Accuracy guaranteed. Given with every Simulated Diamond ring when ordered and paid for on our purchase privilege plan. Payments: $3.50 down, within 20 days after arrival, at your post office. Balance of $3.50 anytime within a year (total only $7.00). Remember, the cost of watch is included in price of the ring. Extra surprise free gift enclosed for promptness. Send NO money with order. Just rush name, address, ring size. It comes by return mail in special gift box, postpaid.
A. HAMILTON JEWELERS
Topeka, Kansas Dept. M-11

FREE ENLARGEMENT
Just to get acquainted with new customers, we will beautifully enlarge one snapshot print or negative, photo or picture to 8x10 inches—FREE—if you enclose this ad with 10c for handling and return mailing. Information on hand tinting in natural colors sent immediately. Your original returned with your free enlargement. Send it today.
Geppert Studios, Dept. 663, Des Moines, Iowa

HOLIDAY CHEER
Let this inspiring new Cook Book show you the way to holidays full of Joy and Good Food. Ask for it at any newsdealer.
THE NEW MODERN HOSTESS
COOK BOOK•10¢

BE A NURSE
MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK
You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. 42nd yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Write now.
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 231, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name
City State Age

Beauteous and chic Ann Miller is on her way to escort Mrs. Miller to the Motion Picture Mothers' Dance where she naturally was the most envied mama of them all.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 75)

Someone come Christmas time. Forget it. Ginger's legal name will be Mrs. Lew Ayres until late in January . . . Ditto the Lana Turner-Tony Martin marriage rumors. Tony becomes a free man early in the new year, but Lana's scissoring from Artie Shaw won't be complete until July . . . The story kicking around that Loretta Young is headed for mamahood is also false. Loretta denies it, and, considering her reputation for honesty, that—as they say—is that.

UNFAIR TO JANE

Jane Withers is in a seventh heaven of delight. She has a new boyfriend and, what's more, she has him where she can keep her eye on him! He's wide-smiling Buddy Pepper, the talented 16-year-older who appeared with her in "Golden Hoofs." Jane discovered Buddy in the cast of a local revue and from her seat in the audience developed such a wild crush on the youngster, she immediately persuaded Darryl Zanuck to sign him up. The kids spend all their working hours together and would enjoy carrying their courtship beyond studio doors. However, Mama Withers has let it be known that Janie may not date a boy alone until she's sixteen—which may be what inspired Buddy to compose a song called "What Good Does It Do" and dedicate it to his fair patroness.

ELECTION DAY ECHO

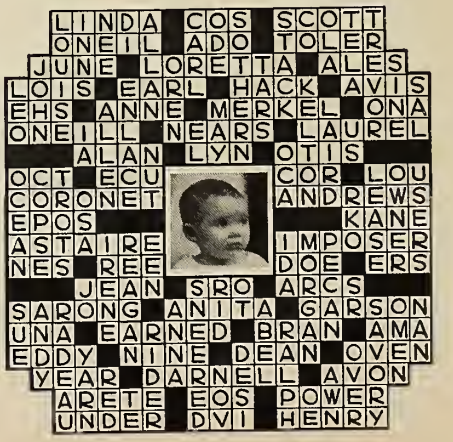
Maybe election talk is old stuff in your town, but in Hollywood they're still chuckling about the way Claudette Colbert withered Robert Montgomery when he invited her to attend a "Hollywood-for-Willke" rally. "Certainly, Bob," chirped Claudette. "I'd lo-ove to come—but do you mind if I make a speech for Franklin D. Roosevelt?"

THE GREEN, GREEN PASTURES OF HOME

This is a story about William Brent, the man who penned Sonja Henie's next picture, "Sun Valley." We're telling you about Brent and not about Sonja because, at the moment, we think he's even more interesting than she. And here's why. A year ago, Brent was a $50-a-week sound man at 20th Century-Fox. Then he wrote a story and tried to sell it to his studio. Nobody would look at it so Brent sent it to the Saturday Evening Post and received a check for $5,000. A few weeks later Fox, which could have had the story for a couple of hundred dollars, paid Brent $10,000 for its screen rights and now Brent is a writer at his own studio and has a seven-year contract for $250 weekly! Next month we'll tell you about Sonja.

DIDJA KNOW

That Harmon Nelson is telling friends his reconciliation with Bette Davis is not unlikely . . . That Cary Grant is suffering over six pages of Japanese dialogue, necessary for his role of an American newspaper correspondent in "Penny Serenade" . . . That Jimmy Stewart, his star rating notwithstanding, was haled into court charged with speeding through a 20-mile zone at 45 miles an hour . . . That the Don Ameches still want a daughter but will probably get her via the adoption route . . . That John Wayne and Ward Bond were teammates on the USC football eleven . . . That brothers Bing and Bob Crosby have seen each other only four times in the past seven years . . . That "Tillie and Mac," famed comic strip characters, will soon caper for Columbia . . . That Brian Donlevy is building his new home next to a cemetery . . . That the Warner Bros. publicity department files all Ann Sheridan portraits under "Annie" . . . That player-pianos make Melvyn Douglas' spine crawl . . . That Ida Lupino's beautifully appointed bar and playroom were furnished from a Sears-Roebuck catalogue . . . That the cake Clark Gable gave Carole on her last natal day was inscribed: "To Ma—on her 75th birthday"?



BEWARE THE VISIBLE MAN!

Lionel and John Barrymore, who chilled when the fair Elaine entered the Royal Family, kissed and made up soon after Elaine's exit. So clubby have they become that John's taken to ribbing the less pixyish Lionel—and Lionel's beginning to think maybe his brother is funny after all. For example, the other morning John noticed that the bushy eyebrows and baggy suits he wears in "The Invisible Woman" make him the spitting image of Lionel. He promptly dispatched a messenger boy to Lionel's house with a photograph of himself in character and attached a note which read: "This is the best picture you've ever made!" Only one thing is marring their touching reconciliation. John's trying to date Lionel's pretty nurse, and Lionel's getting madder by the minute.

McCARTHY, THE WOODEN WOLF

Edgar Bergen, who hasn't got a wife, became a father last week. The latest addition to his curious clan is flesh-and-blood Thelma Jean Graham, a 12-year-old Nashville, Tennessee, orphan. Edgar found Thelma Jean when he went to Nashville recently to purchase a new airplane. Thelma Jean met him at the airport with her own Charley McCarthy dummy on her arm, and told him she wanted to be a ventriloquist, too. Being the best-hearted guy in the industry, Edgar tried her out, found she was terrific, and immediately adopted her for the purpose of training her in his art. Thelma Jean now lives at a Beverly Hills boarding school where Edgar visits her regularly to give her lessons. "Can't have her around the house," he apologizes. "You know, that McCarthy fellow. . . ."

Solution to Puzzle on Page 69

WHITHER THOU GOEST

Has anyone noted that Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor have had a house guest since the day they married? He's "Uncle" Buck Mack, an old vaudeville performer who befriended Barbara in her down days. He used to live with Barbara and Frank Fay when they were Mr. and Mrs. and, when Barbara remarried, he just went along with the bride. "Uncle" Buck worships Barbara and is constantly fearful that someone will harm her. As a result, when they're out together, he always keeps a roll of dimes clutched in his right fist. He knows the dimes will pack more punch into his punches should a stranger molest her—and he'll gladly meet all comers.

BARBARA BROADCASTS

You can't blame "Uncle" Buck for wanting to protect a girl like Babs. Mrs. Ray Milland reports that the other day she was about to tune out a radio program emanating from a local orphan asylum when she heard the announcer say he was going to introduce a young lady known to all listeners. Barbara Stanwyck took the air and, without fanfare or build-up, quietly spoke her piece in behalf of the youngsters. It's things like these that make us think "Uncle" Buck ought to carry quarters!

DISA AND DATA

The John Waynes, thinking each baby would be their last, have given away three sets of nursery equipment. They say the newest will go into storage—just in case . . . 20th Century-Fox claims Linda Darnell's kisses add $500 to the cost of each of her pictures. Her blushes show on the screen and retakes are necessary . . . Under the terms of her new contract, Judy Garland will receive $2,000 a week for the next three years, $2,500 weekly for two years after that and, from then on, $3,000 weekly until she completes her seven-year pact . . . Lon Chaney, Jr., is authoring the life of his famous dad. He believes it can be film-played by only one man—Paul Muni . . . Erich Maria Remarque writes to the accompaniment of symphony records . . . Cesar Romero, disdaining a double, does all his own riding in "Cisco Kid" pictures . . . Greer Garson's glorious coloring may soon shine from a Technicolor screen . . . J. Sinkerton Snoopington, Mr. Hermosillo Brunch and Elsie Mae Adele Brunch Sousé are all characters in W. C. Fields' "The Bank Dick." Fields himself is called Egbert Sousé . . . Connie Bennett raffled off her Persian lamb coat to whip up some money for British refugee children . . . Bette Davis' dog is on a weight-building diet, having lost too many pounds while beating around New York with Bette . . . Robert Preston is getting more larnin' at UCLA. It's a literature course, this time . . . Orson Welles is probably the most highly organized man in the country. He's a member of five unions . . . It's dieting, bowling and a daily five-mile hike for Lana Turner who must drop fourteen pounds worth of curves before she can face the camera again . . . The cellar of Elsa Maxwell's Hollywood home is packed with vintage champagne . . . Charlie Chaplin's answer to the Paulette Goddard-Anatole Litvak talk was a gift to Paulette of a pair of heart-shaped diamond ear-clips.

BLOOD IS THICKER THAN CONTRACT

After five long and fruitless years, Olympe Bradna has won a divorce from Paramount on the grounds of cruelty. Seems the studio realized their little Frenchie's career was breathing its last and decided to pep it up by changing her tag. Olympe said "You don't do that to me!" because the Bradnas are one of the oldest and most revered families in show business, and the suggestion that she'd smell sweeter by any other name made her sick. Now, Olympe is marching with the unemployed, but she's still insisting she did the right thing. "There was no alternative," says she. "Bradna is a more important name than Paramount any day—at least to the Bradnas!"

SO YOU THINK YOU KNOW MOVIES?

If you like odd facts and figures and you like the movies, you'll like the information an ambitious studio statistician dug up recently. He reports that when you see the average American movie, you sit in one of 10,924,484 seats in one of the nations 17,500 theatres, and watch the screen for 73 minutes. If you pay the average admission price, your ticket reads 22c, and if you want to see all of the 500-odd features released yearly, you must hug your seat for 26 days and 26 nights!

MUSICAL LOVE POTION

Seems as though the newest way to a man's heart is through your harp. Cameo-faced Anita Louise admits she's teaching hubby Buddy Adler to play the instrument, and Deanna Durbin's issued orders she's not to be disturbed between five and six, the hour set aside for her string-strumming lesson. Deanna's learning to play the organ, too, which should squelch the "any minute now" marriage talk that's around again. Wives-to-be, if they're as practical as Deanna, don't spend their pre-nuptial days caressing key boards and harp strings. They study the "Newlywed's Handibook" or volumes dealing with the "Care and Feeding of Babies"—and, to date, Deanna's attitude toward both these subjects has been distinctly frigid.

You'll be thrilled to see your wish coming true when you start using Barrington, the delicate Hand Cream that is made specially to keep hands softer, smoother, whiter than ever before. Barrington produces results, as proven by thousands of women who use it daily—regularly—after performing household or office duties which tend to redden and roughen their hands.

Avoid H— H—! (Household Hands). Get a jar of Barrington Hand Cream and enjoy hand comfort.

Sold in most 5c to $1.00 stores. Now available in 10c, 25c and 39c jars.

North American Dye Corporation
Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Barrington HAND CREAM

A NADCO QUALITY PRODUCT

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

STOP Scratching Relieve Itch Fast -or Money Back

For quick relief from itching of eczema, pimples, athlete's foot, scales, scabies, rashes and other externally caused skin troubles, use world-famous, cooling, antiseptic, liquid D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes irritation and quickly stops intense itching. 35c trial bottle proves it, or money back. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION.

NEW SAFE WAY— TO REMOVE CUTICLE, USE TRIMAL

Recommended by Leading Beauty Shops

WRAP cotton around the end of an orangewood stick. Saturate with Trimal and apply to cuticle. Watch dead cuticle soften. Wipe it away with a towel. You will be amazed at the results. On sale at drug, department and 10-cent stores. Trimal Labs., Inc., Los Angeles, Cal.

Esther Ralstan, who plays the role of her late friend, Nora Bayes, in "Tin Pan Alley," swears that in the future nothing will lure her to Hollywood away from her husband and child and their brand-new home in Great Neck, Long Island.

A RIGHT GUY

(Continued from page 31)

"Sometimes I think I'd like to try the stage. I never have. But then again, I don't believe I'd like those late hours, after-theatre supper parties and all that. I'm an early-to-bedder and a very early riser. The days are never long enough for me so I'm not giving any early morning hours back to the Indians.

"If you should ask me whether I'm satisfied being an actor or wish I'd gone in for some other job or profession, the answer would be 'yes and no.' When you look at it from one angle there are a lot more worthwhile things a man could be doing. On the other hand, entertainment is pretty much of a necessity especially in these times, and some group has to supply it. I like the feeling that what I am doing is necessary. And since I do feel that way about it, I'm content to be one of the group that supplies it.

I try not to kid myself," said Gary, "because if you don't fool yourself you won't fool other people and, in the long run, you'll get along all right.

"For instance, I know that if I were not a movie star I wouldn't get asked out much. I don't pretend that I'm the life of the party. I never kid myself that I got into pictures on my looks either. I was the first of an era of more or less homely guys in the movies. I've had lines on my face since I was twenty. Wind and sun put them there I guess. And no Adonis was ever this tall and skinny!

"Then, so many people contribute to your being a movie star. It isn't a one-man show, by any means. A teacher of mine got me interested in dramatics. Being shy, too tall for my age and self-conscious about it even then, she made me go in for debating. I have her to thank, really, for I did gain a certain degree of self-assurance.

"Then there was a lawyer back home in Montana, a friend of my father's. He taught me how to box. He was interested in 'these movie stars,' as he called them, and always made them sound like some strange species. Anyway, he used to talk about the money they made. Valentino, for example, and the fact that he was said to earn $250,000 a year. 'What is it these women go for?' he'd ask. 'Is it the shinola on the hair? Is it the girl in his arms, the camera on his face, the look in his eyes . . .' and at that point he'd stop, clear his throat vigorously, look horribly embarrassed and ask me brusquely what the hell I was lolling around for! I didn't think, at the time, that I was much interested in the stars or in the money they made. But it must have soaked in because when I needed dough and needed it badly, echoes of those talks came back to me. Valentino, $250,000 a year—siren songs when your stomach is flat!

"Well, one hundred people like him, suggestions like that in and out of your life, contribute to making you whatever you become. And it takes more people and more factors to make a movie actor than it does to make any other job. The rest of it, for me, was equally unpremeditated and accidental. I wanted to be a cartoonist. I submitted a few things to editors who said they were 'sorry.' I sold advertising here in Los Angeles, where I had come to make my fortune. I did all right except that I couldn't collect my dough. I got hungry. I happened to run into a pal from Montana who was an extra in the movies, riding ponies. I went along and rode, too," said Gary. "That's how it happened to me. No particular enterprise on my part, no plotting or planning.

"Then, after a movie actor gets established," Gary continued, "at least a million people contribute to keeping him established. The fans, all the people he works with—producer, director, author, sound man, each one about as indispensable as the other. A movie actor can't honestly get up, whack himself on the chest and say, "Look what I did!" So you really can't get puffed up about it. You can't feel very secure about it either. For in this business, success depends on whether you have five gray hairs in your head or sixty, and the chance for success decreases with the passing of years and youth. There's only one Lewis Stone!

"Another thing, when I'm working I don't see the rushes. 'That's funny,' people say. It's not because I'm indifferent that I don't see them but because they make me self-conscious. I don't go into a huddle over my script before I start work in a picture—not because I don't take it seriously, but because the script is changed so often during the course of production that I find it better to sort of 'feel' my character out as he goes along. He comes to life that way.

LIKE all actors I like to work for Capra. He makes you feel important; he lets you make suggestions. Not that you have to with Capra; he senses things. If an actor seems unhappy in a scene, Frank spots it and says, 'You were unhappy in that scene, weren't you?' He finds out why. Then he does the scene over and over again until you feel comfortable doing it.

"I believe in relegating matters not up my alley to others who can handle them better than I. I'm not much of a business man and so I put my affairs into the hands of my manager. When it comes to picking screen material for myself, the right stories, my judgment is pretty sound. Of course we all make mistakes, but generally I can 'feel out' a story I should do. We see a lot of pictures, and my wife and I go to the neighborhood movies frequently. When we do it's for entertainment, not to pick them to pieces. If I'm entertained, I call it a good picture. And I use that same audience reaction as a basis for choosing stories. In other words I say to myself, 'Would I like to see myself in this picture?'

"I guess I liked 'The Virginian' about the best of any picture I've made. It was my first talking picture, and it was the original Western. I liked 'Mr. Deeds' because I understood the chap and it offered a new twist on a small-town American character. I feel as if I fit comfortably into the clothes of 'John Doe.' I may do 'Sergeant York' next, again at Warners. I feel very self-conscious about playing the part of a man who is still alive, a man who has done so many fine things, built roads and schools in the mountains of Tennessee where education was badly needed.

"I think we are all going to live very differently, very frugally from now on. It's all right with me personally. I'll fit, and comfortably, into a simpler scheme of things than we have known here in Hollywood. Perhaps that's the answer to your questions," he smiled at me, "all of them. I guess I fit comfortably into my life, so why make a fuss about it?"

THE DOCTOR VIEWS HIS CASE

(Continued from page 43)

a thermometer. In typical Ayres fashion, he got to studying the gadget, and before he knew it he had picked up a strange assortment of barometers, wind-direction indicators, rain gauges and all sorts of weird contraptions dreamed up by himself. One of these days he'll have a licensed weather station up there on Lookout Mountain.

He started out "piddling around" with a dollar camera and wound up with a dark room, a half dozen dream cameras and a reputation for expert picture-snatching. When he isn't entering some of his photographic masterpieces in competitions, he's discussing shots and angles with the studio cameramen. By the time the daffodils come, he'll be ready to photograph all of Metro's pictures!

Having been a medicine man in six Kildare pictures, you can bet your bottom dollar that Ayres hasn't been asleep on the job. He has read the Materia Medica through twice, has romped through a library on surgery, and when last heard from was mastering the latest whimsies in the art of diagnosis. One of the Hollywood legends is that once Dr. Lew walked up to a total stranger, talked to him five minutes and informed him, gently that he was suffering from a brain tumor. His hunch proved right.

So studious is Ayres about his role of James Kildare, M.D., that he has haunted hospitals to check up on physicians' habits, has talked with internes until wee hours in the morning, has watched operations by the dozen and has even compared his bedside manner with those of established practitioners.

ALL of which explains why his characterization is so convincing. In fact, the student body of a medical school in Dallas turns out en masse for every Ayres picture, hoping to acquire that ingratiating Ayres manner—especially with female patients—for future use.

Perish the thought that Lew Ayres is eternally buried in books or listening to celestial music. Fact is that the Caliph of Lookout Mountain is one of Hollywood's most sought-after escorts, which fact is reflected in his colossal fan following among college girls.

Every now and then Lew decides to do the town. Then it's more like Mardi Gras than anything else. He will scoop himself up a Mary Beth Hughes or a Ruth Hussey and take off. They descend on the night spots with a flourish, Lew in his white tie and tails and the current princess-consort in an elegant little number from I. Magnin's.

Wherever there's Lew and his lady, there's pandemonium. Lew can rhumba with the best of them, and his La Conga, according to report, is even better than that of Señor Cesar Romero.

Somewhere around three Lew hustles her home, bows cavalier-style and departs. He may not see her for months after that. Bachelor Lew is traveling light these days. He's steering clear of romance as if his life depended on it. A good time—yes. But a pact! No, thank you.

Being an idealist, he has his views on the perfect woman.

"The three qualities I admire most in a woman," he'll tell you, if you can get him in the mood, "are charm, poise and intellect. Maybe I'm a sap for feeling the way I do, but I'm convinced that every woman, if she's so determined, can develop these qualities provided, of course, that she has a normal mental capacity."

Concerning Hollywood in general, he feels philosophic. He realizes, at long last, that a man's prestige is as good as his last picture. He jokes about it. "The only thing to do, I guess, is to make all your last pictures stirring and memorable."

About his own art, he's amazingly modest. He thinks he's "an average intelligent actor." He's not waiting for the part that will win him the Academy Award.

"I want no part of glamour. Let me play the man who eats the spiders—the funny little man. There's no trick at all in turning out what the critics choose to call 'a competent job' in the role of a normal young American, because that's what I am. That's just being myself. But to get around to playing the type of characters created by Lionel Barrymore or Jean Hersholt—that's something else again. Let Gable and Cooper be the heroes. I'll take the character parts."

What Lew would like to do above all else is to direct. He took a fling at it a few years back. It was a costly venture. And not spectacularly successful, either.

In order to direct, he made an unusual bargain with Republic Pictures. First he agreed to play in two pictures. Next he promised, in order to learn every phase of production, to follow three pictures from the writing to the final editing—without pay. And finally he had to consent to direct the picture gratis. The upshot of it all was that he worked eight months without getting a cent, living on the proceeds from playing in two pictures.

He has no illusions about what he did over at Republic.

"I directed one picture, 'Hearts in Bondage,' and it was a turkey. But I'm not licked. I'm still going to direct, even if I have to wait until I'm gray and bald-headed. But I'm not going to push success. I'm simply going to drift with the wind and see where it takes me."

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send today for the new up-to-date list of Hollywood stars with their correct studio addresses. It is a convenient size to handle or keep in a scrap-book. To receive a list, all you have to do is write to us and ask for it, enclosing a large, self-addressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that last item, as no request can be complied with otherwise. Please send request to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

Beautiful NAILS AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

BROKEN, SHORT —Ugly

LONG, TAPERING —Lovely

DON'T ENVY long, tapering, smart nails — have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU-NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half-moons. Helps check nail-biting habit. Protects fragile nails while they grow strong again. Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores.

Nu-Nails, Dept. 15-A, 462 No. Parkside, Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be over-worked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

FALSE TEETH

LOW AS $6.85

90 DAYS' TRIAL
TEST THEM
EXAMINE THEM

We make FALSE TEETH for you by mail from your own impressions. You have satisfaction of MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE. Customers report satisfaction but you be your own judge.

SEND NO MONEY WRITE TODAY for FREE Booklet and Material.
CLEVELAND DENTAL SUPPLY COMPANY
Dept. 97-A1, East St. Louis, Illinois

ANNOUNCING to people who need a practical knowledge of bookkeeping

A SHORT, PRACTICAL COURSE

MODERN BOOKKEEPING

New, up-to-the-minute plan of training—learning by the Job Method. You learn by doing. Interesting—simple—easy.

Planned for spare time of busy people. No previous knowledge or experience necessary. We train from ground up. Complete, yet no waste motion.

Specially designed for owners, managers, secretaries, office workers, etc. A half hour a day study at home enables you to clearly understand business records or to keep complete set of books.

Cost is low and convenient terms can be arranged. For full information—free—write Dept. 1318-H

LASALLE EXTENSION UNIVERSITY A CORRESPONDENCE INSTITUTION Chicago, Ill.

The shopely legs ond cellophone bonnets of such world shokers os Gwen Stith form the comely decorotion in the new comedy melodramo, "A Night At Earl Corroll's."

TAKE CARE OF YOURSELF, MY DARLING

(Continued from page 33)

Parade," Deanna's new picture, which was sweet. He's just bought a ranch at Palm Springs and is thrilled about the house he's building on it.

Evelyn Ankers sends regards. She's out here with her mother now and I saw her for a moment at the preem of "Foreign Correspondent."

Faith (Mrs. Charles Bennett) turned over in her plane the other day and smacked her head rather badly. She's been hopping about from airport to airport getting advertisements from schools and aviation companies for the program for British Ambulance Corps.

Hardly ever see Ty (Power) any more. He's been busy working on "The Mark of Zorro" and taking three-hour lessons each day in fencing, dancing and magic tricks. You know what a stickler Rouben Mamoulian is for perfection (worse even than you, my darling, who'll never let me appear in public with the tiniest bit of a chip off my fingernail polish and who insists on bags and hats matching exactly) and Ty is just about exhausted trying to live up to Mamoulian's idea of how things should be done. But I did bump into him on the lot day before yesterday and he wanted to know all about you.

It's not news to you how we all pass letters around. Any letter any of us gets goes all over town in no time at all. Willie (Nigel Bruce), Morton (Lowry) and I spent all of our time on "Hudson's Bay Company" passing letters back and forth.

Larry (Olivier) and Vivien (Leigh) came by the house Sunday on their way to make tests for "Lady Hamilton" and she wore the widest wedding band you've ever seen. Oh, and I must tell you the trick Paulette (Goddard) played on them. Seems that the studio built them the fanciest bungalow for dressing-rooms that you ever saw, and planned a christening event with a big supper, inviting the cast and their friends. Well, Paulette spotted the bungalow just as she was leaving the lot, crawled in through a back window, ordered caterers to serve supper and invited the workmen on the lot to a pre-christening! When Larry and Vivien arrived, there sat the electricians, carpenters and laborers on all that fancy furniture, eating chicken and salad and hot rolls!

Muni gave a party on our set yesterday—all fancy, with a bar and every sort of delicious dish. Bella (Muni) was there, in addition to the cast and crew. She's going to the hospital soon for an operation.

Had a long letter from Aunt Sybil yesterday, but all she talked about was her vegetable garden. I can't understand the casualness of letters from home. It was a great shock to me that mother was interested in fashions. And it hadn't occurred to me until I received her letter that Hollywood was looked up to as a style center. But tell her I posed for some pictures in "authentic California fashions" yesterday, which I'm sending along by Clipper.

Remember how worried you were about my wardrobe for "H. B. C."? You thought the gowns were cut too low. Well, so did the Hays office. You'll be glad to know all my "stills" were killed.

Got a love of a new hat the other day —a regular halo of multicolored feathers. I wish you were here to help me select gloves to go with it. It's getting cold here, so I bought a new beaver coat, too.

Everybody in Hollywood seems to think Dave (Niven) is married. Somehow I don't seem to be able to convince them the story was only a gag.

It won't be long now until you see Pat (Knowles) again. He's about to complete his training course and will be flying a ship across in a few weeks.

Take care of yourself, my darling.

GINNY.

CONFESSIONS OF A CAMPUS CUTIE

(Continued from page 58)

a Broadway musical and offered her a part in it. The show was called "Du Barry Was a Lady." She ran away with it. Those legs could run away with anything! Say, by the way, Betty—how about those legs?

"How about 'em?"

Well, they're swell; but seems like somewhere or other we picked up some gossip about 'em, something or other about Grable wasn't very happy with all that leg talk, wanted to be known as an actress; was terribly tired of being just the gal with the gams, the Sheba with the shafts.

"Look." Betty is a very direct girl. When she says this she looks right square at you. Very disconcerting. "The guy who started that business was a very smart publicity man at Paramount. He did me a lot of good. I'm very grateful to him. But naturally, enough is enough. I figure the gag is played out, and it's time to begin selling myself as myself."

So it's true. The great actress complex!

"Nuts. I'm not Bette Davis; I know that. I'm just Betty Grable. That's the way I want to be sold. I don't want to be Cutie Pie. I don't want to parade around in shorts all my life.

"I want to sing and dance; I want to act. But the main thing I want to do is keep moving. In show business that's the main thing." She paused and looked thoughtful. "There's bound to come a day, of course, when the public gets tired of you, but when it comes I will be ready for it."

Ready for it? Ready how?

A laugh, a clear, sure laugh.

"Have you ever heard tell of a bank book? I've got one. A nice, fat, juicy one."

A little wrinkle now, on those brows that wrinkle so seldom. A little earnestness on those lips that pout so easily.

"What does a girl expect out of life? I've got a car, a home, some clothes.

What more do I need? Some girls go in for expensive furs and diamonds. None of that means anything to me.

"Most of my money gets socked away, put in the bank, and when that certain day rolls around, it just won't catch me short, that's all."

In the meantime, however, Betty Grable is the hottest thing in town. She's under contract to Twentieth Century-Fox, and the studio hasn't been so excited about a newcomer in many years.

A newcomer! That's a laugh. But Betty can afford a laugh—if she gets time. She just finished "Down Argentine Way." Before she could change her costume she was working in "Tin Pan Alley." The scripts of her next two pictures are ready and set to go.

Some fun.

But it is fun! Maybe it's fun because it's a merry-go-round, because it's her little-girl dream come true. For a dozen years she's dreamed of being a star. Now she is.

Her mother's been a big help, of course.

"She's not one of those movie mothers—you know what I mean. She doesn't get in people's hair. If she goes out to the studio to watch me work, she sits in a corner and looks on. Maybe she knits. She doesn't try to tell the directors what her darling daughter ought to do."

"How about night life?"

"Well, when I'm not working in a picture I go out, of course. I see a lot of movies. I go to shows if there are any in town. Sometimes I go to night clubs—not an awful lot. I like to dance but, well, smoke gets in my eyes."

Mostly her idea of fun is—surprise! surprise!—reading. When she's working, she reads an hour or two every night—can't fall asleep unless she does. When she's on lay-off, of course, she reads even more. All kinds of books—history and biography. It's her way of getting an education. She's interested in people, but she's found out it's more fun to read about them.

That laugh, again. Clear, hearty.

"You meet a much better grade of people in books, you know!"

Boy friends?

No one special. Not just now. She just hasn't met Mr. Right.

She doesn't like to talk about her marriage to Jackie Coogan. Just says, "Maybe we were both too young."

Some day, of course, she hopes to settle down. Some day she'd like to have a husband, a baby; but there's no rush about it.

There are two things that will keep her from rushing it. First, of course, she wants to cash in on her career right now. Success has been a long time coming and it makes good sense to let it pay off.

Also, she wants to be absolutely sure the next time she marries that there isn't going to be any mistake about it. She wants to be right. This is a sort of an obsession of hers, by the way—trying to be right.

"I don't want to kid myself next time. I'm going to face the facts."

Yes, it's true. Take one look at those clear, blue eyes. Note the set of those lips. Look at the tilt of that chin. Betty is a gal who will always know the score.

YULETIDE DELIGHTS

(Continued from page 15)

FOUR FOLD FUDGE

CHOCOLATE:

2 cups granulated sugar
⅔ cup milk
2 tablespoons white karo
2 squares chocolate, cut into small pieces, or ⅓ cup cocoa
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine sugar, milk and karo in saucepan. Add chocolate, or cocoa. Bring to a boil slowly, stirring constantly. When chocolate has melted and mixture boils, cover saucepan and boil mixture gently for 3 minutes. Uncover and continue cooking, without stirring, until a soft ball is formed when a small amount is put in cold water (236°F. on candy thermometer). Add salt and butter and let cool until lukewarm (110°F.). Add vanilla and beat with a wooden spoon until fudge loses its gloss and becomes thick enough to hold its shape. Turn into slightly buttered pans to make a layer approximately ¾ inch in thickness. When cold cut into squares. Makes 1¼ pounds. Also try with chopped Brazil nuts.

MAPLE NUT:

Follow recipe for Chocolate Fudge, with these changes: (1) Omit chocolate or cocoa. (2) Use 2 cups light brown sugar instead of the white sugar. (3) Use ⅓ cup cream (or evaporated milk) and ⅓ cup water for the milk. (4) Cook the fudge to 238°F. (5) Use 1 teaspoon maple flavoring instead of the vanilla. (6) Add ½ cup chopped pecans to fudge just before pouring it into pans, mark off into squares and press a pecan half into each square while candy is still warm. Cut when cold.

COCOANUT FUDGE:

Follow recipe for Chocolate Fudge with these changes. (1) Omit chocolate or cocoa. (2) Use ⅓ cup cream and ⅓ cup milk for the ⅔ cup milk. (3) Cook the candy to 240°F. (4) Stir in 1 cup shredded cocoanut just before turning into pan; or drop mixture from a teaspoon onto heavy waxed paper.

MARSHMALLOW FUDGE:

Follow recipe for Chocolate Fudge. While fudge is cooking cut ¼ pound marshmallows into small pieces with wet scissors. Pour a thin layer of the fudge into buttered pan. Press cut marshmallows into this, then top with remaining fudge. When cold cut into squares.

MARSHMALLOW SNOW MAN

For each Snowman use 5 marshmallows. Place two flat on the table, side by side for snowman's "feet". Put another marshmallow on top of these, standing up on edge, flat side towards you for the body, and still another on top of this one, in the same way and facing in the same direction, for the head. Fasten these together with dampened toothpicks. Cut remaining marshmallow in half, fasten onto body at either side with dampened toothpicks to form arms. Make features and buttons with dampened cloves or specks of bright-colored gumdrops.

MAKE CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EASIER WITH DEUBENER'S BASKETLYKE CARRIERS

Take old Santa's advice and put this attractive, convenient, strong carrier FIRST on every shopping list at YOUR Favorite Store.

You'll find them so useful to hold your Christmas Shopping parcels, 10¢

DEUBENER'S Leatherlyke Shopping Bags, "America's Standard" for 22 years, (rope around bottom) give extra capacity, wear and value for 5¢

DEUBENER'S SHOPPING BAGS
GARFIELD PARK, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

GIVE YOUR LAZY LIVER THIS GENTLE "NUDGE"

Follow Noted Ohio Doctor's Advice To Feel "Tip-Top" In Morning!

If liver bile doesn't flow freely every day into your intestines—constipation with its headaches and that "half-alive" feeling often result. So step up that liver bile and see how much better you should feel! Just try Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for his patients with constipation and sluggish liver bile.

Olive Tablets being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only stimulate bile flow to help digest fatty foods but also help elimination. Get a box TODAY. 15¢, 30¢ and 60¢.

TYPEWRITER 1/3 PRICE

STANDARD OFFICE MODELS
1/3 MFRS. ORIG. PRICE
Easiest Terms as Low as 60¢ a Week
All late models completely rebuilt like brand new. FULLY GUARANTEED.
No Money Down—10 Day Trial
Free price-smashing catalog shows all makes in colors. FREE COURSE IN TYPING INCLUDED. See catalog before you buy. SEND NOW.
INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCH.
Dept. 161 231 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.
10c A DAY

SEND NO MONEY!

★TRANSPARENT ★ ROOFLESS ★ PARTIAL ★

$6.85 to $35
60 DAYS' TRIAL

We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. FREE! FREE impression material, directions, catalog and information. Write today to U. S. DENTAL CO., Dept. I-104, Chicago, Ill.

WANT A U.S. GOVERNMENT JOB?

START $1260 to $2100 YEAR

Men—Women
Get Ready Immediately for 1941 Examinations
Mail Coupon Today Sure

COUPON

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. L256, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush without charge, (1) 32-page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.
Name.....
Address.....

PAGING DENNIS MORGAN

(Continued from page 35)

'Well, now I've had my fun. Now I've got to get myself a job.' That was 1931—the year the bottom fell out of the lumber business. I knew Dad had been hard hit, but I thought maybe I could connect with some big firm in Milwaukee as a buyer of raw lumber which I knew something about. I went to every company in Milwaukee, and I had no luck.

"I had to find work of some kind. So I went down to a radio station, where they knew me from a few contests I'd been in, and asked if they could use a singer. They took me on as vocalist on a commercial program. Then one day they asked me if I could announce. So I became an announcer as well as a singer. I was doing everything after a while from dramatic programs to sports broadcasts. And I was doing all right financially. I even paid off some of the family taxes.

"But the job began to get tiresome. I couldn't see it leading anywhere, and the sports broadcasts weren't doing my voice any good. I was beginning to have a little respect for my voice and had not only enrolled in the Wisconsin Conservatory but was studying with a couple of private teachers on the side. Finally I quit the radio job. With all the over-confidence in the world, I disregarded the fact that I was practically broke and headed for Chicago.

"In my innocence I expected Chicago to be so full of opportunities that I could take my pick. I got educated in a hurry. I was just about six inches from the breadline before I talked myself into a job—singing at the State Theatre.

"They got me dirt-cheap, but audiences didn't know it and other theatre managers didn't know it, because my name went up in lights. Pretty soon I was able to afford to enroll in the American Conservatory. I was convinced that opera was my future. I had big ideas, big ambitions."

Dennis was smart enough to realize that most theatre singers were a dime-a-dozen because they didn't give audiences an earful of singing; only an earful of current song hits. He sold himself as somebody who would give them both He'd sing semi-classical versions of popular songs.

"IN 1933," he continues, "the Palmer House opened its new Empire Room, the last word in swank, and I was hired as soloist. I stayed thirty-seven weeks, then came back for a return engagement, at a big boost in salary. I thought I had the world on a string and got married on the strength of that salary boost.

"The Empire Room had a clientele that could take concert singing. I didn't have to stick to symphonic jazz, as far as they were concerned. I could give out with some of my Conservatory repertoire And don't think I didn't."

Don't think, either, that his reputation as a worth-while singer didn't start spreading. He'd been making some concert recordings for some small radio stations, on the side. Now, suddenly, he got an offer to sing on a coast-to-coast hook-up, soloist with an all-string orchestra. People outside Chicago, people all over the country began to be conscious of the singing voice of Stanley Morner.

Then the University of Chicago asked him to guest-star in its presentation of the Handel opera, "Xerxes," never sung in English before in America. Mary Garden, the patron saint of Chicago opera, heard him in it and asked him to audition for her.

"I sang three arias for her and she asked me to do "Carmen" with her. She knew someone who was willing to back a production. So I learned the entire opera in two weeks; worked my fool head off. Then the backer decided to back out.

"It began to look as if I couldn't go any farther in Chicago so I went to New York. A well-known art patron wanted to send me to Europe—'to study for the Metropolitan.' That sounded pretty good for a day or two. But I decided that I didn't want to go to Europe until I could pay my own way.

"Somebody else wanted me to do a Broadway operetta. I waited around two months for the operetta to materialize—which it never did. Then Mary Garden arrived in New York, sold on the idea that I should have a singing career in the movies. The thought of reaching millions of people, all over the world, with my voice was pretty exciting stuff. She introduced me to the right people at M-G-M, I made a movie singing test and they gave me a handsome contract. Then I came to Hollywood where I sat around for two years without a damned thing to do except study voice. I'll never get over that."

He still gets steamed up when he thinks about it.

You'll thrill to our fictionization of "LADY HAMILTON" starring Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier! Don't miss the February MODERN SCREEN

"I can't tell you what those two years did to me. How would you like to have two years taken out of your life, when you're young and ambitious and eager to accomplish something? I don't know why they kept paying me without using me. All I know is that every week I got a pay-check and the words 'We aren't ready to use you yet.' I felt myself going crazy, asking myself: 'Why? Why?'

"That's the greatest crime of Hollywood: signing young people who show talent, then never using that talent. And there's no recourse as long as they pay you.

"I kept pleading for something to do—anything. I didn't insist on being a singer. I said I was willing to do straight acting. Just so that I could get back a little of that feeling of accomplishing something. They gave me a couple of bits. At the end of two years they called me and said they wanted to take up my option—and promised me big things. The next day I received a script that had four lines for me to say. I told them what they could do with their contract, and they were nice enough to release me.

"I made one desperate effort to make Hollywood conscious of why I had been given a movie contract: namely, because I was a singer. I appeared in a Los Angeles presentation of 'The Student Prince' which was a big success. Except that nobody gave me a chance to sing on the screen because of it.

"After I left M-G-M I was going to New York, but I had offers to stay. Paramount treated me so well, I signed there. They changed my name to Richard Stanley. I stayed six months during which I played two bits in two gangster pictures. I decided to give up all hope of ever getting anywhere in Hollywood.

I WAS rehearsing to go East on a concert tour with a pianist friend of mine when Bill Pierce, of Producer Charles Rogers' office, dropped in and heard me singing. He told Rogers, and Rogers tried to make Paramount listen, but Paramount was disinterested. So he told Jack Warner about me. Warner called me in that same afternoon. I was leaving Hollywood the next night. Warner said, 'We'll make a test of you tomorrow morning.' So I made my test, with a bad cold, and left. 'Please don't wire me an offer,' I said, 'unless you have something definite for me to do—either singing or non-singing.'

"I went to Milwaukee for a week of personal appearances, then on to Detroit where I got a wire from Warner: 'Report next Monday. Picture starts Tuesday.' I came back. That was two years ago. And"—he grins cheerfully—"I've been busy ever since."

He has done nine pictures in two years, been everything from a tough dock worker to a Philadelphia gentleman.

Considering the fact that he set out to be a singer, how does he explain his acting ability? "I guess you can blame that dramatics course in college and some stock things I did back in the Middle West. But I still have to work to say lines the way actors say them instead of sounding like a singer talking. That's difficult for a singer to do."

How does he feel about the fact that Warners, who have otherwise appreciated him, still haven't let him sing on the screen—except in a few scattered scenes? He says, good-naturedly, "I don't care. If I don't sing on the screen I'll sing at home."

Home is a modest rented house in the San Fernando Valley, whose two most important rooms are a music room and a nursery. In the nursery you'll find a six-year-old boy, Stanley, and a three-year-old girl, Kristen.

When he's working on a picture he goes home and listens to recordings of Tschaikovsky's 4th, 5th or 6th Symphony, Beethoven's 9th Symphony or any song that John Charles Thomas has ever recorded. "Then I'm relaxed." Between pictures, he relaxes athletically playing golf and tennis or hunting in the mountains. His friends are a mixture of musicians and athletes.

He always makes a point of seeing the rushes of his previous day's work—a practice that many directors discourage on the grounds that they don't want players worrying about their performances. Dennis says, "You should worry about your performances. That's the great thing about the movies: you can see yourself as others see you—and try to do something about it."

It's certainly refreshing to meet a successful star who's so unassuming—so honest with himself. No, Dennis Morgan isn't forgetting all those lean years. They're still much too close for comfort!

Printed in the U. S. A. by the Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

AN ENDLESS SOURCE OF ENTERTAINMENT

The fascinating entertainment that puzzles provide will help you to end those dull idle hours and soothe your jittered nerves. Try puzzles! You'll be pleasantly surprised at the many hours of solace and relaxation they can give you.

And whether you are the newest beginner or the most seasoned fan, you will like OFFICIAL CROSSWORD PUZZLES. This deluxe puzzle magazine offers you the cream of the crop—over 65 large-sized pages of captivating puzzles designed to please every taste and talent.

For quality, quantity, and variety, ask for OFFICIAL CROSSWORD PUZZLES.

Try this way to many an evening of economical entertainment—get your copy today!

NOW ON SALE AT ALL NEWSSTANDS . . . 15¢ official crossword puzzles

BETTY GRABLE
Featured in 20th Century-Fox picture
"Down Argentine Way"

LEARN BETTY'S SECRET

FOR Beautiful Eyes

"It's easy to have lovely, alluring eyes," says glamorous Betty Grable. "The magic secret is Maybelline eye make-up." You'll be thrilled when you see your eyelashes appear glamorously dark, long, and luxuriant. A few brush strokes of the Solid or Cream-form Maybelline Mascara create the glorious effect. Both forms are so easy to apply . . . tear-proof . . . absolutely safe.

Stirring depth and beauty for your eyes . . . with softly blended Maybelline Eye Shadow. Then, the joyful climax . . . when you form your brows in graceful, classic lines with Maybelline smooth-marking Eyebrow Pencil. Just soft enough for best results.

Try these three simple beauty aids today. Then . . . step back and look at yourself in your mirror. Your eyes appear larger and more glamorous! There's a new, arresting beauty in your face. That's the thrilling magic of Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids.

For eye make-up that's natural appearing . . . for eye make-up in good taste . . . be sure you get Maybelline. You'll find attractive purse sizes in your nearest 10c store.

Maybelline Solid-form Mascara in smart gold-colored vanity, 75c. Shades—Black, Brown, Blue.

Maybelline Cream-form Mascara in convenient zipper case, 75c. Same shades (applied without water).

Maybelline smooth-marking Eyebrow Pencil, in convenient purse size, Black or Brown.

Maybelline Eye Shadow in six most flattering shades: Blue, Gray, Blue-gray, Brown, Green, Violet.

Maybelline

EYE BEAUTY AIDS

Tested and Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

MODERN SCREEN

EBRUARY
10
CENTS

VIVIEN LEIGH'S & LAURENCE OLIVIER'S
LATEST SCREEN HIT
IN COMPLETE STORY FORM!

ALSO

MATRIMONIAL CHART AND PERSONAL DATA ON 200 SCREEN STARS

RY OF CONGRESS
28 1941
DIVISION

VIVIEN
LEIGH

THE 1941 WINTER EDITION OF

SCREEN ALBUM

AUTOGRAPHED STAR PORTRAITS INSIDE HOLLYWOOD BIOGRAPHIES

New Faces is the theme of this 1941 SCREEN ALBUM—the bright, up-and-coming new stars you are raving about. Not that we have forgotten your old favorites—you'll find them all practically living for you on the pages of SCREEN ALBUM. The beautifully printed, entrancing portraits, all of them autographed, are accompanied by thrilling word pictures—intimate, up-to-the-minute details you have always wanted to know.

Now—in one magazine, for only 10c—you can own an album of a hundred glamorous portraits of Hollywood's most fascinating personalities, with a multitude of inside facts on each one! Ask your newsdealer for a copy today.

NOW ON SALE AT ALL NEWSSTANDS 10 CENTS

HE THOUGHT:

"YOU'RE LOVELINESS ITSELF!"

UNTIL, ALAS, SHE SMILED!

Take no chances with "Pink Tooth Brush"—help protect your own bright smile with Ipana and Massage!

FROM ACROSS THE ROOM her beauty was flawless—almost unreal in its perfection of form and color. He thought, above the swift pounding of his heart, "Why, she's the loveliest—the most exciting thing I've ever seen in my life! I must meet her at once!"

And when he did, his eyes held hers and whispered, "You're loveliness itself!" But then—right at that breathless moment—she smiled. And in just that instant his eagerness faded.

POOR TEETH—DINGY GUMS ARE A TRAGEDY. A ruined smile is a tragedy to anyone. But it is a particularly tragic handicap to a woman. So don't YOU be as foolish as this poor girl, and ignore the warning of "pink tooth brush"! To do so is to risk your winning smile—your charm.

NEVER IGNORE "PINK TOOTH BRUSH." When you see "pink" on your tooth brush—see your dentist and see him promptly. It may not mean serious trouble ahead. It may simply mean that today's soft, creamy foods have robbed your gums of work, left them tender, sensitive, weak. And, often, your dentist's advice will simply be more work and exercise for those lazy gums—"the healthful stimulation of Ipana and massage."

FOR IPANA, WITH MASSAGE, is especially designed not only to clean the teeth but to aid the health of the gums as well. Massage a little extra Ipana onto your gums when you brush your teeth. Feel that delightful tang—exclusive with Ipana and massage. It flashes the news that gum circulation is improving—strengthening gum tissues—helping to make gums healthier. So get an economical tube of Ipana today. Join the charming women who have found Ipana and massage one way to a more attractive smile.

WHEN YOU BUY IPANA, ask your druggist for the new D. D. tooth brush. Designed with the aid of over 1,000 dentists, the D.D. brush is more effective for gum massage, more thorough cleansing.

IPANA TOOTH PASTE

JAN 11 1941 ©CIB 480659

MODERN SCREEN

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

Good morning! We hope you've had a Happy New Year.

★ ★ ★ ★

We bring you a recipe to start 1941 off right.

★ ★ ★ ★

It's "The Philadelphia Story". Let us tell you about it.

★ ★ ★ ★

Once upon a time (are you sitting comfortably on my knee?) there was a girl who was good in the Three R's.

★ ★ ★ ★

She was Rich, Rare and Racy. The 3R's

★ ★ ★ ★

She also was a Ravishing Redhead.

★ ★ ★ ★

She was claimed by three men. They were the Three H's. Hero, He-man, and Heel.

★ ★ ★ ★

They were all Handsome. The 3H's

★ ★ ★ ★

The Three H's loved the Ravishing Redhead. They wooed her on horseback, in swimming pools and at champagne parties.

★ ★ ★ ★

They Fought for her, Flew to her and Framed her. It all happened in Filadelphia. The 3F's

★ ★ ★ ★

Now that's just a hint of the most delightful New Year's gift you or your friends or your family ever got.

★ ★ ★ ★

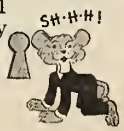
We cannot open the book further on "The Philadelphia Story". You must see it, not hear about it. You cannot afford to miss Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn and James Stewart.

Paraphrasing the well-known poem, only God can make a trio like that.

★ ★ ★ ★

"The Philadelphia Story" (shh!) is directed by the incomparable George Cukor. M-G-M's own Joseph Mankiewicz is the producer.

★ ★ ★ ★



Now there are many plus values—think of adding to Grant, Hepburn and Stewart—in the cast.

★ ★ ★ ★

For example—in fact, for six examples—Ruth Hussey, John Howard, Roland Young, John Halliday, Mary Nash and Virginia Weidler.

★ ★ ★ ★

Endowed with a script by Donald Ogden Stewart from the well-known Broadway hit by Philip Barry, M-G-M proudly, buoyantly, happily presents—

★ ★ ★ ★

"The Philadelphia Story"

—Leo

Another Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer advertisement for "The Philadelphia Story" appears on page 5.

STORIES

SCANDINAVIAN CHARMER 10
A close-up of that glamorous import—Ingrid Bergman

SHOOTING FOR THE STARS 24
Glamour tricks from movie cameramen to make smoothies of us all!

HOLLYWOOD'S NO. 1 MENACE 26
A new slant on Gable by the chap who knows him best—himself

LADY HAMILTON 28
Leigh and Olivier relive history's most heart-warming romance

DATE BAIT 32
Let the movie kids teach you some siren stuff!

ALL THIS IS HOLLYWOOD, TOO! 34
Here's a side of town you'll never see from a sightseeing bus...

A THRILL A MINUTE . . . 36
No more hot spots for Jimmy Stewart—and here's why!

BEAUTIFUL HANDS TO HOLD 38
Hands are such tattle-tales—make yours say nice things about you

MISTRESS PROBLEMS 42
Meet the most heckled tribe in Filmdom, the stars' servants!

A GREAT PERFORMANCE 44
The poignant story of Madeleine Carroll's unflinching courage

MATRIMONY IN MOVIELAND 46
Charts and chatter to keep you up to snuff on your wedlock data

FASHIONS

CLASSIC, CASUAL AND CHIC . . . 54
Some adorable nine-to-fivers with a dash of night owl in 'em

SNOW—SUN 56
Ski clothes cute enough to melt an iceberg—sun clothes with verve!

PROP SHOP 58
Some new fillips for that jaded winter wardrobe

FEATURES

Information Desk 6
"The Shepherd of the Hills" 8
Movie Reviews 12
Our Puzzle Page 14
Portrait Gallery 19
Dangerous Curves 30
Designing Males 40
Good News 50
Modern Hostess 64
Sugar 'n Spice 95
Movie Scoreboard 97

Cover Girl: Vivien Leigh, natural color photograph by Coburn

PEARL H. FINLEY, Editor - SYLVIA KAHN, Hollywood Reporter

Val. 22, No. 3, February, 1941. Copyright, 1940, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madisan Ave., New York. Published manthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office af publicatian at Washingtan and Sauth Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single capy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscriptian price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscriptian $2.00 a year; fareign subscriptian $2.20 a year. Entered as secand-class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the Pastaffice, Dunellen, N. J. under Act of March 3, 1879. Additianal secand class entries at Seattle, Wash., San Francisca, Calif., Haustan, Texas; Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept na respansibility far the return af unsalicited material. Names af characters used in semi-fictianal matter are fictitiaus. If the name af any living person is used it is purely a caincidence. Trademark Na. 301773.

Once upon a cockeyed time...

there was a ravishing redhead  who was very, very elegant and fancied herself as a kind  of goddess. (Imagine!) . . . And she was all set to marry a truly stuffy guy  . . . when her ex-husband showed up. Now he was a regular fellow  with many human frailties such as  and  and you-know-what. This time he brought with him a handsome reporter with  candid camera and candid girl friend by means of which he hoped to snare many snappy morsels for his Scandal sheet.

So-o-o-o things got hotly mixed up. There was a midnight bathing party for two  . . . and a fight  . . . and a wedding  . . . and how it all comes out makes THE PHILADELPHIA STORY the funniest film in years . . . which should cause you to roll in the aisles with laughter

Cary GRANT

Katharine HEPBURN

James STEWART

THE PHILADELPHIA STORY

with RUTH HUSSEY

JOHN HOWARD • ROLAND YOUNG • JOHN HALLIDAY • MARY NASH • VIRGINIA WEIDLER

Screen Play by Donald Ogden Stewart • Based on the Play by Philip Barry

Produced by The Theatre Guild Inc. • Produced by JOSEPH L. MANKIEWICZ

Directed by GEORGE CUKOR • A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

There's more about "PHILADELPHIA STORY" in the Lion's Roar Column on page 4

INFORMATION DESK

OUR MAILMAN'S A BUSY CHAP, AND WE WANT TO KEEP HIM THAT WAY! WRITE US AND WE'LL ANSWER!

Gloria Brandriff, St. Louis, Mo. Get out your little black book—here's your date data! Bob Hope and Dolores Read were married Dec. 25, 1934. Their adopted daughter is sixteen months old. You may be interested to learn that she's recently acquired an adopted six-month-old brother Tony. Annabella was born July 14, 1912. George Brent came into the world on March 15, 1904, and Laraine Day first saw light Oct. 13, 1919. Irene Dunne's birthdate was July 14, 1904. Richard Greene was born on Aug. 24, 1914, and Virginia Field on Nov. 4, 1917. Janet Gaynor's and Adrian's son is about six months old now and the best-dressed baby in Hollywood!

Margie Neumann, New York, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Lundigan were blessed with baby William on June 12, 1914, in Syracuse, N. Y. He has grown to the sizable proportions of six feet two inches in height and 170 pounds in weight and has blue eyes and light brown hair. After high school and Syracuse University, he took a job as local radio announcer in his home town. His voice attracted the attention of a screen executive who interviewed him and believed he had spotted something a little extra in Hollywood hero material. Later events proved his judgment 100% correct, and today Lundigan's really on his way up. He's unmarried, but currently in the toils of lovely Margaret Lindsay. During his spare time he reads and tries his hand at radio playlets.

Martha Jones, Atlanta, Ga. Louis Hayward's playing opposite Joan Bennett in "The Son of Monte Cristo." Since his entry into the world thirty-one years ago, he's grown to a height of five feet ten and a half inches, created a successful six-year picture career and married twenty-four-year-old Ida Lupino. They are both athletic and thrive on a steady diet of tennis and golf. No, he's never been married before. Louis, who has dark brown hair, blue-grey eyes, scored a hit in "The Duke of West Point," which was released Dec. 29, 1938. In this picture he played the leading role opposite Joan Fontaine.

Sharon Cameron, Chicago, Ill. You know a good thing when you see it! Dennis Morgan was the gorgeous man who played Thomas McCabe in "Tear Gas Squad" and who, incidentally, is rapidly headed toward stardom in "Kitty Foyle." Born Stanley Morner in Prentice, Wis., he was educated at Carroll College and gained fame singing in opera and over NBC nation-wide hookups. In 1936 he entered movies and he's likely to stay there at the rate he's going now! Warner Brothers, Burbank, Cal., are distributing autographed pictures of him for a mere 25c.

Cherie LaCroix, Tampa, Fla. Your inquiry about the person who took the part of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Nazi Minister of Propaganda in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," led us into very interesting channels. It seems that the studio prefers to leave him unidentified! If he plays the role that convincingly, he must be a pretty swell actor.

Mrs. T. F. McCaffrey, Kingston, Pa. Any song Deanna Durbin sings in her pictures is literally "made" right then and there! In "Mad About Music" she wowed 'em with "A Serenade to the Stars," "Chapel Bells" and "I Love to Whistle," and in "That Certain Age," brought fame and fortune to the composers of "My Own," "Be a Good Scout," "You're As Pretty. As a Picture" and "That Certain Age." You'll remember "It's Raining Sunbeams" in "100 Men and a Girl" and "Someone to Care for Me" and "My Heart is Singing" in "Three Smart Girls." Her next film is "Nice Girl."

Eunice Millen, Southern Pines, N. C. Lionel Barrymore was really crippled with arthritis for several months, that's why he always played those wheel-chair parts in the "Dr. Kildare" series. Good news is that he's recovering and will be able to walk around soon. . . . None of the Andrews sisters, playing in "Argentine Nights," are twins. Patty, LaVerne and Maxine are their names.

A Lew Ayres Fan, Albany, N. Y. Born in Minneapolis in 1908, Lew Ayres was bitten by the "movie bug" in the second grade. After high school he went to the University of Arizona where he centered all his interest on his banjo and guitar in the college orchestra. Hollywood was still his goal, so when part of the band decided to drift West, he was eager to go along. The Coast didn't offer all the glory he'd expected, but he managed to keep himself going and hung around the studios between orchestra engagements. The breaks were slow in coming, but he finally made the grade after a wowing success with Garbo in "The Kiss." At the height of his career he satisfied his yen to direct and almost disappeared from sight as a result of his failure in that venture. Recently, however, the Dr. Kildare films have pushed him back to the top again, and he's going to confine himself to acting for a while! He's very casual about the women at this point and doesn't seem to be attracted to any particular one.

NOTE: If you desire a reply by mail, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, New York.

"This is the most exciting story I know!"

says Newspaperdom's ace story-teller
MARK HELLINGER

HIGH SIERRA

by
W. R. BURNETT
Author of 'Little Caesar'

THEY call him 'Mad Dog' Earle, enemy of all that is decent and good. Yet his dreams are every man's dreams: a fireside on a friendly farm, and the arms of the woman he loves . . . Then there's Marie, deep down just another woman with a hungry heart—but to the world a hard-boiled taxi dancer and Killer's companion . . . ¶ Now her man is trapped alone, still fearless and defiant, on the highest peak of the terrifying High Sierras. He hasn't bowed to any law on earth. He's trapped only because Man can climb no higher . . . Is this the end for the most dangerous criminal since Dillinger—or is it only the beginning? It's all blazingly told in the new film success, 'High Sierra', hailed far and wide as 'the peak of screen excitement'!..

'HIGH SIERRA' is the sensational new success produced by WARNER BROS.... For both their brilliant performances it skyrockets to the topmost star ranks

IDA LUPINO

The star whose startling performance in 'They Drive by Night' made her an overnight sensation! Here's the big role she earned!

HUMPHREY BOGART

No characterization within memory has packed the power of this, the greatest performance in the career of Humphrey Bogart!

RAOUL WALSH, DIRECTOR

Of all his screen successes, from What Price Glory' to 'They Drive by Night', this film stands supreme!

MARK HELLINGER'S high tribute to 'High Sierra' is a rare one, and mighty well-deserved!

with ALAN CURTIS • ARTHUR KENNEDY • JOAN LESLIE • HENRY HULL • HENRY TRAVERS Screen Play by John Huston and W. R. Burnett • From a Novel by W. R. Burnett

On the Set With...

"THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS"

PARAMOUNT TROUPE CUTS CAPERS HIGH ATOP SAN FERNANDO PEAKS!

Leader of the monkeyshiners, John Wayne, narrowly escapes an unexpected shiner!

It's six o'clock in the morning and Henry Hathaway and John Wayne are up and about shoveling away snow from a "location."

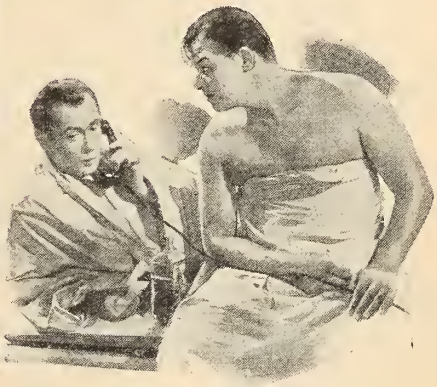
Here's Carey—"The Shepherd of the Hills—" with his two cronies, Virita Campbell and Lucky, the director's non-professional pup.

Cast and crew teeter on a mountain top following a long timeout. The terrific altitude was too much for delicate constitutions!

Director Hathaway ribs U. of S. Cal. former gridiron stars Templeton, Wayne and Gibbs on their alma mater's terrific shellacking.

NEWS!

Carole Returns To Comedy; Makes First Laugh Show In Three Years!



NEWS!

Bob And Carole Are Co-Sparring For The First Time In Screen History

NEWS!

'Foreign Correspondent' Hitchcock Puts Over Another Terrific Scoop!

AND IT ALL HAPPENS IN ONE GREAT HIT—THE STORY OF A BRIDE WHO COULDN'T STAY MAD...

Carole Lombard
Rob't Montgomery

Mr. & Mrs. Smith

Directed By

Alfred Hitchcock

With Gene Raymond

Jack Carson · Philip Merivale · Lucile Watson

Story and Screen Play by Norman Krasna

RKO RADIO PICTURE

Harry E. Edington, Executive Producer

By Katharine Best

The Scandinavian Charmer

Garbo isn't the only Swedish siren nowadays! Not with Ingrid Bergman on these shores!

The fact that Ingrid Bergman has been awarded so tasty a screen prize as the role of the governess in "Legacy" means that within just a few months a great many things must have happened.

They began happening in a projection room in New York City in the Spring of 1938. Katharine Brown, Selznick's story editor, was watching the screening of "Intermezzo," a Swedish film starring Josepha Ekman, Inga Tidblad and Ingrid Bergman. Miss Brown was not unduly concerned with the story, nor with the histrionic talents of Mr. Ekman and Miss Tidblad. But this Ingrid Bergman —she was captivating.

Miss Brown's estimation of the Swedish star's gifts was immediately transmitted via long distance to Mr. Selznick in Hollywood, at about one dollar per glowing word. Mr. Selznick was interested and asked that a print of "Intermezzo" be shipped immediately to the West Coast.

In a few days Miss Brown received an order from her boss to buy the American rights to the film—but the film only, no Bergman. Miss Brown set about doing this with her customary alacrity, but to her it was like buying an automobile without an engine.

A less determined soul might have let the matter drop there, but when Miss Brown went on one of her regular scouting trips in England for David Selznick, she couldn't resist the opportunity of calling Stockholm and talking to this Ingrid Bergman. Perhaps the young actress could not speak English, which lack would make her useless as a Hollywood player. Perhaps she would not want to leave her native Sweden. Perhaps a lot of things. However, Miss Brown put through her call. There was a long wait, and then a man's voice boomed, "I'm sorry, but Miss Bergman cannot speak to you. She is very busy, right now."

Miss Brown returned to New York with little hope of ever seeing Ingrid Bergman on an American screen. However, a terse order from Mr. Selznick to return to Europe immediately and sign up the young Swedish star rekindled her enthusiasm.

A week later she was in Stockholm, where she was introduced for the first time to Ingrid Bergman, whose name in private life is Mrs. Peter Lindstrom. "On the screen she had looked rather like a femme fatale," recalls Miss Brown, "so you can imagine my amazement when this youngster, looking not more than sixteen, with apple-red cheeks, walked into the room. I thought I had made a mistake, that I was negotiating with the wrong actress."

"I am so sorry I was unable to speak with you that day on the telephone," Ingrid said quietly. "I was very busy. I was having my baby."

Katharine Brown learned that in Sweden Ingrid Bergman's professional reputation corresponded approximately to that of Bette Davis over here. Miss Bergman had been a film star for many years. She spoke, besides Swedish and an excellent English, fluent French and German. She had been a student for eleven years at the Stockholm Lyceum for Flickor, a smart school for young girls specializing in languages which, by the way, has nothing to do with "the flickers."

She also learned that Ingrid Bergman had, at the age of fifteen, written, produced, directed and even acted in a juvenile playlet that had brought her to the attention of the Royal Dramatic School in Stockholm. It was there that she was discovered by Svensk Filmindustri, Sweden's leading producing outfit, for an important part in a film called "Munkbrogreven." During the next five years she appeared in eleven pictures, and starred in the last three.

Her decision to leave an assured career as Sweden's leading actress was a daring one. The mere thought of Hollywood terrified her, but two things made her think that perhaps her decision was a wise one. First, she was familiar with the part she was to play in "Intermezzo," and second, she knew that a role in a picture starring Leslie Howard and co-produced by him was an exceptional opportunity. "Mr. Howard does not make bad films," is the way she puts it.

Ingrid Bergman's arrival on these shores in the early summer of 1939 was like that of any ordinary European visitor who steps off the gangplank for the first time. She was besieged by neither reporters nor photographers. She was, in fact, totally unknown and therefore totally unmolested. A fortnight in New York City did not mean lots of giddy night life or interminable press parties, but a continuous round of movies and plays. She did not miss a single matinée or night performance because, as she says, "that's a good way to learn the language."

In Hollywood she stayed with the Selznicks until she could find a small house. For the first three weeks after her arrival she was forced to undergo the rigorous régime of Hollywood prettifying with fittings, makeup, screen tests, rehearsals, speech classes.

Ingrid was given no build-up during the three months that "Intermezzo" was in production. Selznick wisely concluded that the American public likes to do its own discovering, and his new importation was not to be publicized at all. She was to play the part of Anita Hoffman in "Intermezzo, A Love Story"; the picture was to be released; and then the public could be advised of her past and her future.

She was industrious and co-operative on the set. Two incidents particularly are remembered by her co-workers with evident relish: The time she suggested to the wardrobe mistress that she, herself, repair a damaged gown; and the naïve fury with which she tore down the "No Visitors" sign on her dressing-room door. "That is a rude thing to say," she explained. After work she was able, unlike other Hollywood personalities, to wander about the town as she pleased. No one knew her by sight, and a foreign accent in Hollywood is as a coal in Newcastle. Her desire to compare the New York Fair with the San Francisco Fair led her on a lone trek to the Golden Gate city where she was so delighted with the sights that she calmly overstayed her leave by one entire shooting day! The Selznick office, of course, was practically hysterical wondering what had happened to her!

At last "Intermezzo, A Love Story" was finished. Ingrid Bergman was invited by William Van Schmus of Radio City Music Hall, to be guest of honor at a preview attended by the Swedish, Danish and Finnish consuls and their staffs. It was a dignified and distinguished gathering, and Miss Bergman had her first taste of fame in America. This was followed almost immediately by the release of the picture in New York. There was some reservation on the part of the critics as to the greatness of the picture. Of Ingrid Bergman there was no reservation at all.

Walter Winchell reported: "New Yorchids. Ingrid Bergman, the Swedenchantress, in "Intermezzo." Oomf'ly good."

The New York Times said: "Miss Bergman's début is one of the most delightful things of the season."

The New York Herald Tribune wrote: "Miss Bergman is the best acting find Hollywood has made in a dog's age."

The New York Post reported: "Not since Geraldine Fitzgerald débuted has anything as nice as Miss Ingrid Bergman happened."

The Daily Mirror said: "She is the finest thing that has come to Hollywood, from anywhere, in many a day."

And Ed Sullivan: "Unknown Ingrid Bergman ran away with the honors."

And Dixie Tighe: "Absolutely tops."

All America evidently agreed with these critics and columnists. Within six months an unknown actress had won the unqualified praise of press and public by a great display of intelligence and emotion on the screen. Off-screen she is a revelation as well. She is vigorous, robust, and responsive. She can sit on the coldest day before an open window without shivering. She is twenty-three years old, five feet nine inches tall, weighs 126 pounds and is vivid rather than pretty. Her complexion has been called "the most perfect," in Hollywood, and it is quite unnecessary for her to use makeup while appearing before the cameras.

Ingrid is quietly thrilled at her "great good luck." She has lost every bit of her fear of the Cinema City. As she puts it, "I like Hollywood. Here, you work hard, but it is fun. No one looks at you if you wear slacks and comfortable clothes. You can say what you please. Yes, I like it here."

Well, stick around, Ingrid, because Hollywood likes you too.

Great New Improvement in Beauty Soaps helps Women Everywhere to a Lovelier Skin!

"I'm just thrilled by new Camay," writes Mrs. J. W. Carlisle, Boston, Mass. "My skin has always seemed rather sensitive, but new Camay is so wonderfully mild that it actually seems to soothe my skin as it cleanses. I know women who feel they have sensitive skin will be grateful for new Camay!"

Camay now Milder than other Leading Beauty Soaps!

Trade-Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

At your dealer's now, no change in wrapper!

"I'm telling all my friends about new Camay!" says Mrs. A. L. Valery, New Rochelle, N. Y. "It's so mild and gentle it's just perfect for my skin!"

Everywhere women are turning to this wonderful new Camay to help them in their search for greater loveliness! They're thrilled to find a beauty soap milder than other leading beauty soaps they have known.

We proved Camay's greater mildness by tests against six of the best-selling beauty soaps we could find. Proved, too, that Camay gave more abundant lather in a short time.

If like many beautiful women your skin seems sensitive, let regular cleansing with this milder beauty soap help you to loveliness!

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Movie Reviews

ARIZONA —This exciting hunk of Americana is well over two hours long, but every moment of it moves with rapid-fire precision. It is the graphic story of the birth of Arizona, brought to life in an imaginative yarn by Clarence Buddington Kelland, a native son, and acted by a big company of players.

All the characters in the film are taken from history books, with the exception of those played by Jean Arthur and William Holden. Jean is cast as a rough, tough gal fighting her way in a rough, tough world.

For purposes of this yarn, Jean bakes pies for a living and dreams of starting her own empire. Eventually she starts a freighting business, falls in love with Bill Holden, a wandering soldier boy, and is almost whipped in the struggle for life by a gang of tough guys who don't like to see a gal amass a fortune. She hangs up her six-shooters, reaches for an apron and knitting needles and settles down to being a good wife.

Young Holden, as the romantic influence, turns in a very neat job and marches steadily upward on the road to screen recognition; the boy has a lot of personality. Warren William is fine as the head bully, but a bit too heavy. It isn't his fault; it's the unrelieved meanness of his lines. The other characters are all good.

Two of the things that make this film stand out are the breathtaking scenery (it was filmed right in Arizona, you know) and the photography. The script and direction are jerky in a few spots, but that is because the lads were trying to cram so much punch and excitement into it. Directed by Wesley Ruggles.—Columbia.

★ ★ ★ ★

Jean Arthur returns to westerns for the first time in ages to play opposite William Holden in "Arizona"—a rootin', tootin' epic.

★ ★ ★ ★

THE LETTER —W. Somerset Maugham's most dramatic story meets up with Hollywood's most dramatic actress and the result is one of the finest films of the year.

It is the tale of a woman, happily married, as far as the outside world is concerned, but who has been carrying on a clandestine love affair. She kills her lover when he jilts her and almost gets away with it—but one telltale letter, written in a moment of desperation, proves her undoing.

William Wyler, in directing this yarn, has chosen a very lethargic pace and drives you quietly mad with his masterly deliberation. The story holds you, the acting holds you, but you almost want to cry out, "Get on with it, man; what happens next?" And that's not a squawk, but a compliment. Because it means that he has you on the edge of your seat throughout the film.

The story seems almost to have been written with Bette Davis in mind; you can't imagine anyone else acting it. But by no means is it a one-performance film. Herbert Marshall lends quiet distinction to the role of her husband, and James Stephenson, as her lawyer, makes you wonder why you haven't noticed him before. Get ready for some very important work by this gent.

Best among the minor players are Sen Yung, a newcomer with a tremendous amount of talent, and Gale Sondergaard, who has an increasingly annoying (to stars) habit of walking away with strong, very dramatic scenes. Directed by William Wyler.—Warners.

James Stephenson, brilliant British newcomer, makes a screen reputation for himself in "The Letter" starring a villainous Bette Davis.

by Wolfe Kaufman

John Payne was the only one who escaped unscathed during the filming of "Tin Pan Alley." Faye lost her voice and Oakie burned a foot.

TIN PAN ALLEY—Here's a picture that has pep, rhythm and laughter, all in copious quantities.

"Tin Pan Alley," which is generally conceded to be 45th Street, between 7th and 8th Avenues in New York, is the famous block where all of America's popular songs have been manufactured for the past thirty years or so. In this block, we meet Jack Oakie and John Payne who are partners in a fly-by-night, three-flights-up "publishing house." The two lads are typical song-writers, ambitious, full of dreams, none too scrupulous. They have a tough struggle but manage to get to the top of the heap with the help of a sister team consisting of Alice Faye and Betty Grable.

The story is spread rather thinly, but pleasantly, and is kept alive by a series of very amusing incidents and a number of good, solid song and dance routines. And by the way, a couple of those oldies may hit the comeback trail.

The casting of the players is well nigh perfect. Jack Oakie has never been better and comes near to walking away with the film. Alice Faye and Betty Grable make an exciting sister team—Alice excelling at the singing, Betty tops at dancing, but both doing a bit of each. John Payne has a new kind of assignment here. He's a dashing, ambitious, fast-talking young man, and chances are that he's at last found a role that'll lead him straight to stardom. There are a number of excellent bit performers, tops among them being Elisha Cook, Jr., the inimitable Billy Gilbert, John Loder and George Watts. Directed by Walter Lang.—20th Century-Fox.

★ ★ ★ ½

You won't be able to stay in your seat when you watch Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor and Nazimova outwit the Nazis in "Escape."

★ ★ ★ ½

ESCAPE —One of the most poignantly dramatic films of the year is "Escape," gripping and spine-tightening melodrama. Both Norma Shearer and Robert Taylor are excellent and the subject matter is very provocative.

Based on the best seller novel by Ethel Vance, the film sticks very closely to the original, telling the story of an actress who talks too freely in a land where freedom is a thing of the past. She's carted off to a concentration camp to die and her son, Robert Taylor, an American, pulls all sorts of strings to free her. He finally manages to arrange her escape by a series of ingenious moves. But he is obliged to seek the help of Norma, an American living in Germany so long she had almost been blinded by its cruelties until this dramatic incident inserts itself into her life—to act as her escape.

The thing that annoys you just a bit is the delineation of the main characters. You get especially impatient with the character played by Taylor and almost want to wring his neck when he insists on refusing to be patient and discreet. Most of his troubles (and those of his mother, too), are brought about by this insistence on a freedom of speech when such insistence is folly.

As mentioned, both Miss Shearer and Mr. Taylor are top-notch. Not far behind, if at all, is Conrad Veidt in a masterly portrayal of a difficult role, and Phillip Dorn, a handsome newcomer whom you'll be hearing a lot about. Nazimova is an experienced performer, but has only a few scenes. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy.—M-G-M.

LET DOWN BY MAKE-UP?..JUST

Be Yourself.. Be Natural!

INSTEAD of being discouraged and upset in your search for the one lipstick which suits you best...turn to Tangee NATURAL Lipstick. To look your best... you must "Be Yourself, Be Natural."

Tangee NATURAL, used with its matching Rouge and Tangee Face Powder, give complete make-up harmony. Orange in the stick—it changes, when applied, until your own most beautiful lip shade of tempting blush rose is produced.

And during winter Tangee's pure cream base helps prevent chapping and frees you from that dry, "drawn" feeling. Apply Tangee NATURAL and see how long it keeps your lips smooth and fresh.

TWO OTHER NEW TANGEE LIPSTICKS! Tangee RED-RED...one of the rarest, loveliest reds of them all—and Tangee THEATRICAL RED...a bright, daring vivid shade. Both are entirely different from Tangee Natural. They do not embody the color change principle—yet both have that famous smooth Tangee cream base.

TANGEE Natural

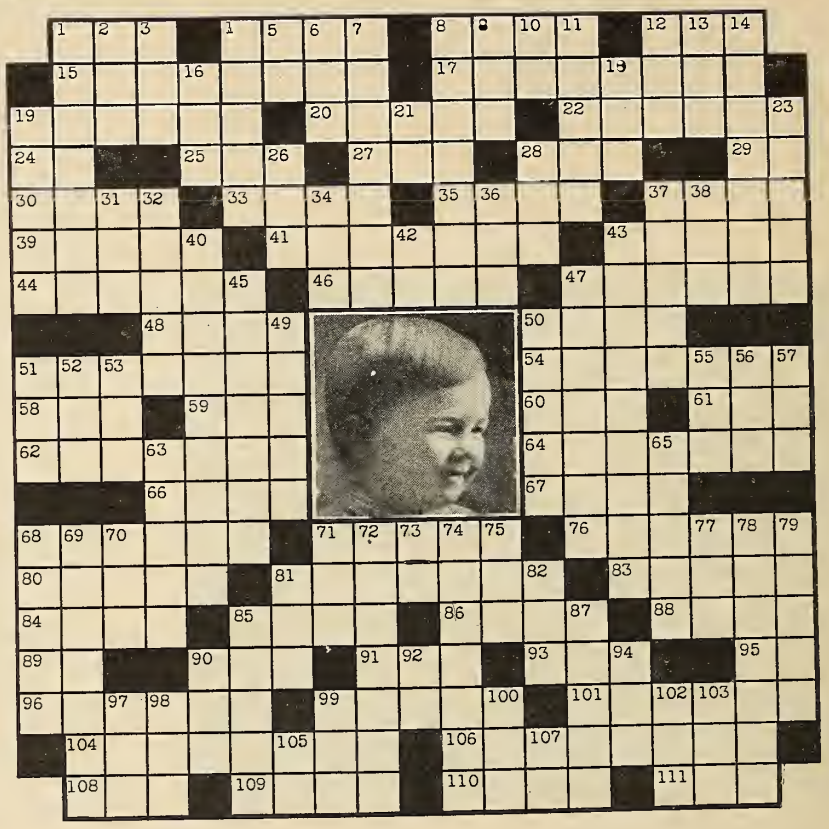
"WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS LIPSTICK"

SEND FOR COMPLETE MAKE-UP KIT

The George W. Luft Co. Dist., 417 Fifth Ave., New York City ...Please rush "Miracle Make-up Kit" of sample Tangee Lipsticks and Rouge in both Natural and Theatrical Red Shades. Also Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). (15¢ in Canada.)

Check Shade of Powder Desired:



☐ Peach ☐ Light Rachel ☐ Flesh
☐ Rachel ☐ Dark Rachel ☐ Tan

*Name*_____ (Please Print)

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____ MM21

OUR PUZZLE PAGE

Puzzle Solution on Page 71

ACROSS

1. Character actor: --- Rumann
4. Baby's bed
8. Child actress
12. Grain
15. Indian girl in "North West Mounted Police"
17. Femme in "Angels Over Broadway"
19. With Ginger in "Kitty Foyle"
20. An unheralded film preview
22. Last name of 71 Across
24. "T - - Pan Alley"
25. Male lead of "Escape To Glory
27. Pile
28. Wrath
29. "Past - - Hall"
30. Measure of land
33. What Western heroes carry
35. Wife in "Four Mothers"
37. Villain in "I Love You Again"
39. Draws closer
41. She was in "My Favorite Wife"
43. Girl in "I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now"
44. Actor in "Meet John Doe"
46. Maureen's father in "Sporting Blood"
47. Male lead of "High Sierra"
48. What Oliver Hardy doesn't do
50. Universal's Mexican dancer
51. Popular Greek comedian
54. Girl in "Five Little Peppers" series
58. How many Marx in "Go West?": Rom. num.
59. Border
60. Famous director of films
61. Portuguese coin
62. She's grand in "Seven Sinners"
64. Jimmy Cricket's voice in "Pinocchio"
66. Crafts
67. Theatre signs contain this gas
68. Frightens
71. Warner Brothers actor, pictured here
76. Doctrines
80. A landed proprietor: Scot.
81. Youthful screen player
83. Shirley - - - - -
84. Confederate
85. Miserly
86. "The Great O'Ma - - - -"
88. Actor in "My Love Came Back"
89. Italian article
90. Fasten
91. Actor in "A Night At Earl Carroll's"
93. Birthmonth of 71 Across: abbr.
95. Pronoun
96. With Jeanette in "Bitter Sweet"
99. Actor in "You'll Find Out"
101. Entertain
104. State where our star was born
106. Once
108. Joan's role in "Little Women"
109. Dill
110. Visualizes
111. Comic in "Dr. Kildare Goes Home"

DOWN

1. Great actor in "Boom Town"
2. He's in "The Long Voyage Home"
3. Necessary prop in Westerns
4. "The Cisco Kid"
5. Star of "Flight Command": init.
6. "- -'- A Date"
7. Heroine of "The Son of Monte Cristo"
8. "The Great Dictator"
9. Jack - - - ie
10. Railway: abbr.
11. Conscious
12. A spherical body
13. Consumed
14. Hurler
16. Flaring rim
18. Johnson's comedy partner
19. Wife of William Powell
21. "R - - ching For The Sun"
23. Flyer in "I Wanted Wings"
26. Surface
28. Writing fluid
31. Sped
32. Disintegrate
34. Dance step
36. Unit
37. Pertaining to law
38. Mary B - - - nd
40. Glided
42. "B - - ther Rat And a Bahy"
43. Home of motion pictures
45. Checking devices
47. Coated with bread crumbs
49. Domesticates
50. Frequently
51. To endeavor
52. Inlet
53. Isa - - - anda
55. William - - -
56. Married
57. What Joan is to Olivia
63. Boy in "Blondie Plays Cupid"
65. "An - - - - - From Texas"
68. Killed
69. Ace screen villain
70. To feel pain
71. Greek letter
72. Dampest
73. "- -, Kildare's Crisis"
74. Sickness
75. Slippery fish
77. Grand old lady in "Four Mothers"
78. Little ring
79. Comprehend
81. Young Chinese actor
82. Beverage
85. - - - - - Gombell
87. Belgian city
90. Hawaiian dish
92. "The L - - ter"
94. To steep
97. Master of laws: abbr.
98. Cunning
99. Pastry
100. Eggs of fishes
102. Cocktail ingredient
103. Wine chalice
105. "- - Your Toes"
107. Personal pronoun

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 13)

★★★½ The Mark of Zorro

This picture will automatically remind many grey-haired ones of the high point in the film career of the late Douglas Fairbanks. But you don't have to be an old-timer to enjoy it, because for anybody, of any age, this is exciting movie fare.

You will meet a new Tyrone Power here, a better Ty than you expected. He has dash, color, vitality and range. It's not the kind of acting that wins Academy Awards, but it does sell theatre tickets. You fans who have stuck faithfully by Tyrone through a half dozen or so films which were not up to snuff will now be able to puff your chests out and strut your "I told you so."

The story is another version of the Robin Hood saga. Laid in old Spanish-owned California, it tells about young Zorro (Tyrone), son of the Governor. A meanie named Rathbone and his stooge named J. Edward Bromberg push the Guv (Montague Love) aside and take over, meting out very tough treatment to everyone concerned. So young Zorro plays a spineless sissy daytimes and goes ariding by night, masked, with a sharp sword poised. He straightens everything out for a happy ending, which includes a lovely damsel named Linda Darnell.

You've seen the same story before in a dozen different versions, but never as thrillingly told or with as much rapid-fire action. Power's not as acrobatic as Doug used to be, but he keeps moving mighty fast, and he's as handsome all tricked out in his brand new mustache. As for the rest of the cast, they're exactly what you expect when they're at their best. Which is plenty good. Bromberg is perhaps especially effective in his best film chance to date, and Gale Sondergaard, too, rates a special mention in a difficult role.

This, by the way, is one of those cases where the director's hand is always evident—good, clear direction, photography and acting, all neatly blended into a solid entertainment package; not a minute of it drags. Directed by Rouben Mamoulian. —Twentieth Century-Fox.

YIPPEE, FANS!

At last we have it for you—that biographical chart of your favorite "westerns" that you've been begging for! Imagine having at your fingertips the real names, birthplaces, birthdates, heights, weights, how they got their start and studio addresses of over sixty of those rough-riding heroes, leering villains and wide-eyed heroines of your pet "horse opries!" Made up in a most attractive form, it will make your album proud as anything. Just send five cents in coin or stamps with the coupon below and your chart is as good as lassooed!

Information Desk, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York City

I am enclosing five cents in stamps or coin for which kindly send me your chart of the Western Stars.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

Please print name and address plainly

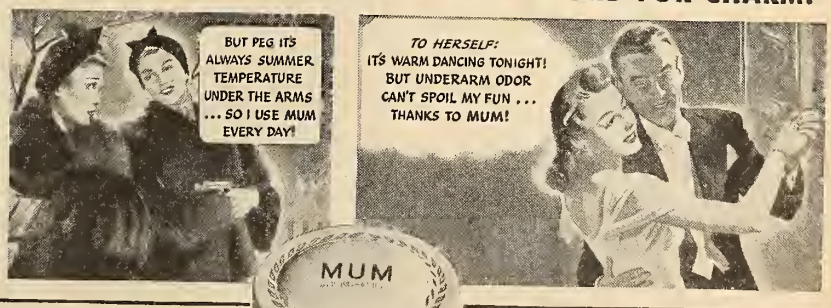
It's always August underneath your arms!

Underarms perspire in Winter as in Summer. Use Mum daily to guard your charm!

OUTDOORS, winter may bluster. But outdoors or indoors, it's always August, always 98 degrees, under your coat and dress, underneath your arms.

So don't let winter fool you. Remember, even when you see no moisture, odor can and does form, and winter clothes especially, are apt to carry tales about any lack of daintiness.

That's why Mum is so important to you right now. Just smooth Mum on and you're safe from odor, sure of your popularity, for a full day or evening.



Use Mum daily, for even daily baths can't prevent risk of underarm odor. But Mum's effectiveness lasts. Winter or summer, Mum is the word for charm.

FOR CONVENIENCE! Smooth Mum on in 30 seconds and you're fresh for hours.

FOR SAFETY! Is your skin sensitive? Mum won't irritate even after shaving. And Mum is harmless to fabrics.

FOR CHARM! You're dainty always, when you make Mum a daily habit. Get a jar of Mum at your druggist's today. Long after your bath has faded, Mum goes on guarding your charm.

WINTER AND SUMMER...MUM'S THE WORD FOR CHARM!

For Sanitary Napkins
Napkins need Mum, too. For this important purpose, thousands of women use Mum because it is always so gentle, so dependable.

MUM
TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

Conquest of Winter

Elmo

ALL-WEATHER LOTION

Winter is more fun if you're well fortified against the weather. Neither cold nor wind nor snow will mar the appealing satin-smoothness of your skin if you safeguard it with Elmo All-Weather Lotion. Just a little, used regularly, on your hands, arms and legs will protect against dryness, chapping and roughness.

Make this lilac-scented "satinizer" part of your daily after-bath routine. Elmo All-Weather Lotion is a rich, non-sticky, marvelously soothing emollient.

Elmo

PHILADELPHIA • SAN FRANCISCO

★★★ Bitter Sweet

Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in a Noel Coward musical is enough to make you realize that this is an important film. Unfortunately, the story has not stood up against the ravages of time as well as the music which is still the best score Coward ever wrote.

The tale's a pretty little trifle about a struggling young musician (Eddy) and his wife. It is Vienna and being poor does not seem to be important as long as they can sing and dance and dream. Then comes realization of their joint ambition, Eddy's musical is accepted for production, and fame is just around the corner. But remember the title. Bitter Sweet. At the crucial moment there is a café brawl and Eddy is killed defending his wife's honor. She lives to see him immortalized by his music.

Although this story is not very faithful to the original, it is charmingly handled and not too saccharine. Both Nelson and Jeanette are in fine voice throughout the film; the Technicolor is hauntingly beautiful especially in the ivory finale; and "Zigeuner" and "I'll See You Again" will linger with you. You'll probably find yourself humming them for days, in fact.

Ian Hunter and George Sanders are tops among the supporting players but don't have too much to do, which seems a shame, somehow. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

★★★ You'll Find Out

Here is fun with a capital F, a picture that makes no sense whatever but is a roar from the first scene on. Kay Kyser for rhythm; Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi for chills and thrills; Helen Parrish and Dennis O'Keefe for romance—and the combination of all for laughs.

Most pictures wound around a band-leader don't bother with story, but this one does; it has a pretty good one, in fact. It seems that Helen Parrish is a rich heiress who hires Kyser and his band to entertain at a party in her ancestral old mansion. There, everything goes wrong. A number of attempts are made at Helen's life, and Kay Kyser discovers what almost anybody in the audience could have told him—that Peter, Boris and Bela are not good friends of the family as Helen foolishly believes.

The writer and director have managed to contrive a series of really exciting and eerie happenings which keep things moving along at a rapid pace, and there are a number of songs and dances flowing quite naturally throughout. It is a very neat combination of chiller and musical formulas, and it should add up to fun for almost any kind of an audience.

You don't need to be told what the various members of the cast do, since you know them all and they are all permitted to be themselves here. It should be noted that band-leader Kyser is developing quite a pleasant filmic comedy sense. And Ginny Simms, his specialty songstress, not only warbles pleasantly, but is mighty good to look at. "I've Got A One Track Mind" is the best song. Directed by David Butler.—RKO-Radio.

★★★ Lady With Red Hair

"Lady With Red Hair" is the screen biography of a famous actress, Mrs. Leslie Carter, interwoven with a film yarn about David Belasco. The combination makes for plenty okay entertainment.

Miriam Hopkins does a thorough and competent job in her role. But that she is no Mrs. Carter shows up all too clearly when she tries to reproduce that red-haired lady's famous on-stage emoting. Claude Rains as Belasco is tops from the word go. He's always been a good actor, and this is his best role by far.

How accurate the story is does not matter. It tells very simply and movingly

Ann Sothern not only goes glamorous in a great big way but also appears headless in parts of "Maisie Was a Lady," her new film—co-starring Lew Ayres.

the career of an ambitious actress and her fight to win fame and happiness. It is a woman's story frequently stirring, although occasionally in need of more suspense.

Richard Ainley, newcomer from London, will have to do better than he does in this picture before he will make hearts tingle in this country. Laura Hope Crews and Helen Westley handle comedy characterizations intelligently. Directed by Kurt Bernhardt.—Warner Bros.

★★★ Little Nellie Kelly

Judy Garland grows up—which is the big news about this one. "Little Nellie Kelly" is not the sort of picture that you are likely to write letters home about, but it's good, clean fun. In film circles, it is what is known as "a family picture," meaning okay for the entire family, especially mom and pop. And in this classification it is tops.

The story is taken from an old George M. Cohan play which was better in its day. Judy plays a double role. First we see her as an Irish lass being courted by George Murphy; she's a rather quiet, somber young woman inclined not to smile too often. They marry, come to America, and she dies in childbirth in a deathbed scene in which there's really fine acting. Then there's a time lapse and Judy appears again as the daughter, fully grown, happy, carefree, almost giddy. Douglas McPhail is her boyfriend now, Murphy her pop and Charlie Winninger his pop. It's pretty much hearts and flowers with a lot of brogue thrown around, but it holds up throughout because of Judy's splendid work.

There's a bit of disappointment in Murphy's assignment here; it's almost a straight dramatic role, and he gets very little chance to be the splendid song and dance man that he is. McPhail hasn't much to do, but Winninger is a sock in a straight comedy assignment. There are a number of swell, old-timey songs strewn through the picture, including "Nelly Kelly, I Love You" and "Danny Boy." Directed by Norman Taurog.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

★★½ Gallant Sons

"Gallant Sons" is a whodunit with the cast made up almost entirely of youngsters. Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville and Gene Reynolds are the stars, and they keep things moving pretty pleasantly most of the way. It's no world-beater, but it will afford you some fun if you sit back and relax.

It seems that Gene Reynolds is the son of Ian Hunter, a professional gambler, and Jackie Cooper is the son of Minor Watson, a newspaper man. Cooper's dad is instrumental in getting Reynolds' dad sent to jail on a murder rap. The kids are fast friends, however, so they gather up a bunch of their schoolmates, investigate the murder, prove that Ian Hunter is innocent and that another guy actually did the killing.

The way in which the youngsters handle their detecting is ingeniously worked out, although a few of the deductive steps are a bit too obvious and some of the action is rather slow.

The romantic interest is supplied by Bonita Granville, Jackie Cooper's girl friend and daughter of Gail Patrick. Hunter's so good, he seems wasted in a bit part like this. Leo Gorcey, June Preisser, Tommy Kelly and William Tracy are certainly best among the youngsters in supporting roles. Directed by George B. Seitz.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

TWO GREAT HITS
HERALDING YOUR Greatest
ENTERTAINMENT YEAR!

GLORIOUS ROMANCE IN GLORIOUS Technicolor!

HENRY FONDA
DOROTHY LAMOUR
LINDA DARNELL

CHAD HANNA

by Walter D. Edmonds

featuring
Guy Kibbee • Jane Darwell
John Carradine • Ted North
Roscoe Ates • Ben Carter

Directed by HENRY KING
Associate Producer and Screen Play
Nunnally Johnson

Printed in THE SATURDAY EVENING POST
as "Red Wheels Rolling"

PAUL MUNI
. . . in a role unlike any he's ever had!

HUDSON'S BAY

with
GENE TIERNEY
LAIRD CREGAR • JOHN SUTTON • VIRGINIA FIELD
VINCENT PRICE • NIGEL BRUCE

Directed by Irving Pichel
Associate Producer Kenneth Macgowan
Original Screen Play by Lamar Trotti

Adventure! Action!
Drama! Emotion!
ENTERTAINMENT!

From 20th CENTURY-FOX
. . . the hit-makers who've already begun to make it a very happy 1941 for you!

Lovely Olivia de Havilland forsakes her saccharine roles for a good, solid characterization in Warner's tremendously exciting pre-Civil War romance, "Santa Fe Trail"

EUGENE ROBERT RICHEE

If you've longed for a lively love story interwoven with music from the world's most beautiful operas, you'll thrill to Paramount's lilting "There's Magic in Music," starring Allan Jones

Her ethereal beauty dazzled you in Columbia's "He Stayed for Breakfast," but wait till you see the new and lovelier Loretta Young in the title role of Paramount's latest musical, "Ballerina" Fred's Best Yet..!

'Cause He's Got Paulette!

Paramount Pictures

THE PARAMOUNT SEAL IS YOUR SEAL OF ENTERTAINMENT THIS WINTER

YOU CAN TELL A PARAMOUNT PICTURE BY THE APPLAUSE!

Conrad's Great South Seas Love Thriller!
FREDRIC MARCH • BETTY FIELD in Joseph Conrad's
"VICTORY"
An Island Tale
with SIR CEDRIC HARDWICKE and Jerome Cowan • Sig Rumann
Directed by John Cromwell

The Year's Most Beautiful and Exciting Picture!
MADELEINE CARROLL • FRED MacMURRAY in "VIRGINIA"
(in Technicolor) with Stirling Hayden • Helen Broderick
Marie Wilson • Carolyn Lee
Produced and Directed by Edward H. Griffith

First Drama of America's New Air Defense Forces!
"I WANTED WINGS"
starring
RAY MILLAND • WILLIAM HOLDEN
WAYNE MORRIS • BRIAN DONLEVY with Constance Moore • Veronica Lake
Hedda Hopper • Directed by Mitchell Leisen

Paramount's Glamorous New Star Discovery
VERONICA LAKE

SHOOTING FOR THE STARS

By William Roberts

They make fat stars thin and old stars young! Who? Those magnificent Merlins of Movietown — the unsung cameramen

These fellows are pretty tough, believe me. They're banded together in a secret organization called the ASC, and it's not that they try to be secret but just that no one knows much about them outside of Hollywood. Movie stars dread them and, privately, call them super-assassins.

The leaders of the ASC have committed many drastic deeds. They have literally taken flesh off Myrna Loy's legs. They have flattened Brenda Marshall's nose. They have removed pieces of Madeleine Carroll's cheeks. They've reduced Priscilla Lane's mouth, narrowed Zorina's forehead and changed Vivien Leigh's blue eyes to pure green. And for committing these atrocities they have been paid as much as $1,500 per week.

However, if truth will out, the secret organization referred to is actually a staid labor union, the American Society of Cinematographers. The members, merchants of mayhem, are the very expert and very well-paid cameramen of Movieland who, with thick ground glass and well-placed kliegs, have made ordinary faces beautiful and have converted terrible defects into gorgeous assets.

If any one class of worker in Hollywood does not get credit where credit is due, if any one class of laborer is hidden behind the star-bright glare of publicity, obscure, unsung, unknown—it is the cinema cameraman.

"It's this way with us," Gregg Toland told me. "They've got us wrong, entirely wrong, everywhere. They think cameramen are low-grade mechanical morons, wearing overalls and stupid grins, existing on starvation wages and merely grinding 35 mm. toys. Well, maybe. Only we don't like that impression. Maybe we are technicians. Nothing wrong with that. But sakes alive, man, tell 'em we're creative artists, too!"

Merle Oberon gives Gregg Toland a lot of work. She photographs well only in extremely fluffy clothes.

And so, I'm telling you. They're creative artists, too. They're makers and breakers of thespians and pictures. They're the Merlins behind the movies.

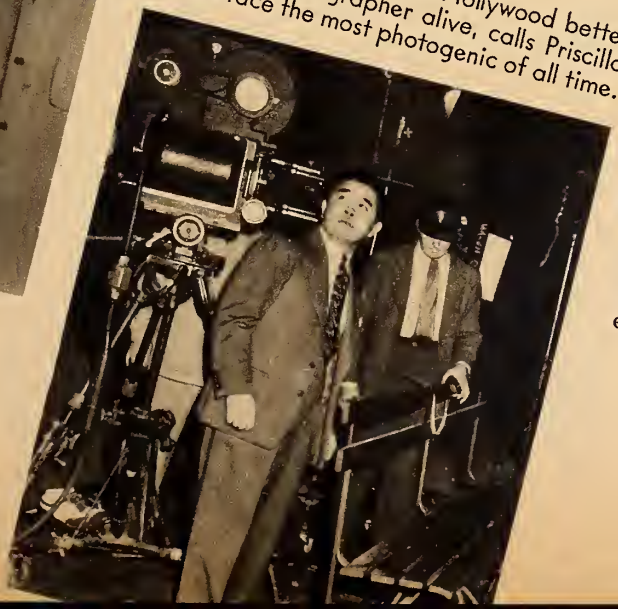
Take that fellow Gregg Toland who just had the floor. A lean little man in brown clothes—cultured, brilliant and active. Twenty-one years ago he obtained a job during a summer vacation as an office boy at the old Fox Studios. The film stars on the lot didn't impress him, but the intent cameramen, cranking their black-sheathed boxes, hypnotized him. He decided to skip school and become a photographer. The result? Well, the last I heard, he had prepared for canning such products as "The Grapes of Wrath," "The Long Voyage Home" and "Citizen Kane."

I talked with Toland in the comfortable study of his sprawling Benedict Canyon home. He downed a long beer with a practiced gulp and explained the qualifications and duties of the cameraman.

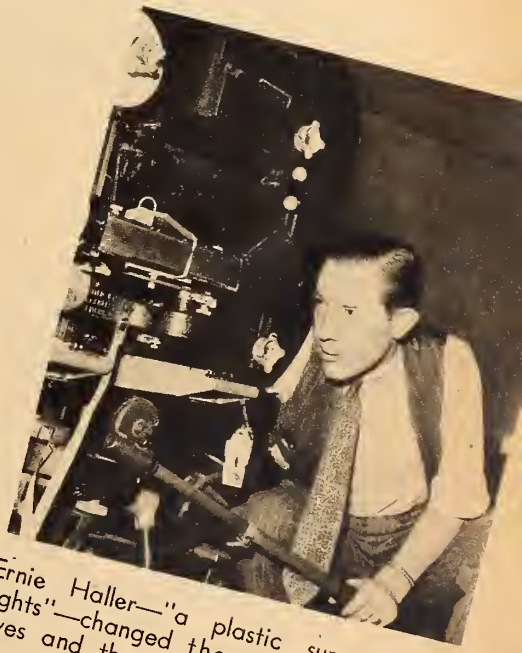
"A first-rate cameraman must realize," said Toland, "that while some scenes of a film might be shot much, much better, much more artistically, those scenes are worth neither the extra time nor extra cash investment. The cameraman must have a strain of the economist in him, and get speed into his picture without sacrificing quality. After all, time becomes a paramount item when you realize that a single day on a certain picture may run to $22,000 in expenses!

"As photographer on a major movie, my first job is to manage my camera crew. I have a special crew of seven men. All specialists. I take them with me wherever I go. There's an operator and two assistants. There's a grip, a gaffer or electrician, a standby painter and a microphone boy. But that's only the beginning of my job. I must see that there is efficiency. Speed, again. And, with things as they are, I must practice economy by being artistic with one eye on the production budget. These days a cameraman is actually a producer, director, photographer, actor and electrician. The out-and-out old-fashioned photographer who just had to maneuver a camera is as extinct as the dodo bird."

With two decades behind a Hollywood camera, I wondered just which particular feminine face Gregg Toland considered the best he had ever brought into focus.



His answer, like his personality and his pictures, was direct.



"Anna Sten," he replied. "She was by far the most photogenic woman I ever shot. She didn't have an insipid baby doll face, you know the type. She had a face full of good bones and character. Her cheeks caught the lights well, and her nose was so tilted as to place attractive shadows beneath. Frances Farmer was another face I enjoyed working on and, of course, if you want to go way back into ancient history, there was no one like the incomparable Gloria Swanson. (Continued on page 81)

Vivien Leigh's and Laurence Olivier's stand-ins eavesdrop on Rudolph Mate and the electrician.

Jimmy Howe, who knows Hollywood better than any photographer alive, calls Priscilla Lane's face the most photogenic of all time.

Ernie Haller—"a plastic surgeon with lights"—changed the color of Leigh's eyes and the shape of Marshall's nose!

hollywood's no. 1 menace

Gable kisses Lamarr (this clinch is from "Comrade X") and gals wonder what they ever saw in their hubbies.

A million soupy sagas have been

THOUSANDS, perhaps millions, of words have been written about how "natural" Clark Gable is, how he takes everything with his tongue in his cheek, how he has a complete lack of ego after years of such fame and adulation as have befallen no man save, possibly, Valentino. Directors, bit players, his fellow stars, interviewers, extras, the studio personnel, from Louis B. Mayer down to a junior bus boy in the commissary, chants the one refrain about Gable: "He blows himself down! He horses his own stardom. He gives Gable, the star, the belly laugh." It's almost impossible to believe it, but just listen to a couple of classic examples:

One day the assistant director of "Comrade X" stuck his head into Clark's portable dressing-room. "Hey, Clark," he yelled. "The pigs are waiting."

"I'm ready," said Mr. G.

"Mr. Vidor says," added the assistant director, "that he can make this scene a long shot and your stand-in can do it, if you'd rather not. It's going to be pretty messy."

"Boloney," said Mr. G., "what's wrong with pigs?"

And another day, Clark stepped off the set after doing one of the big, emotional scenes of the picture. The crew applauded. Hedy Lamarr applauded. Director King Vidor gave his star a hand. The big fellow grinned. "I certainly hammed that one up, didn't I?" he beamed.

Later, when Clark was safely out of earshot, King Vidor said to me, "I have been in this business a long while. I have directed most of them, oldtimers and newcomers, big stars and bit players. And you can quote me as saying that Gable is the man for my money. Not only because he is a very fine actor, but also because he is the most down-to-earth, easy-to-get-along-with actor I have ever known. This 'Comrade X' hasn't been an easy picture to film. We've worked inside a mechanized tank a lot, and close quarters are always difficult. We have worked through fog and smoke and rain and, furthermore, Clark had to ride in a truck which also housed a pen of pigs. I don't know any other star in the business who wouldn't have passed that buck. Not Gable. He never complains about anything. We always had a lot of laughs. He's not a fair-weather guy. He has no conceit whatsoever. What's more, he has an enormous and lusty relish for kidding himself. Quite a different matter, you know, from a relish for kidding the other fellow. Practically every time he finishes a big scene, and a damn fine one at that, he says what you just heard him say, 'Well, I certainly hammed that one up.' And he believes it. How he has managed to stay as he is through the blitzkrieg of fame and favor is, to me, the major mystery of the picture business."

Hedy had a few words to say on the subject, too. "This is the first time I have felt absolutely at home making a picture," she told me. "It might have been my hardest one because I wear no glamorous, attractive clothes. I wear an old street car conductor's uniform, and my hair is all straggly.

"The first day I started to work, I was more afraid than usual. I suddenly realized I was playing opposite the Great Gable, and it froze me. In 'Boom Town' I did not have a big part and was not often on the sets; I did not have much responsibility. But this 'Comrade X' was different. In this, it was Clark and myself!

"He laughed at me for worrying and accused me of thinking motion pictures the most important thing in the world. He kidded me, saying, 'They are not as important as all that, sister. Relax. Motion pictures will be here long after you and I are both gone.' He said, 'Look, baby, this is a picnic, a clambake.' I did not know what he meant by a 'clambake' but I did know I was having fun for the first time since I had been in pictures. I did know that for the first time I relaxed when I worked.

"We would have 'tea' every afternoon on the set. The first time Clark invited me to tea, I did not know what to expect. It turned out to be tea made in an old coffee pot and he served it with dozens of five-and-ten cookies!

"He helped me so much by making suggestions entirely for my benefit. During the filming of a love scene that was to be shot as a large close-up of the two of us, I was supposed to lean over and kiss him quickly on the lips. It seemed rather awkward for me to do. So Clark suggested that he stay to one side, almost out of the close-up, and that I first reach over my hand and touch his cheek, then slowly draw his face to mine for the kiss. That approach was easier and gave me more confidence. It also gave me the close-up! After a while, I got so that I forgot we were acting at all. We got down in the dirt and fought like two wildcats for some scenes. I even had to kick him where he sits down, and I wasn't afraid to kick good and hard because I knew he could take it. That's how he is."

I was convinced at last that Gable was okay—a natural—but how has he stayed that way, I found myself wondering. Just one man could give me the real answer—Mammy Lombard's Pappy Gable, himself!

"How come?" I asked him point-blank.

Gable favored me with a large and lavish wink. He said, "I've got the answer right (Continued on page 77)

No one else stands a chance with the cameraman when Clark and the photogenic Lombard are around!

BY GLADYS HALL

penned about Gable, but here's a punchy one right from headquarters!

The gripping story of an overwhelming love that defied public opinion and surpassed the might of Napoleon's armies!

Lady Hamilton

Lady Hamilton—whose beauty was unforgettable

"THE coach from London!" called the gateman.

"The coach from London, your Excellency!" said a lackey to Sir William Hamilton, Ambassador from Great Britain to the Court of Naples—for, less than one hundred and fifty years ago, Naples had not yet been absorbed by a larger power. There was a King and, more especially, a Queen in the Kingdom of Naples.

A few moments later Sir William was happily unboxing art treasures which the coach had brought him. Assisting him was the French Ambassador, who had been a bit ruffled when Sir William had unceremoniously walked out in the middle of a conference. But as he looked at a Greek statue being lifted out of its case, he murmured, "Exquisite!" and, as Sir William showed him a painting by Romney of a divinely beautiful woman, he forgot there had ever been a conference.

"If he could paint reality, he would be a master!" said the French Ambassador critically. "No woman ever lived with such coloring!"

"I thought so, too, until I met her," observed Sir William.

"You met her!" gasped the Frenchman wonderingly. "She exists!"

Gavin, Sir William's secretary, had been trying to break in. At last he succeeded and drew Sir William off to one side.

At that moment two servants removed the portrait at which the French Ambassador had been looking. He stared much harder at what he saw behind it. Two women were sitting on a bench, and one, a lovely young thing, was the portrait come alive.

Miss Emma Hart and her mother rose from the bench and stared back at him, completely at a loss as to what to do. Just then Sir William came up. Gavin had managed to explain to him that the two ladies had been sent on along with the other art objects and bric-a-brac, from his nephew. Sir William bowed deeply and presented the French Ambassador to them.

The young lady had an enchantingly frivolous spirit. Moreover, she was so lightly informed that she had fortified her mind with a few memorized platitudes about the famous places she had passed on her voyage. These she repeated, with no idea at all of the extraordinary effect of amazement and delight they had on the two diplomats. If anything, this naiveté only added to her charm.

"You met her!" gasped the French Ambassador to Sir William. "She exists!"

Contemptuously, Emma accused her husband of interfering in her love affair.

"Now I have kissed you through two centuries," Nelson whispered to Emma.

But even Emma was definitely aware of something wrong when her mother, referring to the Leaning Tower of Pisa, remarked, "A chimney went like that in Liverpool last year. You remember, Emma, the soap works? It leant right over the gin warehouse, and the Bishop said it was the finger of God."

It must be stated here that the lovely Emma had arrived, ostensibly to study singing, in the home of the Ambassador as the friend of his nephew, Charles Greville, and that Greville had previously found her established in Featherstone Castle, home of his friend Sir Harry, during a very gay hunting season. And further it may be stated that Sir Harry had earlier found her doing the Dance of the Seven Veils in Dr. Graham's Temple of Health, which had been closed by the police just after Emma dropped the seventh veil.

"Don't ask me what she had done before that," said Sir William, explaining these few details to the French Ambassador who had been overcome with the girl's seeming innocence and was a trifle bewildered. "Perhaps," went on her fiancé's uncle, "perhaps a poor little country girl wronged once—wronged again—the usual story—lower and lower—but always up and up! As for that, consider this superb statue that came with her. Two hundred years in a Greek Temple—then thrown into the mud by some barbarian soldier—two thousand years sinking deeper and deeper into the mud—then dug out by the plow of a peasant—changing hands every year until, at last, it comes into its rightful place in the hands of someone who understands the glory of its beauty—because it is still beautiful, despite its past." And the tolerant man added aside to his secretary, "I'll dine with Miss Hart alone tonight—at eight o'clock."

Emma did her best at dinner. It was very important, she knew, to make Charles' uncle like her if Charles was to pay his debts, come for her in October and make her at last a wife.

Sir William tried one way and another to enlighten her. "Now, my child, as we are going to live under one roof, we should be perfectly frank with one another. Charles Greville will never come to Naples."

"But your Excellency—Uncle—," Emma answered with quiet assurance, "he definitely promised to come for me very soon, and the promise he gave me he'll surely keep."

• C A S T •

Emma Hamilton.....Vivien Leigh
Lord Nelson.....Laurence Olivier
Sir William Hamiltan.....Alan Mawbray
Rev. Nelson.....Halliwell Habbes
Capt. Hardy.....Henry Wilcoxan
King af Naples.....Luis Alberni
Queen af Naples.....Narma Drury
Jasiah.....Ranald Sinclair
Gavin.....Olaf Hyttan
French Ambassadar.....Gearges Renavent
Mrs. Nelsan.....Gladys Cooper

Adapted from the ALEXANDER KORDA Praductian for UNITED ARTISTS Release—Directed by ALEXANDER KORDA—Screen Play by WALTER REISCH and R. C. SHERIFF

"I suppose he promised you marriage as well?" he asked at length, and at her answer added, "My child, I'm afraid I must destroy those sweet dreams of yours. My nephew never had the slightest intention of marrying you, either with my consent or without it."

Emma could not believe him. But she had an inspiration. "Tell me, your Excellency, do you know about me—I mean—did Charles tell you?"

"He did," said Sir William. "I imagine that was the only thing he did not lie about. But please, I don't want to make you ashamed."

"There's nothing I'm ashamed of," said Emma, looking at him with a straight insistent honesty. "I made many mistakes in my life—I was stupid—too young—I believed in men and their promises until I (Continued on page 66)

Fictionized by Katharine Roberts

1

2

DANGEROUS CURVES

3

4

1. 22-year-old Rita Hayworth keeps her million dollar figure without benefit of bra or girdle! Favors scanty lingerie and one-thread hose. Splurges on clothes to the tune of over $15,000 yearly, but economizes on help. Has only Velma (above) and Larabee, who's a chauffeur-butler.

2. When she was 17, and dancing in an Agua Caliente cabaret, a Texas oilman—Eddie Judson—was her most ardent stage door Johnnie. They were married four years ago, after an 18-month courtship. Both love dogs, the Conga, bowling and that brand new card game—gin rummy.

3. Rita and Eddie have separate bedrooms. Main feature of hers is a 12-foot satin-upholstered bed. Rita—whose hair is flaming for her role in "Strawberry Blonde"—crams her lines for two hours nightly simultaneously nibbling chocolates, but never weighs over 118 lbs!

4. She has a size 5½ foot, pays up to $75 for shoes and always has 45 pairs on hand—some of which match her living room furniture! She smokes, wears scarlet nail polish, has received 300 proposals of marriage, is mayor of 12 South American cities and speaks Spanish like a native.

FIGURATIVELY AND DRAMATICALLY SPEAKING—LUSCIOUS RITA HAYWORTH IS INCHING HER WAY TO THE TOP OF THE HEAP!

Date Bait

If you're angling for a smoothie, hook him with Bonita's wiles—and if you boys are battling heavy competition, clear the field with some of Jackie's stuff!

Is it hopeless if the girl of your dreams can't see you for dust? A thousand times no, says Bobby Stack—who made Mary Beth see him in a new light!

You hear an awful lot about the "heat" stage of Hollywood romances, but somehow the "meet" stage rarely makes the movie columns. You and I have always believed that in the cinema city boy invariably meets girl under the world's most glamorous and moonlit circumstances. And we've finally resigned ourselves to the fact that romance blooms like mad out there but that it just can't happen here. Well, gather around, children, and learn the unbelievable truth.

A Hollywood commentator or publicity agent who can't figure out a new way for a "he" to meet a "she" is in the same position as an author of detective fiction who runs short of murder methods. But while these Hollywood drum-beaters stew, the youngsters themselves meet and fall in love under circumstances that are duplicated all over the world every day.

As proof of this we present the case of Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville. The conditions under which they met were no more glamorous than those which attended your best beau when he fell. The alarming difference is that their meeting took place in Hollywood. Bonita went to a party with Frankie Darro at Judy Garland's house and Jackie came alone. The festivities wound up with a scavenger hunt, and at one of the clues they bumped into each other and Bonita said, "Hello." For weeks thereafter Jackie angled for a date but nothing happened. Finally, after they had been formally introduced at the studio, Bonita had a birthday and Jackie sent her eight gardenias and her very, very first orchid. Still no dice. When Valentine's Day came around, he sent her a bottle of her favorite scent, but with typical boyish caution he enclosed a phony greeting that read: "You're so sweet when you pass on the street, all the boys stare. Gee, it's too bad you've got such big feet."

BY FRED HERBERT

Miss Granville kept the perfume and made no comment on the card. But when young Mr. Cooper called up for a date, she said, "Sorry, I'm too young." The truth of the matter was that Bonita, realizing that she had Jackie hooked, decided to get even with him for the comic valentine. So she proceeded to do the town with various escorts and even went so far as to turn up at parties in Jackie's home with other boys.

Being convinced now that he had made a mistake, he tried a fresh tack. Just before Christmas he sent orchids with a note stressing "good will toward men," and ending with the plea, "May I take you dancing soon?" P.S. The "humble pie" did the trick. She accepted . . . they danced . . . he complimented her . . . she complimented him . . . and the little guy with the bow and arrow sat grinning on the sidelines.

The payoff is that Mr. Cooper waited almost a year for that date and all because of a prankish valentine. However, Bonita and Jackie are now a usual twosome and Bonita beams about his thoughtfulness and his sweet personality.

Case Number Two might be that of Bob Stack and Mary Beth Hughes. When Mary was asked to meet Bob she turned her back on the invitation. When pressed for a reason, she explained that he had gone out with somebody else for a long time and then had stopped seeing that "somebody else" for no good reason. Finally, at Bob's urging, a mutual friend convinced her that she had confused him with another man. Mollified now, she agreed to look him over from a distance but made no promises. Accordingly, some time later at Ciro's, Mary Beth sat at a table with this same friend while nearby, squirming under her appraising scrutiny, sat the hopeful Mr. Stack. Evidently satisfied, she nodded to her friend who then rose, approached the perspiring Robert and invited him to sit at their table. That evening was the first of many and today each thinks the other's terrific.

YOU'LL BE HANGING OUT THE STANDING ROOM ONLY SIGN ONCE YOU'VE TRIED THIS HOLLYWOOD TECHNIQUE ON THE LOCAL TALENT!

And just the way it might have happened in Paducah, it happened in Hollywood to Helen Parrish! Helen's a grown-up gal now, but three years ago she was at that awkward stage, fruitlessly devoting most of her thoughts to Charlie Lang, her brother Bob's handsome pal.

When he came to the Parrish home, he'd pass by Helen with a "Hi'ya, kid," and like any other teen age girl, Helen didn't appreciate the condescension. Why couldn't the big dope see that she was wearing her heart on her sleeve for him? But he didn't. It looked like a lost cause for Helen for Charlie suddenly decided to leave California. That was three years ago.

In the meantime, Helen outgrew that awkward age, and the Parrish telephone began ringing day and night as Rand Brooks and other Hollywood eligibles besieged her with dates. Helen went out with them but she was just marking time for Charlie Lang. When he did return a few months ago, he whipped over to see Bob Parrish. Helen opened the door and Charlie just stood stock still and stared. When he spoke his voice cracked, and he didn't call her "kid." He said, "Hello, Helen," and blushed. It was a sweet moment for Miss Parrish.

Weddings are always sentimental affairs, for the bride and groom . . . and the guests. Brother Bob's was no different. Helen looked divine to Charlie Lang, so he used the occasion of the wedding as the bait and asked for a date. Helen accepted.

They went dancing, and he held her as though she were a fragile piece of Ming. When he caught her eye she read the message he was too bashful (Continued on page 80)

Should you take to the shelf if "the only one" is miles and miles away? Linda Darnell (gadding here with Bob Shaw) has solved that one beautifully.

And let Ann Rutherford (nightspotting this time with Don Kahn) show you how to cope with the hectic business of having two best friends fall in love with you.

All this is Hollywood, too!

Here's the gaudiest, naughtiest, most wonderful town in the world—with all of its dives, its shops, its customs and oddities. Here is its glitter and heartbreak—its very soul!

There is only one item your passport must contain before you enter this strange land of Hollywood, and that's a visa stamped—"I have a sense of humor."

And, believe us, you must begin having that sense of humor before you step on a train Los Angeles-bound (there are no train depots in Hollywood), and before you request your home-town boy friends to write you in care of "General Delivery, Hollywood" (since the Hollywood branch post office does not accept "General Delivery" mail, and you'll have to travel six miles to central Los Angeles for such mash notes).

Hollywood is many things. It's the crackpot's wonderland, the shopgirl's heaven, the incubator for genius. Hollywood is a small town in Sunday clothes, a constant first night, an endless County Fair—where lights are brighter, voices are louder, colors are more vivid than anything you've ever known or dreamed. Hollywood is also the place where there are three times as many holy churches as unholy celluloid factories, where there are as many males toiling in aviation plants as on motion picture lots, where they've run absolutely dry on synonyms for "terrific."

And, above all things, Hollywood is the one place where you must avoid the Chamber of Commerce as you would the bubonic plague, unless you want to be harangued in this fashion by one of the board:

"Hollywood, California, is a great city of 197,000 inhabitants, living within a beautiful area of twenty-four square miles, at a breath-taking altitude of 1,200 feet, where there is marvelous sunshine 334 out of 366 days of the year. Hollywood is great, beautiful, breath-taking, marvelous! Hollywood has 130 miles of paved streets. It has thirty-five banks and branches. It has twenty-five hotels. There is money everywhere—and the average family earns $3,750 a year, which isn't hay. Hollywood is terrific! It's located a half hour from the Pacific Ocean, a half hour from downtown Los Angeles. It has Griffith Park, the largest, most terrific municipal park in America. Hollywood is the only city for you!"

If this has not sufficiently softened you, the Chamber of Commerce possesses exactly 799 other members, with the fanatical gleam of the Golden West in their eyes, to convince you.

But, at the risk of being hung as a heretic, we must tell you that lots of this is all wrong. Actually, as pal to pal, we're telling you there is no city of Hollywood, California!

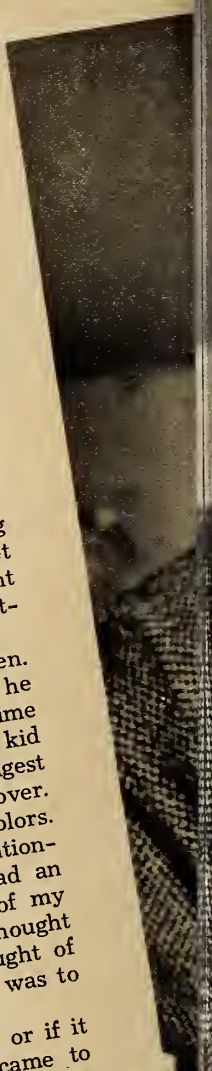
In 1887, a chap named Horace Wilcox, and wife, purchased a piece of property in Southern California, built a ranch, named it Hollywood, after a rich aristocratic estate in England. Forty years ago Hollywood was being boomed as a real estate stunt. Thirty years ago, for the sake of economy and better facilities, Hollywood consolidated with Los Angeles and became a section of the City of Los Angeles. That's the way it is today. Hollywood is no more a city than, say, the Loop in Chicago is, or the North Side of St. Louis, or the upper West Side of New York. Hollywood has no mayor of its own. It has no chief of police. The nearest station is the Union Depot, six miles off in central Los Angeles.

Yet the minute you enter this foreign land without a ruler, without a boundary, without an official anything, you know you're in Hollywood!

You know it by the funny things you see, the familiar-sounding places, the strange sights.

It's a twenty-minute drive from the depot in Los Angeles, down the Boulevard to the center of Hollywood. At this point you cross Western Avenue, reputed to be the longest avenue in the entire world. And, at this point, also, a native Californian (you must remain twenty-four consecutive hours in Los Angeles to become a qualified "native Californian") will undoubtedly grip your arm and whisper hoarsely, "There it is!"

You will stare blankly, and see only a drab corner office building, housing a small drugstore, with a business entrance at one side. From here on in you must have imagination—for this is the Mecca of the many, the many with dreams of success and of fame. This is the building that holds the Central Casting Bureau! Here, through the dull, cold corridor, and up a creaking elevator, you reach the offices of Central Casting. Here, within the offices, are special files listing 17,000 extras. Of these, only about 3,000 (most of them girls) are working at one time. For appearing as an ordinary extra, each is paid $5.50 a day—whereas a trained dog gets $50 a day! There may be glamour here, but there are also empty stomachs, since the average extra girl earns an average income, throughout the year, of $7.65 a week! Only compensation is the fervent prayer that one day, maybe tomorrow, one of these 17,000—as in the rare case of Janet Gaynor—may become a star.



Driving on down Hollywood Boulevard you will have the impression of any busy main street in Kansas City or Boston, except that Hollywood contains no skyscrapers. Most of the buildings are low-slung and have plenty of elbow room. Nothing is way up in the air—except the sky. The reason for this is a city law limiting the height of all public buildings to fourteen stories—as a safeguard in the event of angry cement-cracking earthquakes. In fact, in all of Hollywood, there are only a dozen buildings constructed up to the limit, and these are set on giant underground rollers to help sway the structures during a major quake.

You are soon passing the bright Tele-View Theatre, a newsreel house starring such a variety of actors as Mr. A. Hitler, Mr. Donald Duck and other short subject luminaries. Peering into the box office, you're liable to see Buddy Adler, the owner, and his statuesque wife, Anita Louise, both checking on business and greeting such famous "regulars" as Bob Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck and Charlie Chaplin. (Continued on page 87)

BY IRVING WALLACE

A THRILL A MINUTE...

BY JAMES REID

James Stewart didn't look happy, in spite of the fact that he and Hedy Lamarr were supposed to be lovers in a picture with the provocative title, "Come Live With Me." He looked miserable. He had a cold.

"You can always count on Stewart to get the breaks," he said, sneezing. "Here I am, desperately trying to gain a pound a month, and I've sneezed off at least three pounds in the last twenty-four hours. Hedy Lamarr comes into my life, and what happens? A cold makes me socially unacceptable. I can still work, but I have to work by myself—until I lose it. And a fine chance I have to lose it. I'm supposed to do a rain scene tonight."

Somehow, people don't think of a six-foot-three movie hero as being subject to a cold in the head.

"I caught it flying," Jimmy explained, half-apologetically.

Maybe you've read about Jimmy's flying and wondered, like a flock of other people, just how serious it is. He has never talked about it much, having no flair for self-dramatization. He doesn't regard interviews as golden opportunities to wax expansive. In fact, he is very much like a witness under cross-examination. He nervously waits for questions, then parries them dryly, intent on not being drawn into anything that sounds like a confession.

As a result, most people know James Stewart as a shy, but amusing young man, who isn't serious about anything, really, except his work. They're aware that he has a plane, but they think of it as a glorified plaything he has acquired —temporarily. They read in various columns that he is teaching Olivia de Havilland how to fly, and they think of his flying as a sly ruse to be alone with Olivia.

There's a laugh in the mental picture of Jimmy, playing the romantic hero, taking Olivia aloft and catching a brute of a cold doing so.

Only the picture is out of focus. It doesn't present things as they are.

He isn't teaching Olivia how to fly. What he is doing is meeting her for breakfast at six o'clock every morning at Metropolitan Airport, where he keeps his plane. Then, before reporting for work, Olivia goes up in a rented plane with an instructor for an hour's flying lesson—while Jimmy goes up in his own plane to practice turns and spins and to add another hour to his solo flying time. Please note that word "solo." It's important.

Up to now, he has flown about 400 hours solo. He's up in his plane every morning, every day off, every week-end, intent on accumulating 1,000 hours of solo flying time at which point he can try for a transport pilot's license. There's a serious reason why he wants one, too—few people know about that. Few people know anything about James Stewart, the flier. They should get acquainted with him. He's an entirely different person from the playful young-man-about-Hollywood.

His interest in aviation isn't something sudden. "I can't remember when it all started," he told me, between sneezes. "It was sometime during the last war. Anyway, I was just a kid about nine or ten. We took the Literary Digest and it always had a war scene on the cover. Action stuff, painted with a lot of bright colors. I can't tell you why, but I became aviation-minded. I'd tear off every cover that had an airplane on it and tack it on the wall of my room. Airplanes were the last thing I thought of every night and the first thing I thought every morning. My one ambition in life was to find out what it was like to be up in one.

"I've forgotten if the war was still on, or if it was over, when a barnstorming flier came to Indiana, Pa. I knew a long time in advance that he was coming, and I saved every cent I could. I made up my mind I was going to have an airplane ride.

"My folks said I wasn't. They said flying wasn't safe.

"Finally, the big day arrived. As advertised, this flier came down in a pasture outside of town and started taking up passengers for dollar-a-minute rides.

"I persuaded my folks to go out and watch, at least. My dad was a merchant; he knew people for miles around. Some people he knew went up and they came back intact, raving about the thrill. They helped me break him down, and he finally said I could go up. But he kept the car motor warmed up, just in case a wing fell off the plane, or something, while I was in it and he had to rush to (Continued on page 75)

SO YOU THOUGHT YOU KNEW JIMMY STEWART! HERE'S SOME "PLANE TALK" THAT'LL KNOCK ALL YOUR OLD NOTIONS ABOUT HIM FOR A LOOP

BY CAROL CARTER

"Look at those lovely hands," exclaimed one of Hollywood's top directors, enraptured as he watched the screen test of one of Europe's newest refugee actresses. "Those foreigners may not always have the prettiest faces, but their hands are certainly the most beautiful and expressive I have ever seen!"

We'd never thought of it just that way and, in our newly awakened consciousness of the superiority of everything American, we were in no mood to agree with him. However, his sincere praise did give us pause and make us think. Our mind flashed back over half a dozen foreign stars, and we couldn't deny the fluttering loveliness of the hands of Vivien Leigh, Isa Miranda and Ilona Massey or the fluid grace in those of Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich and Greer Garson. We remembered, too, the dramatic gestures of Dolores Del Rio and Luise Rainer and the expressive vivacity in the fingers of Sonja Henie, Annabella, Danielle Darrieux and Simone Simon.

"Well," we said, "how about Ginger Rogers, Virginia Bruce and Betty Grable? Or Anita Louise, Margaret Sullavan and Ann Rutherford?" And it was gratifying to note that the director had no comeback to that!

But, French or English, Scandinavian or American, the principal question in our minds right now is—what makes hands lovely, what gives them the power to intrigue?

Shape is not important. Hands may be slender, tapering, short or medium, and still be beautiful. Training, care and grooming—there are your answers in a nutshell. Watch your gestures. Keep them rhythmic, slow and graceful. Make your motions in curved lines, not in nervous jabs. Watch your hands in front of mirrors. Cut out those choppy, meaningless, indecisive little gestures. Streamline your motions. If you want to break old habits and develop new ones, try keeping your hands perfectly motionless when talking. In the meantime, practice a few simple limbering exercises. Then, after you've gotten your hands relaxed and under control, begin to use them with new, more graceful motions. Piano or typewriting exercises practiced a few minutes each day on a table

Finger tips and fashion finds from Hollywood hands to hold

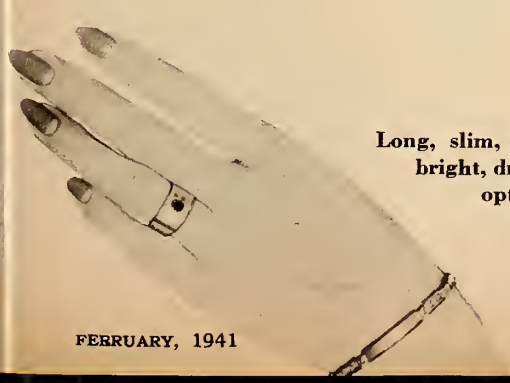
If your nails are naturally round, file them to elongated ovals and apply polish from base to tip for length. Leave narrow margins at sides.

Oval nails are the ideal shape. Let your half moons show and leave only a tiny white tip at the end of each nail.

or desk are excellent for suppling your hands. Or, with palms flat on a table, slowly raise each finger separately eight or ten times apiece. Clench your fist, then extend your fingers, stretching them wide apart. Repeat this ten or twelve times. Bend back your open hand, stretching the fingers again. Now, dip forward from the wrist in a quick swan dive motion. Let your wrists go limp, then shake your hands loosely but not too vigorously. Hollywood lovelies, whose every motion must have a meaning, practice these and similar exercises regularly every day to give that restful, fluid expressiveness which we have come to take for granted.

Actual hand care begins with the skin. No one is going to hold or admire a hand that is red and rough to the touch. And in these days such conditions are inexcusable. With mild soaps, soft brushes, wonderful hand creams and lotions everywhere, such a situation springs from only one cause—carelessness. It isn't the washing that irritates, but how it's done that tells the tale. Even though you don't use harsh, strong soaps you must thoroughly rinse off all traces of any kind at all. And how do you dry your hands?



Be sure you do a thorough job of it, pushing nail cuticle back with your towel as you go and rubbing hand skin back toward the wrist, never toward your finger tips. Follow this with a protective cream or lotion applied with a circular, deep rotary motion. If you spend much time outdoors, a coat of vanishing cream and a dusting of talcum powder will add an extra film of protection.

If your nails are brittle, as they're likely to be, come winter, keep a bottle of special oil or a jar of nail softener with your kit of hand protectors. Use it after every wetting and, of course, the last thing every night. In fact, never go to bed without (Continued on page 74)

Square nails will appear oval if you will polish in exaggerated half moons and file their tips to shapely ovals. Leave margins at sides.

Nails with oval bases and square ends look best with tiny moons and polish extended to the oval-filed tips.

Long, slim, exotic nails need polish in bright, dramatic shades. Half moons are optional but they generally add grace.

Roz Russell was wheeled past Master of Ceremonies Benny in a huge hatbox. He made some crack about her hat; Roz hooted, then popped out of her tissue and kissed him!

One of the most hilarious features of the opening was Dr. Giovanni (a professional pickpocket.) He lifted everything —from Jack Benny's suspenders to a pair of someone's shorts!

Designing Males

A quartette of mad hatters stole the spotlight at Hal Kemp's Cocoanut Grove opening!

Rudy Vallee left his own Pirates' Den for the occasion, but refused to enter the hat-designing contest for men. Couldn't bear to be separated from nineteen-year-old Sheila Ryan—one of the cutest of the new Wampas Baby Stars.

Entrants in the contest were given a big selection of untrimmed hats and ornaments, and three minutes in which to indulge their Lilly Daché instincts. Here's Spencer Tracy—blushing—in his prize-winning off-the-face, flower-trimmed bonnet.

And don't think Spence didn't have some pretty frou-frou competition! That's Herbert Marshall in the feather and veil arrangement; Eddie Sutherland in something more on the conservative side; Tracy (giving the profile), and Gene Markey, elegant in a toque with plumes.

Mary Livingstone Benny (always her hubby's best audience) guffawed after each of Jack's side-splitting introductions—ignored dinner partner Herbert Marshall completely. He perked up considerably, however, when his favorite singer, Mary Martin, did a number with the orchestra.

Rosemary Lane tells her Nana about all her love affairs—and poor Nana's problem is to keep secrets!

MISTRESS

Vic Mature drives his Carolyn mad by absent-mindedly throwing bits of the newspaper all over her clean floor.

BY JEANNE KARR

You've had servant problems, no doubt, or have listened to the woes of those who have, but did you ever hear the other side of the story? Really, the master and the mistress problems some of the stars' servants meet up with make servant problems too footling to rate even a footnote!

Garbo's servants, for instance, must play the part of deaf-mutes. Not only must they see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil, but they must see, hear and speak nothing at all, under pain of instant dismissal.

Then there's Maureen O'Sullivan's Nellie who had to overcome her fear of animals when working with Maureen on the Tarzan pictures. Cheeta, the monkey, would not only jump onto the dressing table and make up his face, but he'd frequently try his hand at Nellie's knitting!

Eleanor Powell's Ruth had to break in Eleanor's dancing shoes for her during her last picture when Eleanor's mother, who usually does it, was ill.

Lucille Ball's Harriet merely says that she had to learn to like rare, red steak in the morning, because the minute Miss Ball opens her peepers she yells for some!

But these are piffling problems—you haven't heard anything yet!

John Barrymore's Carl Stuever, nurse, companion and mother, has met a really major problem and has solved it. For five solid months John has been cold sober and doesn't know it! Carl has given him his Five Fruits daily, at first with the customary amount of alcohol, then with gradually decreasing doses until, five months ago, John started drinking the Five Fruits straight. Moreover, so clever has Carl been that John is elated at how healthy he feels and boasts about how well he is "carrying his liquor." Up in the sprawling great mansion in the hills John and Carl are literally camping out. The place is "furnished" with a camp cot and a broken-down davenport. There are no cooking facilities, and there isn't a dollar bill to spend on the place. John says, "I don't mind camping out in my Chinese tenement. After all, I'm the outdoor type!" But Carl sees to it that John fares well gastronomically, at least once a day, by contriving to get him invited out for dinner at the homes of various friends! And wherever John goes, there Carl goes, too. Socially, professionally, domestically, they are always together, and Barrymore, unique in everything, is actually a "hero to his valet." For Carl, admittedly, adores "the great man."

When a maid has to be as good an actress as her mistress, that's another major problem. And that's what Joan Crawford's faithful Alice has to be. When Joan is hysterically happy, because she has gotten a good picture or someone has given her a new piece of jewelry, Alice must be hysterically happy, too; when Joan sees her rushes and they are bad, Alice must go to pieces along with Joan; when Joan has a big, dramatic scene to do in a picture, Alice is seen tearing her kinky hair. On the other hand, Alice's menial labors aren't much of a problem because Joan does most of them herself. Joan always makes her own bed, keeps a dustpan and brush in her bedroom so she can do her own "light cleaning," counts the outgoing laundry and sorts and puts away the incoming laundry. "It's just that you have to be in tune with Miss Joan's moods," Alice explained.

Bette Davis' Joanna confides, "Miss Davis is very exacting—the New England housewife if I ever saw one! She has a phobia about dust and, as she also has a mania for moving (Continued on page 90)

PR

STARS' PERSONAL

GENTLEMEN DISCUSS

You don't know the meaning of the word trouble, says Ann Sothern's long-suffering Marie, until you've worked for an ice cream worshiping star who's on a very strict diet.

Ida Lupino's Lily must remember the quirks and whims of every single dinner guest. Each one has to be treated as a member of the family.

Fred Astaire's valet has to have a good bit of the slapstick comedian in him. It's his chore to keep Freddie from getting into a "mood."

...mance

There's an old Hollywood saying: "You can't make a Glamour Girl cry." It has a double meaning.

No woman is beautiful when she cries—and a Glamour Girl should always be beautiful. And you can't make a Glamour Girl cry because she doesn't know how. Her beauty has kept her from having any contact with heartache.

But Madeleine Carroll has learned how to cry.

Madeleine has learned how to do a great many things these past two years. Director E. H. Griffith has been responsible for part of her education. Life has been responsible for the rest.

Before she met Griffith, everybody thought of her as probably the most beautiful blonde in existence. But everybody had the general impression that she was too poised, too cultured and (perhaps) too beautiful to be emotional.

Griffith, a smart showman, aware of the fact that audiences like to be surprised, got the idea of presenting Madeleine Carroll as a headache to the hero—instead of an inspiration.

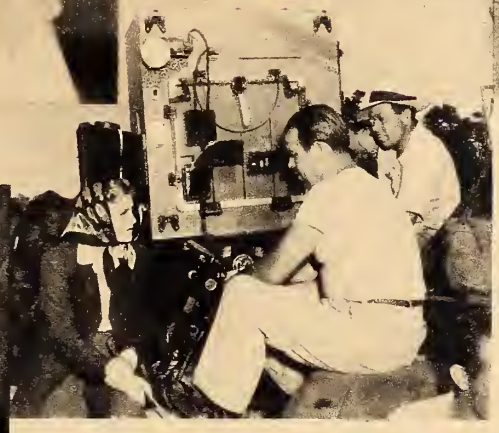
He cast her as a spoiled society girl, given to wisecracks and wild impulses. Audiences were as delighted as they were surprised. Next, he gave them Madeleine as a determined career girl who discovered that she couldn't get along without sex and went in desperate pursuit of a man. Audiences began to think of Madeleine as not only beautiful, but warmly human and amusing.

But then Griffith wanted to prove that, while she could be an amusing person, she could also become involved in a serious emotional tangle. Accordingly, in "Virginia," he cast her as a light-hearted showgirl who goes back to the South to sell an estate she has inherited and finds herself torn between two loves. Among other things, he asked her to cry.

Just before she was to do that crying scene, he talked to her in her dressing-room.

"This is probably the most difficult thing you've ever done," he said. "You've never cried as if your heart would break. You've always been beautifully 'brave.' But this girl has run up against an unbearable situation which she is helpless to change. It's too much for her. She breaks down completely—

They call her the loveliest blonde in the world



Her honey-colored hair is naturally curly

Madeleine and Anatole Litvak at Cira's

Her favorite rig—dungarees and bandana

MADELEINE CARROLL'S IS THE MOST DRAMATIC STORY EVER TO COME OUT OF HOLLYWOOD!

for a moment. It's only human that she should. And we want to get that point across. It's got to look real, Madeleine. Let yourself go. Cry real tears if you can; if you can't, we'll use glycerine."

Madeleine nodded. She didn't say anything.

A few moments later, she walked on the set and took her place in front of the camera—dry-eyed. The whole crew was tense, waiting to see if she would cry. It was hard to believe she could. It was hard to associate tears with Madeleine.

The sound man rang his bell for "Silence." Griffith said quietly, "All right, Madeleine."

For a moment, she looked only like a woman inexpressibly worried. Then, suddenly, tears welled in her eyes. Her face contorted in a paroxysm of emotion. She sobbed. She cried as if her heart would break.

When Griffith called "Cut!" the crew was silent for a moment, a little embarrassed about having watched any woman cry so heartbrokenly. Then they told her how convincing she had been. They broke into spontaneous applause.

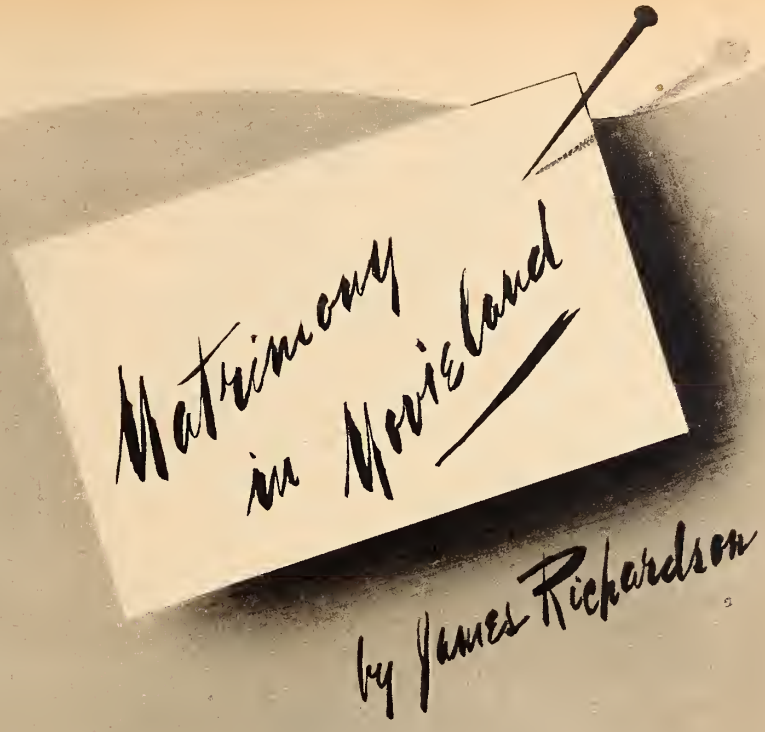
Madeleine, her face streaked with tears, picked herself up and half-ran to her dressing-room.

Griffith gave her a few moments to compose herself, then walked over and knocked on her door. She called, "Come in." He entered to find her at her dressing-table, trying to repair the damage to her eyes and make-up, trying to squelch the last snuffling remnants of her sobs. She forced a smile.

"Did it look real?" she asked.

"It was the greatest bit of acting you've ever done," he said, sincerely.

Madeleine stared at the mirror a moment, as if she saw something there besides herself. Just as sincerely, and very quietly, she said, "I'm afraid I wasn't acting."



That is the only hint she has given of some of the things life has taught her—the only admission she has made of the emotional turmoil she is in, herself—the only confession of the difficulty of "carrying on."

To the world, she is still the beautiful, poised, serene Madeleine Carroll—the woman with the loveliest smile in Hollywood. And that crying scene in "Virginia" won't dispel the illusion that the picture, as a whole, creates: namely, that she is a woman who has found the recipe for happiness.

Nothing could be more ironic, because there is no actress on the screen today who has less reason to be happy than Madeleine. (Continued on page 93)

NAME	MARRIEDTO	DATE OF MARRIAGE	MATE'S PROFESSION	PREVIOUS MATES	CHILDREN	STATUS OF MARRIAGE
Aherne, Brian	Joan Fontaine	Aug. 20, 1939	Actress	None	None	Bride 'n' groomish
Albertson, Frank	Virginia Shelley	Mar. 7, 1931	Dancer	None	Frank, 6; another on way	In the groove
Allen, Fred	Portland Hoffa	May 4, 1929	Actress	None	None	So sober, it's funny
Allen, Gracie	George Burns	Jan. 7, 1926	Comedian	None	Sandra, 6; Ronnie, 5, both adopted	Whacky, but wonderful
Ameche, Don	Honore Prendergast	Nov. 30, 1932	Non-prof.	None	Donnie, 7; Ronnie, 5; Tommy, 1½; Lonnie, 6 mos.	Perpetuol joyride
Anderson, Judith	B. H. Lehman	May 18, 1937	Professor	None	None	Firm as Gibraltar
Andrews, Dana	Mary Todd	Nov. 17, 1939	Actress	One	David, 7; by first wife	Getting along nicely
Annabella	Tyrone Power	Apr. 23, 1939	Actor	Three	Ann, 10, by prev. marriage	In the "Torrid Zone"
Arthur, Jean	Frank J. Ross, Jr.	June 11, 1932	Studio Vice-prexy	One	None	Lessan in longevity
Astaire, Fred	Phyllis Potter	July 13, 1933	Socialite	None	Fred, 5; Peter, 9, by wife's previous marriage	Tap-happy
Astor, Mary	Manuel Del Campo	Sept. 19, 1938	Film Editor	Dr. Thorpe, K. Hawkes	Anthony, 1½; Marilyn, 8½, by Thorpe	Heat wove
Atwill, Lionel	Louise MacArthur	June 7, 1930	Socialite	Elaine Mackay	Son, 20, by first wife	For keeps
Autry, Gene	Ina May Spivey	Apr. 1, 1932	Teacher	None	None	Happily roped in
Bainter, Fay	Reginald Venable	June 8, 1921	Ret. Naval Officer	None	Reginald, Jr., 17	Smooth sailing
Bancroft, George	Octavia Brooke	May 30, 1913	Non-prof.	None	One daughter	Old Faithful
Bari, Lynn	Walter Kane	Mar. 15, 1939	Actors' Agent	None	None	Bari, Bari good
Barnes, Binnie	Mike Frankovich	Sept. 28, 1940	Radio Announcer	Samuel Joseph	None	Honeymoon Express
Barry, Donald	Peggy Stewart	Sept. 7, 1940	Actress	None	None	Give 'em a chance!
Basserman, Albert	Elsa Schiff	Dec. 31, 1908	Actress	None	Carmen, 30	Love's Old Sweet Song
Baxter, Alan	Barbara Williams	Apr. 28, 1936	Dancer	None	None	All Quiet
Baxter, Warner	Winifred Bryson	Jan. 29, 1918	His former leading lady	One	None	Goes on, ond on, and on
Beery, Noah, Jr.	Maxine Jones	Mar. 30, 1940	Non-prof.	None	None	Off to a good start
Benchley, Robert	Gertrude Darling	June 6, 1914	Non-prof.	None	Nathaniel, 25; Robt., 21	No short subject
Bennett, Joan	Walter Wanger	Jan. 14, 1939	Producer	John Fox, Gene Markey	Diane, 10, by Fox; Melindo, 6½, by Markey	Grade A
Benny, Jack	Mary Livingstone	Jan. 12, 1927	Actress	None	One	Crossley roting: 100%

(Continued on page 60)

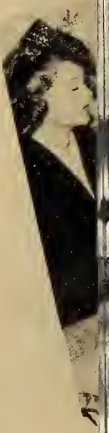
There are worse places for a man to marry a woman than in Hollywood. There's Java, where a groom must prove he is healthy before a board of ladies, then sit by himself in silence for forty days, then spend the first three nights of married life with an old woman sleeping between his bride and himself. And there is Koryak, in the North Pacific, where the groom must chase his fiancée miles, catch her and, with a knife, slice off her bridal costume, a suit sewed together with thick leather thongs.

Sure, there are worse places for marriage than Hollywood, but the actors in town don't think so. They think California wedlock laws are too slow, and so they rush off, via chartered plane or 1941 coupé, to Nevada, Idaho, Arizona or Mexico.

But, to understand why, for example, a couple like Dick Halliday, the handsome writer, and Mary Martin, the equally handsome songstress, will leave comfortable Hollywood, avoid the cozy courthouse which is only a half hour from their home, and drive by night to Las Vegas, Nevada, to be married at the stroke of twelve by a yawning Justice of the Peace—to understand such loony antics is simple enough if you understand California's legal commandments.

In Hollywood, when a young actor decides that he would like a better half, he goes to the Hall of Records in the midst of downtown Los Angeles. There he fills out, with his prospective wife at his elbow, an application for a marriage license. This is sometimes difficult, especially when one is famous. The rush of reporters at the License Bureau scared Edna Best and agent Nat Wolff away. In the case of Tyrone Power, his throat became practically paralyzed and the clerk, undoubtedly a movie fan familiar with Mr. Power's biography, had to answer most of the questions for him.

Now then, two important factors enter the scene. The actor and actress, with the honeymoon glaze in their orbs, must each submit medical certificates signed by family physicians, certifying that they have been examined for social diseases, have received the standard test for syphilis as required by the state law and have been found healthy. No other papers need be submitted except if the male is under 21 or the female under 18, in which case they must have written consent of their parents or guardians. Finally, having applied, the bride and groom must wait three days for their license—the three-day wait being designed to give them a last chance to think it over before engaging in the most delightful penal servitude on earth.



After three days, they need only pay $2 for their license and wander into a nearby chamber, where a Los Angeles judge will knot them forever and ever—and insist that they keep their fee as a wedding present! Or, they may, as Tyrone Power did when he said "I do" at Annabella's Bel Air home while 40 photographers waited outdoors, be married under (Continued on page 72)

Unhooked from Willis Hunt, Jr., after four hectic months of matrimony, Carole Landis is reportedly altar-bound with Franchot Tone.

Fred MacMurray's one of those rare souls who likes mad hats, hence that ultra in headgear worn by dancing partner Mrs. M.

Randy Scott sneaks in a couple of dates with movie-aspirant Gayle Mellott, while her steady boy friend trustfully enjoys his vacation.

Martha Scott celebrates maid's night out at the Brown Derby with the chap who first gave her a radio break, hubby Carleton Alsop.

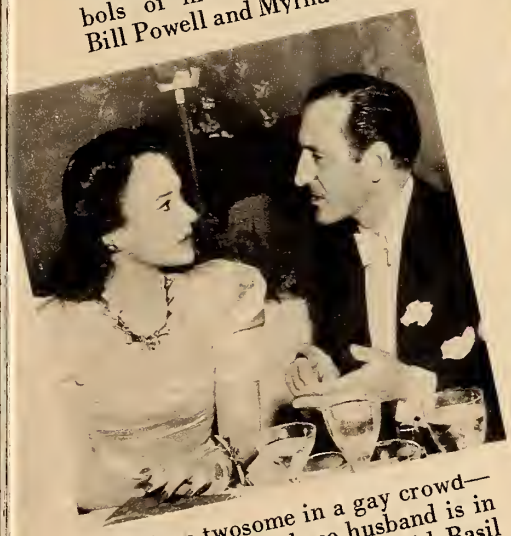
When Lana Turner met Tony Martin at a San Francisco wedding, she found a new love and now they're inseparable.

Those bangs Bette Davis sports while dancing with her radio agent are a hangover from her sheared locks in "Elizabeth and Essex."

Gene Markey is tops for a good time, but on the serious side Lucille Ball's heart belongs exclusively to Desi.

South American beauty Maria Montez fills in the gap between Mischa Auer's dates with his recently divorced wife Norma.

Rally 'round for a table-trotting tour of filmsters' spree spots



Diana Lewis has a quick one with the screen's "symbols of married love," Bill Powell and Myrna Loy.

The Bart Marshalls plan a big blowout on the anniversary of their wedding which took place last Feb. after a front-page romance.

Autograph-signer Deanna Durbin and that rapidly rising young producer Vaughn Paul will step off as soon as he scores his first hit.

Serious twosome in a gay crowd—June Duprez, whose husband is in England, exchanges news with Basil Rathbone, whose son is at the front.

Cobina Wright, Jr., supposedly betrothed to a New York socialite, dines with George Montgomery during her Hollywood job hunt.

Errol Flynn, who's consoling Mrs. Ruth Foran on her marital woes, should remember that charity begins at home!

It's no new experience for Burgess Meredith to forget to bring his wallet, but he shudders to break the news to Lili Damita Flynn.

Two years as Mr. and Mrs., but Shirley Ross and Ken Dolan still get a kick out of hand-holdin

ERROL SKINFLYNNT?

An ancient mining engineer, recently returned from the faraway Indies, reports a revolution fomenting in romantic British Guiana. The cause of the trouble, he tells us, is Hollywood's own Errol Flynn who vagabonded through that country before becoming a famous movie star. Our engineer asserts Errol borrowed dough from practically every explorer, miner and native on the island, used his gleanings to pay his steamship fare to America—and, to date, hasn't kicked back a cent! The boys in Guiana didn't mind for the first few years, but they've run into lean times of late and could use the money. They claim they've written Errol on several occasions and asked for it, but they've had no response. This department is fond of Errol and wouldn't want to see anything happen to him. That's why we're tipping him off, here and now, that the gang is planning to finance a trip for one among them who will come to these shores and personally put the bee on his neglectful old-time pal!

ON THE SPOT

Not because she's trying to duck a cleaner's bill, but because she must retain her reputation as the most smartly-dressed woman in Hollywood, Kay Francis has taken to ordering wine the same color as her gown! Kay found that on too many occasions she spilled liquids down her dress fronts and had to leave Ciro's looking as bespotted as a high-chair baby. Now the stains blend with her gown, and Kay reports she could almost bathe in her beverages without appearing untidy! All of which is by way of being a fashion tip to you, and you, and me—only, in our cases, it would probably be wiser to buy dresses that match our ice cream sodas!

ASIDE TO BETTY GRABLE

Vic Mature was once a married man! So swears a woman we know who knew him when. According to our informant, Vic's wedded life was brief and stormy and, when the end came about a year ago, he was still deeply in love with his divorced wife. The ex-Mrs. Mature is said to have resembled Betty Grable slightly and Lana Turner even more. All of which leaves one wondering whether Vic just goes soft on the luscious, lively type, or whether he's constantly trying to relive the romance that was.

HOW ABOUT DONALD DUCK?

In the dear, dead days beyond recall, a star's popularity was determined by the amount of fan mail he received, but in this modern, streamlined era, they're counting marriage proposals instead of letters. According to studio experts, any star receiving fewer than twenty proposals a month either has not clicked or is slipping! For example, Dean Jagger is riding the crest because he collects sixty a month, Alice Faye does more than hold her own with forty, Tyrone Power cut his down to twelve by marrying Annabella, and Cesar Romero, the most eligible male of the lot, trails the rest with only ten. Funny thing about these proposals is the fact that though they are considered important popularity gauges, they are never answered! The stars have torn their hair trying to find a suitable response, but their final decision is that there just isn't anything they can say!

SERMON OF THE MONTH

The much discussed night-club scandal which just a short while back broke around the heads of a noted director and a famous actress should be considered a closed incident now and forever. With all its contacts and newsgathering facilities, this magazine, to date, has been unable to find a single eye-witness to the so-called shocking behavior of the pair, and it is our conviction that the malicious gossips who conceived and have been elaborating on the tale, owe the deepest apologies to the very unhappy couple.

DIDJA KNOW

That Clark Gable sleeps in only the upper part of his pajamas . . . That W. C. Fields has a wife and son living in Beverly Hills . . . That Eddie Horton's estate is called "Belly Acres" . . . That Olivia de Havilland flies an airplane solo now, but is still earthbound by Jimmy Stewart . . . That there are 400 Robert Taylors in the United States . . . That if Lana Turner blossoms out in a new full-

YOU'RE REALLY IN THE HOLLYWOOD KNOW WHEN YOU'VE READ

GOOD NEWS

GATHERED FOR YOU BY OUR SUPER SLEUTH —SYLVIA KAHN!

John Howard

Hedy Lamarr

Lupe Velez

length ermine coat, you may be certain it's a gift from Tony Martin . . . That Melvyn Douglas has danced in every one of his last five pictures . . . That Patricia Morison whose initials are P. M. has a brother whose initials are A. M. . . . That Irene Rich passed around six boxes of cigars when her grandson was born . . . That to avoid forgeries, Maureen O'Sullivan, like most movie stars, has a special signature for checks . . . That Ruth Nagel, daughter of Conrad Nagel, is a junior at Wellesley College . . . That John Howard owns stock in every major film company in Hollywood . . . That Hedy Lamarr's No. 1 husband, Fritz Mandl, phoned Hedy long-distance on her birthday and talked for a solid hour while his brand new bride sulked green-eyed in an adjoining room?

Meanwhile, friend Carroll, not to be outdone, met and married little Steffi Duna. In due time, that marriage crashed and O'Keefe, still in the matrimonial mood, wooed and won the ex-Mrs. Carroll. But here's the topper. "Wild Jack" recently left the much-married Louise, sued her for divorce and—please believe us—has again taken up residence with his closest buddy, John Carroll!

SUSPENDED ANNIE-MATION

The long line of jobless gathered outside of Hollywood's Unemployment Insurance Headquarters, gulped twice and rubbed their eyes when a sleek, chauffeur-driven limousine drew up to the curb and discharged a beautifully garbed young woman. But when the young woman

Errol Flynn

Betty Grable

Ann Sheridan

LOVE IN TWO-TIME

It can only happen in Hollywood. Just a few years ago, three of the town's choicest Lotharios, Dennis O'Keefe, John Carroll and Addison "Wild Jack" Randall, shared their bachelor bliss in a comfortable Malibu cottage. Their life together was a perfect song until, one day, O'Keefe upped and married divorcée Louise Stanley. Carroll and Randall thereupon moved into smaller quarters and might be there yet had not O'Keefe, returning from a location trip some months later, discovered that his pal, "Wild Jack," had galloped off with the affections of his lovely bride. He promptly sued for divorce and, when the decree became final, "Wild Jack" took the former Mrs. O'Keefe into the Randall clan. casually sauntered toward them and took her place on the line, the jobless almost swooned. Who wouldn't? Ann Sheridan, under suspension by Warner Bros., and technically unemployed, had come to town for her weekly $18 compensation and no amount of stares or wisecracks was going to cheat her of it! "Why shouldn't I collect?" asked Annie. "I've chipped in my share, and when I no workee, the studio no payee! Heck, a girl's got to live, doesn't she?"

MICKEY ROONEY

Mickey Rooney's a great little sport, and let no man say otherwise. The other afternoon, on the set of "Men of Boys' Town," Mick was doing a sequence with small-fry Darryl Hickman when he realized that Darryl was hamming and mugging all over the place in an attempt to steal his scenes. And did Rooney the Star rage and rant over this professional larceny? He did not! He permitted Darryl to have his fun and, when several takes had been completed, ambled up to Spencer Tracy who was chuckling on the side lines. "It's okay with me, Spence," said he. "Now I know how you feel when I'm in your scenes!"

SIDELIGHT ON CARY

Maids and matrons who would give their all to come into the daily presence of "easy-going" Cary Grant would do well to heed the story of one of Cary's former housekeepers. After a single month of service in the Grant ménage, that lady wearily quit her job! "Couldn't take another day of it," says she. "Mr. Grant was driving me daffy! He has a terrific cleanliness phobia and conducts a daily dust-hunt on every piece of furniture in the house! I believe in a clean house, too, but don't like being handed a note each morning telling me I skipped three-quarters of an inch on the bureau top. Mind you, there's nothing mean about Mr. Grant but, if he were a woman, I think his friends would pack him off to a home for fussy old maids!"

GARY AND THE GEISHA

Miss Kazuko Yamamoto, tiny, satin-skinned queen of Tokyo's geishas, has one foot on the road to ruin. Miss Yamamoto, the only geisha to ever bob her hair, don modern clothes and become an American movie fan, has long been famous as a precedent-breaker, but her latest deed may prove her undoing. She's let it be known that she's passionately in love with Gary Cooper! She's aware that Gary has a wife, and a daughter, too, but no such trifling items can throw a damper on her Japanese ardor. She even admits that although kissing in public is a criminal offense in her country, she'd plant her lips on Gary's before the Imperial Palace itself. Her second choice is Charles Boyer, but she wouldn't risk as much for him. Says he'd have to step inside.

OUR TOWNE

Heartiest chuckle of the month is contributed by Gene Towne, 50 per cent of the zany writing team of Towne and Baker. Gene went to Ciro's the other evening to celebrate the completion of a new story and ran into a chubby-chinned producer who felt like celebrating, too. The pair settled in a quiet corner and were shortly joined by a bottle of champagne and then another and another. Towne, who is as great a salesman as he is a writer, began to improvise a screen story and did such a fine selling job that, before the night was out, the producer handed him a check for $10,000 for an idea Towne hadn't even dreamed of a few hours earlier! The following morning, the pair sobered up and got together for a story conference and, after much hemming and hawing, it was discovered that neither could remember a single line of the plot! Back went the ten grand to the producer—and on the water wagon went our friend Mr. Towne.

HEDY IN EXILE

Don't go forgetting the Hedy Lamarr-John Howard romance just because you're not handed a daily reminder by your favorite columnist. It's still blazing, and the only reason the publicity's died down is that Hedy's been ordered by the court to keep her nose out of nightclubs and her name out of newsprint if she wants to retain custody of her adopted baby son. Hedy almost lost little Jimmy by leaving Gene Markey's bed and board, but when she came before the judge she likened herself to a woman whose husband had just died and asked if a child would be deprived of its mother under such circumstances. The grim analogy won Hedy the right to keep her son another year, but the memory of her plea still makes Markey squirm.

LIFE WITH FATHER

Jane Withers doesn't object to Darryl Zanuck as a studio father, but she definitely would not want him as her real-life pa. Jane's heard stories of how Mr. Z. trains his youngsters and the Zanuck Plan doesn't appeal to her. It seems Zanuck abhors fearfulness in children and has worked out some novel schemes to build the courage of his own youngsters. For example, one afternoon when daughter Darrylin wasn't looking, he slipped a harmless but slithery snake into her pocket. When she reached in for a lollipop, out came the squirming reptile and along came her dad to tell her why she mustn't be frightened! Zanuck also scrapped his children's fear of water by teaching them to swim when they were infants. Now all three kids must pop out of bed each morning and take a pre-breakfast workout across their pool, come sticky weather or frosty.

CLAUSE-TROPHOBIA

William Powell and Henry Fonda are both married men. As such, they enjoy married men's responsibilities, and neither can afford to be tossed out of his job because of a fight with a studio boss. That's why both have had unique clauses written into their contracts. Fonda knows the only reason he'd ever want to leave the Fox fold would be to do Thornton Wilder's "Heaven Is My Destination" should it be adapted into play form. His agreement with the studio, therefore, stipulates clearly that there will be no hard feelings should he ever pull up stakes and head for Broadway and "Heaven." Bill Powell's stipulation is a bit screwier. For years, Bill has had an unholy and unfounded fear that he would be asked to portray Cyrano de Bergerac, Durante-nosed hero of the Rostand play of the same name. As insurance against that, he extracted a written promise from his Metro bosses that, though they might ask him to portray anyone from Nell Gwynne to Romeo, they'd reserve the Cyrano role for Bob Taylor or one of the other boys.

IT WAS IN THE CARDS

A newcomer, trying to crash the golden gates of Hollywood, would do well to land Connie Bennett as his agent. Richard Ainley will testify to that. Ainley barnstormed with Connie and her stage play last year, and when Connie returned to the coast, he came right with her. For several weeks he angled for audiences with studio bigwigs, but met with success of zero proportions. Then, just as it appeared he would have to hit the road again, Connie took matters into her own hands. She went over to Jack Warner's home for one of her regular poker sessions and, before the evening was out, Richard Ainley, with no previous movie experience, was in possession of a Warner Bros. contract guaranteeing him $650 weekly for the next fifty-two weeks! No, we don't have Connie's phone number. Or Mr. Ainley's, either!

BEDTIME STORY

Lupe Velez will probably be "Big Boy" Williams' little woman by the time you read this. Lupe, who had originally planned an October marriage, postponed her wedding because, as she explains, "I married Weissmuller in October. That was a lousy marriage for me and brought bad luck. I didn't want to risk it again." In a conversation with Lupe, we learned that her greatest pre-marital problem was the decoration of her boudoir in "Big Boy's" home. She simply couldn't decide whether to retain her own black lacquered bedroom suite with its ten-foot-wide bed, or buy new furniture with a "beeger" bed. One thing Lupe was positive about, however, was that her room must be forty-five feet long. "It must be tremendous," said she, "because I want space for a fireplace, a bar, my piano and an icebox. You know me. I spend half my life in my bedroom."

NO ACTORS WANTED!

After only a few months of wedded life, Binnie Barnes has discovered a fly in her marital ointment. Binnie can't stand leading men—and Mike Frankovich, her sports announcer groom, has broken down and admitted he wants to be a leading man! The disease set in when Mike accompanied Binnie on a cross-country personal appearance tour and found himself swamped with fan mail and requests for autographed photographs. He immediately developed a streak of ham so wide, Binnie's threatening to cut it out with a knife. But the odds are she'll cool down about an acting career for her husband. The pair has been offered a not-to-be-sneezed-at sum to co-star in a Broadway play—and Binnie is an extremely practical girl. She and Mike keep little flour sacks in their bedroom into which they pour their extra nickels and dimes against a rainy day. And they want to fill those sacks. So maybe Mike will be an actor after all!

OUR MISCHA

Since the morning Mischa Auer picked up his newspaper and learned he was separated from his wife, his life has taken on an entirely new complexion. Hollywood bachelorettes who previously ignored him are now giving him the eye and asking numerous intimate questions about Mischa the Man. We don't pretend to know all the answers but the following tidbits may tell you whether he's the type that could make your heart bounce and bound. (a) He always tops his breakfast with a stein of beer and a bag of pretzels. (b) He's good-natured and, to prove it, presented his beautiful Encino ranch to his wife as a "goodbye to love" gift. (c) He loves to play the concertina. (d) His principal hobby is photography. Although his favorite subject is his son, he once took a picture of Broderick Crawford that was so good, Crawford ordered 1500 to send to his fans. (e) He studies his next day's lines in the bathtub. (f) His dearest possession is a costly Storytone piano equipped with tubes and a loud speaker. By twirling a knob on the instrument it can be converted into eight different types of pianos, varying from a tinkling spinet to a booming concert Steinway. (g) All his victrola records are Strauss waltzes. (h) No matter where he lives he must have a huge painting of Czar Nicholas of Russia hanging over his dining-room table. And there you have him, ladies. Mischa "Heathcliffe" Auer, the reason girls leave home—and go into convents.

Sonja Henie

Bette Davis

Ray Milland

BABY TALK

After seven years of married life Charles Boyer is having his first painful encounter with Monsieur Stork. Not that the great Boyer is about to become a father. Nothing like it! He's merely suffering because Margaret Sullavan is about to become a mother! It seems Boyer and Maggie are co-starring in "Back Street"—and Maggie's third baby is due any minute. In order to beat the stork the picture is being produced in frantic haste, and Boyer, accustomed to leisurely lunches, rests between scenes and 6 o'clock quitting time, must now hop about like a younger edition Mickey Rooney so that no delays can be hung on him! Boyer's not complaining, but the studio head responsible for bringing the picture in on time makes up for him. Moans he: "When we had John Barrymore on the lot we had to build our shooting schedule around a court calendar. Now that we have Sullavan, we have to build it around a stork calendar!

STARDOM DEFERRED

Tyrone Power, who's done so much to get so many kids started in films, will be amazed when he learns that he's the reason Bob Shaw has had such a tough time getting a break. Darkly handsome Bob has been under contract to the same studio as Ty for a long while, but officials have been afraid to give him juicy roles and a build-up for fear feminine fans would hail him as a "new Tyrone Power," thereby injuring Ty's heartthrob value. Nine-year-old Joan Carroll is another who got the same deal. She was bound to a contract and held to small parts because she looked like a threat to Shirley Temple. Happily, however, both these youngsters are now on their way. Bob's bosses finally relented and lent him out for "Legacy," and Joan, who went to New York and became a sensation in "Panama Hattie," is currently being courted by several major studios who want her to stage a comeback as the "new Joan Carroll!"

STAR BLIGHT

If you think movie stars are calm, cool creatures who could meet kings, gods or their Maker without a ruffle in composure, you've got another think coming. Actually, many of the biggest names in pictures have less poise before an audience than little Susie Zilch has before her Sunday school class. For example, Martha Scott, making a recent appearance on a radio show, wore dark glasses throughout so that she couldn't see her studio audience and become upset. And Charles Laughton, veteran stage star, still will not appear on the boards unless a brilliant spotlight hits him full in the face, practically blinding him and completely blacking out the folks down in front.

SONJA'S FOLLIES

The fates are giving Sonja Henie an awful shoving around these days. First, Sonja had lawsuit trouble. She was sued by an agent who was willing to call the whole thing quits for $20,000. Sonja rejected the proposal, fought her case, lost it and had to pay the agent $77,000! Next, 60 members of her Ice Revue troupe balked at rehearsals the day before they were to start their tour and refused to go back to work until they were given substantial salary lifts. And now, to crown her woes, word's been brought to her that Hollywood high school students have taken her off their list of screen favorites because they object to her marriage to Dan Topping! They poutingly protest she can't manage a career and a fortune at the same time and contend that by wedding a wealthy man she has failed in her duty to them.

DATELESS BETTE

Bette Davis, who's probably the greatest actress in films and a darned pretty trick besides, has more escort trouble than any girl we know. Eddie Albert would like to date her but is so afraid she'll turn him down he doesn't dare broach the subject. And Bette, in turn, is hankering for an evening of dancing with Cesar Romero but naturally can't phone him. She once did hint to a friend that she'd like to know Cesar better, but when Cesar heard of it he smiled regretfully and said he was sorry. "Sure I want to date Bette," he admitted. "Who wouldn't? But can you picture the two of us strolling into Ciro's? Everyone would say, 'Look at Romero. He's angling for publicity.' It wouldn't do either of us any good to have people thinking I was trading on Bette's fame."

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME

Brian Donlevy, well on his way to becoming an important star, will definitely be someone to be considered when he shoots Bob Taylor dead in their next picture. But even if he never killed Bob, Brian would still be worth a second glance. He's the man who owns the largest bathroom in Hollywood, and let no one forget it! After years of suffering in hotel two-by-fours, Brian has built his own home and indulged his oldest and goofiest yen by knocking a wall out of the architect's plans and converting two tremendous bedrooms into a single, perfectly huge bathroom just for himself!

(Continued on page 94)

Classic, Casual and Chic...

Classic for class! That's our motto and will be yours, too. America's contribution to fashion is the classic, always right and better than ever. Peter-Pan or open throat tailored collars; button fronts; pleats and full skirts that flatter. Perennial youth captured in the clothes that Americans love. All eyes on Spring in the 1941 classic hats and dresses. You can't get along without them.

Right. Tonic touch for midwinter; two tones are better than one. Grey for the blouse and belt trimming; dusty rose for the side-pleated, top-stitched skirt and sleeves. Under seven dollars; J. P. Stevens, Chicago.

Stitched straw beret. Under two dollars; Macy's, New York.

Genuine snake charmers. Three dollars; Kitty Kelly.

Left. A McKettrick classic with skirted front fullness in Wedgewood blue and white in stripe effect. Under six dollars; Arnold Constable, New York. Pert patent leather opera pumps, Kitty Kelly.

Above. Irresistible—a love—in light blue wool angora to wear as a dress or as a suit with a blouse underneath. Set-in fitted belt; dramatic pockets. Under seventeen dollars. Side roll, off-face felt hat. Under four dollars. Emily Shops.

Brown Morocco d'Orsay bow pumps; Ansonia Shoes.

Snow

GET OUT, GET OUT, WHEREVER YOU ARE

Home in the north—home in the south; or lucky you taking a trip.

Ski trains take you to your fun in the snow. The sun beckons on land and sea. Wear the season's gifts to fashion at a price. 1. In New York, Gimbels features a Brenda Gale ski suit. Navy blue wool and cotton gabardine; jaunty mess jacket, brass buttons; gold zippered pants; under fourteen dollars. Bright red regulation poplin hat and gloves; each under two dollars. 2. Combine your own: man-tailored ski pants in wool gabardine and a bright print waterproofed poplin jacket lined in snowy white. Each under eight dollars; Franklin Simon. 3. After skiing, for fun indoors, Brenda Gale's beer jacket, beige and brown flannel slack suit. Cozy! Under seven dollars; Gimbels.

3.

2.

1.

Sun

1.

1. There's something about a sailor slack suit in clear blue spun poplin. Trousers button on to blouse; rows of white braid trimming. Under eight dollars; Emily Shops. Authentics' wood jewelry.

2. Three cheers for the red, white and blue. Dance in jersey, broad blue and white stripes, jacketed in red; an emblem on the sleeve. Under seventeen dollars; Burdine's, Miami.

3. All the new details in an aquamarine Sacony sports dress: set-in ribbed waistband, stitched, gored skirt. Under eleven dollars; Burdine's. Back-fringed calot.

4. Ballerina-type play suit—jacket, backless and sleeveless dress, separate shorts. Combination red and white striped and plain chambray. Under five dollars; Emily Shops. Kitty Kelly Shoes.

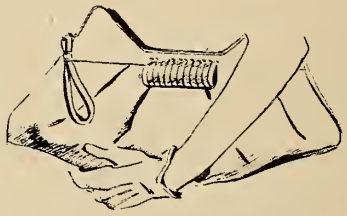
2.

4.

3.

PROP SHOP

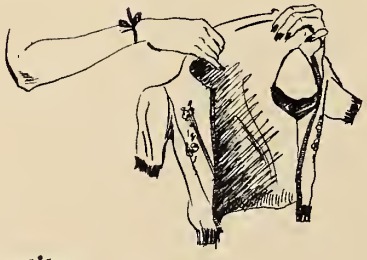
It's the little things that count though they don't cost much



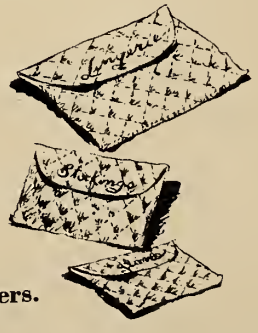
Wind a two-tone Persian colored knit scarf high on your head. $1.95; Lord and Taylor, N. Y.

Chosen by Joan Bennett in "The Son of Monte Cristo": antiqued gold clips. $1 each; Lord and Taylor, N. Y

Darling of Spring is a sheer white embroidered blouse, lace trimmed. $2; J. L. Hudson, Detroit.



The bigger the better; white washable capeskin bag. $2.95; Burdine's, Miami.



A hold-up! Ski-braces—Tyrolean fashion; 75c. Kleinert.

Merry, yellow rubber tomatoes, plastic chain. A Silson design. $1; McCreery's, N. Y.

New, petite pin-in sport shields; 35c. Young notions by Kleinert.

Going places? Use handy travel kits that you've made yourself. Singer Sewing Centers.

For information concerning fashions write to the Fashion Editor of MODERN SCREEN magazine

MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR

MRS. DAVID S. GAMBLE, JR.
(FREDERICA VANDERBILT WEBB)

MRS. NICHOLAS RIDGELY DU PONT

MRS. MARY ELIZABETH WHITNEY
(the former MRS. JOHN HAY WHITNEY)

MRS. ST. GEORGE DUKE (the former MRS. ANGIER BIDDLE DUKE)

MRS. ANTHONY J. DREXEL, III

AMERICAN PASSPORT

WHAT stamps you an American girl? Proclaims it in remotest corners of the globe?

That aura of bright, pervasive freshness. The conscious perfection of groomed hair, groomed nails, chic dress—twice-clean skin.

That cool freshness of petal-smooth skin is your American passport to Beauty. Cultivate it, as do so many members of leading American families—by devoted observance of the Pond's ritual:—

SMOOTH ON your face and neck clouds of tender, caressing Pond's Cold Cream. Then slap your cream-coated skin smartly for 3 full minutes. This deliciously slippy cream cleanses and softens. It mixes with dirt and make-up, the dried, dead cells on your skin—softens them and sets them free.

WIPE OFF all this softened debris with deft Pond's Tissues.

AGAIN SLAP with cream-laden fingers. And again clean off with caressing Pond's Tissues. These creamy spankings enhance both the cleansing and softening actions of Pond's. Lines seem less apparent, pores seem diminished.

FOLLOW with the COOL, WET FRAGRANCE of Pond's Skin Freshener.

COAT this freshened, dewy face with a layer of a distinctly other type of cream—Pond's Vanishing Cream. This cream's distinguishing duty is to disperse remaining harsh particles, aftermath of exposure, and leave your skin silky-smooth—pliant! Wait one full minute before wiping it off. Then see how it has left an indubitable mat finish on your skin. How competently it both receives and holds your powder!

Perform this ritual in full at least once, night or daytime. And in briefer form again whenever your skin and your make-up demand freshening. Keep your face ever cool, clean, sweet as a flower—as do millions of lovely American girls—with Pond's.

Send for Trial Case. Fill in and forward coupon below. Pond's, Dept. 9MS-CVB, Clinton, Conn.

So I may start my Pond's ritual at once, please send my trial kit of basic preparations I need, including the 3 famous Pond's Creams and 7 Pond's Powder shades. I enclose 10¢ for postage and packing.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR . . . MRS. DAVID S. GAMBLE, JR. . . . MRS. NICHOLAS RIDGELY DU PONT . . . MRS. ST. GEORGE DUKE . . . MRS. MARY ELIZABETH WHITNEY . . . MRS. ANTHONY J. DREXEL, III names which represent six great American families of culture, wealth and distinction. Each follows the Pond's ritual

(Continued from page 46)

NAME	MARRIED TO	DATE OF MARRIAGE	MATE'S PROFESSION	PREVIOUS MATES	CHILDREN	STATUS OF MARRIAGE
Bergman, Ingrid	Dr. Peter Lindstrom	July 10, 1937	Dentist	None	Tia, 1½	Long-distance devotion
Best, Edna	Nat Wolff	Feb. 6, 1940	Actors' agent	Seymour Beard, Herbert Marshall	Sarah, 6, by Marshall	Best in the West
Blondell, Joan	Dick Powell	Sept. 20, 1936	Actor	Geo. Barnes	Norman, 6, by Barnes; Ellen, 2½	Two Dreams Met
Bogart, Humphrey	Mayo Methot	Aug. 20, 1938	Actress	Helen Menken, Mary Phillips	None	Four bells
Bowdon, Dorris	Nunnally Johnson	Feb. 4, 1940	Producer-writer	None	None	"Okie"-dokeh
Boyd, William	Grace Bradley	June 5, 1937	Actress	Elinor Fair, Dorothy Sebastian	None	Riding high
Boyer, Charles	Pat Paterson	Feb. 14, 1934	Actress	None	None	Toujours
Brennan, Walter	Ruth Wells	About 1920	Non-prof.	None	Two sons; one daughter	In line for an Oscar
Brown, Joe E.	Kathryn McGraw	Dec. 25, 1915	Nurse	None	Mike Frankovich, 27, adopted; Don, 24; Joe, 22; Mary, 10; Kathryn, 8	Good bet for golden wedding
Bruce, Virginia	J. Walter Ruben	Dec. 18, 1937	Producer	John Gilbert	Susan Ann, 7, by Gilbert	Three down and life to go
Bryan, Jane	Justin Dart	Dec. 31, 1939	Businessman	None	None	Nothing else matters
Burnette, Smiley	Dallas MacDonald	Oct. 26, 1936	Writer	None	Linda, 2½; Stephen, 8 mos.; both adopted	In the Autry tradition
Burns, Bob	Harriet Foster	May 30, 1937	Formerly Bob's secretary	One	Barbara, 2½; Robin 1½; Stephen Foster, 3 mos.; Robin, Jr., 19, by first wife	Improves with age
Burns, George	Gracie Allen	Jan. 7, 1926	Comedienne	None	Sandra, 6; Ronnie, 5, adopted	Still "Burns and Allen"
Cagney, James	Frances Vernon	About 1928	Former vaudeville partner	None	May adopt red-headed baby boy	Object Lesson for Newlyweds
Carey, Harry	Olive Golden	Spring, 1917	His first leading lady	None	Dobie, 20; daughter, 18	Looks permanent
Carlson, Richard	Mona Mayfield	June 11, 1939	Model	None	None	Not newsworthy
Carradine, John	Ardanelle Cosner	Dec. 31, 1935	Non-prof.	None	John, 4; Bruce, 8, by wife's former marriage	As You'd Like It
Carson, Jack	Kay St. Germaine	Aug. 21, 1940	Singer	One	None	Just plain wonderful
Chaney, Lon, Jr.	Patsy Beck	Oct. 1, 1937	Non-prof.	One	Lon, 12; Ron, 10	Right as rain
Chaplin, Charles	Paulette Goddard	June, 1934	Actress	Mildred Harris, Lita Grey	Sidney, 16; Charles, 15	You've probably heard
Colbert, Claudette	Dr. Joel Pressman	Dec. 24, 1935	Surgeon	Norman Foster	None	Don't believe the gossips
Colman, Ronald	Benita Hume	Sept. 30, 1938	Actress	Thelma Raye	None	The sun never sets
Colonna, Jerry	Florence Charlotte	Nov. 2, 1930	Non-prof.	None	None	Not bad, not bad
Comingore, Dorothy	Richard Collins	June, 1939	Writer	None	First due momentarily	Romeo and Juliet were amateurs
Cooper, Gary	Veronica Balfe	Dec. 6, 1933	Socialite	None	Maria, 3	Another Cooper triumph
Crisp, Donald	Jane Murfin	Aug. 15, 1932	Writer	None	None	Mature and serene
Crosby, Bing	Dixie Lee	Sept. 29, 1930	Actress	None	Gary, 7½; Phillip and Dennis, 6½; Lindsay, 3	Solid sending
Crosby, Bob	June Kuhn	Sept. 22, 1938	Socialite	None	Cathleen, 1½	" "
Cummings, Robert	Vivian Janis	Feb. 27, 1935	Ziegfeld beauty	None	None	In the clouds
D'Arcy, Alexander	Arleen Whelan	Sept. 2, 1940	Actress	None	None	Red hot
Darro, Frankie	Aloha Wray	July 30, 1939	Actress	None	None	Still baby-talking
Davis, Joan	Serenus Wills	Aug. 31, 1931	Joan's manager	None	Beverly, 7½	No time for comedy
Davis, Johnny	Martha Garber	Apr. 1, 1934	Non-prof.	None	Judith, 1½	Scoffs at scandal
Dee, Frances	Joel McCrea	Oct. 20, 1933	Actor	None	Joel, 6; David, 5	Why lawyers starve
Dekker, Albert	Esther Guerini	Apr. 4, 1929	Actress	None	Jan, 3; John, 6 mos.	Heaven can wait
Del Rio, Dolores	Cedric Gibbons	Aug. 8, 1930	Studio art director	Jaime Del Rio	None	Religion blocking divorce
Devine, Andy	Dorothy House	Oct. 20, 1933	Actress	One	Tad, 6; Dennis, 2	Somebody loves a fat man
Dietrich, Marlene	Rudolph Sieber	May 17, 1924	Director	None	Maria, 15	Kept on ice
Dinehart, Alan	Mozelle Britton	June 28, 1933	Actress	None	Son, 5	Standpatter
Dix, Richard	Virginia Webster	June 29, 1934	Secretary	Winifred Coe	Daughter, 8, by first marriage; Richard and Robert, 5½, by second	Matrimonial marathon

(Continued on page 62)

Junior Debs

Hollywood's wee ones give their chic mamas some stiff competition!

Juanita and Rita Quigley spectate at the showing of fashions designed by Emily Wilkens especially for youngsters.

Blond and cherubic Sandra Burns personifies sophistication at six in a house coat and the up hair-do.

Joan Benny prefers shirts and shorts, but is a dazzler nonetheless in her crisp, butterfly-embroidered organdie.

Joan Bennett's and Gene Markey's Melinda wore plaid and was escorted by her dog in a twin coat.

Left, Joan Benny models her pink, beaver-trimmed ensemble that stole the show. It features infinitesimal spats!

Right, George Burns only had eyes for his leg-conscious Sandra, who changed to a dream of pinafore.

(Continued from page 60)

NAME	MARRIED TO	DATE OF MARRIAGE	MATE'S PROFESSION	PREVIOUS MATES	CHILDREN	STATUS OF MARRIAGE
Donat, Robert	Ella Voysey	Aug., 1929	Actress	None	Joanna, 9; John, 7; Brian, 4	Disrupted by war
Donlevy, Brian	Marjorie Lane	Dec. 22, 1936	Singer	One	None	Neighbors can't talk
Douglas, Melvyn	Helen Gahagan	Apr. 5, 1931	Actress	One	Peter, 7; Mary Helen, 2½; Son, 17, by 1st wife	Democracy at home
Duna, Steffi	Dennis O'Keefe	Oct. 18, 1940	Actor	John Carroll	Juliana, 3, by Carroll	Fair chance for survival
Dunn, James	Mary Gifford	Dec. 25, 1937	Non-prof.	None	None	Keeping its skirts clean
Dunne, Irene	Dr. Francis Griffin	July 16, 1927	Dentist	None	Mary Frances, 6, adopted	Something to sing about
Eddy, Nelson	Ann Franklin	Jan. 18, 1939	Socialite	None	Sidney Franklin, Jr., by wife's first marriage	Worth waiting for
Eilers, Sally	Harry Joe Brown	Oct. 22, 1933	Studio exec.	Hoot Gibson	Harry Joe, Jr., 6	Beats a career
Ellison, James	Grace Durkin	Apr. 25, 1937	Actress	None	Dirk, 8 mos.	Gossip-proof
Erwin, Stuart	June Collyer	July 10, 1931	Actress	None	Stuart, Jr., 8; June Dorothea, 5	June dittos Sally Eilers
Fairbanks, Douglas	Mary Lee Epling Hartford	Apr. 22, 1939	Socialite	Joan Crawford	Daphne, 9 mos.	Nothing here, Mr. Winchell
Fairbanks, Lucile	Owen Crump, Jr.	Oct. 12, 1940	Writer	None	None	Plotted for success
Fields, Gracie	Monty Banks	Mar. 18, 1940	Actor	Archie Pitts	None	Field(s) day
Fitzgerald, Geraldine	Edward Lindsay-Hogg	Nov. 18, 1936	Song-writer	None	Michael, 8 mos.	Short-cut to Paradise
Flynn, Errol	Lili Damita	June 19, 1935	Actress	None	None	Three-ring circus
Fonda, Henry	Frances Seymour Brokaw	Sept. 16, 1936	Socialite	Margaret Sullavan	Jayne Seymour, 3; Peter, 1	Closed corporation
Fontaine, Joan	Brian Aherne	Aug. 20, 1939	Actor	None	None	Almost poetic
Foran, Dick	Ruth Piper Hollingsworth	June 7, 1937	Socialite	None	John Michael, 2½; James Patrick, 1½	On the brink of divorce
Foster, Preston	Gertrude Warren	June 27, 1925	Teacher	None	Stephanie, 2½, adopted	Hardy perennial
Gable, Clark	Carole Lombard	Mar. 29, 1939	Actress	Josephine Dillon, Rhea Langham	None	Out of this world
Garfield, John	Roberta Mann	Jan. 28, 1933	Non-prof.	None	Katherine, 2	Love on the run
Gargan, William	Pat Kenny	Jan. 19, 1928	Former chorine	None	Barrie, 10; Leslie, 8	First and last
Gaynor, Janet	Gilbert Adrian	Aug. 14, 1939	Designer	Lydell Peck	Robin, 6 mos.	Designed for living
Gilbert, Billy	Ella McKenzie	Sept. 12, 1937	Actress	None	Barry, 11, adopted	Nothing to sneeze at
Gleason, James	Lucille Webster	Aug. 22, 1906	Actress	None	Russell, 30	Till death us do part
Gleason, Russell	Cynthia Hobart	June 9, 1938	Actress	None	Michael, 1½	In his father's footsteps
Goddard, Paulette	Charles Chaplin	June, 1934	Actor-producer	None	None	Slated for Mexican divorce
Gorcey, Leo	Katherine Marvis	May 16, 1939	Non-prof.	None	None	No "tough guy" at home
Greenwood, Charlotte	Martin Broomes	Dec. 22, 1924	Composer-producer	None	None	No kick coming
Grey, Nan	Jackie Westrope	May 4, 1939	Jockey	None	None	Track fast and clear
Gurie, Sigrid	Dr. Lawrence Spangard	Aug. 6, 1939	Physician	T. W. Stewart	None	Nothing ails them
Hale, Alan	Gretchen Hartman	Sept. 19, 1914	His former leading lady	None	Alan, Jr., 19; Karen, 16	Hale and hearty
Hall, Jon	Frances Langford	June 4, 1938	Singer	None	None	South Sea idyll
Hardwicke, Sir Cedric	Helena Pickard	Jan. 8, 1928	Actress	None	Edward, 8	Foundering
Hasso, Signey	Harry Hasso	Nov. 12, 1933	Cameraman	None	One son, 6	Temporarily suspended
Hayden, Russell	June Clayton	Jan. 6, 1939	Actress	None	Sandra, 6 mos.	Branded for happiness
Hayes, George "Gabby"	Dorothy Earle	Mar. 4, 1914	Actress	None	None	A long, successful run
Hayward, Louis	Ida Lupino	Nov. 17, 1938	Actress	None	None	Ida-eel
Hayworth, Rita	Eddie Judson	May 30, 1937	Texas oil operator	None	None	Love congas all
Henie, Sonja	Dan Topping	July 4, 1940	Millionaire sportsman	None	None	No frost on this one
Herbert, Hugh	Rose Epstein	Summer, '14	Former vaudeville partner	None	None	Still pitching woo
Hersholt, Jean	Via Anderson	Apr. 11, 1914	Non-prof.	None	Alan, 25	Accent on romance
Hervey, Irene	Allan Jones	July 26, 1936	Actor	One	Jack, 3; Gail, 9, by first marriage	No sour notes
Hobart, Rose	Wm. Grosvenor, Jr.	Oct. 15, 1932	Chemist	None	None	Proper ingredients present

(Continued on page 82)

IT'S BEAUTY NEWS FROM HOLLYWOOD!

LORETTA YOUNG

Now YOU can give your skin screen star care—right in your own home

Lovely Loretta Young shows you just how screen stars protect million-dollar complexions. Now you can give your skin regular beauty facials just as they do. You'll find Active-Lather Facials with Lux Toilet Soap remove dust, dirt, stale cosmetics thoroughly—help you keep skin smooth!

Milder!
Costly Perfume!
Pure!
ACTIVE lather!

9 out of 10 Screen Stars—clever women everywhere—use it to protect loveliness

IT'S A SCOOP!

Hattie McDaniel—in character

My, my! Here's Scarlett O'Hara's "Mammy" to tell us how to make her favorite Southern specialties

Now that "Gone With The Wind" has celebrated its first anniversary in such fine style down in Atlanta and is being released all over the country at popular prices, it occurred to us that millions of new admirers would soon be added to the countless people who already have enjoyed Hattie McDaniel's fine portrayal of "Mammy" in that epic of the old South. It seemed high time, therefore, to try and secure for our cooking columns some of those special recipes of "Mammy" McDaniel's we had been hearing about for years.

We finally caught up with her in the beauty parlor where, completely at our mercy, she promised to tell us how to prepare her justly famous dishes.

"Only you'll have to wait a while," she declared, "because, you see, I cook by instinct like so many of my race. But I know you'll want things all set down clearly, so's folks can follow them easily. I'll have to make some of those favorites of mine and write down how much I use as I go along."

She proved as good as her word for in a day or two along came these recipes, together with her favorite menu and some practical cooking suggestions.

So, if you have ever wondered what kind of a meal Mammy herself would have served to the O'Haras, here is your golden opportunity to learn—thanks to Hattie McDaniel.

Mammy's Southern Dinner Menu

Plantation Chicken with Dumplings
Corn Bread *Onions in String Beans Cream Sauce
Cranberry Jelly
Tomato and Watercress Salad
McDaniel Dressing
Cracker Cake
Coffee

or Sweet Corn Pudding*

Chicken With Dumplings

Dress, clean and cut up a large (year-old) chicken. Put in a stew pan and cover with about 2 quarts of boiling water. Add 1 small onion, sliced; 2 stalks of celery, chopped; 2 sprigs of parsley and 4 peppercorns. Cover and cook slowly until tender. Add 2 teaspoons salt the last hour of cooking. Remove chicken, strain liquor and skim off any excess fat. Measure chicken stock—there should be 6 cups, so either add water or boil down stock to make required amount. Thicken with ½ cup flour (directions for thickening gravies will be found in the Special Suggestions at the end of this article.) Cook until smooth and thickened, stirring constantly. Return chicken to this gravy, add dumplings and continue cooking as directed in dumpling recipe.

Dumplings

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon shortening
¾ cup water

Sift flour, measure, sift again with baking powder and salt. Rub in shortening with your fingers. Add water gradually, mixing it in with a knife. Drop dumpling dough from tip of spoon into stewpan, an inch apart and resting on the chicken so they don't drop down into the gravy. Cover pan and steam dumplings — without removing cover—for 12 minutes.

Corn Bread

1½ cups flour
4½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
¾ cup cornmeal (yellow or white)
1 egg, well beaten
2 tablespoons melted shortening
1 cup milk

Sift flour, measure; add baking powder, salt and sugar and sift again. Mix in cornmeal. Beat egg until light, add melted and cooled shortening and the milk. Stir into dry mixture, beat thoroughly, and turn into well-greased, shallow, square pan. Bake in hot oven (400°F.) 25 minutes, or until done.

Sweet Corn Pudding

Chop fine 2 cups whole grain canned corn, or cooked green corn when in season. Add 3 eggs, slightly beaten, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper, 1 tablespoon melted butter. Stir in 1½ cups scalded milk. Turn into greased casserole; bake in slow oven (350°F.) until knife inserted in pudding comes out clean—about 40 minutes.

Cranberry Jelly

Pick over and wash 1 pound (4 cups) cranberries; add 1 cup boiling water and boil gently for 20 minutes. Rub through a sieve, add 2 cups sugar, cook 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Turn into a mold which has been rinsed with cold water. Chill, unmold and serve.

McDaniel Dressing

Grate an onion into a bowl. Add 1 teaspoon each of salt, paprika and prepared mustard, ¼ cup sugar and ½ cup vinegar mixed with ½ cup water. Stir in 1 can (condensed) tomato soup and 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce. Add 1 cup salad oil gradually and beat with egg beater until thick. A clove of garlic also may be added, if desired. Keep in covered quart jar in refrigerator.

"And here's just the dessert to have when you expect company and don't mind being a little bit extravagant," suggests Hattie McDaniel. However, since this recipe of hers serves 12 people you can divide these amounts in half, still have enough for the average size family and not feel extravagant at all!

Cracker Cake

1 (pound size) box graham crackers
1 cup butter (½ pound)
2¼ cups powdered sugar (1 pound)
6 eggs, separated

Fine foods were traditional on plantations like "Tara."

By Marjorie Deen

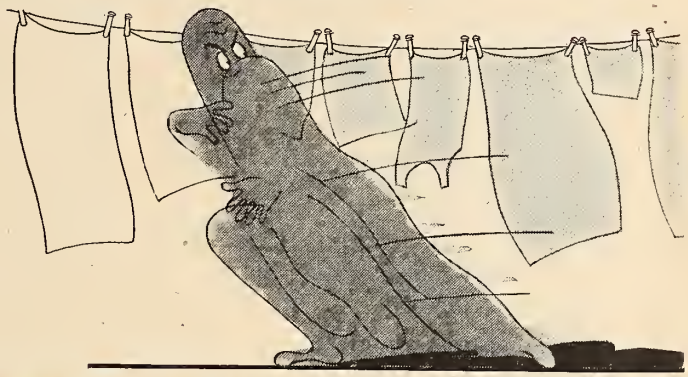
1 cup coarsely chopped pecans
1 cup (½ pint) whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla

Roll out or grind crackers to make fine crumbs. Melt half of the butter and mix it with crumbs. Cream the remaining butter, add sugar a little at a time, creaming well. Separate eggs, add yolks to sugar mixture one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Add pecans and the cream which has been whipped until stiff. Take a loaf pan, line neatly with waxed paper—allowing enough paper to have it hang over on each side of pan. Put a layer of crumbs in bottom of pan, then a layer of filling, then more crumbs and filling alternately until all has been used. Have the last layer of crumbs. Cover with waxed paper and chill 12 hours in refrigerator. Lift out of pan carefully by grasping paper at the sides. Top with additional whipped cream.

Special Suggestions

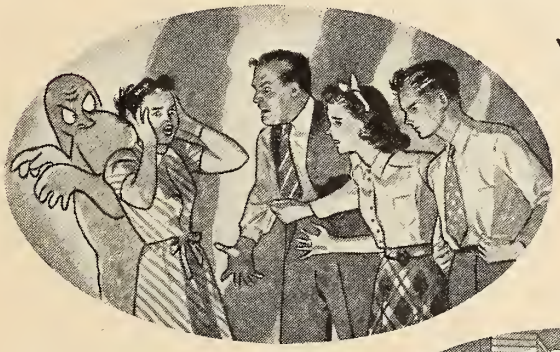
"There are some little cooking secrets of mine I want to give you, too," Mammy wrote, "and here they are:

"To thicken gravy—when making the chicken dish I gave you, and stews and pot roasts as well—put the necessary amount of flour in a small jar, like a salad-dressing jar. Add enough water to cover it, put top on jar and shake about 1 minute. Results are perfect.



"Here's the way I do onions to keep the odor from penetrating my fingers. I either grease my fingers or hold the onions under water while peeling.

"Be sure your oven is good and hot before you put in your biscuits.



"To flour chicken for frying, mix flour, salt and pepper in heavy brown paper bag. Add chicken pieces which have been wiped and dried. Shake the bag and chicken will be well floured.

"When you are going to cream butter it's always a good idea to let it stand at room temperature until it's soft. Makes it so much easier to work with."

The SINISTER SHADE fled from our home!

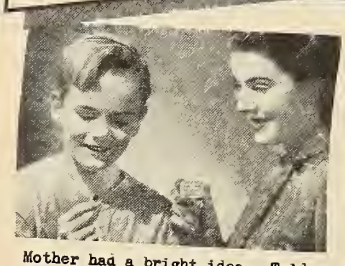
Every week an ugly, sinister shadow darkened our home. My clothes never came out of the wash completely clean. Things reached the point where washday was a nightmare to me . . .

You can imagine that what I heard from the various members of the family was even worse! John and Junior fussed and complained about the dull, gray color of their shirts. Dotty's delicate party frocks were a fright. And my lovely linens . . . ugh!

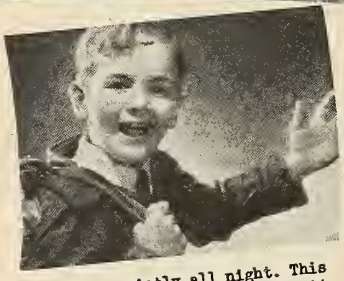
It was a lucky day when I got a peek at my neighbor's linens. Such snowy, sweet-smelling things! "Try Fels-Naptha Soap," she said, "and your things will look just like these. It's the gentle naptha and richer, golden soap that get all the dirt out."

It worked like a charm. With about half the usual trouble, shirts, linens, dainty dresses—came out so clean and sweet I scarcely recognized them. I'll never forget the day Fels-Naptha Soap banished The Sinister Shade.

For free introductory bar of Fels-Naptha Soap, write Fels & Co., Dept. 11-B, Phila., Pa.



Golden bar or Golden chips—
Fels-Naptha
banishes "Tattle-Tale Gray"



Mrs. T---- handles a Difficult Case

Billy raised an awful fuss today when I tried to give him a laxative. I even promised him new skates - but he just wouldn't take the stuff.

Mother had a bright idea. Told me to try giving Billy some Ex-Lax. He balked at first, but one bite and he was all smiles! Simply loved that chocolate taste!

Billy slept quietly all night. This morning Ex-Lax worked fine - didn't upset him a bit. I'll never have to bribe him to take a laxative again!

The action of Ex-Lax is thorough, yet gentle! No shock. No strain. No weakening after-effects. Just an easy, comfortable bowel movement that brings blessed relief. Try Ex-Lax next time you need a laxative. It's good for every member of the family.

10¢ and 25¢

LADY HAMILTON

(Continued from page 29)

found out they were all alike and it was too late. But I didn't deceive Charles by pretending to be what I am not. He knew before he promised to marry me—and I'm different now—not only my clothes, but inside. I'm good now. I know I'm good!" Suddenly she burst out in a full realization of what had happened, "Why did he play this trick on me? Why did he lie to me? What am I doing here?"

It was a long time before Sir William could make her understand. The truth was that he had seen her with his nephew in London and had wanted her from the moment he'd laid eyes on her. Charles, needing five thousand pounds for his debts, had received the money with real gratitude and with no qualms had sent in exchange to his uncle the beautiful Greek statuary, the paintings—and Emma.

"I'm not going to be your mistress. I refuse to stay!" she stormed. "The buyer is as bad as the seller!"

BUT Sir William was patient. She was young, he said, and the young heal quickly. He urged her to sleep and wait a few days, and he spread before her all he could give. "You'll learn singing and languages from the finest of tutors. Everyone of account in Europe comes to my house. You'll dine with famous soldiers, artists and statesmen," he promised, "but, of course, you can't be presented at court."

At length Emma went to her room. She lay on her bed and talked with her mother. And finally she fell asleep. She dreamed of her whole life—even of when she was a little slavey wielding a vigorous but unwilling scrub-brush before she did the Dance of the Seven Veils. And through her dream ran the rhythm of her mother's voice, "We'll go back to London—back to London—back to London." And then it changed to the rhythm of Sir William's words, "Forget London. Charles is a blackguard. Of course, you can't be presented at court—you can't be presented at court!"

Suddenly Emma awakened. "Why shouldn't I be presented at court?" she demanded.

And she was. And when it happened, Sir William was beside her.

Emma had been Lady Hamilton for three years when she waked on another morning. The sound of cannon shattered her sleep. From her window she saw a battleship. It was offering a salute to the King and Queen of Naples, to be sure, but it really should have been to Emma. Three years had done a lot for her. The new advantages had made her no less beautiful and far more accomplished and, by now, even the Queen would no more think of buying a new gown without Emma's advice than the henpecked King would think of asserting his own ideas when the Queen stated hers. In fact Emma was going to help her Royal Highness decide some points of fashion that very morning.

Before leaving for the palace she sailed into Sir William's study. She took no notice of an English Captain who rose, slim and erect, from his chair as she entered. She went straight to the point with her husband. "William, dear, what is this absurd business about the French Ambassador? I want him for the party Sunday night, and Gavin comes telling me about some stupid political tension."

Sir William introduced the Captain of the "Agamemnon," saying that he could best answer her question. She turned to the man and reproved him for waking her with his guns.

"I'm sorry," he said to that and, to her first question, "We're at war with France." It was clear that he was eager to complete his mission to Sir William and be gone. So Emma was persuaded to leave.

"We have captured Toulon," said the Captain when she had left, "but the Admiral needs ten thousand troops to hold it. It would take too long to bring them from England, but our treaty with Naples provides for such cooperation. The Admiral expects you to secure these troops from the King of Naples without delay."

He was horrified when Sir William said that the necessary application for an audience with the King and then the further negotiations would take some time. No one had hurried in Naples since the earthquake in 1752. While Sir William went into his office to begin drafting the application, the angry, impatient Captain strode about looking at the art treasures and came to a halt before Romney's picture of Emma as "Circe."

"Yes, that's me," said Emma, who had been listening at the keyhole, quite as her mother had taught her, and who now came in. "What would you say if I would get you the troops like that?"

THE Captain was not a ladies' man and he most certainly doubted her ability in an affair like this. Emma was not one to be doubted. She had an appointment with the Queen that very hour, did she not? And was not the Queen the real King of Naples? In no time at all the Captain found himself with Emma listening to that same Queen browbeat her spouse in a domestic quarrel carried on in Italian, of which he could not understand one word. In the midst of this, Emma and the Queen discussed the troops.

The Captain and the Lady returned to Sir William's study just as he was finishing the application which might have got five thousand troops in three weeks or more.

"We asked for twenty thousand," stated Emma, "and we got ten. Here." She gave him the document assuring them.

At this moment a young midshipman entered and handed a message to the Captain, who introduced the boy. "My stepson," he said.

So, the gruff and charming fellow was married and this young man was his chaperone! "How comforting for your wife!" exclaimed Emma.

The message summoned the Captain to proceed at once to Sardinia.

"Next time you come," said Emma, brushing aside his protestations of gratitude for her help, "there's no need to blow your cannons off. Just drop in without knocking. What did you say your name was?"

"Nelson," he said and left swiftly.

1794—1795—1796—1797—1798—the dates were written in flame. Through the blood and misery of the French revolutionary years the peace of all Europe was wiped out by the will of one man who rose to menace and dominate, one man who wanted to conquer the whole world—Napoleon Bonaparte.

The "Vanguard," with the British ensign hanging limply from its mast, lay off Capri. In the Admiral's quarters, a man tramped angrily up and down. He was so changed by the years of battle that only when he spoke could one realize it was Nelson. His stepson, Josiah, read to him his appointment as Knight of the Bath for his brilliant victories. But he was disconsolate. The oil was low in the ship's lamps. His men needed food and ammunition. One could not catch Bonaparte with honors or with the new regulations of silly detail that came through from London. What were they thinking of there? He had sent Trowbridge ashore to get supplies from the King of Naples and the man had not come back.

Captain Hardy approached him. "Why don't we sail up to Naples and blow them out of their beds? They'd give us water and meat quickly enough then!" Like the other men, he was on edge.

"D'you expect me to fire on a neutral port?" demanded Nelson.

"Neutral against England!" snapped Hardy. "Trowbridge won't be back. He wore his uniform when he went ashore—the fool!"

But Trowbridge did come back and he brought someone with him.

"Where is the Admiral?" asked Emma.

The lamp, which had been dark to conserve oil, was lit. Then Emma saw him—and all that had happened to him. He pulled the black patch over one eye with the only hand he had left. Emma stared at the mutilated man. "I had no idea," she murmured. "They told us of your victories, but not of the price you paid."

NELSON laughed. "Please, my lady. Don't make a fuss about it. What is your news?"

"They are all terrified," reported Emma. "The King refused to see Sir William—refused, mind you, to see the British Ambassador! You can't conceive how the success of this nasty little Bonaparte has changed them. We're their friends, but they daren't show it."

"Don't they understand what I'm trying to do for them?" Nelson spoke furiously. "Bonaparte's fleet is in Egypt. For the first time in five years I know where they are! If I smash them up, I give Europe a chance to breathe again!"

But Emma had not come to him empty-handed. Once more she had seen her husband's failure and had gone to the Queen, who was panicky but from whom, nevertheless, Emma had wrung a mandate for the replenishing of the British Fleet under Admiral Nelson.

"You are even more lovely than five years ago," he said.

"Five years—or is it five centuries?" asked Emma.

They spoke of his wife whom he had not seen in all this time. But more than all else, they spoke of the war. Bonaparte had swallowed half of Europe.

"Now it's Egypt—and tomorrow it may be India," mourned Emma.

"We are alone but unafraid," smiled Nelson and she knew he was in a hurry to be off and at them.

"Goodbye, Sir Horatio," she said, stressing his new title. "It's a bit of a mouthful, isn't it?"

"You've helped me for a second time," he said gratefully and kissed her hand. "Goodbye, Lady Hamilton."

Nelson won the battle of the Nile.

The Neapolitans gave him an ovation. On his return they brought him to the British Embassy in glory.

Sir William's secretary, Gavin, spoke contemptuously, "When Nelson wins a battle, they hang round our necks. When Napoleon wins, they spit on our trouser legs and kiss the French."

When Emma saw Nelson he looked ill and she was fearful. Only a few mo-

MYRNA LOY, NOW CO-STARRING WITH WILLIAM POWELL IN M-G-M'S "MR. CO-ED"

MYRNA LOY... American Beauty-blend

Blond-brunette skin. Peach undertones. For rosy accent, Woodbury Windsor Rose. For exotic effect, use Brunette.

To attract Romance

GLORIFY YOUR TYPE!

VIRGINIA BRUCE Type
Cameo-skin blonde
Fair skin with cameo-pink tints. For delicate bloom, use Woodbury Flesh. For radiant warmth, use Blush Rose.

MERLE OBERON Type
Ivory-skin brunette
Creamy skin with ivory tints. For striking clearness, Woodbury Rachel. For deep, velvet tone, use Blush Rose.

BRENDA JOYCE Type
Honey-skin blonde
Tawny skin with gold tints. For deeper accent, Woodbury Champagne. Or for a rosy look, Windsor Rose.

DOLORES DEL RIO Type
Tropic-skin brunette
Vivid skin, dusky undertones. For luscious richness, use Woodbury Brunette. For copper glow, Champagne.

TO MAKE his heart sing—make your beauty sing!

To help, Hollywood directors have selected 5 stars to represent the 5 skin types.

And now Woodbury has created powder shades that magically make each type "light up"—with love-compelling beauty!

They're gorgeously clear shades, for Woodbury Color Control eliminates color blobs that mar smoothness. And Color Control makes Woodbury fine, soft, clinging. Today, get Woodbury Powder. His eyes will say you're lovelier!

FREE { 6 Color Controlled Shades and tube of famous Woodbury Cold Cream free—simply address penny postcard to John H. Woodbury, Inc., 8117 Alfred St., Cincinnati, O. (In Canada: Perth, Ont.)

Woodbury FACE POWDER

Why I switched to Meds

by a nurse

It would be silly for a nurse not to keep up with modern ideas. I've used internal sanitary protection even though it cost me a lot more. But when I learned that Modess had brought out Meds—a new and improved tampon at only 20¢ a box of ten—I decided to try them. And am I glad I did! Meds are the best tampons I've ever used. And they're the only tampons in individual applicators that are so reasonable.

ONLY 20¢

EACH IN INDIVIDUAL APPLICATOR

MADE BY MODESS

Meds

INTERNAL SANITARY PROTECTION

MAKE MONEY AT HOME!

Learn to color photos and miniatures in oil. No previous experience needed. Good demand. Send for free booklet, "Make Money at Home" and requirements.

NATIONAL ART SCHOOL
3601 Michigan Ave. Dept. 2362. Chicago

Clears the Way for BREATHING COMFORT

WHEN you can't breathe through your nostrils because they are stopped up by a cold, insert a little Mentholatum. Soothing Mentholatum clears the mucus-clogged passages, lets in air. It clears the way for breathing comfort.

Opens

STOPPED-UP NOSTRILS

due to colds

MENTHOLATUM

Gives COMFORT Daily

ments later he said, "Lady Hamilton, may I speak with you?" and walked into the house away from the others and collapsed.

Days later Emma sat beside him. She was wan as one is who hasn't slept in many nights. Nelson lay in her bed.

The doctor stood looking down at him. "When they come to write his history, they'll tell about his victories at San Vincent and the Nile—"

"He's not—dying?" gasped Emma.

"No, my lady," said the doctor. "I was going to say that this will be his greatest victory. I never thought he would defeat death the way he did."

When Nelson woke, they were alone. "This is the third time you've helped me," he said. "You sat here nine days—night and day—and all the time I felt you round me—even when I was out of my senses, I knew you were here—"

As the days passed Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson became Emma and Horatio to each other, and, after he was up and around, their names were heard so loudly on the lips of the gossips of Naples that even the singers at the opera had trouble to dominate the sound of those two names with their voices.

THE Casa Rossa was the poorest bodega on the Naples waterfront. Its orchestra was one old lazzarone whose fingers fluttered uncertainly over his mandolin. Its patrons were sailors, beggars and street girls.

Two people drinking wine at a far table were turned to conceal their faces. Dark cloaks covered the splendor of his uniform and the brilliance of her evening dress. They had fled from the Queen's party for Nelson.

"What a pleasure a banquet is when you can get out of it," he said.

Emma was bubbling with joy. "Let's have the party here!" She imitated the King, the Queen, Sir William and others. She delighted him. And then she impersonated Lord Nelson—in a bad mood, a good mood, in an exuberant mood and, for each, she distorted her features into Nelson's grimmest face. They were all the same expression.

"You must make allowances for a sailor," he laughed. "Shall I give an impersonation? Lord Nelson in—guess what mood?"

"I don't dare say it."

"Lord Nelson in love," he answered softly.

Abruptly the quiet of the bodega was interrupted. Sailors poured in at the door—some of them drunk—sailors from the "Agamemnon," and Josiah was among them. He was the only one who gave her a swift glance before he called noisily for drinks.

"Let's go," said Nelson, but sat back when Josiah spoke loudly.

"What's a pretty barmaid doing in a place like this when women worse than barmaids go to the Opera with the King and Queen?" he demanded hilariously. The sailors roared with laughter.

"He's drunk," said Nelson.

"I wonder," Emma felt Josiah's party here was no accident.

"I'm sorry," shouted Josiah to the waitress. "How much do I have to pay for the pleasure of your company? Don't be too expensive. There's heavy competition in town. Married women entertain for nothing."

"I never saw him like that before," Nelson spoke through set teeth.

"Friends," cried Josiah, "I give you Sir William Hamilton!"

Nelson rose. He approached them glass in hand. All but Josiah were startled and horrified when he appeared. "That's an excellent toast, Josiah," he said quietly. "May I drink it with you?" And they drank.

He sent Josiah for a carriage. "Lady Hamilton and I are leaving," he told the embarrassed boys. "You're off duty. Don't let me disturb you. Have a good time!"

It was after the guests were gone from the big ball given at the Embassy in honor of the hero, that Sir William informed his wife of a dispatch that had arrived for Nelson. He had ordered it sent on to the ship instead of giving it to Nelson at the ball. "I wouldn't spoil your evening, my dear," he said.

"You mean you wouldn't have spoiled yours, William! You wanted to prevent me from saying goodbye to him." She knew that Sir William enjoyed this little game, although it was quite clear that he was not perturbed at being a deceived husband. In fact no one tried to deceive him. He had wanted her as an ornament for his drawing room—like the pictures and the statues. She was that and nothing more to him. But he had enjoyed preventing her goodbye to Nelson.

She would not bid Sir William goodnight. "I won't show you my face," she said, "I'm always ugly when I hate!"

Her mother came for her and, when Emma got to her big bedroom, Nelson was waiting there. He had come back. She ran to him, and their first kiss was deep and it united them.

The dawn-mist hung over the harbor and, within it, voices rose from two shadowy figures who stood very close together.

"Go back now, darling," said Nelson. "You shouldn't have come. People will see you. They'll talk."

"Let them talk. I don't care. Do you? Are you sorry?"

"Sorry for all the wasted years I've been without you—for all the years I shall have to be without you. You are married. I am married. Those things stand out very clearly in the dawn." He held her tenderly as the long boat coming for him approached the shore. "We have to obey the codes and creeds that we've sworn our lives to. I know I must not come back, and I know nothing in this world can keep me away."

She watched the long boat carry him into the mist.

EMMA!" Another voice came from behind her. Sir William leaned out the window of his coach. "I think it advisable for you to come back by coach, Emma. A little strange to see the British Ambassador's wife in the fish market at this hour of the morning."

Days were beaten into the past by the heavy waves of the sea on which Nelson sailed. One night as a storm attacked his vessel, he held a council of war with the captains of his several ships. Malta was to be the objective upon order of Lord Keith of the Admiralty. The plan of attack was being made when the bo'sun entered with the report of two fishermen who had been saved from the storm.

"Revolution has broken out in Naples," he said. "They were just waiting till they saw the back of us."

Hardy and Trowbridge went on with the talk of bottling up Bonaparte, who was said to be making a run for it back to France. But from the moment of the news of revolution in Naples, Nelson did not hear them. Suddenly he gave orders for all but his own ship to follow the original plan.

"What course are you taking, sir?" asked Hardy.

"Back to Naples," growled Nelson, ignoring orders and arguments alike.

In the Board Room of the British Admiralty in London there was violent indignation. Lord Keith demanded Nelson be relieved of his command. Others were as indignant as he. Only Lord Spencer stood up for him.

"He didn't catch Bonaparte, it's true," asserted Spencer, "and he might have by obeying orders. But he did save the Royal Family of an allied nation from certain death at the hands of a mob. He also saved the British Ambassador and his wife."

"What was the point of saving the husband?" demanded a sarcastic voice—and the fury over Emma broke loose, indignation summed up by one of them in the words, "Not even the greatest hero is strong enough to defeat the prejudice and conventions of society." Their communications made it clear to Nelson.

In Palermo where the party from Naples had been landed, Emma and Nelson stood on the balcony of the casino overlooking the harbor. It was New Year's Eve. Nelson had ignored three orders to return to England. He knew now he must go—and alone. And Emma knew it, too, for Sir William, speaking not at all as her husband but as a dutiful diplomat in the best interests of England and England's hero, had told her she must force Nelson to go. He had worked out a plan. She must tell Nelson she had accepted the invitation of some friends for a trip to Egypt.

"My husband suggests I play a little comedy all for your benefit." She outlined the plan. "As if lies were necessary between us—as if we couldn't face the truth!" She nestled close to him. "Of course, I'll go to Egypt," she sighed and put her arms about his neck. "Darling, this is a farewell scene again. It seems to be our destiny—always to say goodbye."

INTO the music from the orchestra of a nearby ship struck the sound of ship's bells.

"What are those bells?" she asked.

"Have you forgotten this is the last night of 1799? Eight bells for the old year, eight for the new. Eighteen Hundred, the dawn of a new century!" The bell stopped for a moment, and he gave her a long kiss that ended with the chime for the New Year. "Now I have kissed you through two centuries," he said. They clung to each other.

"Say you hate the pyramids," he begged.

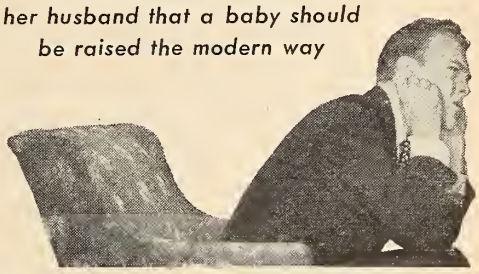
"I loathe them!" responded Emma.

"Say you abominate the sphinx!"

"I wouldn't look at it if you served it to me on a plate!"

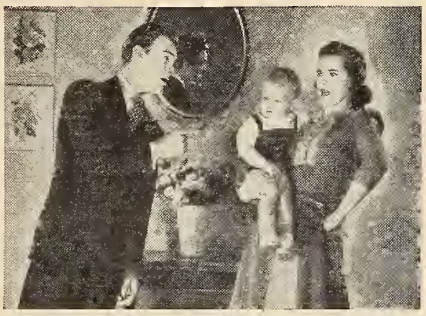
"We'll go to London together!" he cried.

"I would have died if you'd left me behind," sighed Emma. "Happy New Year, darling!"



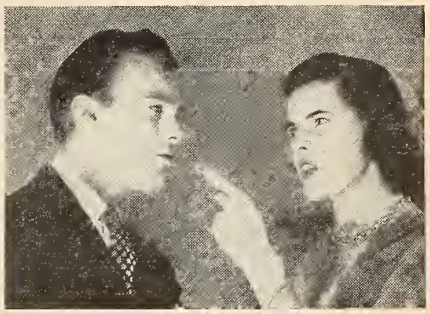
"Happy New Year, my beloved!"

In London Lady Nelson and the Reverend Nelson, the hero's proud father, had established themselves in the Hotel Nerot to await the younger Nelson's coming. To be more accurate, Lady Nelson had established them, for the rosy-cheeked, white-haired old clergyman in the bath-chair had nothing to say when his severe-featured daughter-in-law took charge. She was very proud to be "Lady" Nelson—perhaps prouder of it than of her husband's exploits which had given her the title. Her manner was full of self-conceit. It was, then, hard enough on so ambitious a woman to be told that her husband had arrived not on his flagship in triumph, but quietly on a mail packet because, as the embarrassed Lord Spencer said, "it is not customary for ladies to travel on battleships." But it was even harder for her to learn that there was to be no official welcome because of it. When the populace disre-

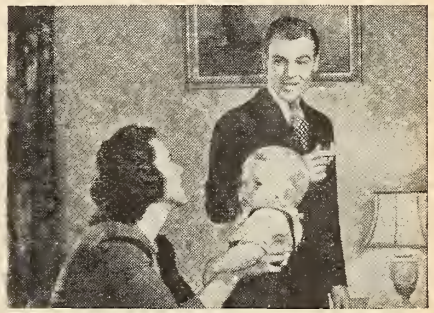


"And I thought a baby brought parents closer together"

A new mother convinces her husband that a baby should be raised the modern way



1. Bill and I used to be the happiest couple in the world . . . until after our baby was born. We both wanted him and we both adore him. That's why it broke my heart when we began to quarrel about raising him. Bill's favorite argument was that I was raising a sissy—pampering him.



2. Well, the whole thing came to a head the other day, when Bill Jr. needed a laxative. "Don't tell me you've got a special laxative for that kid, too!" Bill yelled. "Special foods, special diapers, and now . . . a special laxative! You're turning him into a regular cream puff!"

3. Did I burn up! "I've had just about enough of this!" I yelled back. "I'm going to raise my baby the way the doctor told me to . . . the modern way . . . giving him things especially designed for a baby's needs. That's why he's going to get Fletcher's Castoria!"

4. "Let's not quarrel any more about Bill Jr.," I pleaded. "He's the healthiest baby on our street. And naturally I want to keep him that way. The doctor says you can't take chances with a baby's system . . . it's too delicate. If you treat it like an adult's, you'll have trouble."

5. "He recommended Fletcher's Castoria. It's made especially and only for infants and children. There isn't a single harsh 'adult' drug in it. It's effective . . . but mild! And safe. It isn't likely to gripe a child's tiny system. I wouldn't give him anything but Fletcher's Castoria."

6. "And just look at the way he goes for it. You know what a strong will our baby has. If he doesn't like a medicine, he just won't take it. But he loves the taste of Fletcher's Castoria." That settled it. Bill is finally convinced that the doctor and I know best after all.

HERE IS THE MEDICAL BACKGROUND

Chief ingredient of Fletcher's Castoria is senna.

Medical literature says: (1) In most cases, senna does not disturb the appetite and digestion or cause nausea . . . (2) Senna works primarily in the lower bowel . . . (3) In regulated dosages, it produces easy elimination and has little tendency to cause irritation or constipation after use.

Senna is especially processed in Fletcher's Castoria to eliminate griping and thus allow gentle laxative action.

Chas. H. Fletcher CASTORIA

The SAFE laxative for children

NEWEST FASHION COLOR
ROCKET RED
FLAME-GLO LIPSTICK

Just out! Try this ravishing, deep fiery red in America's favorite lipstick...FLAME-GLO ... created to blend perfectly with new fashion colors. You'll like its satiny lustre, its bewitching fragrance, its radiant glow that captures the fire of youth! A water-repellent film seals this rich color to your lips... keeps you KISSABLE! Longer lasting, or money back.

Other popular FLAME-GLO shades: Glamour Red, Raspberry, Royal Wine

Flame-Glo
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
LIPSTICK
10c and 25c
AT ALL 5 & 10c STORES
Also Rouge to Match

Marvel
WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women
$3.50
At Drug Counters Throughout the World
Free Booklet—The Marvel Co., Dept. 417, New Haven, Conn.

Brush Away
GRAY HAIR
..AND LOOK 10 YEARS YOUNGER

● Now, at home, you can quickly and easily tint telltale streaks of gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Used for 28 years by thousands of women (men, too)—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless. No skin test needed, active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch as new gray appears. Easy to prove by tinting a test lock of your hair. Retain your youthful charm. Get BROWNATONE today. 60c at all drug stores—on a money-back guarantee, or—

SEND FOR TEST BOTTLE
The Kenton Pharmacal Co.
309 Brownatone Bldg., Covington, Kentucky
Please send me Test Bottle of BROWNATONE and interesting booklet. Enclosed is a 3c stamp to cover, partly, cost of packing and mailing.
Check shade wanted:
☐ Blonde to Medium Brown ☐ Dark Brown to Black
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____
Print Your Name and Address

garded official frowns and burst forth into a tremendous ovation as Nelson neared the hotel, it was clear they cared not a whit by what boat he had come or what lady had come with him—and to his furious wife this heaped insult on injury.

By the end of an exhausting day in which Emma and the redoubtable Lady Nelson met, it was clear to Emma and her Horatio that his wife would not be moved and that their life from then on would be one of furtive meetings and deception.

"I can't stand that," cried Emma, "I hate hiding and deceit!"

That night, they talked in circles. At last he left her. "There's no need to be frightened," he soothed. "Something will happen. We'll see it through and we are going to win, darling." He kissed her goodnight.

WHEN Lord Nelson made his maiden speech in the House of Lords, the interest in the Peeresses Gallery was less in what he said than in what he would do when it was over. When that moment came, Lady Keith and Lady Spencer waited with others in the outer vestibule to see that for which they had really attended. Would he, upon emerging, go to his wife or to Lady Hamilton? As he came from the inner hall, his first glance found Emma, but he went directly to his wife. And the disappointed ladies were without their scandalous tidbit.

But he had no more than given the coachman the address when a cry rose behind him. "Stand back!"—"Give her air!" He turned. Emma lay on the pavement in a dead faint.

"Horace!— Come on!" His wife grabbed his arm. He wrenched himself away and went to Emma.

Her mother spoke in a low voice as Nelson knelt beside her. "She's been ill —all the while."

On the edge of the little group around them, Lady Spencer was saying to Lady Keith, "My dear! It's natural to women of all classes. I fainted when little Bertie was on his way."

At the Hotel Nerot, Lady Hamilton bitterly gave her husband an ultimatum. When his choice was clear, she said icily, "All right! I shall go away, but I shall never drag the name of Nelson through the divorce court. As long as I live I shall be your wife."

Sir William Hamilton's home was at 23 Piccadilly. It was evident that Sir William's mind was rapidly failing. Gavin, who was with him, was glad he didn't have to tell him that all his art treasures had been lost when the boat carrying them from Italy had sunk. Emma's mother pottered about the kitchen. There were no servants and she had returned to her old field of operations with something of real pleasure. Her Emma sat talking with her as she had many a time.

She had just come from visiting her two-months-old daughter who was being kept by a Mrs. Gibson in a nursery in St. John's Wood. "Mother! If only you could see her! You'd adore her! She isn't like a two-months-old child at all!" And she had news, too, that Nelson had beaten the Danes. Emma was ecstatic.

But her mother was worried. While she was away, Charles Greville had brought a lawyer and made his uncle change his will. Even though Sir William's brain was going soft, her mother thought there was still time for Emma to take steps so that she, his wife, would not be poor.

"I've never been his wife, Mother. Let Greville have the money," Emma said cheerily. "I shall be rich. I've my child —his child. That's more than all the money in the world!" Emma had changed in these months. She was free—a woman who had grown greater with love.

Soon the bells of London tolled for Sir William.

And soon those same bells rang joyously for another Nelson victory. In the Board Room of the British Admiralty, where they had once considered tossing him out, they now congratulated him, a hero of increasing greatness. But Nelson was not filled with their gaiety. He knew that peace with Bonaparte was no peace but merely an interlude to give the dictator time to re-arm, make an alliance with Italy and Spain and then continue the attempt at destruction of the British Empire. He implored them not to ratify the peace.

It was as they were leaving that Lord Spencer, who had always been his friend, delicately conveyed to him the news that Emma had lately been seen frequently with an Italian opera conductor, prominent in the Covent Garden season, and that it was rumored she was going to Italy with him and some other acquaintances. Nelson hurried to her.

She was living again at the Nerot. She seemed very gay and happy—and very evasive, though she kissed him as usual. She prattled of how busy she was. The house in Piccadilly had been dreary. That was why she had moved to the hotel. And then she tried to hide some letters from him. The letters became the subject of a quarrel. But finally the distraught Nelson discovered the truth about his Emma. The letters were bills. She was drowning in bills—up to her neck. She'd been thrown out of the house in Piccadilly. She hadn't been to see her child because she owed Mrs. Gibson for her keep. She had dined with the "musical gentleman" because he had offered her a contract in his opera house. She'd worked before and would work again.

Nelson gasped at these things. "Emma! Why wasn't I told?"

"They're my troubles, not yours," she said and meant it.

He took her in his arms and there were no more bills, and Miss Horatia Nelson up in St. John's Wood received a visit from her parents.

SHORTLY thereafter, the summer house at Nelson's home ten miles from London was redecorated as his daughter's nursery by a very distinguished man, if not an artist with the brush. Having splashed a good deal of paint on himself and more on his wife who stood below giving critical advice, he at last descended his ladder and inspected his work. Each of his ships was there on the tossing sea on the nursery wall, and it was to be hoped that little Horatia could look at them each morning and night with a quiet stomach. They planned to go and fetch her from St. John's Wood that afternoon.

"We've had happiness for a long time together," he said to Emma, "but now we know the meaning of contentment and peace as well."

She left him and went into the house to find out about a meal. To her surprise Captain Hardy was in the living room. He was swift in what he had to say. "It's you I came to see, not him. Napoleon's made himself Emperor of France. His next move is the invasion of England. In a few weeks from now, all he'll need is a fair wind—"

"And all you need is Nelson?"

"That's it, milady. He was right about this peace and others were wrong. He's refused to see Lord Spencer and Lord Keith— They've sent me to talk to you—to get your help."

She refused to speak for them to her husband. He had given enough—his arm, his sight, his health. He needed rest now —peace of mind. She would use all her influence, yes. She would use it to persuade him this new war was none of his affair. Hardy left hastily.

Emma was alone. She called up her anger to justify her behavior which in her heart she knew was wrong. She looked around the room at the relics of Nelson's victories. On his desk was a manuscript—"Memorandum by Lord Nelson on the Defense of England." A passage read: "In case of a new war, Boulogne, Calais, even Le Havre may become the points from which the enemy will seek to land in Sussex and Southern Kent—"

Nelson came in. "I don't think we'll go to St. John's Wood today, Horatio," said his wife who was very pale. "It'll save two journeys if we pick up the child tomorrow after you've been to the Admiralty." She told him of England's tremendous need of him.

A FEW weeks later autumn leaves swirled around the carriage waiting in the drive. In a room on the second floor of the house, Nelson, in civilian clothes, prepared to leave as he talked with Emma, persuading her not to close off part of the house for the winter. "We'll need the whole of it when I come back at Christmas," he said. "We'll have a real old-fashioned Christmas—with a yule log, carols, plum-pudding, roast beef and everything!"

"And perhaps peace on earth," said Emma with a subdued smile.

He kissed her hair. Downstairs a clock began to strike. They heard Hardy's voice.

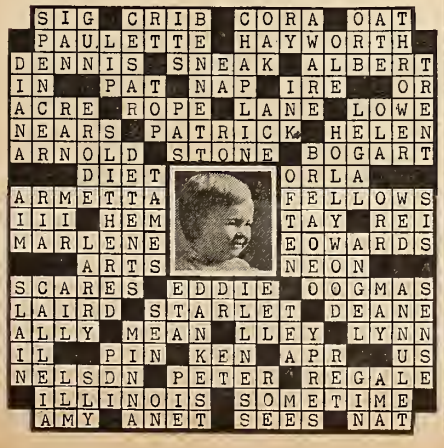
"I'll tell Captain Hardy you're coming." She went down to him.

Very quietly Nelson went into the next room where his child lay asleep. In the darkness he knelt beside her and prayed the prayer of a gallant father.

Emma's mother wrapped a hot-water bottle in a rug and gave it to a servant to put in the carriage. "It'll be freezing on the high road over the downs," she told Nelson as he followed her slowly to the outer door.

"Yes. I'll take the small rug I use in my study," he answered.

"I'll get it." Emma ran up the stairs.



When she came down, the coach had gone. "He thought he wouldn't need the rug," said her mother and Emma understood.

She waited there in the doorway, watching the lights of the carriage disappear through the gates at the end of the drive.

"He'll never come back," she said softly.

And Emma, Lady Hamilton—but never Lady Nelson—was right.

Solution To Puzzle on Page 14

"H'm. You pups have got a bad rash all right. Don't know as I ever saw anybody worse broken out... Oh, you feel fine, do you?... Well, you don't look so good! You ought to see yourself in the mirror!"

"Funny—your tail looks O.K.... By Jove, I see it all now! Your mother's been stingy with the Johnson's Baby Powder—giving you little dabs in the rear instead of good all-over rubs!"

"Listen—stick around at bath-time and get in on my Johnson's rub-down. You'll feel like a different dog—so slick that rashes and chafes and prickly heat'll have a tough time getting a toe hold!"

"Babies have it pretty soft these days! Downy, soothing Johnson's Baby Powder costs so little any baby can have all the sprinkles he wants to keep him comfortable!"

JOHNSON'S BABY POWDER

Johnson & Johnson, New Brunswick, N. J.

Goldilocks was brightening up her smile with delicious Dentyne the day she found the home of the three bears. Of course she tried their chairs, their beds and their porridge—and you've never seen three madder bears.

But Goldilocks flashed her lovely smile and said "Anyway, porridge won't make your teeth shine."

"But it's nice porridge," wailed the big bear.

"And not chewy enough," said Goldilocks. "Now Dentyne has an extra firmness that helps polish teeth and makes them gleam. It strengthens jaw muscles—firms up your gums. Here try some."

"M-M-M," said the little bear. "It's delicious. That nice cinnamon taste is different—and extra good."

"Right-O," laughed Goldilocks, "and note the flat handy package. It slips neatly into purse or pocket. More smiles to you and brighter ones—with Dentyne."

Moral: Help your teeth stay lovely and sparkling by chewing Dentyne often. Get a flavortite package today.

6 INDIVIDUALLY WRAPPED STICKS IN EVERY PACKAGE

HELPS KEEP TEETH WHITE... MOUTH HEALTHY

MATRIMONY IN MOVIELAND

(Continued from page 47)

domestic circumstances, if they prefer.

Well and good. These laws, administered by the men whose Bible is Blackstone, aren't too strict. But most motion picture stars, impulsive and impatient people, don't like to bother about hurdles like medical examinations and three-day license waits. And so, they charge off to some Gretna Green in a nearby and more liberal state.

Now, Gretna Green is synonymous with runaway marriages. The original town is found in easy-going Scotland. There, back in 1754, when England passed a law banning elopements, amorous mates raced across the border to be married.

STREAMLINED counterparts of the Scottish haven in the movie-making area of the United States, catering to streamlined hurry-up movie folks, are such convenient marts as Las Vegas, Nevada, Yuma, Arizona, and Tia Juana, Mexico.

The most popular of the marts is Las Vegas, 250 miles northeast of Hollywood. The laws of Nevada are liberal, permitting a couple to wake a Justice of the Peace at any hour and present a $2 license obtained without delay from the local county clerk. The couple need not bother about showing a medical certificate.

Most prolific Justice of the Peace in Las Vegas, for many moons, was George E. Marshall, recently elected a judge. In the last two years he united 6,000 couples, including some of the biggest motion picture stars. It was to Las Vegas that Janet Gaynor and Gilbert Adrian went two years ago for their wedding, to be followed last year by Diana Lewis and William Powell. And more recently, Arleen Whelan and Alexander D'Arcy stood in the Apache Hotel at three o'clock in the morning, while a bleary-eyed judge, who had traveled 325 miles to marry them, droned the ceremony.

Yuma, in Arizona to the south, is another made-to-order matrimonial mill for the speedy. Here, too, no medical certificate is required, no wait for a license is necessary (a special marriage agent will hand you one pronto). It was to Yuma, six years ago, that Charles Boyer brought Pat Paterson, after suddenly proposing to her in the midst of a screen preview, and it was here that he was married without delay. Claudette Colbert and Dr. Joel Pressman were another pair to avoid the three-day stall in Los Angeles and convert themselves from plural to singular in this desert town.

Finally, stars have crossed the border to Tia Juana and Juarez, in Mexico, and paid $30 to a Spanish-speaking clergyman or Justice of the Peace to hear the solemn and legal words. There are no preliminaries to a wedding below the Rio Grande, though it's safer to have the local American Consul as a witness. The entire ceremony takes maybe five minutes as Fredric March and Florence Eldridge, wedded below the border over a decade ago, will testify. The legality of Mexican wedlocks, however, has been so constantly questioned that Gloria Stuart and Arthur Sheekman, after marrying in Tia Juana in 1934, were welded again in Carmel, California in 1938, just to be sure.

But now, alas, the villain enters this piece. The villain's name is divorce, and when you ask him why he ever interferes, he replies, "Mental cruelty."

Divorce is a simple enough process in some parts of the world. In Russia, when man and wife agree to disagree, they just walk up to the Commissar in charge, say they wish a divorce, give exactly no reasons and are split in a few minutes. In Morocco, if a wife desires a divorce, she gets it by merely fleeing to the house of another man (a common practice in Hollywood, too, though not quite as uncomplicated).

But, in California, the machinery of separation grinds slowly, tediously and carefully.

For an X-ray of the California system consider the recent case of Gail Patrick, 28-year-old cinema star. After four years of married life to Bob Cobb, popular boss of the Brown Derby restaurants, Gail could no longer stand his indifference toward her and his humiliating attitude. She went to her attorney and poured out her troubles. The barrister, like a good relative, attempted to dissuade her from seeking a divorce. This is done in every case. He failed. Then he took down her complaints against her husband, dressed them up in legal language and filed them with the Clerk of Court, on the fifth floor of the Los Angeles Hall of Records.

NEXT, the paper listing Gail's complaints was served on her husband. The law gave him ten days to reply or contest her charges. Few men reply. At the end of ten days, he defaulted and, after a behind-the-scenes property settlement, the divorce suit was placed on the court calendar. The trial, as per law, came up in two weeks. Gail, in a black crêpe suit, accompanied by her secretary-manager, a required witness, appeared. The attorney and the judge asked some questions. She answered them. Typical stuff being—

Gail Patrick: "I went with him for two years before our marriage in Tia Juana. Yes, I was aware of his faults."

Judge: "And knowing his faults you married him anyway?"

Gail Patrick: "Yes." (Smiling briefly.) "You see, we're both Irish!"

Her divorce thus granted at trial, Gail Patrick, or any other movie personality, must now wait one year for the final divorce decree. Wife may be seen with husband, but, according to law, must not "co-habit" with him, i. e., for one year must not live under same roof and sleep in same bed with him.

After that year, if no reconciliation is effected, the couple are split and neither may remarry for twelve more months.

This slow divorce, in California, costs the average movie celebrity anywhere from $1,500 to $5,000, but it would cost you a mere $125.

There are numerous grounds for divorce in California. There's desertion, adultery, drug addiction, habitual drunkenness, incest and bigamy (each punishable as a felony), public defamation, impotency (which must be shown to be permanent) and extreme cruelty.

In the case of movie stars, the most popular of these reasons is "extreme cruelty." According to the California Civil Code, Section 94:

"Extreme cruelty is the wrongful infliction of grievous bodily injury, or grievous mental suffering, upon the other party by one party to the marriage."

Most Hollywoodians don't care to air their fisticuffs in a divorce court. The publicity is too harmful. One handsome actor's wife divorced him for physical cruelty because he threw tomatoes (i. e. canned) at her. The handsome actor is still looking for a job. Mental cruelty is a simpler item. It covers everything—systematic ill-treatment, scolding and fault-finding, public profanity, studied contempt, nagging and general intoxication, and so on ad nauseam.

BUT California is lenient compared to New York. The movie and stage stars residing in New York can obtain a State divorce on only one ground—adultery. In other words, in blunt words, your wife must find you on a bed or sofa in the company of some wench (preferably blonde and in a state of partial undress). This type of thing is often faked by respectable movie couples. The husband hires a girl for $25, takes her to a hotel room—and is "surprised" by his wife and detectives. This is labeled "hotel evidence" and was used when Wallis Simpson (now the Duchess) got her divorce.

No wonder stars flee from the slowness of California and the strictness of New York to obtain mile-a-minute fadeouts of their wedlocks in the two most efficient spots on earth—Reno and Mexico.

Reno—"Biggest Little City on Earth"—has a population of only 20,000 but handles over 4,000 divorces and divorcees a year, which bring in over four million dollars to the countless lawyers, fourteen cabarets, forty-six bars and twenty roulette houses.

When the business of mining fell down in Nevada, the State went after a new and more prosperous business. It liberalized its divorce laws to bait that lucrative trade. Today, in Reno, you may set up residence for merely six weeks or forty-two days, as Constance Bennett did recently, pay $250 if you are of the masses, $2,000 if you are a movie star, or $50,000 if you are Barbara Hutton, and behind closed chambers, obtain a divorce decree.

There are many grounds for divorce ranging from the usual mental cruelty and adultery to inability to provide and epilepsy. Added advantage—you don't have to wait a year, in fact you don't have to wait a day, to remarry.

But Nogales and Tia Juana and Juarez, in Mexico, are even more accommodating. Miss Hollywood Star doesn't even have to take up residence or put in a personal appearance. She may be divorced for a mere $75 (half paid in advance, please) through the mail! The divorce can be final in five days!

Juarez, boasting such clients as Norma Talmadge and Katharine Hepburn, advertises that "it is not necessary for divorcing parties to appear." The Juarez divorce factory cleans up $45,000 a month!

Only stumbler is the fact that neither Nevada nor Mexican divorces are legal for Hollywood stars! Smart stars stay in California and do it the hard way. Of the 4,000 divorces in Reno last year, only 2% were valid. Practically none of the Mexican divorces are valid.

The one exception, where a Mexican divorce was found perfectly okay was in the case of George Brent. He married Constance Worth, the Australian lass, down in Mexico. Then, when he realized it was a mistake, he tried to have it annulled on the grounds that they were never married since Mexican marriages are illegal. The court replied, in effect:

"Mr. Brent, since you avoided California to be married in Mexico, you can now go right back to Mexico if you want a divorce. But you can't have it annulled here."

So Mr. Brent went back to Mexico. Legal history was made. And another milestone sadly added to matrimony in movieland.

* Brenda Joyce and Robert Conway, popular 20th Century-Fox players. For romantic, soft hands, thousands of loved girls use Jergens Lotion.

"When you bid for Love... your HANDS must be silken-soft," says Brenda Joyce*
(Romantic Hollywood Star)

Know this Famous Way to Lovable HANDS

Try it just once! So soothing to parched skin! Two fine ingredients in Jergens Lotion are relied on by many doctors to help rough "likely-to-split" skin to adorable smoothness. Faithful use helps prevent hateful roughness and chapping. No stickiness. Start now to use Jergens Lotion. 50¢, 25¢, 10¢, $1.00.

JERGENS LOTION
FOR SOFT, ADORABLE HANDS

MAIL THIS COUPON NOW
FREE! YOUR CHANCE FOR LOVABLE HANDS
(Paste on penny postcard, if you wish)
The Andrew Jergens Company, 3720 Alfred Street Cincinnati, Ohio (In Canada: Perth, Ontario)
Please send my free purse-size bottle of Jergens Lotion.
*Name*_____
*Street*_____
*City*_____ *State*_____

RADIANT Highlights . . the secret of GLAMOROUS HAIR

If you long to have hair that invites admiring glances . . the kind that sparkles with a brilliant luster . . use Nestle Colorinse. What a thrilling difference . . and how economical . only five cents a rinse. Nestle Colorinse is not an ordinary dye nor a bleach . . washes out with shampooing. If your hair looks dull, dry, lifeless . . select one of the 14 Colorinse shades to enhance the beauty of your hair. Ask to see the Colorinse Color Chart at beauty counters. For best results with Colorinse use Nestle Shampoo.

10c for package of 2 rinses at 10c stores.

25c for five rinses at drug and department stores.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS TO HOLD

(Continued from page 39)

thoroughly cleansing and lubricating your hands. If you'll make these simple, little habits routine in your daily program, harsh ugly hands will soon be a fading memory.

Speaking of brittle nails, while you're checking up, be sure that your diet includes sufficient calcium and minerals (citrus fruits, milk and green vegetables contain the right kinds), for nails must be nourished from inside as well as out. If you eat and sleep right and keep generally fit, then nail creams will help, but don't blame poor results on the preparation if you fail to look after your own physical health. For health is the beginning of beauty—even in your finger tips.

Manicure your nails thoroughly at least twice a week when possible, say, every Tuesday and Saturday. Then do touch-ups and repair jobs every time they're needed.

Your home "tool chest" or manicure kit should contain a small bowl for suds, a soft hand brush, mild soap, nail scissors, flexible file, emery board, orange stick and cotton, oily polish remover, cuticle softener and remover, polish, liquid or paste, nail white, a buffer and a softening cream or lotion. A bit of powdered pumice and peroxide or plain lemon will help with stubborn stains.

FIRST, remove every vestige of old polish with cotton dipped in remover—or by dripping on one of those new tube polish removers. Second, file and shape your nails. File from the corners toward the center, and keep emery board or file away from nail corners. Thin nails must be filed gently with either fine, long flexible steel or else an emery board. Next, soak your nails in warm, soapy water.

Third, scrub nails with a soft brush. Never dig or scrape them with metal implements. Fourth, apply a cuticle softener. During winter months, especially, an oil massage at this point is an extra luxury that smooths and improves hand skin immensely.

Fifth, remove old cuticle with a cotton tipped orange stick dipped in remover. Work this all around gently to loosen cuticle and also stubborn dirt under the nails. A moistened pumice stone rubbed over calloused or rough finger skin will smooth it beautifully. Now for a bit of nail white under the free ends before a final gentle scrubbing.

Dry your fingers separately and your hands thoroughly and you're ready for nail polish. Buffing will smooth ridged, thick, uneven nails. And a clear nail protector applied under polish will save nails and keep polish ever so much smoother and longer. After protector is thoroughly dry, stroke on polish quickly and boldly. Remove all excess with an orange stick dipped in remover, and after this is entirely dry apply another coat of protector.

If your nails are short, polish from base to tip will make them look longer. If they are long, half moons are lovely when carefully done. If your nails are square, leave slim margins beside the polish. Leave moons at the bases and shape their ends into medium long ovals. Remembering that a slim oval is the most graceful nail shape, use your file and polish to achieve this effect. Fit your polish colors and nail lengths to your way of living. Suitability is the first rule of good taste. Bright, gay colors are for gay occasions. Soft or burnished tones are best for business and daytime wear.

If your hands are large or bony, wear heavy rings and bracelets, loose sleeves and carry large hand bags. If your hands are small, play them up with beautifully molded jewelry, contrasting cuffs, tight sleeves and feminine accessories. Plump hands need very simple lines in sleeves, jewelry and accessories.

Think grace and poise and composure and your hands will convey that impression. Though your face may deceive, your hands are a dead give away of what is in your mind. If your hands express beauty, gaiety and sensitive feelings, there will be plenty of men around to hold them!

Training, care and grooming are three essentials to hand loveliness, and what an important third is grooming! Haven't you seen nails that were perfectly polished but around whose rims the cuticle was so torn, ragged and inflamed that you shuddered inwardly and turned away? We have. But there's no excuse for such carelessness. Hacking of cuticle has gone out of style. Nowadays, professional manicurists and girls all over the country are using a preparation which removes cuticle without cutting and is, therefore, safe, neat, modern and efficient. The name? Trimal—pronounced Trim-all—and it's one of the most useful little bottles full of concentrated magic we've ever had the good fortune to find. Just wrap your orange stick with cotton, dip it into Trimal and run it 'round your cuticle. Allow this to remain a few minutes, then soak your fingers in warm water. The dead cuticle will separate, and you can wipe it away with a towel or tissue. Ever hear of anything simpler? It surely is the safe, modern way to attack that dangerous old problem of cuticle. Ask for Trimal at one of your local chain stores.

HOW often have you had to waste precious time, as well as temper, applying nail polish over and over because your hand shook and the stuff just wouldn't go on straight? Moons would look like scalloped pie crusts, side edges took on the appearance of gory wounds and by the time you had finished you were ready to cuss or cry, according to your powers of endurance! Well, then, you'll be glad to know about a perfect gem of a gadget upon which you can rest all of the fingers of one hand comfortably and solidly with nary a slip or quiver while you engage in the fine art of finger nail painting. The name? Le Sager Finger Rest. The price? Believe it or not—ten cents! Where? At chain stores from coast to coast! It's the neatest trick we've spotted in many a week and the best time and disposition saver we ever saw for a dime. Got a pencil handy? Well, then, put it on your shopping list this very minute—or we won't be responsible for what happens the next time you try to apply nail polish!

INFORMATION DESK
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State.....

A THRILL A MINUTE . . .

(Continued from page 36)

the scene of the crash and pick up the pieces.

"I wanted a long ride. So I blew my entire savings of $15 on one magnificent flight. Afterward, my only regret was that it would take me so long to save up for another ride.

"Not that I would have had many chances to go up even if I'd had the money. Fliers didn't come to Indiana every day or even every year.

"I had to take out my enthusiasm for flying on something, so I started building model planes. I put 'em together by the gross."

In other words, he gave a thought to aviation long before he thought of acting.

"I got a certain satisfaction out of making toy planes fly. And even more out of an occasional airplane ride, of which I probably had four or five all told, while I was growing up. But my idea of something really satisfying was to learn how to pilot a plane. Only flying lessons were 'way out of my reach. So far out of my reach that I sort of forgot about them after a while.

BUT I didn't outgrow my interest in airplanes. Just before we came to Hollywood, Hank Fonda and I were saving expenses, sharing the same hotel room in New York. We went down to Macy's toy department to shop for toys for some kids we knew. I spotted a box full of parts for a big model airplane, and I bought that for myself." He grinned sheepishly.

"Hank and I didn't have any money to spend on entertainment," he continued, "—especially after Christmas. So we stayed in our two-by-four hotel room and worked on that model airplane. I've never seen such a complicated one. It had hundreds of parts. Hundreds! And most of them were so small we needed tweezers to handle them—and magnifying glasses." He pantomimed the painful labor of joining one infinitesimal part to another.

"We still didn't have it finished when Hank got this sudden offer from Hollywood. He left me to finish it. About three weeks later, I got a sudden offer from Hollywood, myself. I wired Hank. He didn't wire back congratulations. He simply wired, 'Don't forget to bring airplane. Guard with life.' Before I left New York I got five more wires from him all relating to the plane. I didn't know whether he had been talking up the plane to pals on the Coast or just had visions of the struggle I would have, lugging this enormous, fragile thing 3,000 miles. I detected a note of scornful challenge in Fonda's wires. He didn't think I could get it to Hollywood in one piece.

"I finally found a packing case big enough to hold the thing, and I put a handle on it so that I could carry it. And don't think I didn't carry it. I wouldn't let a redcap so much as lay hands on it. On the train, I kept it under my seat by day, under my berth by night. I'm sure the little old lady across the aisle suspected me of transporting a cut-up cadaver, I was so uneasy if anybody got anywhere near the box. . . . Often wonder whatever became of that plane. Fonda kept it on display for a long time, so that he could inform sundry visitors, 'Believe it or not, Stewart piloted that plane across the United States.'"

At that particular point, his interest in planes was a matter for jocular comment

A girl's private life—

"I WANT TO BE ALONE!" There are special times when even the best of us have felt that way.

But if you mope and feel sorry for yourself just because of "difficult days", you need a few easy lessons so you won't miss out on fun!

Perhaps you got off to a bad start. Tried being too good a sport . . . romped around a tennis court or hockey field when you should have been taking it easy.

Or maybe you never realized that comfort is more than half the battle! Meaning the kind of comfort Kotex* gives. Because Kotex sanitary napkins start soft, stay soft . . . help take your mind off your troubles!

What to do and not to do . . .

YES, you can go to dances! But sit one out now and then. To look at the stars . . . or hear a life story.

You'll have fun and you needn't be self-conscious, because the flat, pressed Kotex ends never give your secret away. You can be confident of comfort, too, because Kotex stays soft . . . doesn't bulk, bunch or chafe.

Put sleigh-rides on your okay list! Just bundle up extra warm and don't tumble in the snow. Instead, lead the singing and cheering . . . or perch up front and help drive the horses. You'll forget about you!

In fact, you won't have a moment's worry because the new Safety-Shield in Kotex provides added absorption. And with Junior, Regular, and Super Kotex, there's a right size for each day's needs.

'Tain't in Text Books!

Where's a girl to learn all about her "problem"? Where's she to get those little intimate hints she needs to know? The new book: "As One Girl To Another" gives you the answers. It's FREE. Address: Post Office Box 3434, Dept. MM-2, Chicago, Illinois.

Feel its new softness . . .

Prove its new safety . . . Compare its new flatter ends

*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

YOU'RE REAL "COMPETITION"

when hair gains highlights men admire

PERHAPS you have never seen the full-blown radiance of your hair, just because habit has enslaved you to old-style soap shampoos.

Then let one shampoo with Halo reveal amazing improvement in your appearance. Because Halo contains no soap, it cannot leave dulling film to hide the natural luster and color of your hair. Halo removes accumulations of dulling soap-curds from each tiny hair shaft, leaves your headdress radiant with color and brilliance. What's more, with Halo you don't need a lemon or vinegar rinse.

See how Halo Shampoo leaves your hair sparkling, silky-soft, easy to curl. How it gives "eye appeal" to mousey hair. How it gently cleanses your scalp, leaves it fragrantly clean. And Halo, because of its new-type sudsing ingredient, makes oceans of lather, in hardest water.

Buy Halo Shampoo in generous 10¢ or larger sizes. It is tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau

HALO SHAMPOO

EXCITING! VITALIZING! BEGUILING! Petal sweet cleanliness . . . enhanced glamour . . . life of the party energy . . . lingering, tantalizing fragrance. At trifling cost, only 2c a bath. Choice of Gardenia, Pine, and Wisteria.

A Water Softener

5 BATHS 10¢ PACKETS OR CANS

On Sale At All Stores

—not something to be taken seriously, even by myself. As a stranger to Hollywood, he had a lot of new things to learn, new experiences to savor, new people to meet. All of which occupied most of his time.

Then he made "Of Human Hearts" directed by Clarence Brown—now directing him again in "Come Live With Me." Brown not only flies, but owns a plane and has a private airport at his Camarillo ranch. He and Jimmy started talking aviation between scenes. Jimmy also ran into aviation talk at the home of his agent, Leland Hayward (whose wife is Margaret Sullavan, Jimmy's favorite actress). Hayward not only has his own plane but is a director of TWA.

"I got re-enthused," Jimmy explained now. "I suddenly realized that for the first time in my life I had enough money to do something I had always wanted to do: take some flying lessons. So I got a student flier's permit and went over to Clover Field and started learning how to fly. I soloed after ten hours. That was a big thrill—taking a ship off the ground by myself and bringing it down again on all three wheels.

SOME people take flying lessons just to get that thrill. Then they're satisfied and give up flying. But that was just a teaser to me. I decided I wanted to learn to fly well.

"I sort of kept it quiet because I didn't want people worrying about me and maybe grounding me. By the time they found out, I wanted to be able to say, 'But look—I've passed the test for a private pilot's license. The Government says I'm able to handle a plane. You don't have to worry.'

"I still don't know whether my contract forbids my flying or not—I've never read my contract—but I didn't see how the studio could object if I wanted to risk my long neck between pictures—as long as I didn't risk it during production. Anyway, I operated on that theory. I stayed on the ground while I was making pictures, until I had my license. The only trouble was that I got so little time off between pictures, it took me months to build up enough solo flying time to try for a license.

"When I got that license, that was another big thrill. There it was in black and white: I was qualified to operate a private plane. But where was the kick in operating a plane somebody else owned? It was like getting a driver's license just to go riding in a U-Rent-It car. I decided I had to have a plane of my own or bust. I mentioned the matter to my business manager. He screamed to high heaven. He said, 'You don't believe those rumors about your salary that you read in the newspapers, do you?' But he finally said I could have a small one.

"I picked out a Stinson 105, a two-seater, with a fuel tank that would hold enough gas for seven hours' flying. I went to Kansas City last January to fly it out and incidentally to give myself a navigation test.

"Between the weather and my navigation, that trip took five and a half days. I was forced down five times. The fifth time was the bad one. I got lost—and I stayed lost for an hour and a half. I was riding the radio beam into Kingman, Arizona, from about 100 miles away, when it faded out and I couldn't pick it up again. Below there was nothing but mountains, and they all looked alike. I couldn't tell where I was, and I only had a couple more daylight hours in which to get my bearings. To make matters still worse, the storm was tossing the plane around like a cork. It was like riding to Catalina on a rough day. I was worried that the buffeting was going to tear the plane apart, and I was getting a little air-sick myself. To understate matters considerably, I had to find a place to land without too much delay. I studied the map frantically. It showed a railroad running east and west to the south of me somewhere. I turned south, finally picked up the railroad and followed it into Kingman—with about a half-hour of daylight to spare!"

Apparently afraid that he had come perilously close to dramatizing himself, relating that adventure over Arizona, Jimmy added wryly, "I wonder why it is that I can't get any of my pals to go flying with me? They invariably have something else to do."

He claimed, with a knock on the commissary table, that that Arizona experience was the only close call he had had. He discounted that last trip from Kansas City a few weeks ago. After finishing "The Philadelphia Story" (and wait till you see him in that!), he rushed East via airliner for a quick visit with his family. He had an East-bound aviator-friend fly the Stinson to Kansas City, where Jimmy picked it up on his way back to the Coast. This time he spanned the distance in three days. ("I'm improving," he commented.) But darkness overtook him between San Gorgonio Pass and Los Angeles—and he had never made a night landing.

"That was when the two-way radio came in handy. I got in touch with the night supervisor at Clover Field, where I was keeping my plane then and told him I was coming in. 'Come on,' he said. It was easy enough to find Los Angeles and to follow Wilshire Boulevard out toward Santa Monica. But then came the tough part: finding Clover Field. It doesn't have any landing lights. The supervisor literally 'talked me down' to the pitch black field."

And Jimmy flies "because it's such great relaxation!"

"I don't go up in the clouds to get away from it all," he said. "But there's so much to think about up there, just to stay up there, that you forget things down below. Flying is something altogether different from the way I'm earning my living. That's what I like about it. I used to make professional movies six days a week and then make home movies on Sunday. That wasn't relaxation. I was always around people who were talking shop, and I was constantly talking shop, myself. Now I'm bumping into people who speak a different language, and in my spare time I'm speaking a different language. When you make four pictures a year, as I do, you can use every bit of variety you can get.

I'VE been lucky so far in the different roles I've had and the different people I've worked with. But flying is a sort of guarantee that life will continue to have variety."

Of late, people have wondered if the Stewart-de Havilland romance has ended—because Jimmy and Olivia haven't been seen at the night spots. The answer to that is those airport breakfasts. Another answer is: When you're going to put an airplane through spins and turns at 6 A.M., you can't do much carousing.

"To get a transport pilot's license," Jimmy explained, "you have to pass tests in precision flying. You have to execute a succession of figure 8's around two pylons a certain distance apart—which isn't so easy when you have to make your turns in a limited amount of space. You have to be able to come in from a thousand feet and make a full-stop landing within forty feet of a certain white line. You have to know how to go into, and come out of, tailspins. You have to know how to fly by instruments. I've got all the instruments on my plane that an airliner has, and consequently it's so loaded down with gadgets I can hardly get off the ground with two people in it.

"You not only have to pass flying tests to get a transport pilot's license, but you have to pass a four-hour written examination. That's another reason why I'm staying home nights. I'm cramming for that exam—with an Army instructor who comes to the house every night."

But what does Jimmy want with a transport pilot's license? What's he going to do with it?

"To get in the air corps, you need that kind of training. If we get into the war, I want to get into the air corps. And if we don't get into it—well, I'll know some things about flying I didn't know before, anyway."

Meanwhile, you know some things about Jimmy Stewart you haven't known before. Including the fact that he's as serious about flying as he is about acting—though for some inexplicable reason he worries more about acting.

Incidentally, don't overlook the fact that Olivia de Havilland is the one girl who shares both of his big interests in life. That may mean something. Even though Jimmy says, smothering a smile, "N-no, I don't have any marriage plans."

HOLLYWOOD'S NO. 1 MENACE

(Continued from page 27)

at the tip of my tongue. How can you be conceited when you're so unversatile. I can't play a pale poet or a languid lover." He flashed a burlesque leer at me and added, "Not a languid one! I couldn't, for instance, play Donat's Mr. Chips!

"I can't play anyone with an accent. I'd have to struggle with it. I just can't do that. If I can't believe what I'm doing, I can't make others believe it. That's not being an actor."

"You played 'Boom Town.'"

"A man of action. That's my trouble—I've got to have some action somewhere. I can't play old men. I had a part in 'Strange Interlude' a few years ago and I had to age. They put paint and more paint on my puss, then powder galore and more bags under my eyes than the American Express Company ever carried. It was still Gable! In this picture, I wear a long beard in some scenes—have my map covered with enough hair to keep it warm in an Icelandic blizzard. This, I thought, will fool 'em. But total strangers took one look at me and said, 'Hi ya, Gable!' Even the pigs knew me," he mourned.

"I can't get into 'moods,'" grinned Gable. "What the hell is a mood, anyway? I can't be one of the fellows who study every move they're going to make. I don't think I ever played two takes of the same scene alike. Why, if I figured out in advance what I was going to do in a scene, I'd be so self-conscious, I'd be thinking about my big hands and feet instead of what the scene means."

"Maybe," I reflected aloud, "it's just as well you can't age. Maybe those looks of yours put you up there."

"I'm way overpaid when it comes to my looks, honey," laughed Mr. G.

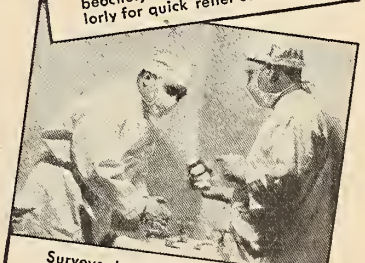
"But do you really like being an actor?" I asked.

"Sister," he said, "I certainly wanted to act or I wouldn't be out here. No one pushed me up on the stage. I walked up there under my own power. I'm just as

THE "WONDER" CREAM THAT SURPRISED EVEN ITS MAKERS

✓ check these 7 ways it may help you

Scene from smash hit "Louisiana Purchase"!



Surveys show that 4 out of 5 Broadway actresses—3 out of 4 of New York's professional models use Noxzema as a complexion aid or for skin relief.

Many leading barber shops, like the famous Terminal Barber Shops in New York, use Noxzema as a beard softener and for soothing skin comfort.

At first-aid stations at Miami Beach, and many other famous beaches, Noxzema is used regularly for quick relief of sunburn.

Surveys show that many doctors, dentists and nurses use Noxzema regularly to help heal chapped hands, keep them smooth, soft.

ONLY a few years ago a new medicated cream was introduced to the public as a soothing, greaseless skin cream. Today it's known from one end of the country to the other; over 150 million jars have been used! It's startled even its makers, because of the many different uses found for it. The name of this cream is NOXZEMA SKIN CREAM.

READ HOW IT MAY HELP YOU!

✓ AS A BEAUTY AID: If your skin is coarse, rough and dry, use NOXZEMA as a night cream and as a protective powder base. It helps smooth and soften the skin, keep powder on for hours.

✓ FOR POOR COMPLEXION: NOXZEMA'S special medication helps heal externally-caused skin blemishes; its mildly astringent action helps reduce enlarged pore openings.

✓ FOR CHAPPED HANDS AND LIPS: Nurses were the first to discover how grand NOXZEMA is for chapped hands. Because chapped hands are CUT hands (tiny cracks in skin). NOXZEMA's medication aids healing. Try it at night; see how much softer, whiter your hands are next morning!

✓ FOR SHAVING: For tough beards and tender skin, apply soothing, medicated NOXZEMA before lathering or use as a brushless shave.

✓ BABIES' CHAFED SKIN: Mothers report it's remarkable how quickly NOXZEMA relieves "diaper rash"—aids in healing.

✓ FOR SCALDS AND BURNS, fever blisters, chilblains, Tired Aching feet, insect bites—KEEP NOXZEMA HANDY! It brings quick, grateful relief! Get a jar today!

Trial Offer

● For a limited time only, you can get the generous 25¢ jar of NOXZEMA for only 19¢. Get it today and use it for just 10 days. If you don't say it's helped make your skin look better and feel better, your money will be gladly refunded!

New Lipstick For Brunettes Gives Your Lips That "NAUGHTY LOOK"

Eat, Smoke—Yes Kiss

IT STAYS ON

IRENE HERVEY one of Hollywood's Loveliest Who Uses Tayton's

TOREADOR RED . . . It's a knockout for brunettes! A new, flaming, red color. You know how wet lips glisten and attract. That unblotted, moist, naughty look. You see it on the movie queens in their love scenes. Glamour. Sex Appeal, Hollywood calls it. And now the House of Tayton's has produced a new special Moisture-Mix lipstick which gives your mouth that moist, wet, glistening, naughty look, though not actually wet at all . . . And it stays on. Created in Hollywood. An instant hit; neither greasy nor dry . . . Try it. See how glamorous and naughty you look. Lips all shimmery—kiss tempting. So exciting. Romance inviting. Get this naughty Toreador Red for Brunettes (or Barbaric Red for blondes), also 8 other colors of TAYTON'S Moisture-Mix lipsticks in 10c and 25c guest sizes at your dime store. If your store is out ask manager to order or send 25c to Tayton's, Hollywood, Cal., stating whether blonde or brunette.

Tayton's

Lipstick Really Stays On

Home Study Accountancy Training

Accountants who know their work command responsible positions and good incomes. And the need for trained accountants is growing. About 20,000 Certified Public Accountants in U. S. and many thousands more executive accountants. Many earn $2,000 to $10,000. We train you thoroughly at home in spare time for C. P. A. or executive accounting positions. Previous bookkeeping knowledge unnecessary—we prepare you from ground up. Our training personally given by staff of C. P. A.'s. Low cost—easy terms. Write for valuable 48-page book describing opportunities in accounting and telling how you may enter it successfully.

This Book FREE!

LASALLE EXTENSION UNIVERSITY Dept 2318-H CHICAGO

A CORRESPONDENCE INSTITUTION

WORLD FAMOUS • STANDARD MAKE

TYPEWRITERS

as Low as $29.90

10 DAY TRIAL No Money Down!

EASY TERMS as Low as 60¢ a week

YOUR CHOICE—UNDERWOODS! ROYALS! REMINGTON! L. C. SMITHS! WOODSTOCKS! As low as 1/3 mfgrs. orig. price. Typewriters that cost up to $110.00—as low as $29.90. Genuine, standard, full sized rebuilt office models—up-to-date improvements—standard keyboard, back spacer, ribbon reverse, 2 color ribbon, etc. Never before such rock-bottom prices! FULLY GUARANTEED! Backed by 30 years of fair dealing. Ten day trial. Easiest terms in history—as low as 60c a week. FREE big price slashing catalog shows all makes in colors, details on 10 day trial and easiest terms. FREE Van Zandt Touch Typing course with your typewriter. See catalog before you buy. Mail coupon now while stock is complete.

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCHANGE
231 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill. (Dept. 261)
Send Free Catalog in colors showing late model standard Typewriters at tremendous savings with no money down and 10 days' trial.

Name ..... Address .....

Town ..... State .....

much of an exhibitionist as the next ham."

"Well, anyway," I said, impatiently, "I don't see what not being able to play old men has to do with your still wearing the same size hat."

"Plenty to do with it. Unless an actor can strut his stuff from slapstick to Shakespeare and back again, he has no reason for bellows in his chest and an oversized hat. You may say that the actor isn't born who can play everything. There are damn few of them, but I can think of one without trying—John Barrymore. If he should want to make the grandstand gestures, he has the right, he's earned it. I just play the same fundamental character everytime."

I accused him of false modesty.

Gable laughed, "I'm being serious. I'm suffering from a lot of things (such as the desire to hop in the car with Carole and go far away from Hollywood) but I do not suffer from false modesty.

"Thing is, I've got my limitations and I know them. When you're fenced in with limitations, you can't rampage like a prize Spanish bull; you might get hurt."

SPEAKING of things Spanish," I interrupted, "reminds me of that trip of yours to South America. The cheering multitudes, the swooning señoritas and all that kind of dilates the inner man, doesn't it?"

"Say, do you remember reading the newspaper accounts of Will Rogers' trip to South America?" countered Clark. "And Bob Taylor's? And Ty Power's? The multitudes cheer and the señoritas swoon over anyone with a name who goes there. Something pretty swell about it, too, but nothing individual. That's what I mean. Why anyone should think he is any different from anyone else is beyond me. If a man does something no other mortal man has ever done, that's something else again. But that's not true of actors, by and large. The fan mail comes into the studio and is sorted alphabetically. Get the idea? The crowd follows me out of a restaurant or theatre, then turns around and follows Taylor. Same crowd. In pictures, everyone has a niche and I have mine. But how does that make me better than the fellow in the next niche? Follow me?

"No, honey, I can't get up the wind over this business of being a movie star. An actor sells himself, sure, but only if he gets the material. A story can make a star, a star can't make a story; ever think of that? Then, you've got to have a director who knows what you do best and helps you to do it. The producer does pretty much the same for you. A cameraman can like you and fix you pretty or he can hate the shape of your nose and screw you up so that you can ham your fool head off—right on the cutting room floor. It's certainly not a personal success. That's why I can't understand why anyone in movies should feel he is an Institution, let alone an invaluable one.

"I'm glad to have a chance to discuss this, though. I really am. It's a funny thing, but with all the stuff written about me since I came to Hollywood, I don't believe anyone ever asked me to explain me. I've read a lot about this 'being natural' business, and it doesn't seem a matter of much importance to me or one that should require any explanation. But if people are interested in why I haven't blown my hat, I'll tell 'em: It was already blown before I came to Hollywood! There's your answer in a great big nutshell.

"I guess everybody, at one time or another, gets to thinking he's pretty good, especially if he's an actor.

"I went through it when I was a punk kid and had a job with a stock company. The leading man quit and the company couldn't afford a bigger name, so they put me in to play his parts. With the help of the company and the director, I made good. Of course, I thought I was doing it all myself. I got so not a hat I owned fitted me. That was youth, inexperience. To top it, I played in 'Machinal' on the New York stage, and that went over well. Then I knew no one in the world could top me. After that, I had nothing but flops for two whole years. I was even taken out of a couple of shows so that the shows could go on.

Jeff Lynn, who only a short time ago vowed his allegiance to Hollywood's bachelor brigade, plays traitor and switches loyalties to gal friend, Dana Dale.

"Somewhere during this period David Belasco made it clear to me that I hadn't the semblance of an idea about acting. He said he didn't know that I'd ever make it. Then I went to the other extreme, depression, melancholy, but I came out of that, too, onto middle ground. Am I glad Belasco blew me down like that? Damn right I am.

"What I'm getting at is this—and it's something no one ever knew or, for that matter, cared about: I came to Hollywood with humiliation. When I came, in a pretty potent play, 'The Last Mile,' I had no idea of getting into pictures. Lionel Barrymore saw me and spoke for me. Get it? I wasn't rushed out by a chartered plane from New York because Hollywood hungered for Gable.

"I was no 'overnight' success after that either. I think it's pretty well-known that at first I couldn't even get a job as an extra. When I did break in, I got very small parts. A laundryman was one of my first assignments. I played a chauffeur at Warner Brothers. I had a small part with Jean Harlow in 'The Secret Six.' Both of us spent our time wondering whether we'd ever get another job! I made any number of 'B' pictures. Yep, it took me two years to get started after I appeared in that first film. Got my first recognition as the heavy in 'Dance, Fools, Dance.' And why? Because the man I played was a potent guy who bumped off a brace of men and then sat in tails in a drawing room and played soft music on the piano. Why, the boy was a 'natural' when the author's brain conceived him!

"You can't figure stardom. That's why you can't take the bows for it. Like when I played the gangster with Norma Shearer in 'A Free Soul.' I hadn't picked that part for myself with rare acumen—I played it only because every other actor in Hollywood turned it down. Too small for them, they said, too risky. When I socked Norma across the jaw in that picture, it might have done for me, but the women applauded the scene and the goose hung high! What makes a man a star is your guess as well as mine. But I don't have a standing order at the florist to send myself bouquets because I engineered the breaks I've had, for myself!

"When Claudette and I made 'It Happened One Night,' we were both being 'punished' by our studios. I forget what for. The thing wouldn't be any good, it was thought, so we'd just rip through it, have some laughs, let it go at that. You know how that panned out.

"So, again I say, why should anyone take bows for being a part of a good motion picture? Conceit is a disease of the very young."

The assistant director looked in on us again. "We're through for the night, Clark," he said. "See you tomorrow."

Clark reached for his hat. A gray fedora; old, battered, somewhat out of shape.

"Ten years old, this topper," he grinned. He put it on his head. It fit. Perfectly.

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send today for the new up-to-date list of Hollywood stors with their correct studio oddresses. It is a convenient size to hondle or keep in o scrap-book. To receive o list, all you hove to do is write to us and osk for it, enclosing a lorge, self-addressed and stomped envelope. Don't forget that lost item, as no request con be complied with otherwise. Please send request to Informotion Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Modison Ave., New York, New York.

When someone's eyes are judging you can you be sure it's Safe to Smile?...

the Answer's on the tip of your tongue

1 Make the Tongue-Test...

Run the tip of your tongue over your teeth...inside and out. Feel that filmy coating? That's Materia Alba . . . and it doesn't belong on teeth! It collects stains, makes teeth dull, dingy-looking.

2 Your Tongue Tells You

Your tongue tells you what others see... the filmy coating that dims the natural brilliance of your teeth, your smile. And it's this filmy coating that makes teeth look dull...bars your way to romance.

3 Switch to Pepsodent with Irium

Know the joy of Teeth that feel bright to you . . . look bright to others

Pepsodent will remove the filmy coating that clings to teeth . . . the coating your tongue can feel, your friends can see. Because only Pepsodent contains IRIUM . . . super-cleansing agent that loosens and flushes away sticky particles that cling to teeth.

Use Pepsodent regularly. Because Pepsodent also contains an exclusive, new high-polishing agent that safely buffs teeth to such a shiny smoothness, this filmy coating slides off before it can collect and stain.

Only Pepsodent gives you this wonder-working combination that makes your teeth feel so smooth, look so bright. Make sure of the loveliness of your smile. Get a tube of Pepsodent with IRIUM today.

Both from Canada...the scintillating star, FAY WRAY—and the famous chapped skin lotion, ITALIAN BALM

Beautiful, lovely Fay Wray—born in Alberta, Canada—is one of Canada's greatest gifts to beauty, as well as to cinemaland. From Canada also came Italian Balm, the famous chapped skin lotion—another beauty gift for women everywhere.

Campana Italian Balm was originated in Canada in 1881. Through scores of severe Canadian winters, it has been preferred because of the beautifying protection it affords against chapping and ugly rough, dry skin.

An American owned company introduced Italian Balm to the United States in 1926. Since then over 98 million bottles have been sold. Try it on your hands today. Only 10¢, 20¢, 35¢, 60¢, $1.00 a bottle. If you prefer a hand cream, try Campana Hand Cream —10¢, 25¢, 50¢ jars.

DATE BAIT

(Continued from page 33)

to utter. Nowadays the Parrish telephone is gathering cobwebs. Hollywood's younger suitors don't bother to call, and when they speak of Helen and Charlie, they hyphenate the names.

A few years before Brenda Joyce became one of the most promising starlets in Hollywood, she was "the popularity kid" in school and always the center of a group of the smoothest boy students.

WHEN Brenda first met Owen Ward she looked him over, liked what she saw and smiled her Sunday smile. Which is very, very Sunday. Ward returned the smile blandly and said, "Nice to have met you. Goodbye." And walked away.

That was a new one in Brenda's book. Never before had a boy been able to dismiss the high voltage look in her eyes. It fascinated her and piqued her a bit, too. She decided that Owen needed looking into. From that day on, Brenda contrived to meet him in the school corridors between classes, at the lunchroom and at the games. In fact, Miss Joyce began to make a career out of meeting Owen Ward. Finally, she shook her pack of pursuers one day and ran into Owen alone. She grabbed his arm as he attempted to pass by with just a brief nod, and asked quite bluntly, "What's wrong with me? Why do you avoid me?" Two very leading questions that most girls would rather die than ask. But not Brenda.

Owen pondered and smiled quizzically. "I like you, but I don't care to be just one of the boys."

Soon it was just Owen Ward and Brenda Joyce. It still is today. Owen's an unusual type of American youth. He wants no part of Brenda's publicity and ballyhoo. He refuses to take her to the well-known night-spots frequented by the stars, and he won't have himself mugged by the hocus focus men with Brenda.

Casting director Lew Schrieber pleaded with Owen to take a screen test, but the answer was an unqualified "Nothing doing," and he meant it. But that's all right with Brenda. Owen's studying to take his public accountant examinations, and when he passes them the two kids will probably team up together for life.

It didn't happen in Hollywood but in Dallas, Texas—the meeting between Linda Darnell and Jaime Jorba (pronounced Hymie Yorba). This young Spanish refugee hadn't been a high school student more than a week before practically all the girls were swooning over "the marvelous new man." All of them except Linda Darnell who thought it was disgusting to go so completely haywire over some insignificant boy.

When she met him accidentally at lunch one day, she found him as courteous as he was handsome. She was glad to admit she was wrong, and from the way Linda talked to us about Jaime, it was easy to infer that she had "fallen" for him at the first meeting. And apparently he for her.

In order to be near Linda, Jaime defied the government and overstayed his six-month visitor's permit. As a result, he had to go to Mexico City where he has remained for over three years. Each week, however, Linda gets a letter from Jaime written in Spanish, which she learned with a speed that she had never shown in her other school subjects.

"I have been dreaming about seeing Jaime for the past three and a half years," Linda told us. Of course, I've been seeing dozens of other boys—having a wonderful time, but I could never fall in love with anyone else until I found out for sure about Jaime. I don't know whether it would be possible for us to be happily married or not. He is even more jealous than the average Spaniard.

"He's jealous of my career, for instance. He told me he would demand that I quit pictures immediately after marriage. But who knows—if he is the same person I knew in Dallas, I may even be willing to do that."

We all know it's no trick to look provocative sipping champagne, but when a girl can look glamorous guzzling a double dip soda, a fellow really has something! Just ask the man who dates one. Don Kahn's the lucky chap in question this time, and Ann Rutherford's the gal. Yes, the way to Ann's heart was via the chocolate soda route. Don lured her out for one ten minutes after they were introduced, and the romance was off to a swell start—until....

ONE morning, Chuck Isaacs, one of Don's closest pals, went along to a breakfast party given by Ann at her new Westwood Hills home. One look and he knew she was the girl he'd always wanted to share a chocolate soda with—but every time he took her out Don went along!

Chuck is a yachtsman of some note on Pacific waters, so he asked Ann to go sailing with him. She consented and blithely suggested that Don go along, too. Chuck had to agree, even though the idea didn't appeal to him much. As they sailed from Coronado to Catalina, Chuck gave Ann a few lessons in navigation while Don sat nearby in the cockpit and burned.

He felt much better about it, though, when he read in a Hollywood column that "Chuck Isaacs, the boy with the yacht, is running around with Ann Rutherford—who likes yachts." That was a measure of consolation. Maybe Ann liked the yacht better than Chuck. Don asked her point-blank, while the three of them were sipping chocolate sodas.

Ann told the two boys she liked them both equally well and that she didn't know two other boys whom she liked better. But, she added, she had to think only of her career for the present. Only a super-diplomat could say that to her two most persistent suitors and make them like it.

They liked it and Ann so well that the breach which was ruining a good friendship was mended. They still go out with Ann together most of the time. They accept with grace her breaking of dates at the last minute, because they know she does so only when she's working overtime or is too tired from long hours before the camera. They're on hand, too, when she asks them to take her out at the last minute.

Yes, Don and Chuck like Polly Benedict Rutherford so well that it has reached a point where the three of them have even dipped three straws into the same chocolate soda! That's really the test of friendship and adolescent love!

But having boy meet girl is the same old headache to the Hollywood scripter or praiser. He still speculates on how he can cleverly get the verb "meets" to fit cozily between "boy" and "girl." Somebody ought to tell him how well the real Hollywood boys and girls manage that all by themselves!

SHOOTING FOR THE STARS

(Continued from page 25)

"On the other hand, an actress like Merle Oberon gives the photographer a good deal of work. Her countenance can only be photographed from certain angles. And as to clothes, her body requires that she wear either fluffy dresses or evening gowns to show her up to advantage. Jean Arthur, a dear friend of mine, won't mind my mentioning that her face is also a lighting job, but, when it comes to attire, she is perfectly photogenic in anything from a cowboy costume to a bathing suit.

"Thinking back on personalities, I recall that I had difficulties with Ingrid Bergman when I worked on 'Intermezzo.' Ingrid is really two persons. Shoot her from one side and she's breath-takingly beautiful. Shoot her from the other, and she's average."

Toland paused for punctuation, then smiled.

"Of course," he said cheerfully, "I'd rather photograph girls like June Lang and Arleen Whelan with their pretty little faces, than any. Because they're no work at all. You set your camera and your lights anywhere, and they still look cute. If I shot them constantly, though, I'd become far too lazy."

Now he spoke of the stronger sex.

"The most photogenic male is Gary Cooper. But he looks best when he isn't photographed well! Here's what I mean. If he's shot casually and naturally, without frills or fuss, he has plenty of femme appeal. He doesn't have to be dolled up like the juvenile leads. If you don't believe me, just take a gander at him in 'The Westerner.' He's grand in it and without special lighting or any make-up.

"Henry Fonda is another I enjoy working with. He also doesn't require make-up. And he's so damn intelligent. Understands props, stage business, electricity. You know, Fonda's main hobby is photography, and on 'The Grapes of Wrath' he spent half his time looking through my camera, which, of course, gave him a better understanding of what I was after."

I inquired about Toland's most recent and celebrated patient, Orson Welles.

"SHOT 'Citizen Kane' in sixteen weeks," explained Toland. "It's an unusual picture. For example, we worked with no beams or parallels (to hold spots) for the first time in Hollywood history. All sets were given natural ceilings, which made bright lighting difficult but also made for realism.

"Orson Welles was an interesting type to shoot, especially his characterization, changing from a lad of twenty-five to an old man of seventy, and wearing, in old age, blood-shot glass-caps over his eyes.

"His problem, today, will depend on whether audiences prefer him as a character actor or as himself. I like one quality in his acting and direction. Stubbornness. He would bitterly fight every technical problem that came up. Never say die. Never."

Gregg Toland confessed that the one defect he'd found in most actors and actresses was discoloration and lines or wrinkles under their eyes. "Were we to leave them natural, it would make them appear tired and haggard on the screen, especially since they are amplified so greatly. So, I place bright spotlights directly in their faces, which wash out these lines and make their faces smoother."

Then Toland began discussing technical problems in a very untechnical manner. It was a liberal education in cinema craft. He spoke fondly of "The Grapes of Wrath." Said he enjoyed much of it because he was able to shoot his favorite type of scene—building somber moods through shadowy low-keyed lighting, such as the opening candlelight scene in that classic of the soil. "We slaved, Jack Ford and I, to make that picture real," Toland revealed. "We sent the cast out to acquire good healthy sunburns. We threw away soft diffusion lenses. We shot the whole thing candid-camera style, like a newsreel. That's the trend today in Hollywood. Realism.

"Of course," he added, "sometimes realism is attained only through complete trickery. Remember the third or fourth shot in the beginning of 'The Long Voyage Home?' The scene of the ship floating and rocking on the water? Here's how that was done. I had the studio build half a miniature boat, set it on a dry stage. Then I took a pan full of plain water, placed it on a level with my lens—and shot my scene over this pan of water, catching the boat and giving the perfect

(Continued on page 84)

(Continued from page 62)

NAME	MARRIED TO	DATE OF MARRIAGE	MATE'S PROFESSION	PREVIOUS MATES	CHILDREN	STATUS OF MARRIAGE
Holden, Fay	David Clyde	Winter, 1914	Actor	None	None	Love found Ma Hardy
Holt, Tim	Virginia Ashcraft	Dec. 10, 1938	Student	None	Lance, 1	Definitely stable
Hope, Bob	Dolores Read	Dec. 25, 1934	Singer	None	Linda, 16 mos.; Tony, 6 mos.; both adopted	Yehoodi beams on this one
Howard, Leslie	Ruth Martin	Mar. 13, 1916	Social worker	None	Ronald, 22; Leslie, 17	The rumors persist
Hubbard, John	Lois Golder	Apr. 1, 1939	Non-prof.	None	Initial production on way	Bill-y and coo-y
Hudson, Rochelle	Hal Thompson	Aug. 16, 1939	Disney director	None	None	Storm warnings posted
Hunt, Marsha	Jerry Hopper	Dec. 23, 1938	Film editor	None	None	Christmas every day
Hunter, Ian	Casha Pringle	Fall, 1926	Actress	None	Jolyon, 12; Robin, 9	Ecstatic in a reserved way
Hymer, Warren	Virginia Meyer	Feb. 21, 1936	Non-prof.	None	None	Not too happy
Jagger, Dean	Antoinette Lowrance	Jan. 29, 1935	Writer	None	None	Won't emulate Brigham Young's
Jones, Allan	Irene Hervey	June 26, 1936	Actress	One	Jack, 3; son, 11, by first wife	Close harmony
Jones, Buck	Odelle Osborn	August, 1915	Non-prof.	None	Maxine, 23	Riding high
Joslyn, Allyn	Dorothy Yockel	Mar. 7, 1934	Actress	None	None	Yockel-girl makes good
Kibbee, Guy	Brownie Read	Aug. 27, 1927	Advertising copywriter	None	Shirley, 9; Guy, Jr., 5	Still Lohengrinning
Kruger, Otto	Susan MacNamany	Sept. 20, 1919	Actress	None	Ottilie Ann, 14	A wear-ever model
Lake, Arthur	Patricia Van Cleve	July 25, 1937	Actress	None	None	On an even keel
Lake, Veronica	John Detlie	Sept. 26, 1940	Studio art director	None	None	June in January
Lang, June	John Roselli	Apr. 1, 1940	Businessman	Vic Orsatti	None	Too sudden to be sure
Langford, Frances	Jon Hall	June 4, 1938	Actor	None	None	Love in tune
LaRue, Jack	Constance Deighton-Simpson	Jan. 31, 1937	Socialite	None	None	Coasting along
Laughton, Charles	Elsa Lanchester	Feb. 28, 1929	Actress	None	None	They Found What They Wanted
Lederer, Francis	Margo	Oct. 16, 1937	Actress	One	None	Separation looks permanent
Leeds, Andrea	Bob Howard	Oct. 25, 1939	Millionaire sportsman	None	Heir en route	In fine shape
Leigh, Vivien	Laurence Olivier	Aug. 30, 1940	Actor	Leigh Holman	Suzanne, 7, by former marriage	A fire hazard
Livingston, Robert	Dorothy Gee	Nov. 30, 1935	Non-prof.	None	None	Made in heaven
Lockhart, Gene	Kathleen Arthur	June 12, 1924	Actress	None	June, 15	Long term contract
Lombard, Carole	Clark Gable	Mar. 29, 1939	Actor	Wm. Powell	None	Ask Mr. Gable
Lorre, Peter	Cecile Lvovsky	June 22, 1934	Actress	None	None	Two sensible people
Louise, Anita	Maurice E. Adler	May 18, 1940	Theatre owner	None	None	Sittin' pretty
Loy, Myrna	Arthur Hornblow	June 27, 1936	Producer	None	None	There's been talk
Lugosi, Bela	Lillian Arch	Jan. 31, 1933	Non-prof.	Beatrice Weeks	None	Thrills but no chills
Lupino, Ida	Louis Hayward	Nov. 16, 1938	Actor	None	None	Nothing wayward about Hayward
MacDonald, Jeanette	Gene Raymond	June 16, 1937	Actor	None	None	Molasses and honey
MacLane, Barton	Charlotte Wynters	Nov. 22, 1939	Actress	One	None	Toast-burning stage
MacMurray, Fred	Lillian Lamont	June 20, 1936	Show girl	None	Susan, 5 mos. adopted	Stars in their eyes
March, Fredric	Florence Eldridge	Spring, 1928	Actress	None	Penelope, 8; Tony, 6½; both adopted	Perpetual devotion
Marshal, Alan	Mary Grace Borel	Nov. 18, 1938	Socialite	None	One infant	They're likethis
Marshall, Herbert	Lee Russell	Feb. 27, 1940	Actress	Mollie Maitland; Edna Best	Sarah, 8, by Edna Best	Safe on third
Martin, Mary	Richard Halliday	May 4, 1940	Literary agent	None	None	Aflame
Massen, Osa	Alan Hersholt	Dec. 15, 1938	Film critic	None	None	Following in the Hersholt tradition
Massey, Raymond	Dorothy Whitney	July 10, 1939	Socialite	Peggy Fremantle, Adrienne Allen	Son, 17, and daughter, 7, by first wife; son, 3, by second wife	This time's the last time
Maynard, Ken	Bertha Denham	Nov. 15, 1939	Circus performer	Mary Elsa	None	Faring better than first
McCrea, Joel	Frances Dee	Oct. 20, 1933	Actress	None	Joel, 6; David, 5	Dee-lightful
McHugh, Frank	Dorothy McIsaacs	Feb. 27, 1933	Non-prof.	None	Michael, 5; Peter, 11, and Susan, 8, by wife's first marriage	The real McHugh
McLaglen, Victor	Edna Lamont	Oct. 28, 1919	Non-prof.	None	Andrew, 20; Sheila, 17	Good as new
McPhail, Douglas	Betty Jaynes	January, 1939	Singer	None	Joan Lorraine, 1	Smooth sailing
Menjou, Adolphe	Verree Teasdale	Aug. 25, 1934	Actress	Two	Peter Adolphe, 4	Verree happy
Merkel, Una	Ronald Burla	Jan. 1, 1932	Engineer	None	None	"Perfect," says Una

NAME	MARRIED TO	DATE OF MARRIAGE	MATE'S PROFESSION	PREVIOUS MATES	CHILDREN	STATUS OF MARRIAGE
Milland, Ray	Muriel Webber	Oct. 2, 1931	Non-prof.	None	Daniel David, 9 mos.	Honeymoon for three
Mitchell, Thomas	Rachel Hartzell	Jan., 1938	Actress	One	Ann, 22, by first wife	Like the 'Frisco quake—shaky
Montgomery, Robert	Elizabeth Allen	Apr. 14, 1928	Actress	None	Betty, 7; Robert, 4	Having wonderful time
Moore, Constance	Johnny Maschio	Apr. 29, 1939	Actors' agent	None	None	Lifelong option lifted
Morgan, Dennis	Lillian Vedder	Sept. 5, 1933	Retired drama teacher	None	Stanley, 6; Kristen, 3	Going down for the 3rd time
Mowbray, Alan	Lorraine Carpenter	Aug. 1, 1930	Non-prof.	None	Patricia, 10; Alan II, 6	Entitled to service stripes
Muni, Paul	Bella Finkel	May 8, 1921	Former stage actress	None	None	Stands the test of time
Murphy, George	Juliette Johnson	Dec. 28, 1926	Former dancing partner	None	Dennis Michael, 2	Lucky partners
Naish, J. Carrol	Gladys Heaney	Feb. 10, 1928	Actress	None	Carol Elaine, 9	It's a "take"
Niven, David	Primula Rollo	Oct. 3, 1940	Social worker	None	None	No recent communique
Nolan, Lloyd	Mell Efird	May 10, 1933	Actress	None	One en route	Straight from "Modern Romances"
Oakie, Jack	Venita Varden	Mar. 23, 1936	Actress	None	None	Peaceful at present
Oberon, Merle	Alexander Korda	June 5, 1939	Producer	None	None	Complete ac-Korda
O'Brien, George	Marguerite Churchill	July 15, 1933	Retired actress	None	Erin, 5½; Darcy, 1½	Must be unlucky at cards
O'Brien, Pat	Eloise Taylor	Jan. 23, 1931	Actress	None	Mavourneen, 6; Sean, 3; Christopher, 2; all adopted	No quarrels yet
O'Hara, Maureen	George Brown	May 28, 1940	Film technical adviser in Eire	None	None	Oceans apart
O'Keefe, Dennis	Steffi Duna	Oct. 18, 1940	Actress	Louise Stanley	None	Made for each other
Olivier, Laurence	Vivien Leigh	Aug. 30, 1940	Actress	Jill Esmond	Simon, 5, by first marriage	Story-book stuff
O'Sullivan, Maureen	John W. Farrow	Sept. 25, 1934	Writer; now in Canadian army	None	Michael, 1½	Temporary war casualty
Pallette, Eugene	Marjorie Cagnacci	Sept. 19, 1932	Non-prof.	None	None	No news is good news
Parker, Cecilia	Dick Baldwin	June 2, 1938	Actor	None	First on its way	Look up synonym for "bliss"

(Continued on page 98)

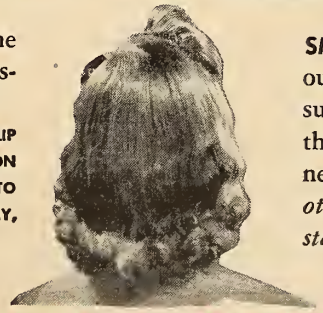
Our ads neither coax nor hoax-

YOU DON'T find personal opinions... private research... high-pressure claims... or special pleading... in ads for Philip Morris cigarettes.



Claims or pleas look silly against this vital, proved difference!

Read it...summed up in the findings of a group of distinguished doctors:

WHEN SMOKERS CHANGED TO PHILIP MORRIS EVERY CASE OF IRRITATION OF THE NOSE OR THROAT—DUE TO SMOKING—CLEARED COMPLETELY, OR DEFINITELY IMPROVED!

SMOKING-PLEASURE without penalties! Philip Morris' superiority—for the nose and throat—is recognized by eminent medical authorities. No other cigarette can make that statement!

CALL FOR PHILIP MORRIS

America's FINEST Cigarette

CREATORS OF FAMOUS CIGARETTES FOR 92 YEARS. ALWAYS UNDER THE PHILIP MORRIS NAME

HOURS OF Continuous Action in FEMININE HYGIENE

Made Possible By Remarkable Scientific Development

● A remarkably advanced method in feminine hygiene is now creating a sensation from coast-to-coast. For this amazing method is not only dainty and safe—but gives continuous action for hours without use of poison. And actually kills germs at contact.

Called Zonitors—these dainty, snow-white suppositories spread a greaseless, protective coating. To kill germs, bacteria on contact. To cleanse antiseptically. To deodorize—not by temporarily masking—but by destroying odor.

Zonitors are most powerful continuous-action suppositories. Yet entirely gentle to delicate tissues. Non-caustic, contain no poison. Don't burn. Even help promote healing.

Greaseless, Zonitors are completely removable with water. Nothing to mix, no apparatus needed. Come 12 in package individually sealed in glass bottles. Get Zonitors at druggists. Follow this amazingly safe way in feminine hygiene women are raving about.

FREE revealing booklet, sent in plain envelope. Write Zonitors, 1107-B, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

Zonitors

Nervous, Weak Ankles Swollen

Excess acids, poisons and wastes in your blood are removed chiefly by your kidneys. Getting Up Nights, Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes, and feeling worn out, often are caused by non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. Usually in such cases, the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess acids and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. A printed guarantee wrapped around each package of Cystex insures an immediate refund of the full cost unless you are completely satisfied. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose under this positive money back guarantee so get Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c.

FREE CLUB PIN & RING CATALOG

PINS 30c up—RINGS $1.50

Quality made . . . silver, gold plated, etc. Our new book shows over 300 handsome, smart, up-to-the-minute designs by Bastian craftsmen . . . oldest, largest makers. Write for your Free copy today!

BASTIAN BROS. Dept. 54, Rochester, N. Y.

EASY WAY....

Tints Hair JET BLACK

This remarkable CAKE discovery, TINTZ Jet Black Shampoo, washes out dirt, loose dandruff, grease, grime and safely gives hair a real smooth JET BLACK TINT that fairly glows with life and lustre. Don't put up with faded dull, burnt, off color hair a minute longer. TINTZ Jet Black Cake works gradual . . . each shampoo leaves your hair blacker, lovelier, softer, easier to manage. No dyed look. Won't hurt permanents. Full cake 50c (3 for $1). TINTZ comes in Jet Black, light, medium and dark Brown, Titian, and Blonde. Order today! State shade wanted.

SEND NO MONEY Just pay postman plus postage on our positive assurance of satisfaction in 7 days or your money back. (We Pay Postage if remittance comes with order.) Don't wait—Write today to illusion of its being in the water. But I better not tell you too much of that. Trade secrets, you know. You better have another beer . . ."

TINTZ COMPANY, Dept. 851, 207 N. MICHIGAN, CHICAGO

CANADIAN OFFICE: Dept. 851, 22 COLLEGE STREET, TORONTO

(Continued from page 81)

But, instead of another beer, I indulged in something equally stimulating. I saw another ace cameraman. I left Toland, drove out into the Valley north of Hollywood and halted before an intimate Oriental restaurant bearing a blinking neon that read "Ching How."

This restaurant was the hobby and hide-out of the cherubic Chinese cameraman, James Wong Howe, the place where he came in the evening, to chat with old friends or supervise a steaming chow mein after a hard and tiresome day with Ann Sheridan, Rita Hayworth, Hedy Lamarr or Loretta Young!

LOOKING at Jimmy Howe, you'd never know what he's been through and what his keen eyes have seen. Not because he has the "inscrutable" yellow man's face of fiction, the traditional face that hides feelings and emotions, but because he is so cheerful, so friendly, so disarmingly sincere.

You wouldn't know that he once fought gory battles in the fistic arena for ten bucks a knockout, or that he got his first job in Hollywood as a camera assistant at that same price. But you would know, immediately, that Jimmy Howe is as American as you or I, born in Pasco, Washington, of a farmer father; and you would know, too, immediately, that he understands more about Hollywood stars than any photographer alive.

I found Jimmy Howe a little interview-shy when it came to discussing personalities. That was because he'd been burned once. Recently, a reporter asked him about Bette Davis, and Howe told the reporter that Bette's enormous eyes were her finest feature, and that they must be emphasized by lighting, whereas her long thin neck must be shadowed. The reporter misquoted him as stating that Bette was badly pop-eyed. Ever since, Howe has been afraid to explain the truth to Bette—and if she reads this—well, hell, Bette, the guy thinks you're the greatest actress on earth!

Over a delicious dish of aged Chinese eggs, bamboo shoots and other Far Eastern delicacies, in a nook of his popular eatery, Jimmy Howe softened sufficiently to discuss the women he had captured for celluloid.

He digressed on the subject of glamour gals.

"Hedy Lamarr has more glamour than anyone in Hollywood. Her jet black hair and fine light complexion, marvelously contrasting, requires no faking soft diffusion lens. But, like all glamour ladies, she must be aided by the cameraman. First of all, I took attention away from her lack of full breasts by playing up her eyes and lips. With a bright light I created a shadow to make you forget her weak chin. Then, I really went to town! I planted an arc on a level with her eyes, shadowing her forehead and blending it and her hair into a dark background. Now, all attention was focused on her eyes. Remember her first meeting with Boyer in 'Algiers?' Her eyes got away with lines that would never have passed Mr. Hays.

"It's an old glamour trick. The average girl should learn it. For example, when you wear a hat with a low brim, and then have to peer out from under the brim, it makes you more interesting, centers attention on your orbs. When you sport a half-veil, you have to look from behind it and thus become an exciting and intriguing person. There's no question about it. The eyes certainly have it.

"Now Ann Sheridan. Her gorgeous throat and shoulders, and those lips. I light them up and disguise the fact that her nose is irregular and her cheeks overly plump. Incidentally, to correct her nose, which curves slightly to the left, I put kliegs full on the left side of her face, pushing her nose perfectly straight. Once, on 'Torrid Zone,' when Annie arrived on the set with a pimple on her chin, I had the make-up man convert it into a beauty mark, and then viewing her through the camera, realized that this concentrated attention on her full lips, which made her even more glamorous!

"Each actress, no matter how beautiful, becomes a problem. Madeleine Carroll has a good and bad side to her face, like so many others. I always shoot her three-quarters, because it thins her out. A full face shot makes her too fleshy. With Myrna Loy, there must not be white around her neck, because it's too contrasting to her complexion. Moreover, lights must be low, shooting upward, to reduce the size of her underpinnings.

"Zorina, off-screen, relaxing, is an ordinary woman, with a good-sized healthy body. But, the minute she dances before the camera, her true personality grows. Her face turns from good looking to gorgeous. Her body becomes smaller and willowy. She's easy to work with, except that an enthusiastic uncle of hers, a doctor, gave her four vaccination marks when she was young, and we have to get rid of them with make-up and special lights.

"But you want to know the most photogenic lady I ever set my lens upon? Priscilla Lane. An absolutely eye-soothing face, despite a generous mouth. A fine skin texture. A rounded facial structure. Mmm. Lovely to look at.

"There is no perfect camera face, Confucius say. Not even Loretta Young, who is reputed to have a camera-proof face. Why, she wouldn't want a perfect face and neither would any other actress. A perfect face, without irregular features, would be monotonous and tiresome to observe. Of course, a well-balanced face is another thing. Oh, I've seen so-called perfect faces—those composite photographs showing Lamarr's eyes, Leigh's nose, Dietrich's lips—but the result is always surprisingly vacant!

MOST women must be photographed with flat lights, shooting down from a forty-five degree angle, because this lighting washes out any defects. Whereas, a cross-lighting from either side, while it makes the face natural and round and real, also accentuates wrinkles, blemishes and bad lines. There are exceptions. Flat lighting would wash Joan Crawford's face clean to the point of blankness. Cross-lighting chisels her beautifully. But others can't stand up as well.

"I'm not telling you these inside items on the stars to give you a sensational story. I'm trying to point out this—that while the Chinese author, Lin Yutang, wrote a book called 'The Importance of Living,' I should like to write one called, 'The Importance of Lighting.' It's all-important. Take a look at the way celebrities appear in a newsreel, without careful kliegs adjusted to them. They seem messy.

"Why, the only newsreel personages I ever saw who looked decent without expert work on them, and who were, in fact, once offered a million dollars to come to Hollywood, were the Windsors. Now Wally Simpson is a bit too thin in the face and has some blemishes. But this could be corrected by shooting her three-quarters, the lights flat against her. She should never be shot in profile. As to the Duke, Edward himself, well, while he often appears a bit weary and haggard, he would have to be kept that way in Hollywood. It's part of his adult charm. We wouldn't want to wash that out with faked brightness."

Now the little man expounded on picture-making. He told exactly the way pictures should be made. Here's Howe:

"My theory of picture-making is that a movie must run true. It must be real. You must not feel that it is obviously a movie. A big fault is that photographers often try to make their photography stand out. That is bad. If you go away raving about the photography of certain scenes, you've seen a bad photographic job.

"When I was a beginner, 'way back, I had that common failing. I never gave a damn about the actor. All I wanted was to get those fat beautiful clouds in, so people would say, 'Some shot. Some photographer.' But now I know that's not professional."

There was one more thing. I had a hunch a lot of photographers, like producers, were repressed actors at heart. Did James Wong Howe ever aspire to histrionics?

"Oh, once I almost became an actor. The late Richard Boleslavsky wanted me to play with Greta Garbo in 'The Painted Veil.' Just a bit part. I refused. My place is behind the big machine, not in front of it. Besides I'd be scared stiff. Me, Wong Howe, an actor? Hell, the boys would rib the pants off me!"

To continue my scientific study of the lads behind the lenses, I went to a party of General Service Studios. There, on the lavish set of "Lady Hamilton," Vivien Leigh was passing out cake to celebrate her birthday, and a stocky, dark-haired handsome man named Rudolph Mate was celebrating his first year as a full-fledged American citizen.

Rudolph Mate, born in Poland, student of philosophy, lover of fine paintings, was the cameraman on the newest Leigh-Olivier vehicle. His previous pictures had been movie milestones—"Love Affair," "Foreign Correspondent" and "Seven Sinners."

I asked Mate about the ingredients that make a tip-top photographer, and he answered very slowly and very precisely. He spoke slowly to prevent becoming mixed in the languages he knows—French, German, Hungarian, Russian, Polish, English and pinochle—all of which he speaks fluently.

TO become a good photographer, one must have a complete knowledge of the technical end," stated Mate. He pointed toward his $15,000 movable camera. "One must make everything about that instrument a habit, a second nature, as natural and uncomplicated as walking. This complete technical knowledge gives one time, on the set, to think in terms of the story being shot. A photographer must be creative, imaginative. Above all, he must have a talent for continuity.

"What do I mean by continuity? The celluloid mustn't be scatterbrained. For example, every day a cameraman looks at the daily rushes of the footage he's shot. Some photographers have excellent daily rushes, excellent separate scenes—but, when the film is cut, patched together, it's mediocre and without full meaning because the cameraman had no feel of harmony, no sense of continuity.

"A cameraman must be thorough. I study a script page by page and solve each problem as I study it. Also, on the side, I study oil paintings and works of art. In fact, I have a big collection of my own, because this study gives a cameraman knowledge of composition and color."

Rudolph Mate was ecstatic about Vivien Leigh as Lady Hamilton.

"A marvelous subject. Cool. Positive. The certain beauty of a steel dagger. No bad facial angles. And an actress in her head and in her heart. Laurence Olivier is fine for me to shoot, too. His face is so expressive. It has so much character.

Mate admitted that he had enjoyed toiling with Marlene Dietrich on "Seven Sinners," and that he was scheduled to do her next opus at Universal.

"She has a wonderful head. I mean both brains and shape. Furthermore, like no other actress, she understands lighting problems and angles, and takes all suggestions without a fight. She is cooperative despite the nonsense you read. She will pose for fifty different takes if need be. The reason she knows so much is that she acquired her photographic education from Josef Von Sternberg, her first director, who still has the best pictorial mind in the cinema business."

Mate, I understood, was a master magician at trickery. He could make anything real. In "Lady Hamilton," you'll see the Battle of Trafalgar, when Olivier as Lord Nelson is killed. It'll be a terrific scene, realistic as war and death—but remember, it was made with miniature boats, only five feet tall, costing $1,000 each, and the cannon balls were tiny marbles shot into thin balsa wood.

Remember, too, that Mate can—and often has—made mob scenes involving thousands of people with just a half

Did Scarlett Spoil VIVIEN LEIGH?

LEARN THE FACTS behind Hollywood gossip. February SCREEN GUIDE takes you on the set as "Scarlett" Leigh and Laurence Olivier film the story of a famous illicit romance. You will be movie-wise if you get on the inside with SCREEN GUIDE.

MORE SCOOP PHOTO-FEATURES

"Hollywood's Battle of the Night Clubs"—War between the beauties who baffle the censors and make the stars jealous.

"Carole Lombard Can't Fool the Public"—Mrs. Gable runs wild again.

"Norma Shearer Steps Down"—What now for the ex-First Lady?

"Deanna Durbin, 1941 Model"—Have four years of stardom hurt Deanna? What are her hopes and plans?

Full-Color Photos in February SCREEN GUIDE: Rooney, Shearer, Garland, Disney's Fantasia, sensational Joan Leslie! Also pages of intimate gossip, beauty advice, film reviews, authentic fashions worn by the glamourous women of Hollywood.

FREE—If you haven't seen a copy lately, write to SCREEN GUIDE, Dept. M2, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, for a recent issue.

SCREEN GUIDE FEBRUARY ISSUE Now on Sale at ALL NEWSSTANDS 10¢

YOU'LL ALWAYS BE CONSTIPATED UNLESS—

You correct faulty living habits—unless liver bile flows freely every day into your intestines to help digest fatty foods. SO USE COMMON SENSE! Drink more water, eat more fruit and vegetables. And if assistance is needed, take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They not only assure gentle yet thorough bowel movements but ALSO stimulate liver bile to help digest fatty foods and tone up intestinal muscular action.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! Used successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards in treating patients for constipation and sluggish liver bile. Test their goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢ and 60¢.

Gives a natural, youthful appearance. Easy to use in the clean privacy of your home; not greasy; will not rub off nor interfere with curling. For 30 years, millions have used it with complete satisfaction. $1.35 for sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE

BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. Dept. M2-41
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.
Name.....
Street.....
City..... State.....
GIVE ORIGINAL HAIR COLOR

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

dozen extras. This he has accomplished with a special "button lens," one with 220 separate openings for images, thus multiplying anything it is focused upon.

Rudolph Mate had a date with Vivien Leigh, in front of the camera, and I had one, at Warner Brothers Studio, with a gentleman named Ernie Haller, a studious architect who wound up by becoming the genius to put that little tidbit labeled "Gone With the Wind" on celluloid.

Good-natured, bespectacled Ernie Haller didn't waste words. "The cameraman's main duty is to tell a story with lighting. Next, he must have a thorough understanding or feeling for composition; you know, how to group and balance people and objects properly. It's like salesmanship—you create a point of interest, and you try to sell the fans a star or an idea by subtly focusing attention on this point of interest."

Haller referred to a few tangible points of interest.

"I'm not merely being loyal to Warners when I tell you Ann Sheridan is the most photogenic female in this town today. Her features are well proportioned and take lighting easily. The most photogenic man is Errol Flynn. His oval face stands up from any angle or under any lighting condition.

"But, as you know, we have our sticklers, too. There's Clark Gable. I always shoot him three-quarters, so that you see only one of his ears. If you saw both at once, they'd look like mine do—stick out like the arms of a loving cup.

BRENDA MARSHALL, whom I'm working with at present, is a fine actress. Her only defects are a slightly crooked nose and eyes set too closely together. I light up one side of her face more fully to straighten the nose, and push inkies square into Brenda's face to spread her eyes.

"When I shot GWTW, I found Vivien Leigh ideal for Technicolor. But I learned too much light was extremely bad for her. Her face was delicate and small, and full brightness would wash out her features and spoil the modeling of her countenance. Another thing. She has blue eyes. David Selznick wanted them green. So I set up a baby spot with amber gelatine, placed it under my lens, and Scarlett wound up with green eyes.

"Listen, they all have handicaps that we have to correct. Most have square jaws, which must be softened and rounded. Some have prominent noses, which requires a low light set at the knees to push up their noses. Some actresses have thin legs. We plant spots right at their feet to fill 'em out.

"There's no limit to what we have to do. We keep middle-aged actresses young by using special diffusing lenses that make faces mellow, hazy, soft, foggy, ethereal. We use these lenses on mood scenes, too, thus enabling us to create cold, crisp mornings on hot, sultry days.

"In my time, I've put them all in my black box. Some who were difficult and some who were easy, ranging from Mae Murray and Norma Talmadge to Dick Barthelmess and Bette Davis. I've never had trouble because I knew sculpturing, knew the basic foundation of the human face and was able to become, literally, a plastic surgeon with lights." Says Haller:

"Most trick stuff is in the hands of the Optical Printing Department of any studio. This is conducted by specialized cameramen and special effects men who manufacture 75% of the mechanical trick scenes. Most impossible scenes are done in miniature, caught by a camera that blows them eight times normal."

Ernie Haller, with an eye for the unusual, summarized some of the crazy paradoxes he'd run into during his many semesters in the movie village. He said that big banquet scenes were always filmed right after lunch, because the extras weren't so hungry then and wouldn't eat so much expensive food! Moonlit night scenes were taken in the daytime with a filter, because real moonlight was not photogenic. Faked fights photographed better than real ones, because real ones appeared too silly. Sequences on an ocean liner had to be faked on dry land, because an honest-to-goodness boat pitched and heaved too much for the average camera. Blank cartridges recorded better on the sound track. Real ones were too high-pitched.

"In barroom sequences," concluded Haller, "cold tea is better than whiskey, not because it photographs better but because actors have to drink a lot of it—and tea, sir, keeps them sober!"

So there. You've met some of the boys from the ASC. Now paste Gregg Toland's classical outburst into your hat—

"Tell 'em we're not low-grade mechanical morons, we cameramen. Tell 'em we're creative artists, by God!"

And, by God, they certainly are!

How it feels to be one of the world's most envied wives is illustrated by Pat Paterson's happy smile as she dinner dates with husband Charles Boyer.

ALL THIS IS HOLLYWOOD, TOO!

(Continued from page 35)

Across the street and just a half block before the renowned intersection of Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street is the massive Pantages Theatre. This movie temple, along with Warner's Theatre and Grauman's Chinese, represents all of Hollywood's first-run show houses. The film capital of the world possesses only three first-rate theatres!

But on premiere nights, when strips of virginal celluloid make their public débuts, these theatres are really carnivals to see. Brightly carpeted in front, decorated with microphones and crouching cameramen, studded with stars, packed with energetic autograph collectors and five hundred members of the inky-fingered sect—the theatres are topped by a battery of three or four metal-capped kliegs, their long white slivers of light piercing the blue heaven above in crazy patterns, crossing and criss-crossing.

AND here, if we may be so unromantic as to inject a purely financial note, we would like to observe that these three or four klieg lights, each maneuvered by a union workman in overalls, have made a fortune for their owner, Mr. Otto K. Olsen. This should help you understand that like these dazzling kliegs, glamour itself has a price in Hollywood and is only a commodity to be bought, sold, exploited. Mr. Olsen, one of the few community bigwigs who isn't connected directly with films, famed renter of giant searchlights, started out making $5,000 a year. Now, after seventeen years of letting these kliegs, he has pyramided his yearly take to almost $300,000 per annum. Moreover, Mr. Olsen, we are happy to add, is not a snob. His blinding searchlights not only brighten the weekly premiere, but also the opening of any new vegetable shop or shoe store that is willing to pay greenbacks for glamour. Indeed, this is Hollywood!

But now, initiated, you've torn yourself away from the premiere at the Pantages, and suddenly, you are at the most famous corner in the world. It has been immortalized by a million amateur Homers, in verse, in anecdote, in shady stories, in gossip and in the song—"Hollywood At Vine."

This corner is guarded by a department store, a restaurant, a bank and a drugstore. This corner is inhabited by cranks, tipsters, those who have been stars and those who want to be stars, by shoppers, curiosity-hunters, visiting firemen, the Barrymores and the Hardys.

This is Hollywood at Vine, and when you stand on the corner, you know it's everything you've dreamed about. It's in the air. You can taste it. Hollywood! The city needs no historian. It needs only Hollywood at Vine. Nearby is a steel bench where housewives still sit, waiting for the ten-cent bus to take them home. This is the "Lon Chaney" bench, where that neurotic, elastic-faced son of deaf-mute Colorado parents used to sit, in the early twenties waiting to ride to the studios. Nearby is a bar, run by a man with a pancaked nose and scrambled ears, a prizefighter who will show you I.O.U.'s collected in the early days from Charlie Chaplin and Wallace Reid and Al Jolson.

This is Hollywood at Vine where the old guard will fill your ears with stories —about Mae West, who has the biggest collection of books on sex and courtesans in the world, who combs her hair and puts on her hat before pulling on her slit dresses, and who has told the boys on the corner, "The best way to hold a man is in your arms!"; about Walt Disney, who used to go down to the Los Angeles zoo every week to study the animals and their noises; about George Gershwin, once called "A Drunken Schubert," who got five dollars for his first song, fifty thousand for his last, suffered from nervous indigestion and took three music lessons a week until the day he died; about the late Lilyan Tashman, whose home was the gaudiest in Hollywood and whose toilet seat was covered with white ermine!

It's all there on that corner, the crazy, crazy cavalcade of Hollywood—the saga, told and retold, of that handsome Italian with slickum on his hair, Rudolph Valentino, who died fourteen years ago, and whose death prompted the women of Rio de Janeiro to hold High Mass, a chorus girl in London to take poison and leave a note for her girl friend begging her to "look after Rudolph's picture," and 100,000 fans, including Pola Negri and Texas Guinan, to crowd his funeral; the story of W. C. Fields, who has fifty hats hanging in his smoking room to compensate for the years of bumming when he never had a place to hang his hat; the Cinderella legend of a plump, hard-boiled dame who came to this town, danced the Charleston, doubled for Norma Shearer and became the brightest of stars, meaning, of course, Joan Crawford.

Those are the things you'll hear on Hollywood at Vine, and they're as much a physical part of Hollywood as the buildings and premieres and wide clean streets.

The remaining blocks of the Boulevard, perhaps a mile of blocks, comprise the central shopping district. According to Thurston H. Ross, consulting economist, 25% of the people on the Boulevard shop for food, only 10% visit the night clubs and bars and a mere 7% are out to buy clothes. Then, with pretty colored graphs and charts, our economist reveals that three out of every ten persons on Holly-

TELL ME ANOTHER and win $5.00 - says Kleenex

We will pay $5.00 for every "Kleenex True Confession" published. Mail to KLEENEX. 919 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

It was a "Blind" Date

UNTIL SHE GAVE ME KLEENEX TISSUES TO POLISH MY SPECS. WHAT A BREAK-ONE LOOK AND OH BOY!

(from a letter by G. S., Redding, Calif.)

NO MORE* Washday Blues

BECAUSE WE USE KLEENEX INSTEAD OF WASHING DOZENS OF HANDKERCHIEFS WHEN WE HAVE COLDS.

(from a letter by M. S., Bessemer, Mich.)

Pops Up!...

ONLY KLEENEX HAS THE SERV-A-TISSUE BOX TO END WASTE! PULL A DOUBLE TISSUE...NEXT ONE POPS UP READY FOR USE!

(from a letter by L. W., Chicago, Ill.)

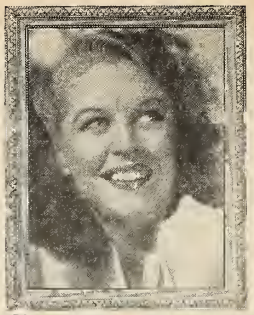
SHE CUTS A PRETTY FIGURE



NOW THAT SHE'S LEARNED TO KEEP HER ICE SKATES RUST-FREE AND CLEAN WITH KLEENEX. SAVES ON FAMILY TOWELS AND HANKIES!

(from a letter by E. M., Seattle, Wash.)

Don't put a Cold in your Pocket... Use KLEENEX*

KLEENEX* DISPOSABLE TISSUES (*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

Fit for a Queen

Anne Nagel
Universal star appearing in "Diamond Frontier" with Victor McLaglen, turns in one of the most successful performances of her career.

SEM-PRAY JO-VE-NAY

The All-Purpose Face Cream

In America every woman is a queen in her own right, and beautiful women realize the secret of feminine loveliness is a soft, clean skin. Try Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay and learn what it will do for your skin and complexion. See how it keeps your skin clean by removing every particle of old pore-clogging make-up, and provides an ideal beauty base for a new toilette. Skin roughness caused by chapping quickly disappears and blackheads are minimized by cleansing pore openings. You'll like Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay. Send for the generous purse size sample.

ELIZABETH HUSTED, SEM-PRAY JO-VE-NAY CO.,
Dept. 52, Grand Rapids, Michigan.
I would like to try Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay. Please send me the purse size container of this popular face cream. Ten cents (stamps or coin) is enclosed to cover mailing costs.
Name.....
Address.....
City.....State.....

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

High School at Home

Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Equivalent to resident school work—prepares for entrance to college. Standard H. S. texts supplied. Diplomas awarded. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. Free Bulletin on request.
American School, Dept. H-214, Drexel at 58th, Chicago

NEW FREE CATALOG

STOVES, HEATERS, FURNACES AT FACTORY PRICES

Send for Free Catalog! 136 Styles and Sizes. Coal-Wood Ranges; Combination Coal or Oil Ranges; Gas Ranges; Oil Ranges; Gas Ranges; Coal-Wood Ranges; Oil Heaters; Coal-Wood Heaters; Furnaces. 30 Days Trial. 24 hour shipments. 1,600,000 Satisfied Users. Stoves $5 Down, up to 18 months to pay.

30 Days Trial

EASY TERMS

KALAMAZOO STOVE & FURNACE CO., Mfrs.
405 Rochester Ave., Kalamazoo, Mich.
"A Kalamazoo Direct to You"

wood Boulevard are there because it is supposed to be glamorous, because it is so informal, because there isn't much traffic or noise and because they want to see some stars.

Proceeding up the Boulevard, you pass Nancy's, bright and expensive—where you can get a dress from $5 to $50, and where the sales girls wear slacks. And there is MacIntosh, English tailors, frequented by Don Ameche, Joe Louis and Jackie Cooper, who sometimes pay $150 a suit. Across the Boulevard is Gettlesons, a ticket brokerage, where you can reserve one of the 20,000 seats in the Hollywood Bowl or purchase a pasteboard to the Friday fights at the nearby American Legion Stadium, and there sit beside Lupe Velez, waving ten spots for bets, or Rochester, a Harlem jumping bean.

THE Boulevard becomes a whirl of neons now—Thrifty Drugstore, where giant malteds may be had for a dime; two tremendous five and ten cent stores, where we once saw Bing Crosby buying toys for the ailing son of a minor studio technician; the open air Hollywood Market, where grinning Japanese will sell you a bucket of oranges for pennies; and The Jade, an oriental-styled nightclub where some singer named Vivien Lee is capitalizing on a famous name.

Next you are passing the famed Bradley's Five and Ten, where for fifteen cents you can have a hot dog and a stein of beer big enough to make you see pink elephants, where you can sit in oversized soft chairs and observe bit players, second-rate agents and all the fringe of Hollywood's society move in and out. Your head is on a swivel now, trying to see everything—Miller's Stationery Shop, where Garbo sneaks in for books on philosophy and Errol Flynn grabs a few more copies of "Beam Ends," which he wrote. Next, the Pig 'n Whistle, an eatery, where the door opens automatically as you approach.

Finally you are at Highland Avenue. There is the Bank of America, and next door to it Max Factor's $600,000 makeup factory, where research workers have learned that there are forty-five different color types among women, each requiring a different cosmetic combination, and where Joan Bennett and Myrna Loy are often used as guinea pigs. Cater-cornered stands the old-fashioned, sprawling, wooden Hollywood Hotel, where you can sleep for $12 a week. Two blocks along the Boulevard, and the garish fantastic Chinese Grauman's Theatre holds your attention—with blocks of concrete (so easy to remove once a star has slipped down the ladder) in the forecourt, each holding the handprints and footprints of some star, running the gamut from Marie Dressler to Tyrone Power to the late Tom Mix, who added the fine touch of gunprints.

A half block from Grauman's is a spot, with booths, called Brown's. It specializes in hot fudges covered with toasted almonds and costing 30c each, and in pretty waitresses who serve them. One of the waitresses who served them was Ellen Drew, and an agent saw her and then Paramount—and that's Hollywood Boulevard.

You may have other fleeting memories of the Boulevard—of the unusual lack of jay-walking, since there is a five dollar fine for this offense; of the Duke of Hollywood, a stocky, cheerful negro wearing top hat and tails, who'll shine your shoes for a dime; of Jim Tully, the Irish hobo-author who once punched John Gilbert in the nose, arguing on a corner and telling a friend what he thinks of the mansions in which movie stars live, "By God, you could feed five poets on what it costs to keep up one of their lawns!"

If the Boulevard is the spine of Hollywood, there are numberless other streets and sights to make up the flesh and bones of the twenty-four square mile body.

There are ordinary things like the twenty-five public schools and the one junior college, and extraordinary things like the drugstore across from Hollywood High School which sells more contraceptives than any other drugstore in the area (and we state this only as a fact, and not for obvious sensationalism). There are eleven radio stations in all of Los Angeles, but the two mammoth networks, CBS and NBC, have streamlined studios that seem to have been designed by Jules Verne.

Across from them is Earl Carroll's Restaurant. Of course, you'll see it, maybe even work in it. There's an aura about the place—because it is masterminded by forty-eight-year-old Earl Carroll himself, the skinny, baldish sex expert, who was once a journalist in Hongkong, a baseball pitcher in Japan. Over a decade ago, Carroll gave a party at which he paid a seventeen-year-old girl $700 to appear before guests clad only in a chemise and shoes, then had her strip naked, then ordered her into a bathtub of wine, while Carroll remarked, "Gentlemen, the line forms to the right!" He was sent to the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary for this—but there was a happy ending, because today his film restaurant is jam-packed nightly.

No less a landmark would be the Angelus Temple in Echo Park, which isn't exactly in Hollywood but near enough and cuckoo enough to be adopted. The round dome and twin radio masts of the Temple are the headdress on a building containing 5,300 opera chairs, an organ eighty feet high—and 49-year-old Aimee Semple McPherson, America's greatest actress-evangelist. Aimee, widowed at the age of nineteen in China, came to Los Angeles, preached, raised one and a half million dollars for her shrine for sinners and became famous enough to enable a local paper's circulation to jump 300% when it announced that she'd changed the color of her hair! We saw her once as she appeared before her converts, attired as a railway conductor, waving a lantern, shouting, "All aboard the Father, Son and Holy Ghost Limited For Gloryland!"

BUT no story on Filmville would be half complete without an essay on the natives of this topsy-turvy paradise. In fact, it's better to observe the natives than the gorgeous blue hills rimming Hollywood to the north.

Something happens to the average person who moves into Hollywood. It must be a cosmic thing. A young man coming to Hollywood immediately gets into a polo shirt and colored neckerchief, wears Want ta see your own Hollywood honey in our GALLERY SECTION? Just send us his or her name on the coupon below, then watch the next few issues!

Information Desk, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York City

I'd like to see a gallery picture of

.....

in a forthcoming issue of Modern Screen.

Name.....
Street.....
City.....State.....

high-waisted, pleated trousers that bag at the knees and shuffles around in Mexican-styled shoes. A young lady forgets what her mother told her, sports a bandana, too much make-up, sloppy slacks and even takes to wearing her bedroom slippers in public. Everyone talks big. Very big. The language is well punctuated with the language of the movie sets. Words like "inkies," meaning incandescent lights; "gobo," meaning small-sized spots; and "blimp," meaning the felt-padded coverings that dull the whir of the camera, are tossed around with the clumsiness of a medicine ball.

But, to the men and women of Hollywood who taste fame, an even rarer phenomenon occurs. Sometimes they "go Hollywood"—which is pure Californianese for becoming uppity and forgetting your friends. More often they go plain crazy.

William Morris, the dean of movie agents, once tried to explain the insane antics of the stars by saying:

THEY are a pathetic group of poorly educated children, driven by forces incomprehensible to them, seeking diversion and security . . . Why, if you'd never had anything but a wardrobe trunk and a lousy second-rate hotel room to call home, you might spread yourself, too."

However, sometimes even that doesn't suffice to explain the daffy doings of an Ida Lupino, inviting guests to a party, asking them to come formal and then pushing them into a swimming pool fully dressed, or of a Glenda Farrell purchasing eye-glasses for her pet cat, or of a Joan Crawford building a special oversized piano done in stainless white and decorated with satyrs chasing nymphs.

The best explanation we've heard comes from Robert E. Sherwood, the playwright, who served several sentences in Movieland. When a friend wondered why Hollywood actresses cavorted so close to the lunatic fringe, he replied:

"Imagine the plight of a Hollywood heroine, a not too complex cutie who has been boosted suddenly to a dizzy eminence and is rather puzzled by it all. She awakens in the night with the realization, 'At this moment I am being subjected to vicarious rape by countless hordes of Jugo-Slavs, Peruvians, Burmese, Abyssinians, Kurds, Latvians and Ku Klux Klansmen!' Is it a wonder that a girl in that predicament finds it difficult to lead a normal life, that her sense of balance is apt to be a bit erratic?"

Still, the erratic lives of the actors and actresses have helped make Hollywood the razzling-dazzling village it is today. When you walk down a Hollywood thoroughfare and see Katharine Hepburn in blue overalls and hob-nail shoes, or Mary Pickford shutting her eyes as she passes a butcher shop (meat has nauseated her since she read "The Jungle" by Upton Sinclair years ago), or Tony Martin, coatless, hatless, informing a friend how he wishes he could sing like Bing Crosby—when you see the stars, so informal, so human, you begin to succumb to Hollywood's charm.

But there is another Hollywood, too, and it's no use avoiding it. The Hollywood known throughout the wide world, as the wildest den of vice and the most prolific playground for wholesale sexual orgies on this mad mudball earth.

And how much of this infamy is true? Ask any member of the Chamber of Commerce, and he assumes a horrified facial expression and points to Hollywood's sixty-nine churches and nineteen Service Clubs. Ask the boys in the poolroom and they grin and tell you another dirty story, which is mostly untrue, about one motion picture star or another.

Somewhere in between is the truth. The day of the "Casting Couch"—when a girl had to exercise her libido instead of her talent for a job—is almost dead. The much-publicized and traditional Hollywood orgy died that evening when Fatty Arbuckle became involved in the community's most colossal scandal which meant the end of Virginia Rapp. Today Hollywood parties are pretty dull and business-like affairs, where Darryl Zanuck is talking about himself, and boring Joe Pasternak who would like to talk about himself, and where Jack Benny won't talk at all for fear of losing a gag to Bop Hope and Ken Murray who are also silent.

But, most of the 28,500 persons in Hollywood—one-sixth of the population—who work in the twenty-one major studios, live decent, ordinary, useful lives and do their share in turning out the six hundred films a year.

Now, you must understand, space has forced us to skip many word photos of the Hollywood scene. We haven't had time to tell you about the novel Studio Club, a sort of "Stage Door" setup, a combination club-hotel exclusively for girls interested in the movies. We haven't been able to mention Billy Wilkerson, a hidden power in the colony, owner of Ciro's and boss of the industry's Bible, the Daily Hollywood Reporter, and of Wilkerson's colorful editorials (he once referred to the death of an agent, Mr. Joyce, by writing, "God has lifted His option on Frank Joyce"). We haven't been able to describe the wonder of Harold Lloyd's lordly home at 1225 Benedict Canyon, with its golf course and seventy Great Danes romping loose.

No matter. You need remember only one more thing about Hollywood. This—

Within three blocks of each other there are three places symbolic of the heart of Hollywood. There is the Paramount Studio, which recently took Betty Brewer, a poor, unemployed fourteen-year-old, off the streets and made her rich and famous, made her life something glorious and of fiction. There is the Pacific Ciné Arts Film Company, where other unemployed girls become employed by stripping off their clothes, and for $3 an hour, performing in the nude for two days at a time to help make suggestive movies for stag parties. There is the cemetery, green and white, where a well-known movie woman was recently buried. She had been living beyond her means, and had inhaled monoxide to pay her debts.

We make no further comment, but to quote the parting shot of visitor Vicki Baum:

"What I like about Hollywood is that one can get along quite well by knowing two words of English—swell and lousy."

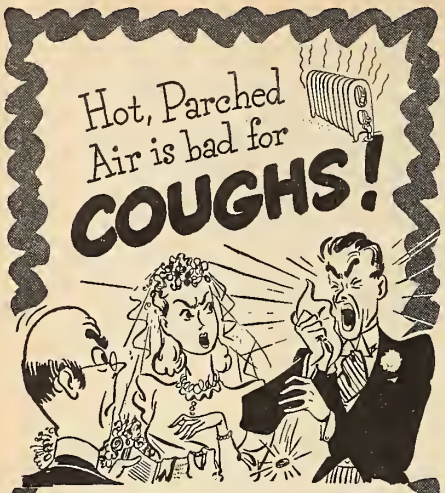
That, normal Americans, is Hollywood in composite. Swell and lousy!

Improved

Vicks Way Starts Fast to Relieve Miseries of Colds!

In most homes—probably in yours—there's a jar of VapoRub waiting to go to work when a cold strikes and causes coughing, congestion in upper bronchial tubes, muscular soreness or tightness. Now when you call on this trusted standby, get better results by relieving miseries with a 3-minute "VapoRub" Massage.

You Get Benefits of Increased Stimulating Vaporizing Action



THIS MORE THOROUGH TREATMENT—perfected by Vicks staff of doctors—actually increases the important stimulating and penetrating action of Vicks VapoRub... MORE EFFECTIVELY stimulates chest and back like a warming poultice or plaster... MORE EFFECTIVELY penetrates cold-irritated breathing passages with soothing, medicinal vapors. And starts to work right away—bringing you grateful relief!

Works Faster and Longer

Now here is all you do to get a 3-minute "VapoRub" Massage. First, massage VapoRub for three full minutes on RIB-AREA OF THE BACK as well as on throat and chest. Spread a thick layer over the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. Then notice how this improved Vicks treatment makes VapoRub work faster and longer to relieve distress of colds!

FOR BETTER RESULTS USE VICKS VAPORUB THE IMPROVED WAY

Vicks and VapoRub are registered trademarks of Vick Chemical Company

Pertussin "moist-throat" treatment clears this condition

By drying out the air, most heating systems can make much worse a cough due to a cold.

Pertussin combats this dry-air irritation. It stimulates the tiny moisture glands of the throat. Helps them pour forth their soothing natural moisture. Then you can raise that tickling phlegm —and your cough is relieved fast!

For over 30 years, many physicians have prescribed this most effective remedy—Pertussin! Safe even for babies. Get Pertussin today from your druggist.

A scientific product based on the therapeutic properties of Thyme.

Lemon Juice Recipe Checks Rheumatic Pain Quickly

If you suffer from rheumatic or neuritis pain, try this simple inexpensive home recipe. Get a package of Ru-Ex Compound, a two week's supply, mix it with a quart of water, add the juice of 4 lemons. Often within 48 hours—sometimes overnight—splendid results are obtained. If the pains do not quickly leave you, return the empty package and Ru-Ex will cost you nothing to try. It is sold under an absolute money-back guarantee. Ru-Ex Compound is for sale by druggists everywhere.

FREE WEDDING RING

with every simulated diamond engagement ring ordered now. Smart, new, deeply engraved, Sweetheart Design, yellow gold plate wedding ring given as get-acquainted gift FREE with every Flashing Simulated Diamond Solitaire Engagement ring ordered at our Anniversary Sale offer of only $1. SEND NO MONEY with order. Just name and ring size. 10 days' approval. Your package comes by return mail.

EMPIRE DIAMOND CO.
Dept. 284-P, Jefferson, Iowa

Earn $25 a week

AS A TRAINED PRACTICAL NURSE!

Practical nurses are always needed! Learn at home in your spare time as thousands of men and women —18 to 60 years of age—have done through CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING. Easy-to-understand lessons, endorsed by physicians. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Nurse Cromer, of Iowa, now runs her own nursing home. Others prefer to earn $2.50 to $5.00 a day in private practice.

YOU CAN EARN WHILE YOU LEARN!

Mrs. B. C., of Texas, earned $474.25 while taking course. Mrs. S. E. P. started on her first case after her 7th lesson; in 14 months she earned $1900! You, too, can earn good money, make new friends. High school not necessary. Equipment included. Easy payments. 42nd year. Send coupon now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 232, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____ Age_____

City_____ State_____

MISTRESS PROBLEMS

(Continued from page 42)

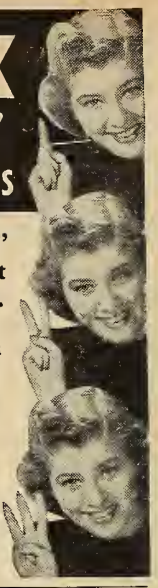
furniture around, I dare not leave a mote anywhere. So I have to be a contortionist to crawl into crannies and under rugs." Bette's cook says her main problem is figuring a thousand ways to cook potatoes, since Bette can't enjoy a meal without them.



ROSALIND RUSSELL'S Hazel says that she wishes she were a mind reader; it would cut her work in half. For example, let's say Roz makes up her mind to go to New York. Hazel packs her bag with things she'll need there. Five minutes before train-time, Roz will change her mind and decide to go to Sun Valley to ski. Or she'll buy tickets for Alaska, switch plans and go to Palm Springs. Poor Hazel lives in a perpetual whirl of taking woollies out and putting sun-suits in and vice versa. However, she's licked her problem by packing half a dozen bags every time Miss R. is gypsy-minded. Then as Roz goes out the door, Hazel hands her the bags packed for the ultimate destination!

Ann Sheridan's Elizabeth says that when Ann is working, no one is more punctual, and Miss Annie is always on the set twenty minutes ahead of anyone else. But when she is not working, she can sleep the clock around, and it's always four or five in the afternoon before she gives evidence of life. Hence, since she is sure to be dining with Mr. Brent, Elizabeth must solve the problem of waking her. She has several systems, which include rattling the Venetian blinds like castanets; running the bath water with the velocity of a thundering Niagara; playing the radio loudly enough to blast the eardrums of Gargantua; and pretending to be on the phone and saying, "Yes, Mr. Brent, yes, Mr. Brent!" as many as fifty times on a rising scale. Elizabeth also has to be a voice mimic so that when Annie doesn't want to talk on the phone, but feels she should, Elizabeth can do it for her. So well does Elizabeth simulate the Sheridan contralto that she can even fool George Brent. In fact, on one occasion Brentie could not be convinced that it was not Annie he was talking to. And was Elizabeth's face red, were Elizabeth's eyes shining and her breast heaving at what she heard! Don't ever tell Elizabeth that Brent isn't the Great Lover, she knows!

Rosemary Lane's Nana says that her problems with Miss Rosie were solved before they arose. For Rosemary, when interviewing a new maid, spends an hour at it, explains to the applicant in detail that "I am a so-and-so when I'm working but a very pleasant girl when I'm not. When I get into a temper and bawl hell out of you, just don't pay any attention to me—skip it. I am much too particular about everything when I'm on a picture. My mirror, brush, comb and toothbrush must always be just where they belong even though I, myself, have taken them into the kitchen or out under a tree! No matter what I have done with them, I expect them to be where they belong! It's like playing Hide-the-Thimble, working for me, and if you're not good at it, let's part company now." Nana says: "I really have only one major problem with Miss Rosie, and that is to keep secrets. She tells me all her love affairs. And this is one of God's chilluns that wouldn't have wings if I blabbed my big mouth on Miss Rosie!"

When Jimmy's Malcolm took over the Stewart ménage, the place was overrun softer! Say "Sit-True" for tissues that are as soft as a kiss on the cheek.

SITROUX Triple-Tested CLEANSING TISSUES

stronger! As strong as a man's fond embrace. Sitroux is made only from pure cellulose.

more absorbent! They drink in moisture. Ideal for beauty care. Useful everywhere.

CONSTIPATION

NEEDS ATTENTION IN YOUNG AND OLD

Even "temporary" constipation is nothing to trifle with. Why delay when Stuart's Laxative Compound helps bring such quick welcome relief without bad after-effects? Stuart's is wonderful for all ages—really works safely for adults, yet gentle enough for children. Dosage can be reduced as it helps "regularize." To feel bright, keep bowels right. Try Stuart's Laxative Campound right away for its safe, gentle results. At all drug stores 25c and 60c under maker's money-back guarantee.

★TRANSPARENT ★ ROOFLESS ★ PARTIAL ★

$6.85 to $35

60 DAYS' TRIAL

We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. FREE! impression material, directions, catalog and information. Write today to U.S. DENTAL CO., Dept. 2-104, Chicago, Ill.

Streamline your Manners

Like everything else, styles in manners change too. That old etiquette book you inherited is probably as out-of-date as the horse car, but your manners are still as important as ever.

The new edition of MODERN MANNERS will help bring you up-to-date—and up to par. The instruction given is clear, simple, and correct, and the subjects cavered include all phases of everyday business and social life, as well as thase special de luxe occasions. Stressing common sense, courtesy, and consideration, MODERN MANNERS brings you the up-to-date, unaffected method of correct canduct—a methad you can really live by.

Ask your favarite newsdealer to reserve your copy.

MODERN MANNERS

On sole ot all Newsstands Jon. 15th. 10c

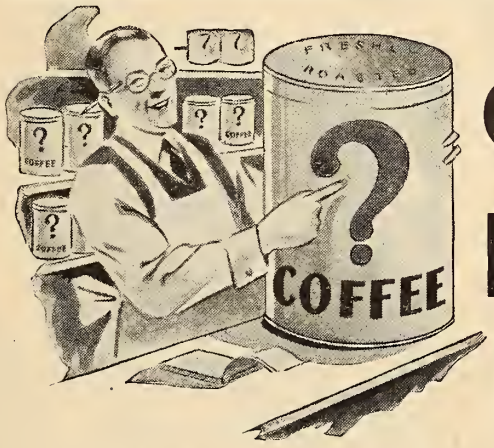
by mice. Mice so tame, so housebroken, that when Jimmy played his accordion they all came out and danced. They loved Jimmy's accordion and, according to Malcolm, Jimmy loved them. Malcolm fixed up the mice situation—but now he has another worry. Jimmy won't encourage him to be efficient. "Mr. Jimmy says to me," complained Malcolm, " 'Malcolm,' he says, 'there's so much less you could do, you know.' When I ask him to please elucidate, he says, 'When someone calls me on the phone and asks whether I'm in, you could just say "no." But instead you go into a detailed itinerary of my day. You say, "Mr. S. got up at seven fifteen, took a shower, ran around the block, called Miss Olivia on the phone and went to the chiropodist." Take your job as less of sacred duty, Malcolm,' he says. Then there's the times Mr. Burgess Meredith is staying with us. Strange parcels are always arriving at the door. Strange women, too, to tell the truth. I takes the parcels in and keeps the women out and then I've done the wrong thing. When Mr. John Swope stays with us, he and Mr. Jimmy rarely has an evening together. How we know they finally get together is when we find nut-shells from cellar to roof. Way that is, we always keep a huge big bowl of nuts by the fireside. The evening Mr. Jimmy and Mr. Swope are together, they don't eat any dinner, just talk and eat nuts. And when the last nut is gone, they go to bed. Mr. Jimmy has odd people come to the house, too. Like one day he told me, 'Malcolm, one of my trees is deathly ill. Termites, Type B.' Next thing I know a man comes to our door, says he is the Tree Doctor and performs a operation on the banana palm! Another time Mr. Jimmy says, 'Malcolm, our lawn has got fleas and must be de-fleaed.' Pretty soon a man comes up, says he is the 'de-fleaer.' I pass 'em in. You get accustomed to most anything when you are working for him."



EDDIE ALBERT'S houseman started life as a Portuguese fisherman. He is now working for Eddie, because Eddie heard him singing Portuguese folk-songs and offered him a job just to have him around. Now, Eddie's house is just barely hanging by the skin of its shingles over the edge of Hollywood's highest hill and you'd think no one in the world could possibly find it. But according to Renaldo, Mr. Eddie "has a million lady friends, and they come up at all hours of the day and night!" The windows are always open, the doors are always open, the Capehart phonograph is always playing, so there are no defenses! Eddie's passionate interest in World Events is one of Renaldo's big worries. It causes him to take all the pictures off the walls and hang huge maps from floor to ceiling. On the maps are arranged serried rows of pins, showing the positions of armies and air forces in Europe. Renaldo says that walking on eggs would be child's play compared to dusting between pins, any one of which might be Il Duce or Der Fuehrer. Nor is this all. Eddie has a huge collection of records and books. He keeps them all on the floor. Says he can't find them when they are on shelves. One day, one of his girl friends, Beverly Holden, dropped by and, finding Eddie out, turned housewifely and put things in order. Renaldo said he couldn't tell a lady what Eddie said to her when he got home! Eddie is always in a hurry. On his way home from the studio, therefore, he starts undressing. By the time he reaches his front door, he has on a necktie! Renaldo has then to go on a scavenger hunt for the missing garments. He finds the Albert shoes in a cuckoo's nest, the Albert shorts on the rear-view mirror! I feel maybe I'm working for Gypsy Rose Lee," he sighs.

Constance Moore's maid is of West Indian extraction. Connie calls her Daiquiri. Daiquiri's particular problem is to keep anyone who can possibly have anything to sell off the premises—Connie being susceptible to sales of any kind, ranging from the Queensboro Bridge to a rubber mouse. Fuller Brush men, to a man, vote Connie their Ideal Choice for a desert island!

Joan Bennett's French maid, Madeleine, has taken it upon herself to keep as many newspapers and news broadcasts away from her mistress as it's humanly possible to do. Joan is positively allergic to the disturbing nature of today's headlines, and a bad turn in Europe not only sends her into a depressed mood for the rest of the day, but actually causes her to break out in red blotches!

Ann Sothern's Marie was particularly voluble. "Miss Ann is not supposed to eat fattening foods," she informed us, "but she's always sending me for ice cream on the sets! Well, I just say to her, 'Miss Sothern, you know you're not supposed to eat ice cream,' and I get her an apple instead! Then, she will suddenly yell at me, 'Marie, we have to be in the studio, on the set, in five minutes!' This happens every day Miss Ann is working. Well, I calls Robert, the chauffeur, tell him to bring the car around fast as those wheels will re-volve. Then I tears around like a crazy woman. I gets Miss Ann's lunch basket (she always takes her own lunch to the studio), I get her make-up box, her knitting, the book she's reading, her stationery, (she writes her letters on the sets but never mails them), her extra coat and shoes. Then I gets in the car. I waits and I waits. Then I gets the palpitating miseries. I think, Lawd have mercy, Miss Annie has sho' broken her neck falling down the stairs! I rush into the house and there is Miss Ann, straightening pictures on the wall or fixing a rose in a vase! I also has to keep reminding Miss Ann of dates and appointments and such. Sure as I live, she will make an appointment with some big gentleman from the studio and just when he raises the knocker on the door, Miss Ann is off having a permanent! I tries to get her to keep a date-pad but she won't on account of how she is using 'mental discipline,' she says."

Virginia Field has only her Danish Mrs. Kjar for "general housework." Virginia doesn't believe in having a personal maid at the studio. "Too bloody silly," she said. "There's a make-up man, a wardrobe girl, a hair-dresser for every woman player. If that's not enough for them, they should fall apart!" Mrs. Kjar's most "worriting" problem is to make Virginia eat enough. Especially since Richard Greene has gone away to war. Mrs. Kjar will whip up some little Danish numbers, and Virginia will scream at her, "Get out of here with those lovely things or I'll kick you!" Which, as Mrs. Kjar sniffed, "Don't make no sense." Then, Virginia is constantly losing things; her camel's hair coat, her silver foxes, her purses. And Mrs. Kjar spends hours making out inventories, writing Virginia despairing notes which

GIVE THIS COFFEE
AN APPEALING
NAME

$250 in Cash
For Best 24 Names

$50.00 Check Each Month for Six Months
Extra Promptness Prize

Here is an amazing offer—one that should tax the imagination of every individual. You have the unusual opportunity to win a big cash prize and receive a $50.00 check regularly each month for the first six months of 1941. We want an easy-to-remember name; therefore, we are passing on to the readers of this magazine an opportunity to submit a new name for coffee and win a cash prize for their efforts. There are a lot of good names being used now such as Morning Glory, Sunshine, Eight O'Clock, Red Wing, and many others. We want a new name for coffee. For the 24 names selected by the judges, we will award $250.00 in cash prizes plus a $50.00 check each month for the first six months of 1941 as an extra cash prize.

The First Name You Think of May Be a Winner

Think of the many names that are now being used and send us a new name for coffee, one that you feel will appeal to the housewife. The name you send in may be of one, two, or three words, separate or combined. Only one name for coffee will be accepted from an individual. This offer is open to anyone living within the 48 states. It costs nothing to send in a name for coffee. You may win one of the

24 Cash Prizes Totaling $250.00

Write your coffee name on a penny post card or a sheet of paper. Sign your own name and address. Mail within three days from the day you read this advertisement—it always pays to be prompt. Your name for coffee must be mailed before April 15, 1941. 24 cash prizes will be awarded. If the name you send in is selected by the judges as the first prize winner, you will receive $100.00 in cash, and as an extra promptness prize a $50.00 check regularly each month for the first six months of 1941; second prize will be $25.00; third prize, $15.00; fourth prize, $10.00; and 20 additional prizes of $5.00 each. The 24 cash prizes are in addition to the extra prize of $50.00 a month for the first six months of 1941 which will be awarded to the first prize winner. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in the event of a tie. A victory list will be published as soon as the judges have selected the prize winning names. Right now you may be thinking of just the name we are looking for—a name that will win first prize. Sometimes the first name you think of is the best name to mail in. Send only one coffee name—your favorite—to

COFFEE CLUB, 44 Capper Bldg., TOPEKA, KANSAS

GLAMOUR

GLAMOUR is that exotic touch which makes a woman irresistibly lovely. IMP LIPSTICK offers women that touch of supreme loveliness to beauty. It makes the lips soft, smooth, moistly ardent and desirable. It gives them that kissable, lovable appeal which is so eagerly sought after. IMP is creamy, never greasy, and it stays on for hours. It does not get dry or crack. The IMP LIPSTICK KIT gives you three exotic shades in one compact container. The large IMP lip-stick comes in exquisite shades. Only 10 cents, stick or 3-stick Kit. If your dealer hasn't IMP mail us 10c., your address, complexion tint, and whether you want stick or kit, and we'll mail it to you postpaid.

IMP 740 NORTH HUDSON ST. CHICAGO ILL.

IF YOU HAVE
GRAY HAIR
and DON'T LIKE a MESSY MIXTURE.... then write today for my
FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

As a Hair Color Specialist with forty years' European American experience, I am proud of my Color Imparter for Grayness. Use it like a hair tonic. Wonderfully GOOD for the scalp and dandruff; it can't leave stains. As you use it, the gray hair becomes a darker, more youthful color. I want to convince you by sending my free trial bottle and book telling All About Gray Hair.
ARTHUR RHODES, Hair Color Expert, Dept. 3, LOWELL, MASS.

Stop that Itch

Relieve itching of eczema, pimples, athlete's foot, rashes and other skin troubles. Use cooling antiseptic D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Stops itching quickly. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Ask your druggist for D.D.D. Prescription.

Try ASTHMADOR!

Try Dr. R. Schiffmann's ASTHMADOR the next time an asthmatic attack leaves you gasping for breath. ASTHMADOR'S aromatic fumes aid in reducing the severity of the attack—help you breathe more easily. And it's economical, dependably uniform, produced under sanitary conditions in our modern laboratory—its quality insured through rigid scientific control. Try ASTHMADOR in any of three forms, powder, cigarette or pipe mixture. At all drug stores—or write today for a free sample to R. SCHIFFMANN CO., Los Angeles, Dept. F-43 say, "those two lace-edged brassieres, where are they?" Mrs. Kjar must also, she told me, take every phone message clearly and exactly. Phone calls properly delivered are the Field phobia. "If I don't get the name and the message straight," sighed Mrs. Kjar, "she say she beat me over the head with the ice-box!" Another of Virginia's habits that constitutes a major problem to thrifty Mrs. Kjar is her mania for shopping in the five and tens and bringing home things that make flowers in the bath-tub, awful candies, all the framed pictures of Richard Greene that are on sale there! Mrs. Kjar maintains that, "Miss Field she love the five and ten too mooch. That iss Mr. Greene's only rival." Mrs. Kjar also admits to a worship of young Mr. Greene. "Miss Field, she tell me," she laughed, "that I act all gooey and pecooliar over him! I says she is describing herself and how she act over him, not me! But she is goot, nice young girl, my Miss Field. She iss never moody, never cross except in the late of nights when she is all alone, and I hear her crying in her pillow now he iss gone away!"

Desi Arnaz's Richard started life with theatrical ambitions of his own. Now he is devoting himself entirely to Desi in every capacity, one of which is that of critic. Desi never comes off a set that Richard doesn't say, "Don't mugg so much," or "You didn't mugg enough." Getting Desi out of bed in the morning used to be Richard's biggest worry, but he has fixed him at last. He's bought an alarm clock with lungs like Big Ben and a Big Bertha combined. He hides the alarm clock in Desi's room, set for the time he thinks a Cuban gent should arise. The alarm goes off. Desi bawls for Richard. Richard "can't find" the clock, "forgets" where he hid it. In sheer desperation and to the accompaniment of language not to be printed, Desi leaps out of bed and locates the screaming time-piece.

Olivia de Havilland's Alma has but one complaint: Olivia (now that she is the New Olivia, a free soul, a sophisticate) gets invited out so much (and not only by Mr. Stewart, Alma let slip) that Alma never gets a chance to show off her cooking.

Madame Ouspenskaya's Gladiola loves to answer the telephone. So does Madame. The phone rings and they both run, struggling to see who gets there first. Gladiola also has the problem of having several mistresses: Madame Ouspenskaya, the spider monkey and the love-birds. Gladiola's chief duty is to keep the love-birds happy and amused. When there is a première at Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Gladiola must remember to put covers over the cages so that the nearby lights don't get in their eyes!

Ida Lupino's Lily must awaken Ida with three cups of tea each morning. It takes the third to give Idsey the vaguest idea that another day has dawned. Then, there's the dinner problem. Dinner, Ida gives orders, must be on time to the minute. It is. Ida says, "Just five minutes more, Lily, Helen Hayes is on the radio." It is announced again. Ida says, "Just five more minutes, Lily, Mr. Hayward is listening to the news broadcast." By the time the Haywards sit down to dinner the ducklings have become old ganders, and the hot coffee is iced. Every Saturday night everyone in town "drops in" and everyone must be treated as "a member of the family." So Lily must know, not only the intimate tastes and distastes of the Haywards, but also those of about five hundred of their "intimate" friends. Lily could qualify, she says, as a "mood detector." Because Ida, being a dramatic young person, can never make up her mind what she wants to wear, and Lily must determine whether the Lupino mood is a "black mood," a "white mood" or one of sultry scarlet!

Now that you've seen and heard how the other half lives, don't all those "Servant Problems" seem pale and tepid compared to "Mistress Problems," which require servants to be contortionists, jitterbug artists, voice mimics, deaf-mutes, salesmen, tap dancers, lie-detectors, scavenger hunters, mousers, critics, Beatrice Fairfaxes and mind-readers in order to give complete satisfaction?

Jane Withers and her screen discovery Buddy Pepper do some plain and fancy jumping in Citadel, Hollywood's favorite game, twixt scenes of "Golden Hoofs."

A GREAT PERFORMANCE

(Continued from page 45)

The background of the picture is the countryside around Charlottesville, Virginia—filmed in Technicolor. It is a land of peace and plenty, where life is leisurely and graceful. It's easy to think of Madeleine in such a setting.

That's ironic, too, because it didn't seem natural to her to be there. It was like a dream. Unreal.

Only a few days before she had been in a place where people were starving and life was a nightmare of brutality and horror and suffering with war the only reality.

Every British player in Hollywood has been hard hit by the war. All of them have offered their services. And England has told every last one—including David Niven and Richard Greene—to stay in Hollywood, to keep on working, to help financially. Acting isn't easy for any of them these days, reading and hearing and thinking about what's happening Over There. And, particularly, it isn't easy for Madeleine. She has also seen what's happening.

WHEN she finished "North West Mounted Police" last May, she faced a six weeks' vacation. It was her first vacation in months. And, perhaps, her last chance to try to see the people she loved. The Germans were beginning to bomb London, overrun France.

She boarded the Clipper, bound for Europe.

She didn't think of it as courageous; she felt it was the only thing to do.

She wanted to get her parents and her younger sister, Marguerite, out of England—to safety. She wanted to make sure that the 200 orphans of the Maison de Charite in Paris, for whom she had assumed financial responsibility when war broke out, could be evacuated from her chateau near Oise in case that became a danger zone. And—last, but not least—she wanted to marry the man she loved, Lieut. Richard de la Rozier, skipper of a French bomber . . . while there was still time.

By the time the Clipper landed in Lisbon she was frantic. The Germans were threatening Paris—and Oise was only 17 miles away. She couldn't think of anything but getting there before it was too late. She left her baggage on the pier at Lisbon, except for an overnight bag, and rushed north across Portugal and Spain to the French border.

The day she arrived in Biarritz, across the Bay of Biscay from Spain, Paris fell.

She had no way of knowing what had happened to the orphans. She had no way of knowing what had happened to her fiancé, who had been stationed in Paris. No way of knowing whether he might have been shot down, or taken prisoner, or wounded or whether he might still be flying.

Frantically she sent wires to the places where the French government was rumored to have gone, to officials she knew—begging them for information. Then she waited in an agony of suspense for their answers. None ever came.

She determined to try to go north herself, searching for someone, somewhere, who would know. She offered fabulous sums for a car and driver. People looked at her as if she were mad. No one would think of driving north, with the roads clogged with refugees fleeing south. Every day they were pouring into Biarritz. And no one would part with his car for any price. He might need it to save his life, tomorrow, next week.

She tried, desperately, to find someone with an airplane who would fly her north—or to England. That search was as fruitless as the other.

There was nothing she could do but wait, hoping against hope, reading news bulletins, watching the endless lines of refugees, doing what she could to help care for some of them—especially the children, ragged and starving and dazed, lost from their parents.

For days, weeks, she watched those endless lines of refugees—pitiful, terrified people, driven from their homes, going they knew not where. She heard nothing else, except that the Germans were pressing relentlessly forward.

SHE knew that France couldn't hold out. She knew, too, that when France fell, the conquerors would consider her an enemy. But still she stayed. Even after the French authorities began stamping the visas of all foreigners every half hour to discourage their staying. She didn't cross back into Spain until the day before France surrendered.

She had a bad moment at the border. A suspicious official asked her if she hadn't played in the picture, "Blockade," which the present government of Spain didn't like. She had to act on the spur of the moment. She forced a laugh. "Oh, no, that was another actress named Madeleine Carroll," she said. He decided to believe her.

She went to Madrid, sent more wires that brought no answers, made more efforts to fly to England that brought no results.

Long before the civil war in Spain, she had bought a house in Spain for vacations. She went there now. No one was there except the old couple who took care of the place. She stayed with them—while she still waited for word from France, or word from her parents that they could come to her. She passed the time cleaning, working in the garden, in the suit she had worn ever since she had stepped off the Clipper.

The only word she had before it came time for her to take the Clipper back to the United States to return to work was from her parents. They said they didn't want to leave England. It was where they had always lived. It was where they wanted to die.

She had been back in America several days before she had her first word from her fiancé—a cable from North Africa, telling her that he had flown his bomber there to join General Nogues' forces, which would still fight on. But General Nogues changed his mind about fighting on. He ordered Lieut. de la Rozier to fly his plane back to France.

Since then, there has been only silence.

It was weeks, too, before she heard what had happened to the orphans. A letter from one of the Charity Sisters finally broke through the wall of silence between occupied and unoccupied France. The children were back at the chateau now, safe. They had received some of the money she had sent.

All this time Madeleine had been sending money to the orphans with no assurance that they were getting it. All she could do was to hope. She's still sending it, still hoping.

Soon after her return to America the Germans started their mass bombings of London. And all she could think of was her father and mother and sister, living

ALL SHADES OF BLONDES HAIL NEW Shampoo!

Light Blondes, Ash Blondes, Sandy or Brownish Blondes Delighted as BLONDEX Helps Keep Hair from Darkening—Brightens all Shades of Faded Blonde Hair!

Here at last is an easy way to bring out the full radiant loveliness of blonde hair—a shampoo made especially for blondes that washes hair shades lighter and brings out the lustrous, glimmering sheen, the alluring highlights that can make blonde hair so attractive. Amazing new BLONDEX SHAMPOO costs but a few pennies to use and is absolutely safe. Used regularly, it helps keep hair lighter, lovelier, gleaming with fascinating lustre. Fine for children's hair too. Get BLONDEX at drug, department or 10c stores.

ASTROLOGY

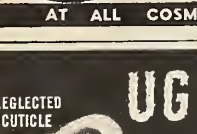
1941 READING NOW— 25c

Yogi Alpha, noted American Philosopher, now offers the 2000 word 1941 Forecast and Reading for only 25c. This reading gives you Astrological inclinations MONTH BY MONTH for the year 1941 and an extensive character delineation based upon an interpretation of your Zodiac Sun Sign. It indicates favorable and unfavorable days throughout 1941. It discusses home life, business affairs, marriage happiness travel, love and romance, health, friends, vocation, temperament, etc. Send only 25c (coin or stamps) and month, day, year and place of birth for this reading. Money refunded if not satisfied.

YOGI ALPHA, Box 1411, Dpt. D-10, San Diego, Calif.

If a friend wishes a reading send 50c for 2 readings

GIVEN NOTHING TO BUY



Send no money—Send name—BOYS! LADIES! GIRLS! POPULAR WATCH OR CASH GIVEN. Just sell only 12 boxes White CLOVERINE Brand SALVE for chaps, mild burns, shallow cuts to best friends at 25c a box (with picture free). Remit $3 collected, plus 25c for packing, postage and insurance, or only $3.25. SPECIAL: Choice of 35 premiums for returning only $3 collected. 45th year. Nothing to buy. Write for Salve NOW!

WILSON CHEM. CO. INC., DEPT. 10-K, TYRONE, PA.

Le Sager FINGER REST

KEEPS FINGERS STEADY WHILE APPLYING

NAIL POLISH

Lets you apply polish evenly. Ends shaking or quivering of fingers. Solidly made. Lasts a lifetime.

10c

AT ALL COSMETIC COUNTERS

at 51 Lexham Gardens, on the fringe of Croydon Airdrome—bound to be a constant target. In answer to her desperate pleas she finally had word that her father and mother had moved to the country, to Kent, though her sister, who worked at Harrod's department store in London, was still staying at 51 Lexham Gardens.

With all these things preying on her mind, Madeleine threw herself into her work—to try to forget a little, to make work an anodyne. She went to bed early, got up early, took part in no social activities, with the single exception of functions for British War Relief.

The morning she had to do that crying scene, the climax of a quarrel with Fred MacMurray, she had a letter from her sister describing her life and her parents' life.

Marguerite had spent the weekend before with her father and mother in Kent. There had been an air raid, and she had seen the effect on "Daddy." All his life, he had been a professor of romance languages, a man living in the past. These bombings were his first contact with brutal reality. "Mummy has an awful time with him during a raid," Marguerite wrote. "He turns white with horror. I'm afraid the shock may kill him."

And just before Griffith knocked on her dressing-room door, Madeleine had been reading the end of the letter again:

"How pleasant it must be over where you are—no war and no air raids—just warm sun. I will say goodbye to you now. Cross your fingers for me."

That was the last letter Madeleine was ever to have from Marguerite.

Only a few days later, a bomb landed squarely on 51 Lexham Gardens—and Marguerite was there.

Madeleine was at home when reporters phoned her the tragic news. "I won't believe it," she told them. "It can't be true. I haven't had direct word from my mother or father."

Distraught, she cabled her mother. No answer had come by the time she had to leave for the studio next morning after a sleepless night. But she didn't beg off from work. She reported as usual right on the dot of nine.

Halfway through the morning, a messenger handed her a cablegram. A confirmation from her mother of the news report.

Madeleine didn't break down—at least, not where anyone could see her. She went to her dressing-room, closed the door and stayed inside about a half-hour. Then she came out and went back to work.

She wanted to fly to Europe again after she finished the picture and would have if Paramount hadn't begged her to make personal appearances in Canada with "North West Mounted Police"—with the proceeds to go to British War Relief.

Even those who know the story and know Madeleine wonder how she has been able to go on acting, making personal appearances, forming knitting clubs for British War Relief and helping this cause and that—when her own heart must be breaking.

Someone asked her the other day how she has been able to "carry on."

Her only answer was: "Well, it's a wonderful thing for a woman to be able to work at a time like this, with so many unfortunate people needing help."

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 53)

DISCORDANT DUET

From a reliable source comes word that the team of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy may be broken up forever. Jeanette and Nelson, we are told, have not worked together happily for a long while and only their terrific combined box office appeal has prevented them from splitting before this. Recently their studio announced that they would star in separate pictures in the future, so it seems fairly certain that "Bittersweet" must have ended on a sour note.

SHORT SHOTS

John Garfield's exhibiting a letter from a fan who enclosed a dollar and asked him to get a haircut. . . . Eddie Norris' home is decorated with pictures of his three former wives, the first, a Philadelphia socialite, the second, actress Lona Andre, and the third, our own Annie Sheridan. . . . In appreciation of Albert Basserman's great performance in a recent flicker, writer Clifford Odets sent him orchids. . . . Harold Lloyd is plotting an early-in-the-year return to acting. . . . Those beautiful corsages Jeanette MacDonald's wearing on her concert tour are made of artificial posies. Real flowers give her hay-fever. . . . Arty Richard Halliday, who once rented a house in Beverly Hills because he liked the crayon drawings in the dining room, now selects all of wife Mary Martin's clothes. . . . Rudy Vallee is pulling the crowds away from his own Pirate's Den by appearing at the Victor Hugo, a rival nite-spot. . . . Credit Perc Westmore with rigging up the most unique Christmas tree in town. It stood in his beauty salon and was hung with green, gold and silver compacts instead of Christmas balls. . . . Claude Rains has snapped at least one picture of his daughter, Jennifer, every day for the last two and one-half years. . . . Dotty Lamour, taking advantage of the new glass shoe fad, is sporting a slender gold ring on her little toe. . . . Dick Powell has opened a new drugstore in Hollywood. . . . Jane Darwell lost a strong part in "Tobacco Road" because the role demanded that she run around in bare feet—and Janie's got a complex about it!

SAGA OF THE WEST

Mae West, the most durable glamour girl in show business, is on the verge of making her forty-second comeback. Only this time Mae will return as a film producer and not as a purveyor of sex appeal. For a full year she's been in retirement, has lazied

(Continued on page 96)

UGLY Cuticle Steals Beauty!

Remove It Easily, Safely with

TRIMAL

WRAP cotton around the end of an orangewood stick. Saturate with Trimal and apply to cuticle. Watch dead cuticle soften. Wipe it away with a towel. You will be amazed at the results. On sale at drug, department and 10-cent stores. Trimal Labs., Inc., Los Angeles.

Complete with manicure stick and cotton

SUGAR 'N SPICE

NO. 1219

NO. 1202

NO. 1216

NO. 1200

. . . and all that's nice. And that's what little girls look like in these scrumptious sweaters that any rank amateur can whip up in two jerks of your knitting needle.

1219—Just wait till you see how "Surprise Package" spices up a drooping winter wardrobe. It's as light as a breeze despite that smart front bulkiness and the snugly ribbed back and sleeves.

1202—"Chevron" adds a dash of patriotism to your suits with its red and blue décor on a slim, snowy white cardigan with boxy shoulders, elbow length sleeves and bow-tied collarless neckline.

1216—You'll be the sugar in his life in "Best Girl," a cardigan with puff sleeves and a square neckline that does things for the wearer. The ribbing will give you that heavenly lean, svelte look!

1200—Pepper your formal suits to taste with "Madame President," an exciting blend of black, white and grey yarn woven into a dressy cardigan with self buttons and a tiny turnover collar.

Send in the coupon below with o stomped, self-addressed envelope. The instructions ore yours obsolutely free.

ANN WILLS, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Kindly send, at no cost to me:

Directions for Nos. 1219, 1202.....

Directions for Nos. 1216, 1200.....

I enclose a stamped, self-addressed (large) envelope.

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

Women Earn up to $23 Weekly! HERE'S YOUR OPPORTUNITY TO

-and in addition get all YOUR OWN DRESSES FREE!

Here is an easy pleasant and dignified way to make money. You can earn up to $23 weekly, full or part time, and in addition get your own dresses free of any cost. No regular canvassing is necessary and you don't have to invest a penny.

DEMONSTRATE LOVELY FROCKS

Just show to friends, neighbors—all women—the new, advanced Fashion Frocks for Spring and Summer, 1941. These are the smartest and most beautiful dresses in our history. Last-minute style releases from famed fashion designers and worn in Hollywood by prominent movie stars.

In addition to earning this nice income you can get your own dresses Free to wear and show. You are also furnished, without any cost, the gorgeous style portfolio of the complete line, with dresses as low as $3.98. Fashion Frocks are never sold in stores—but by direct factory representatives only.

Write for Complete Portfolio of Smart New Advanced 1941 SPRING DRESSES many as low as $3.98

SEND FOR FREE OFFER

Rush your name and address for this amazing free opportunity. Get the elaborate Portfolio of up-to-the-minute smart advanced Spring and Summer dresses. Send no money—but write fully, giving age and dress size.

FASHION FROCKS, INC.
Dept. BB-250 Cincinnati, Ohio

EXPECTANT?

Pregnancy is made much safer by consulting a doctor regularly. Accumulation of poisons, dizziness, high blood pressure, other dangerous developments are often prevented by regular monthly examinations. Above all, ask a doctor's advice on infant feeding.

HYGEIA NURSING BOTTLE AND NIPPLE
SAFER...because easier to clean
See Your Doctor Regularly

NEURITIS Relieve Pain In Few Minutes

To relieve the torturing pain of Neuritis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, or Lumbago in few minutes, get NURITO, the fine formula, used by thousands. No opiates. Does the work quickly — must relieve cruel pain to your satisfaction in a few minutes or your money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for trustworthy NURITO on this guarantee.

SOFTER HANDS

Campana's
new HAND CREAM

More than 10,000 women, acting as an advance CONSUMER-TESTING GROUP, told Campana what they wanted — and here is the result. Quick-disappearing. Absolutely free of stickiness. No greasy after-feeling. Big value. Compare Campana with other hand cream quantities. At toiletry departments everywhere in 50¢, 25¢ and 10¢ jars.

(Continued from page 94)

around Hollywood and her valley ranch, slept till noon and spent long hours tap dancing, reading, beating her shiny set of drums and entertaining the bankers, doctors and lawyers who are her friends. Now Mae's ready to get back into harness, and we don't mean the 1890 kind! She plans to produce three pictures in the next year and will operate out of her four-room satin-hung Hollywood apartment. There's an interesting story attached to that apartment, incidentally. It's located in a building that's owned by an organization which aids unfortunate boys. Mae's lived in it ever since she came to the coast six years ago and, though she'd like to move out, she won't because she realizes that her name in the door bell induces free-spending tourists to rent neighboring apartments. And so Mae West, always connected with sex and sin, remains in a small, inexpensive flat and plays fairy-godmother to over 400 unsuspecting males!

HAIR NOTES

Number One: Rita Hayworth was converted into a "Strawberry Blonde" by having her hair bleached yellow and then hennaed. . . . Number Two: No movie actress who has consistently worn a sleek, upslung-in-the-rear hairdo has remained popular. Seems there's an ugly spot on the neck that, left uncovered and blown up several thousand times on the screen, robs a woman of her attractiveness. . . . Number Three: Tony Martin, asked how he liked Lana Turner as a blonde, replied: "Say, I'd like that one even if she were bald-headed."

JOB INSURANCE

Randolph Scott is a very busy man. And the thing that keeps him busy is Randolph Scott. Randy is the town's foremost male worshipper of the torso terrific and devotes three or four hours a day to swimming, riding, golfing and hiking, just to keep himself lovely. "Other actors spend their spare time learning to waltz or warble," explains Randy. "I spend mine keeping my body in trim. But we're all doing the same thing. We're building fan appeal."

AN ORCHID TO JEFFREY

While we haven't given Jeffrey Lynn's personal health record a careful check-up, we're certain he's escaped one affliction that most rising stars suffer. That's the affliction known as "Going Hollywood," and its symptoms are an abnormal swelling of the head plus an inability to remember one's old friends. Our proof that Jeffrey's still an okay guy is the little wooden file box he keeps atop his bedroom bureau. In the box are cards containing the names and addresses of all the acquaintances, friends and relatives he assists monthly with money and gifts, and it's our pleasure to report that the number of cards increases as Jeff's income does. Aside from that we have no comment to make about Jeffrey Lynn, except this: if Dana Dale doesn't grab that man right quick, well, gangway—we're putting on our war-paint!

MODERN DAY CYRANO

Mike Gordon has written love letters to almost every beautiful actress in Hollywood. He's written to Hedy Lamarr, Marlene Dietrich and Alice Faye—written of their eyes, their lips, of the moon and a secret rendezvous. He's written over 250 passionate letters to great stars, all of which have been read and many of which have been answered. Yet Mike Gordon has never been married, jilted or sued. Who is this strange person? Well, we'll tell you. He's a professional love letter writer, that's what. When the script of a movie calls for a romantic letter, Mike Gordon is the gent who composes it. He reads the story, gets in the mood and then knocks off a poem of passion like pancakes at breakfast. "Nothing to it," he confesses. "But I never write them outside the studio. They're too dangerous. Besides, when I leave the lot, I gotta keep my mind off my work."

MUCHA SWELL

While still recovering from a series of earthquakes, Hollywood was hit by a South American cyclone. And a very lovely one at that. Her name is Carmen Miranda and she's the lassie who scored so terrifically in "Down Argentine Way." Carmen's sequences in that picture were filmed in New York and then tacked on to the finished product, but for her role in "The Road to Rio" she's come all the way out to the coast. Carmen's giving the town plenty to talk about. She always wears red, seldom removes her head-hugging turban and refuses to learn English. It's this last item that's driving her voice coach, Charles Henderson, nearly crazy. In order to teach her to sing in English, he must learn Portuguese!

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME

When Don Ameche disappeared from home recently, leaving behind his wife and four children, the Hollywood scandal-line buzzed with speculation. Where had Don gone, and with whom, asked the curious—and when would he be back, if ever? His wife would say nothing, his studio would say less. The Ameche mystery seemed insoluble. Then one sunny morning about four weeks later, the runaway returned to town. The first person he met was an old friend, a former school chum. "Just between us," said the friend, "who was the date, Don?" "The date," Don repeated. "There were eleven of them! I spent the last month touring the country with the Notre Dame football team, eating with them, sleeping with them and sitting on the benches while they played. I attended four colleges in my youth—but this is the first time I've stuck to one school long enough to see it through a football season!"

FIRE PREVENTION

Residents living in the vicinity of Warner Bros. report that three times in the past week the studio has appeared to be in flames. However, snoopers searching for the arsonbug found the real source of the sizzle on the set of "Footsteps in the Dark" where Miss Lee Patrick was doing a big strip-tease scene. So hot was Miss Patrick that half the Will Hays censorship board stood on the sidelines ready to pounce while she did her number. According to reports, they nodded approvingly as she removed one garment and then another and another, but when she leaned over and began to roll her sheer silk stockings down the fullness of her thighs, they screamed. That was too suggestive! Remarked Miss Patrick: "Well, the censors taught me one thing—that brassieres may come and brassieres may go, but my stockings stay on forever!"

DISA AND DATA

Greta Garbo, cold weather notwithstanding, strolls around town with open sandals and stockingless tootsies . . . Ann Sheridan has a private detective guarding her home against prowlers . . . Bill Gargan used to write magazine yarns under the name of Belden Fitzgerald before the movie bug bit . . . Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville have a daily luncheon date in the Metro commissary even when they're not working . . . There's a new swimming pool in Ginny Weidler's back yard . . . Babs Hutton has 20 servants in her Brentwood home.

A Sensible Treatment FOR CORNS —for sensible people

1—Soft Felt pad (C) relieves pain quickly by removing pressure.

2 — Special medication (D) loosens corn so that in a few days it may be easily removed.*

• If you suffer from corns, you should know about this sensible treatment that has quickly relieved pain and effectively removed the imbedded "cores" of corns for millions of people —Blue-Jay Corn Plasters. Get them today. They cost very little—only a few cents to treat each corn—at all leading drug counters.

BAUER & BLACK, BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

(*Stubborn cases may require more than one application.)

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

GUARANTEED JEWELRY

Solid sterling silver Birthstone Ring; or lovely 13 set sparkling Dinner Ring; or All-Occasion Ring with simulated Ruby and 8 brilliant marcasites; your choice, FOR selling 4 boxes of Rosebud Salve at 25c each. Order 4 salve. Send No Money.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO, BOX 34, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on Psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing true photographic proof of results also FREE.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Generous trial bottle sent FREE to those who send in their Druggist's name and address. Make our famous "One Spot Test" yourself. Write today for your test bottle. Print name plainly. Results may surprise you. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box S47, Northwestern Station, Dept. 1609, Detroit, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on films not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

Picture	General Rating
All This, and Heaven Too (Warners)	4★
Always a Bride (RKO)	2½★
Andy Hardy Meets Debutante (M-G-M)	3★
Angels Over Broadway (Columbia)	2½★
Argentine Nights (Universal)	2½★
Arise, My Love (Paramount)	4★
*Arizana (Columbia)	4★
Beyond Tomarrow (RKO)	2½★
Bitter Sweet (M-G-M)	3★
Black Diamonds (Universal)	2★
Blondie Plays Cupid (Columbia)	C 2½★
Boom Town (M-G-M)	3½★
Boys from Syracuse, The (Universal)	3★
Brigham Young—Frontiersman (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Calling Philo Vance (Warners)	2½★
Captain Cautian (United Artists)	2½★
Charlie Chan at the Wax Museum (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Christmas in July (Paramount)	3★
City for Canquest (Warners)	3½★
Colorado (Republic)	2½★
Comin' Raund the Mountain (Paramount)	2★
Cowboy From Texas (Republic)	2★
Cross Cauntry Romance (RKO)	2½★
Dance, Girl, Dance (RKO)	2★
Dancing on a Dime (Paramount)	2★
Devil's Island (Warners)	2½★
Devil's Pipeline, The (Universal)	2★
Diamond Frontier (Universal)	2★
*Dispatch From Reuter's, A (Warners)	3½★
Dr. Kildare Goes Home (M-G-M)	3★
Down Argentine Way (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Earl of Puddlestone (Republic)	2★
East of the River (Warners)	2½★
Escape (M-G-M)	3½★
Fantasia (Walt Disney)	C 4★
Five Little Peppers in Trauble (Columbia)	C 2★
Flowing Gold (Warners)	3★
Foreign Carrespondent (United Artists)	4★
Free, Blande and 21 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
French Without Tears (Paramount)	2½★
*Gallant Sons (M-G-M)	2½★
Gambling an the High Seas (Warners)	2½★
Gay Caballero, The (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Ghast Breakers, The (Paramount)	3★
Girl from Avenue A (20th Century-Fox)	C 2★
Girl from God's Country (Republic)	2★
Girl from Havana, The (Republic)	2½★
Girls Under 21 (Columbia)	2★
Glamour for Sale (Columbia)	2★
Gold Rush Maisie (M-G-M)	2½★
Golden Fleecing, The (M-G-M)	3★
Gone With the Wind (M-G-M)	4★
Grapes af Wrath, The (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Great Dictator, The (United Artists)	3½★
Great McGinty, The (Paramount)	3½★
Great Profile, The (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Haunted Honeymoon (M-G-M)	3★
He Stayed for Breakfast (Columbia)	2½★
Hired Wife (Universal)	3★
Honeymaon Deferred (Universal)	2½★
House af Seven Gables (Universal)	2½★
Hawards of Virginia, The (Columbia)	3½★
Hullabaloo (M-G-M)	2★
' Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby (Universal)	2★
If I Had My Way (Universal)	C 3★
I Lave You Again (M-G-M)	3★
I Married Adventure (Columbia)	3★
I'm Still 'Alive (RKO)	2½★
In Old 'Missouri (Republic)	2★
Irene (RKO)	3★
Isle af Destiny (RKO)	2★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
I Want A Divorce (Paramaunt)	3★
Kit Carson (United Artists)	2½★
Knute Rackne—All American (Warners)	3½★
Ladies Must Live (Warners)	2★
*Lady with Red Hair, The (Warners)	3★
Last Alarm, The (Monogram)	2★
Letter, The (Warners)	4★
Little Bit af Heaven (Universal)	C 3★
*Little Nellie Kelly (M-G-M)	C 3★
Long Vayage Home, The (United Artists)	4★
Lucky Cisco Kid (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Lucky Partners (RKO)	3★
Mad Men af Europe (Columbia)	2★
Mal He's Making Eyes At Me (Universal)	2½★
Man I Married, The (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Man Who Talked Tao Muck, The (Warners)	2½★
Mark of Zorro, The (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Maryland (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Meet the Wildcat (Universal)	2½★
Men Against the Sky (RKO)	3★
Mexican Spitfire Out West (RKO)	2★
Midnight (Paramount)	3★
Money and the Woman (Warners)	2½★
*Moon Over Burma (Paramaunt)	2½★
Mortal Starm, The (M-G-M)	4★
Mummy's Hand, The (Universal)	2½★
Murder in the Air (Warners)	2★
My Favarite Wife (RKO)	3★
My Little Chickadee (Universal)	2½★
My Love Came Back (Warners)	3½★
My San, My San (United Artists)	3½★
New Moon (M-G-M)	3★
Narth West Maunted Palice (Paramount)	3½★
Narthwest Passage (M-G-M)	4★
No Time for Comedy (Warners)	3★
Oklahama Kid, The (Warners)	3★
Oklahoma Renegades (Republic)	2½★
One Crawded Night (RKO)	2★
One Million B. C. (United Artists)	C 3★
Opened by Mistake (Paramount)	2½★
Our Town (United Artists)	4★
Out West With The Peppers (Columbia)	C 2★
Pastor Hall (United Artists)	3½★
Phantom Raiders (M-G-M)	2★
Pier 13 (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Pinocchio (RKO)	C 4★
Pioneers of the Frontier (Columbia)	2★
Pop Always Pays (RKO)	2½★
Prairie Law (RKO)	2★
Pride and Prejudice (M-G-M)	3½★
Public Deb No. 1 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Quarterback, The (Paramount)	2½★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Queen of the Yukon (Monogram)	2★
Ragtime Cowboy Joe (Universal)	2★
Ramparts We Watch, The (March of Time-RKO)	3½★
Rangers of Fortune (Paramount)	3★
Rebecca (United Artists)	4★
Rhythm on the River (Paramount)	3½★
Road to Singapore, The (Paramaunt)	2½★
Safari (Paramount)	2½★
Sailor's Lady (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Sea Hawk, The (Warners)	3½★
Seven Sinners (Universal)	3★
Sidewalks of London (Paramount Release)	3★
Sing, Dance, Plenty Hot (Republic)	2★
Sky Murder (M-G-M)	2★
Slightly Hanorable (United Artists)	3★
Slightly Tempted (Universal)	2★
South of Pago Pago (United Artists)	2½★
South to Karanga (Universal)	2½★
So You Won't Talk? (Calumbia)	2½★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal)	C 2½★
Sparting Blood (M-G-M)	2½★
Spring Parade (Universal)	C 3★
Stanley and Livingstane (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Star Dust (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Stranger on the Third Flaor (RKO)	3★
Strike Up the Band (M-G-M)	C 3½★
Stronger Than Desire (M-G-M)	2½★
Susan and Gad (M-G-M)	3½★
Swiss Family Robinson (RKO)	C 3★
They Drive by Night (Warners)	3★
They Knew What They Wanted (RKO)	3½★
Thief of Bagdad, The (United Artists)	3½★
Third Finger, Left Hand (M-G-M)	3★
Those Were the Days (Paramount)	C 2½★
Three Faces West (Republic)	3★
Three Smart Girls Grow Up (Universal)	C 3★
Thundering Frantier (Columbia)	2★
Tin Pan Alley (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Tam Brown's School Days (RKO)	C 3★
Taa Many Girls (RKO)	3★
Tower af Londan (Universal)	2★
Triple Justice (RKO)	2★
Tugboat Annie Sails Again (Warners)	2½★
*Victory (Paramount)	3★
Vigil in the Night (RKO)	3★
Waterloo Bridge (M-G-M)	3½★
Westerner, The (United Artists)	3★
We Wha Are Young (M-G-M)	3★
When the Daltons Rode (Universal)	3★
World in Flames, The (Paramaunt)	3★
Wyoming (M-G-M)	3★
You'll Find Out (RKO)	3★
Young As You Feel (20th Century-Fax)	2★
Young People (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Young Tom Edison (M-G-M)	C 4★
Youth Will Be Served (20th Century-Fox)	2★

Beautiful NAILS AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

BROKEN, SHORT —Ugly

LONG, TAPERING —Lovely

DON'T ENVY long, tapering, smart nails — have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU-NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half-moons. Helps check nail-biting habit. Protects fragile nails while they grow strong again. Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores.

Nu-Nails, Dept. 15-B, 462 No. Parkside, Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails

FOR LOVELY LIPS

IF you want lips that are moist, smooth, sweet and kissable, with the dewy loveliness of a rosebud, try DEWY-SHEEN Lipstick. DEWY-SHEEN comes in exquisite new shades and remains soft and petal-fresh all day. Try DEWY-SHEEN. Only 10 cents at your store or write for it, enclosing 10 cents and name preferred shade. There is no higher quality lipstick at any price.

CLARK MILLNER SALES CO.
450 W. Superior St., Chicago

10¢

Twin Sisters DEWY-SHEEN LIPSTICK

Could Henry VIII Have Had Stomach Ulcer Pains?

History tells how Henry VIII would gorge himself with food and suffer afterward. Don't ignore your sufferings. Try a 25c box of Udga for relief of ulcer and stomach pains, indigestion, gas pains, heartburn, burning sensation, bloat and other conditions caused by excess acid. Udga Tablets must help you or your money will be promptly refunded. At drug stores everywhere.

RESOLE SHOES FOR ONLY 4¢ EACH

SO-LO mends holes, worn spots in rubber, leather, cloth. Spreads like butter. Dries tough overnight. Flexible, non-skid, waterproof. Won't come off—guaranteed! 25c (25 repairs). At all 10c & hardware stores.

"Woolworth, Kresge, Newberry, Murphy, McCrory, Neisner, McLellan, Sears, Ward, Scott now featuring SO-LO."

U.S. GOVERNMENT JOBS

START $1260 TO $2100 YEAR

Men—Women

Get ready NOW for 1941 Examinations.

Mail Coupon today sure

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, Dept. M258, Rochester, N. Y.

COUPON

Sirs: Rush without charge (1) 32-page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.

Name .....

Address .....

(Continued from page 83)

NAME	MARRIED TO	DATE OF MARRIAGE	MATE'S PROFESSION	PREVIOUS MATES	CHILDREN	STATUS OF MARRIAGE
Payne, John	Anne Shirley	Aug. 22, 1937	Actress	None	Julie Ann, 6 mos.	Still on honeymoon
Pidgeon, Walter	Ruth Walker	Summer, '31	Non-prof.	One	Edna, 18, by first wife	Parted but friendly
Powell, Dick	Joan Blondell	Sept. 20, 1936	Actress	Mildred Maund	Ellen, 2½; Norman, 6, by Joan's first marriage	Sweethearts forever
Powell, William	Diana Lewis	Jan. 5, 1940	Actress	Eileen Wilson, Carole Lombard	William, 16, by 1st wife	Still kiss in public
Power, Tyrone	Annabella	Apr. 23, 1939	Actress	None	None	Inseparable
Preston, Robert	Kay Feltus	Nov. 8, 1940	Actress	None	None	Matchmates
Price, Vincent	Edith Barrett	Apr. 23, 1938	Actress	None	Vincent, 4 mos.	Couldn't be swoonier
Raft, George	Grace Mulrooney	About 1916	None	None	One son, about 23	In name only
Rains, Claude	Frances Propper	Apr. 8, 1935	Non-prof.	Isabel Jeans, Marie Hemingway, Beatrice Thompson	Jennifer, 3	This one seems to have taken
Rambeau, Marjorie	Francis Gudger	Nov. 19, 1931	Retired studio vice-prexy	About five	None	This time it's real
Rathbone, Basil	Ouida Bergere	Apr. 18, 1926	Scenarist	Ethel Forman	Rodion, 24, by first wife	Every day is party day
Ratoff, Gregory	Eugenie Leontovich	Dec. 8, 1922	Actress	None	None	On again; off again
Raymond, Gene	Jeanette MacDonald	June 16, 1937	Actress	None	None	Sweetness and light
Reagan, Ronald	Jane Wyman	Jan. 26, 1940	Actress	None	None	Infanticipating
Robinson, Edw. G.	Gladys Lloyd	Summer, '26	Former stage star	None	Manny, 7; daughter, 24, by wife's first marriage	Mutual adoration society
Rogers, Buddy	Mary Pickford	June 27, 1937	Retired actress	None	None	Love-birds
Rogers, Roy	Arline Wilkins	June 11, 1936	Non-prof.	None	Cheryl, 5 mos.	No chance for rustlers
Ross, Shirley	Ken Dolan	Sept. 18, 1938	Actors' agent	None	None	Still hold hands at movies
Schildkraut, Joseph	Marie McKay	May 27, 1932	Non-prof.	Elise Bartlett	None	No disturbances
Scott, Martha	Carleton Alsop	Sept. 16, 1940	Radio producer	None	None	The real McCoy
Scott, Randolph	Marianna Somerville	Mar. 23, 1936	Socialite	None	None	No hope
Shirley, Anne	John Payne	Aug. 22, 1937	Actor	None	Julie Anne, 6 mos.	A potential Darby and Joan
Sidney, Sylvia	Luther Adler	Aug. 12, 1938	Actor	Bennett Cerf	Jacob, III, 1	Soulmates
Sondergaard, Gale	Herbert Biberman	May 8, 1930	Stage director	None	None	Having fun
Sothern, Ann	Roger Pryor	Sept. 27, 1936	Band-leader	None	None	"Just wondy"
Stanwyck, Barbara	Robert Taylor	May 14, 1939	Actor	Frank Fay	Dion, 8, adopted	Honeymoon's over
Stephenson, James	Lorna Dinn	Dec. 1, 1938	Non-prof.	None	Peter, 8 mos.	A bit of all right
Stone, Lewis	Hazel Woof	Oct. 16, 1930	Non-prof.	Two	Two daughters by 1st wife	Hazel has the heart of Stone
Stuart, Gloria	Arthur Sheekman	July 28, 1934	Writer	Gordon Newell	Sylvia, 5½	So far, so good
Sullavan, Margaret	Leland Hayward	Nov. 15, 1936	Actors' agent	Henry Fonda, Wm. Wyler	Brooke, 4; Bridget, 1½; 3rd coming	Really smitten
Sutton, John	Charlotte Meier	Apr. 25, 1933	Non-prof.	None	None	Sutton-ly is clicking
Tamiroff, Akim	Tamara Shayne	Aug. 6, 1932	Russian actress	None	None	Accent on love
Taylor, Robert	Barbara Stanwyck	May 14, 1939	Actress	None	None	Winchell fodder
Tracy, Lee	Helen Thomas	July 21, 1938	Non-prof.	One	None	Hearts are trump
Tracy, Spencer	Louise Treadwell	July 28, 1923	His former leading lady	None	Johnny, 14; Susy, 6	Academy Award winner
Treacher, Arthur	Virginia Taylor	May 23, 1940	Stand-in	None	None	Very good, sir
Trevor, Claire	Clark Andrews	July 27, 1938	Script writer	None	None	No rumors
Tucker, Forrest	Sandra Jolley	Sept. 25, 1940	Showgirl	None	None	Time will tell
Wayne, John	Josephine Saenz	Spring, 1933	Socialite	None	Michael, 6; Toni (girl), 4; Patrick, 16 mos.; 4th coming	Love's definitely not on the Wayne
Weaver, Marjorie	George Schart	Oct. 22, 1937	Ensign in U. S. Navy	None	None	Distance lending no enchantment
Weissmuller, Johnny	Beryl Scott	Aug. 20, 1939	Socialite	Bobbe Arnst, Lupe Velez	John Scott, 3 mos.	Going along swimmingly
Whelan, Arleen	Alexander D'Arcy	Sept. 2, 1940	Actor	None	None	Off to a good start
Wilcoxon, Henry	Joan Woodbury	June 29, 1936	Actress	Sheila Browning	Wendy, 1	Much to be thankful for
William, Warren	Helen Nelson	Oct. 15, 1920	Socialite	None	None	Lifetime guarantee
Wyman, Jane	Ronald Reagan	Jan. 26, 1940	Actor	Myron Futterman	One en route	Every woman's hope
Young, Loretta	Tom Lewis	July 31, 1940	Advertising executive	Grant Withers	Judy, 5, adopted	"Marriage ain't Measles"
Young, Robert	Elizabeth Henderson	Mar. 6, 1933	Non-prof.	None	Betty, 8; Carol Anne, 5	Gilt-edge security

NEXT MONTH—Another chart listing ex-marrieds who live alone and like it

Printed in the U. S. A. by the Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

America's Leading Puzzle Magazine...

The puzzle fans of the nation have chosen CROSSWORD PUZZLES as their favorite puzzle magazine. And with sound reason, for in it they find everything they want—quality, variety, quantity . . . over 96 pages of fascinating puzzles to suit novice and veteran alike. Try CROSSWORD PUZZLES! This oldest and foremost puzzle magazine offers you many pleasant hours of entertainment and relaxation. Ask for a copy today at your favorite newsstand.

CROSSWORD PUZZLES • 10c ON SALE AT ALL NEWSDEALERS

Mrs. Roger Williams, Jr.

"I couldn't ask for a finer cigarette than Camels. Wonderfully mild —and just-right with flavor!"

LUCY CARVER WILLIAMS is a member of a distinguished Boston family and, through marriage, is connected with the Williams family of Rhode Island fame. In the portrait, Mrs. Williams is shown wearing some of her family jewels.

Mrs. Williams spends a great deal of her time traveling in the states. "Wherever I am," she says, "I make it a point to have plenty of Camel cigarettes on hand. I never tire of Camel's fine, flavorful taste. And Camel's extra mildness is something special!"

She collects antique silver and china, plays golf and badminton... but her favorite diversion is entertaining with buffet suppers. "Such informal suppers," she says, "afford a grand opportunity for just chatting and smoking. I notice that my guests prefer Camel cigarettes, too. And ever so often, I hear someone say: 'Camels are slower-burning—they're milder!'"

THE CIGARETTE OF COSTLIER TOBACCOS

In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

Here are a few of the many other distinguished women who enjoy the "extras" in slower-burning Camels:

Miss Peggy Beadleston, New York
Miss Nancy Beadleston, New York
Mrs. Nicholas Biddle, Philadelphia
Mrs. Gail Borden, Chicago
Mrs. Powell Cabot, Boston
Mrs. Charles Carroll, Jr., Maryland
Mrs. J. Gardner Coolidge 2ND, Boston
Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel 3RD, Philadelphia
Miss Eleanor Frothingham, Boston
Mrs. Rufus Paine Spalding III, Pasadena
Mrs. Oliver DeGray Vanderbilt III, Cincinnati
Mrs. Kiliaen M. Van Rensselaer, New York

Copyright, 1940, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.
Winston-Salem, North Carolina

EXTRA MILDNESS | EXTRA COOLNESS | EXTRA FLAVOR

Get the "extras" with slower-burning Camels

MODERN SCREEN

ARCH

0

ENTS

LINDA
DARNELL

OW HOLLYWOOD'S GREAT LOVERS
PROPOSED IN REAL LIFE!

MATRIMONIAL STATISTICS ON OUTSTANDING ELIGIBLES!

All Bob Pins are NOT Alike

DeLong's have a strong, lasting grip
. . . will hold your waves and curls
in place and keep you looking your best.
They won't slip out.

INFORMAL POMPADOUR

Soft Curls piled on top. Longer Hair at the back in a loose roll. All skillfully held in place with DeLong Bob Pins.

RUMBA WHIRL

Crown and Back brushed smooth as a Helmet. Double roll frames face ingeniously. All kept cleverly in place with DeLong Bob Pins.

Try DeLong's . . .
Convince Yourself They're Better
Look for the Blue Card at Notion Counters

PRETTILY PARTED

. . . this Center Part lends Witchery to a Heart-shaped Face. The Hair is brushed back smoothly from the Brow and held securely with DeLong Bob Pins.

REMEMBER DELONG'S

Won't Slip Out

Even if you're not a Queen of Beauty...

LIFE'S FUN...If your Smile has Charm!

"A LOVELY SMILE IS YOUR MOST IMPORTANT BEAUTY ASSET!"

say well-known beauty editors of 23 out of 24 leading magazines

In a recent poll made among the beauty editors of 24 leading magazines all but one of these beauty experts agreed that a lovely smile is a woman's most precious asset. They went on to say that "Even a plain girl has charm and personality if she keeps her smile bright, attractive and sparkling."

Help keep your smile sparkling with Ipana and Massage

DO YOU have to be a great beauty to find happiness—to win a husband—to be admired by your friends?

No! Decidedly no! Charm counts as much as great beauty. And even the plainest girl with a sparkling smile can give cards and spades to a beauty whose smile is shadowed.

Your smile is YOU! It's a priceless asset! And you should keep it right. Remember—your gums as well as your teeth need daily care—for bright, sparkling smiles depend upon healthy gums.

Keep your smile at its sparkling best... guard against "pink tooth brush"... with the help of the modern dental health routine of Ipana Tooth Paste and massage.

If you see "pink" on your tooth brush—see your dentist. You may or may not be in for trouble. He may tell you your gums are weak and sensitive because today's soft foods have robbed them of work. Like thousands of dentists today, he may suggest "the healthful stimulation of Ipana Tooth Paste and massage."

Get Ipana Today!

For Ipana not only cleans teeth thoroughly but, with massage, it is specially designed to aid the gums to healthier firmness.

So get Ipana today. Each time you brush your teeth, massage a little extra Ipana onto your gums. Help keep your gums firmer, your teeth brighter and your smile the charming beauty asset it should be.

IPANA TOOTH PASTE

FEB -8 1941 ©CIB 486408

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

This is a Winter's Tale. Not told by the Bard of Avon, but by the Bard of M-G-M.

★ ★ ★ ★

It is the story of things to come as the blustery season goes into the home stretch.

★ ★ ★ ★

Good things to come. Exhibits A, B, C, D.

A. James Stewart and Hedy Lamarr in Clarence Brown's production Come Live With Me. The screen play is by Patterson McNutt. It's a romantic comedy drama, the story of a circumstantial marriage in which the woman attempts to pay.

★ ★ ★ ★

B. Wallace Beery in The Bad Man, screenized by Wells Root from the famous Porter Emerson Browne play which was produced by William Harris, Jr., and directed by Richard Thorpe. It has action, great humor of a high order, and Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day and Ronald Reagan.

★ ★ ★ ★

Do you like our Exhibits?

★ ★ ★ ★

Well, C is the long-awaited co-starring of Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney in Men of Boys Town by James Kevin McGuinness, directed by Norman Taurog. Those of you—meaning all of you—who enjoyed "Boys Town", will understand that this new Father Flanagan-inspired film promises to be a contribution of remarkable merit.

★ ★ ★ ★

And D is The Ziegfeld Girl, gay, glamorous, glittering, gorgeous. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard, it will present for the delight of those with eyes and ears a galaxy of stars which include Jimmy Stewart, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner, Tony Martin, Charles Winninger and many, many others.

★ ★ ★ ★

That's A, B, C, and D.

★ ★ ★ ★

Your best alpha B E T is

— Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

MODERN SCREEN

STORIES

How They Proposed 24

"I'd Make an Awful Husband"—Jeffrey Lynn 26

Two Years with a Psychiatrist—Virginia Gilmore . . 28

"Why I've Fallen in Love Only Once" —Fred MacMurray 30

How to Handle Wolves with Kid Gloves 32

Olivia Makes an Investment—Olivia de Havilland . . 34

He Earned His Letter—James Stephenson 36

Fugitive from the Four Hundred—Gene Tierney . . 38

The South American Way—Carmen Miranda 40

BEAUTY

No Girl Is Homely 47

Crowned Heads of Hollywood 48

Coiffures That Compliment Your Type 50

Look to Your Locks 52

FEATURES

Information Desk 8

Our Puzzle Page 10

Movie Reviews 12

Movie Scoreboard 14

Portrait Gallery 19

Good News 42

Escape from Matrimony 46

Modern Hostess 68

FASHIONS

From Now On 56-57-58

PEARL H. FINLEY, Editor

SYLVIA KAHN, Hollywood Reporter

Cover Girl: Linda Darnell, natural color photograph by Gene Kornman

Val. 22, No. 4, March, 1941. Copyright, 1941, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madisan Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office af publicatian at Washingtan and Sauth Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single capy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscriptian price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscriptian $2.00 a year; fareign subscriptian $2.20 a year. Entered as second-class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the Pastaffice, Dunellen, N. J., under Act af March 3, 1879. Additianal secand-class entries at Seattle, Wash.; San Francisca, Calif.; Haustan, Texas; Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept na respansibility far the return of unsalicited material. Names af characters used in semi-fictianal matter are fictitiaus. If the name af any living persan is used it is purely a caincidence. Trademark Na. 301773.

"Come live with me!

...and be my love," says gorgeous Hedy Lamarr to handsome James Stewart. Does he? We'll say he does! And she pays him $17.60 a week in the bargain!...You can't believe it? Wait 'til you see it!

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER presents

James STEWART · Hedy LAMARR

Not even in the much-talked-about "Philadelphia Story" was he so romantic!

She wears fifteen dream-gowns by famed Adrian—and how she wears 'em!

in CLARENCE BROWN'S production of

Come Live With Me

with

IAN HUNTER · VERREE TEASDALE · DONALD MEEK

Screen Play by Patterson McNutt · A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

Directed by CLARENCE BROWN

February's short on days, but terrifically long on famous birthdates. There's Washington's, Lincoln's, Barrymore's and Gable's! Yep, you February-ites are pretty wonderful, even though the astrologists tell us you're definitely on the eccentric side.

You're mad about bizarre clothes and doing unconventional things. You're the first to try out a new fad and are almost foolhardy in your daring. You pride yourself on your Soul and would trade your only winter coat for a Philharmonic subscription. Yes, you're a wack, all right, but gosh, you're swell.

You're the most hospitable person in the world, unselfish to a fault and unbelievably sympathetic. Everyone loves you and you love everyone. You're a pacifist through and through—but when you're really irked you can fight rings around Joe Louis.

You're a bit of a flirt and not always the most constant mate—but you've got a special kind of charm that lets you get away with murder!

You're allergic to moods and make it a point to be gay, so this is probably superfluous. Nevertheless—

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

Send greetings to . . .

EDWARD ARNOLD—February 18 • JUDITH BARRETT—February 2 • JOHN BARRYMORE—February 15 • JOAN BENNETT—February 27 • JACK BENNY—February 14 • EDGAR BERGEN—February 16 • MARY BRIAN—February 17 • MARY CARLISLE—February 3 • JOHN CARRADINE—February 5 • MADELEINE CARROLL—February 26 • JULIE CARTER—February 28 • RONALD COLMAN—February 9 • RAY CORRIGAN—February 14 • LARRY (BUSTER) CRABBE—February 7 • JAMES CRAIG—February 4 • BRIAN DONLEVY—February 9 • STUART ERWIN—February 14 • BETTY FIELD—February 8 • W. C. FIELDS—February 10 • WALLACE FORD—February 12 • FRANCISKA GAAL—February 1 • CLARK GABLE—February 1 • RUSSELL GLEASON—February 6 • DAVID GORCEY—February 6 • BONITA GRANVILLE—February 2 • ALAN HALE—February 10 • JON HALL—February 26 • SIR CEDRIC HARDWICKE—February 19 • JASCHA HEIFETZ—February 2 • TIM HOLT—February 5 • BETTY JAYNES—February 12 • BRENDA JOYCE—February 25 • IAN KEITH—February 27 • JEFFREY LYNN—February 16 • ADOLPHE MENJOU—February 18 • VICTOR MOORE—February 24 • CHESTER MORRIS—February 16 • WAYNE MORRIS—February 17 • MERLE OBERON—February 19 • ERIK RHODES—February 10 • FLORENCE RICE—February 14 • CESAR ROMERO—February 15 • CHARLES RUGGLES—February 8 • ANN SHERIDAN—February 21 • LYLE TALBOT—February 8 • MAX TERHUNE—February 12 • FRANCHOT TONE—February 27 • FORREST TUCKER—February 12 • LANA TURNER—February 8 • BOB YOUNG—February 22 • ZORINA—February 1.

"HIGH SIERRA is an excitement-loaded yarn if ever I knew one! On film it's a world-beater!"
Newspaperdom's acknowledged No. 1 Story-Teller
MARK HELLINGER

"HIGH SIERRA is the most thrilling and unusual picture I have directed since 'What Price Glory'!"
Director of a hundred Hits, RAOUL WALSH

"My story to top 'Little Caesar' is HIGH SIERRA!"
Famed Author, W. R. BURNETT

WARNER BROS., Producers of 'Little Caesar' and 'Angels with Dirty Faces', now present the drama that towers mightily beside both . . .

HIGH SIERRA

A NEW PEAK FOR SCREEN EXCITEMENT!

It's the picture that skyrockets them to top star ranks!

IDA LUPINO

As Marie, the taxi dancer and killer's companion—deep down just another woman whose hungry heart yearned for one man.

HUMPHREY BOGART

As 'Mad Dog' Earle, enemy of all that is decent and good, defiant of every law on earth—except the High Sierras!

With ALAN CURTIS • ARTHUR KENNEDY • JOAN LESLIE
HENRY HULL • HENRY TRAVERS

INFORMATION DESK

HELP US KEEP OUR MAILBOX FULL OF QUESTIONS, AND WE PROMISE TO KEEP YOURS CHOCKFULL OF ANSWERS!

NOTE: If you desire a reply by mail, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, New York.

Grace Sterlen, Pittsburgh, Pa. Roy Rogers is very happily wedded to Arline Wilkins, who hails from the Texas ranges and shares Roy's interest in horses and ranch life. They have a little five-months-old adopted girl, Cheryl Darline, who keeps them home nights!

Mary Lawler, Philadelphia, Penn. 20th Century-Fox Studios, Box No. 900, Beverly Hills, Cal., would be glad to send you a picture of Linda Darnell for 25c in coin or stamps. Warner Brothers, Burbank, Cal., send photographs of Dennis Morgan, autographed 'n' everything, for a mere quarter.

Duke Roberts, Piedmont, Cal. Linda Darnell's 17 years old, five feet, five inches tall and weighs a mere 109 pounds. Her favorite sports are tennis, swimming which she enjoys on a par with dancing and whipping around in her new car. Her next picture sounds grim—"Blood and Sand" in which she plays opposite Tyrone Power.

Virginia Jwahlen, El Dorado, Ark. Looks like maybe Ginny Simms and Kay Kyser are Mr. and Mrs. The other day while ordering clothes for Ginny, Kay slipped and mentioned her as "my wife" to the sales girl. They were trying to keep it a secret, but that certainly didn't help the matter any!

Blondie, Sharon, Mass. Laurence Olivier's latest picture is as yet unnamed, but concerns the love affair of Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton (played by Vivien Leigh). A few weeks ago, he and wife Vivien left for England to give their services to their native country for the duration of the war. You can get his picture at United Artists Studio, 1041 No. Formosa Avenue, Hollywood, Cal. Errol Flynn's photograph is distributed by Warner Brothers, Burbank, Cal.

Ida Campi, Berkley, Mich. Billy Halop will be 21 on February 11th. His most recent movie was "Give Us Wings." You can get an autographed picture of him at Universal Studios, Universal City, Cal. James Cagney's photos are obtainable at Warner Brothers, Burbank, Cal. He answers all the fan mail he possibly can in his too few spare moments.

A fan, Brooklyn, N. Y. Your favorite John Shelton's next thriller will be "Fools Rush In," with Virginia Grey. . . . Priscilla Lane's making "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America."

L. De Marco, Jersey City, N. J. Margaret Lindsay's unmarried at present but everyone expects a quick change into Mrs. Bill Lundigan any time now. . . . Her next picture is "Hard Boiled Canary," in which she plays opposite Allan Jones. . . . Ann Sheridan's newest is "Honeymoon for Three," with George Brent.

A fan, Erie, Pa. Ida Lupino's father, famous comedian and stage dancer, was responsible for Ida's dramatic ability through both environment and heredity. From the time she was seven years old, he trained her for the stage in a private theatre in their London garden. At the age of ten, Ida knew the complete roles of all Shakespeare's leading women, and at fifteen took the lead in a British motion picture "Her First Affair." From that time on, her career was assured. Paramount talent scouts discovered her and brought her to Hollywood, where she's been making history ever since. Now, however, she's switched to Warner Brothers.

Mary E. Stoddard, Pictou, N. S., Canada. Madeleine Carroll's portrait is sent out by Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Cal., and Andrea Leeds' picture may be obtained at 20th Century-Fox Studios, Box No. 900, Beverly Hills, Cal. 25c in coin or stamps is the fee per photo.

Joan Smith, Omaha, Neb. Cary Grant was born Archibald Alexander Leach, in Bristol, England, on January 18, 1909. At the age of fifteen he ran away from home and joined the Bog Bender's Acrobats, known in England as the "knock-about" comedians. So successful was his "knocking about" that he continued in show business and soon appeared on the London stage. 'Twasn't long before his antics were brought to America via a juicy Hollywood contract. His last pictures were: "In Name Only," "His Girl Friday," "My Favorite Wife," "The Howards of Virginia" and "The Philadelphia Story."

Sally Robillard, Gloversville, N. Y. You can get a picture of Ian Hunter at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Cal., for 25c in coin or stamps. He was born in Cape Town, South Africa, June 13, 1900, is six feet tall and has brown hair and grey eyes.

(Continued on page 11)

David L. Loew • Albert Lewin present
"SO ENDS OUR NIGHT"
starring FREDRIC MARCH • MARGARET SULLAVAN • FRANCES DEE
with
Glenn Ford • Anna Sten and Erich Von Stroheim
Two thrilling Romances in a story of high Adventure!
FROM THE NOVEL
FLOTSAM
by
Erich Maria Remarque
JOSEPH and MARIE
(Fredric March and Frances Dee) who prove no power on earth can divide and rule true love!
RUTH and KERN
(Margaret Sullavan and the exciting new romantic screen personality, Glenn Ford) who, armored only with their love, win their hearts' victory!
Directed by JOHN CROMWELL • Screenplay by Talbot Jennings • Released thru UNITED ARTISTS Unforgettable Performances by the Year's Greatest Cast!

IRRESISTIBLE Loveliness

YOURS WITH Irresistible LIPSTICK

Ask any man! He'll tell you irresistible lips are soft lips, smooth lips, dewy-fresh! Glamorous women know this and choose a softer, creamier lipstick like IRRESISTIBLE. Easy to apply, non-drying, stays on smoothly for hours because it's WHIP-TEXT through a secret new process. Thrilling range of fashion-right colors includes such favorites as: RUBY RED, FLASH RED, CANDY STRIPE RED, FUCHSIA PLUM with matching rouge, face powder and powder foundation.

IT'S Whip-Text
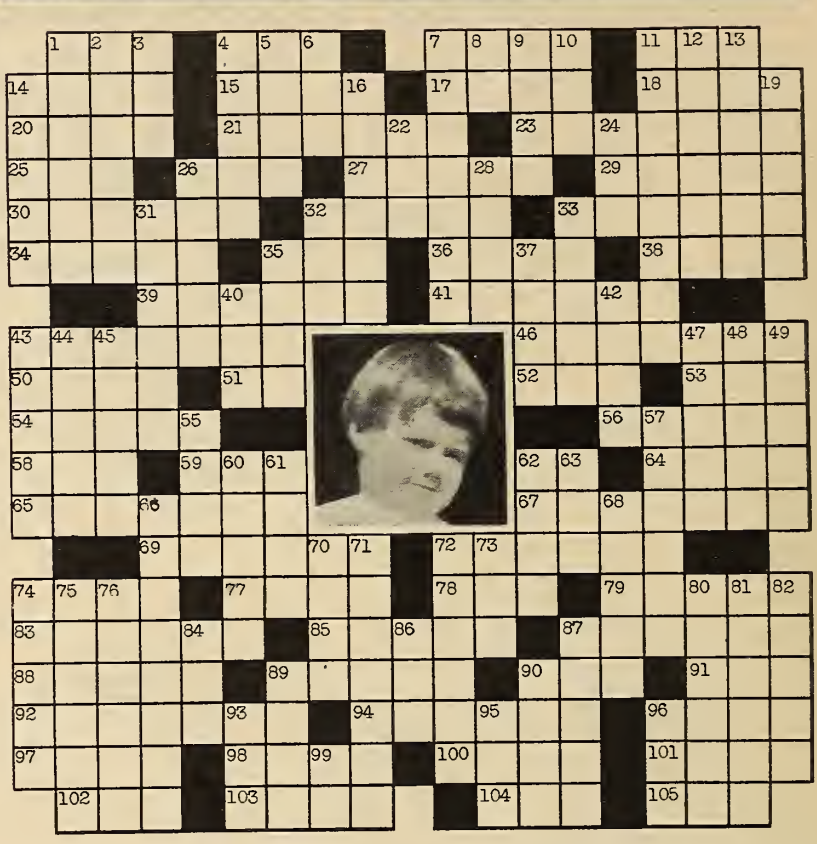
LASTS LONGER
SMOOTHER

10c AT ALL
5 & 10¢ STORES



DOES HE LOVE YOU?

New! Irresistible Valentine Perfume holder spins and tells all! Wear this enchanting IRRESISTIBLE fragrance on your next date. Then spin the heart! Our guess: He loves you.

IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME 10c

OUR PUZZLE PAGE

PUZZLE SOLUTION ON PAGE 92

ACROSS

1. Famed "oomph girl"
4. Roe: Scot.
7. Bonita's mother in "Gallant Sons"
11. Marshall's role in "Foreign Correspondent"
14. Foot gear
15. Star of "No, No, Nanette"
17. Gown designer for 1 across
18. Gardener
20. "The Thundering - - - -"
21. She'll star in "Legacy"
23. Silent day actress
25. Young man in "Honeymoon For Three"
26. Number
27. Receives cargoes
29. Seed coverings
30. Edible hulls
32. Persian coin
33. Ribbed cloth
34. All film players make these
35. Japanese coin
36. Movie sports commentator
38. Moistens
39. Greatest of "Young People"
41. Beloved girl of "Spring Parade"
43. Lana is the "- - - - - - - girl"
46. Tested
50. Melt
51. Cagney's home state: abbr.
52. Explosive
53. Man's name
54. Singing Irish star
56. Charles - - - - - ett
58. Exist
59. "Victoria R - - - na"
62. "The mammy singer"
64. Soon
65. Uppermost strata series
67. Films, cut and shown by the week
69. Lion tamer in "Wagons Roll At Night"
72. Shiny fabric
74. Gelatinous substance
77. Singer, - - - - Ray
78. Our star's real name: Cl - - - Lou
79. Stupefies
83. Tuneful Universal musical
85. Cozy corners
87. He gave us "Fantasia"
88. Star of "One Night in the Tropics"
89. Where Isa Miranda hails from
90. Even: poet.
91. Birthmonth of 1 across: abbr.
92. Female prophet
94. Star of "Mark of Zorro"
96. Persian poet
97. Dirk
98. "The March of - - - -"
100. Lanky screen comic
101. Small stream
102. Emmet
103. Belgian river
104. Printed notices
105. Mineral deposit

DOWN

1. Business man in "Hired Wife"
2. Ex-hubby of our star
3. Dour comedian
4. Friend of "The Lady with Red Hair"
5. Wife of John Payne
6. Vivien Leigh's home-land: abbr.
7. She dances in "Second Chorus"
8. Measure of area
9. Angers
10. Lya - - -
11. Last name of our star
12. Law enforcement department
13. Color
14. Film a scene
16. She's returning to films
19. Reclines
22. Actor in "Bitter Sweet"
24. Sailor
26. Assault
28. Great lake
31. Canadian capital
32. Dolores - - - Rio
33. A dowel
35. Agile
37. A film's dramatis personae
40. "Little - - -"
42. Fruits of the oak
43. Strip of leather
44. Whence
45. Anxious
47. Femme in "Go West"
48. Jeb Stuart in "Santa Fe Trail"
49. Mends
55. Actor Hamilton
57. Spoils
60. Star reporter of "Comrade X"
61. Arrow poison
62. "The Thin Man's" dog
63. Tot in "Virginia"
66. With Boyer in "Back Street"
68. Plant exudation
70. Rave
71. Where we see 1 across
72. Woodland deities
73 "- - - Gratia Artis"
74. Accumulate
75. Ore of lead
76. Who is Hollywood's "Cinderella?"
80. Not just
81. Pointed sewing implement
82. Gifted child actress
84. "New W - - -"
86. Cunning
87. Considers
89. Egyptian goddess
90. City in Oklahoma
93. Pen
95. L - - - Lane
96. Sign of a packed theatre
99. Personal pronoun

(Continued from page 8)

Helen Stephens, Waterloo, Iowa. The complete unabridged name of Mrs. Gene Autry is Ina Mae Spivey Autry.

Barbara Wicks, Providence, R. I. You can get stills from "Wuthering Heights" by sending your request and 25c in coin or stamps to United Artists Studios, 1041 N. Formosa Ave., Hollywood, Cal.

Pauline Hurley, Hollister, Mo. Clark Gable's marriage to his first wife, Josephine Dillon, took place in 1924 and lasted four years. . . . Katharine Hepburn became Mrs. Ludlow Smith in 1928, but has since been divorced. . . . Ginger Rogers has played in a host of pictures, including: "Sap from Syracuse," "A Night in a Dormitory," "Honor Among Lovers," "The Tip-Off," "Suicide Fleet," "Bad Timber," "Broadway Bad," "Thirteenth Street," "Rafter Romance," "Professional Sweetheart," "Chance at Heaven," "Flying Down to Rio," "Don't Bet on Love," "Sitting Pretty," "Twenty Million Sweethearts," "Upperworld," "The Gay Divorcée," "Romance in Manhattan," "Finishing School," "Change of Heart," "Roberta," "Star of Midnight," "Having Wonderful Time," "Vivacious Lady," "Carefree," "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," "Bachelor Mother," "Fifth Avenue Girl," "Primrose Path," "Little Mother," "Lucky Partners" and "Kitty Foyle."

Jean Connor, Mansfield, Ohio. Yep, Frank Morgan did the imitations of Hedy Lamarr, Claudette Colbert and others in "Hullabaloo." You can get the clever fellow's autographed picture by writing to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Cal., and sending twenty-five cents.

Grace Bradley's a sophisticated dancer in "Hard Boiled Canary," but after hours she's Cowboy Bill Boyd's sweet young frau—his third!

Shirley Chevrette, Dearborn, Mich. Errol Flynn has penned several literary pieces, chief among which are two full-length books, "The White Rajah" and "Beam Ends." He loves to read as well as write and spends most of his free time doing one or the other. You can get an autographed picture of him by writing and enclosing twenty-five cents to Warner Brothers Studios, Burbank, Cal.

Lois Jean Jewell, Story City, Iowa. Tim Holt's real name is just that, and he's the son of Jack Holt of movie fame. He was born in Beverly Hills, Cal., on February 5th, and still lives thereabouts. He's married and has a son about a year old. Like his father, he enjoys the outdoors and is a crack swimmer, badminton expert and polo player. He's tanned as an Indian, dislikes formal clothes and closed cars, but is not a genuine cowboy by any means. He enjoys the luxuries of life and travels extensively in Mexico and the West. His hobbies are raising dogs and taking pictures. His latest movie's "Along the Rio Grande."

Ralph Thompson, Dawson, Texas. Your friend, Mary Lee, was born in Centralia, Ill., on October 24, 1925. She went to school there until Ted Weems discovered her and took her to New York with his orchestra when she was only 3. Her two ambitions are to be a movie star and radio singer, and she's getting pretty much what she wants at this early age! During her leisure hours, she swims, dives, collects phonograph records and dates her army of young men. She's four feet, eleven and a half inches tall, has curly brown hair and brown eyes. Her favorite colors are blue and red.

"Like every Bride I wanted a Lovelier Skin – and Camay helped me to have one"

—Says Mrs. James L. Macwithey

Camay's greater mildness is a help to Every Woman —even to many with Dry and Delicate Skin.

His bride in his arms, Mr. Macwithey finds her blonde hair and creamy skin an exquisite picture. After the reception they left for a honeymoon at Sea Island, Georgia, with Camay in her luggage.

NOW a great new improvement has made Camay milder than six of the leading large-selling beauty soaps, as we proved by actual tests. Skin specialists we asked say that regular cleansing with a fine, mild toilet soap will help your skin to look lovelier. So why not let Camay's milder cleansing help you in your search for greater skin loveliness!

Photographs by David Berns

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Macwithey were married at Christ Episcopal Church, East Orange, N. J. Mrs. Macwithey says about Camay, "Camay is so mild. It is just wonderful for delicate skin like mine. I really feel that my continued use of Camay helps my skin to look smoother and lovelier."

The Soap of Beautiful Women

MOVIE

THE PHILADELPHIA STORY

It's absolutely tops in entertainment from almost any standpoint. It has sophistication, sparkle, wit, humor—plus a down-to-earth basic plot with human elements such as any of us might face.

Katharine Hepburn is perfect as the society girl who has been divorced from Cary Grant because she's seeking perfection in life and men, and who is about to marry John Howard. Jimmy Stewart is a reporter who is trying to write a yarn about the wedding, and Ruth Hussey, his photographer, loves him. Jimmy and Katharine spend a crazy few hours in each other's company, drinking too much and talking too much—as a result of which she realizes that John is not her man and goes back to Cary. And Jimmy hands himself over one hundred per cent to Ruth.

Just in case these aren't enough big-time personalities to lure you, the minor parts are handled by such top-notch people as Roland Young, Mary Nash, Virginia Weidler and John Halliday.

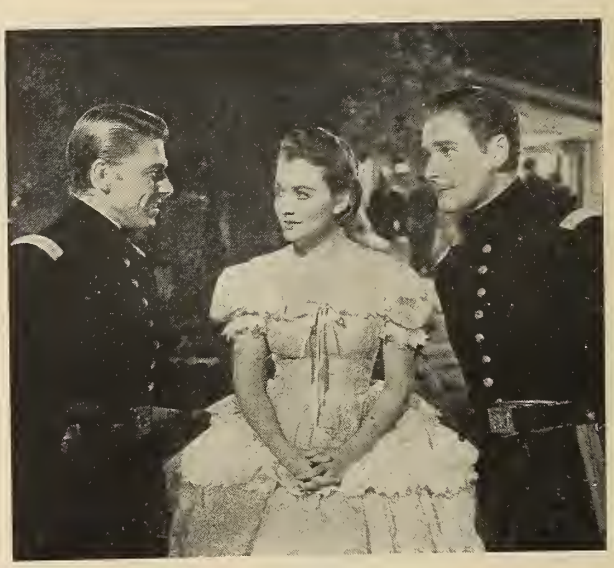
What makes this a really important film is that every second of it is real. The writing is smart, brittle and intelligent—but none of the characters talk like people in a play, like human beings.

All three of the stars are perfectly cast, and Ruth Hussey moves a couple of notches higher up the ladder. Directed by George Cukor.—M-G-M.

★ ★ ★ ★

Jimmy Stewart makes his bow as basso profundo in "The Philadelphia Story," in which he adds intrigue to the rollicking Katie Hepburn-Cary Grant feud.

★ ★ ★ ★



SANTA FE TRAIL

When a movie company goes to a great deal of trouble to advertise and ballyhoo a film, a lot of us are inclined to become acutely critical and wonder whether it isn't a case of putting a good bit of fancy icing on a simple piece of angel cake? Well, this is not one of those cases. All the advance adjectives and hurrahs you have heard about this one are well deserved; it is a thriller!

The story has to do with the fantastic career of John Brown and his battle to liberate America from what he called "the cancer of slavery." Errol Flynn is a young West Point graduate who is sent out to Kansas to catch Brown and stop him from trying to split up the Union. He almost does this, but does not actually succeed until Brown tries to get a second start in Maryland. That leads to the historic battle at Harper's Ferry, when Brown, badly outnumbered, forces a heroic, though futile, fight.

John Brown is played by Raymond Massey, and this is one of the strongest bits of acting you have seen in a long time.

The swashbuckling and romance are in the hands of Errol Flynn, with beautiful Olivia de Havilland as the romantic goal, and Ronald Reagan as the romantic hurdle that Flynn has to clear away. Directed by Michael Curtiz.—Warners.

There's grim suspense when Olivia de Havilland has a double proposal of marriage from bosom chums Ronald Reagan and Errol Flynn in "Santa Fe Trail."

REVIEWS

By Wolfe Kaufman

Ginger Rogers takes to a white collar and Dennis Morgan to Philadelphia's Main Line in the screen version of Christopher Morley's "Kitty Foyle."

To make it really authentic, the cast of "Virginia," headed by Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll, settled in that state during the entire filming!

KITTY FOYLE

Ginger Rogers' interpretation of the title role is tremendously exciting, and if it doesn't get her an Academy Award it will certainly pull her right up to the brink of one. Equally thrilling is the perfect job the writers and producer have done. It wasn't easy to put Morley's book on celluloid, but here it is, adult without bothering anyone's moral scruples, and an exciting hunk out of real life.

The story—told via flashbacks—has to do with Kitty, a poor gal with a lot of dreams and imagination, who lands a job on a society magazine. She gets involved with the handsome, rich and snooty young editor (Dennis Morgan, who's really terrific) and they fall in love. However, hard as they both try, there seems to be no luck in their love affair, and Ginger runs away to New York.

There is another romance with a young interne —James Craig. She promises to marry him, when along comes her first love, whom her heart hasn't forgotten. He is married, but is leaving his wife and wants Ginger to go to South America with him. That's the decision she faces at the beginning of the film.

Besides top-notch acting by Ginger and the two men, there are some excellent supporting performances by Ernest Cossart and Odette Myrtil. Directed by Sam Wood.—RKO-Radio.

★★★★

★★★½

VIRGINIA

If nothing else, the fact that Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray are at top form in this film should insure healthy box office reception. But added to that is the fact that the film is in astonishingly beautiful Technicolor and the scenery is just about the most unusual and thrilling of the year. It was all filmed right on the ground, in Virginia proper, and the results justify the expense.

The story is rather rambly, due to the fact that the writers tried to get too much into it, in the belief that they were creating an important film epic. The central theme is that of an ex-Virginian, Madeleine, brought up in New York and completely broken with Southern "tradition." She comes back to Virginia to sell the old mansion and land, because she is broke.

MacMurray is her next-door neighbor. The rich people from up North are kicking tradition and heritage in the face, but Fred believes that it is important to hold on to them. After a long and complicated struggle, he convinces Madeleine that she belongs down there, playing it his way.

An important element in the film's favor is the presence of five-year-old Carolyn Lee. There is a new young leading man, too, named Stirling Hayden. Directed by Edward H. Griffith.—Paramount.

(Continued on page 15)

Yes—You will be more beautiful with Princess Pat Rouge

Suppose you found you were less beautiful than you could be . . . and then discovered a way to new loveliness . . . wouldn't you act—and quickly? Of course! Well, ordinary rouge doesn't give you all the beauty you could have. It gives that "painted, artificial look."

Now, let's see about
PRINCESS PAT ROUGE

You've a good reason to change to Princess Pat—if it can give you thrilling new beauty. And it does because it's duo-tone . . an undertone and an overtone make each shade. Not just another rouge, but utterly different. Princess Pat Rouge changes on your skin!—matches your individual type. Mysteriously, amazingly, the color seems to come from within the skin, bringing out new hidden beauty. Isn't that what you want? Your mirror shows you sparkle and animation—a new confidence in your beauty makes you irresistible. Until you experience the excitement of wearing this duo-tone rouge, you will never know how glamorous you really can be. Try Princess Pat Rouge today—before tonight.

And lips to match . . . For perfect harmony in loveliness and allure try Princess Pat Lipstick to match your rouge. Get the big, Princess Pat Night and Day Double: which carries a different shade at either end. Comes in all combinations for light, medium and dark types. Be fascinating in your daylight make-up . . . be irresistible by night-light. Convenient and economical. Two Lipsticks in one . . . and think, it's only 25c.

for faces of fashion

Miss Gloria Brewster, charming screen actress, smiles her approval of Princess Pat Rouge.

PRINCESS PAT

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on films not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

Picture	General Rating
All This, and Heaven Too (Warners)	4★
Andy Hardy Meets Debutante (M-G-M)	3★
Angels Over Broadway (Columbia)	2½★
Argentine Nights (Universal)	2½★
Arise, My Love (Paramount)	4★
*Arizona (Columbia)	4★
Bank Dick, The (Universal)	3★
Bitter Sweet (M-G-M)	3★
Blondie Plays Cupid (Columbia)	C 2½★
Boom Town (M-G-M)	3½★
Brigham Young—Frontiersman (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Captain Caution (United Artists)	2½★
Chad Hanna (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Charlie Chan at the Wax Museum (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Charter Pilot (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Christmas in July (Paramount)	3★
City for Conquest (Warners)	3½★
Colorado (Republic)	2½★
Comin' Round the Mountain (Paramount)	2★
Comrade X (M-G-M)	3★
Dance, Girl, Dance (RKO)	2★
Dancing on a Dime (Paramount)	2★
Devil's Island (Warners)	2½★
Devil's Pipeline, The (Universal)	2★
Diamond Frontier (Universal)	2★
Dispatch From Reuter's, A (Warners)	C 3★
Dr. Kildare Goes Home (M-G-M)	3★
Dr. Kildare's Crisis (M-G-M)	2½★
Down Argentine Way (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Dulcy (M-G-M)	3★
Earl of Puddlestone (Republic)	2★
East of the River (Warners)	2½★
Ellery Queen, Master Detective (Columbia)	2½★
Escape (M-G-M)	3½★
Fantasia (Walt Disney)	C 4★
Five Little Peppers in Trouble (Columbia)	C 2★
*Flight Command (M-G-M)	3★
Foreign Correspondent (United Artists)	4★
*Four Mothers (Warners)	3★
Free, Blonde and 21 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Gallant Sons (M-G-M)	2½★
Gambling on the High Seas (Warners)	2½★
Gay Caballero, The (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Ghost Breakers, The (Paramount)	3★
Girl from Avenue A (20th Century-Fox)	C 2★
Girl from God's Country (Republic)	2★
Girls Under 21 (Columbia)	2★
Glamour for Sale (Columbia)	2★
Gold Rush Maisie (M-G-M)	2½★
Golden Fleecing, The (M-G-M)	3★
Gone With the Wind (M-G-M)	4★
Grapes of Wrath, The (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Great Dictator, The (United Artists)	3½★
Great McGinty, The (Paramount)	3½★
Great Profile, The (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Haunted Honeymoon (M-G-M)	3★
He Stayed for Breakfast (Columbia)	2½★
Hired Wife (Universal)	3★
Hit Parade of 1941 (Republic)	2½★
Honeymoon Deferred (Universal)	2½★
Howards of Virginia, The (Columbia)	3½★
*Hudson's Bay (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Hullabaloo (M-G-M)	2★
I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby (Universal)	2★
If I Had My Way (Universal)	C 3★
I Love You Again (M-G-M)	3★
I Married Adventure (Columbia)	3★
I'm Still Alive (RKO)	2½★
In Old Missouri (Republic)	2★
Irene (RKO)	3★
Isle of Destiny (RKO)	2★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
I Want A Divorce (Paramount)	3★
Kit Carson (United Artists)	2½★
*Kitty Foyle (RKO)	4★
Knute Rockne—All American (Warners)	C 3½★
Lady in Question, The (Columbia)	3★
Lady with Red Hair, The (Warners)	3★
Letter, The (Warners)	4★
*Let's Make Music (RKO)	3★
Little Bit of Heaven (Universal)	C 3★
Little Men (RKO)	2½★
Little Nellie Kelly (M-G-M)	C 3★
Long Voyage Home, The (United Artists)	4★
Love Thy Neighbor (Paramount)	3½★
Lucky Partners (RKO)	3★
*Mad Doctor, The (Paramount)	2½★
Man I Married, The (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Mark of Zorro, The (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Meet the Wildcat (Universal)	2½★
Meet the Missus (Republic)	2★
Mexican Spitfire Out West (RKO)	2★
Midnight (Paramount)	3★
Moon Over Burma (Paramount)	2½★
Mortal Storm, The (M-G-M)	4★
Mummy's Hand, The (Universal)	2½★
Murder in the Air (Warners)	2★
My Little Chickadee (Universal)	2½★
My Love Came Back (Warners)	3½★
New Moon (M-G-M)	3★
Night Train (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Nobody's Children (Columbia)	2½★
North West Mounted Police (Paramount)	C 3½★
Northwest Passage (M-G-M)	4★
No, No, Nanette (RKO)	2½★
No Time for Comedy (Warners)	3★
Oklahoma Kid, The (Warners)	3★
Oklahoma Renegades (Republic)	2½★
One Crowded Night (RKO)	2★
One Million B. C. (United Artists)	C 3★
One Night in the Tropics (Universal)	2½★
Opened by Mistake (Paramount)	2½★
Pastor Hall (United Artists)	3½★
Phantom Raiders (M-G-M)	2★
Philadelphia Story, The (M-G-M)	4★
Pier 13 (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Pioneers of the Frontier (Columbia)	2★
*Playgirl (RKO)	2★
Pop Always Pays (RKO)	2½★
Pride and Prejudice (M-G-M)	3½★
Public Deb No. 1 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Quarterback, The (Paramount)	2½★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Queen of the Yukon (Monogram)	2★
Ragtime Cowboy Joe (Universal)	2★
Ramparts We Watch, The (March of Time-RKO)	3½★
Rangers of Fortune (Paramount)	3★
Rhythm on the River (Paramount)	3½★
Road to Singapore, The (Paramount)	2½★
Romance of the Rio Grande (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Safari (Paramount)	2½★
Sailor's Lady (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Sandy Gets Her Man (Universal)	2★
Sea Hawk, The (Warners)	3½★
San Francisco Docks (Universal)	2½★
Santa Fe Trail (Warners)	4★
*Second Chorus (Paramount)	3½★
Seven Sinners (Universal)	3★
Sing, Dance, Plenty Hot (Republic)	2★
Sky Murder (M-G-M)	2★
Slightly Honorable (United Artists)	3★
Slightly Tempted (Universal)	2★
Son of Monte Cristo, The (United Artists)	3★
South of Pago Pago (United Artists)	2½★
So You Won't Talk? (Columbia)	2½★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal)	C 2½★
Sporting Blood (M-G-M)	2½★
Spring Parade (Universal)	C 3★
Stanley and Livingstone (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Stranger on the Third Floor (RKO)	3★
Strike Up the Band (M-G-M)	C 3½★
Stronger Than Desire (M-G-M)	2½★
Susan and God (M-G-M)	3½★
Swiss Family Robinson (RKO)	C 3★
They Drive by Night (Warners)	3★
They Knew What They Wanted (RKO)	3½★
Thief of Bagdad, The (United Artists)	3½★
Third Finger, Left Hand (M-G-M)	3★
*This Thing Called Love (Columbia)	3½★
Those Were the Days (Paramount)	C 2½★
Three Smart Girls Grow Up (Universal)	C 3★
Thundering Frontier (Columbia)	2★
Tin Pan Alley (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Tom Brown's School Days (RKO)	C 3★
Too Many Girls (RKO)	3★
Tower of London (Universal)	2★
Trail of the Vigilantes (Universal)	3★
Triple Justice (RKO)	2★
Tugboat Annie Sails Again (Warners)	2½★
Victory (Paramount)	3★
*Virginia (Paramount)	3½★
Vigil in the Night (RKO)	3★
Westerner, The (United Artists)	C 3★
We Who Are Young (M-G-M)	3★
When the Daltons Rode (Universal)	3★
Wyoming (M-G-M)	3★
You'll Find Out (RKO)	3★
Young As You Feel (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Young People (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Youth Will Be Served (20th Century-Fox)	2★

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 13)

★★★½ Second Chorus

There are so many very good things about this picture that the first impulse is to put it right up at the head of the parade and call it the best musical of the year. But, analyzing it, you realize that there are a number of serious faults, too—and so the best you can do is call it a pretty good show.

Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard, Burgess Meredith and Artie Shaw are the personalities to be reckoned with here—and that's personalities enough for anybody's movie. Astaire and Meredith are both trumpet players, and they deliberately flunk their courses in college every year because they don't want to graduate. The gag behind it is that as long as they stay they can continue playing in the school band which is a mighty good way to earn a living, it seems. Then, along comes Paulette. Both lads do nip-ups trying to outsmart each other, and both get graduated. Then they have to go out and earn a living.

It's a good framework because it keeps the music flowing into the picture quite naturally, without seeming to be dragged in by the ears. Also, it gives all of the characters a good chance to do their stuff, since they are all just about equally spotted. Trouble is that the producer was in such a hurry to get the picture made that a lot of it was written and rewritten almost as fast as it was photographed, and a lot of it needs polishing and editing. Several weeks more of advance preparation would have made all the difference in the world.

Paulette returns to romantic light comedy here and, no doubt about it, the gal has emotional range. And Meredith, too, will surprise you. He is perhaps the most underrated actor in Hollywood.

Astaire doesn't do as much dancing in this picture as he has in others; he's been trying to stop dancing in films, as you probably know. As for Artie Shaw—he's Artie Shaw; right down the groove if you're a jitterbug; a little noisy and brash, if you're not.

The music and songs are way up there, and the Clarinet Concerto in Swing is something you're not likely to forget very easily. Directed by H. C. Potter.—Paramount.

★★★½ Love Thy Neighbor

One of the oldest headaches in the movie business is the one about why Joe Doakes is a big sock attraction in stage shows but a dead fish in movies. Any number of times terrific Broadway or radio attractions have tried making movies (Kate Smith, Ben Bernie, Ed Wynn, Amos 'n' Andy, Jack Pearl, to name only a few) but couldn't make the grade. That is why it is so pleasant to be able to report that Jack Benny and Fred Allen are both in this movie and they're swell!

Benny, of course, is an established movie as well as radio star, but Allen has tried movies a couple of times without too much hurrah. And here they are both resorting to the Benny formula—the trick that has kept him on top in his two mediums—and they really click. So it's a good trick, and it's worth remembering. All the actors have to do is—be themselves.

Jack and Fred are battling all the way

If she can't take a tip—she'll surely lose her job

Why risk offending? Use Mum every day. Be sure underarms are always fresh!

NANCY couldn't believe her eyes! Yet there, plain as day, was the note that told what her fellow workers thought.

Carelessness of this sort... the merest hint of underarm odor... can pull you down so quickly! That's why smart girls make a daily habit of Mum.

For Mum makes your daintiness sure. Just smooth it on and you're safe from underarm odor for a full day or evening. Never forget Mum for a single day, for even daily baths can't prevent risk of offending. Underarms always need Mum's sure protection.

More women use Mum than any other deodorant because:

MUM IS SPEEDY! Thirty seconds is all it takes to apply a touch of Mum.

MUM IS SURE! Without attempting to stop perspiration, Mum prevents underarm odor all day long.

MUM IS SAFE! Can't irritate your skin... can't harm clothes. Mum has the seal of approval of the American Institute of Laundering. Get a jar of Mum at your druggist's today. Use it every day... be sure you're always sweet.

SMART GIRLS MAKE A HABIT OF MUM!

For Sanitary Napkins

More and more women who want no worries about daintiness are using Mum for this important purpose. And Mum is so gentle, so safe.

MUM

TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

through the picture. They hate one another and are saying nasty things about and to each other. For purposes of complication, Benny is preparing a stage show and Fred has a niece who goes into Jack's show as a singer. She is Mary Martin, and you can't blame Jack for hiring her, or for falling in love with her—but uncle Fred can't see anything but red. He burns up, swears revenge and hires Jack's boy Friday, Rochester, and makes him his personal valet. You can imagine what that does to Jack!

Well, it's that kind of lunacy; it's back and forth, up and down, hit-and-run humor. The scene where Fred Allen is trying to sleep and is counting sheep and every sheep looks like Jack Benny; the scene in which Fred is eating sleeping tablets by the dozen, and all they do is give him indigestion; the one in which Jack and Fred almost make up and tell each other what nice guys they both are—they're all highlight comedy scenes. Add a dash of good singing via Mary Martin and Theresa Harris (Rochester's dusky girl friend), throw in a couple of A-1 dance routines by the Merriel Abbott Dancers, get a whiff of Virginia Dale, a new cutie with a swell chassis and a hotcha sense of rowdy humor, and you have a total of—"Love Thy Neighbor," a sock comedy directed by Mark Sandrich.—Paramount.

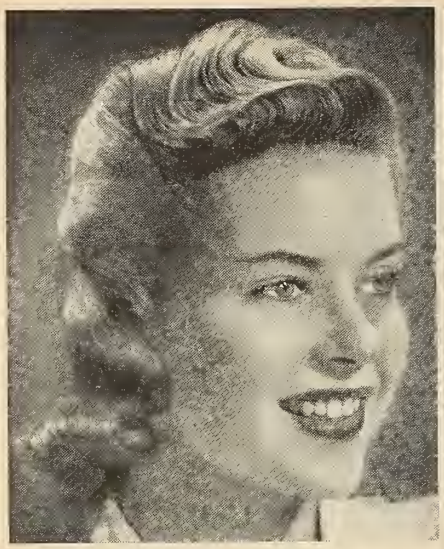
★★★½ This Thing Called Love

And here is still another in the recent parade of good, solid sophisticated comedies. It's plenty on the rough side but it is chuck full of laughs and, no matter how you feel about it all, you will be forced to do your share of chuckling.

Roz Russell and Melvyn Douglas are the couple who, this time, get mixed up about their marital relations. It all reminds you, somehow, of an Esquire cartoon—but one which is spread out into eight reels. Roz thinks that the first three months or so of married life should be spent platonically. Melvyn, naturally, is amazed, but agrees and then tries to make Roz change her mind. Well, he succeeds, along about reel four—but by this time, Mel has changed his mind, so that all her wiles are of no avail and she turns to the audience with one of the most amusing cracks of the film.

There are a goodly number of lightly hilarious scenes, and it is all beautifully paced, so that it keeps you interested and entertained all the way. Mel and Roz do most of the acting, but Binnie Barnes, Allyn Joslyn (this guy is climbing these days), Sig Arno and Lee J. Cobb all do well with their scripts. Directed by Alexander Hall.—Columbia.

★★★½ Chad Hanna



There is a charming reminiscent quality to this story which should endear it to its audience, but you can't help wishing that it had a bit more coherence. The character of Dorothy Lamour, for instance, is never really clarified. Nevertheless, the picture manages to hold your interest and keep you consistently excited about the escapades of Henry Fonda, who—as Chad Hanna, a country bumpkin—joins a traveling circus.

Henry falls in love with Dorothy Lamour, a bareback rider with few moral scruples, but he marries Linda Darnell, a country lass who joined the circus to get away from her sordid home. Both the romance and the circus run into trouble; but Dorothy saves the former and Chad saves the latter, so all's well.

Fonda, of course, is perfectly cast in the title role. He's the oldtime conception of a country boy to his very fingertips. Linda Darnell is beautiful and believable as the girl. Lamour will rather surprise you as the other girl; she's a competent actress here, not depending on looks alone. Unfortunately, as stated, the script is not clear (probably in deference to the censors) as to just what she is trying to do most of the way, but Dorothy lends the role so much piquancy that you are ready to throw your hat in the air and shout—and pray that she never gets mixed up with a sarong again.

There are a lot of other good performances in the smaller roles, notably those of Guy Kibbee and Jane Darwell. And the Technicolor is very good, especially in the re-creation of the red circus wagons and uniforms. Directed by Henry King.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

(Continued on page 18)

HAIR RADIATES NEW COLOR with One Shampoo

WHEN hair is radiant, dancing with youthful highlights and color, it reflects new overtones of beauty in your eyes, your complexion, your whole appearance. That's why your shampoo is so important.

So do as millions of women are doing, and try Halo Shampoo. Because Halo contains no soap, it therefore leaves no dulling film to hide the natural luster and color of your hair.

Once Halo removes these accumulations of dulling soap-curds from each tiny hair shaft, your head-dress fairly radiates with color and brilliance. What's more, with Halo you don't need a lemon or vinegar rinse.

See how Halo leaves your hair radiant, soft and easy to curl. How it gives eye-appeal to "mousey" hair. How it gently cleanses your scalp, and leaves it fragrantly clean.

And Halo, because of its new-type sudsing ingredient, makes oceans of lather in hardest water.

Buy Halo Shampoo in generous 10c or larger sizes. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau

HALO SHAMPOO

with this remarkable, new

HAND CREAM

Women are raving about this new beauty cream for hands. Contains the fragrance of costly perfumes. No stickiness—no greasy feeling—quick disappearing. Big value for your money—in 10¢, 25¢ and 50¢ jars, at toilet goods counters.

Campana HAND CREAM

It's a sixtieth wedding anniversary for the devoted couple in "Cheers for Miss Bishop." Minus the hair and specs, they're Bill Gargan and Martha Scott!

Are your fingernails the most beautiful?

Your exquisite fingers, flame-tipped with the lustrous beauty of Dura-Gloss—like tiny beacons, flashing a message to a masculine heart falling under your spell! Let Dura-Gloss, the durable, easy-onflow, longer-lasting nail polish created for the most beautiful fingernails in the world, bring flashing beauty to your fingertips! Exult in their longer-lasting gem-hard lustre—and compare this superlative polish, Dura-Gloss, to polishes costing five, ten times as much! Buy Dura-Gloss—Buy Dura-Gloss today!

The Better Nail Polish by LORR 10¢

DURA-GLOSS

THE DIFFERENCE between NAIL POLISHES

(1) Some nail polishes "fray" off at the edge of nail within one day. Dura-Gloss doesn't.

(2) Some nail polishes dry so fast that you can't apply them properly. Dura-Gloss goes on evenly and smoothly.

(3) Some nail polishes never dry underneath and are easily "dented." Dura-Gloss never "dents."

(4) Some nail polishes chip off so easily that you have "bald spots" on your nails. Dura-Gloss is true to its name—it lasts.

"TELL ME ANOTHER" AND WIN $5.00 says KLEENEX

We will pay $5.00 for every Kleenex "True Confession" published. Mail to Kleenex, 919 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

THE COLD RUSH IS ON

THE WHOLE FAMILY CAUGHT COLDS, AND THE TRAFFIC AROUND THE KLEENEX WAS TERRIFIC. NOW WE EACH HAVE OUR OWN BOX, AND THERE ISN'T A SORE RED NOSE BETWEEN US, THANKS TO SOFT KLEENEX TISSUES.

(from a letter by M. M., Bend, Ore.)

Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Tar

LOTS OF INSPECTIONS AT UNCLE SAM'S NAVAL ACADEMY ...BUT THANKS TO KLEENEX, SHOES AND VISORS ARE EASY TO POLISH.

(from a letter by Midshipman H. E., Annapolis, Md.)

THE NIPPER WAS A DRIPPER...

SMART MOTHER FEEDING BABY DAUGHTER, GOES ABOUT IT LIKE MOTHERS OUGHTER, TUCKS KLEENEX UNDER BABY'S CHIN, BABY SMILES AND DIGS RIGHT IN.

(from a letter by M. S., Silver Spring, Md.)

Don't put a Cold in your Pocket... use Kleenex

KLEENEX* DISPOSABLE TISSUES (*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

★★★ Let's Make Music

Here is a neat little surprise package, an unpretentious picture with good fun, hot rhythm and neat entertainment. Bob Crosby, Bing's kid brother, makes his movie début here and welcome. He's a good-looking kid, sounds exactly like his older and more experienced brother and has an astonishingly large number of the same mannerisms as Bing.

The really swell story revolves around the antics of Malvina Adams, a small-town schoolteacher who writes a novelty song on the side. It is picked up by Crosby and becomes a smash hit. Malvina thinks this makes her a famous song-writer and is, of course, heart-broken when the novelty wears off and she can't repeat.

It is a good, true story base, wound around a neat love story with some novel twists and some very funny situations, and it all ends well, of course, for both the schoolmarm and the lovers.

Aside from young Crosby's début, the picture introduces Joseph Buloff in a comedy assignment. He's a new RKO discovery who has tremendous talent and should go very far in films. Elizabeth Risdon as Malvina Adams does an absolutely top-notch job which should move her quite a way up in the acting ranks. Jean Rogers is pretty and desirable as the girl friend. Bob Crosby's orchestra and the Bobcats, a Crosby band quartette, are swell.

If there is any fault to be found with the film it is that the direction is a bit too slowly-paced. Directed by Leslie Goodwins.—RKO-Radio.

★★★ Hudson's Bay

There is nothing in the world that can slow up a film as much as too much dialect—unless it is Paul Muni's propensity for long speeches. And here we have a picture burdened with both.

And so it is our painful duty to report at this point that "Hudson's Bay," an adventure yarn dealing with early Canada, has a lot of beautiful background and a good deal of exciting story content—but loses itself because of its lack of action and its terrific overdose of gab.

Before you run away too hastily, let it be mentioned that there are at least two important performances here, both from brand new young actors. There is a gent named Lair Cregar, who will certainly go places in a big way; he's a giant of a man, a character actor, and he can troupe like nobody's business. And there is a lad named John Sutton who seems to have all that it takes to make femme hearts flutter.

Well, to get back to "Hudson's Bay," it tells the history of the early days up north. Paul Muni, a Canadian trapper, discovers the place, which abounds in furs. He wants to lead the trappers there but only on condition that they deal honestly and fairly with the Indians. The French don't see any sense in this, but Paul convinces the British, and so the Hudson's Bay Company, consisting of Englishmen under a grant from Charles II, is born.

There is sufficient basic merit in the story to warrant filming, but the emphasis was thrown on talking rather than acting and that is distinctly unfortunate. Muni is a lovable rogue in the leading role, but one gets tired of those long speeches. Vincent Price turns in a swell job as King Charles, and as for Gene Tierney and Virginia Field, they don't get much to do. Directed by Irving Pichel.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

★★★ Four Mothers

This series goes on and on—and why shouldn't it? Except that the producers will have to be a bit more imaginative if they want to keep it running. The current sample is a bit too manufactured; it's so full of clichés that everyone in the audience knows exactly what the next sequence will be. As it happens, it's done so well that it doesn't matter too much; it's still fun.

The story complications, this time, comes from the fact that Frank McHugh has become rich in Florida real estate and Claude Rains has induced the entire community to buy land down there. Yes, you know the rest. There's a typhoon, the money is lost for everyone, and all the Lemps have to go to work to save the pieces.

All four girls (including the one whose name is not Lane but Page) are exactly as you think they will be throughout. The same is true of their men folks (Jeffrey Lynn, Eddie Albert, Frank McHugh and Dick Foran) and the old folks (Claude Rains and May Robson) as well.

Oh, but there are some swell babies to look at—they are really new, and really fun.

Next in the series will be "Four Fathers"—and that will be better—no doubt about it. Directed by William Keighley.—Warner Bros.

★★★ The Son of Monte Cristo

This is a picture full of action, color and imagination. Alex Dumas, the inventor of Monte Cristo, isn't mentioned anywhere in the screen credits but should have been; it's his type of imaginative tale-telling. Alex would have been very pleased with this yarn.

Louis Hayward is in the title role, a swashbuckling, quick-on-the-draw gent who is Europe's richest man, best swordsman, champ villain-hater and top lady-killer—all in one. The lady is Joan Bennett and the villain is George Sanders, who has never been better.

(Continued on page 87)

Mary Martin

She's a fugitive from raven locks and musical roles that are sheer froth! Watch out for a gorgeous blonde who's plenty dramatic in Paramount's pulse-quickening story of life in a great metropolis—"New York Town"

NED SCOTT

"Ziegfeld Girl" brings you a

beware the eyes of March

Lana Turner's as Irish as the corner cop in M-G-M's musical extravaganza, and she's never been

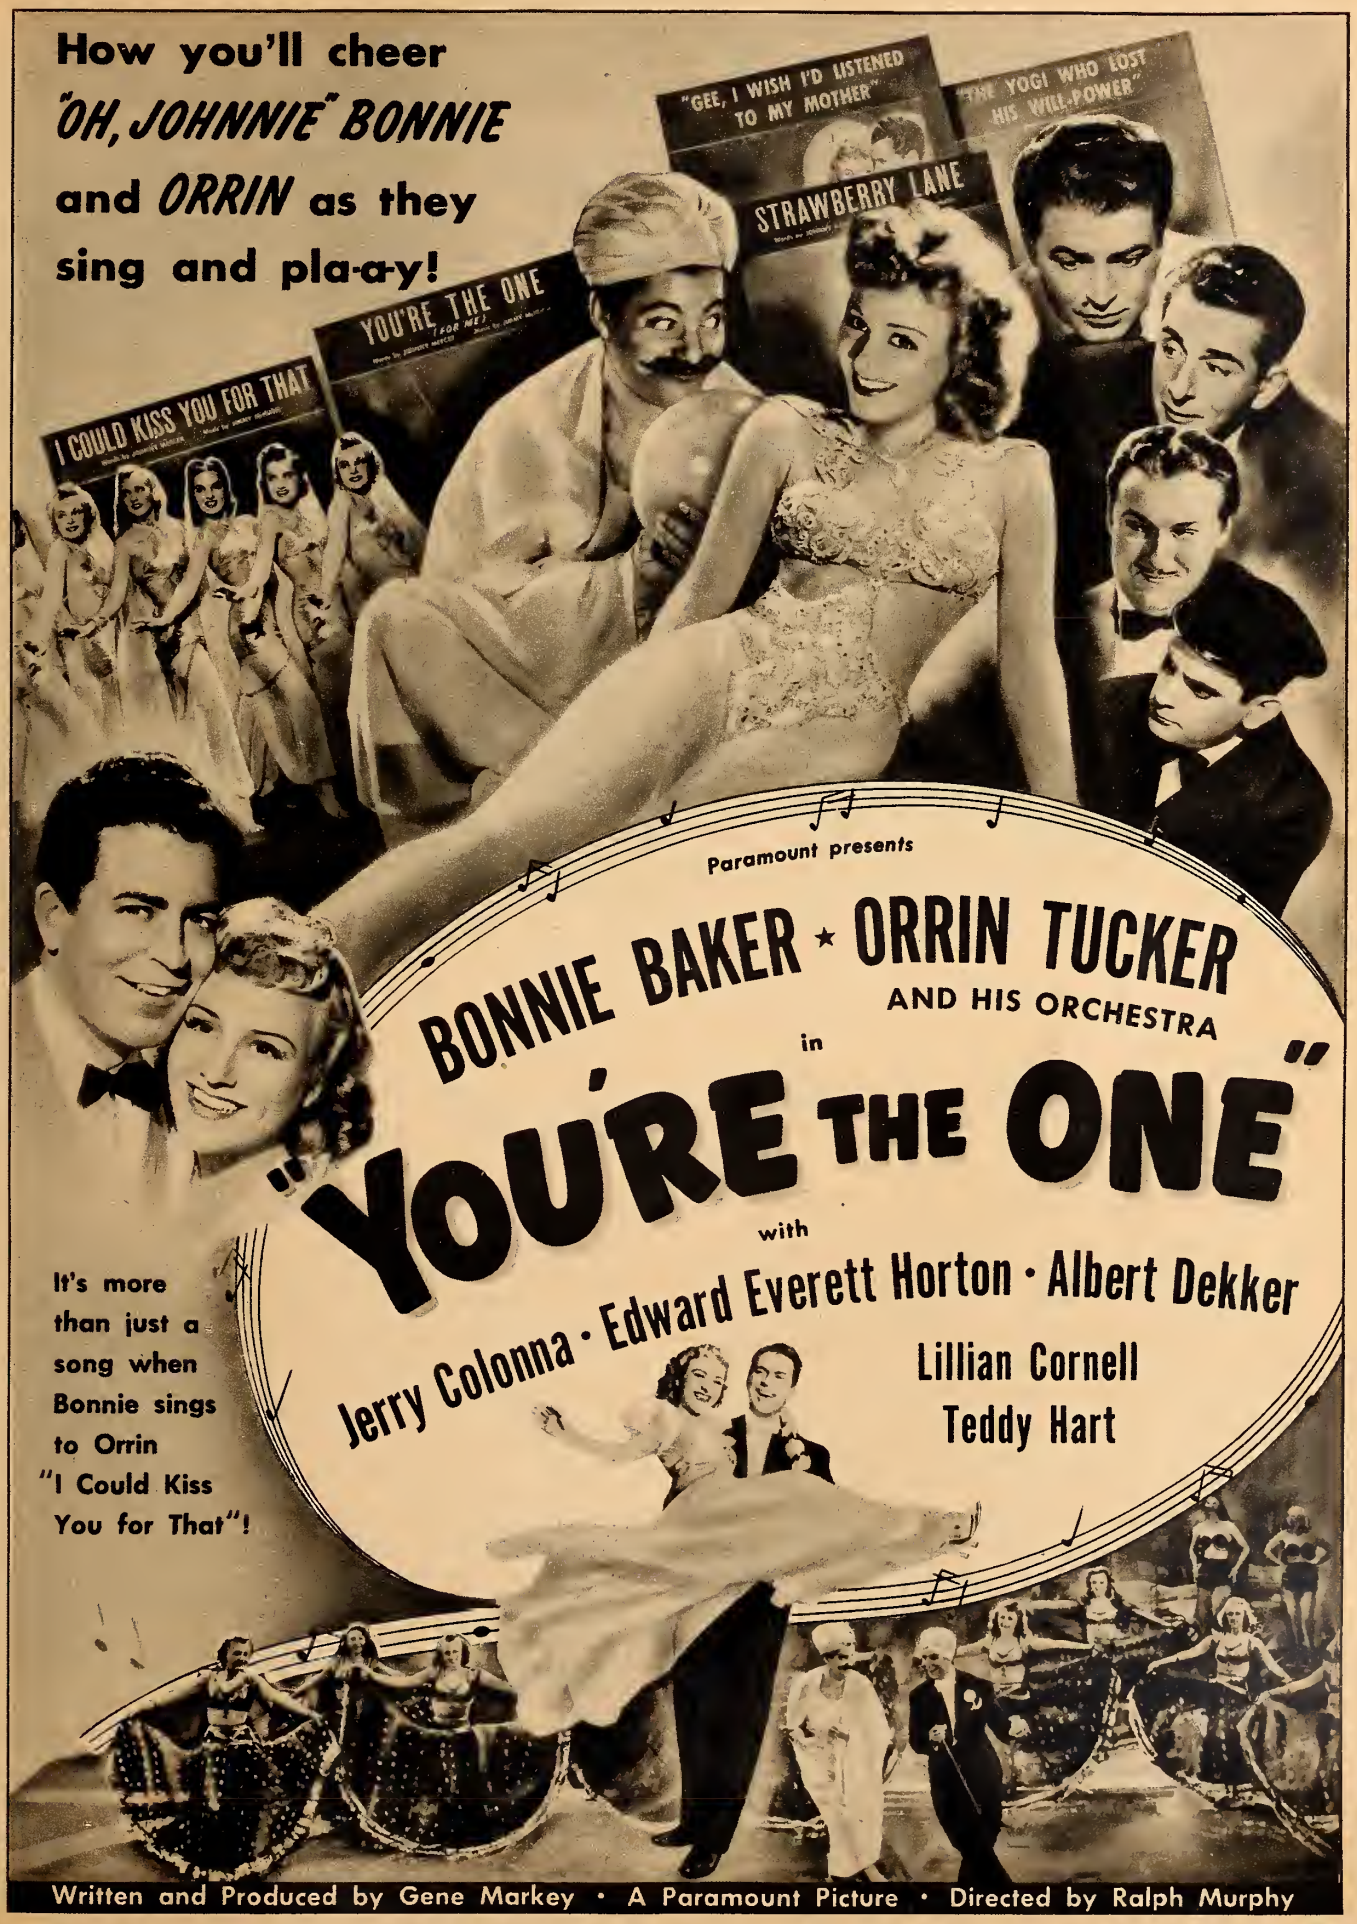
Fredric March

refugee in Loew-Lewin's swiftly paced "So Ends Our Night"

ore appealing Lana

ed's irresistible as the adventurous

more lovable



WILLINGER

Rosemary Lane

Imagine neglecting a wife like piquant, cuter-than-ever Rosemary Lane! Eddie Albert's the anniversary-ignoring hubby in Warner's heart-warming, homespun comedy, "Four Mothers" — fourth and swellest of the series

How you'll cheer
"OH, JOHNNIE" BONNIE and ORRIN as they sing and pla-a-y!
"GEE, I WISH I'D LISTENED TO MY MOTHER"
STRAWBERRY LANE
"THE YOGI WHO LOST HIS WILL-POWER"
YOU'RE THE ONE
I COULD KISS YOU FOR THAT
Paramount presents
BONNIE BAKER ★ ORRIN TUCKER AND HIS ORCHESTRA
in
"YOU'RE THE ONE"
with
Jerry Colonna · Edward Everett Horton · Albert Dekker
Lillian Cornell
Teddy Hart
It's more than just a song when Bonnie sings to Orrin "I Could Kiss You for That"!
Written and Produced by Gene Markey • A Paramount Picture • Directed by Ralph Murphy

How they Proposed

Attention, girls! Are you in your middle teens? Do you flop on your bed, stern up, chin in palms and spin visions of the fairy prince—who somehow looks like your favorite movie star—and what he'll say to you when he comes along? Are you married or engaged? Did he stammer when he popped the question? And even while you melted in his arms, did you quash a disloyal pang, wishing he could have put a dash of Gable or a touch of Olivier into the business?

If you did, forget it. The love scenes you watch are written for them, but on their own, they're different. Here's a representative cross section of glamour boys and gals—how they proposed and were proposed to. Read it, you youngsters, and don't expect too much from Mr. Right. And you others, you may find that your own Jim has outclassed a movie hero, who can be as jittery and desperately offhand as any man in love. As for Gloria Gorgeous, though she's been kissed by Melvyn Douglas and socked by Cary Grant and remained unmoved, she'll yield as hungrily as you to a commonplace "Will you marry me?" from the right lips.

* * *

Mary Martin was dining at Dick Halliday's house one Saturday night. They'd been a steady twosome, but Mary was starting "Rhythm on the River" the following Monday, which seemed to depress Dick.

"After tomorrow," he growled, "I'll have to fight for a glimpse of you."

"Well, it won't be easy—with me working all day and dead tired at night."

Pause. "Suppose we got engaged."

Chuckling inside, Mary kept her pan dead. "How would that help? Besides, I don't like engagements."

Somewhere between those lines he read hope. "We couldn't get married tonight, could we?"

"No-o, I guess we couldn't."

That brought him to his feet. "What do you mean we couldn't? I guess we could if you would. Will you?"

They flew to Yuma that night.

* * *

By Ida Zeitlin

Ronnie Reagan is an athlete. Jane Wyman isn't. They met on the set of "Brother Rat." Their first date was on the golf course, their second on the tennis court, their third at the beach, where Jane wore a fetching one-piecer and never set toe to water. Then came the football, followed by the baseball season. Next he took her ice-skating and picked her up without a murmur every time she flopped. At last came the moment when Jane knew, as women do, that her fish was hooked. She suggested they go out and rhumba. On the way home they stopped at the Tropics for a nightcap. Ronnie had always dreamed of proposing to his girl by moonlight. But he couldn't wait. He grabbed for her hand across the table, all but upsetting a drink into her lap. "What are you doing for the next fifty years?" he demanded.

Jane was demure. "Well—I did have a date—but I'll try to get out of it."

By the time this sees print, they'll be three.

* * *

Henry Fonda went on a Thames boating party while he was making "Wings of the Morning" in London. Frances Brokaw was there, too. From then on, she couldn't lose him. The picture finished, he followed her to Budapest, to Munich, to Paris. They were sitting in the Bois de Boulogne one day, nothing on their minds—so the lady thought—but idle chatter. Hank broke off in the midst of a sentence. "Will you marry me right away?" he asked. One look at his face, and she realized that the transition wasn't as abrupt as it seemed. She couldn't stand the suspense in his eyes. "Not here," she said. "At home."

In Maine her mother had been seeing a Fonda film for the first time. She thought it a little odd that a cable should arrive from her daughter that very night, saying she planned to marry the man. "Are you sure?" mother cabled back. The reply was peremptory. "Of course I'm sure. Announce our engagement."

A month later the (Continued on page 80)

"I'd Make An Awful Husband"

SURE, JEFF SNORES, SPURNS NECK-TIES AND FLATLY REFUSES TO SHAVE —BUT THE FUTURE MRS. LYNN WILL STILL BE GETTING A BARGAIN

Mr. Jeffrey Lynn, of Auburn, Massachusetts, has been in Hollywood for three years.

During two and a half of these three years, the mild-mannered Mr. Lynn has been about as radical as rock-bound New England, as unpredictable as the Plymouth Rock and as scandalous as the Pilgrim Fathers.

When people in the film colony wanted a definition for the words "conservative" or "respectable," they didn't go to their Webster's Dictionary, they merely stared at Mr. Lynn. He was an unshakable Puritan in a land of satyrs, this ex-schoolteacher, this good-natured son of the traditional East.

Wild parties might come and go. Mr. Lynn did not attend them. Glamour gals might give young men the come-hither. Mr. Lynn did not go thither. Actors might threaten to dynamite studios for better roles. Mr. Lynn remained silent.

In fact, all of Hollywood might be a vast lunatic asylum—but though he dwelled in it, Mr. Lynn never became an inmate.

That is, not until very recently. Then something happened to him. Something akin to playing handball with a package of TNT. He was stricken with a sudden amnesia that made him forget his conservative nature and his respectable background. Something happened to Mr. Lynn—and how! At first it seemed he had sold out to the boogie-woogies, or anyway, joined those extroverts on the side of professional daffiness.

The word swept Movieland. Mr. Jeffrey Lynn was seen out with Dana Dale the other night. Jeffrey Lynn was planning to move from his cozy apartment to a sprawling mansion. Jeff Lynn was fighting with his studio for better parts and was now on suspension. Lynn was dancing the wildest Conga ever seen west of the Rockies. Jeff had gone Hollywood! It was as if the Plymouth Rock had taken up swing music!

After a very enlightening session with him, I feel safe to announce that, in all honesty, Jeffrey Lynn has not suddenly gone Hollywood at all—but simply become used to Hollywood.

Take yourself, for example. You may be shy in the presence of strangers. But, after you become better acquainted, then you yourself change and lose your frigidity. Thus with Jeffrey Lynn. Hollywood was the stranger Mr. Lynn met. A wild, crazy, upside-down village, which frightened Mr. Lynn into his New England shell of conservatism. However, with each succeeding year, Mr. Lynn became better acquainted with this stranger. Until, recently, he emerged from his shell, and began acting as normal as he used to when he was a student at Bates College in Maine or when he played stock at the famous Barter Theatre in Virginia.

Today, you see Jeffrey Lynn as he really is and it's pretty plain that the last months haven't changed him so much. Only loosened him up. He is still quieter, humbler, more reserved than those about him. But—not because he is conservative or grimly respectable, but because he's just naturally serious.

The best insight into Jeffrey Lynn is his attitude toward matrimony. Mention marriage to him and he still jumps like one who has inadvertently sat on a cactus plant. Is his anti-marriage phobia a result of thoughtful conservatism? No, not a bit. It's just that Mr. Lynn feels that women and children don't always come first.

"Marriage would jar me out of my career line," was the way Lynn put it. "Besides, for the present, I have too many other responsibilities."

So, if any of you have been planning to hand him the old routine—moon eyes, fluttering lashes, parted lips—that's fair warning. Because, believe me, even though Jeffrey Lynn is twenty-eight years old, tall, handsome and unshackled, he gets a minor case of apoplexy when he observes his name on those yearly "Most Eligible Bachelor in Hollywood" lists.

"Furthermore," he admitted to me at a recent luncheon, whilst drowning his sorrows in a crisp salad bowl, "I would be a poor catch for any girl. The ladies have the wrong slant on me. Maybe because of the roles I play on the screen, where I'm always the kind of son that mothers would like their daughters to marry. Actually, I'm sure I'd make an awful husband."

Mr. Lynn mercilessly revealed the gruesome details about himself.

"I snore," he said, with diabolical delight. "Yes sir, tell 'em I snore when I sleep on my back. And I'm picky about food. The sight of celery makes me ill. And I have a breakfast allergy. Can't stand eggs, milk or orange juice. And I go unshaven for days.

"But that's only the beginning. I'm untidy. Toss socks and shoes all over the floor around my bed until, at the end of the week, I have to wade to sleep. I'm a poor listener. When someone is talking to me, I take mental journeys elsewhere. I hate neckties. I weigh minor problems too carefully. I never answer letters from the East. I find lengthy and involved psychological excuses for all my shortcomings and mistakes. My face is too sober on and off-screen, and I never know what to do with my hands."

Having finished with his elocution lesson, Jeffrey Lynn fell back, a trifle exhausted—but evidently well pleased. On his face was the satisfied and familiar grin of the cat in the throes of digesting the canary.

I wondered, aloud, why, if all his shortcomings were so evident, well, why in the heck Dana Dale, the blonde beauty whom Paramount has recently re-christened Margaret Hayes, even bothered with him. He shrugged, then smiled.

"Have you ever heard how I met Dana? Well, it was just recently, when I was loosening up. After Bette Davis finished work on 'All This, and Heaven Too,' she threw a big shindig. I went to the party, still wearing the sideburns I'd worn in the picture, and after a few cocktails, I felt pretty gay. I was attracted to a new girl who had come with Bob Taplinger, our publicity head. (Continued on page 92)

2 YEARS WITH A PSYCHIATRIST...

Virginia Gilmore's doctors explained away a million strange fears—but her tragic, almost mystical romance has baffled them all!

By Gladys Hall

"I think I used to be afraid of everything in the world except one thing. And that was acting. I had an awful fear of people. Not of strangers, so much, because I could always act for them, but of people who tried to know me, come close to me. Even worse was the fact that I always fell in love with someone who didn't care for me. When someone did care, I couldn't respond.

"Because of these and other phobias, I went first to a psychiatrist in San Francisco, and later to a practical psychologist here in Hollywood."

It was young Virginia Gilmore speaking. She looks very normal, I thought; clear brown eyes, clean-cut features, with her manner and voice suggesting a younger Margaret Sullavan. I had been warned she might run away when I questioned her. She didn't. I had been told that she was "complex" and "different." She is. Obviously.

I said, "You seem pretty well oriented to life. Certainly well adjusted to Hollywood. Efficient. Successful."

"I am," she explained, "in my work. I have no inferiority complex whatsoever about that. When I first came to Hollywood, there were two or three parts I said I knew I could play. This probably sounded presumptuous, since I had never made a picture, and my interviewer wasn't easily convinced. 'You must be a hell of an actress,' he snapped, and I came right back with, 'I am a hell of an actress.' I have no fear of my work because I know my job. I feel I can take any role and, on a day's notice, turn in a really good performance.

"But I'm confident only about my acting. As a person, I have no substance. I am a thousand people. I'm one person with you—what you want me to be. And I'm someone else with the next person. I once met a man who attracted me very much. The night I met him I was pretending to be a sweet, little girl. He said that was why he liked me, so every night for three weeks I went on being sweet until I nearly went mad. I was afraid to change and I just couldn't go on pretending, so I ran away.

"I have one major phobia in particular—a dread of having my personal privacy invaded. In all my life I've had only two intimate friends—the twin sons of the poet, Robinson Jeffers.

"Today I live alone in a miniature house here in Hollywood. It's so small that even the woman who cleans for me must leave before I come home, for the place couldn't hold us both. It has only one bedroom; a defense, you see, against any remote possibility of my having guests. I dance only the schottische and polka, because they were the dances the Jeffers boys knew. I have one dinner dress to my name. I know hardly anybody. I rarely go anywhere.

"Primarily it was with the hope of losing my lisp and my fear of people that I went to the psychiatrist in San Francisco.

"In order to offer me some immediate relief he gave me a few definite formulas to apply to my everyday life. One of my worst phobias was the belief that nobody liked me. Whenever I had to go to a party or anywhere among people, I was literally in agony. The doctor advised me always to manage it so that all the people in my particular group would go into a room well ahead of me. I was then to walk in and say to myself, 'I like everybody in this room'—and mean it. As I didn't really dislike anyone, this was comparatively simple, and when I tried it, I was astonished to find that a sort of aura surrounded me, something palpably warm and reaching. People did gather around me and conversation became easy.

"Another suggestion he made was that, whenever I was rendered speechless by that dreadful fear of invasion, I was to say to myself, 'I will not think of aeroplanes, I will not think of aeroplanes,' or 'I will not think of horses.' The idea being that whenever you tell yourself not to think of something, you immediately, of course, think of that very thing, to the exclusion of everything else. Consequently, one of two things happens: either you begin to chatter volubly about aeroplanes or horses, or you are thinking so much (Continued on page 75)

"WHY I'VE FALLEN IN LOVE ONLY ONCE"

By James Reid

Fred MacMurray does a double-recoil when he hears the question. "You want to know why I've fallen in love only once?" he asks, and pauses for confirmation. "That's what I thought you said," he mumbles—and reaches for a glass of water, the strongest potion in sight. He takes a swallow, sets the glass down, puts on his most disarming grin, raises his eyebrows in mock bewilderment, and asks, "But why pick on me?"

That's easy to explain.

He is a member of the male sex. He lives in Hollywood, where the opposite sex is unusually attractive. He is tall, dark and handsome. He is a romantic actor by profession. And the average romantic actor isn't famous as a one-woman man. There seems to be something about the work—constantly turning on emotion, constantly making imaginary love to very real beauties, constantly getting dream-heated fan mail from women—that can unnerve a man and give him wandering eyes and wandering ways.

Yet, in spite of it all, Fred has managed to stay in love with just one girl—Lillian Lamont MacMurray.

Fred shifts uncomfortably in his chair.

"Well," he says, with a flicker of a smile, "I guess one good reason is that I'm sure she's in love with me. She fell in love with me when I was playing a saxophone in a band."

In other words, he's luckier than a lot of actors. He fell in love before he was a success. So, unlike some of the boys, he doesn't have to wander around, looking skeptically for a girl who could be happy with him, and with whom he could be happy—if he weren't a movie star.

The way Fred talks, when a man has been lucky enough to find a girl like that, he can't help appreciating her for keeps.

But there are other actors who apparently don't feel that way. They too, fell in love in their struggling days—only they, after being given a whirl by Hollywood and getting a taste of popularity, have regretted it. How does he explain his strange immunity from Hollywood-success-itis?

"I was here once before," he says wryly. "I was here for a year and a half, doing extra work and sign painting and any other job I could lay my hands on. I was strictly outside the whirl. I had a good chance to see how it operated. Popularity was always in direct ratio to success—and success was a matter of luck. It could be mighty short-lived. I saw young fellows who were 'finds' one week and forgotten men the next. So when I came back and they called me a 'find,' I wasn't swept off my big feet." He grins cheerfully.

Fred, giving press-agents all the credit for the attention he was suddenly attracting, was immune from any notion that he, personally, had suddenly become terrific. Or that Glamour Girls had suddenly become susceptible to his charms. Besides, he was already in love.

If he hadn't fallen in love with Lillian, he probably wouldn't have been in Hollywood at all.

He can't explain how the phenomenon happened.

This is interesting, and a revelation of the inner MacMurray because, from the way Hollywood stresses sex appeal, you might think anyone in Hollywood could explain love as a simple matter of biology. Fred seems to think of love as a baffling matter of chemistry—when one combination of elements fuses with another; something that doesn't happen unless those particular combinations of elements are thrown together.

Fred and Lillian happened to be thrown together because he was a big, gangling hulk who played a hot saxophone and did an occasional vocal with a dance band called the California Collegians, and she was one of the taller, prettier John Powers models. The Broadway musical comedy, "Roberta," needed a dance band whose members could pass for college boys— (Continued on page 77)

Married 5 years, the MacMurroys are perpetual honeymooners.

Fred hates to dance, but Lillie occasionally heckles him into it!

FRED MacMURRAY, WHO'S MADE CELLULOID LOVE TO MORE BEAUTIES THAN ANY OTHER MAN IN HOLLYWOOD, EXPLAINS THAT ONE TRACK MIND OF HIS!

He never used to go to any of his own movies. Enjoyed seeing "Virginia" though. Forgot he was in it.

Mrs. Gary Cooper's Mrs. Mac's only rival. Fred thinks she's swell.

How TO HANDLE WOLVES WITH

By Dorothy Spensley

Lucille Ball used to have more than her share of wolf-trouble before she used the flabbergasting technique that sends 'em running in a friendly way.

"The young wolves are twice as fast as the older ones," says Ann Miller, and she should know. A girl doesn't cavort in the Scandals and migrate to Hollywood without picking up knowledge about the predatory boys.

Her hazel eyes twinkle as she says, "I've had the biggest wolves in New York come to my back door and howl. And I've found them easier to handle than the sly boys you don't suspect."

To the undergrads and the old form boys and girls we'll explain that present-day wolves are what were known yesteryear as rakes, roués or predatory males. They may sound like menace, but half the time their howl is worse than their bite.

It would be silly to pretend that the wolves prowl only in Hollywood and the glades of Gotham, for they don't. There are just as many roving males with like impulses in Middletown as there are in Manhattan.

As for the impulses, no one can condemn them, for half the time the Big Bad Wolves are nothing more than little boys looking for affection, which can oftentimes be double-harnessed into a state of matrimony.

On the other hand, when a girl sees no hint of the potential husband lurking in a wolfish heart, it's time for her to bring out the kid gloves and handle with care!

If a girl turns the chill shoulder and loses a date, she very possibly misses a chance to meet The One. So, if she wants to keep up her dating average, stepping out with the best of the belles, she has to keep up stag-line interest.

"Wolves—" says Annie Sheridan with one of her big infectious laughs. "I'm not afraid of them. They're old friends. When I was trying to get a start in Hollywood, the wolf lived at my door, nuzzling the latch, sniffing the doorsill. I used to shoo him away with a shotgun before I was able to leave the house and make the rounds of the casting offices.

"Now when I meet him or his brother at parties, I greet him like an old friend . . . as a wise-cracking pal of mine would say 'fang to fang.' No, I'm not afraid of wolves."

This may be a grand attitude for Annie with her abundance of oomph, her zestful attitude, but not all of the girls have Annie's fearlessness. Consequently Annie Sheridan's one gal who isn't afraid of that big bad wolf! She's much too well-acquainted and, besides, she's got George Brent for sock-appeal!

After years of trial-and-error experimenting, Maureen O'Hara found there's nothing that sends leers fleeing faster than her own Irish sense of humor!

KID GLOVES . . .

TAKE A LESSON FROM HOLLYWOOD'S SOPHISTICATES AND STOP BEING A FOOTBALL FOR THOSE OFF-GRIDIRON FORWARD PASSES they must rely on diplomacy and feminine maneuvering for defense measures!

For instance, the "Have You Read Any Good Books Lately?" formula is good, and Doris Davenport says that if you can get a man who has subversive thoughts on his mind to talk about his favorite political candidate or why Willkie didn't win, you're cruising in safe waters.

Margaret Lindsay uses the "Mysterious Man in the East" technique to skate over thin situations. It runs something like this: Margaret meets a man at a friend's home, and all evening he showers her with attentions. Rather than hurt him, she manages to insert gentle, but obvious references to a "boy in the East" into her conversation.

When the new acquaintance asks if he can take her to Perino's for dinner, it's an easy exit for her to say that she's sorry but Jim, the boy from the East, will be in town for a month and her time will be taken up. This is pretty final treatment, so be sure that you really don't like the gentleman before you use it.

Another, but brutal defense measure is one told us by Eda Edson, the dramatic coach, who heard about it from one of her screen deb pupils.

"I know how to handle those too bright boys, now, Miss Edson," the young lady confessed. "One phoned me the other night, and I didn't like the way he talked. I had to be nice to him because he was a friend of a good New York friend, so I accepted his invitation to dinner, and we went to Chasen's, at my suggestion. I ate from the right-hand side of the menu to the left, ordering all the expensive dishes. He wasn't at all the kind of man that I like to know, and he will never ask me to dinner again. The check came to twenty-five dollars!"

As long as we are in the Cold Cuts department, there is the splendid Irish, red-headed rebuff offered by Maureen O'Hara to a pick-up on a train. She was sitting watching the blunt foothills of the Pacific slope slide by when she felt someone staring at her. In a moment she heard a man's voice, silky and purring:

"Ah, we have something in common, Miss O'Hara," the stranger said, sliding into the vacant seat beside Maureen.

"Yes?" parried Maureen, with a faint smile.

"I have Irish ancestors, too."

"Yes?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. My family name is Fitzmaurice," he beamed.

"Really?" said Maureen, taking her time. "And do you know what Fitzmaurice means?"

"Well, now, no, I don't, Miss O'Hara," he answered.

"Then I'll tell you . . . 'Fitz' means illegitimate in Ireland," the RKO lass said, turning to give him a straight, unsmiling look. The would-be wolf sheepishly slunk away.

"Gosh," said Maureen, telling the story later. "I hope no one ever tells him that my real name is Fitzsimons!"

This technique may do very well for the casual contact, but it's a different story when it comes to the gay bounder one meets on the social rounds. The problem there is to keep up a spirit of camaraderie without allowing him any undue advantage. It would be a wonderful world if all men could be met and managed the way Olivia de Havilland does it.

There is a kind of metaphysical twist to the way Livvy looks upon the whole situation. She never thinks of them as wolves, and therefore they cease to become predatory. She never looks for insults, and she never (Continued on page 71)

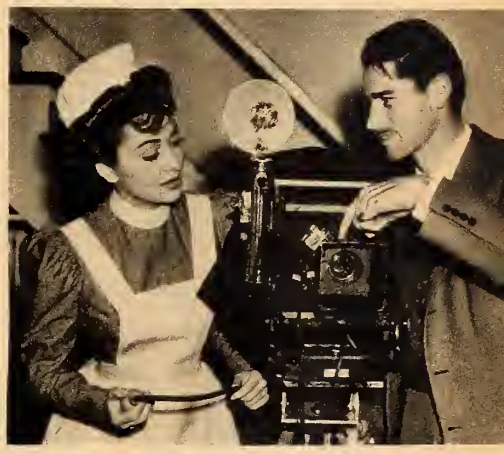
Ida Lupino maintains that even married women aren't safe from the advances of these parlor snakes-in-the-grass.

Carole Landis is downright old-fashioned with her "Home by the Fireside with Mother and Pup" line of resistance!

HERE'S A WIDE-EYED, QUESTION-POPPING LASSIE WHO'S SO BUSY BEING FASCINATED THAT SHE DOESN'T REALIZE HOW TERRIFICALLY FASCINATING SHE'S MAKING HERSELF!

Olivia makes an Investment

BY SYLVIA KAHN



Smart women, from the age of ten on up, have one thing in common. They all burn to be "interesting." Some achieve their ambition by nibbling briefly at books, music and the arts, and then spouting high-sounding names in the abashed faces of less accomplished folk. Others use the more direct method of pasting dime-store lashes on their eyes, fluttering scarlet claws and emitting throaty laughter. Both systems work. But only temporarily. Polls taken in high schools, colleges and conscription camps reveal that a victim assaulted in either fashion grows weary of such shenanigans, turns his back on his charmer and goes home to play solitaire.

Olivia de Havilland plays neither of these games. That's why she's the pet of every masculine "best bet" in Hollywood. While her cinema sisters (and those in the outer world, too) crack their craniums to become "interesting," Olivia follows her natural bent and concentrates on being "interested." At the studio, at home, at parties or night clubs, she's a walking interrogation point.

It would be a lowdown trick to ask Olivia to classify her enthusiasms according to the old "first-second-third" formula. She couldn't do it. Her mind pokes its nose into too many things at once—enjoys with almost equal relish huge-voiced Marian Anderson or a brain-busting crossword puzzle, the brilliance of a Noel Coward play or the career problems of Burgess Meredith and Franchot Tone. Her particular thrill is the music of Jascha Heifetz, yet she's mad about shopping binges. She confesses that all Ernest Hemingway's vigorous novels leave her beating with excitement; still she likes nothing better than dining and chatting peacefully by candlelight. She finds time to paint a bit, to design her own costume jewelry and run her own home.

Her mental acquisitiveness sends her to lectures and art exhibits. Her daring (plus a prodding from Margaret Sullavan) sends her to the airfield for flying lessons. She's made her first solo flight and may buy a plane. She spends hours on the phone with Joan Fontaine and Brian Aherne, to whom she is enormously devoted. And when she's not on one of her three-times-a-week night club sprees, she's visiting Geraldine Fitzgerald and her husband.

To Olivia's social calendar, as proof of her durability, still cling Tone, Meredith and, rumors notwithstanding, Jimmy Stewart. This discriminating triumvirate was recently joined by Connoisseur Gene Markey. When a girl receives that kind of dividend on her interest—well, she must have the right idea.

Above—Still photographer, Scotty Welbourne, says it's impossible to make a poor shot of Olivia.

Below—She's terribly friendly and loves listening to her hairdresser's accounts of her big dates.

Below—Cagney always snacks in costume, but Olivia changes to one of her peasant-style jumpers.

HE EARNED HIS LETTER

By Jeanne Karr

JIMMY STEPHENSON "WARMED THE BENCH" SEASON AFTER SEASON, BUT WHEN THEY LET HIM GET IN THERE AND FIGHT—HOW HE SHOWED 'EM!

Director Willie Wyler was completely bewildered.

While casting "The Letter," which he was to direct for Warner's, Fred Brisson, the agent, had urged him to take a look at "White Banners." "See if there isn't a guy in that movie who's made to order for this lawyer chap."

For once, a director agreed with an agent. Wyler went to the front office. "Who's this fellow that played the boy's father in 'White Banners?'"

"James Stephenson. Why?"

"Well, I think he'd be good for Howard Joyce."

"Oh, no, you don't want Jimmy. Let's get a name for you."

In Wyler, opposition builds up resistance. But his arguments made no dent on the big shots. Then he got hold of Brisson. "What is this?" he bellowed. "I want a guy on the lot, and they won't let me have him."

This was the result of one of those perverse situations that develops at studios. For want of roles, a potentially valuable property deteriorates. It happened to Deanna Durbin at Metro. It happened to Dennis Morgan at Paramount. Stephenson had been with Warner's for three years. He'd made an impression in "White Banners," bringing to the part an atmosphere of charm and distinction. The studio had had every intention of pushing him, but the right roles didn't turn up. So they gave him bits, and as time marched on, there grew—of itself, like Topsy—a persuasion that Stephenson had been born to play bit parts. Option time was around the corner. The front office showed no enthusiasm about picking his up.

Which suited Mr. Stephenson, who had also reached the point of feeling that the most profitable exchange between him and Warner's lay in the word goodby. It was a feeling whose luxury he hadn't till then been able to afford. And anyway, he'd nourished lingering hopes. There was the time when he'd been cast for a leading part in "Dawn Patrol." He'd been given his wardrobe and his script. They were within a day or two of shooting. He smiled at his wife and she dared to smile back. "This is the beginning," they said. "We're off at last."

It was just another false beginning. The front office broke it to him kindly. They needed a second name in addition to Flynn's, on which to sell the picture. They'd decided to repeat the Robin Hood combination—Rathbone and Flynn. Stephenson saw their point, but it made him none the happier.

Meantime, he'd been saving his money. Now he was ready to ask for his release and try free-lancing. He and the studio would have been in accord on option day. It was Willie Wyler who threw a wrench into the works.

He put up a dogged fight for Stephenson, who had heard that he was being considered for the role and spent the better part of his days assuring himself that it wouldn't happen. In this he was nobly abetted by Lorna, his wife, on the theory that hopes which weren't allowed to soar couldn't be dashed. "You won't get it, Jimmy. Make up your mind to that. You'll never get it."

One day the casting office phoned him that he was set, and that he was to report to Wardrobe for his clothes. Lorna made a last stand. "I still don't believe it," she insisted, eyes shining.

"Neither do I," he grinned, "but maybe I'd better put in an appearance."

We were among those who couldn't understand his eclipse after "White Banners," and in new pictures looked for his face with its suggestion of quiet strength and kindliness. Meeting him, that suggestion is confirmed. He's a well-poised Britisher, self-described as "an oyster and the despair of publicity men." That's an exaggeration. His Anglo-Saxon reserve is tempered by an individual warmth. On the lot they call him Jimmy, which startles you at first as unsuited to a certain austerity in his features. You soon discover, though, that there's none in his manner. Lines of humor radiate from his eyes, and his smile is something to watch for. As a woman, we offer his bosses a free tip. Let him smile now and then on the screen. If his fan mail doesn't multiply, we'll eat it.

He entered "The Letter" happy and confident. He felt he could play the part standing on his head. "By the end of the first week, I'd been convinced that I was the worst damn actor in the world. I dreaded leaving home for the studio in the morning. I envied every man I met on the road who didn't have Willie Wyler to face that day."

Wyler's a perfectionist who's never made a poor picture. He gets what he wants by using words like a knife with which to carve egos. Everyone who's known him on the set tells the same story. Every player who's worked with him will—if not gladly, then bravely—undergo crucifixion again for the sake of his direction. He found excellent carving stuff in Stephenson, whose ego is less tough than the average actor's, to begin with.

Stephenson had been (Continued on page 73)

...e calls Jim o "gorgeous, gorgeous mon."

He's tops in this one—"Flight From Destiny!"

He got a huge kick out of his Philo Vance roles.

Scored a hit in "A Dispatch from Reuter's."

His home's like himself—gay and original.

Constantly cast in serious parts, Stephenson hankers after a slapstick, Bill Powell-ish role. Doesn't consider himself good-looking and, unlike most Britishers, the thirty-seven-year-old James is no fashion plate off the screen!

FUGITIVE FROM

After hours, Johnny (her dad's nickname) wears little make-up, looks 15.

By Kirtley Baskette

It looked like a dirty joke. Here was this Gene Tierney I'd heard all about, the darling of Hollywood's most eligible beaux, the bewitching new starlet of Twentieth Century-Fox, the pet of Broadway's blasé critics, the Blue Book baby graduate of the Ritz stag line.

Here she was looking like something the cat dragged in!

A grimy smear streaked her square little face. Stringy, absolutely filthy hanks of mousy hair drooped lankly around one of the dirtiest necks I've ever seen on a nice girl. She wore a dismal calico dress which looked as if it had been fried in grease, then rolled in a dustpan, and two very nice legs twined in muddy abandon beneath the table.

"Am I a mess, or not?" grinned Gene.

"You certainly are," I said.

"Good!" chuckled Gene. Her green eyes sparked and her Hepburn-high cheeks cracked with a white smile. It made me forget the dirt momentarily. Then Gene, who had been dipping daintily into her eggs Benedict, dropped her fork and clutched wildly at her dusty scalp. "Please pardon me," apologized Miss Tierney, "but it itches!"

It took a little concentration, at that point, to picture this half-witted, hare-lipped, slatternly Ellie May of "Tobacco Road" as the erstwhile lovely young débutante of Connecticut's exclusive country set.

But not too many months ago Gene Tierney was making her society début in wealthy Fairfield, Connecticut. The right boys from the Eastern families and the approved schools, Yale, Harvard and Princeton, whirled her around under Japanese lanterns while the correct society orchestra played and correct mothers and fathers beamed approvingly. In bubbling vintage champagne they toasted her bow to the tight little Four Hundred of her class.

Gene had just been properly "finished" at Miss Porter's in Farmington. Before that there had been Brillmont in Switzerland and exclusive academies, here and abroad. These between two grand tours of the Continent. And seasons in Paris and on the Riviera.

Gene was only seventeen, but already she had glamour. She was cut to the débutante stamp and was set for a Society campaign, eventually to marry some socially secure, financially eligible and, needless to say, properly approved young gentleman.

But there was a little omen—even at that very far-removed-from-Hollywood début party. Budding Gene wore a dress copied after the frock Bette Davis wore in "Jezebel." What was more ominous for Society, Gene had met Bette the year before and already a few ideas were buzzing around in her brain—and they weren't about the Junior League or The Bachelors' Cotillion, either!

"They mess me up like this every morning," Gene Tierney was rattling happily between bites. "First, they spray me with oil. Then they stand off and just heave dirt at me. If that doesn't work, they roll me on the ground! Every night I scrub in the basin, soak in my tub and polish off with a shower—and I'm still black! It gets in the pores and sticks. And my hair! John Ford says if I wash it while the picture's shooting he'll kill me. Dates? Oh sure, but they just have to take me (Continued on page 60)

THE FOUR HUNDRED

Con't resist mosquerades. Below, with Bob Dorrin, she's on 1890 chorine.

MEET GENE TIERNEY, THE LOVABLE RENEGADE WHO RAN AWAY FROM DOTING PARENTS, GORGEOUS CLOTHES AND PROSPEROUS SWAINS—BECAUSE SHE'D MUCH RATHER WORK FOR A LIVING!

ALIAS

Long curls, English accent, a 17th century gown—and the very Yankee Gene becomes the thoroughly British Lady Barbara, Jahn Sutton's fearless and beautiful fiancée in "Hudson's Bay."

The mud and calico disguise is practically perfect, but this is still Gene! The role of Ellie May, man-menacing hussy of "Tobacco Road," is the meatiest one of her whole career.

The South American Way

by Betty Harris

"Hollywood is Paradise! It is like the places you read about in books!" But let Carmen Miranda tell it herself—and with an accent!

"Hollywood, it has treated me so nicely, I am ready to faint!

"The first day I work on my picture, 'The Road to Rio,' I kiss Mr. Irving Cummings, my director, all day because he is so kind. He helps me with my lines. He pretend' to be Miranda so I can see how Miranda should make the faces. I kiss Mr. Don Ameche, too, even when I do not have to kiss him for the love scene, because he, too, is so kind. That is the Sous' American way!

"The extras, they all show me the little ways around. Even the porter who opens the sound stage door for me—he is Irish, his name is Mr. Sweeney—he learn to say 'Bon Dia,' which is 'Good Day' in Portuguese. He learn it to make me feel at home.

"Who is it say Hollywood is a cruel town, a hard town, cold like a jewel? It is kind, it is warm, it takes in a stranger with a heart as big as the country it is a part of.

"In Hollywood, I present myself to the world for the first time. Of course, I have been on the air and in the theatre, but then I present myself only to the few. In Hollywood, it is to all the whole world.

"It is like the places you read about in the fairy books, this Hollywood. But it is better than the fairy books, because it make the fairy things come true.

"In Hollywood, there are the beeg, strong, beautiful men!" Miranda gestured with her jewel-laden arms and hands; flashed the barbaric, dark jewels of her eyes; said, laughing, "really, ummmmm, beeg!

"Would I marry the Nors' American man, you ask, the Hollywood man? Si, yes, I might marry one of them after two, three years. When I am more sure I understand their ways. But now, I would be too afraid. I am too jealous. I have notice' the Hollywood men are very free to talk to every woman. 'Hullo, darling,' 'Hullo, sweetheart,' they say. I know, with my mind, they do not mean this more than kind and friendly. It is the Nors' American way. But it is not the Sous' American way. In Sous' America, if a man is trying to flirt with another girl and call her sweetheart names, he gets kicked under the table. He will have a beeg fight on his hands when he gets home!

"I was almost engaged once," laughed Miranda. "But I was so jealous I could keel heem. That was the reason we broke in two!

"In Hollywood, I have notice' how little there is of the jealousy. A man take' a girl out one evening, the next evening, another girl, and then another, and all are friends. People who have been married to each other and then are married to other people, they are all friends, too. I think this is what you call very civilize'. I think that this is showing Hollywood's heart, too, that does not hold any hate for anybody.

"When Sous' America looks at Hollywood, it should look first at how friendly Hollywood is to everybody. There is no jealousy here.

"I come here a new entertainer, a stranger, and they all come to see me work, not just one time, but again and again. They make friendly with me!

"When I am in New York, at the Club Versailles, at the Waldorf-Astoria, on the stage in 'The Streets of Paris,' Miss Alice Faye comes to see me and we become friends. Mr. Mickey Rooney comes to see me and Miss Sonja Henie. In Chicago, where I am with the Chez Paree, Miss Ilona Massey and Miss Binnie Barnes come to see me, with Miss Louella Parsons, too. When I come to Hollywood they try to help me all the time.

"I speak these words from my heart. I am to be believed. If I feel like speaking the bad words about anything, you bet I speak them, too.

"I never thought to see so many beautiful girls as I see in Hollywood. In the stores where I shop, in the places where I eat . . . everywhere such beautiful girls as men have not before dreamed of!

"A Sous' American man would open his eyes in Hollywood, and he would say, 'Dios, I have die' and gone to Paradise!' Men from anywhere would say this. When the Sous' American men read these words I say," laughed Miranda, "they will all come here.

"Since I was so high," she said, "always I buy the load of movie magazines. In Brazil, in Rio, my home, I spend the fortune on the Modern Screen alone. They cost $1.50 the copy in Brazil, the American movie magazines. But I buy them all the time. If they cost $1.50 the word I buy them, I read every word of them.

"As soon as I see Hollywood, I love it. It looks very much like Rio. I thought to find it a little village in the hills, and I find it a marvelous big city.

"As soon as I see Alice Faye and Don Ameche and Linda Darnell and the others, I love them, too. They, too, are more handsome and beautiful than I thought. Inside their hearts as well as outside. For all the words the papers and magazines print about the stars of Hollywood, they do not boast. They do not make the exaggerations.

"I like very much Tyrone Power, Robert Taylor, Clark Gable, Charles Boyer, Mickey Rooney . . ." and Miranda giggled, suddenly, a child's gleeful giggle. "Yes, I love that Senor Mickey Rooney, because he is so funny. I have never missed a picture of his yet. He make Sous' America happy and laughing when they see him. And then, when I see him in the real, when I look at him here in Hollywood, he is just like on the screen. He is all alive down to his finger tips!

"I like very much Donald Duck, too, oh, very much . . . quack-quack—quack-quack-quack—! I adore Alice Faye, too. And I am not saying this to be nice because I work with her. I adore her when we meet in New York before I ever think such a thing could happen to me as I would be making a picture with Miss Alice Faye and Mr. Don Ameche, who are idols in Brazil and in the Argentine.

"I adore Miss Bette Davis, (Continued on page 90)

GOOD NEWS by Sylvia Kahn

Idol Talk

The most touching case of hero worship in the history of Hollywood is currently unfolding before the tear-filled eyes of its citizens. Errol Flynn, man of might and muscle, has developed a schoolboy crush on John Barrymore, paragon of all virtues, and the effect on both is beautiful to behold. Errol, who formerly dominated every party he joined, now sits spellbound at the feet of his new-found idol and thirstily absorbs the drops of wisdom that drool from the Barrymore lips. He's completely entranced by John's tales of his marital and theatrical adventures and has actually whittled his conversation down to one long song of praise for the Profile. John, for his part, is similarly affected. He feels Errol's a reasonably satisfactory facsimile of the Barrymore that was and loves him like a son. The only person not warmed by this tender friendship is Lili Damita Flynn. She's heard of the four "ex"-Mrs. Barrymores —and she'd rather Errol whipped up a case on Don Ameche.

Composer Gene; Inventor Jeanette

Pin your orbs to the musical best seller lists. Gene Raymond's composition, "Let Me Always Sing," will probably pop up on dozens of 'em. Wife Jeanette MacDonald plugged the song on her recent concert tour and, with a voice like hers behind it, a tune's got to ride into high. Incidentally, Jeanette's tour proved to all doubters that she's still the undisputed queen of the concert ways. Her reception by the press and public was terrific and she reports only one bad moment in all the weeks she was out.

That was the morning a newspaper man nabbed her for an interview in her suite at a Boston hotel. Jeanette was busily convincing the scribe that clothes were absolutely unimportant in her life when a corps of porters strode through the doorway and noisily deposited 11 trunks and 7 pieces of hand luggage in her bedroom! Yessir, they sure are creative, those MacRaymonds!

Medicine Man

Eddie Albert, Warner's flesh-and-blood Peter Pan, is an old-time patron of the sciences. Though he's shy about admitting it, for years Eddie has been supporting the research of an ancient Mexican who's seeking an herb cure for mumps! Eddie gives his protegé 50 cents a week to continue this great work ". . . because it keeps him busy—and looks funny on my tax returns."

"Alley" Finale

Alice Faye and Betty Grable are taking bows all over the place for the success of "Tin Pan Alley." That's all right. So are Jack Oakie and Darryl Zanuck. That's all right, too. But why, we wonder, has no one raised a voice in praise of the man who's really responsible for the whole picture? He's Tom Little, head prop man at Twentieth Century-Fox—and here's the story of why he should be in there lapping up the gravy with the rest: Six or eight months ago, Tom took a vacation trip through the Midwest. While touring, he hit upon some bargains in 1914-1918 furniture. Unable to resist, he bought the furniture and ordered it shipped to the studio. A few days after he returned to work, the furniture arrived —and so did the bills—totaling hundreds and hundreds of dollars! In due time, these were brought to the attention of Mr. Zanuck. Zanuck nearly hit the ceiling. Unless something were done about these ridiculous purchases, he threatened, Mr. Little might find himself looking for another job. Little was frightened. He couldn't return the furniture so, in desperation, he turned to his friends the studio writers—and begged their help. He had to have a story for his furniture! The writers were powerless. They didn't dare intervene for him, but they did the next best thing. Every time they had a story conference, they gathered around Mr. Zanuck and, with elaborate casualness, whistled melodies of the 1914-1918 period! Gradually Zanuck caught on, began whistling them himself, and finally demanded a story that would fit the music and the times! "Tin Pan Alley," a solid smash, was the outcome but Mr. Little, sitting at home, brooding about his narrow escape, thinks maybe he'll take his next vacation in his own back yard!

Ah!

Let no woman wonder what Hedy Lamarr and Joan Bennett saw in freckle-browed Gene Markey. That man actually has more talent for pleasing women than any tankload of glamour boys you can name! Who can top this act of gallantry, for example? The other evening, at the Brown Derby, Olivia de Havilland rummaged through her purse for a lipstick. None turned up. And what did Mr. Markey do? Nothing—except summon a messenger, hand him a ten spot, and dispatch him to the nearest drugstore for a new lipstick plus a bottle of Olivia's favorite perfume!

Short Shots

Dennis Morgan and Edward Norris are the new proprietors of a 2600-acre dude ranch in southeastern Oregon . . . 'Tis said Norma Shearer doles out $25,000 yearly to a public relations counsel . . . Dolores Del Rio follows Orson Welles into the Hollywood hills every Sunday afternoon. Orson paints the scenery, Dolores holds the brushes . . . Hot from the Adrian griddle comes word that next season's skirts will be shorter and tighter—the effect of the war abroad . . . Gin-rummy continues to fascinate the movie populace. Three studio bigwigs lost $10,000 apiece in a single sitting the other evening . . . Paulette Goddard ain't sayin' where she got it, but she's exhibiting a new clip in the shape of a golden monkey with a large diamond at the end of his tail . . . Due to bad flying weather, Dean Jagger was three days late for his own wedding . . . Dean and his wife are still making up for that lost time. There's a clause in the Jagger contract which states his wife may accompany him on all location trips—at the studio's expense . . . Judy Garland is superstitious about a pair of wool-lined zipper-fronted mules given her by Lana Turner. She believes

Paulette Goddard

Jeanette MacDonald

Jackie Cooper

if she doesn't wear them at radio broadcasts and on the lot, she'll turn in bad performances . . . Betty Brooks, Ingrid Bergman's stand-in and Oliver Hardy's sister-in-law, swears her real name is Betty Jean Jan June Jones!

Cagney Forgets a Line

Women with absent-minded husbands will shed a sympathetic tear for poor Mrs. Billie Cagney. You know—Jimmy's wife. Mrs. Cagney was busy with some late shopping the other evening and sent her husband over to his mother's for dinner. About soup-course time, she phoned him to confirm the color of a gift she was ordering. Unable to give her the information she wanted, Jimmy asked her to hang on while he queried the senior Mrs. C. "I hung on," Mrs. Cagney reports, "for a full half hour! Then I realized Jimmy had gone back to his precious soup and forgotten all about me! When I got to the house an hour later, Jimmy was reading a book, the receiver was still off its hook, and my mother-in-law didn't even know I had called!"

Charles Chaplin

Brenda Joyce

Ray Milland

Mr. Milland's Mystery

The oo-ers and ah-ers who gasp with delight at the sight of Ray Milland will be amazed to learn that Ray growls with disgust at the sight of himself. That is, if he happens to glance in a mirror when he's nude from the waist up. Though few people know it, Ray's shirt conceals the real sorrow of his life—the tattooed figure of an Oriental snake charmer! Ray acquired her one fantastic evening when, as a kid in London, he went out with the boys, had a bit too much, and wound up paying an ill-advised visit to a tattoo artist. Being an orderly, conservative individual, he's never quite grown accustomed to the beety little lady who will stick to his arm until eternity. He'd like to have her removed but can't because he'd risk serious infection if she were tampered with. As a result, he seldom exposes his torso to the camera, refuses to appear on a public bathing beach and won't even bare his biceps in his own garden for fear an enterprising candid camera bug will catch his lady in the middle of a wiggle! Poor Ray. You can take it from us—he's the one person in Hollywood who doesn't have to be told to keep his shirt on!

Fate Writes the Script

"Topper Returns," the new Joan Blondell starrer, is broad comedy but the other morning one of its sets was the scene of a great unspoken drama. Veteran actor H. B. Warner was called upon by the script to crash his car into a tree, die, and then, as a visible ghost, stagger to a log and sit there in a daze. Warner went through his scene without a slip-up. When it was all over, he approached Director Roy Del Ruth, complained of a headache, and asked to be excused for the day. A few inquiries revealed the cause of his distress. Twenty-six years earlier Warner had experienced a similar crash. Death had claimed one victim . . . his newly-wedded wife.

Homey Homily

Myrna Loy, a refugee from the memories in the Coldwater Canyon home she shared with Arthur Hornblow Jr., has moved into a small bungalow in the Hollywood Hills . . . Ball-shaped Alfred Hitchcock lives in the little white-shingled cottage that Carole Lombard called home before wedding that Gable fellow . . . If you want to see the inside of a real movie star's home, buy yourself a ticket to "No, No, Nanette." When Richard Carlson finished his role in the picture, he had two of the rooms in his new house designed exactly like two in the picture . . . The 12-foot rubber tree under which Bette Davis met her death in "The Letter" is now flourishing in Bette's back yard.

President's Precedence

Ronald Colman is still telling this one. Several years ago, a magazine editor approached him and asked permission to have one of his staff writers do a story on "The Life of Ronald Colman." Ronnie, then at the peak of his career, replied that he would enjoy cooperating with the magazine, but added: "If my life story is to be written, I want it written by someone more prominent than a member of your staff. I'll be happy to give you what you want—provided you get me Rupert Hughes." The editor was horrified. Rupert Hughes, one of America's foremost novelists, was paid at the rate of $1 a word. A story on Colman would necessarily run to 10,000 words. The magazine had never done anything so extravagant. But Ronald Colman was a great star, so off to Mr. Hughes trudged the unhappy editor. To his surprise, the noted writer did not leap at his offer. Instead, he sat back in his chair, enveloped in the deepest thought. At long last came his answer: "I should like to do a story on Mr. Colman but I must turn you down. I am now at work on 'The Life of George Washington.' That's a little more important, don't you think?" Mr. Colman's been a Hughes fan ever since!

Some Like It Hot

Whenever Dotty Lamour gets herself into really hot water, Harry Long's the one man she can thank. Harry, head plumber at Paramount, is in charge of the huge tank on the lot that serves the studio as ocean, river or stream, as the occasion demands. It's his job to see that the "icy seas" into which Dotty's sarong-studded career plunges her are kept at a constant, blistering temperature, because Dotty, unlike most stars who prefer a 75 degree dunking, won't put a toe in the tank unless the thermometer registers up in the 80's. Which reminds us—studio plumbers have more important jobs than anyone realizes. As one of them opined: "We even keep down production costs. For example, extras must be paid time-and-a-half if they know they're stepping into water that's under the required 75 degrees. We've got a way to fool 'em. If we haven't time to heat the tank, we blow artificial steam over the water, put the thermometer through that, and then show it to the kids. Psychology's a funny thing. When they get in, they think it's warm, so it feels warm! But do you know who our favorite 'patients' are? Crocodiles. They're never finicky!"

Didja Know

That Greta Garbo has submitted to a permanent wave machine . . . That "Weedy," Linda Darnell's pet rooster, died while Linda was vacationing in Mexico City . . . That Michele Morgan, RKO's delightful French import, is discovering Hollywood with Anatole Litvak . . . That Cesar Romero's new contract lifts his weekly earnings from $1250 to $2000 . . . That Louis Hayward has a new mustache . . . That Laird Cregar, down to 285 pounds, swears he'll cut his calories till he melts away to 245 . . . That Deanna Durbin's next film will co-star her with Charles Boyer . . . That Glenn Miller, latest band and baton man to answer the lure of Hollywood gold, will début in Sonja Henie's next . . . That M-G-M shelled out 10,000 smackeroos for the exclusive screen rights to "The Last Time I Saw Paris," to be yodeled by Tony Martin . . . That Fred Allen swears Jack Benny is so low, he's the only guy he knows who can read by the light of a hotfoot?

The Duchess of Windsor

Bing Crosby has invited the Duke of Windsor to visit him in Hollywood, but we think the Duke ought to stay home. If he comes he'll have to bring the Duchess—and if he brings the Duchess there's going to be trouble! Wally has a crush on Bing's voice and admits that if she ever buttonholes him, she'll make him warble to her from morning till night! This little note on "the woman I love" was brought to light when Wally and her mate traveled from England to the Bahamas, carrying with them a tremendous collection of Crosby records. According to a Windsor servant, the Duchess is an ardent platterbug and, shortly after her marriage, wrote to Bing with her own royal hands, begging him to send her all new recordings the minute they came from the presses. "Shucks. It doesn't mean a thing," says modest Bing. But if Wally and the Duke ever do trek Hollywood way—look out Dixie!

Bing Hits the Jackpot

To go from royalty to royalties—Crosby fans (and the Internal Revenue Department) will undoubtedly be cheered to hear that Bing just inked a fresh contract with Decca Records which promises him $60,000 per year for the next five years. This, of course, is in addition to his new Paramount contract which calls for nine pictures in three years—and which pays off at the rate of $175,000 per picture.

Conductor's Guest

Gaylord Hauser—sit up and take note! While you were on a lecture tour just a few weeks ago, one Leopold Stokowski turned up in town. He rented a little house, hired a little secretary and set about doing some serious work. But do you know who his daily guest was? Greta Garbo! Your Greta Garbo! She popped in early each morning, puttered about the house while her host was busy, and sometimes didn't leave for twelve or fourteen hours! And there you have it, Mr. Hauser. From fruit juice to fugues in one easy lesson, and may the best man win!

International Incident

When the British were forced to rain hell and fire on the French fleet at Oran, they also blasted to bits the marriage of John Loder and Micheline Cheirel. As Hollywood's first war casualties, Englishman John and his French-born wife walked into court shortly after the Franco-British clash and told an American judge that their political sympathies had ripped them apart. They confessed that since their countries had split, they'd developed "war jitters" which resulted in frequent quarrels over the situation. Friends still hope the marriage may be repaired and point to happily wed Charles Boyer and Pat Paterson, and about-to-be-wed Madeleine Carroll and Count Richard de la Rosier, as examples of Franco-British accord. At present, however, a Loder reconciliation appears impossible.

Oriental Fan-tasy

Del Goodman, 20th Century-Fox's Far Eastern representative who spent the last 18 years feeding American movies to Oriental appetites, discloses the following: Alice Faye can sardine-pack any film house in China because her feet are so small . . . Deanna Durbin is the idol of the Orient because her voice is clear as a bell . . . Robert Taylor and Tyrone Power are out of favor because they raised mustaches which all Orientals detest . . . Henry Fonda is worshipped by Nepalese warriors who gobbled up the knife-slinging sequences in a few of his pictures . . . The Cantonese think Sonja Henie's crazy. They've never heard of skating and can't understand her ice antics . . . Rosalind Russell is box office poison in China and Japan because her sophisticated comedy slides over all heads . . . And Jane Withers, because she portrays an independent, assertive, unafraid child, is absolute tops with the Igorotes, famed head-hunters of the Philippines!

As They Like It

Two Universal stars, Deanna Durbin and Broderick Crawford, trod this season's road to matrimony. But with what different steps! Deanna pecked along properly and with dignity. Her engagement to Vaughn Paul was announced according to all the dictates of her conscience and Emily Post. Her wedding on June 7th will doubtlessly be carried off in the same manner and all of her children are certain to be valedictorians. Brod, on the other hand, entered the sacred portals of husbandhood with a little less solemnity. He had as his best man sad-eyed Mischa Auer, fresh from a tussle in the divorce courts, then he tore off to a thrilling Honolulu honeymoon and returned to find that his parents had notified his friends of his wedding by wiring them as follows: "Mr. and Mrs. Lester Crawford wish to announce, with a sigh of relief, the marriage of their son, Broderick, to Miss Kay Griffith!"

Glamour—1857 Variety

Last year it was Hedy Lamarr who headed M-G-M's glamour parade. This year, Mrs. Adeline de Walt Reynolds cops the honor. Though slightly older than Hedy (83 to be exact), Mrs. Reynolds is every bit as peppy, zippy and exciting as her gorgeous predecessor. She's the amazing little creature who, widowed at the turn of the century, raised four children single-handed and, at 66, decided to go to college. At 70 she was graduated from the University of California and, at 82, was discovered by a Metro director who saw her acting with a little theatre group. Mrs. Reynolds thinks being the oldest starlet in Hollywood's history is swell fun. She loves interviews and her sharp wit and unbelievable memory delight every interviewer who asks her for a story. Only one thing troubles her. She gets mixed up on dates. "Please don't ask me about them," she begged us. "The last time I discussed dates, I made a dreadful mistake. According to the years I gave, every one of my four children was born out of wedlock!"

Mystery's End

Now that Charlie Chaplin has acknowledged Paulette Goddard as his lawful wedded wife, the mystery that's been popping about them seems pretty well cleared up. That is, except for one thing —why there should have been a need for any mystery in the first place! Well, from a source close to Paulette, we hear that the whole idea originated with Charlie. Seems he loved Paulette and wanted her for his wife, but was afraid scandalmongers would have a field day if they knew he had married again. His two earlier marriages had been dragged through the divorce courts and newspapers, and he was too sensitive to risk the buzzing and speculation that would naturally follow "Chaplin's third fling." Paulette, aware of the burden the arrangement would put on her, acceded to his wish and for 6 years bore the brunt of the whispers in silence and alone. Now that the story is out, there doesn't seem to have been much point to their secrecy. At this writing Paulette is said to be winking at Reno—and "Chaplin's third fling" appears slated for the same fate as his first and second.

Greta Garbo

Jane Withers

James Cagney

Bluebeard Westmore

Off to the side of the Warner Bros. Make-up Department stands a little room which no star may enter. Its door is always locked, and its key is buried deep in the pocket of Percy Westmore. It is the mystery room of the studio—the room George Brent, John Garfield and Dennis Morgan have begged to enter, yet which no man but Perc has ever seen. And no wonder! The walls of the little room are festooned with rubber busts, hips and legs made from the actual bodies of every feminine star who has worked for Warner Bros.! By studying them, Beauty Expert Perc helps their owners to correct figure faults. "But you'd be surprised," he confides, "how many studio people have an attitude toward my collection that is distinctly unprofessional!"

Escape

Jackie Cooper doesn't know it, but he's due to play a big part in the future of little Janie Withers. Jackie and Jane are going to co-star in "Her First Beau," and Jane has resolved to make an intimate friend of her dashing leading man. Bonita Granville hasn't anything to fear, however. Janie doesn't want Jackie's heart. What she wants is entrée to the "sophisticated" Ciro's set. If Jackie dates her, that'll be okay, too, but what she's really praying is that he'll take her under his wing and introduce her to some "older man" like himself. "Ice cream parties are all well and good," says Jane, "but a girl's got to make the break sometime!"

Home Talent

When Paramount officials planted "A Night in Lisbon" on their production list, they shot out a call for a technical director who could tip them off on the customs of the Portuguese city. None turned up. Authorities on Paris, London and the Argentine were under every tree —but Portugal!—who'd ever heard of that? The officials went into a huddle. They thought of transferring the story action to St. Louis or Salt Lake City. They even thought of Hollywood. And then one of them woke up. The most expert of experts was right under their noses! Madeleine Carroll, the star of the picture, had spent six weeks in Lisbon attempting to get her fiancé, Count Richard de la Rosier, on the Atlantic Clipper to America and knew the city from top to toe. Madeleine was thereupon added to the payroll as technical director and now, besides having the obvious pleasure of collecting two salaries, has the added fun of rushing home each day and relating her studio experiences to the Count whose rescue she finally effected.

Shine and Rain

When it comes to regal authority, the gal who can tuck the queens of Hollywood in the back seat is none other than our own Marlene Dietrich. Not only does the glamorous Marlene get anything she wants from her friends and studio, but she comands the elements as well! Here's how she does it. A short while back, her friend, Josef Von Sternberg migrated to the San Fernando Valley and built himself a snappy, little ultra-modern home. Deciding he worked best when it rained, he installed a special contraption that sends gallons of water down his roof at the touch of a button. Now when Marlene gets tired of the eternal California sunshine, she jumps in her car, tears out to Von Sternberg's house and enjoys anything from a slow drizzle to a galloping northeaster!

Early to Rise

Virginia Field recently won newspaper mention by entering a hospital, eating 45 calories a day and dropping 11 pounds in three days. Shortly thereafter, Judy Garland broke into print with the news that careful dieting combined with religious exercising had rid her of 13 pounds in a few weeks. Now comes Mary Beth Hughes with the most impressive diet story of all. Mary Beth, by her own admission, was once a little bundle of cuteness weighing 173 pounds. When she decided to become an actress, she dropped 60 pounds in three months! Even today she must keep a hawk-watch on her figure. If she stays in bed beyond 8 A.M. for a single week, 10 new pounds promptly fasten themselves to her. These are so undesirable that regardless of the time she retires, Mary Beth dutifully leaves her pillow at 6:30 A.M. . . . seven A.M.s a week!

To My Valentine

When Brenda Marshall opens her eyes on St. Valentine's morn, she'll find three full-blooming rose trees in the garden of her home—a "little something" from boy friend Bill Holden . . . George Brent will add a tiny ruby heart to Ann Sheridan's charm bracelet—a bracelet which is already hung with little gold dancing shoes presented to Annie by Cesar Romero . . . Marie Wilson will brighten Nick Grinde's Valentine's Day with firecrackers! . . . Eddie Albert's message of love will be addressed to Maria Ouspenskaya . . . Mrs. Fred MacMurray will find a blood-red garnet set in a clip beside her morning coffee . . . And Carole Lombard is threatening her man with a pair of heart-shaped cuff-links. Clark doesn't know what he'll do with them, but he's grateful Carole isn't planning to duplicate a Valentine's gift she gave him before their marriage. At that time, she bought an ancient Model T Ford, painted it a virginal white, added a half dozen huge red hearts and left it on his doorstep!

(Continued on page 70)

Escape from Matrimony . . .

They're all here—the streamlined twenty-four-hour marriages and the thirteen-year marathons, with an up-to-the-second report on the unshackled ones' eligibility!

NAME	FORMERLY MARRIED TO	LENGTH OF MARRIAGE	CHILDREN	HOW MARRIAGE ENDED	PRESENT STATUS
AUER, Mischa	Norma Tillman	• 9 years	• Anthony, 7; Zoe, 14 mos., adopted	• Divorce, 1940	• Parted friendly
AYRES, Lew	Lola Lane Ginger Rogers	• 2 yeors 6 years	• None None	• Divorce, 1934 Divorce, 1940	• Seeing the town with girl-about-town, Pat Dane
BARRYMORE, John	Katherine Harris Michael Strange Dolores Costello Elaine Barrie	• 7 years 9 years 12 years 4 years	• None Diana, 18 Dolores, 10; John, Jr., 8 None	• Divorce, 1917 Divorce Divorce, 1935 Divorce, 1940	• Anything can happen—and will
BARRYMORE, Lionel	Irene Fenwick	• 13 years	• None	• Died, 1936	• Books and music fill the void
BEERY, Wallace	Gloria Swanson Rita Gilman	• 2 years 15 years	• None Carole Ann, 9; Phyllis, 1; both adopted	• Divorce, 1918 Divorce, 1939	• Angling for Swanson reconciliation
BENNETT, Constance	Chester Moorehead Phil Plant Marquis Henri de la Faloise	• 2 years 5 years 9 years	• None Peter, 11, adopted None	• Divorce, 1923 Divorce, 1929 Divorce, 1940	• Black-eyed Gilbert Roland is back in the picture
BRENT, George	Girl in Irelond Ruth Chatterton Constance Worth	• 1 month 2 years Few months	• None None None	• Annulled, 1922 Divorce, 1934 Annulled, 1937	• An Ann Sheridan monopoly
BROWN, Tom	Natalie Draper	• 2 years	• None	• Divorce, 1939	• Ploying the field
BYINGTON, Spring	Roy Chandler	• No record	• Phyllis, 24; Lois, 22	• Divorce	• Wants to play "wife" roles in pictures only
BURKE, Billie	Florenz Ziegfeld	• 18 years	• Patricia, 24	• Died, 1932	• Living quietly
CABOT, Bruce	Adrienne Ames	• 4 years	• None	• Divorce, 1937	• Hot on the Liz Whitney trail
CARROLL, John	Steffi Duna	• 3 years	• Juliana, 3	• Divorce, 1939	• Playing "hard to get"
CARROLL, Madeleine	Capt. Philip Astley	• 8 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• Promised to a French Count
CRAWFORD, Joan	Doug Fairbanks, Jr. Franchot Tone	• 3 years 2 years	• None Christina, 1½, adopted	• Divorce, 1932 Divorce, 1940	• Eastern socialite is making her heart throb
CURTIS, Alan	Priscilla Lawson	• 3 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• Ilona Massey-minded
DICKSON, Gloria	Perc Westmore	• 2 years	• None	• Divorce, June, 1940	• Still pining
DREW, Ellen	Fred Wolloce	• 5 years	• David, 4	• Divorce, Oct., 1940	• Strictly a coreer gal
FARMER, Frances	Leif Erikson	• 4 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• Her heart belongs to Broadway
FAYE, Alice	Tony Martin	• 2½ years	• None	• Divorce, Mar., 1940	• Cynical
FRANCIS, Kay	Dwight Francis Wm. A. Gaston Kenneth McKenna	• 2 yeors 1 year 4 years	• None None None	• Divorce Divorce Divorce	• Intermission
GARSON, Greer	Edw. Abbott Snelson	• 7 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• Benny Thau's her steadiest beau
GILBERT, Helen	Mischa Bakeleinokoff	• 4 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• Football star Bill Marshall knows the score
GRABLE, Betty	Jackie Coogan	• 2 years	• None	• Divorce, 1939	• "What-a-man" Vic Mature keeps her happy
GRANT, Cary	Virginia Cherrill	• 1 year	• None	• Divorce, 1935	• Exclusively Barbara Hutton's
HARRIS, Phil	Marcia Ralston	• 12 yrs., 9 mos.	• One, adopted	• Divorce, 1940	• Very much the man-obout-town
HEPBURN, Katharine	Ludlow Smith	• 4 years	• None	• Divorce, 1934	• Garson Kanin knows what he wants

(Continued on page 88)

no

GIRL IS HOMELY

Hollywood's High Court of Glamour proves that you, too, can be a thing of beauty!

Now, before going a word further, sit down in front of your mirror and take a good look.

If what you see in the mirror is a facial carbon of Hedy Lamarr or Marlene Dietrich or Linda Darnell, then, sorry, we've got the wrong number. But if what you see in the mirror is a face that could, well, stand a little improvement, a little extra glamour, a little more ummm instead of ugh—in fact, if the face in the mirror makes you wince, oh ever so slightly—then come along with us, because this is going to be one of the happiest days of your life.

We have talked with Hollywood's high moguls of beauty and they all issue one unanimous edict, one verbal exclamation mark—that if you have an average face, medium face, fair-to-middlin' face or downright homely face—don't despair!

"Because," as the experts put it, "there isn't a normal woman on this earth who can't make herself attractive!"

And you don't need any of the highly-paid, highly-touted Hollywood experts to accomplish the change for you. They admit you don't need them. You can do this yourself—with your own competent two hands, a mirror, some good beauty products and good advice. You supply the first three items and Modern Screen will give you the last. Every month we'll cover some phase of beauty (this month it's hair) and give you the authoritative lowdown, handed down by the High Court of Glamour, on the case of the Average Girl.

But to get back to what those Platos of Prettiness have to say. "I've never seen what I'd consider a permanently homely face. If a girl isn't a natural ravishing beauty, she can make herself chic and smart and be just as attractive. Consider, for example, the French women. Their beauty is legendary, yet, as a race, French women have big noses. But, they have been clever. Instinctively, they've played up their hair to take attention from their noses. And there's a point. Really beautiful hair is a plain girl's best chance at good looks. A shining cap of ringlets or a sleek, glossy shoulder-length coiffure will make the world forget she's a bit on the chubby side or that her complexion isn't strictly peaches and cream. And, of course, if her features and skin are lovely, she'll want to do them justice with an extra-special halo of beautiful hair. Yessir, when you think of famous beauties—say Lillian Russell, Jean Harlow, any one of them—you think first of their hair. I can't stress its importance enough, especially to girls who wear glasses or have imperfect teeth or facial structure."

"Nowadays," Warner's make-up man, Perc Westmore, told us, "people judge everything quickly, harshly, by what they see at a glance. Put bars on my window, and passers-by would think it a jail. They wouldn't stop to read the sign, 'Beauty Department' on the door. This is true of wearing flashy hair-dos and of using excessive make-up. You may be a nice girl, a swell kid, intelligent, decent, refined—but people will consider you cheap and common.

"Snap judgments have, to build my point, vetoed such a thing as the spit-curl. You may look cute in a spit-curl but don't wear one. I wouldn't have an actress wear one. Because, subconsciously, people resent spit-curls since the word 'spit' is related to saliva, a distasteful association. In the same way, you'll notice we've never had an actress, in all movie history, with tight black curly hair, who became famous. That's because kinky hair is identified with negroes, and, unfortunately, the masses have their foolish prejudices.

"So the most elementary steps a girl can take in improving her appearance are to simplify every- (Continued on page 83)

Jane Wyman

CROWNED HEADS

Hair is a plain girl's ticket to glamour, and even in Hollywood where they trade in beauty, more than one career rests upon a glamorous head!

Hair is a Hollywood problem. Katharine Hepburn washes hers in eggs and does it up on cleansing tissues. Priscilla Lane uses a castor oil shampoo. Constance Moore rebels when the studio orders "permanent." Joan Bennett must have a new coiffure with each new role or she won't play.

Jeanette MacDonald keeps her scalp in condition by pouring salt into her hair and brushing it out vigorously. Carole Lombard mixes her own shampoo of castile soap flakes and cocoanut oil. Bette Davis rubs warm olive oil into her hair at night, wraps a towel around it and steams it as she bathes. Ann Sheridan uses three brushes of varying degrees of stiffness for stimulation. Joan Leslie has a talcum powder shampoo once a week. Rosalind Russell sprays the ends of her hair with brilliantine while it is still wet, before she has it waved. Her theory is that oil applied to set hair makes it dull and sticky in a day or two. Ida Lupino changes her part every time she has her hair washed. Betty Grable refuses a vinegar rinse as darkening to her blonde locks. And she won't have lemon for fear it might be drying.

Frances Langford said nothing more than "shampoo and wave" until she married Jon Hall. Now she has as much daring about hair styles as any actress in Hollywood. Her latest is a crown effect of braids, with her hair brushed up like angel wings from either side of her forehead.

Irene Dunne is a natural redhead. She's felt thwarted for years because she couldn't wear her favorite color—red. This year she took advantage of the craze for turbans and found the solution for keeping her hair out of sight. So now she has a bright red coat and dress!

Marlene Dietrich has expensive hair. It's soft and fine as a baby's, and it's cost the studio a pretty penny. Every time Marlene makes a picture, a special hairdress has to be designed costing as much as twelve hundred dollars. Her natural hairline is left intact, but the rest of her coiffure has to be built up with false pieces and extra curls.

Actresses with narrow foreheads often wear bangs to conceal the hairline. Joan Bennett has her hairline shaved to broaden her forehead. Claudette Colbert uses a fringe of curls. Garbo, who has a wide, prominent forehead, accentuates forehead and eyes by brushing the hair back from her temples. You will usually see Ida Lupino with a wave dipping down towards one eye. Although this is not a particularly up-to-date way of wearing the hair, it is, in her case, the most logical. Lupino's hair is very soft and unmanageable, and a severe hairline would be difficult to manage.

Annabella is stubborn about short hair. Husband Ty Power prefers it that way, she affirms. And she won't wear hats either, because she doesn't like them. A far cry from Binnie Barnes, who buys a new hat when she wants inspiration for a new hairdress.

When Dorothy Lamour had her much-publicized haircut her mother, Mrs. Castleberry, saved Dottie's discarded hair and had it made into a switch. Madeleine Carroll owns a switch, too. She braids it and wraps it around her head, halo-fashion, for a formal hairdress.

This spring and summer a lot of girls are going to turn strawberry blonde, that luscious shade of pinkish copper seen on Rita Hayworth, star of "Strawberry Blonde."

Current Hollywood hair styles are okay with the men. When Pat Morison goes to Ciro's, she wears her long hair coiled at the nape of her neck, a fashion much admired by escort Tim Durant. Gene Markey had eyes for no one but Olivia de Havilland the evening she first experimented with a pompadour. Dave Rose likes a bow in Judy Garland's hair.

Last year's casual swinging bob is no longer tops. Virginia Dale and Geraldine Fitzgerald are die-hards for the old régime, but they will weaken, too. The days of easy hairdresses are over in Hollywood. Hair may be a headache, but after all—whoever has found a short cut to glamour?

Most Perfect Hairline is credited to Connie Bennett with her striking blonde widow's peak. To draw attention to her hair, she sports a diamond rose in the center of her part, even with her most informal daytime suits!

OF HOLLYWOOD...

Longest Hair in Hollywood belongs to Patricia Morison, whose auburn tresses fall way down her back, measuring thirty-nine inches in length. She's one of her studio's most valuable actresses because hers is the only scalp on the lot with completely unshorn locks!

Most Beautiful Blonde goes to Madeleine Carroll. Shirley Temple was giving her keen competition until she restored her hair to its natural light brown color. It seems the gold in her curls was a case of pure and simple bleaching!

Most Beautiful Brunette in Hollywood is Hedy Lamarr, whose dark brown tresses were the first to make the blonde-dominated film colony brunette-conscious! Her prototype, Joan Bennett, followed a close second but failed to cop the prize chiefly because she wasn't a "natural."

Curliest Hair is Martha Scott's. It gets so kinky on rainy days that production has to be held up while the make-up department rushes around with brilliantine and lacquer to "straighten" it. Dolores Del Rio takes the honors on the opposite side of the fence with the straightest locks in all Hollywood.

COIFFURES · that compliment your type . . .

By Patricia Pearse, 20th Cent.-Fox

ROUND • LYNN BARI

Her next is "Sleepers West"

CASUAL

CAREER

HIGH DRESS

ROUND FACE. Even if you're the round-faced type with full cheeks and chubby chin, you can achieve that perfect oval effect! Here's a trio of hair-dos guaranteed to lengthen and narrow your face. CASUAL: Informal glamour. Part hair on side, since center part tends to broaden. Dress front hair into pin curls, then sweep side sections up off face into larger curls. Large, loose curls at nape of neck have a magically lengthening effect. CAREER: Neat and femininely efficient. To take away fullness at cheekbones, sweep sides up cleanly into rolls toward center. To disguise low forehead and to narrow the face, part in V-shape and bring entire top section forward into large V-shape roll over brow. HIGH DRESS: Sleek and smooth. Wave top hair and side sections back from the face into rolls to add height. Back section is dropped on neckline in soft curls and tied with a ribbon.

By Joan St. Oegger, Warner's

OVAL • BETTE DAVIS

Star of "Far Horizon"

CASUAL

CAREER

HIGH DRESS

OVAL FACE. The oval face is egg-shaped—wide at the cheek-line, and with the forehead slightly broader than the chin. If this is you, you have nothing to alter or hide. Your principal job is to play up that oval outline, for you have the perfect face type! CASUAL: Just for fun. Comb hair loosely behind the ears and brush curls out at nape of neck. Comb front roll over brow into a suggestion of bangs. CAREER: For a chic careerist. Frame head with reverse roll to accent oval contour. The front may be varied, but is here shown with a dashing pompadour. HIGH DRESS: Striking. Here's an elegant one that spotlights your oval face. Brush the front hair up into a half-dozen fat curls. Side sections aren't waved, but are turned under at the ends, while the back hair falls into a sleek page boy. For variation, the front and side curls may be combed into a soft halo effect.

By Joan St. Oegger, Warner's

SQUARE • PRISCILLA LANE

Featured in "Four Mothers"

CASUAL

CAREER

HIGH DRESS

SQUARE FACE. If, like cute Priscilla Lane, you have a straight hair line and a square jaw, your problem is to soften your angles into the perfect oval. Here's how. CASUAL: Easy-going smartness. Break squareness by side part and concentrate fullness on upper side of head. This is done by sweeping hair up behind ears into soft curls to minimize breadth of face. Back is combed out loosely to flatter jawline. CAREER: Tailored simplicity. Side part is usually best, but if the forehead is unusually high and broad, a center part seems to "break it in half." Brush hair up back of ears and push forward into fullness with combs. Let back hair fall in soft rolls. HIGH DRESS: Gaily sophisticated. Make two reverse curls at top of head—this offsets square chin by widening forehead. Then bring hair upward back of ears into reverse rolls and catch the back section in wide barette.

Whether yours is a chubby face or one with a few too many angles, there's a gay new hair-do—created by one of Hollywood's most talented hair-stylists—that's guaranteed to make it just right!

HEART • IDA LUPINO

You'll see her in "High Sierra"

CASUAL

CAREER

HIGH DRESS

By Joan St. Oegger, Warner's

HEART SHAPE. The heart-shaped face with its wide forehead and narrow jaw has a lovely pixie quality. Play it up, at the same time building out that slightly weak jawline. CASUAL: Carefree and gay. Height is achieved by waving front hair back from brow into a semi-reverse curl. Brush hair smoothly behind ears where it falls in with back section and creates fullness at nape of neck. CAREER: Simple and trim. Keeping sides perfectly flat, sweep hair upward into three reverse rolls on top of head. Back hair is combed into a neat upward roll that fills out jawline. HIGH DRESS: Sweet 'n' smooth. Heighten by two reverse rolls on top of head. One of these forms a partial bang on right side, which narrows a too-broad forehead and is a perfect camouflage for an irregular hairline. Necessary width at chinline is formed by loose curls at the nape of the neck.

LONG • DOROTHY LAMOUR

She's in "Road to Zanzibar"

CASUAL

CAREER

HIGH DRESS

By Loretta Francel, RKO

LONG FACE. The long face is a mere step from the perfect oval. It just needs a bit of shortening and widening and here are three easy ways to do it. CASUAL: Excellent for active sports. Broaden brow by brushing hair straight back from face into clusters of curls that are held in place by bows above the ears. Concentrate width at jawline by letting back hair fall into a loose page boy. CAREER: For office-to-date wear. To achieve width, part hair in middle. Brief bangs are shortening to forehead and entire face, and side curls add width. Let back hair fluff out to expand jawline. HIGH DRESS: Suave and chic. Draw hair off at sides in a horizontal line that broadens the face, and make a roll of curls across top of head extending from ear to ear. Back hair should be turned up in a loose roll or, for variety—you can page boy it or just comb it out into soft fluff.

DIAMOND • CAROLE LOMBARD

Now in "Mr. and Mrs. Smith"

CASUAL

CAREER

HIGH DRESS

By Lenore Sabine, Paramount

DIAMOND SHAPE. The diamond-shaped face (narrow forehead, broad jawline and narrow chin) is tailor-made for a woman of whims, for it can be piquant or exotic according to the way it's treated. CASUAL: A cinch to handle. Draw attention to forehead, yet conceal its narrowness with a soft bang over right eye. Side hair falling in deep waves around the face cuts the breadth of cheek and balances a narrow chin. CAREER: Flattering simplicity. A middle part and two soft waves falling over temples, give forehead appearance of width. In order to make temple line as flat as possible, side hair is drawn back of ears. To fill out chinline, back hair should fluff at the neck. HIGH DRESS: Sophistication! A wave at brow falls into little-girl ringlets, but there's drama in that smooth roll that encircles the head—and carries the eye up and down, instead of across the broad jawline.

LOOK TO YOUR LOCKS

If Your Hair Is . . .

STUBBORN . . . Don't let it have its way. Compromise! Part it where it seems to fall naturally, humor it by conforming to any natural wave it may have—but after that, take the whip hand. After shampooing it as per Dry Hair, rub every speck of moisture out of it with a warm towel. Then take an immaculate sturdy-bristled brush, and give it some good, firm strokes till your scalp feels pink and glowy and your arm is practically yelling uncle. Set it nightly with a heavy lotion, using just enough to dampen it, and always wear a net to bed. Now, here's a must! Let Pierre or Mike give it a monthly thinning and shaping—but never let him wheedle you into a singeing, for there's nothing more ruinous.

FALLING . . . Anchor it by strengthening the wee muscles at each hair base. Exercise 'em with daily massage and brush frequently but gently. Don't uproot hair that just needs a treatment or two to make it a pretty permanent fixure. Shampoo it only once a week for the first month, after which the muscles will be but Herculean; then you can douse your locks daily if you feel like it. Remember, a few hairs should fall every day, as the life span of a hair is approximately from one to four years. So if you're losing some long ones that look as if they've been around awhile, don't give 'em a second thought.

DANDRUFFY . . . You're just a hairsbreadth from real trouble, but here are some stitches in time. Dandruff forms in the first two days after washing, when the scalp is temporarily de-oiled. So right after washing it with an oil or a special dandruff-remover shampoo, massage it very gently with an oily pomade. If you've been indulging in orgies of perfume-spraying directly on your hair, you have one clue to your trouble right there. Perfume's an aider and abettor of flaking! Substitute one of those elegantly-perfumed prepared oils or tonics. They'll scent your curls delicately, simultaneously lubricating your scalp. Cleanliness and lubrication will positively cure the average case of dandruff, but if it persists hot foot it to your doctor, for you may have a scalp infection. Wash your comb daily so you don't keep re-infecting yourself, and don't you lend it to a living soul—nope, not even to that Willkie-haired beau of yours!

BLEACHED . . . It's probably Roman-striped, and you're pretty well chained to the peroxide bottle in a vain effort to color it evenly. Begin right now resisting the temptation, unless you want your hair eventually to break off. Give it an oil shampoo (see Dry Hair), then tub it in cool brine—three tablespoons salt in a quart of water. This tones up the scalp and speeds up new growth. After washing the salt out thoroughly, give yourself a darkish vegetable rinse to help equalize the color. Brilliantine the split ends faithfully, and remember that nightly massage eggs on growth practically like magic. We've known real massage addicts to add from three-quarters of an inch to an inch to theirs per month!

OILY . . . Shampoo it twice a week. Sounds like heresy after what you've always heard, we know, but it's a sure cure if you use a pure shampoo. The day of the once-every-two-weeks shampoo went out with the Saturday night bath era, but here's a vital point! Rinse your hair absolutely like mad, 'cause particles of soap left in the hair stir up the oil glands like nothing else in the world. No gooey desserts for you for a while, and try going hatless on your shorter open air excursions.

DRY... It needs a workout, for it's just plain lazy! Preface that every-week—without-fail shampoo with a luxurious oil treatment. Massage one of the soothing, prepared lubricants or a little olive oil into every square inch of the scalp, just as you'd rub cold cream into your face. (Both serve the same purpose, by the way—that of lubrication and deep pore cleansing.) Knead the scalp until it tingles; then wrap your hair in a gay Turkish towel and let the oil be absorbed for an hour or two. Shampoo thoroughly and rinse till your hair squeaks with cleanliness. Each morning, spray the ends with brilliantine. It's lots of milk for you, lady, and brisk, long walks and brushings to whip up that lazy circulation!

BLONDE... Gentlemen prefer you and all that, but you've got other problems! How to keep your hair from darkening? Cleanliness is one all-important step, but don't forget those wonderful vegetable rinses. Try one just once, and see the bonfire it lights in your locks and in your best beau's eyes! If your hair is dry, use that non-darkening brilliantine, specially for blondes. Just one word of warning! Home talent bleaching jobs are frequently messy, as your hair invariably turns that hideous brassy color. Splurge on an expert if you're dead set on bleaching, but for our money—we'll take a golden rinse or, for utter devastation, a platinum one!

BRUNETTE... You've been getting away with murder, for dark hair—whether it's Mouse or Midnight Black—covers a multitude of sins. We can't stress the bi-weekly shampoo enough, nor the fact that rinses—either one of the easy-to-use products on the market or a vinegar solution (half a cupful to a quart of water)—never fail to put stardust in your hair and new swains on your string. And here's a trick. If your hair's brown and you want it to look jet black for a special occasion, rub a drop of odorless castor oil into the scalp and brush hard to distribute it. Mascara your widow's peak ever so lightly, brilliantine the ends—and Hi, Hedy!

RED... You're in good company! Cleopatra and George Washington had it, and so has Lana Turner. You're a woman of destiny, so treasure that carrot-top. Burnish it with a weekly henna rinse and brush it till it fairly spits sparks. If it's thin, as most red hair is, (red heads have only 95,000 hairs in their heads, while blondes have 140,000) stimulate its growth with daily massage (use a good pomade or a little olive oil) and give it lots of sunshine. Gorge yourself on napoleons and éclairs; your hair needs fatty substances taken internally, too!

WHITE... Flaunt it! Did you know snowy hair's the most becoming in the world? Don't be afraid of shampooing it four or five times a week if you live in a sooty metropolis and at least twice a week if you're a country gal. A little blueing in the final rinsing water will make short work of that faintly yellow cast, and an occasional oil shampoo (see dry hair) will keep it healthy, shiny and scandalously glamorous! If for any reason you feel you'd be happier with it tinted—choose a non-toxic product and follow instructions to a T.

PREMATURELY GREY... You have your choice. Play it up dramatically via striking coiffures or dye it a brand new shade. If it's only beginning to turn, leading the good life for a while (no cocktails and early to bed) frequently brings back the natural color. If your hair is an uninteresting pepper-and-salt, and you'd love it to be that wonderfully distinguished shade, here's a stunt. Give it first a black rinse, and then a platinum, being sure to use one of the rinses that has a vegetable base and washes out. You'll love yourself. And this spring, promise yourself a giddy new hat. It'll give you a lift worth a month's vacation!

DULL... It needs a bath! We don't care if it just had one fifteen minutes ago, it's not bandbox clean. Give it a good tubbing (never under a shower, as the impact of the spray bends the hair follicles) and several rinsings, including one vegetable rinse to make it look rich and glinty. The beaten whites of an egg poured over the hair and washed out very thoroughly is another good brightener. Between shampoos, polish it with a silk cloth. (This, incidentally, is elegant for removing smoke and cooking odors.) Eat two eggs daily, steer clear of alcohol—then, pretty soon, look in the mirror. Mmm—dazzles you, doesn't it!

LONG BOB... It's glamorous as the very devil, but only if it's all clean and shiny. Remember, all hair, but especially long hair, is really an accessory like your shoes and stockings, and should be washed and brushed just as faithfully. Furthermore, it should be set with a quick-drying waveset and put up every night of your life on bobbies or curlers. Tiny cotton pads not only make this wonderfully comfortable, but absorb any excess lotion, too, and a cute net does away with the skinned rabbit look. You haven't the ghost of an excuse for Shetland pony-ing it one more day!

(Continued on page 86)

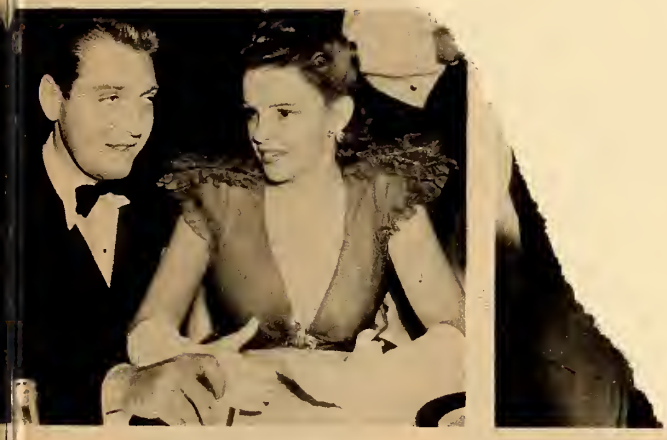
If you're plumb sick and tired of flicker romances, take a look at the genuine articles snapped up by our new Hollywood cameraman, Nat Dallinger!

Looks like the Jack Oakies are back together for keeps this time. 'Twas a good sign when Venita hopped up from a sick bed to be with him at his premiere. Since their marriage they've split and made up three times!

Jane Withers out-handies comedian Hugh Herbert at the Los Angeles Community Fund Banquet. Later in the evening she went quite serious orating on behalf of the Hollywood younger fry.

Columnists have their Bert Wheeler all wrong if they expect any sudden elopement with Phyllis Ruth. It took him four years to propose to his ex-wife, and Phyllis is that lady's spitting image!

What price devotion! When Doug Fairbanks, Jr.'s shirt was put up for raffle at a recent British War Relief benefit in New York, his wife Mary Lee Epling bid way over $75 to retrieve it for him.



Allan Jones and wife "Baby" shoot off the fireworks at Ciro's. They're celebrating his first night out since a recent illness during which he lost a goodly share of his former 235-pound self!

Mrs. James Cagney gets a lecture on Venezuela right in the midst of the Chester Morris wedding festivities. Ralph Bellamy and wife returned from a trip there just in time for the wedding.

Jean Hersholt, who'd rather hc anyway, quizzes Loretta Young about those stork rumors going both just laugh and wholeheartedly

When Judy Garland steps out at Ciro's with Dave Rose, she waxes plenty sophisticated. With Rooney she acts like a kid, wears bows in her hair and even eats candy at the movies!

Ray Milland's do graph hound and sm him is his striking who's one of the tallest

If there's anything Jackie Cooper hates, it's to have someone fuss over his ties! Bonita Granville's the only exception, and he fairly beams as she yanks at it for our cameraman.

Reggie Gardiner, British comedian, who can imitate trains to the last chug, goes amateur with a phony trick for Nat Draper

Orson Welles and Dolores Del Rio go night-clubbing to celebrate the completion of Orson's new film production, "Citizen Kane."

3. You would smile, too, in a print as gay as the one shown here on Phyllis. The black-eyed Susans are a true rich yellow. Narrow patent bows and daisy pockets trim this rayon jersey. Under thirteen dollars at Lord & Taylor.

From Now On

By Elizabeth Willguss

4

4. Phyllis Brooks, vivacious RKO star, sits by the fire for MODERN SCREEN wearing a lovely new redingote; pink and blue pastel plaid dress with sailor collar and a slim princess coat of matching blue flannel. Ensemble, under thirteen dollars at James McCreery.

5

6

5. Phyllis plays a tune on her little piano. It should be bright to go with the gray and yellow dress. On the jacket there are two corded pockets tied with a bow. Ensemble, under eight dollars at McCreery.

6. Yes, Phyllis, you can relax now, in a pale pink and black print that looks like a suit. Of rayon jersey, the jacket is edged in black velvet, draped at the hip to form soft pockets. Under thirteen dollars at McCreery.

Below: sketches of new Paris Fashion shoes, including those shown on Phyllis Brooks.

left; a perfect walking shoe of elasticized maracain with tiny perforations, a low comfortable heel and platform sole. Comes in black, blue or beige. Also see 4.

right; a feminine afternoon pump of black elasticized gabardine with patent leather bow and "fringing" on the cut-out vamp. Also shown above on Phyllis Brooks (6).

left; a new version of the sports oxford you will surely want in your spring shoe wardrobe. Dark brown calf piping, eyelets and low wedge heel contrast with the lighter play-tan calf of the shoe.

right; a flattering street pump of antique tan elasticized calf with "fringe" emphasizing moccasin line of walled toe. See 2.

With these four Paris Fashion shoes you are ready to walk anywhere!

For stores near you carrying Paris Fashion Shoes, write Fashion Editor.

BEAUTY OVER THE AMERICAS

FROM Alaska to Cape Horn, from the Aleutian Islands to Parahiba, easternmost tip of Brazil—throughout these wide Americas lovely women have learned the same romantic beauty lesson.

The ritual of skin care prized in all these American countries is the same we in the United States likewise treasure—the simple, effective principles long laid down by Pond's:—

CLOAK your face and neck lavishly with the sleek, fragrant smoothness of Pond's Cold Cream. Smack your skin briskly with cream-wrapped fingertips for three full minutes—even five. Pond's has two distinct missions to perform for you. One cleansing. The other softening. It mixes with the dust, make-up and foreign accumulations on your skin—softens them and sets them free.

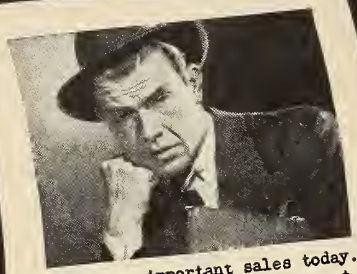
WIPE AWAY all this freed and softened debris with the gentle competence of Pond's Tissues—created tenderly soft and absorbent for this express purpose.

SMACK ON briskly a second coating of Pond's Cold Cream. Again wipe off with gentle Pond's Tissues. This second creamy spanking enhances both the cleansing and softening actions of Pond's. Note how the pores seem finer, lines less apparent in your glowing, softened skin.

SPLASH ON now the cool, wet fragrance of Pond's Skin Freshener.

Then MASK this spic-and-span face of yours with a smooth layer of a very different type of cream—Pond's Vanishing Cream—light as a cloud, innocent of greasiness. This cream's specific duty is to help disperse remaining particles, little chappings caused by exposure. Wait one full minute before you wipe it off. Then see how it leaves a perceptible mat finish on your skin—a petal-softness that receives and holds your powder smooth and captive for hours.

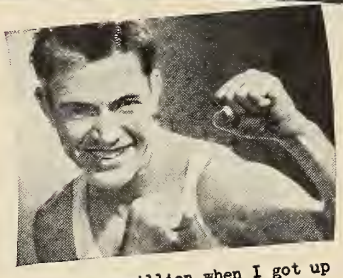
Perform this brief Pond's ritual in full always before retiring or during the day. A shorter ritual whenever your skin or make-up need freshening.



THESE TWO FOR THE PRICE OF CREAM

ANOTHER THRIFTY GIVE-AWAY—For a limited period you can buy Pond's Cold Cream in the medium-large (6.1 oz.) size that gives you so much more for your money, and get absolutely free a 20¢ box of Pond's Face Powder. At your favorite beauty counter.

MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR . . . MRS. ROBERT W. ARMSTRONG . . . SEÑORITA ANA ROSA MARTINEZ GUERRERO SEÑORA PILA SUBERCASEAUX . . . SENHORA AIMÉE LOPES DE SOTTO MAIOR . . . names that hold the magic and dual connotation of great wealth and great beauty in five great American countries. Each one observes the Pond's Ritual



From the Confidential Notebook of Mr. F---

Muffed two important sales today. Had no pep — just couldn't get going! Wonder if I hadn't better take a laxative - been putting it off too long.

Harry said I ought to try Ex-Lax. Took some before I went to bed. Say, this Ex-Lax taste is a new one on me - just like chocolate!

Felt like a million when I got up this morning. Ex-Lax worked fine - didn't upset me a bit. Just watch me go after those birds today!

The action of Ex-Lax is thorough, yet gentle! No shock. No strain. No weakening after-effects. Just an easy, comfortable bowel movement that brings blessed relief. Try Ex-Lax next time you need a laxative. It's good for every member of the family.

10¢ and 25¢

FUGITIVE FROM THE FOUR HUNDRED

(Continued from page 38)

as "Dirty Gertie" and like it. But I love it! I've got a good, gutty part, haven't I? I was a little scared last night, though. I went to a dinner party and just before we arrived I learned Hedy Lamarr was going to be there. My heart dived! Imagine me like this stacked up against Hedy Lamarr! Thank goodness, she couldn't come."

When Gene first sprang the Great Idea on her family there just wasn't anything doing. Papa Tierney, a respectable Manhattan insurance broker, had his own ideas about actresses, and they weren't very flattering. One branch of the family tree had quivered dangerously when Gene's grandmother, who looked like Lillian Russell, had almost succumbed to stage temptations dangled by the late Daniel Frohman. It was still one of those things you never mentioned outside the family.

But after deb-hopping for a few weeks Gene knew that fluffy life wasn't solid enough for her. Caviar was just fish eggs after all, champagne nice but dangerous, and the same young twerps said the same old things. She'd done her debbie damndest, too.

Gene had dutifully let the Ivy League boys push her around at proms. She'd toured the Manhattan glamour spots and café society cubicles at all exhausting hours. She'd grinned a fixed smile into candid cameras. She'd listened, bored silly, to the gossip about who's going with whom in Manhattan's Mayfair and what about it. She'd smoked too much and swilled too many cocktails and indulged in entirely too much senseless small talk. She'd spent too much money, charged too many expensive clothes and earned too many dark circles under her young eyes. And the only Big Idea, as near as Gene could figure, was to see and be seen, talk and be talked about—until some rich and right man looked you over in the social display window, had you wrapped up and sent to the altar. Okay, perhaps for Brenda Frazier. For Gene it added up to a case of Ho-Hum,

But what to do? She thought for a while about settlement work, but that wasn't too original. She mulled over nursing, but she was too young. Besides, that chat with Bette Davis was brewing ideas. Gene struck a deal with her dad.

"Give me a month," pleaded Gene. "If something important doesn't happen by then, I'll give up the idea and be so social you won't have me around."

Tierney, père, shook on it. What's more, he said he'd take her around town and help out on the dramatic job hunt.

THERE were a couple of things, Gene admits, that softened her family a bit on her backsliding. First, her dad had suffered some business reverses which made it look as if he wouldn't be financing too lavish a social campaign. Then, too (she confesses under pressure), she had gone and gotten herself engaged and the family didn't approve one bit. At seventeen you couldn't blame them much. Anyway, they thought Gene might forget her puppy passion if she was busy dreaming about a career. As for her really landing one, they thought they were as safe as Joe DiMaggio at home plate. They'd forgotten, obviously, that their child was christened Gene Eliza Tierney—and that her initials spelled GET.

"We did a 'horsing' scene today," Gene was announcing, yanking a dried twig and a couple of acorns out of her hair, and downing her buttermilk. "Horsing? Well, the boys on the set call it 'niggling.' It's pretty low-down. I guess you'd say I was actively on the make for Ward Bond, who plays the part of Lov Bensey one of us po' white trash in 'Tobacco Road.' Gosh! I just thought. One of my ancestors was General Lee. Me—I'm a Lee of Virginia—playing po' white trash! Anyway—this horsing is pretty torrid

(Continued on page 62)

Marie Wilson's not only one of Hollywood's busiest stars, but unquestionably its busiest fan. Belongs to three fan clubs and collects autographs like mad.

HERE SHE IS! Lovely BARBARA STANWYCK with a charm hint for YOU

LUX SOAP MAKES A WONDERFUL BEAUTY BATH! ITS ACTIVE LATHER MAKES YOU SURE OF DAINTINESS

THIS GENTLE, WHITE SOAP HAS SUCH A DELIGHTFUL FRAGRANCE — LEAVES SKIN SWEET!

STAR OF PARAMOUNT'S "THE LADY EVE"

Clever girls take Hollywood's tip—win out with skin that's sweet!

"Men love to be near the girl who's sweet," this famous beauty says. And tells you how screen stars protect the daintiness important to charm. Lux Soap's ACTIVE lather carries away perspiration, every trace of dust and dirt —leaves skin really fresh.

9 out of 10 Screen Stars use it—

YOU will find screen stars are right! A daily luxurious Lux Toilet Soap bath makes you sure of daintiness, of skin that's sweet, appealing.

GIRLS! LOOK AT YOUR CHAPPED HANDS

under a magnifying glass

SEE WHY MEDICATED NOXZEMA IS SO WONDERFUL FOR CHAPPED HANDS

• Chapped hands are really CUT hands—a combination of skin irritation, like chafing, coupled with tiny cracks, particularly in the knuckles. That's why thousands of people today are switching to Noxzema Cream for real relief. Because Noxzema contains medication to soothe and help promote quicker healing of red, irritated, chapped hands—help restore them to their normal soft, white, smooth loveliness.

Nurses in hospitals were the first to discover how wonderful Noxzema is for chapped hands. Surveys indicate that scores of physicians and dentists who must wash hands frequently yet must keep them in good condition, use this medicated cream regularly.

Make this simple test

Try it yourself, this way! Put Noxzema on one hand before retiring. Feel how the smarting and soreness are soothed away. In the morning, compare your two hands. See how Noxzema has helped heal the tiny cuts and cracks. If you don't say your "Noxzema hand" looks softer, smoother, whiter—your money will be refunded! Get Noxzema at your druggist's today while the special trial offer is on!

FOR A LIMITED TIME ONLY you can get the generous 25¢ jar of Noxzema for only 19¢! Try it today!

(Continued from page 60)

stuff. I was embarrassed to tears before I did it. I had them clear all the men off the set first. After the scene I turned as red as a tomato and ran off and hid! But while we were making the scene I never thought anything about it."

Each Wednesday for four weeks, Gene drove in from Connecticut to New York, and her Dad took her by the hand and trudged around with her to agents, producers and Broadway big shots. If a little pleased "I-told-you-so" smile played around his mouth, it seemed justified. Gene had never taken a dramatic lesson or even hammed through an amateur play. As far as she was concerned, upstage was the way Princeton boys tried to act, and off-stage was what referees penalized you five yards for. She got what is known in professional circles as "the quick brush." Home at night she can remember her father winking at her mother while Gene did a slow burn.

IT wasn't till the fourth week of the Society versus Stage episode that Gene found anyone who'd look at her twice without frowning. Then George Abbott picked her out of sixty other yearning sub-Duses for the ingénue in a play called "Mrs. O'Brien Entertains."

Mrs. O'Brien didn't entertain over four weeks, but that was long enough for Gene to attract some Hollywood talent scouts. So when Papa Tierney asked Gene as nicely as possible if she was ready to holler " 'Nuff!," she replied by signing up for a crack at the movies. She was already a fugitive from the Social Register, and she intended to stay on the fuge!

"Excuse my bare feet," requested Gene, kicking off her slippers. "That's better. You know, I don't see how I'll ever get pumps on again. I haven't worn shoes for weeks. My feet are immense—but I don't care. I love going barefoot anyway. The other day I was sitting in Mr. Zanuck's office. Before I knew it, I had my shoes off and was walking around barefoot on the carpet! Isn't that awful?"

Now Gene would just as soon skip lightly over this first Hollywood episode, if it's all the same with the customers. In the first place, there was much mental anguish on the part of her family and friends, and she hates to recall the sad details. They were convinced Gene was sliding down the Primrose Path from bad to a lot worse. All sorts of lurid tales about Horrible Hollywood popped up in their memories. Gene might just as well have announced she was signing up with a Sultan's harem for six months. But movie talent scouts have a way about them, and pretty soon Gene, accompanied by her attractive mama, fully equipped with shotgun and horsewhip, was hanging around Columbia Studios wondering what next.

Well, Gene wondered all summer at $350 a week. Having an olive complexion, she got a nice tan at the beach, but that was about all. Came fall and she hadn't even been atmosphere in a Class B thriller. Her contract was up and she packed for New York. Columbia said au revoir but not good-bye. "You can come back next spring at the same money," they told her. Gene hadn't the slightest idea she'd be making a hit on Broadway, but she said "No, thanks," just the same. "That would make me chasing after the movies," observed Gene, quite shrewdly, "and that's no good. When I come back, I'll make the rules."

When Gene did come back, practically kidnapped by Darryl Zanuck from a solid hit on Broadway—Mr. James Thurber's "The Male Animal"—she dictated her own terms, and for a nineteen-year-old girl, who had never looked into a lens before, they are honeys. Gene has the darndest contract at Twentieth Century-Fox you've ever read!

She's getting $800 a week from the start, unheard-of sugar for an untried starlet, still as movie-green as a Pullman seat. Gene set that figure herself, as well as how frequently it should be upped. It's in black-and-white, too, that she gets her pick of parts. She can duck out of Hollywood quite legally every six months and do a play on Broadway. They can't make her dye her hair or fool around dolling up her pleasantly uneven teeth. They can't change in any way her

(Continued on page 64)

Production of "Back Street," starring Charles Boyer and Peg Sullavan, had to be rushed—for Maggie's expecting her third visit from the stork!

Ann Sothern

in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's

"MAISIE WAS A LADY"

Do your lips DRY?

...keep them smooth and lovely with HOLLYWOOD'S

LIPSTICK

DO YOU want your lips to look a beautiful alluring red? Do you want to keep them soft and smooth? Then try Tru-Color Lipstick, created by Max Factor Hollywood. You'll be delighted with these 4 amazing features:

1. lifelike red of your lips
2. non-drying, but indelible
3. safe for sensitive lips
4. eliminates lipstick line

Imagine finding all the good points you've always wanted in one lipstick. You'll be thrilled the very first time you use Max Factor Hollywood Tru-Color Lipstick. Try it today...there's a color harmony shade to accent the beauty of your type...$1.00

Powder...If your skin looks dull and lifeless, then try this face powder created by Max Factor Hollywood. See if your skin doesn't look lovelier. Satin-smooth, clinging ...it stays on perfectly. Color harmony shades...$1.00

Rouge..You'll like the lifelike color harmony shades of Max Factor Hollywood Rouge ...they give your make-up such a natural-looking touch of color..50¢

Max Factor Hollywood

PURSE MAKE-UP KIT

Mail for POWDER, ROUGE AND LIPSTICK IN YOUR COLOR HARMONY

MAX FACTOR MAKE-UP STUDIO, HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Send Purse-Size Box of Powder, Rouge Sampler and miniature Tru-Color Lipstick in my color harmony shade. I enclose ten cents for postage and handling. Also send me my Color Harmony Make-Up Chart and Illustrated Instruction Book, "The New Art of Make-Up".....FREE. 24-63-3

NAME_____

STREET_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

COMPLEXIONS	EYES	HAIR
Very Light ☐	Blue ☐	BLONDE Light. ☐ Dark. ☐
Fair ☐	Gray ☐	BROWNETTE Light. ☐ Dark. ☐
Creamy ☐	Green ☐	BRUNETTE Light. ☐ Dark. ☐
Medium ☐	Hazel ☐	REDHEAD Light. ☐ Dark. ☐
Ruddy ☐	Brown ☐	If Hair is Gray, check type above and here ☐
Sallow ☐	Black ☐
Freckled ☐	LASHES (Color) Light ☐
Olive ☐	Dark ☐
SKIN Dry ☐ Oily ☐ Normal ☐	AGE

WESTMORE SAYS:
Here's how to be
"Star Lovely"
with WESTMORE Foundation Cream and Face Powder

★ Created by Hollywood's Make-up Masters, the Westmores

★ Used by Many Leading Stars for Real Life as well as "Reel Life"

GENE TIERNEY, featured in the Twentieth Century-Fox picture, "TOBACCO ROAD", is shown finishing her Westmore make-up. You begin with Westmore Foundation Cream. Choose the shade that matches your skin tone. Then apply sparingly over the entire surface of the face. With Westmore powder to blend, it's a make-up that covers tired shadows, blemishes, creates a smooth, even glowing tone!

You'll look Star Lovely to him when you use Westmore's wonderful make-up. Men love its soft, fresh, glowing look. Westmore Foundation Cream and Powder, with the complete line of Westmore cosmetics, will be found in generous 50¢ sizes at your drug store. Smaller sizes at variety stores.

House of WESTMORE
HOLLYWOOD

New York Office . . . . 730 Fifth Avenue

★Get Westmore's amazing book on make-up, 25¢
K-3

(Continued from page 62)

height, weight or posture—and that means no diets. Nobody can summon her mother on the set for any reason. No studio camera can command Gene for leg art or for stunt photos. And it's strictly against the written rules for the publicity boys to build up any fake romances! Not that that's necessary.

"Oh, hello!" Gene was shouting genially, looking up from a strange mess of French toast and ice cream she had fancied for dessert, and across the Café de Paris to a handsome but puzzled looking man. "Hey—don't you know me?" The man returned to his soup. "You see?" giggled Gene, "I'm such a fright nobody recognizes me. That's John Sutton. He's the first man who ever kissed me—professionally, that is. In 'Hudson's Bay.' Just a few weeks ago I caught him making a pencil check on a little pad, and asked him why. He said it was for the three hundred and ninety-fifth time he'd kissed me! Now I get a blank stare! Hi, Butch!" Another tall, handsome man stared at Gene blankly. "I've got a brother named Butch, and my police dog's named Butch, too. That's Butch Romero. U-m-m-m! Tall, dark and handsome is right! But he won't give me a tumble. Nobody dreams of Genie with the dirty brown hair!" She pretended to sigh.

The fact is, despite her crummy condition, Genie has more men dreaming about her than is good for a twenty-year-old girl. In New York, after "The Male Animal," she became almost the official sweetheart of the customarily sour-pussed dramatic critics. One, Dick Watts, went quite seriously overboard for Gene and is still supposed to be mooning around. Even bilious-tempered George Jean Nathan, the donor of Butch the dog, incidentally, gave Gene a farewell party when she set out for Zanuckland. Nathan groused moodily then that it was good-bye forever; the same old thing was happening again. Broadway discovers a promising young actress and Hollywood immediately seduces her with gold and keeps her in bondage. "You'll never see the stage again, Gene," he predicted gloomily. Gene made a bet on that. She says she's going back to Broadway next fall and collect it.

Meanwhile, Gene Tierney isn't doing a bit badly in Hollywood. She went right into "The Return of Frank James" the day after she pulled into Hollywood. But the very night she arrived she went to Ciro's. Since then the most attractive and ardent male animals in Hollywood have kept romantically on her trail. John Swope, Tim Durant, Burgess Meredith, Bentley Ryan and Baron Polan are a few of the more dashing beaux currently cluttering up her date book. And there's still a boy back East, Gene admits.

BY now, you see, Gene Tierney doesn't feel quite so strongly about high life and the villainous upper classes. The fiery opinions of a girl's teens burn pretty bright, and while Gene has indeed given Society's frivolities the shake—and for keeps—she's candid enough with herself to admit she still likes a good time and attractive men, some dancing with her drudgery. So she's ordering a little of each now, and it works out very well.

In fact, Gene would be the last person in the world to regret her Society background. She knows that's why she can ride and ski, swim and play tennis with the best of them. Why she's clever around men, well-read and bright in her conversation. Why she can speak French without a copybook accent. Why she can design her own clothes and look like a little number out of Hattie Carnegie's, or wear a tweed skirt and an old Brooks sweater with style. Why sophisticates and show people alike find her charming.

On the strictly business side, too, Gene's not selling short her sub-deb days. A girl who has been used to money isn't likely to let even $800 each Saturday turn her head. The greatest single asset Gene Tierney brought to Hollywood, besides her unquestioned talent and personality, is poise and a level head. Hollywood's glamour might possibly throw a talented beauty from the corn belt. But a young lady such as Gene, who has wintered on the Riviera, stopped in London and Paris

(Continued on page 66)

Now we know why production crews fight to work with Merle Oberon! Not only is she a swell gal, but she also serves tea every day at four!

Table for one

Neglected wives are often guilty of

"ONE NEGLECT"

that may destroy romance . . .

"LYSOL" helps prevent this risk!

IT WAS to have been a very special occasion. She wore her prettiest frock—chose his favorite dishes—and then came his familiar phone call, "detained at the office". And so she dined alone—and unhappy—as she does so often these days.

Once he was the most gallant and attentive of husbands. Can it be that he simply doesn't care for her any more? Friends applaud her beauty, grace and charm. Her home and children testify to her success as a housewife and mother. What's wrong?

When a husband's love cools, the cause, say some doctors and psychiatrists, is often the wife's carelessness about feminine hygiene. The intelligent, modern woman uses "Lysol" for this important habit of personal cleanliness.

You ought to use "Lysol" in your routine of intimate hygiene. Probably no other product is so widely used for feminine hygiene . . . for these important reasons:

1. Non-Caustic . . . "Lysol", in proper dilution, is gentle, efficient; contains no free caustic alkali. 2. Effectiveness . . . "Lysol" is a powerful germicide, active under practical conditions; effective in the presence of organic matter (dirt, mucus, serum, etc.). 3. Spreading . . . "Lysol" solutions spread because of low surface tension; virtually search out germs. 4. Economy . . . Small bottle of "Lysol" makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. 5. Odor . . . The cleanly odor of "Lysol" disappears after use. 6. Stability . . . "Lysol" keeps its full strength no matter how long it is kept, or how often it might be left uncorked.

Lysol
Disinfectant

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

PASTE THIS COUPON ON A PENNY POSTCARD

What Every Woman Should Know

SEND COUPON FOR "LYSOL" BOOKLET

LEHN & FINK PRODUCTS CORP.
Dept. M.S.-341, Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Send me free booklet "War Against Germs" which tells the many uses of "Lysol".

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

Copyright, 1941, by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

New under-arm

Cream Deodorant

safely

Stops Perspiration

1. Does not harm dresses—does not irritate skin.
2. No waiting to dry. Can be used right after shaving.
3. Instantly checks perspiration for 1 to 3 days. Removes odor from perspiration.
4. A pure, white, greaseless, stainless vanishing cream.
5. Arrid has been awarded the Approval Seal of the American Institute of Laundering for being harmless to fabric.

More than 25 MILLION jars of Arrid have been sold...Try a jar today.

ARRID

39¢ a jar

AT ALL STORES WHICH SELL TOILET GOODS
(Also in 10 cent and 59 cent jars)

SITROUX

Triple-Tested

CLEANSING TISSUES

SOFTER Say "Sit-True" for tissues that are as soft as a kiss on the cheek.

STRONGER As strong as a man's fond embrace. Sitroux is made from pure cellulose.

MORE ABSORBENT Drinks in moisture. Ideal for beauty care and a thousand and one uses everywhere.

AT 5 & 10¢—DRUG & DEPT. STORES

(Continued from page 64)

for the season, is not likely to lose her head over the tinsel glitter of Hollywood. Little Miss Independence who at nineteen could talk right up to plush bottomed producers and get what she wanted has all the self-confidence required in a town where poise too often boils down to bluster.

Nor for the same reason, is Tierney a snob or likely to become one. Her Revolutionary forebears are real, her Irish-Creole ancestry aristocratic and valid, so she doesn't have to pretend. She's the kind of a kid the camera crew adores but never gets familiar with. None would dare tell her an off-color joke. While we talked waitresses dropped by to tell Gene their troubles and gasp at her get-up. She always strikes up windy conversations with taxi drivers, Gene said. In Albuquerque, in a recent flying vacation back home, Gene startled the airport weather bureau by busting right in with the pilot. "Hello, boys," cried Gene. "How's the weather?" At the port near Fairfield she went in the coffee shop for a bite and ran across a Polish girl she'd known in grade school. They visited so busily across the counter that Gene almost missed her plane.

But Gene Tierney is down to earth with decorum, and regular with reserve. She doesn't forget her good taste or manners, no matter what the situation. At a preview recently a news photographer focussed on her and her date. "Come on, Miss Tierney," suggested the flash-bulber, "put your arm around him." Gene smiled and took hold of his hand instead. If anyone calls her "Honey" or "Baby" she just doesn't hear. Her boy friends must all meet her mother first and be approved before there's any stepping out. And when Mama Tierney went back East last Christmas, leaving Gene to toil on "Tobacco Road," a chaperone moved right in.

It's things like that which finally banished any doubts the Tierney family and Gene's blue-blooded friends might have held about her fate in Horrible Hollywood. Now her dad is solidly on her career side, her mother's pretty proud of "Princess" (that's Gene to her mother) and both little sister Pat and brother Butch are wondering if Hollywood does not hold something for them, too. Pat, a ravishing beauty of fourteen, visited Gene this summer and lost eighteen pounds in the excitement. But when she started blossoming out in fancy Hollywood hair-dos and striking glamorous poses at odd moments, Gene thought it was time Pat was packed back to school in Virginia. That's where she is now. As for Butch, who was a Phi Beta Kappa at Yale and now is finishing up at Harvard's School of Business—well, the other day the dean called him in. "I wish," said the dean, "you'd ask your sister in Hollywood not to mention the fact that you're here." Butch wanted to know why not. The dean pointed to a stack of letters. "Look at those clippings," he said. "They cost us eight cents apiece!" Maybe one more time won't bankrupt Harvard.

But Gene was depositing her napkin (The Stork Club never saw one quite so black)—and up she bounced in dusty determination. "Back to the turnip patch along old Tobacco Road," grinned Genie. And noting the inky napkin, "Oh, dear! I should never use a napkin. I'm practically clean. Now the boys will rub my face in the dirt again—and how they'll love that!" We were halfway out of the café before she glanced down at her bare, black feet. She'd left her slippers under the table. Gene flashed back through the shocked and staring lunchers and retrieved them.

"I wonder," she grinned, "what the good old glamour girls would say if they could see me now! Maybe," she added, "it's just as well they can't! They might not understand at all!"

Information Desk, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York City

I am enclosing five cents in stamps or coin for which kindly send me your chart of the Western Stars.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

Please print name and address plainly

Annabella's cool as anything before she broadcasts, but Ty Power who's a mere spectator, couldn't have worse mike fright. Can't eat for days!

TILTED— BECAUSE OF DANDRUFF

NO CANDY or flowers for me on Valentine's Day! Nothing but a comic Valentine, making fun of my dandruff. But it showed me where I had made my mistake with Jack. I bought a bottle of Fitch's Dandruff Remover Shampoo right away—Fitch Shampoo, you know, is sold under a money-back guarantee to remove dandruff instantly. In either hard or soft water it lathers richly antiseptically clean. Fitch Shampoo removes every stubborn speck of dandruff, both from the scalp and throughout the hair.

And besides that, it leaves your hair soft, lustrous and manageable, all its true natural beauty revealed. I happen to be a blonde, but it's just as good for brunettes. Now I keep dandruff under control by using Fitch Shampoo regularly each week. Things look better for next Valentine's Day already! Why not try Fitch Shampoo, too?

Wen

GOODBYE DANDRUFF

Soap Shampoo

1. This photograph shows germs and dandruff scattered, but not removed, by ordinary soap shampoo.

Fitch Shampoo

2. All germs, dandruff and other foreign matter completely destroyed and removed by Fitch Shampoo.

Soap Shampoo

3. Microphoto shows hair shampooed with ordinary soap and rinsed twice. Note dandruff and curd deposit left by soap to mar natural luster of hair.

Fitch Shampoo

4. Microphoto after Fitch Shampoo and hair rinsed twice. Note Fitch Shampoo removes all dandruff, undissolved deposit, and brings out the natural luster of the hair.

Copr. 1941 F. W. Fitch Co., Des Moines, Ia.

After and between Fitch Shampaas, use Fitch's Ideal Hair Tanic. It stimulates the scalp, and keeps the hair neat and gaad laaking!

Fitch's
TRADE MARK

DANDRUFF REMOVER SHAMPOO

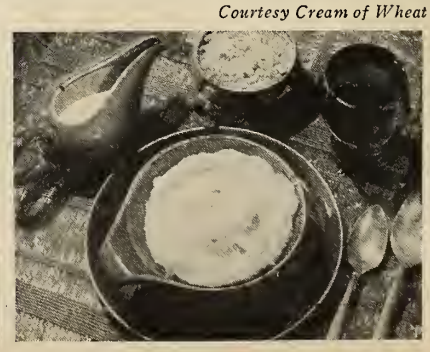
The Morning Star

SECTION ONE MARCH, 1941 HOME EDITION

STARS BEGIN DAY WITH WELL-BALANCED MEAL

Cesar Romero, Hollywood's dashing Latin from Manhattan, is pictured here as he enjoys an ample and leisurely breakfast in his colorful Spanish type home, before leaving for the studio where he is currently appearing before the cameras in "Tall, Dark and Handsome."

HOLLYWOODITES ADHERE TO "BETTER BREAKFAST" PLAN



BY MARJORIE DEEN

It is no longer considered "smart" to start the day with nothing more substantial than a cup of coffee to carry one through the morning hours. There are, of course, some people who still rely upon a sadly inadequate refueling job to get up enough steam for their early activities. But on the sound stages in this cinema city of ours such habits have gone into the discard now that people—from stars to prop boys—have noticed how much better they feel and how much more efficiently they work after a really good breakfast.

Fortunately for us who are responsible for the family breakfast, a meal that is nourishing and well-balanced, and is a safeguard to health during the winter months, can be prepared both quickly and inexpensively. A fine basic pattern of fruit juice, hot cereal and coffee rates as the favorite combination from Maine to California, according to a study made of the breakfast-eating habits of our nation. But don't let the matter rest there when building your own menus. Make it a point, too, to turn out a really good cup of coffee, give careful consideration to the kind of fruit you serve and choose a quick-cooking, easy-to-prepare cereal that will also provide health-giving vitamins and minerals.

Such a cereal is to be found in the new "5 Minute" Cream of Wheat. For almost half a century this breakfast food has been known as an easy-to-digest energy food. Now, thanks to a special patented process, it cooks to full digestibility (even for babies) in the time indicated by its name. In addition it contains extra amounts of phosphorus, calcium and iron—so important for strong bones, sound teeth and good blood; and Vitamin B_1 the "Nerve" vitamin, which stimulates appetite, promotes growth, aids digestion and helps prevent diseases of the nervous system. So you see it's most important to have a good, substantial breakfast, featuring the right foods to assure our general well-being and to increase our morning pep and energy.

Courtesy Cream of Wheat

BASIC MENU PATTERN FOR BREAKFAST

Fruit Juice
Hot Cereal with Cream and Sugar
Milk or Cocoa for Children
Coffee for Adults

ADDITIONAL SUGGESTIONS: Serve Cream of Wheat, as shown at right, with brown sugar as the sweetening. Occasionally vary by adding seedless raisins or sliced dates. To basic menu add, as desired: Muffins, toast (see opposite page for recipes), rolls or other hot breads. Eggs in every form—with bacon, sausages, ham, chipped beef. Codfish cakes, kidneys, hot cakes or other regional or family favorites.

ORANGES DESERVE POPULARITY

FINE FLAVOR ONLY ONE OF THEIR OUTSTANDING QUALITIES

In many homes, the number one drink around the calendar is a tall glass of chilled orange juice. This high rating is richly deserved not only because the flavor of oranges is so universally well-liked, but also because they contain such a large proportion of those protective food essentials—vitamins and minerals.

Scientists have discovered that oranges are the richest everyday source of vitamin C, also a good source of vitamin B_1, that they contribute vitamins A and G, and calcium, phosphorus and iron as well. "But just what does all this do for me?" you may ask. Well, because of their dietetic plus-values, oranges stimulate appetite, aid in children's growth, promote the retention of calcium, phosphorus and other necessary food elements, help in the development of sound bone and tooth structure, prevent scurvy and provide easily digested food energy of the best type. In addition—and contrary to popular belief—although they are "acid" fruits, they actually counteract acidosis by promoting alkalinity.

Did you know that the body cannot manufacture or store vitamins C and B_1, and that a fresh intake is necessary each and every day to keep us up to par? And did you know that a single 8-ounce glass of orange juice furnishes the average requirement of vitamin C and about one-third of the amount of vitamin B_1 that has been figured as your daily quota? What better way could you start the day than with this salute to health!

Remember, though, that it's important to serve orange juice fresh, because the fine flavor is lost if the juice stands, and even vitamin content decreases. So if you like your orange juice cold, place fruit in the refrigerator for several hours before squeezing juice. When you use California oranges, which are practically seedless, the juice need not be strained.

Courtesy Sunkist Oranges

WEATHER
Today: Fair and cold. Tomorrow: Cloudy and continued cold. Snow in Eastern and Northern sections.

SECTION TWO

Here Are Some Facts About "The Cup That Cheers"

Surveys show that coffee is served in over 90% of homes in the United States. But in about 40% of those homes, not enough coffee is used to assure a fine, full-bodied brew, and, too many coffee-making devices are not kept spic and span. But you get really good coffee only from a strictly clean pot as coffee contains certain essential oils, which will impart an undesirable flavor if allowed to collect. So be sure to observe these rules for best results:

Empty out grounds as soon as coffee is made. Wash coffee-maker with soap and water as soon after using as possible, then scald to remove any trace of suds. Use brush to clean all parts where oils could collect. Dry with clean towel. Leave unassembled, between usings, to air. And remember . . . use enough fresh coffee of the right grind with only freshly boiled water—both carefully measured. Never boil coffee, never cool and reheat it, but keep it hot until served—which should be as soon as possible after it has been correctly prepared.

GOLDEN GLOW TOAST

Use regulation sliced baker's bread and for each 4 slices mix ¼ cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, ⅛ teaspoon cinnamon, moistened with 1 tablespoon orange juice. Trim off crusts and toast bread on one side only, under broiler flame. Spread untoasted sides generously with softened butter or margarine, then with sugar mixture. Return to broiler until slightly browned. Serve immediately.

COUNTRY COUSIN MUFFINS

1⅓ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, beaten
1 cup thick sour cream
2 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift flour, measure; add baking powder, soda, salt and sugar and sift again. Beat egg thoroughly, add sour cream and melted shortening. Add liquids to dry ingredients and stir vigorously, but only until all flour has been sprinkled. Bake in greased muffin cups in hot oven (400° F.) 20-25 minutes.

VARIATIONS: Add ½ cup seedless raisins, or sliced dates, or chopped nut meats, to dry ingredients. Or add ½ cup crisp bacon, using bacon fat as shortening.

Pour boiling water over ½ cup dried figs, let stand 10 minutes, drain, dry and add to batter at the very last.

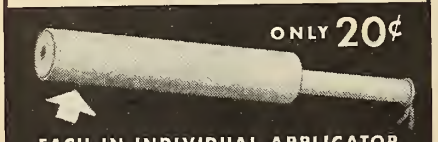
Chop ¾ cup cranberries, sprinkle with ¼ cup sugar, let stand while preparing batter, add at the very last.

One of the things that assured the popularity of Fels-Naptha Soap Chips, the very first day they were put on sale, was this:

Fels-Naptha Soap Chips produce no irritating, sneezy dust

This fact means more to you than just the satisfaction of a sneezeless washday. It means that when these husky, golden chips come tumbling out of the box, every one is chock-full of washing energy. It means that Fels-Naptha Soap Chips put the two famous Fels-Naptha Cleaners to work—gentle naptha and richer, golden soap—a dirt-removing team that shames the half-hearted efforts of weak, would-be beauty soaps.

Get a box of golden Fels-Naptha Soap Chips for your next washday. Write today to Fels & Co., Dept. 11-C, Phila., Pa., for a free introductory box. Use them in any kind of water—hot or cool—hard or soft. You'll get the whitest, sweetest wash you've ever had—and these golden, extra-sudsy chips will do most of the work.



Golden bar or Golden chips—
Fels-Naptha
banishes "Tattle-Tale Gray"

Why I switched to Meds

by a secretary

When you're as active as I am, it's a blessing to have the extra comfort of internal sanitary protection. But it used to cost me plenty extra! So did I cheer when I learned that Modess had brought out Meds—a new and improved tampon—at only 20¢ for a box of ten. Meds are the only tampons in individual applicators that cost so little. And I certainly like them a lot better.

ONLY 20¢

EACH IN INDIVIDUAL APPLICATOR

MADE BY MODESS

Meds

INTERNAL SANITARY PROTECTION

IMPROVED CAKE MASCARA!

- Speciol Spirol Brush dorkens oll sides of your lashes—curls them outomaticolly!
- Smart new "lipstick" metal cose holds hollow tube of Mascora.
- An unusually generous omount, de luxe quolity.
- Tearproof—non-smorting.

Modern EYES Mascara

10c If your 5 & 10c store has not yet received "Modern Eyes," send a dime and 2c stamp for mailing.

MODERN COSMETICS, INC.,
Distributors, Dept. C-20
75 East Wacker Drive, Chicago

Trade-mark "Modern Eyes" Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 45)

Retreat From Glamour

What does a man who spends his days surrounded by lovely women do for recreation? We set a spy on Perc Westmore's trail and discovered that after a long, tiring session with Olivia de Havilland, Ida Lupino and Bette Davis, the oldest of the Westmores relaxes in the company of a huge gorilla's head! Actually! Our operator reports that the tremendous stuffed head suspends from the wall of a cubbyhole adjoining Perc's office. In his spare time Perc has rigged it up with tricky mechanical devices, and whenever the strain of work becomes too great, he retires to his cubbyhole, pushes buttons, and chortles with glee while his frightening pet winks, yawns, glowers and even sticks his tongue out in Perc's face!

Mrs. Desi Arnaz

Leave it to Lucille Ball to pull a new one on her harried movie bosses. First she knocked them cold by eloping with Desi Arnaz—and now she's asking that the studio officially change her name to Lucille Arnaz! Lucille, who was married in Connecticut with a ten-cent wedding ring, crowned her ceremony by sending a five-page special delivery letter to RKO in an attempt to convince the powers she ought henceforth be known by her new name only. The studio shot back a polite "Nothing doing, dearie" note, but when Lucille's honeymoon glow wears off, they'll sit her down and tell her what they really thought of her suggestion!

Off the Record

There's a soundman over at RKO who could clean up a neat pile of dough if he ever wanted to peddle a little recording he made the other day. The soundman was idling about between "takes" on a Lucille Ball test when he happened to glimpse Lucille and her husband (referred to somewhere above) creep into a corner and go into a cooing and purring routine that would have made a lesser man blush and turn away. In a moment of rare inspiration, the soundman swung his microphone high over the Arnaz' heads and with absolute shamelessness caught their conversation in all its intimate and revealing details! The recording is said to be terrific, and if Mr. Soundman ever decides to market it, he can add us to his list. We'd lay our cash on the line any day to hear what that pair's got to say!

Open Account

And now it's Brenda Joyce and William Orr who have hit the twosome trail. After several years of "going steady" with Accountant Owen Ward, Brenda's awakened to the fact that she's had this love business added up all wrong. She's put young Ward on the wrong side of her romantic ledger and Bill, whom she "discovered" on a recent cross-country personal appearance junket, is doing a bang-up job of replacing Owen. We wouldn't dare put our neck out and venture a guess as to where Brenda's flitting fancy will light, but we will say that, at the moment, she's a darned lucky girl, having a pair like that to do her court.

This Thing Called Love

There's nothing like the treachery of a double-dealing woman to make firm friends of confirmed rivals. Take the case of two important foreign stars who would once have traded blows at the drop of an accent. They're the dearest of buddies now and the cause of their truce is none other than the young starlet over whom they had previously fought! This is how it happened. One afternoon, Movie Star "A" paid an unexpected visit to the little lady and found her busy with her "homework." This, he discovered to his horror, consisted of entering in a card file all the passionate telegrams, notes and letters he had sent her since the first day they met! Closer investigation revealed she had a similar file on Movie Star "B" and scores of other men, and that she'd approximated the cash value of each! Unable to wrest the dangerous collection from her, Movie Star "A" promptly notified Movie Star "B" and the last we heard, the pair were trying to decide whether to dump the schemer into the Pacific or jump in themselves!

Disa and Data

Signs planted along the road leading to the Ida Lupino-Louis Hayward home read, "This way to Screwloose College" . . . Edgar Buchanan, the Pasadena dentist who turned movie actor, fell so hard for the infants used in "Penny Serenade" he's adopting two for himself . . . Ingrid Bergman has never used a particle of powder off-screen . . . Alice Faye will strut through a three-minute "Road to Rio" sequence in a $1,700 gown flecked with 30 ounces of real gold . . . Jimmie Cagney and Fred Astaire, pals from way back, are heckling producers for a story that will star them both . . . "Cisco Kid" Cesar Romero has never been south of the border . . . Tyrone Power owns an insurance policy that will pay him $1,750 weekly if he's injured while off salary . . . Orson Welles, man of a thousand talents, doesn't know how to drive a car! . . . There's rebellion in the hearts of Henry Fonda's fans. They're threatening to boycott his pictures unless he stops wearing bow ties.

This Way Out

Years ago, when the boys from Sing Sing to San Quentin learned that their idol, Eddie "Little Caesar" Robinson, collected objets d'art in his spare time, they snarled with contempt and switched their affection to slugger Jimmie Cagney. At this writing, they're thinking of making another switch. Word has somehow leaked into the citizens of the cells that Jimmie wedding-gifted that other two-fisted toughie, Chester Morris, not with a gat or a blackjack, but with the most delicate, impractical, thin-stemmed glassware he could find on the Pacific Coast! The boys are pretty disgusted and, though they're giving Jimmie one more chance, they're quietly lining up Humphrey Bogart as a possible successor. Probably because they never heard of Bogie's flower garden!

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send today for the new up-to-date list of Hollywood stars with their correct studio addresses. It is a convenient size to handle or keep in a scrap-book. To receive a list, all you have to do is write to us and ask for it, enclosing a large, self-addressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that last item, as no request can be complied with otherwise. Please send request to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

HOW TO HANDLE WOLVES WITH KID GLOVES . . .

(Continued from page 33)

receives any—and it's not because she doesn't know a good insult when she sees it! By some special alchemy she is able to waltz around with some of the town's better wolves and still keep her lamb rating. It's not because she plays at being "goody-goody," but because she radiates a frank, friendly appeal. They can take it or leave it, and they take it.

The old "Taking Their Minds Off It" routine shows up in many variations, and one of the best is that perfected by Lucille Ball who used it frequently when she was a New York showgirl, poster model, mannequin—all professions that lure wolves like tender lambkins.

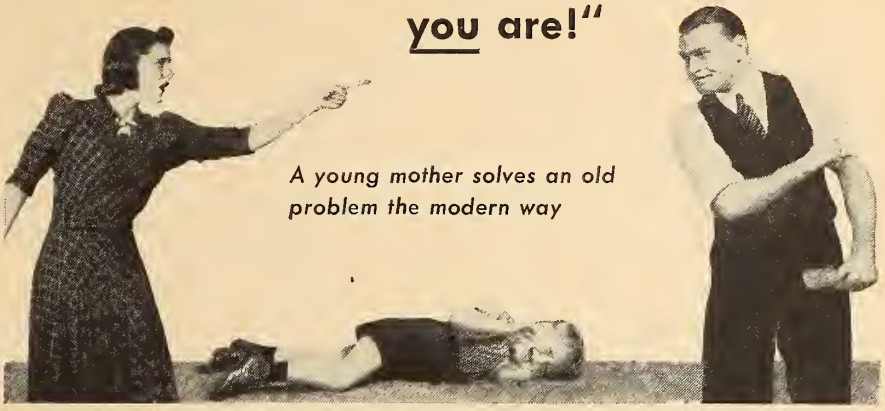
Her method was one of unblinking candor. Before the naughty man had a chance to ask her to sup with him at the El Morocco, she surprised him with "Good morning, Mr. Smiffkins! How is your wife today?" The baffled Mr. Smiffkins would usually tell her, only to find another question fired at him before he had a chance to purl out his invitation. "And how is your little daughter Minerva?" she would ask, her blue eyes wide.

By the time Lucille had checked on the family health, her pursuer was completely worn out with explaining, and Lucille was on her way. There's one thing about that routine—good will is never lost. Mr. Smiffkins may think you are mystifying, but awfully considerate of his folks' health. And so you are.

ALTHOUGH she makes use of the "Big Brother" routine regularly, Judy Canova, seen in "Scatter Brain" and preparing "Sis Hopkins," is a firm believer in the "Taking Their Minds Off It" system. "When the air gets a little too oppressive," says the amusing Judy, "I say, 'Well, I still like to dance!' And dance we do.

"I don't have much trouble with the predatory lads," she continued. "Half the time I figure that when an unknown man tries to speak to me, he may be one of my fans and only wants to say 'hello' so he can tell his friends about it.

"I did have a funny experience one time in Newark. My sister Ann and I bumped into a couple of old show business friends and started walking down the street with them. There was a third fellow who kept by my side and began to give me the old 'one-two' . . . 'How's California?' he asked. 'Gee, I love it out there.'



"Of course I thought my friends knew him and I answered him, but when we entered one of the shops he disappeared. 'Where's your pal?' I asked. 'What pal? I thought he was your pal.'

"Later, Ann and I went across to the dime store to buy some Georgia Nylons, the white cotton stockings I use in my act, and there was that fellow, big as life. He started in again. Now my way of handling it would have been to give him a frigid silence, but Ann took one look at him and said 'Scram!' And he did. Maybe her way was best."

For extreme delicacy and poise, the "Big Brother" system in effect at Patricia Morison's house should win an anti-wolf Oscar. The spectacular quality of Pat's beauty brings her into uncommon focus. When the phone rings and it turns out to be a persistent wolf asking her to dine with him that night, the

"If anybody's spoiling him, you are!"

A young mother solves an old problem the modern way

1. My husband's the best-natured man in the world, but he has some old-fashioned ideas about disciplining children. He feels he's got to be strict or our little boy, Billy, will be spoiled. We were always quarreling about it.

2. And yesterday, we had it out once and for all. Billy refused to take his laxative again and kicked up the usual fuss. So Ted immediately started to force the stuff down Billy. The child looked so scared I just flew at my husband!

3. "You and your strict ideas," I raged. "If anybody's spoiling that child, it's you! Look at the way he's trembling. You can't tell me it does any good to get a child so upset! I'm going to call the doctor and ask him about these laxative fights."

4. And, sure enough, the doctor said forcing a child to take a nasty-tasting laxative could shock his delicate nervous system. He said children should get a nice-tasting laxative they'd take willingly. One made especially for them—not an adult's.

5. The doctor recommended Fletcher's Castoria. He said it's thorough, yet it's always mild and safe. It works mostly in the lower bowel so it isn't likely to upset a youngster's digestion. And so Ted said O.K., he'd get a bottle just to keep peace in the house.

6. Well, Billy took Fletcher's Castoria—and how he took it! He loved it! He smacked his lips and winked at his daddy, and I knew our laxative troubles were over. From that moment on, I've been telling all the mothers I know about Fletcher's Castoria.

HERE IS THE MEDICAL BACKGROUND

Chief ingredient of Fletcher's Castoria is senna.

Medical literature says: (1) In most cases, senna does not disturb the appetite and digestion or cause nausea . . . (2) Senna works primarily in the lower bowel . . . (3) In regulated dosages, it produces easy elimination and has little tendency to cause irritation or constipation after use.

Senna is especially processed in Fletcher's Castoria to eliminate griping and thus allow gentle laxative action.

Chas. H. Fletcher CASTORIA

The SAFE laxative for children

Paramount starlet instantly says, "Yes."

"And you won't mind if I bring Alex, my brother, with us tonight?" she asks, drippingly. "You see, I had a date with him and I wouldn't want to break it, so we'll make it a threesome." This is the kind of rebuff which leaves the most notorious wolf in doubt.

Ann Miller's one-woman crusade to outwit the wolves veers off on a different tack. When Ann first arrived in New York from Houston, Texas, to carve out a dancing-acting career for herself, she thought that all forward passes were restricted to the football gridiron. It didn't take her long to learn otherwise.

"Every time I came out on the stage, particularly in the Scandals, I looked so much older than I actually was and so sophisticated," Ann tells. "The songs I sang, the dances I did, the costumes I wore all helped give that impression. The boys about town thought I was the 'oh so hot' type from show business. 'Oh boy!' they'd say. 'She's a card. Is she going to be terrific!'

"Off-stage, of course, I wasn't that type at all. But they didn't know it. They sent me diamond bracelets, watches, tons of flowers . . . it was like the days of Lillian Russell. I had to return the jewels, of course. And the invitations—they poured in like a flood.

"Of course it was smart for me, a young actress, to be seen at the right places, with the right men. Only most of the men were much older than I was. They were wiser, too. And dangerous. But I actually came away with marriage proposals from several of them.

"Mother was with me, just as she is now, and mother's a scream. After the show, when I was ready to go out dancing, I always brought my night's escort to mother, backstage. I would present him to her, and she would say, 'Now you know Ann is quite young. I don't want you to keep her out too late. She must be in by two o'clock.' And two o'clock in the cafés of New York is very early.

"If the wolf looked particularly wolfish, mother would say firmly, 'She must be in by two in the morning because she has to have some rest before her early morning screen test.' The best part of the system that we worked out was my wardrobe. As I said before, my stage costumes were oh-so sophisticated. My own wardrobe was just the opposite.

IN it were a few simple dresses in pastel tones with bouffant, little-girl skirts. I'd slip into one of these after I had taken off my make-up, add a touch of color to my lips, brush my hair back from my face, wear a single strand of pearls, and I looked as mild as milk. The men liked it.

"I can't say the men never made an overture to me in my role of Miss Simplicity. They did. And I always had a retort. 'Please,' I'd say, 'I'm just a plain Texas girl, and a very good little girl, and I just don't like things like that.' That was all there was to it. It wasn't very often that I even had to say that. I usually set the conversational pitch by talking about backstage happenings, and then there was always dancing. If a girl is a good talker and a good dancer, she doesn't need to worry about her escort.

"Another thing—I never played the hard-drinking, comrade-in-cups type of girl, matching Scotch and sodas with him. Whenever drinks were ordered I asked for a Pepsi-Cola. I didn't like liquor and didn't pretend I did just to put on an act. They must have liked me, because they asked me out again and again."

Ann, whose film appearances have been in "Too Many Girls" and "Hit Parade," finds the chief difference between East and West Coast wolves is that the Western gentlemen have far more time in which to indulge in their whimsical pursuits. "A New Yorker does his skulking in the evenings, but film work and its time-between-pictures gives the Hollywood boys much more leisure," says Ann.

Guileless chatter is the plan in use by tiny Connie Haines, warbler with Tommy Dorsey's band whose "Fame and Fortune" radio show has led them into a picture called "Las Vegas Nights." If he's a musical wolf she flaps her lashes at him and asks him how on earth he contrives those arpeggios on his harp or trombone. When he launches into a technical discussion of it, everything is andante—until a broker wolf comes along and Connie has to ask about the bearish trend in the market.

The "Home and Mother" system is not to be lightly regarded. Some of our better glamour girls make full use of it. For instance, if Carole Landis doesn't like a new gentlemen after the first date she asks him over for a quiet evening at home. There is a fire in the hearth, mother is sitting by, knitting, and the dogs are brought in from the kennels.

These dogs are particularly friendly and insist on lapping strangers' faces. All of this is very discouraging to the anticipatory gentleman, and he soon says a hasty farewell. If he is a brave soul, he may ask Carole to see a new film with him, come Wednesday, and Carole says, "Yes, mother and I would love to go with you." That does it.

With slight modification the same technique is used, and very effectively, by Dorothy Lamour. Raffish instincts, many a girl has discovered, are smothered by an overdose of domesticity.

If the glamour maiden must learn to handle wolves with kid gloves, then the glamour matrons, like Merle Oberon, Ida Lupino, Doris Davenport, have their problems, too. There is the wolf who stalks the dinner party and sends roses to the married lady. Yellow roses for friendship, then red ones for something else.

"They are a variation on what we call 'taxi pouncers' in London," laughs Merle Oberon, who is also Mrs. Alexander Korda. "I have a very good way to handle them. After the flowers arrive they beg to call on me, and I say 'do—for tea.' When tea-time comes, Mr. Korda and several friends are usually home, and we have a very gay time. The gentleman never manages to find me at home alone and, after a while, in quiet desperation, he gives up."

Doris Davenport, who is Mrs. John Randolph, says that she has little difficulty with predatory gents. "If a woman demands respect she is going to get it, and she can always change a man's thoughts by directing the conversation into other channels. Women have edged into man's sphere, they have the vote, they work in competition with them, and there aren't many fields in which a man can be the supreme male. If he does get out of hand once in a while, I suppose we shouldn't blame him."

English Ida Lupino, who is Mrs. Louis Hayward, has a more ruthless attitude. She has a sure-fire squelch for the "masher type" that she meets in public places. "I simply stare at his feet," she says firmly. "It never fails to deflate his ego. First he gets restless, then he gets worried. Just keep up a fixed stare right on his feet and you'll find he finally can't stand it any longer and wanders off."

It would seem from our intense preoccupation with the subject that there are more ways than one to handle that wolf disguised in Harris tweeds.

HE EARNED HIS LETTER

(Continued from page 36)

bursting with gratitude to the champion who had fought for him. Overnight, said champion seemed to have turned attacker, bent on fighting with him. Feeling like a flayed eel, he kept his outward composure. Bette Davis and Bart Marshall had worked with Wyler before. They did what they could to prop his morale. Marshall told him how Wyler had once baited him so that his hand, holding a teacup, shook. "Can't you stop that?" yelled Willie. "No," answered Marshall, "I can't. And the more you shout, the more I can't stop it."

"What's wrong with me?" Stephenson asked Bette one day is despair. "Am I really so stinking?"

"Jimmy," she said, "if Willie thought you were wrong for the part, he'd have thrown you out long ago. You're here, so stop worrying."

"But they're big people, and I'm not," he says, "so I went on worrying. In the absence of any word from Wyler, nothing could convince me I was doing well."

The first word came from a hairdresser who had driven to the lunchroom with Bette and the director. Very offhand, Bette had observed "Jimmy's grand in this scene, don't you think so, Willie?"

"I do," the unpredictable Willie had replied. "I'm proud of him."

THE nice girl couldn't wait to dash back and tell Jimmy, whose term of rejoicing was cut short, when Wyler drawled at him that afternoon "Jimmy, I could understand it if you did too much. But you don't do anything."

Not till he'd summoned his three leads to the projection room to see the finished picture, did Mr. Wyler break down. As the lights were switched on, he turned to face them. "You three have done first-class jobs." Then he grinned —a kind of bashful grin, if you'll believe it, and added, "I feel mine wasn't a bad one either."

It was all very disarming. Stephenson can't honestly say that his memories were erased. But their sting was removed. "What if he did give me a hell of a time? With it he gave me a new lease on life, for which I shall be everlastingly grateful."

That Wyler had earned his thanks was made plain at the preview. Before it, three photographers, cameras cocked, took not the slightest notice of him as he passed through the lobby. His wife was furious.

They'd insisted on sitting apart from their friends—the Melville Coopers and the Albert Treynors. "I've got tickets for you," said Jimmy, "but in another part of the house." He chuckled as he told the rest of the story. "Mrs. Treynor patted my arm and said, 'Thanks, Jimmy. Only this morning Albert was screaming, "What'll I say if I don't like him?"'"

Lorna sat through the picture in a haze, conscious enough to see Jimmy and only Jimmy. "As for me, I wanted to hide under my coat. As it went on, though, I began to settle down to the usual business of picking holes. I was also ham enough to notice that the scenes between me and Sen Yung drew applause. I couldn't tell whether it was for him or me or both, but I had a suspicion it was for Sen Yung."

Pressed for post-preview details, he went oysterish on us in a nice embarrassed way. Which didn't matter,

We didn't tell it to the Marines

...they told us!

Quantico Marines reported a longer lasting peppermint flavor in Beech-Nut Gum

IN RECENT TESTS at Quantico, Va., U. S. Marines reported that Beech-Nut's peppermint flavor lasted on an average of 25% longer than the peppermint flavor of all the other brands they tested. In addition, a large majority of these Marines said that they preferred the peppermint flavor of Beech-Nut to the average of the others tested. Prove this yourself. Get a package of Beech-Nut Gum and see how long and how much you enjoy its fine, distinctive flavor!

An independent research organization made the tests*

An independent research organization made these tests with about one-tenth of the Marines at Quantico, Va. Beech-Nut and various other brands of peppermint chewing gum were tested. All were bought in local stores. The identity of the gum was positively concealed. Each Marine was given 2 different brands (Beech-Nut and one other) asked to chew them and report how long he thought the flavor of each stick lasted and which stick he found had the better flavor.

Name on request.*

they said:
more minutes of flavor

ON all sides, women are turning to an amazing safe way in feminine hygiene. A way that is not only dainty and safe—but gives continuous medication for hours without use of poison. And actually kills germs at contact.

Called Zonitors—these dainty, snow-white suppositories spread a greaseless, protective coating. To kill germs, bacteria on contact. To cleanse antiseptically. To deodorize—not by temporarily masking—but by destroying odor.

Zonitors are most powerful continuous-action suppositories. Yet entirely gentle to delicate tissues. Non-caustic, contain no poison. Don't burn. Even help promote healing.

Greaseless, Zonitors are completely removable with water. Nothing to mix, no apparatus needed. Come 12 in package individually sealed in glass bottles. Get Zonitors at druggists. Follow this amazingly safe way in feminine hygiene women are raving about.

FREE revealing booklet, sent in plain envelope. Write to Zonitors, 370 Lexington Ave., Dept. 3307B, New York City

Zonitors

MAKE MONEY AT HOME!
Learn to color photos and miniatures in oil. No previous experience needed. Good demand. Send for free booklet, "Make Money at Home" and requirements.
NATIONAL ART SCHOOL
1315 Michigan Ave. Dept. 2363, Chicago

Beautiful NAILS
AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

BROKEN, SHORT —Ugly

LONG, TAPERING —Lovely

DON'T ENVY long, tapering, smart nails — have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU-NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half-moons. Helps check nail-biting habit. Protects fragile nails while they grow strong again. Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores.
Nu-Nails, Dept. 15-C, 462 No. Parkside, Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails

because we were there. We saw the floodgates open. We saw the Stephensons engulfed in a congratulatory tide. We heard the cameras click. He admitted, with the hereinbefore-mentioned smile, that "it was a pleasant experience. Very."

He reached the stage by the amateur route. Son of a Yorkshire chemist, he tried teaching and hated it—then dentistry which didn't pan out. He finally gravitated to the cotton business in Manchester and did well enough to get backing for a small firm of his own. One day a friend asked him to play Joseph Surface in a local production of "School for Scandal." He made the usual remonstrances. He'd never acted. He couldn't act. He didn't know the first thing about acting. Just the same, he succumbed to the indefinable lure of the footlights and played Joseph Surface. He must have been good. All the dramatic societies yelping for his services. One of them proposed to do Shaw's "Man and Superman" with Stephenson as John Tanner.

SHAW had always been my idol, for which reason I've never ceased to marvel at my colossal cheek. I did the part quaking, but I did it. The thing caused a local furor, so from then on I did nothing but act in my spare time and began to filch time from my business to make it spare, with the inevitable result that business felt the effects. Finally I said, "The hell with it. I like this better than anything else. In fact, I love it. I'll try to get a job as a professional actor."

He threw over the cotton firm which was his living and, armed with a letter from a well-known character actor, betook himself to the manager of the Liverpool Repertory Theatre. The manager, with rare faith in Stephenson's sponsor, gave him a job at fifteen a week. From a bit in the first play he was promptly graduated to alternating leads. His salary rose, too, though not at the same rate. At the end of four years he was making fifty a week, and no complaints. One stunning failure marred the content of those years. A Paramount scout asked him to make a test. "I waited sixty days in purgatory for the result, and the result was no."

He met his wife at New Brighton, where the company played a six weeks' summer season. Mutual friends took her to see him in "Counselor-at-Law." He sums up their romance in five words. "I fell. Then she fell." They decided to postpone marriage till he could accumulate a little more cash. Having waited a year and rolled up a prudent backlog, they proceeded to cast prudence to the winds.

Jimmy put it to Lorna. "Shall we stay in Liverpool, get another pound a week, and end our days here? Or shall we throw it all up and go to London?"

"Let's go to London," said Lorna.

As it happened, London came to them in Devonshire where they were spending their honeymoon. Stephenson had turned in his resignation, burned his bridges. Meantime in London, an actor who was playing the provost in "Storm in a Teacup" had asked for his release. The manager had seen Stephenson's performance of the same role in Liverpool. He phoned Liverpool and was put on the trail of Stephenson and his bride.

He rehearsed three days and played six months. The run ended on a Saturday night. On Tuesday morning he got his first screen job with the Warner studios at Teddington. Nine months later he was doing leads. One Sunday afternoon Irving Asher asked the Stephensons to tea to meet Jack Warner. They left with a contract—a rather unusual one. Stephenson was to go to Hollywood for a test. Why the test couldn't have been made in England he didn't inquire and doesn't to this day know. "An actor who yearns to get to Hollywood, as ninety per cent of us do, skips lightly over the whys and wherefores."

He departed alone. "That way, I felt my return would be less conspicuous if I had to come home with my tail between my legs." His option was taken up, and Lorna joined him.

From the first they loved California. "Especially the people," says Stephenson, and his voice warms. "I mean the people on the street—the market clerk, the fellow who delivers the milk, the newsboy. They're friendly, they take you for granted as an equal, and it's nice. There are no class distinctions as in England, though, thank heaven, they're breaking down over there now too."

They have both hungered to return to England for the visit which has now been made impossible. Like all Britishers, with families at home, their spirits are haunted. Stephenson's chief anxiety is for his brothers. His parents and Lorna's people live in comparative safety. The planes zoom over them, but have thus far dropped no bombs. One brother is an army major, stationed at Portsmouth. The other is Alan Stephenson, one-time organist of Coventry Cathedral. You may have seen his picture, snapped by United Press, as he stood with King George and the provost among the cathedral ruins.

Stephenson was frantic when the first news of Coventry flashed over the radio. The cathedral shattered, he knew that his brother's home had been shattered with it. He didn't dare cable his parents, knowing the effect a telegraph boy at the door would have on his mother. So he cabled a friend of his brother's in Coventry. As luck would have it, Alan was with his friend when the message arrived, and sent back word that he and his wife were safe. Home and job were gone, though. Jimmy wants to get them into this country. There should be room here for a musician of Alan Stephenson's eminence—Bachelor of Music of the University of Oxford, Fellow of the Royal College of Organists, honorary member of the Royal College of Music.

A HAPPIER event was the arrival last May of Peter, the Stephensons' first born. Peter's male parent astounded himself. He'd taken the news of a coming baby, if not with detachment, at least with a vast calm. "It's all right, I suppose," he told his outraged wife, "but you'll have to look after it." Never having been overfond of other people's children, he saw no reason why he should be of his own.

His complacence was shattered by the infant's first wail, "which gave me the biggest thrill of my life," he admits with a kind of abashed awe. Every morning at six he keeps a date with his son. "I grin at him, and he grins back without a word." Lorna gloats over his downfall.

"What did you call that child?" she demanded one morning. "Not Coojy-woojy!"

"And what's wrong with Coojy-woojy?" he retorted, unblushing.

They live quietly in a rented house near the ocean. The garden is Lorna's province, the cars are Jimmy's. He likes to take them apart, so he can put them together again. He beats her at tennis, and she takes the hide off him at badminton. At night they read or play cribbage or go over his lines together. When they do go out, it's to dinner and a movie.

No dancing. No nightclubs. They prefer to be at home where they can tune in to London at seven thirty.

Bit parts and B pictures have faded like magic from the scene. "The Letter" was the beginning and Stephenson's off at last—at work with Geraldine Fitzgerald in a big bright beautiful A, called for the moment "Flight from Destiny." Except for a man named Hitler, who has given us all something to be sorry about, the world would look mighty good to Coojy-woojy's handsome father.

TWO YEARS WITH A PSYCHIATRIST . . .

(Continued from page 29)

about one of these things that you forget your obsession. It works, believe me.

"One very amusing bit of advice was given me. Whenever I had to interview or be interviewed by some person of overpowering importance and felt too submerged to assert myself, I was to think how that person would look naked. You'd be amazed how the visualization of the little, naked, defenseless human animal divests the most pompous personage of the last vestige of awe.

"He gave me some pointers about little things, too. For instance, I wrote poems and hadn't sold a single, damn one of them. It was getting me down. He told me to use my rejection slips as coasters for drinks! The idea was to make light of whatever was portentous to me. I tried it, and now I can hoot at those elaborately courteous slaps in the face!

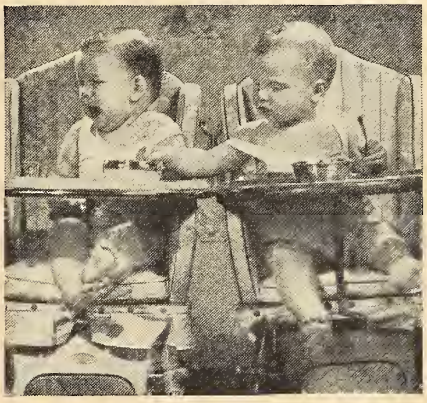
"He also made me laugh, just as one might be made to take breathing exercises. Right in the midst of telling him something dead serious, he would say to me, 'Now, laugh!' He'd keep at me until I'd give a few croaks which sounded so funny I'd begin to laugh naturally.

HE sent me to a ranch with a companion of his own choosing. A gregarious person who couldn't breathe unless surrounded by a couple of dozen people, preferably noisy ones. The theory was that there is a certain amount of involuntary 'transference' of characteristics between any two people who spend much time together. I'll say this: I believe my ability to get along as well as I do in the studios is largely due to that experience on the ranch.

"After giving me these 'prescriptions,' he proceeded to walk back through the years of my life, opening all my carefully closed little doors and cupboards and exposing whatever he found there.

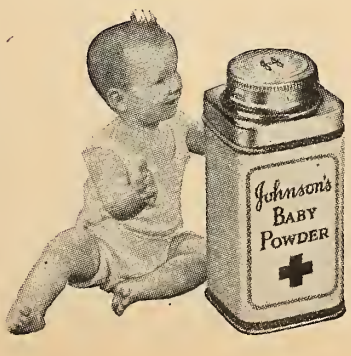
"He discovered that I was a very unhappy youngster and that in my childhood were the seeds of all my trouble. I adored my mother and it was from that mother-complex that all the phobias sprang.

"When I was four, my mother divorced my father. I had been placed in a convent during the breaking up of our home and for a short time just after mother remarried. That was the beginning.



"When I reached home and found a stranger in my father's place, I knew, subconsciously, that my security was endangered. A stranger had come into my world, and I was frightened. Which makes it easy to trace why, now, I try to arrange it so that no stranger can enter my home.

"Analysis made it evident that although I had begun life with a passionate desire for intimate relationships, early



Was he a glump! Cried if you looked at him. Acted like our sissy little spaniel was a starving mountain lion.

Total loss at meals, too. Sneering at the cook, complaining about the service . . . I almost conked him with my spoon.

By bath-time I'd decided—one more peep and George was a drowned cousin. Imagine my surprise when he broke out in smiles. "Ah!" says he, clutching my Johnson's Baby Powder. "Downy-soft Johnson's—just what I've been needing! Conditions around this house are not so bad as I thought."

Give your baby the comfort that keeps so many babies happy—Johnson's Baby Powder! It doesn't cost much but it's lovely and smooth . . . and, my! how it helps relieve chafes and prickles!

JOHNSON'S BABY POWDER

Johnson & Johnson, New Brunswick, N. J.

LET YOUR Lipstick HELP PROTECT "CLOSE-UP" DAINTINESS

USE

Priscilla Parker

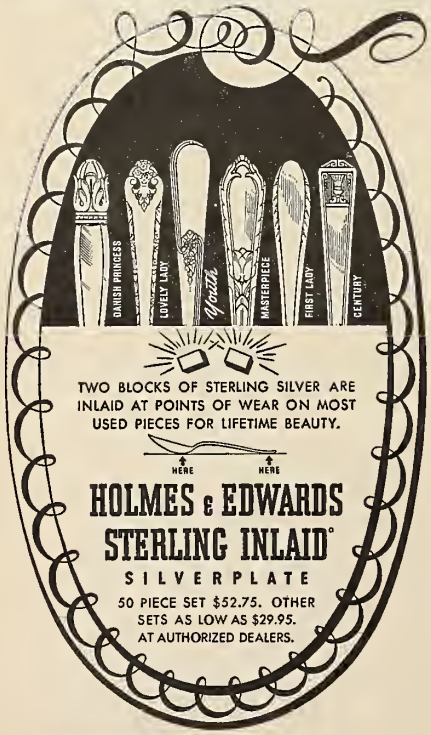
BREATH CORRECTING LIPSTICK

and enjoy this new, easy way to neutralize offensive breath, also breath odors that may result from cocktails, cigarettes, or highly seasoned foods.

A perfectly splendid lipstick for regular use — actually a Dual Purpose lipstick. Four delightful shades—vivid and lovely. Contains effective, yet harmless, ingredients which neutralize unpleasant breath as you naturally moisten your lips.

DeLuxe styles, 50c and $1.00. Available in 20c size at your favorite dime store.

Parker Bouldin Co., St. Paul



NEW COSMETIC BRACELET

Gift Boxed

Complete with Lipstick, Rouge, Powder, 3 Puffs, 2 Mirrors, all cleverly hidden within the bracelet! A flick of your finger transforms this unique bracelet into your complete make-up kit! Ultra smart! Exquisitely designed. Neutral cosmetics. 12 gay colors with gold metal bands. $1.50 postpaid complete with refills. 9 extra refills 50c. Guaranteed.

House of Gifts, Box 2008-N7, Miami Beach, Fla.

TWO BLOCKS OF STERLING SILVER ARE INLAID AT POINTS OF WEAR ON MOST USED PIECES FOR LIFETIME BEAUTY.

HERE HERE

HOLMES & EDWARDS STERLING INLAID®

SILVERPLATE

50 PIECE SET $52.75. OTHER SETS AS LOW AS $29.95. AT AUTHORIZED DEALERS.

Copyright 1941, International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Div., Meriden, Conn. In Canada, The T. Eaton Co., Ltd. ®Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

experiences convinced me that those we love, we lose. Consequently I developed an over-reaction against close friendships.

"The psychiatrist made a great deal of my attachment for my mother. He asked me more questions about her than about myself. He learned that mother was very beautiful. She was also a terrifically violent person. Everything was splendid one minute; the next minute she would throw a chair at me. She was marvelously exciting, but completely unpredictable and altogether undependable. For example, we would do without a maid to economize, then at the end of the week mother would come home with three new hats! You couldn't blame her; you could only love her. She had magnificent hair. There was a ritual every Saturday morning when she shampooed it. If I had been good, I was allowed to brush it for her. The wild, white horse of Walla Walla couldn't have dragged me out to play on Saturday mornings!

"I was told that my lisp came from a too-violent desire to match my mother's fiery eloquence. Failing that, I compensated by lisping.

"I was unhappy at school. The children never paid any attention to me. I behaved as though they were all babies and I, alone, adult and superior. No wonder they loathed me. Mother would constantly ask little girls to our house in an effort to give me some companionship of my own age. And the minute Mother was out of the room, they would say to me, 'We wouldn't come to your house if it wasn't for your mother. We don't like you!'

"When I was eleven, I found out that my mother was going to have a baby. She grew preoccupied, too busy for me, and I was so horribly jealous, I ran away to my aunt's home in San Francisco. While I was there I suddenly had the desire to join the Group Theatre!

"Now wanting to be an actress was 'running away,' too. Or, as psychiatric jargon has it, 'escape.' In my own world, as myself, I felt wretched, colorless, a nonentity. As an actress, I saw myself as an infinite variety of fascinating women. As fascinating as mother.

EVEN when I was brought back from Auntie's, having joined the Group Theatre, I continued my work there every day. Mother would drive me to school in Burlingame each morning. I'd say, 'Mother, dear, one of the girls will drive me home.' And I would then take my lunch money and depart for San Francisco. This went on for months. When mother finally found out about it, she was very reasonable and let me stay on with the Group.

"I understood the people there, and they liked me. I was a child and they were adults, but we were doing a common work so that I was accepted as one of them. My first play was 'The Awakening of Spring.' I played the role of Winifred. That was in 1930, and I was eleven. I did many other plays, including Steinbeck's 'Of Mice and Men,' in which I was May. It was the best period of my life.

"Then I grew up and, at the University of California I met the boys—Garth and Donnen Jeffers. I met Donnen first. We fell in love. Then I met Garth and fell in love with him, too. The boys have not the slightest resemblance, one to the other. Donnen is frail, the spiritual type. Garth is huge and strong and vigorous. I went around with both of them. I left the Group and entered the University, partly for the Little Theatre there, but mostly to be with the boys. I'd go to the movies with Donnen, come back and find Garth waiting to have a coke with me.

"I bought a tiny house in Monterey (paid for it on time, an infinitesimal sum a month) so I could be near Carmel where, in the stone house he built with his own hands, Robinson Jeffers lives, with Una, his fabulous wife, and the boys. A strange life they lived, there on that stern, dramatic coast, with its black stunted pines and cruel seas. The boys had never known any other young people. They spoke, and still speak, a language of their own.

IT was a strange romance. I find it indescribable. I could not make up my mind between them. There wasn't any choice possible to me. I could not love Donnen without Garth, nor Garth without Donnen. That was the mystery and the tragedy. They are a great deal alike, but not like in what they want of a woman. So that I began, then, to be one woman for Donnen, another for Garth. My personality was split then, analysis proved. But that was all it proved about the boys and me. Not even a psychiatrist could rationalize that romance which concerned, not a man and a woman, but two men and many women. I could find no help for what happened to me there.

"It was a good-bad time. We had fun, great fun. But we knew fear, too, because eventually we knew it had to end.

"I have never found another friend or another love. There has never been anyone who knew me as the boys knew me. I have had violent crushes, yes. But none with that special quality which cannot come again. And when I do meet someone I might like, he doesn't like me, because I either try too hard or go too far away.

"No psychiatrist could explain what there was between the boys and me, but I was made to understand what it did to me, that mystical, strange thing. I learned that it gave me a fear of love and emphasized my phobia about personal privacy because, once again, when I let myself love, I was mortally hurt.

"I left the University after the boys and I parted. I sold my house in Monterey and went back to the Group, did another play and a radio show. One day I came to the theatre and found a letter from Sam Goldwyn, asking me to come to Hollywood. When I saw him, I said I wasn't interested in a contract and wouldn't make a test. They offered me a contract without a test, and in the end I signed as an escape from loneliness.

"My lisp had come back. I went to a woman here in Hollywood who taught diction but was, more than all else, a practical psychologist. The first day she said to me, 'There is no reason for you to lisp. You don't, really.' She never, thereafter, mentioned the lisp. She taught me French, phonetically, then Spanish, and gave me the feeling I was merely there to study languages with her. My mind was on the languages, not the lisp.

"She put a light elastic band around my tummy, with a cord attached to it which she held in her hand. Then she had me recite Shakespearean Sonnets, while she kept pulling on the cord. Whenever I started to lisp, I thought of the cord. Even now, whenever I have the slightest tendency to lapse into the old way of speaking, I can feel the pull of that cord, and it not only cures me instantly but also give me perfect posture and a 'lift' as well.

"She also taught me," laughed Virginia, gaily now, "not to want to get rid of all my 'differences.' She pointed out how dreary it would be if none of us had faults. She made me realize that, just as a child puts away paper dolls as he grows older, so we must put away the notions and fantasies of our childhood. We do not spend our adult lives mooning over a remembered toothache; we must not spend our adult lives mooning over a remembered heartache. And so," said Virginia, "I don't!" She added, amused, "I must be cured! I've never talked so long about myself to anyone in all my life."

We walked back to the set of "Tall, Dark and Handsome" (Cesar Romero) together. "I'm really much better than I was," Virginia was saying. "I'm happy enough now. I like my work. I know a couple of boys with whom I have fun, in my own peculiar way. I'm even planning to go to Ciro's, just once, if I can ever get myself assembled! And when I'm alone, as I mostly am, I have friends right within myself. I can sit at home for hours and never be bored. I don't know that I really believe in psychoanalysis; most of us are pretty well able to analyze ourselves when we mature. But it was an interesting experience. It did clarify things for me. Perhaps some other people may find it interesting, too."

"WHY I'VE FALLEN IN LOVE ONLY ONCE"

(Continued from page 30)

and the California Collegians got the job. And "Roberta" needed some pretty girls who could pass for mannequins in a fashionable dress shop—and Powers' models got the call.

Since Fred has never been known to look at another girl in private life, and seems like the shy type, there are people who wonder if Lillian was the first and only girl he ever dared to approach.

"No-o," says Fred, self-consciously, dissipating any illusion that he is, or ever has been, woman-shy. "There wasn't anything serious before Lillie, but I had gone out with girls. Quite a few of them. I was no hermit."

He doesn't think it was love at first sight with either Lillian or himself. "Though she looked pretty good to me the first time I ever saw her," he admits —which is Fred's way of saying that he thought she was just about the most beautiful girl on earth.

It took a little experimenting to find out that they were made for each other. But it didn't take long.

"I walked home with her after the show one night and found out where she lived. The next Sunday, I went for a walk and somehow I found myself walking along her street, dropping in to see her, and asking her if she wouldn't like to go out to dinner and a movie. The next Sunday, I again suggested dinner, but she asked me if I wouldn't prefer a home-cooked meal."

But Lillian didn't reach Fred's heart via his stomach!

"She served something she called chicken stew. It was canned chicken, canned vegetables and water—with no salt. I said it was delicious." Fred grins. "It's a laugh, the lies you'll tell to make an impression.

"After I got to know her a little better, I taught her something about cooking. I knew more about it than she did. When I was a kid, my mother worked. I'd come home after school and get dinner started. I can't cook anything fancy. But I'm a whiz at the very simple stuff."

PAULETTE GODDARD
Starring in "POT OF GOLD"
a James Roosevelt production for United Artists release

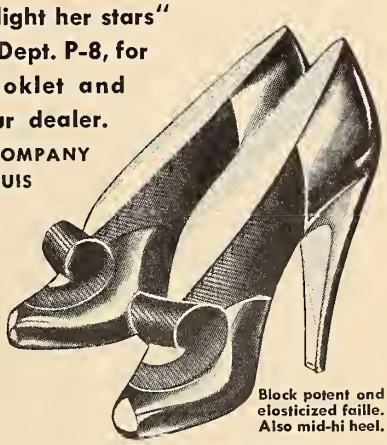
Brown or Black gabardine or Black patent.



Black elasticized gabardine with patent.

Casual in Brown, Black or Blue and White Calf.

Drama! Excitement! Glamour! Magic of Hollywood! Here are the shoes that have captured it all! A "premiere" of the latest fashion picture! "Technicolor" by Spring! "Style effects" by the daring, young designers of PARIS FASHION SHOES. Finely-made, perfect-fitting, audacious little shoes that invite "adventure to light her stars" for you. Write Dept. P-8, for your style booklet and name of your dealer.

WOHL SHOE COMPANY
SAINT LOUIS

$3 TO $4

Black patent and elasticized faille. Also mid-hi heel.

Paris Fashion SHOES
FIFTH AVENUE STYLES

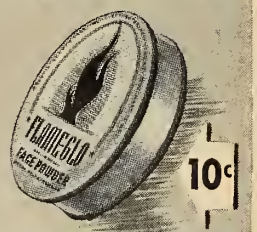
FREE!
LEARN HOLLYWOOD'S SMARTEST DANCE STEPS AT HOME—
The Congo—The Rumba. Send for free illustrated booklet today. Address Dept. P-8, Wohl Shoe Co., St. Louis, Mo.

GUARANTEED AS ADVERTISED IN GOOD HOUSEKEEPING

FLAME-GLO ...America's Favorite Lipstick

EVE ARDEN
featured in
"That Uncertain Feeling"

10¢ AND 25¢



New MATCHED MAKE-UP

Just out! FLAME-GLO Face Powder will instantly give you new complexion loveliness, for it's scientifically blended to cling for many hours longer! No more continual dabbing...this amazing new powder keeps its lasting smoothness and fragrance. In skin flattering tones that harmonize with the lipstick and rouge!

Keeps YOU Kissable!

FLAME-GLO Lipstick sets your lips aflame with a radiant, seductive glow of youth that Keeps you Kissable! No man can resist its satiny lustre, its bewitching fragrance, its captivating colors...specially created to blend perfectly with the new fashion tones! And here's good news . . . a water-repellent film seals the thrilling, vibrant color to your lips; it's longer lasting! Try these popular FLAME-GLO shades TODAY:

ROCKET RED, RASPBERRY, GLAMOUR RED AND ROYAL WINE

10¢

ALSO ROUGE TO MATCH

Flame-Glo
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

AT ALL 5 & 10¢ STORES

Fred wonders if maybe he didn't win Lillian by the way he could cook.

"I know I interested her in a lot of dishes that she had never been interested in before. Tomatoes, for example. They didn't appeal to her. I talked her into eating them a couple of times, and she did just to please me, and after that she liked them. She got the idea that tomatoes, and a lot of other things she had never even tasted before were good for her. And that may have helped her get the idea that I was good for her."

He got the idea that she was good for him by noticing that when he was with her he felt more alive and happier than he had ever felt with anyone else.

He doesn't know when they realized it was love. "It just sort of grew on us—until neither of us could imagine anybody else being so companionable." He adds, reflectively, "I guess that's when liking turns into love, isn't it?"

Wanting to be together the rest of their lives, they wanted to marry. But there was one obstacle in their way. Fred was earning just enough to support his mother, himself and a couple of relatives who didn't have anybody else to provide for them.

Millions of guys who can't afford to get married don't think twice about going ahead—and letting their wives work to help pay the bills. But Fred thought twice, because his own father hadn't been able to pay the bills; his mother had had to work. He remembered what her life had been like. He remembered what his own life had been like, growing up in that atmosphere. He didn't want to let the girl he loved, or any possible offspring of his, in for that kind of thing. Before he married he wanted to be sure he could support a wife and family.

That was how he happened to give a thought to Hollywood again. Hollywood was one place where a guy could earn big money in a hurry—if he could get the right break.

Having been there once before, Fred knew better than to head West without being invited out by a studio.

The way the press-agents tell it, a talent scout saw him, realized his potentialities and offered him a contract. It makes a better story that way, but the truth is that Fred called himself to that talent scout's attention and pestered the man into giving him a test—which resulted in a contract. A beginner's contract. He wouldn't have been that aggressive if he hadn't been desperately in love with Lillian, desperate to marry her.

WHILE he was about it, he made the talent scout conscious of Lillian. He had hopes that she could get a contract, too. But even if she couldn't, she was going to come out to Hollywood on her own and get a job modeling. They planned that in advance. They weren't going to be separated by three thousand miles, even for six months. (His contract was good for only six months unless Paramount picked up his option.)

Nothing came of Fred's contract, the first three months except dramatic lessons and more dramatic lessons. And nothing ever came of Lillian's test. (Fred still shakes his head about that—how she didn't get a contract, when he did.) But she gave up her job with the Powers agency to come to Hollywood and got a job modeling at Howard Grier's and later at Magnin's, to be near Fred. She proved that she had confidence that he would make good, if Paramount ever gave him anything to do. That helped.

"Particularly when they told me, after I had been working in 'The Gilded Lily' two weeks, that they thought they were going to have to replace me," Fred says. "When they let me start the third week, I tried twice as hard—with Lillie right there to say, 'You can do it.'"

When everybody else in Hollywood doubted his ability, Lillian didn't. That's one very good reason why he loves her.

After "The Gilded Lily" came out, and everybody told him that he was "a natural," he wasn't impressed with his popularity. He didn't have any urge to capitalize on it and move in Important Circles. Lillian's company was plenty good enough for him.

When Paramount announced happily that their brand-new star was a bachelor, he was deluged with invitations from high quarters. Fred tells about a call from one Hollywood social queen.

"She wanted me to attend a big week-end party. She told me the party would not be a success unless I came. I asked brightly, 'Would it be all right if I brought my fiancée?' There was blank silence for a moment at the other end of the wire. Then she said, 'Oh—uh—we wanted just one more man.' Which let me out. I said I had an engagement on Sunday with my fiancée."

Conversations like that helped to keep Fred from having success-itis. And helped to keep him in love with Lillian.

"Also," he adds, "don't forget that we hadn't decided we were in love after knowing each other about three days. It wasn't one of those things. We had planned marriage for a long time and it meant a lot to us. When you work a long time to have something, it can't help meaning a lot to you."

Even after he clicked in "The Gilded Lily," Fred worked two years more before he asked Lillian to marry him. It took a while for his salary to go up after he clicked. Before he rated a raise, Paramount had to find out if he had clicked by accident—or if people were going to keep on liking him on the screen. And even long after Paramount decided he was going to last a while, Fred still wondered. He wanted an emergency reserve on hand, so that he could be sure Lillian would never have to work again, even if something happened to keep him from working. And he wanted a home that he would be sure he could keep, no matter what happened.

But it still baffles Hollywood how he kept his mind on that goal, and on Lillian, with all the temptations Hollywood was capable of offering.

"What temptations?" asks Fred.

Well, for example, the temptation to fall in love with a beautiful leading lady while pretending to do so.

Fred grins an amused grin, shaking his head. "I guess people don't realize how difficult it is, sometimes, to act like you're in love in front of cameras. For example:

"I had to do a love scene one time with a girl, in which we walked along a park path, talking, and finally stopped at a certain spot and embraced. The camera followed alongside. And walking at just the right pace to stay in focus with the camera every second wasn't easy. It was so tough, in fact, that the director stationed a prop man on the camera dolly with a long stick—to whack me on the shin and let me know when I was going too fast or too slow. And I was supposed to pretend I wasn't thinking of a thing except taking the girl in my arms."

He laughs in reminiscence. And another memory provokes another laugh.

"We were sitting on a park bench. I had my arm on the back of the bench. When you put your arm up on a bench like that, it naturally hunches up your coat in a big bulge. But that would never do in a movie. It isn't glamorous. So the director stationed a prop man on the ground behind the bench, out of sight, to hold my coat down. There I was, telling a girl I loved her, with a guy hanging onto my coat!"

But some of his feminine co-stars have been so glamorous, it's difficult for all kinds of men, the world over, to imagine being around them without succumbing.

"Have you ever met Lillian?" he asks.

No, we've never had that pleasure. But what does she have that the other girls don't have?

"Well, some girls have one thing, and other girls have something else, but as far as I'm concerned, she has everything.

"She isn't a career girl. She likes a home, and everything a home stands for. She has a nice, even disposition; she isn't temperamental or self-centered. She isn't always looking at herself in mirrors. She has a sense of humor. She's intelligent about a variety of things. She's a good sport—lets me go on fishing trips for the simple reason that she thinks they're good for me—and not, as I've read somewhere, because I let her wear Lilly Daché hats.

"She has always wanted children. So far, we haven't been lucky enough to have any of our own. But we've adopted one—which was her idea.

"She was ill for a long time, if you remember." A far-off look comes in Fred's eyes. "She very nearly died. If she had had less of what it takes, she never would have pulled through.

"I guess the chief reason why I've fallen in love only once," he concludes, "is that I know when I'm happy."

That's Hollywood's thought for today.

Appropriate that Mary Brodel, who's a "strawberry blonde," should get her first big break in the film of that name!

Pledge

(Choose your enamel shade by the color on the cap)

New...the tube is the brush!

Now Just "Squeeze" and your nails are glamorous

• Quick as lipstick . . . perfect nails every day, lovely nails for every date! Try this new easy-squeezy way. The tube does everything, in a flash! Goodbye to bottles. PLEDGE polish can't spill or dry up. PLEDGE tubes give a firmer grip . . . you do an artist's job with an artist's brush. See how easy it is, even for your left hand!

Tubes are easier to carry, too . . . take no space in your desk. No more worrying about a chip . . . just whip out your PLEDGE and repair it! Choose from 15 thrilling new colors. At leading variety chain store cosmetics counters.

LIQUID NAIL ENAMEL
Almost applies itself . . . from new brush-tube.

POLISH REMOVER
Felt-tip tube does the job . . . no cotton necessary.

CUTICLE SOFTENER
Flows from tube into small NYLON brush-tip.

NAIL CREAM
Felt-tipped tube, cleverly shaped to massage the nails.

20¢ a tube

COPYRIGHT 1941,
THE OHIO COSMETICS CO. • FREMONT, OHIO • NEW YORK

New Powder For Brunettes

Gives You That Alluring Look

Dine, Dance Ride —Yes Kiss IT STAYS ON

Irene Colman
One of Hollywood's Loveliest Actresses Uses Tayton's

A new ravishing shade of face powder for brunettes, called EGYPTIAN has just been produced by the famous Hollywood House of TAYTON'S, which gives brunettes the most alluring, kiss tempting make-up you have ever seen. Hollywood calls it glamour—Sex appeal. This new shade is a knockout for brunettes! Gives your skin a soft, smooth, inviting warmth with a heart quickening under-tone glow that daringly excites romance. Movie queens use it! Thousands praise it! TAYTON'S special silk-sifting process makes it so exquisitely fine it goes on like the down on a flower petal, without that powdery, flaky look. And a wonderful new improvement makes it cling many hours. Dine, Dance, Ride—yes Kiss, and it stays on. Formerly in dollar sizes only, now in 10c and 25c guest sizes at your dime store. Get this glamorous new TAYTON'S EGYPTIAN shade for brunettes (or ROSE RACHEL for blondes) today. Also 5 other new shades. If your store is out ask the manager to order, or send 25c to TAYTON'S, Hollywood, California, stating whether Brunette or Blonde.

Tayton's
Silk-Sifted Powder

FRECKLES? Skin Clear and Exquisitely LOVELY!

DR. C. H. BERRY'S FRECKLE OINTMENT — used for over 40 years. $1.25 and 65c at your druggists! For FREE samples address, KREMOLA, Dept. M-5, 2975 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

HERE IS Easy Convenient FEMININE HYGIENE with a million users in 50 years

A truly wonderful method of feminine hygiene. Pleasant . . . soothing . . . deodorizing . . . convenient and easy to use.

Complete in itself . . . ready to apply. Just a dainty Boro-Pheno-Form, medicated suppository, preferred and used by thousands of women every year. A million users in 50 years.

Ask for Boro-Pheno-Form at any drug store. It comes neatly packed in boxes of 12. Get acquainted now with this popular, convenient way of feminine hygiene.

FREE! Interesting booklet about Feminine Hygiene. Write today.

Dr. Pierre's BORO-PHENO-FORM

DR. PIERRE CHEMICAL CO., DEPT. C-14
162 N. Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.
ASK ANY DRUGGIST ANYWHERE

HOW THEY PROPOSED

(Continued from page 25)

marriage took place in New York.

* * *

Otto Kruger stood on the stage of a New York theatre, pouring out eloquence. He and his fellow-workers were engaged in the famous Actors' Equity strike, and he was imploring them to stick. The flow of language broke for an instant. His audience thought he was pausing for breath. He alone knew that his breath had been taken by the sight of a vision, ushering in the aisles.

Her name was Sue McNanamy.

He took her out to dinner that night and the next and the next, by which time he'd known her a hundred years. "There's only one of you, Sue. Will you marry me?" She said she would. "How soon?" "How long can you wait?" "A week." "All right. A week from today."

Marry in haste and be happy at leisure. That was twenty-two years ago, and they're still in love!

* * *

Everything happened to Dean Jagger at once. He scored a personal hit in the Theatre Guild's "They Shall Not Die"; he met a girl named Antoinette; and ten days later he was signed to a Hollywood contract. Antoinette met him that night after the show, and he steered her through the nearest doorway, which happened to be that of a five-cent coffee joint. While the waiter slopped coffee into their saucers, he babbled, "Come with me to Hollywood, come with me to Paramount, come with me forever." She said she'd like to, but her father was ill, and she had to go home to Boston. She promised to wait. Eight months later Paramount gave him four days off for his wedding in Boston. This was in January. His plane was grounded eight times, and the ceremony postponed three times, but Antoinette waited and went back with him to Hollywood. Not to Paramount forever (it's Twentieth Century-Fox now); it may not even be Hollywood forever. But it's Dean forever.

Roger Pryor had been conducting one of those long-distance courtships with Ann Sothern. He had a band which kept him in motion. She had a movie contract which kept her tied. Occasional radio broadcasts kept them together. On September 24th, 1936, he flew back to Hollywood to go on the air with Ann in "There's Always Juliet." She met him at the airport, and no sooner had he stepped off the plane than he said, "Let's get married." "Let's," said Ann, and drove him to the license bureau. The knot was tied on the 27th.

* * *

When Helen Gahagan was cast in the stellar role of "Tonight or Never," the director asked her to be at the theatre next day to choose a leading man. Among the candidates Miss Gahagan spotted a tall, lean stranger. "Who's that?" she murmured. "Melvyn Douglas." "Never heard of him in my life, but if it's all right with you, Melvyn Douglas is the one I want."

Nor did it take Douglas long to discover that she was the one he wanted. They were still rehearsing and had dashed out for a between-scenes bite. Did the suave Mel Douglas make a speech? He did not. "Let's get married," he said between munches. "Let's," said she. (Apologies, please. If Mr. Douglas could have foreseen this story, he'd doubtless have tried for a more original approach.)

* * *

Maureen O'Sullivan used to go riding with Johnny Farrow in Bel-Air. Their favorite trail branched off just below a hill. They'd lead their horses to the hilltop and dismount to enjoy the view. One day John said: "You make me happier than anyone I've ever known. Let's get married darling." (There it is again, girls.)

"Well, don't be so prosaic about it," said Maureen, before melting. They built their honeymoon house a-top that hill.

There'll be no "Oh, Johnny-ing" for Bonnie Baker in her first picture, "You're the One," 'cause her real-life boyfriend is the lead, and his name's Orrin Tucker!

They met as high school youngsters, dark-eyed young Dominic and Honore with the honey-colored braids. For a couple of years he took her to dances and football games. Then their ways parted. Six years went by; then one September night in Chicago, a friend phoned Don right after he'd finished a broadcast. "Come down to the Edgewater Beach Hotel. There's somebody I want you to meet." Somebody—you guessed it—was Honore! She and Don danced every dance together. Suddenly he grinned down at her. "I'm going to marry you," he said. Was he kidding? She didn't know, so she smiled sweetly, which commits a girl in neither direction.

Next day she returned to Dubuque where she lived. Followed a bombardment by wire, phone and in person. It's a four-hour drive from Dubuque to Chicago, but Don managed it with spectacular frequency. One night he phoned after his broadcast. "Wait up for me. I've got something for you."

She was used to his ways by now. So was her family. They went to bed and left her napping on the living-room couch. She woke up hungry, foraged in the kitchen for a snack, ate it and started washing dishes. It was at this unromantic point that her suitor burst in. Hands still in the dishpan, she gaped at him. His hands, face and shirt front were smeared in black grease. "What on earth—!" "Oh—that! Just a couple of flat tires. Close your eyes, honey, and stick out your paw." He finally got the diamond shoved down over her soapy knuckle—then, grease and all, folded her to his chest.

She became Mrs. Ameche in November, two months after he'd told her she would.

* * *

Alan Curtis never proposed to Ilona Massey in so many words. They've just been inseparable from the moment they met—on a train to Boise, Idaho, for the opening of "Northwest Passage." Curtis hadn't been keen to make the trip. "Who else is going?" "Well, among others, Ilona Massey." "What's she like?" They told him, but he shook his head. "You're laying it on too thick." Now he wonders how they could have been so lukewarm.

They saw each other every day. Every day he told her he loved her. Naturally the question of marriage reared its head. Ilona was afraid of it. They'd both tried it unsuccessfully before. Besides, she'd seen enough of so-called "Hollywood marriage" to make her jittery. If she married again, she must feel it would be for keeps. Day by day he argued against her misgivings. Look how happy they were just being together; how their tastes matched; how, having made a mistake apiece, they weren't likely to repeat it; how many movie people had been happily married for years. It's hard for a girl in love to hang on to misgivings. One evening, five months after they'd met, as he rode his favorite topic, she looked up at him and gave him her hand. That was his proposal, that was her assent.

* * *

All that kept Pat O'Brien from proposing to Eloise Taylor was lack of the wherewithal to keep a wife. They were trudging gloomily up Fifth Avenue one day when he stopped in his tracks. "Gee, we've just got to get married or something." That was all Eloise needed to dispel the vapors. "We've just got to get married or nothing," she retorted, and tucked her hand back under his arm.

Hollywood solved their problem. Pat got the part of Walter Burns in "The Front Page," and he got his girl.

* * *

Rita Hayworth—Cansino before the movies tampered with her name—was reared in the formal Spanish tradition. No casual dates for her. "Oh, but Ed Judson's different," a friend kept assuring her. "He's an older man, and I know you'd like him. We must arrange a foursome soon." The friend, longer on words than deeds, was promoting Rita with Ed at the same time, but never got around to arranging the foursome.

One day Rita was called to the phone. "My name's Edward Judson," said a voice. "I'm a friend of Thus-and-so, etc., etc." "Oh, yes, I know about you." "Well, would it be very improper if I called on you?" "No-o, I guess not. My father and mother are here." He called. He was asked to dine—once, twice, three times. Having served his apprenticeship, he was given permission to take Rita out. They made progress. At last he said, "I want you to marry me. Don't say anything now. I'm going to New York. Think it over quietly while I'm gone, and when I come back, give me my answer."

Judson is back. Judson is calling his girl. "What's the answer, Rita?"

"This," said Rita, "is the day." Which proves that even the old Spanish customs can't shelter a girl from knowing her own mind.

* * *

John Carradine met Ardanelle Cosner at a party five years ago. First, he plied her with questions about herself and her child. Second, he told her what a remarkable fellow he was. Third, he said: "You're going to marry me." "You're crazy," she informed him kindly. "I'm

WHEN THE STARS STEP OUT, PEPSI-COLA IS A FAVORITE

Pepsi-Cola heads the order with those who order the best. Flavorful and fresh, Pepsi-Cola is welcomed by millions all over America. Feel your thirst disappear as that finer flavor hits the spot! Big help to any party—the big home carton of Pepsi-Cola—pick one up today.

IMPISH Beauty

The Appeal of Kissable Lips

Kissable lips, moist, dewy, vividly inviting, soft and tender with promise. That is what every woman would like to have. It is this impish quality of irresistible allure that IMP LIPSTICK imparts. It is a different lipstick, creamy instead of greasy, tinted in half a dozen lush new shades to suit all complexions. You'll like the smooth, even way it goes on, its lasting quality, and the way it stays smooth, without cracking or splitting.

IMP LIPSTICK comes in large sizes (10c), or you can get the IMP LIPSTICK KIT (10c), which has three different shades in a convenient compact case. Get either at your favorite 5 and 10 store. If you can't get it write to us, enclosing 10c, your name, address and shade you prefer according to your complexion. We prepay postage. This lipstick is equal to the highest priced sticks. None is better.

10c

IMP 740 NORTH HUDSON ST. CHICAGO ILL.

Don't Let Surface PIMPLES Get You Down! JUST DO THIS...

Use Poslam, as thousands do, it's a concentrated ointment that starts to work right away, no long waiting for results. Apply Poslam Ointment tonight—wash face with pure Poslam Soap—the price is small—the relief great! All druggists.

FREE: Generous sample—write name and address on penny post card to: Poslam, Dept. M-3, 254 W. 54th St., N.Y.C.

POSLAM SOAP & OINTMENT

Streamline

YOUR MANNERS

Like everything else, styles in manners chonge too. The new edition of MODERN MANNERS will bring you up-to-date—ond up to par. All phoses of everydoy sociol and business life, as well os those speciol de luxe occosions, ore covered thoroughly but simply. The instructions given ore cleor, correct, ond eosy to follow. Here is on eosy short-cut to the modern, unoffected woy of correct conduct. Get your copy todoy.

MODERN MANNERS

NOW ON SALE EVERYWHERE only 10c

stark mad," he agreed, "and you're going to marry me." He plucked her from the party and took her driving. He recited verse to her and after each verse, he said, "You're going to marry me." He dated her every night and kept her out till three or four in the morning. "Will you marry the man," the family finally yelped, "so you can get some sleep?"

"Which is just what I did," says Mrs. Carradine.

* * *

Nunnally Johnson was in New York. Dorris Bowden had been there but was back in Hollywood. She'd been listening to a broadcast of "We, the People," on which Johnson had introduced Jane Darwell. As the broadcast ended, the phone rang. "New York calling." Then the voice of Johnson. "Darling, will you marry me this summer?"

Dorris—(nonplussed as they say in the high-toned novels)—Look, I know this broadcast was a strain, and I know you're tired, but it went over beautifully—

Nunnally—I had a fine time, and I'm not tired, and I don't care how it went over. Will you marry me?

Dorris—Well, we'll think about it. (She hangs up.)

(Five minutes later. The phone rings.)

Nunnally—What do you mean, we'll think about it? If we want to get married, why don't we get married now? Why wait till summer?

Dorris—Look, I'll come back East, and we'll talk it over.

Nunnally—You take the plane back here tomorrow. (He hangs up.)

(Ten minutes later. The phone rings.)

Nunnally—Listen, I've just sent this wire to Zanuck. 'Dorris has consented to become Mrs. Johnson, God help her. See that she leaves on early plane.' Is that okay with you?

Dorris—That's okay with me, dear.

Nunnally—Goodnight, darling. (They both hang up.)

(Thirty minutes later. The phone rings.)

Nunnally—I just wanted to tell you how happy I am.

Dorris—So am I. Well, goodnight, darling.

Nunnally—Goodnight, Mrs. darling.

She took the plane next morning, whether personally trundled thereto by Mr. Zanuck remains unrecorded. They were married at the home of Helen Hayes and Charles MacArthur, that other zany.

* * *

The Lupinos—mother and two daughters—were going to the beach with a young French artist, who was a friend of Louis Hayward's, too. Hayward happened to call him up that same day. "What are you doing this afternoon?" Louis didn't care for the answer. He'd known and disliked Ida as a brat in London. "Oh, well—I'm lonely, I'll go along. Guess I can stand the girl for a few hours." Conditioned thus, he was, of course, rude to her. She was rude right back—till they got on a roller coaster. They plunged; Ida clung to Louis. After that he was rather nice.

They went together for three years. Far from proposing, Louis kept telling her, "I've no intention of marrying. Anyway, not till I can keep my wife in comfort." "That's fine," said Ida. Or, in mellower moments he'd tell her, "When I'm ready to marry, I'll let you know." "Do that," said Ida lightly. "Keep in close touch with me."

They were at the Trocadero one night. He left her to make a phone call and was gone half an hour. "Long distance," he explained on his return.

When she got in that night, her mother said: "The honor of your hand has been sought by Mr. Hayward in marriage."

A moment later, light dawned. "Long distance, huh? And it took you half an hour to say bless you, my children."

Since the thing had been put on a formal basis, she invited him formally to tea next day and plunged most informally to the heart of the matter.

"Did you phone my mother last night?"

"Well—yes—in a way."

"What about?"

"Oh, I sort of thought we might maybe get married."

"That's fine. I've got the house and chintz all picked out."

"Don't rush me," said the man. Then—"How soon could you get two days off for the wedding?" He put his cup down. "How soon could you get right over here?"

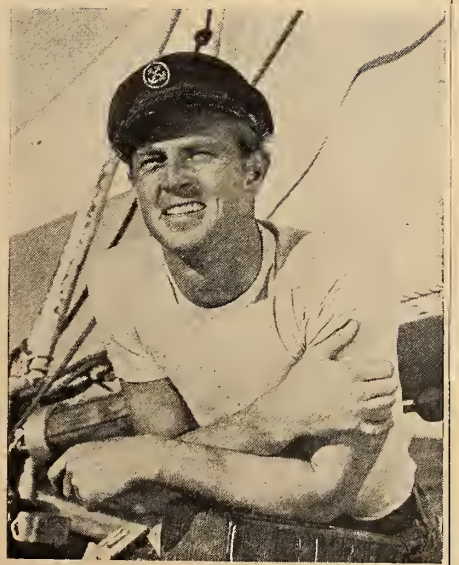
Mrs. Dick Carlson's a boogie-woogie addict—but Dick, who's an ex-professor and a Phi Beta Kappa, sits 'em out if they're not in three-quarter time!

NO GIRL IS HOMELY

(Continued from page 47)

day coiffure and put on half as much make-up. The day Bette Davis took my advice on that point, some years ago, she became exactly twice as attractive!"

Mention of Bette Davis brought to our mind some of the other attractive actresses at Warner Brothers. Since he had said anything could be done with any face, we asked for the proof of the puddin'.



What had he done with whom?

"Well, some women don't need much work. Olivia de Havilland is the best example. She has a perfectly proportioned face, and she prepares it in a feminine fashion. She's fine. But when Ann Sheridan came to me, she didn't know what the word 'oomph' meant. The problem with her was to define her best features and correct her bad ones. One fault was that she had a square jaw. I created a new coiffure for her; drew her hair back from her face and away from her jawline; gave her a center part and a little fluffiness behind the ears. Then I painted shadows with powder on the sides of her jaw, so that when the lights hit it they would be absorbed. You see, she had been making the mistake of using light powder around the chin and cheeks, which accented the squareness of it by reflecting light instead of absorbing it.

"I recall when Alice Faye first came to this town. She wasn't the beauty she is today. She was the average girl with fine features. She had tiny eyebrows. She had a cupid's bow mouth that looked as if someone had suddenly pulled a trombone away from it. She had to be improved. She was. And now look at her!

"Many girls may have one bad thing wrong with their face, or by making one elementary mistake they may make themselves wholly unattractive. For instance, when Brenda Marshall came to the studio, her mouth was turned down and surly, and her hair was too fussy. So I turned her mouth up, with a different lipstick technique, brushed her hair flat and sleek on top, fluffy on the ends, and nobody recognized her!

Shirley Ross just returned from New York. The first day I laid eyes on her I knew there was something wrong.

Stirling Hayden's the tallest man in Hollywood. He's over six feet five!

The 3 ways to Brunette Beauty

MRS. VICTOR DU PONT, III, is a true brunette. She has rich brown hair and hazel eyes and a warm-toned skin. She chooses Pond's Rose Brunette because it matches the warm tones in her skin.

Ask yourself these three simple and telling questions when trying to choose your right shade of powder.

Shall I lighten my skin?
Shall I match it?
Shall I warm it?

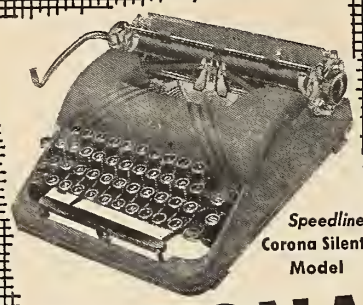
It all comes down to this:

Are you lovelier when your skin looks frail shell-pink against your dark hair? Or when your skin looks ivory-cream to contrast with the dark lights in your eyes? Or when your skin is a warm, rosy tone to dramatize your vivid brunette coloring?

Pond's has 4 superlative brunette shades to provide the effect you choose.

A lovely rose-pink shade with creamy overtones—Rose Dawn. It is light enough to match very fair-skinned brunettes. Slightly darker brunettes by the thousands use it to lighten and brighten their skin.

A rich ivory-cream shade—Brunette-Rachel—all cream and no pink. Countless brunettes use this to match their natural creaminess of tone. Some use it to add warmth to a pale ivory skin. Dark brunettes use it to lighten their skin when they prefer an even beige tone without pink in it. By far our most popular brunette shade.



A deeper, sunnier shade—Rose Brunette—in which there is more rose than cream. Matches most successfully brunette skin with a great deal of warmth. Darker brunettes use it to lighten their skin. The pink in the powder takes the dull yellowy tones out of the skin.

The darkest, rosiest of our shades, Dusk Rose. It brightens muddy tans. It matches a deep, rosy tan. Other brunettes, who dislike growing paler in winter, keep a warm, sunny tan all the year with Dusk Rose.

Pond's Powders give a smooth-as-baby-skin finish to your face and keep away shine for hours. They are faintly perfumed.

Brunettes will find their 4 beautiful shades grouped together on the counter. Blondes will find an equally successful group for them, too.

Free Write to Pond's, Dept. 9MS-PC, Clinton, Conn., and state whether you are a blonde or a brunette—you will receive generous samples FREE.

Speedline Corona Silent Model

CORONA

THE PORTABLE WITH THE OUTSTANDING FEATURES

FLOATING SHIFT—speeds up work, saves your energy. SPEED BOOSTER—gives lightning action. TOUCH SELECTOR—adjust keys to your own touch. ALL AROUND FRAME—Coronas are built to take it.

See your dealer for free home trial.

L C SMITH & CORONA TYPEWRITERS INC Desk 3
151 Almond St., Syracuse, N.Y.
I'm thinking of buying a Corona.
Please send me free illustrated booklet.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____

Women Earn $23 Weekly!

HERE'S YOUR OPPORTUNITY TO

-and in addition get all YOUR OWN DRESSES FREE!

AN amazing opportunity for ambitious women to act as home service representatives and demonstrate latest-styled dresses as worn by prominent movie stars, and sold direct from the factory, many as low as $3.98. You can work full time or spare hours, earn up to $23 a week and besides get your own DRESSES FREE.

WRITE FOR FREE OFFER

You don't have to invest a penny. Just send your name and address, together with age and dress size, for remarkable Free offer.

FASHION FROCKS, INC.
Dept. CC-250, Cincinnati, Ohio

GIVEN AWAY!

GUARANTEED JEWELRY

Solid sterling silver Birthstone Ring; or lovely 13 set sparkling Dinner Ring; or All-Occasion Ring with simulated Ruby and 8 brilliant marcasites; your choice, FOR selling 4 boxes of Rosebud Salve at 25c each. Order 4 salve. Send No Money.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. BOX 34, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND.

Control YOUR HAIR

STA-RITE BOB & HAIR PINS

They Hold Better

Best Bob Pins for Curlers

FREE! Send penny postcard for packet of Sta-Rite Pins: Double-Dipped, Blend-Rite, Ginnie-Lou and Paramount. Instructions for holding hair in place while you sleep included. State color of hair. Sta-Rite Ginnie-Lou, Inc., Dept. 15-C, Shelbyville, Ill.

I knew she could be better looking. I decided, finally, that it was her hair. She has a plumpish face, and she was wearing her hair tight on top and full around her face—which made her face even plumper. I simply turned her hair-do upside down. Bunched her hair on top, with hardly any of it at her cheeks—and wait till you see her!

"I insist—anyone can be attractive even if she's out-and-out ugly. I'll cite you an interesting case. Some years ago, Princess Catherine of Greece paid a visit to Hollywood. She wasn't good looking. In fact, she refused to permit a single photographer to snap her. One afternoon I met her. Everything was wrong with the Princess Catherine's face. It was too big on top. Too small on the bottom. Suddenly she said to me, 'Please make me beautiful!' It was a challenge. I was really on the spot, but here was a chance to prove my theory. I promptly ordered two jars of foundation cream sent in. One was dark and one was light. I smeared her large forehead with the dark cream to absorb light and make it appear smaller. I placed light cream around her jaw to reflect light and enlarge the chin. This gave her face balance. Then I completed the job with powder and rouge, and handed her a mirror. She took one look, gasped and blurted, 'I'm beautiful! I must be photographed immediately! Is there a photographer around?' I said, 'Your Majesty, there are twenty waiting downstairs!'

"And that's how one unattractive woman, through the simple art of careful, ordinary make-up, was made into a stunning creature."

For two solid hours that world-famous beauty authority hammered home more beauty.

"Most women pencil in false eyebrows too high. This tends to make their eyes too narrow. . . . Girls with short noses should have long eyebrows. . . . Women play up instead of playing down their weaknesses by being inexpert. If you have bad or crooked teeth, don't work with make-up around your mouth to offset the teeth. This only draws attention to them. Instead, concentrate on some other good feature. Play that feature up to detract from the teeth. . . . For example, a Berkeley girl came to me. Had horrible skin. But I liked her eyes and mouth. Suggested she concentrate on them, and people would forget her complexion. She did. They did. Everything was fine. . . . You know how I made Ruth Gordon old in 'Dr. Ehrlich?' By making her screw up her face, then painting it and powdering it. Thus, when she relaxed, everything was made up except the wrinkles, which remained naturally dark. This made her appear old. Most women make this mistake and look lousy as a result. A girl goes into her bathroom or bedroom to make up, squints, screws up her face, wrinkles it as she powders and rouges, and it leaves her looking haggard and old. The face should be relaxed when being repaired."

When we were leaving he reminded us for the thousandth time, that no one was beyond the magic of cosmetics. He spoke of a great actress who had come to him two weeks before. A sudden skin infection had left her pock-marked. She was afraid her career was ended. Westmore told her not to worry. He told her to use the stipling process in making-up. Take powders of two colors, and paint them on her face in tiny dark and light dots. This would not only hide her pock marks, but blend with the thousands of little dots on every theatre screen, thereby creating a mellow illusion of beauty.

We didn't have to hear any more from the dark-haired genius, but—

Maybe it would be best to see another beauty expert or two, just to be certain we weren't giving you false cheer. So we trotted out to RKO, climbed some stairs, bumped into Orson Welles, said hello to Maureen O'Hara and entered a small cubicle that resembled a barber shop. This was the abode of a slight man wearing gold-rimmed glasses and a black moustache—Mel Berns.

OF course there is no such thing as a homely face," he assured us, when we'd queried him. "Because beauty isn't determined by the features alone, but by personality as well. In brief, I say a girl is as beautiful and charming and magnetic as her personality.

"Any normal face, assuming there are no extreme deformities, can be eye-appealing if there's mind behind that face. That's my idea, and I'm stuck with it.

"I have seen girl after girl, all with countenances utterly out of proportion, and with what we consider bad features. In some the eyes were bad, in others the mouth wrong. Still, most were beautiful, and their defects were cloaked by a gracious personality.

"There isn't a human on earth who doesn't have some beauty to take hold of, and this beauty can be enhanced until it includes the entire being."

Mel Berns listed several examples of cases where the magic wand of make-up had touched women who had entered the movies just ordinary people, and emerged as gorgeous females destined to be bombarded with mash notes and proposals. He mentioned Katharine Hepburn.

"When Hepburn came to Hollywood she was a sight, with her greenish-blue eyes, wild red hair, with her patched blue overalls and those terrible hob-nailed shoes. I remember when George Cukor, the director, first laid eyes on her. He quivered, and said, 'You need a haircut. You need everything. You're a disgrace. Look at those clothes!' And then he added, 'No well-dressed woman would wear those clothes outside of a bathroom!'

"And believe me, Hepburn wasn't the picture of beauty. But she had courage and personality. She was willing to learn and improve. One of her defects was that she smiled too broadly. Her gums showed. I told her about it, and she would come into this office every day, and for one hour she would stand in front of that mirror and practice smiling—without her upper gums showing. She finally trained her lip muscles so well that today she couldn't smile and show her gums if she wanted to! By such persistence Katharine Hepburn became one of the most attractive women in the film colony. If she could do it, anyone can!"

Berns revealed the case of Anna Neagle. She came to Hollywood from London, a young girl with a prematurely old face. This was a result of serious character roles and special make-up in such films as "Queen Victoria" and "Nurse Edith Cavell." Berns began de-aging her. He changed the contour of her brows. Reshaped her lips. Balanced her features. Made her hair younger. And presto, overnight she was a song-and-dance youngster! The magic of make-up, indeed!

He concluded our chat with the story of Ginger Rogers' transformation. "We did remarkable things with her," he explained. "She was playing brittle, sophisticated roles as a musical comedy star. The studio decided she was ready for straight dramatic parts. So the make-up department got to work on Ginger. They made her softer and more natural as to exterior. For example, her eyebrows had been penciled high in the sophisticated manner. These were erased, and her real brows permitted to grow back. Then for 'Kitty Foyle,' they took off all her make-up and gave her pigtails so that she could play, at one point, a fourteen-year-old!"

The last chap on our list was Twentieth Century-Fox's Guy Pearce. We caught him in his den and laid the big question mark in his lap.

"There isn't a face on earth that's beyond repair," he reported, seating himself on a stool. "Go out to the sticks, find a girl you wouldn't look at twice, put a good, careful make-up job on her—and you have glamour. Why, the devil, we do it every week in Hollywood!

NOW I'll admit some faces are rather difficult. But in countenances with irregular features you'll usually find a compensating factor which might be termed 'character.' In fact, a good share of the big-name women in Hollywood are interesting rather than beautiful. And the words, to me, are almost synonymous.

"The trouble with most girls is that they wish to be perfect. They want their face all level and balanced. Everything similar. Both eyebrows even. Lips just so. Hair line exactly this way or that. Actually, that's unnatural. Every distinctive feature should be retained, even if it lacks balance. Girls should look for attractive individuality instead of mathematical perfection.

"Now take Vivien Leigh. I worked on the first screen test ever shot of her in London. I worked with Alexander Korda on it. After Korda looked at the test, he came to me and said something was crooked on her face. Finally he discovered it was her eyebrows. One was arched and the other straight. 'Why don't you make them both straight?' he wanted to know. I told him I hadn't, and I wouldn't, because the unbalanced brows made her face more interesting. Moreover they were natural. She had a habit of lifting one brow, which arched it. And I wanted it to remain that way. It wasn't perfection—but it gave her a fine impish quality. Finally Korda agreed. And between us, don't you think Vivien Leigh looks all right these days? And those eyebrows are still crooked! Frequently little irregularities like these can be turned into assets."

Pearce wound up our discussion: "Aside from actual deformities, there's not a flaw of face, neck or hands that a girl can't improve—if she is persistent, patient and intelligent!"

And so, here we are, and there you are, in front of your mirror again where we had you at the beginning of the story. And you still don't think you look swell enough to make the lads ignore Hedy or Marlene in the scramble for a gander at you. But now you know there's hope! For they, the royalty of beauty, have told you, and you must believe. But above everything, you must heed this summary of all they've said: Lady, to keep an attractive head—use it!

INFORMATION DESK
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

When nothing must spoil your loveliness are you sure it's Safe to Smile?

the Answer's on the tip of your tongue

1 Make the Tongue-Test...
Run the tip of your tongue over your teeth...inside and out. Feel that filmy coating? That's Materia Alba . . . and it doesn't belong on teeth! It collects stains, makes teeth dull, dingy-looking.

2 Your Tongue Tells You
Your tongue tells you what others see... the filmy coating that dims the natural brilliance of your teeth, your smile. And it's this filmy coating that makes teeth look dull...bars your way to romance.

3 Switch to Pepsodent with Irium

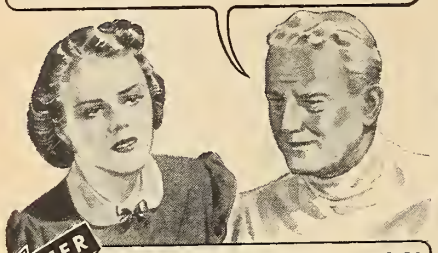
You'll hold the secret of a winning smile when teeth feel bright to you . . . look bright to others

Pepsodent will remove the filmy coating that clings to teeth . . . the coating your tongue can feel, your friends can see. Only Pepsodent contains IRIUM . . . super-cleansing agent that loosens and flushes away sticky particles that cling to teeth.



Use Pepsodent regularly. Because Pepsodent also contains an exclusive, new high-polishing agent that safely buffs teeth to such a shiny smoothness, this filmy coating slides off before it can collect and stain.

Only Pepsodent gives you this wonder-working combination that makes your teeth feel so smooth, look so bright. Make sure of the loveliness of your smile. Get a tube of Pepsodent with IRIUM today.

IRIUM

Pepsodent Tooth Paste

PAZO RELIEVES THE TORTURE OF SIMPLE PILES

LATER I'M SO THANKFUL, PAZO BROUGHT RELIEF FROM PAIN

For relief from the torture of simple Piles, PAZO ointment has been famous for more than thirty years. Here's why: First, PAZO soothes inflamed areas—relieves pain and itching. Second, PAZO lubricates hardened, dried parts—helps prevent cracking and soreness. Third, PAZO tends to reduce swelling and check bleeding. Fourth, it's easy to use. PAZO's perforated Pile Pipe makes application simple, thorough. Your doctor can tell you about PAZO ointment. Get PAZO ointment from your druggist today.

Grove Laboratories, Inc.
Dept. 200-MM-1, St. Louis, Mo.

FREE Offer Limited, MAIL TODAY! (Good only in U. S. A.)

Gentlemen: I want PAZO, FREE! (Mailed in a plain wrapper)

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State .....

GRAY HAIR

Brush it Away and Look 10 Years Younger

● Now, at home, you can quickly and easily tint telltale streaks of gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Used for 28 years by thousands of women (men, too)—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless. No skin test needed, active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch as new gray appears. Easy to prove by tinting a test lock of your hair. 60c at drug or toilet counters on a money-back guarantee. Retain your youthful charm. Get BROWNATONE today.

GIVEN NOTHING TO BUY

Ladies—Lovely Watch about size of a dime. Give away FREE pictures with White CLOVERINE Brand SALVE for chaps, shallow cuts, mild burns. Easily sold to friends at 25c a box (with picture free) and remit per catalog. SPECIAL:—Choice of 35 premiums for sending only $3 collected. 46th year. Be first. Nothing to buy. Write for trial order.

WILSON CHEM. CO., INC., Dept. 10-R, TYRONE, PA.

U. S. GOVERNMENT JOBS!

START $1260 TO $2100 YEAR

Prepare Now for 1941 Examinations. MEN-WOMEN Mail coupon today, sure.

COUPON
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. N257, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush without charge, (1) 32-page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs; (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.
Name .....
Address .....

LOOK TO YOUR LOCKS

(Continued from page 53)

STRINGY . . . It's probably oily and needs some real attention, but if the only man in the world asks you out on a moment's notice, here's how to give it a quick "shot in the arm." Remove excess oil and dust via a brisk brushing—cleaning the brush on a towel after every few strokes. Dampen your hair with one of those godsend-ish hair tonics (there's one that's also a wave set) created especially for oily hair and turn it up on perforated curlers. Leave it up till the last possible second, then comb it gently. A dash of perfume behind your ears, a clip glittering wickedly from your glossy curls—and we bet you'll be playing a few return engagements!

PERMANENTED . . . It should look just as soft and touchable as naturally curly hair, but if you indulged in one of those bargain waves that turned out to be no bargain—don't despair! Choose a really fine shampoo and massage it into the scalp. Then steam your hair by leaning over a basin of very hot water, making a sort of tent with a big bath towel. Steam for fifteen minutes, then complete your shampoo. This treatment restores hair elasticity, so that each hair will stretch to one fifth of its length. Nightly massages with reliable lubricants will complete the reconditioning. Next time, though, avoid that crimped poodle look—get a permanent you can trust!

FINE . . . It's "millionaire's hair" and requires a bit of pampering. Bet you've been shortchanging it on shampoos, because it's so wispy and flyaway afterwards. Here's a happy solution. Wash it with a special oil shampoo and rinse it with cool water. (This has a more subduing effect than a warm rinse.) Work a teaspoon of olive oil gradually into the scalp, and spray the ends of the hair (and never anything but the ends) with brilliantine. This not only lubricates, but actually heals brittle, split hair. Set it with a cream lotion that'll give it body, and use a comb with widely-spaced teeth. (Disown your needle-sharp fine-toothed one; it's a hair and scalp irritant.) When the lotion dries, another pouf of the brilliantine, a whisk of the comb, a pat here and there and—isn't it miraculous?

Starlet Maris Wrixon's all a-glitter in a million-dollar necklace and tiara.

NO DULL DRAB HAIR

when you use this amazing

4 Purpose Rinse

In one, simple, quick operation, LOVALON will do all of these 4 important things for your hair.

1. Gives lustrous highlights.
2. Rinses away shampoo film.
3. Tints the hair as it rinses.
4. Helps keep hair neatly in place.

LOVALON does not dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, in 12 different shades. Try LOVALON.

At stores which sell toilet goods

25¢ for 5 rinses
10¢ for 2 rinses

Kidneys Must Clean Out Acids

Excess acids, poisons and wastes in your blood are removed chiefly by your kidneys. Getting up Nights, Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatism Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes, and feeling worn out, often are caused by non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. Usually in such cases, the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess acids and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. A printed guarantee wrapped around each package of Cystex insures an immediate refund of the full cost unless you are completely satisfied. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose under this positive money back guarantee so get Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c.

Did "Diamond Jim" Have Stomach or Ulcer Pains?

It is hardly likely that Diamond Jim Brady could have eaten so voraciously if he suffered after-eating pains. Sufferers who have to pay the penalty of stomach or ulcer pains, indigestion, gas pains, heartburn, burning sensation, bloat and other conditions caused by excess acid should try a 25c box of Udga Tablets. They must help or money refunded. At drug stores everywhere.

Lemon Juice Recipe Checks Rheumatic Pain Quickly

If you suffer from rheumatic or neuritis pain, try this simple inexpensive home recipe. Get a package of Ru-Ex Compound, a two week's supply, mix it with a quart of water, add the juice of 4 lemons. Often within 48 hours—sometimes overnight—splendid results are obtained. If the pains do not quickly leave you, return the empty package and Ru-Ex will cost you nothing to try. It is sold under an absolute money-back guarantee. Ru-Ex Compound is for sale by druggists everywhere.

BE A NURSE

MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK

You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. 42nd yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Write now.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 233, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name .....
City ..... State ..... Age .....

(Continued from page 18)

The story has to do with Joan, a royal princess in one of those improbable European countries, who is held captive in her own castle by Sanders, a sort of dictator. Hayward manages to free both the country and Joan by making believe he's a sissy in the daytime and doing masked heroics at night. It's the same story (essentially) as "The Mark of Zorro," and "The Scarlet Pimpernel," but who cares? It's the action that counts and there's plenty of it here.

The three top players already mentioned are really excellent and they're supported by a whole slew of better-than-average players, best of whom are, perhaps, Lionel Royce, Montagu Love, Ian MacWolfe, Clayton Moore and George Renavant. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. —Edward Small-United Artists.

★★★ Flight Command

There is some excellent flying footage in this picture—but, unfortunately, there is also a story. And the story spoils the picture, because it is so full of old-time routines.

It's a yarn about the American flying forces of today, gaining a certain amount of topical interest thereby. Robert Taylor is a young and daring flyer who is brought into the Hell Cats, an extra special aerial squadron commanded by Walter Pidgeon. Naturally, the other men resent him a bit until he gets a chance to show his mettle. Pidgeon is married to Ruth Hussey, and her brother (Shepperd Strudwick) is a member of the squadron who is also experimenting on a blind flying gadget on the side. Taylor helps him, and in a final test, Shepperd is killed. This puts Bob on the spot and to further complicate things, Bob and Ruth almost fall in love.

All ends of this are unravelled in a thrilling finale which manages to include everything except the kitchen stove. And maybe that's what is wrong—it's just plain too much, in spite of the fact that there is a good deal of thrilling merit in it.

All the acting is adequate, but none of it is exciting. Taylor is quite all right as the flyer and Pidgeon's acting as the understanding and kindly commander is A-1. But it doesn't seem quite right, somehow, for Bob to be the one who loses the gal (even if she never belonged to him in the first place) to Pidgeon. Ruth is excellent as the wife, but suffers from the fact that her part in the story (the love stuff) is one of the extraneous elements.

Paul Kelly and Shepperd Strudwick are unrestrainedly swell, and there's a new comic named Red Skelton, who reminds you a lot of Bob Hope, and who should go places. Directed by Frank Borzage.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

★★★ Go West

The Marx Brothers are back in a movie, and a very good movie at that. It's funny from the word go; it has a lot of good gags, of both the ear and sight kind. It not only starts off with a hilarious scene, but it keeps building—and the finale is one of the funniest routines in years; it'll probably leave you limp.

The three zanies are out west this time. They're not cowboys, but they're in the cow country, which gives them all sorts of latitude. They manage to get hold of a claim to an important hunk of land which the railroad needs. That gives your villains (Walter Woolf King and Robert Barratt) a chance to try cheating the trio out of the paper. But you know who wins, don't you?

As usual with Marx pictures, there is no attempt to spin a straightforward yarn. The lads simply go wild, going from gag to routine or vice versa. Groucho does all the gabbing, Harpo manages to get in his usual assortment of grand pantomimic routines, and Chico does most of the confusing. Of course Chico also gets in a swell piano solo, and Harpo manages to find a harp to twang for a delightful musical interlude.

The romantic element (such as it is) is in the capable hands of John Carroll and Diana Lewis. Diana is growing up. She's getting picture-wise and, if this film is any indication, you may expect her to get a really important leading lady assignment in the very near future. As for the Carroll lad, he has been climbing rapidly in the past year or so and this is just another okay as-

(Continued on page 89)

Norma Beatty, Mt. Holyoke College '40, Says:

"MEN ADORE THAT MODERN natural LOOK!"

AND IT'S YOURS WITH THIS FACE POWDER YOU CHOOSE BY THE COLOR OF YOUR EYES!

● If you want that gay, vivacious look of "collegiennes"... the exciting, natural allure men adore . . . use Richard Hudnut Marvelous Face Powder . . . the new powder that you choose by the color of your eyes. Modern science, you see, has discovered that eye color is related to the color of your skin . . . your hair.

● That's why you choose Hudnut Marvelous Face Powder by the color of your eyes. It is the sure way to select the powder that best suits your complexion . . . to give you that natural look. So, whether your eyes are blue, brown, gray, or hazel, it's easy now to find the powder most flattering to you. Just ask for Hudnut Marvelous Face Powder . . . the powder that's keyed to the color of your eyes.

● How thrilled you will be when you see the way this pure, fine-textured face powder smooths on . . . clings for hours . . . agrees with even the most sensitive skin. How fresh you'll feel! How lovely you will look! And remember—for perfect color harmony, be sure to use Matching Marvelous Rouge and Lipstick, too.

Hudnut Marvelous Face Powder and harmonizing Rouge and Lipstick at drug and department stores—only 55¢ each. (65¢ in Canada.)

Hudnut MARVELOUS FACE POWDER AND MATCHED MAKEUP

CLIP VALUABLE COUPON NOW

RICHARD HUDNUT, Dept. M, 693 Fifth Ave., New York City

Please send me try-out Makeup Kit containing generous art-metal containers of harmonizing powder, rouge and lipstick. I enclose 10¢ to help cover mailing costs.

Check the color of your eyes! Brown ☐ Blue ☐ Hazel ☐ Gray ☐

Name_____

Street_____ City_____

(Good only in U.S.A., except where legally prohibited.) MM-341

(Continued from page 46)

NAME	FORMERLY MARRIED TO	LENGTH OF MARRIAGE	CHILDREN	HOW MARRIAGE ENDED	PRESENT STATUS
HOPKINS, Miriam	Brandon Peters Austin Parker Anatole Litvak	• About 3 yrs. 8 years 2 years	• None Michael, 11, adapted Nane	• Divorce Divorce Divorce, 1939	• Author John Gunther's trying to get Inside The Heart of Hopkins
HOPPER, Hedda	DeWalf Hopper	• 9 years	• DeWolf, Jr., 26	• Divorce, 1922	• Nixing all proposals
JOLSON, Al	Ruby Keeler	• 11 years	• Al, Jr., 6, adapted	• Divorce, Oct., 1939	• Al's New York's newest Roving Romeo
JUDGE, Arline	Wesley Ruggles Dan Topping	• 5½ years 3 years	• Charles Wesley, 8 Daniel, Jr., 3	• Divorce, Apr., 1937 Divorce, May, 1940	• Resting between phony elopements
LAMARR, Hedy	Fritz Mandl Gene Markey	• Abaut 3 yrs. 1½ years	• None Jimmy, adopted	• Divarce Divorce, 1940	• Keep yaur eye on John Howard
LAMOUR, Dorothy	Herbie Kaye	• 4 years	• None	• Divorce, May, 1939	• Has a case an Legalaver Greg Bautzer
LANDIS, Carole	Irving Wheeler Willis Hunt	• 2 months 2 months	• Nane None	• Divarce, 1932 Divorce, 1940	• Franchot Tone leads all the rest
LANE, Lola	Lew Ayres Alexander Hall	• 2 years 3 years	• None Nane	• Divarce, 1933 Divorce, 1937	• Flash! Surprise marriage ta yacht broker, Henry Clay Dunham
LANE, Priscilla	Oren Haglund	• 1 day	• None	• Annulled, 1940	• Has said "maybe" to a Manhattan mogul
MARSHALL, Brenda	Richard Gaines	• 3 years	• Virginia, 3	• Divorce, June, 1940	• Ever hear of William Holden?
MASSEY, Ilona	Nick Szavazd	• About 4 yrs.	• None	• Divorce, 1935	• Snagged by Alan Curtis
MONTEZ, Maria	Wm. MacFeeters	• 6 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• Girl of the Auer
MORRIS, Wayne	Leonora Schinasi	• 1½ years	• Bert DeWayne, III, I	• Divorce, 1940	• Pat Stewart is helping him farget
MUNSON, Ona	Eddie Buzzell	• 2 years	• None	• Divorce, 1928	• Confirmed bachelor-girl
NAGLE, Anne	Ross Alexander	• 3½ months	• Nane	• Suicide, 1937	• All's quiet
OLIVER, Edna May	D. W. Pratt	• 1 year	• Nane	• Divorce, around 1930	• Happy-ga-lucky
PAGE, Gale	Frederich Tritschler	• 10 years	• Frederich, Jr., 9	• Divorce, Oct., 1939	• Everything's under control
PARKER, Jean	George MacDonald	• 4 years	• None	• Divorce pending	• Doug Dawson holds the reins
PATRICK, Gail	Robert Cobb	• 4 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• Still terribly in love
RAINER, Luise	Clifford Odets	• 3 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• Said to be tating the torch
RAYE, Martha	Buddy Westmore Dave Rose	• 1 yr., 4 mos. 1½ years	• None None	• Divorce, Sept., 1938 Divarce, April, 1940	• It's rumored she's wilting for Rose
RICE, Florence	Sidney Smith Rabert Wilcox	• 11 months 1 yr., 4 mas.	• None Nane	• Divarce, May, 1931 Divorce, July, 1940	• Pianist Dalies Frantz is striking the chord
ROBSON, May	E. H. Gore	• 4 years	• E. H. Gore, Jr., 48	• Died, 1883	• Suppose you were 76!
ROGERS, Ginger	Jack Culpepper Lew Ayres	• 3 years 5 yrs., 4 mos.	• Nane None	• Divorce, 1931 Divorce, Mar., 1940	• Wearing Howard Hughes' ring
SHEARER, Norma	Irving Thalberg	• 8 years	• Irving, Jr., 10; Katherine, 5	• Died, 1936	• It's still Raft
SHELTON, John	Sally Sage	• 3 years	• Nane	• Divorce, 1940	• Too career-minded far love
SHERIDAN, Ann	Edward Norris	• 2 years	• None	• Divorce, Oct., 1938	• Mr. George Brent remains her "one-and-only"
SINGLETON, Penny	Dr. Lawrence Scroggs Singleton	• 3 years	• Dorothy Virginia, 5 (by previous marriage)	• Divorce, Nov., 1939	• Our money's on Producer Bob Sparks
TONE, Franchot	Joan Crawford	• 2 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• Cancentrating an Carole Landis
TURNER, Lana	Artie Shaw	• 7 months	• None	• Divorce, Sept., 1940	• Tony Martin was head man, last time we laoked
VINSON, Helen	Fred Perry	• 5 years	• None	• Divorce, 1940	• May re-string their romance
WELLES, Orson	Virginia Nicholson	• 5 years	• Christopher (girl), 2	• Divorce, Feb., 1940	• Deeply in love with Dolores Del Rio
WRAY, Fay	John Mank Saunders	• 10 years	• Susan Cary, 4	• Divorce, 1938	• Don't ignore Clifford Odets. Fay doesn't
YOUNG, Roland	Marjarie Kummer	• 19 years	• None	• Divorce, Oct., 1940	• A stag at bay

signment for him. He does manage to sing one song, however, and this is good news because he has an elegant singing voice. Incidentally, Diana also manages a song, and there's still another warbling assignment handled neatly by June MacCloy.

People were talking (along that famous whispering grapevine of Hollywood) to the effect that the Marx Brothers were washed up, not so very long ago. Well, this is a picture that'll make 'em shut up, probably for good. Directed by Eddie Buzzell.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

★★★ Trail of the Vigilantes

It's a shame this picture doesn't have a better title. Behind those corny whiskers lurks a grand slice of fun, and there will be plenty of customers who will be scared away, figuring it's just another horse opera. Well, it isn't. The horses are there, and the cowboys are there, high heels, chaps and all—but it's comedy which you won't easily forget.

Franchot Tone is the champ two-gun toter, and Peggy Moran is the looker who makes his manly heart flutter. That's about all there is to the romantic or straight dramatic element, the film actually being keyed to the ludicrous maneuverings of Mischa Auer, Broderick Crawford and Andy Devine. What it is, of course, is a satire on westerns—there is quite a lot of riding and shooting and excitement, but the fun element is uppermost. It's a lampoon in its most elegant terms.

For its basic premise, this super thriller employs the most standard of cowboy picture formulas—the story of a young copper who goes into a tough neighborhood and cleans it up. It's the way this is handled (same story as "Destry Rides Again," but used for more subtle comedy effects) that makes the picture different from its predecessors.

(Continued from page 87)

Franchot as the clean-up guy is better than you think he can possibly be; he has a sense of restrained comedy which is somewhat surprising. The three humorous lads, Crawford, Auer and Devine, are in top form—which is good enough for anybody's movie. Peggy Moran is not only good to look at but shows the effects here of the careful build-up she's been getting; the gal is going places. Warren William and Porter Hall are as tough a combination as you can expect.

Most of the credit belongs to the director, Allan Dwan, who keeps the players acting straight—through comedy scenes—for very effective results. Directed by Allan Dwan.—Universal.

★★★ Little Nellie Kelly

Judy Garland grows up—which is the big news about this one. Metro doesn't bother explaining when she stopped being a little girl; she's a wife and mother here—and she comes through swimmingly, of course. "Little Nellie Kelly" is not the sort of picture that you are likely to write home about, mind you, but it's good, clean fun. In film circles, it is what is known as a family picture—okay for the entire family, including (or especially) mom and pop. And in this classification it is tops.

The story is taken from an old George M. Cohan play which, perhaps, was better in its day. Judy plays a double role. First we see her as an Irish lass being courted by George Murphy; she's a rather quiet, somber young woman, not inclined to smile very often. They marry, come to America, and she dies in childbirth. (Yes, this is still Judy Garland, and a really grand bit of acting that deathbed scene is, too.) Then there's a time lapse, and Judy appears again, as the daughter, fully grown, happy, carefree, almost giddy. Doug McPhail is her boyfriend now, Murphy her pop, and Charlie Winninger his pop. It's pretty sentimental, with a lot of brogue thrown around, but it holds up throughout because of Judy's splendid work.

There's a bit of disappointment in Murphy's assignment here; it's almost a straight dramatic role, and he gets very little chance to be the splendid song and dance man that he is. McPhail hasn't much to do, but Winninger is a sock in a straight comedy role. Directed by Norman Taurog.—Metro-Golwyn-Mayer.

★★★ Comrade X

Clark Gable socks Hedy Lamarr and she pokes him right back, blow for blow. That seems to be the big thing about "Comrade X," plus, of course, the fact that Hedy bows in with a brand new type of characterization. It's a new Hedy, lads, and a honey of a one.

"Comrade X" is a comedy with a lot of laughs, but it's spotty. There are long, tiresome scenes during which nothing much happens, and the funny

(Continued on page 95)

THEY'VE GOT THE IDEA—

CALL FOR PHILIP MORRIS

TRUE SMOKING PLEASURE—WITHOUT SMOKING PENALTIES!

DO YOU INHALE?

All smokers do — some of the time

IT'S easy to understand that when you do inhale — there's increased exposure to irritation! Here's something vital — long known to eminent medical authorities:

4 other leading brands of cigarettes were found to average 235% more irritant than the strikingly contrasted Philip Morris — and further, the irritation was found to last more than five times as long!

So — especially if you inhale — Call for Philip Morris — complete smoking pleasure, unmarred by throat irritation!

America's Finest Cigarette!

"Now I can smile through Dreaded days"

WHY suffer needlessly, when so much of the functional pain of menstruation is known to be unnecessary. Midol has helped millions of women. If you have no organic disorder calling for special medical or surgical treatment, it should help you.

Developed for its special purpose, Midol contains no opiates. One ingredient is prescribed frequently by many doctors. Another, exclusively in Midol, increases the relief by reducing spasmodic pain peculiar to the menstrual process. Small size, 20¢: large size, 12 tablets, 40¢. Write for trial package free. General Drug Company, 170 Varick St., New York, N. Y.

MIDOL

Relieves functional periodic pain

Stay Slim

Lovely women keep fit with MIFFLIN—"the national rubdown." Pleasant odor, no smelly medication: Also in Pine, Lavender, Wintergreen

MIFFLIN
ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL
RUBBING COMPOUND

AT DRUG, DEPARTMENT AND 5 AND 10c STORES

FOR YOUR CLUB!

RINGS $1.50
PINS 30¢

Knit your group closer together, enhance pride of membership. Bastian's big selection, low prices, traditional quality have led the field for 46 years. Write for new Free catalog today.

BASTIAN BROS. Dept. 55, Rochester, N. Y.

WARNING—Don't Cut Cuticle!

Remove It This Safe, Easy Way... Use

TRIMAL

Complete with manicure stick and cotton

NEGLECTED CUTICLE

WELL-MANICURED CUTICLE

WRAP cotton around the end of an orangewood stick. Saturate with Trimal and apply to cuticle. Watch dead cuticle soften. Wipe it away with a towel. You will be amazed at the results. On sale at all cosmetic counters. Trimal Labs., Inc., Los Angeles.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN WAY

(Continued from page 41)

too, and Miss Joan Crawford. I like very much Mr. Henry Fonda. So easy, so simple, so natural, this Henry Fonda.

"The moving pictures, the magazines that tell us about the moving pictures, they help very beeg to bring the good will we hope to accompleesh between Nors' and Sous' America. And the exchange of travellers will help very much, too. Take myself, for example—I have met the Nors' Americans in their homes, now I have work with them in their Hollywood. I like them and maybe they like me, and that is the way to make friends, between people and countries.

THE Sous' American girls copy the movie stars way of dressing and making love and making fun.

"In Brazil, Deanna Durbin is a very beeg name. When there is a new Deanna Durbin picture, all the girls of that age dress just like her in that picture. Rio is then filled with little Sous' American Deanna Durbins in the dresses like she wore, with the hair like she fix hers, even taking the singing lessons so they can sing like her!

"I know now they are smart to do this. Because in Hollywood the girls and women know how to dress. You do not ever see a woman here, or a young girl, you do not want to turn around and look at her, she makes such a picture.

"So, it is good for them to copy. In Brazil, in the Argentine, the rich men send to Schiaparelli and Patou for the gowns for their ladies. For them, it is all right. But the not-so-rich are turning more and more to the movies and the movie magazines for their fashions!"

To interrupt the Miranda, briefly, and asking her Sous' American pardon, quite a few women are turning toward Miranda, too! The heavy scarlet mouth make-up she affects has certainly been picked up by the New York debs and has since cut a crimson swath from coast to coast. The "bahiana" costume she introduced into Nors' America has become a Thing. Lana Turner has one, Kay Francis, Alice Faye, Vera Vague. The costume includes the lavish use of heavily bangled jewelry and turbans, great hunks of gold and great chunks of jewels the size of eggs, barbarous, exciting, dramatic.

Moreover, not even the Royalties of Hollywood can compete with the fabulous splendor which is Miranda's way of life. "She is as rich as hell," a friend of hers told me, sotto voce, "she has the real McCoy in jewels and owns a terrific house overlooking the airport and the harbor of Rio, with a Lido deck, retinues of velvet-footed servants and deep-piled rugs from the Orient. Her collection of perfumes alone is a Queen's ransom!"

"In Hollywood, too," Miranda was saying, "as in Rio, there is much family feeling. When I come here, I bring with me my mother, my sister, my brother-in-law, and we live together in a penthouse at the La Belle Tour apartment house.

"Then I see that others in Hollywood live close to their families, too. I like this. Rio will like this. Tyrone Power has his mother near to him. Alice Faye and her mother and brothers are like one. Don Ameche has his beeg family close by his home on their ranch which he buy for them. The little Lane sisters live with their mama. Claudette Colbert has her mama in her home with her. This is a very nice thing I notice' about Hollywood. It proves more the warm heart of it.

"Hollywood stars are like Rio stars, too, in many of the little ways. Like how they change their name' when they are in the pictures. Alice Faye, who has the real name Alice Leppert. Myrna Loy, who was baptize' Myra Williams. Me, my real name is Mario de Varma da Cunha. I change my name to Carmen Miranda. Miranda is my mama's name when she is a maiden. I am sometime' called 'The Brazilian Bombshell,' too, and 'Potatoes.' Like Mister Clark Gable who is sometime' called 'What-A-Man!'

"When I first come here I ask them what it mean', those words 'Going Hollywood.' I have read it in the magazines, and I do not know its true meaning. They tell me it is 'going Hollywood' when you drive around in a big, rich car, not bowing to anyone, like a proud orchid in its vase. So I come to my studio one day in an old 1937 Ford I have buy, with all my family in it and waving the 'hullo' to every-one I see. They say to me at the studio, 'You have not buy that car!' I say, 'But I have. I do not want to go the Hollywood!'

BUT what is curious, I see no one here doing what they call 'going Hollywood.' The people here, they live on the ranch in the valleys. The big men stars, like Mister Pat O'Brien, they work in their fields and ride their horses and play with their babies and do not go often for the night-life. Even the young senhors who are not married, like Mr. Cesar Romero and Mr. Eddie Albert, they like best to stay at home and have good dinners and play gin-rummy with their friends. It is more domestic than Rio, this Hollywood.

"And when they do go out I am surprise' because they show themselves so open, so generous. They do not make the chi-chi of themselves.

"But that is the only thing I do not agree with Hollywood about. Anyone can see the stars when they are out places. That is not always good. In Sous' America, the women are more mystery. We dress as for a part when we appear anywhere in the public. On the screen everything is perfect, the make-up, the clothes, the lights, the music, everything. But other places, maybe the star is feel' tired, maybe she not look so beautiful as possible, then she is not so interesting.

"Hollywood say 'Pouf!' to Glamour. I have read where the girls do not like to be call' the Glamour Girl. I do not say 'Pouf!' to glamour. I say it is necessary like food and drink. We should wear it thick as velvet and heavy as perfume.

"Everything in Hollywood is so perfect that it is like living a little miracle-a-minute. When I hear my voice play back, it sounds better than when I actually sing. Now, how do they do that?

"That is the question I ask myself every minute of every day in Hollywood. 'Now, how do they do that?'

"When they ask' me to come to Hollywood to make 'Down Argentine Way,' I could not because I have other engagement. So the Studio send' the director and the entire crew of the Technicolor to New York to film my scenes at the Movietone studio. I am surprise' they do not arrive on the Magic Carpet!

"When I am to come at last to Hollywood to make 'The Road To Rio,' I am singing at the Chez Paris in Chicago. I cannot come when they are first ready for me. This is serious because I must record my first song in the English and I do not know the English, as you hear. The song is 'I, Yi, Yi, Yi, I Love You Very Much!' by Mr. Mack Gordon and Mr. Harry Warren. What is to do? The studio has made for me a recording of the song, sing' by someone else in the English. They send it to me in Chicago and they also send a special English instructor, Senhor Z. Yacanelli, who prepare me for my English-speaking début. He now acts for me as the interpreter on the sets.

HOWEVER, Mr. Irving Cummings can tell me very good what he want' me to do without using any words. He say to me, 'Look, I am Miranda!' and he does what he wants Miranda to do. I did not know until I look' at Hollywood how a director is sometime' the actor, too. Everyone in Hollywood knows everything. The actors, too, know about the directing, know about the job of the cameraman and the sound-man, know how to be farmers and how to play the polo . . . some of them even have other businesses at which they make the money. They are marvelous people, the Hollywood stars!

"He is the politician, too, Mr. Irving Cummings. The first scene I make on my first day in the studio, he say to me, 'Beautiful! That is good, that is very good. An actress ten year' in Hollywood could not do that better!' So I feel high up happy and have the confidence. One week later he make that scene over again. It had been very bad, that scene, but he had not tell me so until I got my confidence. I tell him I am so very grateful that my heart, it is doing the rhumba!

"Mr. Don Ameche is the same. He help me with my lines. He use' his eyes at me so I know, without words, what he mean'. In return, I help him learn Portuguese. I teach him the numbers and the months of the year. When you hear him sing the song in Portuguese in the picture, you will hear it sung as never before.

"Si, everyone in Hollywood know' so many things . . . when I go to the preview of the 'Tin Pan Alley,' which is my first Hollywood preview, there are mobs of little children at the door. They ask me, too, for the autographs. I say, 'But you do not know who I am.' They say to me, 'Oh, but yes, you are Miss Miranda from down Argentine way!' Even the little children here are so smart!"

Miranda rose, stretched her lithe gold and jeweled body, stretched out her gem-covered arms. "This is how Sous' America, through the eyes of Miranda, look' at Hollywood," she said. "It is a strange and wonderful place where you open your eyes and say, 'Dios, I have die' and gone to Paradise!' "

*Ilona Massey, star of "New Wine", a Korda Production, and Alan Curtis. Want lovely, soft hands? Then use Jergens Lotion!

Your HANDS can so easily be Charming . . .

THOUSANDS of sought-after girls use Jergens Lotion for delightful, soft hands. Regular use helps prevent embarrassing roughness and chapping; because Jergens furnishes softening moisture for your hand skin. Many doctors apply 2 special ingredients to help rough skin to divine smoothness. Both are in Jergens Lotion. Never sticky! Start now to use Jergens Lotion. 50¢, 25¢, 10¢, $1.00.

JERGENS LOTION

FOR SOFT, ADORABLE HANDS

FREE!..PURSE-SIZE BOTTLE

MAIL THIS COUPON NOW

(Paste on penny postcard, if you wish)

The Andrew Jergens Company, 3721 Alfred Street Cincinnati, Ohio (In Canada: Perth, Ontario)

I want to see how quickly Jergens Lotion helps me have soft hands. Please send my free purse-size bottle.

Name _____

Street _____

City _____ State _____

New 11 Minute Shampoo

Specially Made for Blondes—Helps Keep Light Hair from Darkening—Brightens Faded Blonde Hair

1. Not a liquid! It's a fragrant powder that quickly makes a rich cleansing lather.
2. Instantly removes dingy, dust-laden film that makes blonde hair dark, old looking.
3. Called Blondex, it gives hair attractive lustre and highlights—keeps that "Just Shampooed" look for a whole week.
4. Lightens hair with absolute safety. Fine for children's hair, too. Largest selling blonde hair shampoo in the world.

Get BLONDEX at drug, department or 10c stores.

FOR LOVELY LIPS

IF you want lips that are moist, smooth, sweet and kissable, with the dewy loveliness of a rosebud, try DEWY-SHEEN Lipstick. DEWY-SHEEN comes in exquisite new shades and remains soft and petal-fresh all day. Try DEWY-SHEEN. Only 10 cents at your store or write for it, enclosing 10 cents and name preferred shade. There is no higher quality lipstick at any price.

CLARK-MILLNER CO.
450 W. Superior St., Chicago

10¢

Twin Sisters DEWY-SHEEN LIPSTICK

FREE ENLARGEMENT

Just to get acquainted with new customers, we will beautifully enlarge one snapshot print or negative, photo or picture to 8x10 inches—FREE—if you enclose this ad with 10c for handling and return mailing. Information on hand tinting in natural colors sent immediately. Your original returned with your free enlargement. Send it today.

Geppert Studios, Dept. 763, Des Moines, Iowa

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on Psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing true photographic proof of results also FREE.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Generous trial bottle sent FREE to those who send in their Druggist's name and address. Make our famous "One Spot Test" yourself. Write today for your test bottle. Print name plainly. Results may surprise you. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547 Northwestern Station, Dept. 1709, Detroit, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

"I'D MAKE AN AWFUL HUSBAND"

(Continued from page 27)

I kept staring at her, and finally said, 'Umm, obviously from New York, so fresh looking, so smart looking.' She cracked back, 'Why, Mr. Lynn—how you do carry on!'

"And that's how I met Dana. A sweet girl, really. We have so many small things in common. To give you an idea—we both love Viennese waltzes and have them played for us wherever we go. Well, the younger set doesn't like waltzes much these days, so we usually have the floor to ourselves and have grand times! Dana has a peculiar Elizabeth Bergner gamin quality I adore. And she's good for me. More social and friendly than I am—which helps me, er, win friends and influence producers.

"But marriage, to Dana or anyone? Not now. I'm too serious about acting."

I WONDERED what this young hero—whom we all thought was so New Englandish, and then so suddenly Hollywoodish, and who's in truth, just very serious—I wondered what he expected of the woman he might one day marry.

"The girl I marry," explained Lynn, "must be gayer than I am. By nature, I carry the burdens of the world, my world, on my shoulders, and she must be able to kid them off me. She must be able to share responsibilities and be able to map, in any emergency, a sensible course of action. Now she doesn't have to be beautiful in the accepted sense. It's what lives in the face. That's beauty. Also, the future Mrs. Lynn and I must have mutual interests. For example, I spend one-third of my waking moments participating in games of some sort. She must have this in common with me, or we'd be apart in interests and, as a consequence, lonely. She must like good music. I don't mean that she has to be a lover of opera or an arty person, but when I turn on the radio to listen to Tchaikowsky's Sixth, I don't want her turning it off! Understand?"

Yes, I understood. But there was still one thing I wanted cleared up while on the subject of the female. What about the rumor, quite prevalent, that Mr. Lynn was shy with the limper lilies?

Jeffrey dispelled that concept of himself with a five-minute declamation.

"Some women are born flirts," he insisted. "And I can't stand a woman, mine or someone else's, who is coquettish.

Solution to Puzzle on Page 10

	A	N	N	■	R	A	E	■	G	A	I	L	■	S	P	Y
S	H	O	E	■	A	N	N	A	■	O	R	R	Y	■	H	O	E	R
H	E	R	D	■	I	N	G	R	I	D	■	E	S	T	E	L	L	E
O	R	R	■	O	N	E	■	L	A	D	E	S	■	A	R	I	L	S
O	N	I	O	N	S	■	D	I	N	A	R	■	T	R	I	C	O	T
T	E	S	T	S	■	S	E	N	■	R	I	C	E	■	D	E	W	S
■	■	■	T	E	M	P	L	E	■	D	E	A	N	N	A	■	■	■
S	W	E	A	T	E	R	■	■	■	■	■	■	S	O	U	N	D	E	D
T	H	A	W	■	N	Y	■	■	■	■	■	■	T	N	T	■	I	R	A
R	E	G	A	N	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	S	T	A	R	R
A	R	E	■	E	G	I	■	■	■	■	■	■	A	L	■	A	N	O	N
P	E	R	M	I	A	N	■	■	■	■	■	■	S	E	R	I	A	L	S
■	■	■	A	L	B	E	R	T	■	S	A	T	E	E	N	■	■	■	■
A	G	A	R	■	L	E	A	H	■	A	R	A	■	S	T	U	N	S	■
M	A	R	G	I	E	■	N	E	S	T	S	■	D	I	S	N	E	Y	■
A	L	L	A	N	■	I	T	A	L	Y	■	E	E	N	■	F	E	B	■
S	E	E	R	E	S	S	■	T	Y	R	O	N	E	■	S	A	D	I	■
S	N	E	E	■	T	I	M	E	■	S	L	I	M	■	R	I	L	L	■
■	■	■	A	N	T	■	Y	S	E	R	■	■	A	D	S	■	O	R	E

How To Relieve Distress Of

FEMALE PERIODIC COMPLAINTS

Few women today do not suffer some distress from monthly functional disturbances. Maybe you've noticed YOURSELF getting restless, cross and nervous at such times? Then try famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help quiet unstrung nerves, relieve monthly pain (cramps, backache, headache) and distress from weak, nervous, dizzy spells due to periodic disturbances. Pinkham's Compound has relieved such rundown nervous feelings for thousands of women. WORTH TRYING!

Don't CROWD BABY FEET

The X-Ray shows how outgrown shoes injure baby feet. Better buy the correct but inexpensive WEE WALKERS and get a larger size often. Ask your baby doctor. Sold in the Infants' Department of these low-profit stores.

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. Sears, Roebuck and Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. I. Silver & Bros.
McCrory Stores Schulte-United F. & W. Grand
G. R. Kinney Company

FREE: Baby foot measuring scale in pamphlet on fitting. Moran ShoeCo., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKER Shoes FOR wee WALKERS

CONSTIPATION

NEEDS ATTENTION IN YOUNG AND OLD

Even "temporary" constipation is nothing to trifle with. Why delay when Stuart's Laxative Compound helps bring such quick welcome relief without bad after-effects? Stuart's is wonderful for all ages—really works safely for adults, yet gentle enough for children. Dosage can be reduced as it helps "regularize." To feel bright, keep bowels right. Try Stuart's Laxative Compound right away for its safe, gentle results. At all drug stores 25c and 60c under maker's money-back guarantee.

High School at Home

Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Equivalent to resident school work—prepares for entrance to college. Standard H. S. texts supplied. Diplomas awarded. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. Free Bulletin on request.
American School, Dept. H-314, Drexel at 58th, Chicago

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

I'm not prudish enough to object if my lady-friend wishes to indulge in a little harmless eye-banter. But, when I'm with a girl on a date, I want her to remember she is with me and not to go on the eye for every other male within flirting distance.

"I admit I'm a retiring person. Sure. So I don't care to have other women make a play for me. I'm not interested in that sort of nonsense. As a result, I avoid such women—and immediately they think I'm afraid of them. Which I'm not in the least!

"And as for being bashful about kissing girls before the camera—no, not at all. You've got me wrong. I think it's fun, although sometimes hard work. My only trouble in osculating professionally is my lack of direction. That is, I never quite know how intense or restrained I must be. I'm always kissing Pat Lane or Ann Sheridan with the Will Hays office in the back of my mind. I always pray the director will tell me when to give all I have or to hold back. But directors rarely do. And so I'm confused.

"I don't know. I suppose it would be better if I overplayed and became more aggressive. Friends tell me I'd be a big hit if I became more of a sex menace before the camera. You know, devoured heroines from behind sex-laden lids. But that's not natural with me, and I prefer to remain myself."

Lynn remarked, in passing, that there was one instance where he didn't hold himself back on a screen kiss. It was during the occasion of a test for "Gone With The Wind." Paulette Goddard was testing for Scarlett and Jeffrey Lynn was testing for Ashley. Before the camera began rolling, Director George Cukor said, "Now, you two, give this scene, this kiss, everything you've got, but everything!"

Pasternak's discovery, Dorothy Darrell, in her first film "Who's Wacky Now."

They began kissing.

"I still remember it," reflected Lynn. "No one would have called me shy if they could have seen that one. Know why? I knew just what to do, because the director had told me how far I could go and, furthermore, I was relaxed. It was a dirt set, outdoors, and being close to the soil—it may sound silly—relaxed me."

Jeffrey Lynn's wistful reference to the soil intrigued me. It didn't sound silly a bit. It was fascinating. I prodded him with a few more questions. Finally, he pushed aside his food, put his elbows on the table, his chin in cupped hands, and spoke dreamily:

"The soil? What I mean by saying it relaxes me? God, that's a tough one to discuss. You can be ridiculed for talk like this in Hollywood. But I remember once when I was out on location for a Western picture. I was sitting alone on the sand and brush, sort of kicking pebbles and drawing silly pictures in the sand. It was a day! The sun fresh on me, and the wind cool in my face. And suddenly, I felt a long way from Hollywood. My childhood background came back to me, clearly, and I felt I belonged to the earth, that every rock and every bit of earth around me was familiar and mine, and at once, I was relaxed. That moment, when I came to myself, I knew I was in the perfect mood—and that if a camera were trained on me, I could act with the ease I so admire in Gary Cooper."

Which brought us to the subject of acting itself. I asked Jeffrey Lynn about his career in general. And his reply was something you wouldn't expect of a so-called respectable pilgrim.

First, he said, he thought Gary Cooper,

Love Comes to DEANNA DURBIN

ROMANCE is rife in Deanna Durbin's engagement. Read in SCREEN GUIDE the first story telling all about Vaughn Paul, who gets the girl every movie-goer loves!

SCREEN GUIDE is the large-size PICTURE magazine which is edited right in Hollywood. It tells the truth about movies and strictly-human stars—even if it hurts!

OTHER FEATURES IN THIS ISSUE:

Strip-Teaser Makes Good: See pictures of the strip-tease that startled New York, started Mary Martin to stardom!

A Night with Mickey Rooney: Wake up and live—with Mick!

Honeymoons: Peep through our pages as Bob Preston honeymoons with Kay Feltus, and Lucille Ball with Desi Arnaz!

What "Ziegfeld Girls" Think: About men, morals and money!

COLOR PORTRAITS of Ty Power, Bette Davis, Ida Lupino.

Plus pages of gossip, movie reviews, beauty hints, fashions.

FREE—If you haven't seen SCREEN GUIDE lately, write to Dept. M3 for a sample copy of a recent issue. Address Screen Guide, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Illinois.

SCREEN GUIDE MARCH ISSUE Now on Sale at ALL NEWSSTANDS 10¢

Pertussin "Moist-Throat" Treatment Wins Thousands

● When you have a cough due to a cold, it can be made much worse by parched, dry air in your home and office.

Pertussin fights this dry-air irritation. It helps throat glands to pour out their soothing natural moisture. Then that sticky, tickling phlegm is easily raised—and your cough is relieved!

For over 30 years many physicians have prescribed this most effective remedy—Pertussin! Safe even for babies. Get a bottle at your druggist's today. Thousands rely on soothing, quick-acting Pertussin!

A scientific product based on the therapeutic properties of Thyme.

Girls! MAKE MONEY DRAWING

Commercial Art, Illustrating and Designing are fields in which industry offers increasing opportunities for young women lucky enough to have artistic talent. If you like to sketch and draw, don't waste your rare gift. Train yourself to do the pleasant and profitable work for which nature fitted you. You can do it in your spare time—at home—by studying the same lessons which have enabled our many graduates to earn up to $5000 a year—some even more. Send for Free Book describing opportunities. Give age and occupation.

3991 FEDERAL SCHOOLS, Inc.
Federal Schools Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

Rheumatism Relieve Pain In Few Minutes

To relieve the torturing pain of Neuritis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, or Lumbago in few minutes, get NURITO, the fine formula, used by thousands. No opiates. Does the work quickly — must relieve cruel pain to your satisfaction in a few minutes or your money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for trustworthy NURITO on this guarantee.

CORNS go fast

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads do 3 things for you: Prevent cause of corns — shoe friction and pressure; quickly relieve pain from corns, callouses, bunions, tender spots; speedily, yet gently remove corns, callouses. ECONOMICAL box — 15 Corn Pads and 12 Corn-Removing Medications —costs but a trifle.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads

Jimmy Stewart and Cary Grant were all swell and that in his roles he'd like to be a little of each of them.

Then, he elaborated:

"I think the studio could get more out of me by ceasing, once and for all, to present me as the continually victimized young man. Frankly, I would prefer to be less the victim of the women I play with. After all, understand this, I've been 'a nice, young man' in ten successive roles—and for once, I think it would do me plenty of good to master my leading ladies. Sure, I'd like to bang out of doors leaving her open-mouthed, instead of continuing to shuffle about mooning into her face with mournful eyes.

"Here's what I feel has been wrong. My characterizations have always been steeped high in virtue, with absolutely no faults. Now you know that people in real life aren't that way. A hero doesn't have to be all Frank Merriwell. He has to be human.

"Oddly enough, my roles have stepped out and impressed themselves upon my private life. Since I was a goody-goody on the screen, I sensed that I must remain so off-screen. I felt I must restrict my social activities, since it is part of an actor's job to retain his public appeal.

DURING our bull-session, through the main course, dessert and the mellow pipefuls, I felt one thing about Jeffrey Lynn. And the more he talked, the greater I felt that more than most actors in Hollywood, he knew the why's and wherefore's of his dramatic ability and inability. He had followed the edict of that wise man of Athens, Socrates—"Know thyself." Jeffrey Lynn knew himself. For that reason, he would go far.

"My biggest battle in acting has been to beat down a self-consciousness that stiffens me before others," Lynn pointed out. "It's a bad thing, certainly. Because an actor, above anyone else, must never have the feeling that he's being looked at. When he feels that way, he tries to be self-assured by posturing and posing, and becomes a downright ham.

"The biggest thing that ever happened to me was reading the book, 'An Actor Prepares' by Stanislavski. It gave me my first understanding of realism and naturalness in acting. The author advised me, in essence, to become absorbed by my role, to go out on the stage and shake hands with the furniture.

"My self-consciousness is gradually disappearing. Besides, the movies are easier for a person with my complex than the stage, for on the set, the bright kliegs bathe you in a spot of light, and all mechanical distractions, all other people, are blacked out in the darkness beyond."

Reading the volume, "An Actor Prepares," may have started Jeffrey Lynn on the road to improvement as a thespian, but other small events converted him into what he is today.

"Yes, small things shape your destiny," Lynn admitted. "A war was once started because a king shaved off his beard. A murder was committed because a gust of wind blew a hat off a cliff. And my own destiny was fixed on that afternoon, years ago, during my high school period in Worcester, when I was riding home on the bus and my scoutmaster drew me out on what I intended to be. I said an actor, and he didn't laugh but encouraged me. Except for him, I might this day be a clerk or bookkeeper in some small New England village."

Then there was another small event. After college, Lynn had gone to something called Lisbon, Maine, and taught English in a high school, and practiced his acting by reading Shakespeare aloud

GIVE YOUR LAZY LIVER THIS GENTLE "NUDGE"

Follow Noted Ohio Doctor's Advice To Feel "Tip-Top" In Morning!

If liver bile doesn't flow freely every day into your intestines—constipation with its headaches and that "half-alive" feeling often result. So step up that liver bile and see how much better you should feel! Just try Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for his patients with constipation and sluggish liver bile.

Olive Tablets being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only stimulate bile flow to help digest fatty foods but also help elimination. Get a box TODAY. 15¢, 30¢ and 60¢.

NEW FREE CATALOG

STOVES, HEATERS, FURNACES AT FACTORY PRICES

Send for Free Catalog! 136 Styles and Sizes. Coal-Wood Ranges; Combination Gas-Coal or Oil Ranges; Gas Ranges; Oil Ranges; Gas Coal-Wood Heaters; Oil Heaters; Furnaces. 30 Days Trial. 24 hour shipments. 1,600,000 Satisfied Users. Stoves $5 Down, up to 18 months to pay.

30 Days Trial

EASY TERMS

KALAMAZOO STOVE & FURNACE CO., Mfrs.
405 Rochester Ave., Kalamazoo, Mich.
"A Kalamazoo Direct to You"

STOP Itching GET RELIEF This Fast Way — or Money Back

For quick relief from itching of eczema, pimples, athlete's foot, scales, scabies, rashes and other externally caused skin troubles, use world-famous, cooling, antiseptic, liquid D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes irritation and quickly stops intense itching. 35c trial bottle proves it, or money back. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION.

SEND NO MONEY!

★TRANSPARENT ★ ROOFLESS ★ PARTIAL ★

$6.85 to $35

60 DAYS' TRIAL

We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. FREE! impression material, directions, catalog and information. Write today to U.S. DENTAL CO., Dept. 3-104, Chicago, Ill.

The New 1941 Edition of SCREEN ALBUM
Presents
AUTOGRAPHED
Star Portraits
INSIDE-HOLLYWOOD
Biographies
NOW ON SALE EVERYWHERE ● 10c

Hair OFF Face Lips Chin Arms Legs

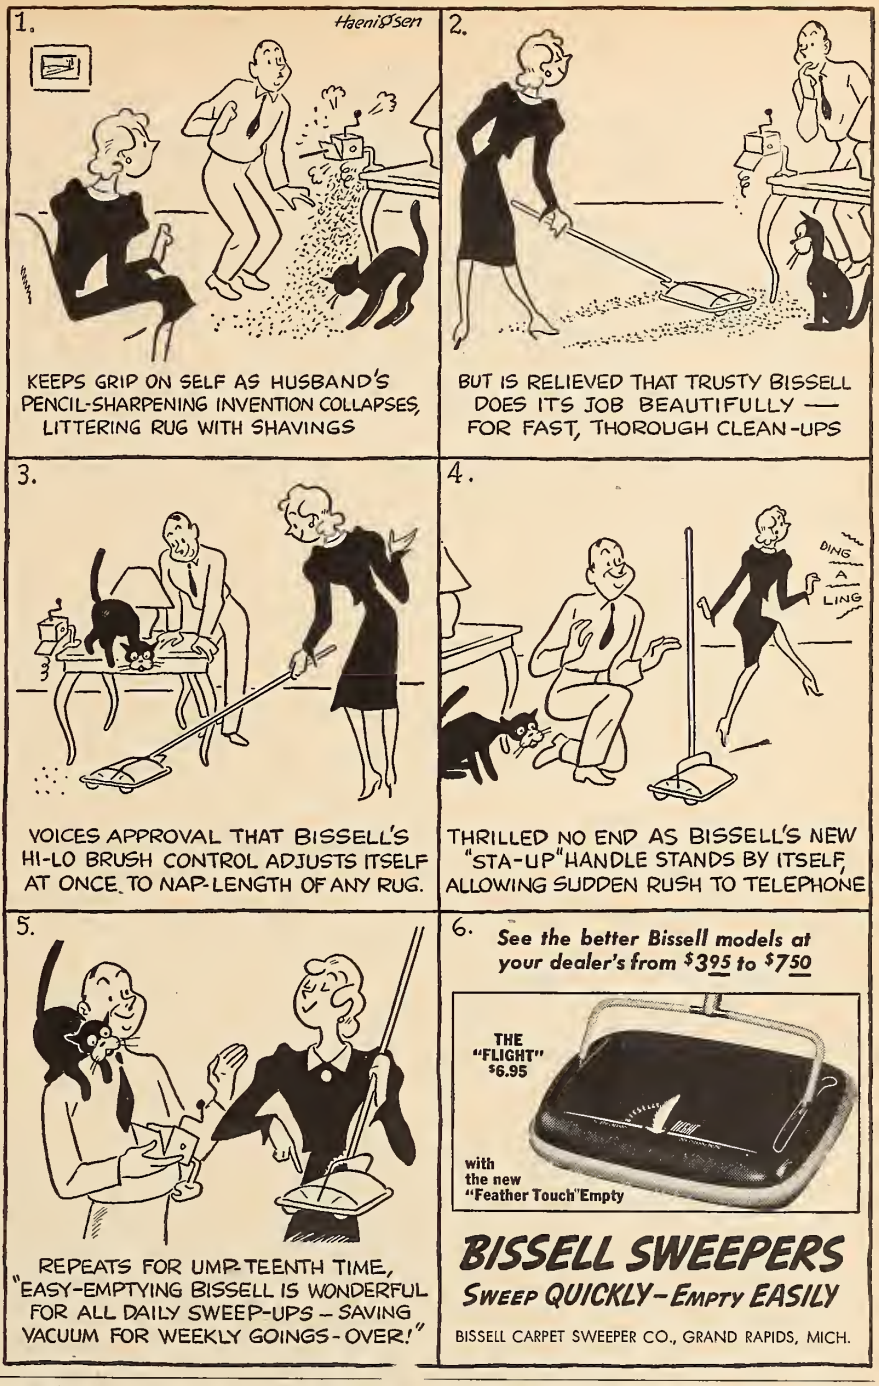
Happy! I had ugly hair . . . was unloved . . . discouraged. Tried many different products . . . even razors. Nothing was satisfactory. Then I developed a simple, painless, inexpensive method. It worked. I have helped thousands win beauty, love, happiness. My FREE book, "How to Overcome the Superfluous Hair Problem", explains the method and proves actual success. Mailed in plain envelope. Also trial offer. No obligation. Write Mme. Annette Lanzette, P. O. Box 4040. Merchandise Mart, Dept. 109, Chicago.

to his class when he could think of nothing to teach them. Later, he had been a doorman at a newsreel theatre and played in traveling stock companies. And then came another of those small events—

George Abbott, the great producer, was holding an open reading for parts, prior to casting "Brother Rat" for Broadway. Among the tyros trying out was Jeffrey Lynn. He stepped on the stage, one of three hundred applicants and, in a weak and faltering voice, read his part. It was terrible, and he started to go. He was five feet from the door—he remembers to this day it was exactly five feet—when a booming voice halted him with, "Hey you!" Lynn wheeled around. It was George Abbott. "Come to my office tomorrow morning at eleven!" And the great man was gone, and Lynn stood trembling as one touched with the St. Vitus.

The following morning, Jeffrey Lynn entered Abbott's office. The producer said, "We're all cast, but I have one small part for forty bucks a week. Want it?"

"Why, y-yes," Lynn gulped.



"And then, for fear that he might change his mind," Lynn told me, "I bolted for the door and ran out. I was crazy with joy. I'd crashed Broadway! It was in this play, in my small part, that Warner's discovered me and brought me to Hollywood in December of 1937."

But Mr. Lynn wasn't through. He had given me a good deal of food for thought, but here was the dessert.

"A short time ago I was sitting in the Brown Derby, eating. A woman approached me. She was a representative of the Theatre Guild, no less. She asked me if I was free to do a play on Broadway. She asked me! And only a brief time before, in New York, I hadn't been able to get past her third under-secretary!

"God, this is a crazy, fantastic world. You've got to keep your head in it. And so I'm going to keep mine—serious."

The pilgrim's progress? Pretty amazing, don't you think?

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 89)

ones (of which there are quite a few) wouldn't make up for it, if it were not for the fact that it's such a delight to feast your eyes on Hedy. That, of course, would make up for almost anything.

The story is laid in Russia, and Clark is an American newspaperman who gets into trouble with the Russian politicos because he has a quaint notion that it is good newspaper technique to send out none of the news that is handed him by the regulation news sources and all of the news that he can dig up on his own. There is such an obvious struggle on the part of the writers here to point scornful fingers at Russia that they forget their jobs—which is to be funny. It isn't the kind of satirical fun that "Ninotchka" was; it's farcical and burlesque—but this latter treatment calls for speed and greater wit than is shown here.

Hedy is a Russian street car conductor, whom Clark tries to kidnap and take back to America. She agrees to go with him in order to educate the American masses. But both of them land in prison first and are just about to be executed, when one of the funniest scenes in the picture—a rip-roaring chase sequence which employs about 50 tanks—is used for a sappy but very happy ending.

Clark is not quite in his element as the Yankee newspaperman; farce is not his forte. But besides the grand work of Hedy there are A-1 performances by Oscar Homolka, Felix Bressart, Sig Rumann, Natasha Lytess (this gal has real possibilities as a comedienne) and Valdimir Sokoloff. Directed by King Vidor.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

★★★ Flight From Destiny

This is a very strange picture, with a good deal of artistic merit, and commendable for its courage in breaking away from usual Hollywood formulas. But somehow it doesn't quite jell. It is a psychological tale of a gent who thinks he can justify murder—a gruesome subject, told too slowly and deliberately for the comfort of most spectators.

Tom Mitchell, whom you know by now as one of Hollywood's top actors, is cast as an old college prof with only a few months of life left. He doesn't know what to do with his time and decides to search for an absolutely awful person (whom the law can't reach) to kill, thereby committing not a sin, but a good deed. He finds such a person in Mona Maris, a wicked wench who is driving Jeffrey Lynn from his wife, work and honor. He commits the murder. And that's where things miscarry—as you will find out on seeing the picture. It's not fair to tell you any more; suffice it to say there is a trick ending.

It's all pretty good, really; handled in a highly effective way so far as both acting and directing are concerned. Also, the photography is way above par. But the writing is pretty much on the surface, nothing subtle about it at all—and the pace of the entire thing is way off.

The acting honors are all Mitchell's, in spite of the fact that there is an exceptionally strong supporting cast, including James Stephenson, Jeff Lynn, Geraldine Fitzgerald and Mona Maris. All of them are A-1 and deserve feature billing, which they get—but Mitchell should have been starred. There's also

No Rough Red "Household Hands" For Me!

NOW I'VE LEARNED THIS EASIER WAY TO KEEP THEM SOFT AND SMOOTH So say thousands of women who use Barrington daily—after performing household, hospital or office duties—and are thrilled with the way this amazing cream helps keep hands soft and smooth. That's because this delicate, fragrant cream is specially made to comfort and relieve rough, red hands. See for yourself how much more quickly than a lotion Barrington Cream will make your hands soft, smooth and white.

Sold in the better 5 and 10c stores; also in drug and department stores. 10c, 25c, 39c.

North American Dye Corporation
Mount Vernon, New York

Barrington HAND CREAM

A NADCO QUALITY PRODUCT

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

WORLD FAMOUS • STANDARD MAKE

TYPEWRITERS

as Low as $29.90

10 DAY TRIAL No Money Down!

EASY TERMS as low as 60¢ a week

YOUR CHOICE—UNDERWOODS! ROYALS! REMINGTON! L. C. SMITHS! WOODSTOCKS! As low as 1/3 mfgrs. orig. price. Typewriters that cost up to $110.00—as low as $29.90. Genuine, standard, full sized rebuilt office models—up-to-date improvements—standard keyboard, back spacer, ribbon reverse, 2 color ribbon, etc. Never before such rock-bottom prices! FULLY GUARANTEED! Backed by 30 years of fair dealing. Ten day trial. Easiest terms in history—as low as 60c a week. FREE big price slashing catalog shows all makes in colors, details on 10 day trial and easiest terms. FREE Van Zandt Touch Typing course with your typewriter. See catalog before you buy. Mail coupon now while stock is complete.

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCHANGE
231 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill. (Dept. 361)
Send Free Catalog in colors showing late model standard Typewriters at tremendous savings with no money down and 10 days' trial.
Name ..... Address .....
Town ..... State .....

a swell piece of acting by Mary Gordon, which should not go unheralded. Directed by Vincent Sherman.—Warner Bros.

★★★ Little Men

Elsie, "the oomph cow," whom you've read and heard so much about, finally makes her appearance in this movie, but don't let anybody kid you into thinking she's the whole works. In fact, Kay Francis milks Elsie, and Jack Oakie milks the script. And between them, plus some expert tomfoolery by George Bancroft, Ann Gillis and Jimmy Lydon, they managed to make this a pretty good movie.

Whenever a classic is brought to the screen, there is always the bother of explaining whether the film is faithful to the original or not. Well, this one most decidedly is not. The producers simply seemed to have said, "Let's make a movie about this subject," read the original novel, threw it away, and started all over again on their own. If the result were bad, they would be entitled to a solid slap on the wrist, but the result is good—so herewith a kiss on both cheeks.

The yarn is a pleasant mixture of Hollywood sentimentality (sometimes called hokum) and Hollywood rowdyism (sometimes called comedy) and the general line is the same as that of the Louisa May Alcott novel. Kay Francis is Jo, the schoolmarm, and very good indeed, with Charles Esmond (a promising young gent) as her husband. Jimmy Lydon is amazingly good as the schoolboy who makes all the trouble, and George Bancroft and Jack Oakie are, of course, the pair of crooks who jam things up.

All the players are good, and Oakie is better; this guy Oakie just keeps mowing 'em down with each new picture. And credit the director for the naturalness of the entire proceedings. Directed by Norman McLeod.—RKO-Radio.

★★½ South of Suez

A few years ago this picture would have been rated a good deal more importantly. There is nothing especially wrong with it; it is well enough put together, and it has all the proper ingredients—the one thing missing is novelty. What keeps it from the top of the pile, in other words, is that it has been seen and done dozens of times before. There's nothing new in it.

This is unfortunate from the standpoint of Johnny Garfield and Brenda Marshall, both of whom try hard. And as a matter of fact, you'll enjoy their performances—if you just let yourself sit back and forget that you've heard this yarn before in so many different versions.

Johnny is an ex-jailbird (is this his seventh or eighth assignment to that particular role?) who wants revenge on a couple of tough lads who "railroaded" him. Brenda is his moll. While Johnny has been a tough mug he has sent his brother, William Lundigan, through college and kept his mother, Marjorie Rambeau, from knowing that he's a bad penny. Young Bill is about to graduate, so Johnny and Brenda come a-calling Brenda has a change of heart, becomes a good girl and switches to honest Bill. Johnny is about to burn up and raise Cain when mama Rambeau takes a hand.

It's all pretty routine, but the acting is above par and there's a lot of good, fast action. Besides the splendid work of Garfield and Miss Marshall, Lundigan is in top form; George Tobias hands in another of his A-1 comedy characterizations, and Douglas Fowley is swell as a gangster. Miss Rambeau works hard but seems to have been miscast; her Italian accent is probably correct as all get-out, but this department's weary old ears just wouldn't accept it. Directed by Alfred E. Green.—Warner's.

★★½ The Mad Doctor

This is one of those psychological things in which you can see the bad boy doing his stuff, and you want to scream and tell the pretty heroine what she's getting herself into. You don't, of course.

Off-the-record warbling with Jack Oakie leads songstress-composer Gertrude Niesen astray. She's supposed to give her voice a rest twixt engagements!

because it's a movie and you know that the good boy will catch the villain and save the heroine in plenty of time. And that's what is wrong with the picture. You know, ahead of time, everything that is going to happen; what should be gripping suspense becomes, instead, polite curiosity.

Basil Rathbone is the fashionable doctor who has designs on Ellen Drew, a rich débutante. Her elder (and dizzy) sister is Vera Vague and, between the doc and Vera, Ellen is walking into a nasty death trap. But Ellen has a good friend named John Howard, a newspaperman who is in love with her, and who uncovers the projected crime in the nick of time.

The director has filled the picture with loads of symbolism and tries to impress you all the way through with "scientific" jargon, but it is overdone and results in the opposite effect.

Rathbone is as villainous as only Rathbone can be. Ellen is beautiful, but this won't help her climb. And it won't help John Howard either, especially since he doesn't look or act like a reporter for a minute. Vera Vague gets some laughs as the screwball rich dame, and Martin Kosleck is very effective in a curious characterization which is never quite explained, but which is intriguing. Directed by Tim Whelan.—Paramount.

★★½ The Bank Dick

The case of W. C. Fields is an interesting one. Movies come and movies go, but Bill hangs on forever. There's nothing especially new about his stuff, and there are some people who don't find his antics very amusing, but those are exceptions. The great majority of audiences love Fields' every gesture. Which would seem to be an unfathomable mystery, until you stop to figure the thing out.

It all adds up to this: He is the personification of the "lovable goof." There's probably a very sweet bozo somewhere near you, wherever you live. He's a drunkard; he's clumsy; he's not much good at holding on to a job; he can't seem to get anything done properly—but there's something about the guy you like. You bawl him out, you want to take hold of him and give him a good shaking—but you wind up lending him your last two bits. You disapprove of him, sure—but your heart and your head simply don't agree on the verdict.

And that, ladies and gentlemen, is W. C. Fields.

The story of "The Bank Dick?" Are you kidding? You know blamed well there isn't any story. The title sheet says there is a screenplay written by Mahatma Kane Jeeves (catch on?) which is the only pun in the picture, and which is a tip-off on the type of story—just a loosely strung bunch of Fields chatter and antics.

By accident, he knocks off a tough bank robber and becomes a hero. As a reward, he's made guardian of the bank and, of course, he gets everybody into trouble. It's the Fields routine that counts, even if it is quite reminiscent.

Remember this—if it reminds you of something you saw or heard before, one will get you ten that you saw or heard it before in an earlier Fields picture, not in an antiquated joke book.

There are other people in this picture, but none of them count. It's Fields all the way. Directed by Eddie Cline.—Universal.

When A Cold Takes Hold it pays to know...

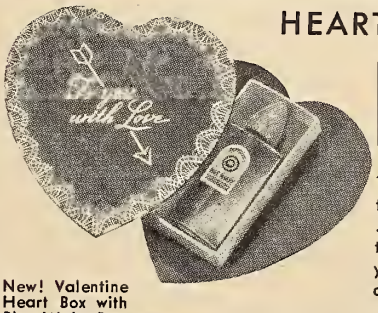
For peace of mind, for more comfort, know what to do when a cold causes spasms of coughing, congestion in the upper bronchial tubes, muscular soreness or tightness. We recommend to you the improved, the home-tested Vicks treatment—a 3-minute "VapoRub" Massage—to relieve miseries.

Increases Stimulating Penetrating-Vapor Action

THIS MORE THOROUGH TREATMENT—perfected by Vicks doctors—increases the important stimulating and penetrating-vapor action of Vicks VapoRub . . . MORE EFFECTIVELY stimulates chest and back surfaces like a warming poultice or plaster . . . MORE EFFECTIVELY penetrates breathing passages with soothing medicinal vapors. And starts right to work bringing relief in a hurry.



Works Faster, Longer

To get all the benefits of a 3-minute "VapoRub" Massage, you just massage VapoRub for three full minutes on the RIB-AREA OF THE BACK as well as on throat and chest. Spread a thick layer on chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

Then watch the results! . . . as this improved Vicks treatment makes VapoRub work faster and longer to relieve distress of colds!

FOR BETTER RESULTS USE VICKS VAPORUB THE IMPROVED DIRECT WAY

Vicks and VapoRub are registered trademarks of Vick Chemical Company

New! Valentine Heart Box with Blue Waltz Perfume & drapper 10c

HEARTS and FLOWERS FOR YOU

Blue Waltz

Tender maad af a spring flawer garden captured in this exquisitely blended fragrance . . . enchanting as a lilting tune . . . pravocative as a dare! Try a tauch af BLUE WALTZ an your throat, yaur wrists, yaur lips. It's as appealing to a man's heart as anything that is gay and young and challenging.

BLUE WALTZ PERFUME 10¢ at all 5 & 10¢ stores

Why Not Be An Expert ACCOUNTANT? You Can!

MORE and more opportunities—that is Accountancy's appeal to ambitious people like YOU! Government, industry, thousands of firms, are needing trained accountants. C. P. A.'s and executive accountants earn $2,000 to $10,000 yearly; new conditions are steadily increasing the demand! LaSalle trains you at home in your spare time; among our alumni are over 10 per cent of the C. P. A.'s in United States. Training prepares you for C. P. A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Staff of C. P. A.'s personally supervises every phase of your training. You do not need previous experience, for we start you from the beginning. Numerous new opportunities now waiting in Governmental and industrial lines warrant your considering this subject carefully! So act now—investigate LaSalle Accountancy training's possibilities without delay.

Write today for free 48-page booklet, "Accountancy, the Profession That Pays"

LASALLE EXTENSION UNIVERSITY • A Correspondence Institution
DEPT. 3318-H CHICAGO, ILL.

Charmingly Feminine...

When you get that urge to go all fragile and delicate with the first whiff of Spring zephyrs, nothing quite fills the bill like little touches of hand-crocheting. It'll make you feel positively romantic and give you that winsome look your young man fancies this time o' year.

If you'll write in for these cinchy directions, we'll give you the good news post haste! And don't wait for the first robin before you send for them!

"Pretty Pretty" is o demure tuck-in blouse with frills froming neck ond sleeves ond running down the front in two rows.

"Bib 'n Tucker" will give your coreer Togs o feminine touch with its smort bib ond interesting stitch thot's ABC to do!

Even if you've never lifted o needle in your life, you con concoct "Dickey" with four-button front ond double revers!

Send in the coupon below with o stomped, self-oddressed envelope. The instructions ore yours obsolutely free.

ANN WILLS, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Kindly send at no cost to me:

Directions for "Bib 'n Tucker".....

Directions for "Pretty Pretty".....

Directions for "Dickey".....

I enclose a stamped, self-addressed (large) envelope.

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State.....

Printed in the U. S. A. by the Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

Eyes Glow with Enchantment

WHEN LASHES ARE DARKENED TO LONG SWEEPING LOVELINESS

Rita Hayworth
Columbia
Motion Picture Star

Bewitching eyes—who can resist their spell? How well Hollywood Beauties realize that eye make-up is all-important . . . that the effect must be soft and lovely . . . and that Maybelline is always flattering — never obvious!

Rita Hayworth subtly accents her exotic brunette charm. She knows that even the duskiest eyelashes fade out lighter at the ends . . . so they need Mascara that goes on divinely and doesn't smudge off. As she darkens her lashes to the very tips, she sweeps them upward with the Mascara brush—to make them look longer, lovelier, more luxuriant. Her expressive brows are tapered gracefully with the famous smooth-marking Eyebrow Pencil. Her eyelids shimmer with a touch of exquisite Eye Shadow.

You can glorify your eyes just as easily this very day with Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids—and be sure you get genuine MAYBELLINE Eye Beauty Aids. At Drug and Department Stores everywhere.

Attractive Purse Sizes at All Ten Cent Counters

Maybelline

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau

WORLD'S LARGEST-SELLING EYE BEAUTY AIDS

OUR OWN PATSY GARRETT out in front with Chesterfields and Fred Waring's Pennsylvanions

Sure an' the Big Parade's to Chesterfield

. . . for Chesterfields are made for smokers like yourself, with the three important things you want in a cigarette . . . MILDNESS. BETTER TASTE and COOLER SMOKING. Chesterfield's right combination of the world's best cigarette tobaccos has so many things a smoker likes . . . that Chesterfield is just naturally called the smoker's cigarette.

They Satisfy

Copyright 1941, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

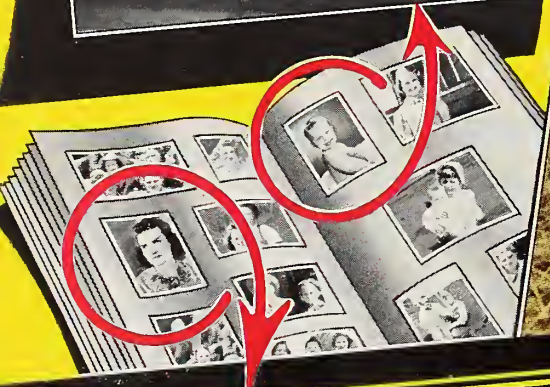
MODERN SCREEN

APRIL
10
CENTS

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
MAR 28 1941
PERIODICAL DIVISION

SCOOP!

CONSCRIPTION HITS HOLLYWOOD!



SELECTIVE SERVICE RATINGS OF 200 STARS

Olivia de Havilland

MODERN SCREEN READERS GIVEN

FREE ENLARGEMENT

Just to Get Acquainted We Will Beautifully Enlarge Your Favorite Snapshot, Photo, Kodak Picture, Print or Negative, to 5x7 Inches Absolutely FREE!

Everyone admires pictures in natural colors because the surroundings and loved ones are so true to life, just the way they looked when the pictures were taken, so we want you to know also about our gorgeous colored enlargements. Think of having that small picture or snapshot of mother, father, sister or brother, children or others near and dear to you enlarged to 5 by 7 inch size so that the details and features you love are more lifelike and natural.

Over one million men and women have sent us their favorite snapshots and pictures for enlarging. Thousands write us how much they also enjoy their remarkably true-to-life, natural colored enlargements we have sent them in handsome black and gold or ivory and gold frames. They tell us that their hand-colored enlargements have living beauty, sparkle and life.

You are now given a wonderful opportunity to receive a beautiful enlargement of your cherished snapshot, photo or kodak picture FREE. Look over your pictures now and send us your favorite snapshot, photo or kodak picture (print or negative) and receive your beautiful free enlargement. Please include the color of hair and eyes for prompt information on a natural, lifelike colored enlargement in handsome free frame to set on the piano, table or dresser. Your original is returned with your enlargement, (10c for return mailing appreciated). This free enlargement offer is our way of getting acquainted and letting you know the quality of our work. Just send the coupon with your favorite snapshot, print or negative right away, as this free enlargement offer is limited. Write DEAN STUDIOS, Dept. 542, 118 No. 15th St., Omaha, Nebr.

SEND COUPON TODAY

Dean Studios, Dept. 542, 118 No. 15th St., Omaha, Nebr.

I accept your free offer and am enclosing picture for my first 5x7 inch enlargement as well as information on a Natural Color Enlargement.

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State .....

Color of Hair .....

Color of Eyes .....

They begged for introductions— but no one took her home!

Yet Ellen could be popular, if she'd remember . . . Mum Every Day Guards Charm!

THE MUSIC was sparkling—the man adorable—the evening started out divinely. Ellen at the start was ringed with admirers, she had the stag line at her beck and call. "Who is this lovely girl?" they asked and begged for introductions. But one by one her partners drifted away—drifted and never came back.

Long before the last strains of the last waltz Ellen went home in tears—alone. One simple, unforgivable fault can ruin a girl's evening—yes, and even romance.

At a dance or in business, on her job or her dates, no girl can afford to risk underarm odor. That's why smart girls play safe with Mum—why they make daily Mum the quick, dependable safeguard of their charm.

A touch of Mum under your arms—after your bath or before you dress—keeps your bath freshness lingering all day or all evening long. Remember your bath only cares for past perspiration but Mum prevents risk of odor to come. And Mum is so gentle, so safe and so sure that more women use it than any other deodorant.

MUM IS QUICK! Just smooth Mum on . . . it takes only 30 seconds and you're through, and you have Mum's lasting protection for hours to come.

MUM IS SAFE! For you and for your clothes. Mum won't irritate even sensitive skins. It won't injure fine fabrics. Mum's gentleness is approved by the Seal of the American Institute of Laundering.

MUM IS SURE! Hours after you've used Mum, underarms are still fresh. Without stopping perspiration, Mum guards against risk of underarm odor all day or all evening long. Get a jar of Mum from your druggist today. Use it every day...always!

• • •

FOR SANITARY NAPKINS—Thousands of women use Mum on Sanitary Napkins because it is so gentle, so dependable . . . a deodorant that helps prevent embarrassment.

CHARM IS SO IMPORTANT . . . NEVER NEGLECT MUM!

MUM TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

MAR 14 1941

©C1B 491459

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

"Daddy, do you remember 'The Ziegfeld Follies'?", said Little Cub, looking up at us with large leonine eyes.

★ ★ ★ ★

And, reaching back into the haunted wings of the New Amsterdam Theatre, we were launched on the bedtime story of those nights of stars provided by the memorable Flo.

★ ★ ★ ★

Soon we worked our way to the chapter wherein M-G-M immortalized "The Great Ziegfeld", and we drifted naturally into the glamour story of 1941:

★ ★ ★ ★

THE ZIEGFELD GIRL

★ ★ ★ ★

For many moons Robert Z. Leonard, the director, and Pandro Berman, the producer, have been studding the stars in a cluster designed to give the Aurora Borealis second billing.

★ ★ ★ ★

As Tony Martin softly sings "You Stepped Out of A Dream", which is Public Melody No. 1, you will step into a dream of glorified girls—of Hedy Lamarr and Lana Turner.

Romance, in a beaming web, is spun around the personal problems of a guy played by James Stewart, the last three letters of whose name typify his work. Give up?

★ ★ ★ ★

And Judy Garland! Words fail us.

★ ★ ★ ★

Lush, plush and splendiferous, this Eyeful Tower gives us a hall of fame for a cast.

★ ★ ★ ★

For in addition to Garland, Stewart, Lamarr, Turner and Martin, there are (to name but a few) Charlie Winninger, Jackie Cooper, Ian Hunter, Edward Everett Horton, Philip Dorn, Felix Bressart, Eve Arden, Rose Hobart, Al Shean, Dan Dailey Jr., Paul Kelly, Mae Busch, Fay Holden, Ed McNamara and Girls, Girls, Girls, Girls.

★ ★ ★ ★

Settings by Gibbons, Gowns by Adrian.

★ ★ ★ ★

*M*agnificent! *G*lamorous! *M*ighty!

★ ★ ★ ★

THE ZIEGFELD GIRL

★ ★ ★ ★

Glorifying the American lion.

—Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

MODERN SCREEN

STORIES

Conscription Hits Hollywood 24
Love vs. Career—Geraldine Fitzgerald 28
Think with Your Heart—Hedy Lamarr 34
Tagging the Hollywood Playboys by Errol Flynn 36
Happy Ending—Mary Martin 38
If It's a Husband You're After—Lupe Velez 42
No. 1 Showman—Gene Autry 78
I, Bette, Take Thee, Arthur—Bette Davis 98

BEAUTY

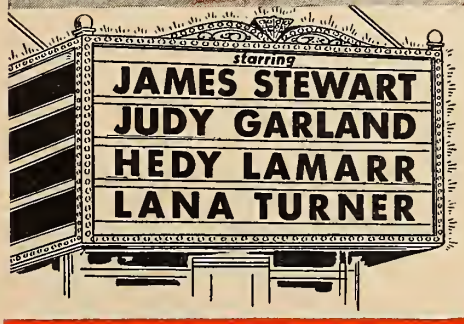
Hollywood Skin Care 47
New Faces for Old 48
Beauty and the Male 50

FEATURES

Information Desk 6
Movie Reviews 8
Our Puzzle Page 10
Modern Hostess 12
Portrait Gallery 19
Candidly Yours 30
On the Set with "Pot O' Gold" 40
Party of the Month 45
Good News 52
Movie Scoreboard 82

FASHIONS

Suit Yourself 56
Carefree Cottons 58

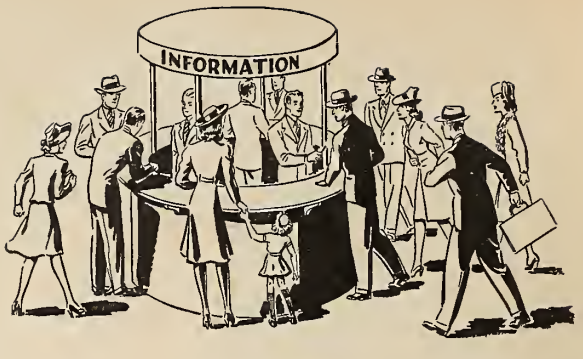


PEARL H. FINLEY, Editor

SYLVIA KAHN, Hollywood Reporter

Cover Girl: Olivia de Havilland, natural color photograph

Vol. 22, No. 5, April, 1941. Copyright, 1941, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single copy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscription price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscription $2.00 a year, foreign subscription $2.20 a year. Entered as second-class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the Postoffice, Dunellen, N. J. under Act of March 3, 1879. Additional second-class entries at Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Calif.; Houston, Texas, Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301773.



METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER presents the picture the world has awaited to follow the never-to-be-forgotten wonders of "The Great Ziegfeld." Bigger in cast, bigger in spectacle, it dramatizes the behind-the-scenes lives of the world's most glorified girls... against a thrilling tapestry of dazzling screen magnificence with scores of song hits, (for instance: "You Stepped Out of A Dream", "Too Beautiful to Last", "Minnie From Trinidad"). Plus ravishing show-beauties and the greatest assemblage of personalities you've ever seen in one giant show!

with TONY MARTIN, CHARLES WINNINGER, JACKIE COOPER, IAN HUNTER, EDWARD EVERETT HORTON, Philip Dorn, Felix Bressart, Eve Arden, Rose Hobart, Al Shean, Dan Dailey, Jr., Paul Kelly, Mae Busch, Fay Holden, Ed McNamara and Girls, Girls, Girls. Directed by ROBERT Z. LEONARD • Produced by PANDRO S. BERMAN

$1,000 IN CASH PRIZES! Artists! Write today "Ziegfeld Girl Art Contest", M-G-M, 1540 B'way, N. Y. C. for details. Contest closes March 17th, 1941

INFORMATION DESK

THE EDITORS PLAY "QUIZ" WITH THE STARS AND HERE ARE SOME OF THE ANSWERS

WE ASKED . . .

. . . that lovable bad man Wally Beery whether he'd ever forgotten to pull any of his brawny movie punches. He grunted assent: "In 'Hell Divers' I was supposed to knock out Gable, so's we could set his busted leg. He leaned a little too far on the punch and took it full force . . . or maybe I leaned. Anyway, Clark was a very sick boy."

. . . luscious Joan Blondell who were moviedom's most sex-appealing girls and boys. She picked Ann Sheridan, "because she's healthy and vital"; Bette Davis, "because she's intelligent"; Dick Powell, "because he's got oomph and doesn't know it"; Clark Gable, "because he brings out the 'brute' in a woman."

. . . versatile John Carradine what type of role he least liked to play. He looked his dourest and confessed, "I hate to be cast as a two-gun man. I'm scared to death of horses, and horses take the same attitude toward me. They like nothing better than to put me on the ground where I belong."

. . . Dottie Lamour whether they take her picture and record her voice at the same time. So she told us the secret: "All of my music is pre-recorded. Then I sing the songs on the set to this music and am photographed simultaneously. This is no more difficult than singing with an orchestra."

. . . Chinese Roland Got whether an Occidental actor could ever be convincingly Chinese. And he paid this very beautiful tribute to a great actor: "Warner Oland was the only man that portrayed a Chinaman so well that even the Chinese could not detect that he was not one of them. His acting, features and carriage were amazingly real."

. . . Porter Hall what his kid thinks about the old man's villainous roles. Porter wouldn't talk, but he finally admitted the ten-year-old once said: "Gee, Dad, why aren't you a star like Mickey Rooney?"

. . . Hugh Herbert who'd given the funniest performances in the last 10 years. Very matter of factly, he said, "Chaplin in 'City Lights,' Roland Young in 'Topper,' Rosalind Russell in 'His Girl Friday.'"

. . . cowboy Bob Livingston what his horse had that the others didn't. Bob gave his horse this send-off, "The fact that he's such a grand clown. The expression 'horse-play' could easily have been derived from watching my horse. Folks don't know it, but a horse has a great sense of humor!"

. . . brute Nat Pendleton whether those muscles of his were really on the level. As we ran for cover, he shouted, "On the level?" Then he gave us the record: World's amateur heavyweight wrestler at the 1920 Olympics. Later world's professional champ. Retired after 223 successive wins.

. . . Andy Clyde to tell us about his most embarrassing tussle with a fan. He blushed—then taking a stiff-upper-lip point of view, said: "A lady with a baby once asked me to autograph her baby's diaper. Shucks, it was another autograph to my credit. So I complied."

. . . cute Willie Fung if the Chinese Government or the Hays office ever took a stand concerning Hollywood's portrayal of Chinese on the screen. According to Willie: "The Chinese Consul at L. A. receives all scripts in which Chinese actors are to appear. This process cut one of my better roles in half. The Consul felt that many of my sequences were unfavorable to China. Come to think of it, the Hays office made significant cuts in 'Lost Horizon.'"

. . . Spencer Tracy to review the roles he'd played and single out the best. And it didn't take him long to put his finger on the Father Flanagan role in "Boys Town."

. . . young John Shelton what was the closest he'd ever come to not being an actor. He confessed: "I probably never would have been an actor if I hadn't been picked up while hitch-hiking by Moroni Olsen, stock company owner. He gave me my first chance."

. . . Mary Howard which of the many happy moments of her career had been the happiest. There didn't seem to be any doubt in her mind: "The Sunday night dinner with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt after my role in 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois!'"

. . . Smiley Burnette what type horse made the best movie actor. And Smiley really surprised us. "Thoroughbred horses, strange as it may sound, are practically useless as cow ponies. You see, they're much too temperamental and very difficult to manage. Most cow ponies are wild horses captured in the West, broken with a hackamore and eventually brought to Hollywood by a talent scout. My own horse, Nellie—she's three-gaited: start, stumble and fall."

(Continued on page 14)

"Like every Bride I wanted a Lovelier Skin— and Camay helped me to have one"

—Says Mrs. James L. Macwithey

Photographs by David Berns

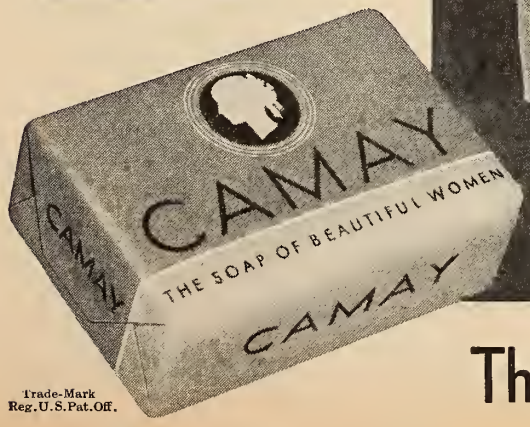
Camay's Greater Mildness is an important help to Every Woman—even to many with Dry and Delicate Skin.

MRS. MACWITHEY is lovely to look at, and doubly delicious because her skin is lovely, too. Her blonde hair and bright brown eyes set off a skin of creamy perfection.

A Soap Gentle Even to Sensitive Skin!

Mrs. Macwithey is keen about Camay's mildness, its soft, creamy lather. "Camay is so mild," she says, "it is just wonderful for delicate skin like mine."

Many women feel that way about Camay, especially if they have a tendency toward a delicate or a dry skin.



For now a great new improvement makes Camay milder than six of the leading large-selling beauty soaps, as our tests prove. Skin specialists we asked say that regular cleansing with a fine, mild toilet soap will help your skin to look lovelier.

Get 3 cakes of this fine mild toilet soap today. Let Camay's gentle cleansing help you in your search for greater skin loveliness.

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Macwithey were married at Christ Episcopal Church in the fashionable town of East Orange, N. J. Mrs. Macwithey in wedding gown of blush pink satin is crowned by a Mary of Scotland cap. Mrs. Macwithey is a Camay bride —and about it she says: "I adore its mildness. Camay is so mild. It is just wonderful for delicate skin like mine. I really feel that my continued use of Camay helps my skin to look smoother and lovelier."

His bride in his arms, Mr. Macwithey finds her blonde hair and creamy skin an exquisite picture. After the reception the bride and groom left for a honeymoon at Sea Island, Georgia, with Camay in her luggage.

Trade-Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

The Soap of Beautiful Women

Movie Reviews

A poignant moment in "Cheers for Miss Bishop"—Martha Scott realizes she's losing her beloved Del (Donald Douglas) to 16-year-old flirt, Mary Anderson.

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP ★★★★

Reach for your handkerchiefs, gals, here comes a sobbie. And in case you gents let that approach keep you away from the picture, you're just plain suckers. It's one of the best of the season, and Martha Scott's characterization is magnificent.

The movie unreels the story of the life of Miss Bishop, a schoolteacher. It tells how she starts out, sweet and lovely, ambitious and full of dreams. How she suffers a bad disappointment in love, but goes bravely on with her work. How students and seasons and school superintendents change, leaving her grayer, sadder, wiser. That's about all. Just a woman's life.

But it's a woman you'll never forget and a life which will haunt you. When you leave the theatre you will feel that you have met and loved a human being. That's how good the writing by Sheridan Bibney is and the direction by Tay Garnett. And that's how terrific Martha Scott's acting is.

There is a long and excellent supporting cast, but no really outstanding players among them. Bill Gargan has the most important male role as Martha's suitor who's faithful to the very end—but whom she doesn't love. It's not Bill's type of role although he works hard at it. Edmund Gwenn comes closest to making a lasting impression with his mellow, sympathetic treatment of the school president. There is an unknown named Rosemary DeCamp who can be a big and important dramatic star if she gets a break; she has only a small bit here. Also, you might watch Lois Ransom who seems to have a lot of what it takes.

This is a case where the technical gentry deserves a bow. The sets and photographic background are unusually interesting; the feeling of the period has been admirably emphasized, giving a feel of verity which is memorable. Directed by Tay Garnett. A Richard A. Rowland Production-United Artists.

Refugees Sullavan and Ford will break your heart as the young lovers in "So Ends Our Night." Looks like a comeback for Anna Sten. She's never been better.

SO ENDS OUR NIGHT ★★★½

"So Ends Our Night" is an attempt to tell honestly and without prejudice or fear, of life as it is lived today in Europe. Naturally, it is not a pretty picture. But it is one you will not want to miss and, having seen it, one you will not easily forget.

The cast is an extra special one with Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan and Frances Dee as stars, and Glenn Ford, Anna Sten and Erich von Stroheim as featured players. The top bracket should certainly be shared by the Ford lad. He walks off with the main acting honors and, if this picture doesn't establish him as a star, there is something decidedly cockeyed somewhere.

The story has to do with the lives of Europe's horde of refugees. Chased out of Germany because of racial or political beliefs, they are kicked from pillar to post, all up and down the musty corridors of Europe. Life goes on. Their hearts and brains don't stop—but officially they have no standing because they have no passports. They are outcasts. March is one for political reasons, while Ford and Miss Sullavan are in this category because they are part Jewish. Their struggle for existence, their frantic groping for a bit of sun, a bit of hope—that is the theme of the film.

Miss Sullavan is at her topnotch best, and young Ford is superb as her young lover. March is earnest but a bit on the heavy side as the cynical man with nothing left to hope or dream for except his wife—who actually is barely a beautiful memory. This role, a short one, is excellently handled by Frances Dee. Von Stroheim and Miss Sten give fine performances, while Joseph Cawthorn and Leonid Kinsky are best among the supporting players.

John Cromwell's direction is sure and unhesitating. William Daniels' photography is topnotch and the musical score by Louis Gruenberg deserves a special nod. Directed by John Cromwell.—Loew-Lewin-United Artists.

by Wolfe Kaufman

"Eve sure knows her apples!"

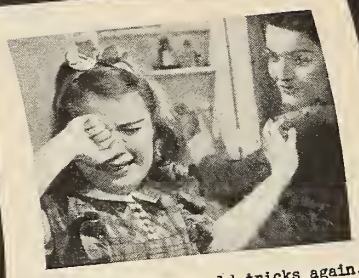
"Girls, the best way to get a man is to get him bothered!"

Paramount Presents

BARBARA STANWYCK · HENRY FONDA

"THE LADY EVE"

Written and Directed by PRESTON STURGES



PRESTON STURGES, Paramount's new writer-director genius, blends thrilling love and roaring laughter to give you the vexiest picture of the year.

with CHARLES COBURN · EUGENE PALLETTE
Martha O'Driscoll · William Demarest · Eric Blore

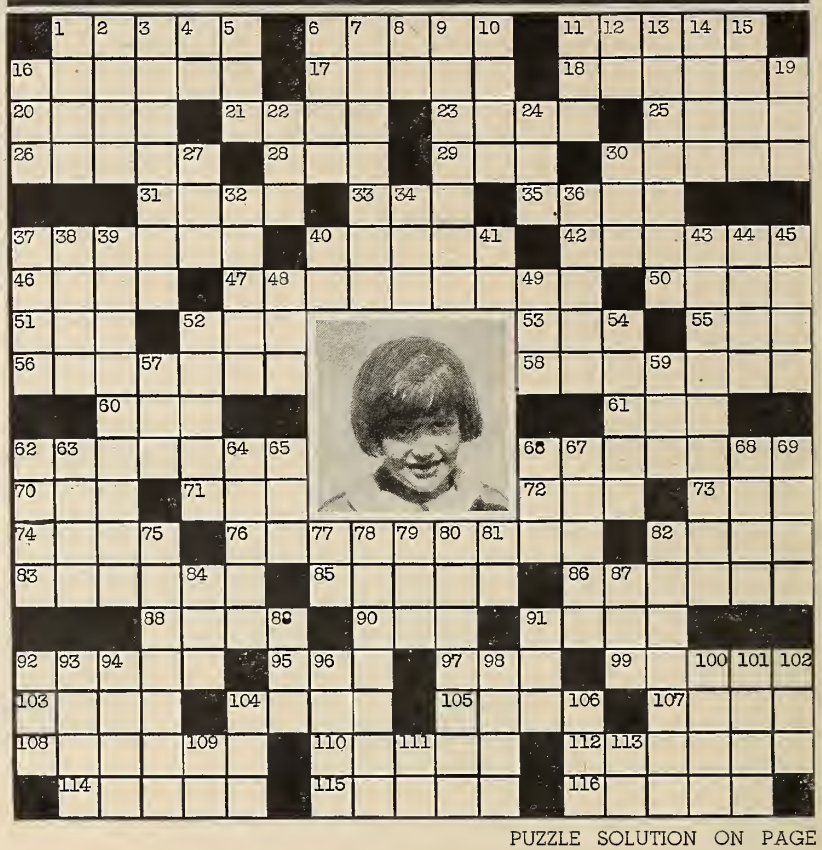
Screen Play Based on a Story by Monckton Hoffe

Ask your Theatre Manager when this Big Paramount Hit is coming — You'll want to see it twice!

Mrs. W---- Solves the Case of Betty

Betty is up to her old tricks again. She needs a laxative badly, but she starts bawling the moment I reach for the bottle.

Cousin Alice suggested Ex-Lax. Gave some to Betty tonight and you should have seen her go for it! Simply loved its chocolate taste.



Betty slept like an angel. Ex-Lax worked fine this morning and it didn't upset her a bit. Thank goodness, I've solved that problem!

The action of Ex-Lax is thorough, yet gentle! No shock. No strain. No weakening after-effects. Just an easy, comfortable bowel movement that brings blessed relief. Try Ex-Lax next time you need a laxative. It's good for every member of the family.

10¢ and 25¢

OUR PUZZLE PAGE

PUZZLE SOLUTION ON PAGE 73

ACROSS

1. Star of "Come Live With Me"
6. She's in "They Met In Argentina"
11. Author in "Footsteps In The Dark"
16. Mrs. in "Mr. And Mrs. Smith"
17. Actors' parts
18. He's still "Box Office Champ"
20. Star of "No, No. Nanette"
21. "The 39 - - - - s" starred Donat
23. Fondles
25. Unit of force
26. Girl's name
28. Writing fluid
29. Lord Shayne in "Bitter Sweet"
30. Linda Darnell's home state
31. Charles Winn - - - - r
33. Electrified atom
35. "The - - - - Man"
37. - - - - - - Duff
40. Beneath
42. Nora Bayes in "Tin Pan Alley"
46. Star of "Rhythm On The River"
47. Great German actor
50. Certain
51. Bride in "Keeping Company"
52. A high priest of Israel
53. 52: Rom. num.
55. Inlet
56. Played the principal role
58. Actor in "The Man I Married"
60. Former "It Girl"
61. Hawaiian garland
62. Forecast
66. Star of "Men of Boys Town"
70. Be ill
71. Negative reply
72. Roman bronze
73. Hail!
74. Inez in "Mark of Zorro"
76. Who is the star pictured?
82. Units
83. Snapping beetle
85. The famous "Judge Hardy"
86. Hell cat of "Flight Command"
88. Paramount gown designer
90. Reverence
91. Actress wife of Charles Laughton
92. Villain in "Mark of Zorro"
95. Jane's b. f. in "Honeymoon For Three"
97. Ginger Rogers' studio
99. Sylvia Sidney's husband
103. Jamison in "Lone Wolf Keeps A Date"
104. West Indian plant
105. - - - - Thayer
107. Shakespearean character
108. A star duck
110. Lukewarm
112. Given to using common but unauthorized words
114. Jacqueline - - - - -
115. Book of charts
116. Pains

DOWN

1. Star of "Golden Hoofs"
2. Errol Flynn's dog
3. Wailing
4. Olaf in "Gallant Sons"
5. "Woman Cha - - - Man"
6. Ex-hubby of our star
7. Mrs. Carter in "Lady With Red Hair"
8. Jimmy and Harry Ritz's brother
9. One who is discontented
10. On the deep
11. The "Four Daught - - -" series
12. "Angels Over B - - adway"
13. What Mickey and Minnie are
14. Variety of chalcedony
15. River in Siberia
16. Where Hollywood is: abbr.
19. "- - -, My Darling Daughter"
22. Bind
24. High explosive
27. Conjunction
30. United Ar - - - ts Studios
32. Star of "Comrade X"
34. Poem
36. The "One In a Million" star
37. Arabian garments
38. Coin
39. Suzanne Charpentier's reel name
40. Personal pronoun
41. He's in "I Wanted Wings": init.
43. Jon Hall's first film
44. City in Pennsylvania
45. Bring up
48. Help
49. Entire
52. Stack's pal in "Little Bit Of Heaven"
54. Wastes time
57. Scientist in "Monster And The Girl"
59. Evening: poet.
62. Our star's sis in 11 Down
63. Persian monetary unit
64. Director of "Meet John Doe"
65. - - - one Power
66. Salt
67. Old time "Serial Queen"
68. Always
69. Recline
75. Pertaining to right
77. "Three Cheers For The Ir - - h"
78. A young film personality
79. Elsie in "Little Men"
80. Lack of activity
81. French article
82. A book of the old Testament
84. Elongated fish
87. Julie in "Honeymoon For Three"
89. Mr. Ameche
91. Age
92. Cot
93. In order
94. Trigonometric function
96. Femme in "Strawberry Blonde"
98. "The Dead End - - - -"
100. Last name of 76 Across
101. Incites
102. Star of "Colorado"
104. Paid notices
106. Masculine name
109. Wi - - iam Holden
111. Poet Laureate: abbr.
113. Girl in "Dancing On A Dime": init.

he put the roar in the roaring 20's...now he's the bad boy of the naughty 90's!

oh lady, can you picture this! Jimmy as a gent in the days when a mug was something a fellow shaved out of!..and a racket was strictly for tennis! Warner Bros. pictured it— and it's the show you've really got to see!

JAMES CAGNEY

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND

in 'Strawberry Blonde'

(She's a honey...and so's the picture!)

with RITA HAYWORTH

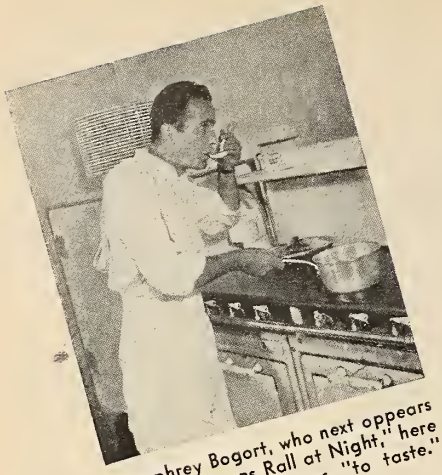
ALAN HALE • JACK CARSON



GEORGE TOBIAS

Directed by RAOUL WALSH

Screen Play by Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein

From a Play by James Hagan

A Warner Bros.-First National Picture

Humphrey Bogart, who next appears in "The Wogons Rall at Night," here shows how he seasons "to taste."

SUCCESS IN CASSEROLES

. . . WITH THESE TIME AND TROUBLE SAVING SUGGESTIONS

BY MARJORIE DEEN

He may be a menace in "High Sierra," but to his friends around Hollywood Humphrey Bogart is known as the most benign of hosts. He is also, so I discovered, quite a connoisseur of foods with some very special ideas of his own on the subject. One thing he commented upon was the oft-overlooked advantages of casserole cookery—where about everything required for the main course arrives in a single dish. "Each food complementing the flavor of the other to the general betterment of the whole!" he observed.

This, according to Mr. Bogart, is the kind of meal that appeals to men and is the type of cooking that comes easy to amateur chefs like himself. For complete success along these lines he suggests taking the familiar admonition, "Season to taste," literally, by sampling as you go along and adding spices, herbs and bottled condiments with imagination and discrimination. Try it with these casseroles, and you'll be delighted with the magical effect they have on family and friends! Take it from Mr. Bogart!

Casseroles provide the finest way to combine ready-prepared and canned foods in quickest fashion. For example, the following takes only two minutes to fix up and can then be heating while you are setting the table. By using different vegetables and soups, and with other types of ready-to-eat meats, many's the variation that can be played on this general theme.

KITCHENETTE CASSEROLE

1 No. 2 can (2½ cups) lima beans
½ teaspoon salt
a few grains pepper
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 small jar Vienna Style sausage (7 oz.)
1 tablespoon butter
1 can (condensed) tomato soup
½ cup hot water

Combine the lima beans, salt, pepper and mustard. Place sausages, cut in halves crosswise, in greased, heat-resistant glass baking dish—the shallow, oval, quart-size casserole is ideal for this purpose. Add seasoned beans, dot with butter. Pour in the soup combined with the hot water. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) until hot, approximately 20 minutes. Serves 4.

For a very special fish casserole, one that is a whole meal in itself, feature the sea-going flavor of shrimp. Right now this recipe, and the sure-to-be-popular salmon one that follows, will help you to keep your Lenten menus up to par. While later on you will continue serving these dishes—often and enthusiastically—whenever meatless meals are in order.

SHRIMP SPECIAL

2 (No. 1) cans shrimp
1½ cups coarsely broken, uncooked, wide noodles
2 medium onions, sliced thin
1 cup cooked peas
2½ cups canned tomatoes (or 5 fresh tomatoes, sliced)
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons butter

Wash shrimps and remove black vein that runs down the back. Place a layer of noodles in greased casserole. Top with a layer of onions, mixed with some of the peas. Add some of the shrimps, season with salt and pepper, top with some of the tomatoes. Continue in this way until all ingredients have been used. Dot with butter. Herb-conscious cooks will wish to add a pinch of their favorite herb-mixture. For down N'Orleans way we suggest that this be Gumbo Filé. Cover casserole and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 1 hour. Serves 4.

Here's a combination that will make a hit with the men . . . spaghetti and meat balls, enriched with a mushroom sauce!

Shrimps and vegetables cooked and served en casserole . . . a fine one-dish main course for you to feature during Lent.

SALMON CHOWDER PIE

½ pound can (1 cup) salmon
½ cup salmon and vegetable juice
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon minced onion
1½ tablespoons flour
1 can (condensed) mushroom soup
½ cup rich milk
½ teaspoon salt, a little pepper
½ cup cooked diced potatoes
1 cup cooked carrots and peas
1 recipe all-bran buttermilk biscuits

Drain salmon; reserve the juice and combine it with juice drained from vegetables, to make ½ cup liquid in all. Melt butter in saucepan, add onion, cook until tender. Add flour, stir until smooth, then add mushroom soup, milk, seasonings and the salmon-vegetable liquor. Cook and stir until smooth and thickened. Add vegetables and the flaked and boned salmon. Turn into shallow greased casserole. Cover with unbaked bran biscuits. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 20-25 minutes.

BRAN-NEW BISCUIT TOPPING

½ cup all-bran
¾ cup buttermilk
1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
⅓ cup shortening

Soak all-bran in buttermilk. Sift flour, baking powder, soda and salt. Cut in shortening until evenly distributed. Make a "well" in the center of mixture, turn all-bran into this depression, mix quickly —stirring only until all dry ingredients have been moistened. Turn out onto floured board, knead lightly. Pat out to ½-inch thickness and cut with floured biscuit cutter. Use as a covering for Salmon Pie or other casserole dishes.

Also fine for regulation biscuits baked in hot oven (450° F.) 20 minutes.

Like Humphrey Bogart, any man would go for a casserole that features snowy spaghetti topped with pint-size meat balls and further enriched with a mushroom-flavored sauce. An appetizing blending of color, flavor and textures such as this is seldom found in a single dish. Add a salad, follow with dessert and beverage, for a satisfying dinner.

SPAGHETTI "IN STYLE"

1 package spaghetti
1 pound ground beef
½ pound ground veal
½ cup cracker (or fine bread) crumbs
1 small onion, minced fine
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 (8-oz.) can sliced mushrooms
½ cup mushroom liquor with water
2 tablespoons butter
1 garlic bud (optional)
1 quart canned tomatoes
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Break spaghetti in pieces, boil in salted water until tender. Drain, rinse in cold water, drain again and place in greased casserole. Meanwhile combine meats (which should have been ground three times) with bread crumbs, onion, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Drain canned mushrooms (reserving liquor) add ¼ cup of mushrooms to meat mixture; then moisten with mushroom liquor combined with water to make ½ cup liquid. Blend thoroughly, shape in small round balls, roll in flour. Melt butter in skillet, add remaining mushrooms and the garlic bud if desired. Brown slightly, add meat balls, brown them well on all sides. Remove garlic, add tomatoes. Add additional seasonings "to taste." Pour over spaghetti in casserole, cover tightly and bake in moderate oven (375° F.) ½ hour. Pass grated Parmesan cheese. Serves 6.

Does your husband have to give up one evening a week to washday? Does washing leave you so 'done in' you can't even drag yourself to a movie?

THERE'S no better reason for using Fels-Naptha Soap than this: richer, golden soap and gentle, dirt-loosening naptha make a combination that can't be equalled for taking the back-breaking labor out of washday. No weak, would-be beauty soap can get all the deep-down dirt the way Fels-Naptha Soap does. In hard or soft water, hot or cool, this Peerless Pair of Cleaners—gentle naptha and golden soap, provide washday help that saves your hands, your energy—yes, saves your money, too.

If you have been a 'washday wife' write to Fels & Co., Dept. 11-D, Phila., Pa., for a free introductory bar of Fels-Naptha Soap. Use it next washday and warn your husband you'll be ready to step out that night.

Golden bar or Golden chips—

Fels-Naptha

—Banishes "Tattle-Tale Gray"

The New Way to ALL-DAY Face Glamour!

"Start right!" Every time you put on fresh make-up, try this modern way to make it "stay-put." Start with MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP, the perfectly blended powder-and-powder-base in one. It's non-greasy . . . goes on smoothly . . . hides complexion lines and blemishes . . . banishes nose shine.

Takes less than a minute to apply, yet keeps your skin fresh, radiant and velvety smooth. Stays on for hours, eliminating frequent re-powdering.

Use MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP as a powder base or complete make-up, whichever you prefer . . . and thrill to the greater loveliness this "new way to all-day face glamour" gives you.

Dazzle the stag-line! Use it on back, shoulders and arms, as well as face, for evening wear.

Choose one of the 5 skin-glorifying shades today!

MINER'S Liquid MAKE-UP

Large size 50c; trial size at 10c counters

FREE Generous Sample

© Send Coupon and 3¢ Stamp

MINER'S, 12 E. 12th St., Dept. M34, New York, N. Y.
I enclose 3c stamp to cover mailing cost. Send me generous sample of Miner's Liquid Make-Up FREE!

Name_____

Address_____

Peach ☐ Rachelle ☐ Brunette ☐ Suntan ☐ Hawaiian ☐

INFORMATION DESK

(Continued from page 6)

WE ASKED . . .

. . . Judy Garland how many hours a day she practises her voice lessons. The question seemed to shock her. "Sometimes," she told us, "weeks pass by, and I don't sing a note. And I'll have you know I've never taken singing lessons either!"

. . . Box office Mickey what part exercise played in his vigorous life. Said Rooney: "I've learned that playing golf, tennis, ping-pong, bowling and swimming can be largely responsible for the amount of work you are able to do. And if you can coordinate work, music and exercise along with the proper rest, your life can be really balanced."

. . . Georgiana Young to write us a little piece about herself and her illustrious family. We quote: "I was born in 1924 in Hollywood. My real name is Georgiana Belzer. As my whole family is Catholic, I attended Catholic schools. I had my first job in pictures in '33. The picture was 'Caravan,' in which I portrayed Loretta as a child. I can certainly say I can hope for no more than to reach the height of Loretta's success in the business. I've always looked up to 'Gretchen.' She's always said she'd never interfere in the least with my career, and if I do have one, it would have to be my own doing. I have altogether three sisters and one brother. My brother is a lawyer.

"Well, I think I've given you all the information you've asked for, and would you kindly send me HOLLYWOOD WHO'S WHO C.O.D. when it's finished?"

Here are some exciting facts about WHO'S WHO:

1. We editors of Information Desk put it together ourselves. We know the questions you ask. WHO'S WHO, with the help of the entire movie industry, answers them!

2. You love biography. WHO'S WHO gives you 1000 biographies, 1000 portraits!

3. In increasing volume, you're peppering us with questions about how films are made. WHO'S WHO takes you to the source of production knowledge, presents bylined articles by: Czar Will Hays, director Capra, producer Goldwyn, animator Disney, photogenius Hurrell, beautician Westmore—enough others so that you could produce a picture yourself!

4. WHO'S WHO is absolutely unique. It is the only complete almanac of the screen!

Have you always wanted to ask your favorite a question? Here's your chance! Just fire away—then watch for his or her answer in a forthcoming issue of Modern Screen.

Information Desk, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York City

Star's name.....

Question .....

.....

.....

.....

My name.....

Street .....

City..... State.....

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 8)

★★★½ High Sierra

It is many moons since we have been regaled with a high-tension action thriller like this one. It is a spine-tingler with all the blast and power of "Little Caesar," which started the original gangster picture cycle some years back, and which was written by the same gent who wrote "High Sierra," W. R. Burnett.

If it isn't enough to say that this is a good, exciting film, then the picture is also in the important class because it finally makes stars out of two troupers who should have been handed the laurel wreath before this. Here they are, Humphrey Bogart and Ida Lupino, stars at last. And after you get a load of their performances here, you will understand why they are quite likely to retain the classification from here on in.

It is not a simple assignment that Warners handed Humphrey in this one. He is asked to impersonate one of the toughest gunmen that ever was—but one who is a human being, who can do kind things for neighbors, who can love a dog, who can win a woman's respect. There is no toning down of the fact that he is a misfit in modern society, and he is meted out a bitter and stinging end.

Humphrey is paroled from a life term in an Eastern prison, as the picture opens, and immediately starts a new life of crime. He takes up with a behind-the-scenes boss—Donald MacBride—and a couple of young amateur gangsters played by Alan Curtis and Arthur Kennedy. While plans are being made for a big haul, he gets himself involved in a romantic triangle because of two girls, a lovable tramp named Ida Lupino and a beautiful sap named Joan Leslie. Ida is his kind of gal, as any ten-year-old in the audience could have told him, but he goes the hard way for Joan—who eventually gives him the gate, because she prefers a jitterbug from Ohio. That's about all the story there is—except, of course, for the big hold-up, the exciting chase and the eventual blasting of Humphrey by the cops, as exciting and nerve-thrilling a movie finish as this reporter has ever seen.

Director Raoul Walsh has combined sentiment and melodramatic action in a neat blend here. The movie flows steadily, if a bit lethargically, and it always holds your attention.

The acting honors are about equally split between Lupino and Bogart, both of them are absolutely topnotch. Joan Leslie, whom Warners has a lot of big hopes for, does not quite come through. It is hard to understand, from this picture, just why Warners think she is a big star-to-be. But it is her first film, and she is immature and nervous. Let's not make up our minds until we see her again.

There are a lot of supporting roles, and almost all of them are well handled, notably those by Arthur Kennedy, Henry Travers, Cornel Wilde and Donald MacBride. Directed by Raoul Walsh.—Warners.

★★★½ Reaching for the Sun

One of the most difficult problems movie-makers have to face is how to get out of the rut, how to keep from saying the same thing over and over again in the same old way. Once in a while someone thinks up a new formula, and eureka! Such a case, for instance, is "Reaching for the Sun." It's not the greatest movie ever made, it hasn't the finest acting or the most magnificent background—but it's real, and it packs a wallop. Hats off, lads!

You may have read this as a novel when it was named "F.O.B. Detroit." If so, it will surprise you to learn that it is a comedy now. And what will surprise you even more will be the knowledge that the transition was managed without a single change of the book's actual story line. It is still life as it is lived in Detroit in the shadow of the automobile industry, and it is not a very pretty picture—but it is good fun and real entertainment nevertheless.

Joel McCrea is shown as a big country kid with only one dream or hope; he wants to live in the open, in the woods, on the shore and scratch a living by digging clams. In order to do this, he needs an outboard motor for his dinghy, so he goes down to Detroit and gets a job on the assembly line. He meets a girl, Ellen Drew, marries her, and there is a baby. It looks as if the smoke and the filth of the factory have Joel down for the count. But at the end he wins out, gets his motor and takes his family up north—to the land, to life, to clean air, to sun.

Joel is very convincing and likeable as the country lad with simple desires and dreams. Ellen is a bit too pretty and ladylike for her role; the part was written with a tougher, rougher gal in mind. The reason Ellen got the assignment, probably, is that the producer figured he needed something good to look at, what with factories, machinery and such in the background. Another topnotch performance is turned in by Eddie Bracken, in his first starring role, as Joe's city-bred sidekick. He supplies most of the comedy, of course, and he's plenty good.

Director Wellman and scenarist W. L. River rate a lot of credit for this picture. There are very few men who could have taken such a basically depressing story and managed to keep it light and pleasant without deviating from the facts. Directed by William Wellman.—Paramount.

★★★½ The Lady Eve

There's a lot of fun in this movie and laughs galore—but that's not what makes it important; the reason it is an important movie is that it gives you a new Barbara Stanwyck and a new Henry Fonda. You think you know these two people? Well, you don't—as you will admit after you've seen them romp and cavort in "The Lady Eve." Neither one of them has had such opportunities previously—or taken them in stride as well.

There isn't an awful lot of sense in "The Lady Eve" as a story. It's not especially new and—well, we might as well admit it—some of it is certainly pretty corny. But it is the handling that counts. The dialogue is fresh, the acting is inspired, and the pace is terrific.

The story starts on a luxury cruiser

Jane Macdonald, Palm Beach teacher, the essence of whose charm is her daintiness.

Vivien Reynolds, of the Baltimore Studio, dances La Conga for hours without wilting! Lovely to watch? Just as "sweet" in a close-up!

Why Arthur Murray Dance Teachers Prefer Odorono Cream

Jo Morgan, of Cincinnati, is still impeccably dainty after dancing six hours a day!

Ruth Hopkins, of New York, charms all partners by her gayety and exquisite daintiness.

WHEN you teach dancing for a living, you can't take chances with daintiness! That's why these glamorous girls who teach dancing in Arthur Murray's famous Studios are so crazy about the new Odorono Cream. They can pat it on and dance without fear of underarm odor or dampness!

Non-irritating, you can use Odorono Cream right after shaving. Non-gritty, it's smooth as satin. Non-greasy, it's harmless to fabrics. Yet one quick application checks underarm perspiration safely 1 to 3 days! Get a jar of Odorono Cream today! The Odorono Co., Inc., New York, N. Y.

1 FULL OZ. JAR—ONLY 35¢

Odorono Cream gives you 50% TO 100% MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

ALSO LIQUID ODORONO—REGULAR AND INSTANT

The loveliest thing in make-up

Chiffon

Face Powder...

Silk Sifted

CHIFFON is so unbelievably fine it clings to your skin less like a powder than like the flattering, soft light of rendezvous candles.

Specially processed, Chiffon Face Powder is then sifted through the finest silk, to remove every tiny particle of shine, to be cake-proof, streak-proof, longer-lasting.

Its unique Chiffon bouquet is exquisitely feminine.

In seven high fashion shades: Rachel, Natural, Dark Tan, Beige, Brunette, Rose Petal, Rose Beige.

Chiffon Lipstick—for softer, more kissable contours. Four alluring new shades: Chiffon Red, True Red, Medium and Raspberry.

Chiffon All-Purpose Cream—the only cream you need to cleanse, help clarify and soften your skin.

Stop at your 5 and 10 for all three . . . 10¢ each

DISTRIBUTED BY PRIMROSE HOUSE
595 Fifth Avenue, New York

somewhere in the South Seas. Fonda is the very rich son of a very rich father and is returning from an expedition of some sort. On the boat are Barbara and her pop, Charles Coburn, a seemingly innocent and likeable gent who enjoys playing cards—but who never loses. Barbara is his foil. She goes after Hank, lands him with a thud, and then (yes, it's too bad, but we told you there isn't much basic story originality) she spoils it all by falling in love with the guy. He finds out about her past and gives her the air.

At this point, the story picks up steam and goes around a corner. Barbara vows revenge, masquerades as a titled British Lady, gets taken up by the smart set, is invited to Fonda's home and throws him into utter confusion. He thinks it is simply a case of remarkable similarity between two people, falls in love with her all over again, marries her—and then she gives him the gate.

Broken down this way, it doesn't sound too good—but honestly, it's very fast, very zippy, very amusing and full of honest-to-goodness belly-laughs.

Barbara and Henry are both topnotch, and you'll probably fall off your seat at Henry's deadpan business as he takes fall after fall in old-fashioned comedy routine manner. To help, there is an exceptionally capable cast including a magnificent job by Charles Coburn and excellent work by Will Demarest, Eugene Pallette and Eric Blore.

While we're handing out laurels, let's not forget one of the top cups—which goes to writer-director Preston Sturges. Once more he comes through to the very top of the heap by instilling his characters with life and zest, dialogue and action—just as he did in "The Great McGinty" and "Christmas in July." Directed by Preston Sturges.—Paramount.

★★★ Mr. and Mrs. Smith

One of the more curious legends about show business is that the comic always wants to play Hamlet and vice versa. Here is more proof of this old saw. Alfred Hitchcock, who has built up a fully-deserved reputation as the top director of tense and melodramatic action, insists on going into competition with a dozen or so other topnotch directors—but in their field, not in his. "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" is a comedy—and a pretty good one in spots—but it hasn't the pace or the timing which comedy (especially in American films) must have.

The story of "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" is the same comedy premise we've been kicking around in films for a year or so—two people are married, but they're not married, or are they? There have been about a dozen variations on this theme of late, and chances are that this is the picture which'll wash 'em all up. There can't be any more ways of twisting the theme around, we hope.

In this particular case, Carole Lombard and Robert Montgomery find out, after five years of married life, that because of a legal mistake, they are not man and wife. Bob is willing to go right ahead, but Carole has different ideas. So, too, has Bob's partner, Gene Raymond, who goes on the make for Carole. Oh, sure, it all ends happily with Carole and Bob reunited legally—but not until there has been some rather hilarious double-entendre business and a lot of chasing to and fro.

Thinking back on the film, it becomes obvious that there is a lot of good stuff in it; some of the business is screamingly funny. But a good deal of it is in shockingly bad taste—and almost all of it is paced in so lethargic and happy-go-lucky a manner as to annoy. The only way this sort of thing can be sold is by playing it so fast that the audience doesn't get a chance to think. The audience will do a lot of thinking through this one.

Carole is beautiful and desirable in the lead role, her best part of the year, and Montgomery, too, is at top form; it should do both of them a lot of good. Raymond is not quite sure of himself as the other man; seems like a directorial fault, too, because Gene is forced to underplay Montgomery too much. There are several good bit performances, but this trio has by far the greatest percentage of the action. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock.—RKO-Radio.

★★★ Come Live With Me

Jimmy Stewart and Hedy Lamarr are a happy enough combination to insure almost any movie, even when the story is as slim and lightweight as this one. It's a comedy with romance, and if it has to prove anything, it proves that Jimmy and Hedy complement each other beautifully. Both have a good deal of histrionic similarity, especially in their handling of whimsical comedy.

Hedy is a Viennese in the story, and it is important that she get married—but quick—in order to become an American citizen; otherwise, she'll be deported. She's infatuated with Ian Hunter, a publisher who happens to be married. She meets Jimmy Stewart, a literary novice without a dime, and they arrange an immediate wedding. In return for his citizenship protection, Jimmy is to get her money. Naturally, they are not to fall in love with each other, but as would happen, they do. How does Jimmy keep from being a heel? Simple. He sells a novel, makes a mint of money, pays Hedy back her investment, and they live happily ever after.

Pretty convenient, all that, and pretty obvious, but it's chuck-full of pleasant incidents, and the playing is fresh and sprightly throughout. Also, Clarence Brown's direction is deft and keeps things humming.

There's a little disappointment in the Hunter role; he deserves better things. Verree Teasdale and Donald Meek are swell, and there is a new actress, a 70-year-young woman named Adeline de Walt Reynolds, who grabs a surprisingly big hunk of the honors. Imagine getting a start in life at the age of 70! But she's good. Directed by Clarence Brown.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

★★★ Tall, Dark and Handsome

The studios are worrying about gangster pictures again, which is a bit strange, since you would think that everything there is to say on the subject has been said over and over again. Anyway, here is a lampoon of a gangster film, a cute comedy take-off which won't inspire you to write letters home, but which will give you a lot of chuckles and a couple of good full-throated laughs.

The title refers to Cesar Romero, a racketeer whom everyone fears as a nasty killer, but who actually is a softie with a heart of gold. He's so soft, in fact, that he can't get himself to knock off his rival gangsters. Instead, he kidnaps them and keeps them (luxuriously tended) in a private jail, while he sends out word that they've been erased. Which, of course, is what eventually gets him into trouble.

Virginia Gilmore, as his moll, is a lovely dish to set before anybody's eyes; she is probably the fastest stepping young filly in Hollywood these days, and she'll be an important star before you know it.

Milton Berle (with his new streamlined schnozz) is very funny as Romero's left-hand man. He's headed up again, probably to stay this time. Sheldon Leonard is a guy to watch and remember. He's a heavy who ought to find a lot of movie work. This is only his second picture (he did a small bit in a "Thin Man" movie about a year ago), but he makes a lasting impression.

Charlotte Greenwood, Frank Jenks and Marc Lawrence are best among the supporting players, and the director is deserving of a healthy nod for keeping things moving speedily and merrily throughout. Directed by H. Bruce Humberstone.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

★★★ Michael Shayne, Detective

This is a neat job which ought to be dished out to Hollywood film-makers as a good example of how it can be done. It's an inexpensive, unobtrusive little picture and has nothing at all to recommend it ahead of time (not even a good title, which is criminal), but once you get into the theatre, you'll love it. It's entertainment!

Most of the credit belongs to the writers, Stanley Rauh and Manning O'Connor, because what makes the picture sparkle is the crisp, easy dialogue and the newness of situations used to tell a routine murder yarn. Lloyd Nolan is in the title role, with Marjorie Weaver for the feminine lead, and both of them move up the ladder just by being associated with the film.

Nolan is a flip gumshoe who knows all the answers. Clarence Kolb is a rich gent who hires Lloyd to watch Miss Weaver because she can't keep away from race-tracks and roulette. Her boy friend, a big-time gambler, is knocked off; Nolan has to protect her, and almost gets himself in a pickle. Sure, the result is routine—but not before a terrifically tense finale chase.

Best among the supporting players are Walter Abel, Donald MacBride and George Meeker. And the direction is worthy of a nod; it's sure and perfectly paced. Directed by Eugene Forde.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

★★½ Maisie Was a Lady

Ann Sothern in a new Maisie picture is, of course, almost always good news. The current episode in the series, like its predecessors, has a lot of sparkle and good fun—but the authors cheated a bit on the story content, so that it emerges none too successfully.

Maisie manages to get herself a job as a maid in a houseful of rich people. They are the type of movie rich that you're supposed to feel sorry for, because they've got nothing but their millions to console 'em. Well, Maisie tells them what's the matter with them. She manages to get Lew Ayres off his daily binge and weans him down to a mild drunk every other Saturday; she convinces Maureen O'Sullivan, Lew's sister, that the guy she is about to marry is a cad who's only after her money; and so on and so forth. After everyone is told off, put on the road to pure and simple living standards, Maisie trudges on to, we suspect, another movie. Which is okay by us, because most of 'em are sure to be better than this one.

All the supporting roles are played in character and are very routine. Nothing is wrong with Maureen, Lew, C. Aubrey Smith, or any of the others—except that you know all about them the minute they first emerge on the screen. Directed by Edward L. Marin.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

At last it's on the screen!

Tobacco Road

with

CHARLEY GRAPEWIN • MARJORIE RAMBEAU
GENE TIERNEY • WILLIAM TRACY and Dana
Andrews • Slim Summerville • Ward Bond
Grant Mitchell • Zeffie Tilbury • Screen Play by Nunnally Johnson • Directed by JOHN FORD
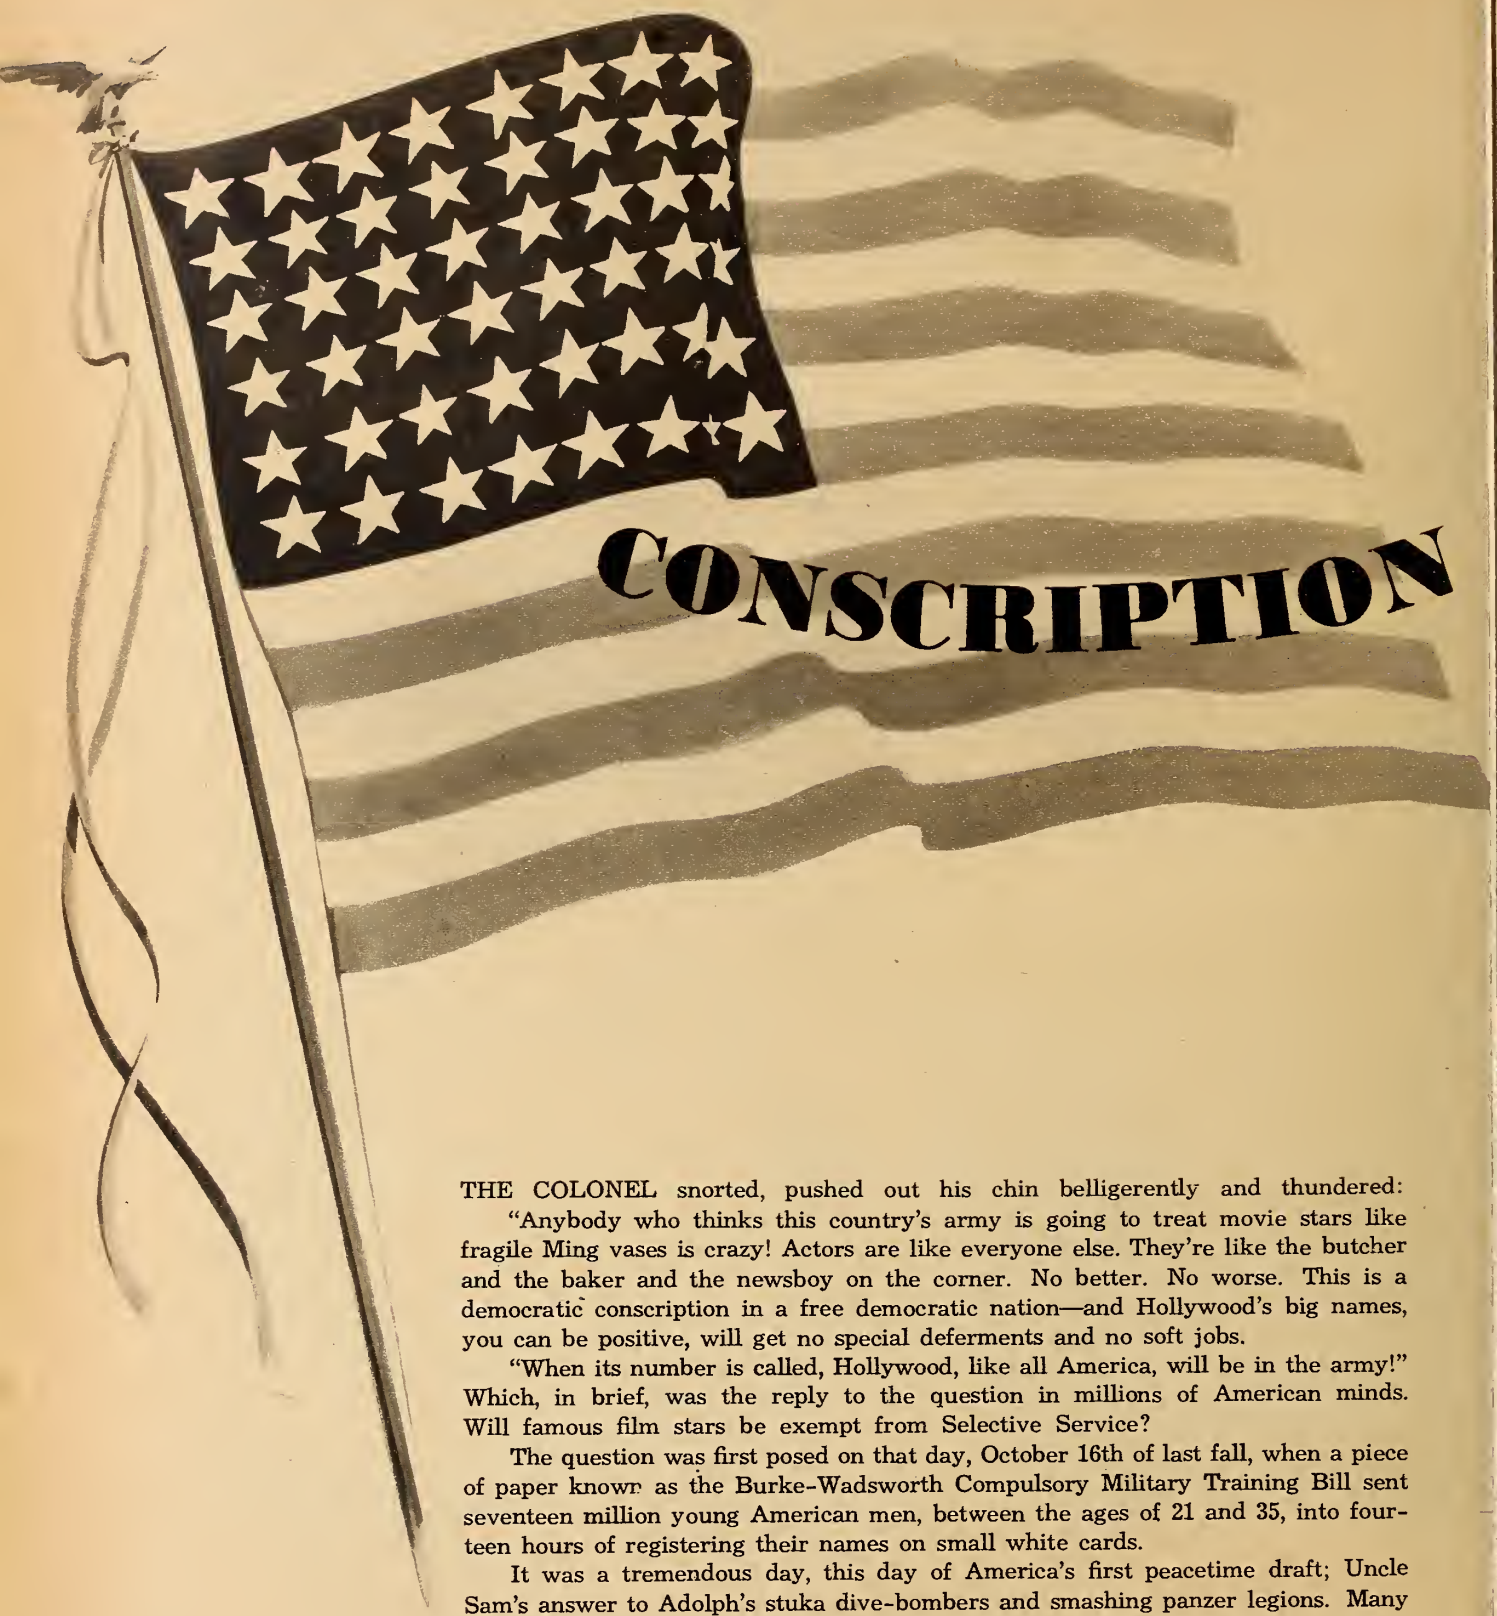
Produced by DARRYL F. ZANUCK
A 20th Century-Fox Picture

RAY JONES

Margaret Sullavan

Fannie Hurst's greatest love story, the immortal "Back Street," made history on the screen in 1933—and with Maggie Sullavan and Charles Boyer co-starred in Universal's stirring re-make, it looks as if history's going to repeat itself!



TOM EVANS

EUGENE ROBERT RICHEE

If you haven't been a Joel McCrea addict for years, his latest film will cinch it. He's wonderful as the big, bewildered factory worker in Joel McCrea

Paramount's thrill-packed modern romance—"Reaching for the Sun"

CONSCRIPTION

BY IRVING WALLACE

THE COLONEL snorted, pushed out his chin belligerently and thundered:

"Anybody who thinks this country's army is going to treat movie stars like fragile Ming vases is crazy! Actors are like everyone else. They're like the butcher and the baker and the newsboy on the corner. No better. No worse. This is a democratic conscription in a free democratic nation—and Hollywood's big names, you can be positive, will get no special deferments and no soft jobs.

"When its number is called, Hollywood, like all America, will be in the army!" Which, in brief, was the reply to the question in millions of American minds. Will famous film stars be exempt from Selective Service?

The question was first posed on that day, October 16th of last fall, when a piece of paper known as the Burke-Wadsworth Compulsory Military Training Bill sent seventeen million young American men, between the ages of 21 and 35, into fourteen hours of registering their names on small white cards.

It was a tremendous day, this day of America's first peacetime draft; Uncle Sam's answer to Adolph's stuka dive-bombers and smashing panzer legions. Many things happened everywhere. The Seminole Indians of Florida, still technically at war with the United States, refused to register, and sixty-five of their eligibles fled into the southern swamps. Sing Sing prisoners asked for a leave of absence to sign up and were told they'd have to wait until their release. An Oakland housepainter returned his registration card, unsigned, with the notation, "I will not serve in any army or navy as long as Roosevelt is dictator of the United States." Eight New York divinity students, deaf to pleas of their instructors, accepted a year and a day in jail rather than join the draft. Mr. Yet Yow, a Chinese citizen of Manhattan, brought 5,000 fellow Chinese who could not speak English to the draft board, explaining, "I tell them they will get a chance to fight Japan. They come with me quick!"

HITS HOLLYWOOD ★★★

WHO ARE THE ELIGIBLES? WHICH ONES WILL BE CONSCRIPTED? HERE, EXCLUSIVELY, ARE THE ANSWERS DIRECT FROM FILMVILLE'S DRAFT BOARDS!

Thus, on that day the melting pot registered for defense. And on that day, too, Hollywood joined the army, in a manner of speaking. Renowned actors in sleek black cars went to their local draft boards. And days later, Jimmy Stewart broke front pages coast to coast when his number was among the first drawn. Sterling Holloway and Lee Bowman followed him closely with low draft digits.

Hollywood promptly found the draft lucrative. Paramount lined up a picture, "Caught In The Draft," for Bob Hope. Republic started "You'll Never Get Rich," a conscription comedy. Two fellows wrote a song, "The Army Builds Men." Zanuck decided to do some short features for boys in the conscription camps. Woody Van Dyke, director of "Bitter Sweet," turned his M-G-M office into a Marine recruiting station and left to become a Major in the 22nd Battalion of the Marine Corps Reserves. Then, of course, there were some typical Hollywood gags on the draft, parody verses, ideas for three-act plays and plenty of gossip.

And American mothers, sisters, sweethearts, relatives, who had seen their beloved and near ones leave for a year's education in the Star Spangled Manner, looked questioningly at Hollywood. They looked at their cinema Gods, and they wondered. Did Clark Gable register? And Errol Flynn? And Tyrone Power? Had Hollywood sent anyone to the army camps? Would Hollywood send anyone in the future? And when the stars went, would they get the easiest jobs?

Well, to begin with, most of Hollywood's greatest names, many of them Academy Award winners, didn't even register! They didn't register, not because they were slackers or divinity students or Seminoles, but because they were under or over the draft age.

On October 16, 1940, Clark Gable did not appear for registration. He was 39 years old. Nelson Eddy and Gary Cooper did not appear. They, too, were 39. Brian Aherne didn't register. He was 38 years old. Fred Astaire and Spencer Tracy were 40. Pat O'Brien was 41.

And now remember again, please, that the Burke-Wadsworth Bill was directed exclusively at those Americans under the age of 35 and over 21!

Allan Jones would make a topnotch cavalryman.

The army excludes crack-shooter Gary Cooper!

Licensed pilot Ty would choose the air corps.

Bellamy's just over-age. Wayne has dependents.

Brian fought with the Lafayette Escadrille.

Welshman Milland is an ex-British cavalryman.

George Brent is an experienced secret service man!

Jimmy's an ace flyer. Eddie likes the Navy.

CONSCRIPTION HITS HOLLYWOOD Continued

Many Hollywood stars just missed being eligible. Some by a matter of days or weeks. George Brent, whose experience as a flyer, miner and sailor might be invaluable to the army, was 36 years old. Bruce Cabot, Jim Cagney and Bing Crosby were all a year over the top eligibility age. Ralph Bellamy became 36 four months before registration. Buddy Ebsen turned ineligible six months before the draft. Robert Montgomery, fresh from piloting an ambulance through flame-gutted France, celebrated his 36th birthday five months before signature time. Lloyd Nolan's birthday came three months before the draft. And George Raft, whose lack of height would have made him ineligible anyway, was counted out by becoming 36 only four weeks before registration.

There was one stickler, however. Many stars, like other citizens throughout the nation, were in their 35th year and signed for the draft only a few days or weeks or months before their 36th birthdays. A delicate point arose. Would these men, perhaps 37 or 38 by the time they were called, finally be exempt?

For example, Mischa Auer, aged 35 at the time of the draft, had to sign the little white card for Selective Service; four weeks later, he became 36. And Brian Donlevy, whose knowledge of blacksmithing made him a great bet for the army, became 36 some four months after he'd registered. And the case of Dick Powell, aged 35 years 11 months when he signed up.

Well, what about Mischa, Brian and Dick? What about all men who'd signed just on the verge of their 36th birthdays? Would these men, at first eligible as draftees, now become ineligible? The answer, according to officials, is "These men are today eligible!" When they are called, they will have to reply.

Inversely, the same problem popped up among the younger set. Jackie Cooper, Gene Reynolds and most of the "Dead End" kids were under 21 and too young. Mickey Rooney, box office king of the year, was only 20 at the time of the conscription—and will not reach the eligible age until September of this year. And Tim Holt, son of the cowboy actor, did not become 21 until a third of a year after registration.

What about Mickey and Tim? When they reached the legal age, would they automatically become eligible for the draft? The answer on this point is, "No." In fact, all fellows who were under 21 last October 16 will not have to worry about army camps, not yet, anyway. Their time will come only, and if, President Roosevelt issues a new proclamation for another official registration. And even then, Mickey Rooney probably would not have to join a camp because his height, five feet two, and his weight, 127, would make him ineligible for the United States army; and Tim Holt, a married man of two years with wife and child already dependent upon his income, would probably also be exempt from donning the olive drab.

However, as most patriotic citizens already know, eligibility for Selective Service requires other factors besides proper age. The next consideration is exact weight and height plus good health.

No man under five feet or over six-feet-six will be considered. No man under 105 pounds of weight or over 205 pounds will be accepted, though the weight requirements have been and are being treated with more elasticity. The average six-footer is expected to tip the scale at no less than 145 pounds and no more than 190.

Other items such as bad eyes, flat feet, various illnesses will all be considered toward deferring a man. Thus, while there's no way of checking the physical health of most movie actors at the present time, it's not too difficult to recognize those who may be exempt from draft duty because of their personal peculiar height and weight problems.

John Howard, who made a great hit in "The Philadelphia Story," though eligible in every other way, may get the army go-by because he is so light. Jeffrey Lynn, unmarried and holder of a low draft number, available for call any day now, is also underweight for his six foot frame. Burgess Meredith, (Continued on page 85)

NAME	AGE	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	MATRIMONIAL STATUS
AHERNE, BRIAN	38	6' 2"	186	married wife inactive
ALBERT, EDDIE	33	5' 11"	160	unmarried
ALLEN, FRED	46	5' 11½"	176	married wife working
AMECHE, DON	30	6'	170	married wife inactive faur children
ARLEN, RICHARD	40	5' 11"	150	divorced one child
ARNAZ, DESI	23	5' 10"	145	married wife warking
ASTAIRE, FRED	40	5' 9"	140	married wife inactive twa children
ATWILL, LIONEL	55	5' 10½"	172	married wife inactive ane child
AUER, MISCHA	36	6' 2"	165	divarced two children
AUTRY, GENE	33	6'	165	married wife inactive
AYRES, LEW	32	5' 9"	150	divarced
BAKER, BOB	26	6'	180	married wife inactive three children
BANCROFT, GEORGE	58	6' 2"	195	married wife inactive ane child
BARRY, DON	29	5' 8"	160	married wife warking
BARRYMORE, JOHN	58	5' 10"	150	divarced three children
BARRYMORE, LIONEL	62	6'	155	widower
BARTHELMESS, RICHARD	43	5' 9"	150	married wife inactive two children
BAXTER, WARNER	47	5' 10¾"	150	married wife inactive
BEERY, NOAH, JR.	25	6' 1"	170	married wife inactive
BEERY, WALLACE	52	6' 1"	189	divarced faur children
BELLAMY, RALPH	36	6' ½"	189	married wife inactive
BENCHLEY, ROBERT	51	5' 7"	160	married wife inactive twa children
BENNY, JACK	46	5' 9"	150	married wife warking ane child

(Continued on page 60)

LOVE Vs. CAREER . . .

BY IDA ZEITLIN

GERALDINE FITZGERALD HAS AN EXTRAORDINARY SOLUTION TO THAT AGE-OLD STICKLER!

When he married Geraldine four years ago, English-born Edward Lindsay-Hogg not only adopted her family — but her nationality!

Geraldine Fitzgerald met her husband at the horse show in Dublin. She was seventeen. He was a close friend of her elder brother's. She thought him very attractive, only she was engaged to someone else at the time. He, too, had other commitments. She remembered now having heard her brother say so. In view of her own situation, it was unreasonable that the memory should have irked her.

Suddenly her head started to swim. Not through love at first sight, but because crowds affect her that way. She fell flat on her face in a faint. In his agitation, her father picked her up face down while a helpful friend grabbed her by the heels. Thus, ignominiously, she was borne away in full view of young Mr. Edward Lindsay-Hogg. "It was a flat beginning," she observes.

He's the chief reason behind her six-months-a-year contract with the brothers Warner, but her family runs him a close second. She puts human relationships above professional advancement. She's an actress, true, and wants to go on being one but not at the risk of her marriage nor of permanent separation from her beloved people in Ireland. If her movie career should sicken and die under six months' absent treatment, that would be sad, but she could bear it. What she couldn't bear would be any least weakening of the bond between herself and those she loves.

So her contract reads that she shall be free from March 1st to September 1st of each year. "That clause," she says, "is like my marriage lines. Nothing in heaven or earth can budge it. Come fire or flood or act of man or God, six months of the year are mine.

"I don't mean to imply that you can't be happily married in Hollywood. That would be silly and smug, nor is it true. But if I worked all year 'round, we'd be building our lives around my work. We'd be making my work the all-important crux of existence, which it isn't. We're the crux—my husband, the baby and I, my father and mother, my sister and brothers, my uncles and cousins and aunts. Eddy's an orphan, so he's taken my family over. We're never really happy unless we're all together. Even if some of us don't get on, we'd far rather scrap with each other than pine apart."

Miss Fitzgerald is slim and young and, in a dirndl, auburn hair falling to her shoulders, looks like a child. She meets you, too, with the gravity of a well-mannered child, behind which you soon detect an impish and beguiling humor. She's of the new breed of players that's vitalizing Hollywood's bloodstream. It wasn't her beauty that brought her crashing into the public eye in "Dark Victory," but a performance compelling in its truth and simplicity. The same kind of integrity is apparent in the girl. Plus a sparkle that may be Irish or may be pure Fitzgerald. If she's a fair sample of what her family produces, you don't wonder that they like being together.

It's a one-for-all-and-all-for-one clan. With all their young men in France during the last war, Geraldine's (Continued on page 75)

Geraldine started her career as "atmosphere" in Dublin theatricals at 19; at 26, she's a star in "Winged Victory!" Has four idiosyncrasies—can't stand perfume, caviar and Hollywood's famous climate, and will employ only female chauffeurs.

Incredible but true! Mary Beth Hughes, the twenty-one-year-old ex-convent gal who's currently dazzling Milton Berle, rises at six—regardless of her bedtime!

Candidly Yours

CATCHING THEM OFF THEIR GUARD!

We hear Greg Bautzer and Dottie Lamour are putting their 6-month-old romance on ice. His pals are betting that the rich and handsome Greg and Lana Turner will eventually take up where they left off.

Lovely Irene Hervey breaks up a bull session to ask Hank Fonda for the next rhumba. Her hubby, Allan Jones (who, incidentally, is sporting a twelve-dollar tie), is an incurable sitter-outer.

Greer Garson, who's 5′ 8″, and boss Ernst Lubitsch aren't letting a couple of measly inches come between them! They talk constantly on the dance floor in strong British and German accents respectively.

Photos by staff photographer Nat Dallinger

1 The unpredictable John Carroll, who stunned Hollywood when he built a huge Southern mansion on top of Lookout Mountain, is now stunning Edmond O'Brien by dating his fiancée, Nancy Kelly.

2 Bill Powell—who flunked out of Thin Man films when he gained a dozen pounds—terrorizes his wife of one year with an eyebrow pencil moustache. Ginger Rogers, unescorted, dead-panned it all.

3 Ann Rutherford (who calls everyone she likes a "dream job") checks up on the Auer and Devine calories. Andy—in sideburns for his next role—should drop 50 pounds; Mischa should gain 20!

4 Since his marriage to socialite Lillian Barker, that erstwhile gloomy gus, Chester Morris, couldn't be up to more tricks! Would you believe he's the dad of 2 kids (10 and 12) by his first wife?

The Rog Pryors, who tiffed loud 'n' long, because Mr. P. loves to fly and Ann tried to clip his wings, have evidently signed an armistice. They're hand-holding practically nightly at the gay new Mocambo.

The Buddy Adlers—they'll soon be first anniversary-ing—ogle the colossal artificial orchid that rests on a special pillow in the elegant foyer of Hollywood's newest nitery—the Scheherezade.

Hollywood's official cheerer-upper, Eddie Bergen (just recuperated from a flu siege), does a job on Mary Pickford. She's been none too chipper since Buddy Rogers' studio sued her for breach of his contract.

CONTINUED

In spite of skeptics, husky (6′ 4″, 200 lbs.) Forrest Tucker and wife, ex-Earl Carroll gal Sandra Jolley, are inseparable.

Alice Faye's ex, Tony Martin, still favors blondes, so Idaho's prodigy, Lana Turner, 20, lightens her locks accordingly!

Ex-football player Bill Marshall is fast upsetting Helen Gilbert's plans for an extended musical and movie career!

To date, New York deb Cobina Wright has netted herself a juicy Hollywood contract plus blueblood Bob Stack!

British Binnie Barnes, 33, and husband No. 2, announcer Mike Frankovitch, fête their 6-month wedding anniversary!

Prettiest bride of the season was Brenda Joyce, 23, who wed first love Owen Ward, Los Angeles accountant, Jan. 18.

Margaret Roach, Hal's 19-year-old actress daughter, and airplane-producer Jeff Steele will make it a date in June!

Cuban Desi Arnaz's wife, 29-year-old Lucille Ball, just gobbles fattening food to add to her 120 pound, 5'6½" figure!

THINK WITH YOUR Heart

Hedy plays opposite Jimmy Stewart in her latest picture, "Come Live With Me."

BY ADELE WHITELY FLETCHER

Hollywood is second-guessing about Hedy Lamarr. This means Hedy, after a long time of getting nowhere, is going somewhere. This also means you don't have to play the Hollywood game if, by chance, you know a better one.

Hedy knows a better game. Her father taught it to her when she was a little girl. And through the years—even through the last six years since his death—her father has been on the sidelines calling the word that has always been a kind of signal between them . . . "Hedylendelein, Hedylendelein . . ."

To understand how Hedy and her father came to play this game, it's necessary to know about the underlying story of her life, a story which has never been told before.

When Hedy was a little girl in Vienna, her father used to go to the cathedral to pray for the woman she would one day be. He never beseeched wealth or fame for her, only happiness. For he knew she would not win happiness easily. Even as a child she gave promise of beauty that would spring like a bright flame from the tilt of her soft eyes, the cut of her ripe mouth, and the way her dark hair would lay against the pallor of her cheeks. And the price of such beauty is so often unhappiness.

"Think with your heart, Hedylendelein," Emil Kiesler used to caution his daughter. "For that's how the good Lord meant women to think. Think with your heart, and you'll win in the end, even though at times you seem to lose."

The Kieslers lived in a house in the hills. And, aware that words are not enough and the appetite grows on the food one tastes, Emil and Gertrude Kiesler sought to fill Hedy's life with warm, simple things, so that that would be the things she would seek for herself later on. They dressed her in little striped frocks with white collars and patent leather belts. They brushed her hair back smooth. They did not encourage her to dwell upon her looks. When spring came, supper was served outside under the trees. Mornings, before Emil Kiesler left for the Bank of Vienna where he was a director, Hedy carried the bird-cage into the garden where he fastened it on the green bough that reached across the sitting-room window. Solemn family councils decided who among their neighbors were kind enough to have one of the Kiesler's puppies. There were little jokes, and there were little ceremonies. And on birthdays and other occasions Hedy's mother always sent her a bouquet of forget-me-nots and a single pink rose.

Seasons swung into years. Hedy grew up.

"When I watch her, I'm afraid," Emil Kiesler told his wife one day. "She's impulsive and headstrong. Once she turns a certain way, it's impossible to swerve her. I used to fear for her to meet powerful men lest she learn their ambitious ways. Now I wonder where she'll find a man with a will to match her own."

Gertrude Kiesler drew the pale green floss through a leaf in her needlework. "Hedy's fifteen," she said. "Her nature is set. There's nothing we can do about her now. However, I feel it's just as well she's the way she is, Emil. For your prayers have been answered. She thinks with her heart. And I think that will mean she'll need courage and determination always."

Not long after this, Hedy quit school to work in the Sascha motion picture studios. She was fifteen-and-a-half, and she couldn't, she complained, wait any longer to start living. Then, completely unmindful of the criticism she invited, she appeared in the sensational "Ecstasy." And then she married very impressive and very important Fritz Mandl, the munitions tycoon.

MORE IMPORTANT THAN HEDY'S TWO HUSBANDS OR HER DOZENS OF BEAUX, IS THE MAN HER BIOGRAPHERS FORGOT ALL ABOUT!

In Fritz Mandl Hedy found a man with a will to match her own. Besides, she had never known such a young man before. The youth of post-war Austria lived more by words than deeds and thought more of what was their due than of what was their duty. And Hedy scorned them.

At first Hedy and Fritz Mandl were very happy. They lived in a great house in a great park. They entertained ambassadors, and their table was laid with gold plate. European couturiers, jewelers and furriers had orders to let Mandl know whenever they had a gown, a gem or a pelt that would suit his wife's famed beauty. And Hedy, in her youth, found natural excitement in all these things.

"Happy, Hedylendelein?" her father used to ask when he and her mother came to visit. "Happy?" And when she answered him, her eyes and her voice were as bright as her words.

Ever since Hedy had been a little girl, her mother had told her that her father was as kind as any man who ever lived. And although Hedy's love for her father had forever swung her eyes in his direction, she never had seen anything to make her doubt this was true. He always had a strange closeness with those who were worried or sad or in any pain. And in 1934, when he saw persecutions run rampant and realized it wouldn't be long before the cruelty and hatred would be far spread, it was more than he could endure. The shadow of things that were to come fell upon his heart and killed him.

Things were different with Hedy after her father died. Adult and realistic now, instead of young and romantic, she came to wonder if she was anything more than a rich man's possession, like the imported cars in the garage, the priceless wines in the cellar and the blooded dogs in the kennels. For Fritz Mandl, fearing Hedy's beauty might bewitch other men, (Continued on page 73)

Tucked away on her quiet farm, Hedy is still haunted by the eternal "Hedylendelein . . . Hedylendelein?"

Tagging THE HOLLYWOOD PLAYBOYS . . .

BY ERROL FLYNN

Believe me, I can't imagine why Modern Screen should consider me an authority on playboys. It came to me as rather a shock. Here I've always felt that I was pretty much of a Boy Scout, always preoccupied in the morning until I have thought out my good deed for the day. After that—sunny, gay, bright. A constant source of solace to family and friends. And now I find out I'm a night owl expert. It's discouraging, that's what it is. But a Boy Scout mustn't grumble, must he?

Now, in case my wife reads this, let me get this straight right away. I'm merely an observer taking an academic interest in the subject. Anything you've heard to the contrary is base slander. Of course some of the lads we are about to examine in the interest of science may feel the same way about it, and—if so—I can only advise them to use the same excuse I have laid out roughly above. Either that one, or the one about the whole thing being a sad case of mistaken identity. Thus, having provided them with two concrete alibis in advance and, at the same time, having accomplished my good deed for the day, we're ready to look over the various techniques.

Letting youth have its fling, let us first consider the younger generation. For example, there is Mickey Rooney. He and his cronies range through the late spots of a Saturday night with delicious little morsels, aged from sixteen to twenty-two. The truth is that these cubs play havoc in a den of iniquity, drinking Pepsi-Colas and, on a big night, even sinking to an ice cream soda. Thus fortified their hot, mad young blood racing, they take over the dance floor with such orgiastic enthusiasm that the more mature tacticians must retire sullenly to their tables and wait till the blitz dies down.

There is little to equal the fine disdain that curls the lips of Franchot Tone at one of these demonstrations. Franchot probably never went through that period. It is hard to imagine his cool suavity ever broken by loud and unrestrainable yelps of approval over a particularly neat roll on the drums. His forte in dealing with the opposite sex would seem to be reliance on well-rounded dialogue concerning a variety of artistic subjects. He might well have been a fraternity brother of Philo Vance, who professed to be a dilettante of considerable parts. There are girls, and dashed attractive ones, too, whom you can see sitting spellbound by the hour as Franchot discusses music, literature, painting with a casual accuracy that is astonishing and often misleading. Misleading, because as often as not Franchot's mind may not be on his chatter at all, but on the net effect he's having on the young lady. Eyes dizzy, head in a whirl from the subtleties of pure conversation, you can see her melt . . . and, in the quiver of a nostril, they are gone. . . .

And then there is di Cicco—Pat di Cicco, agent and bon vivant. Pat's place on the stagline is no passing thing. He is established. Solid as the Bank of England. He's been one of the more engaging "eligibles" for nigh onto a generation, and (Continued on page 94)

40-year-old Rudy Vallee (with Rosemary Coleman) was once married; prefers free-lancing.

Franchot Tone (with Carole Landis) is 35, very serious and a cynic about marriage.

"Butch" Romero (with Ann Sheridan) is 34—the ultimate in chivalry and a fabulous spender!

BY THEIR "LINES" YOU SHALL KNOW 'EM, GIRLS—THE STAGLINE'S SMOOTHEST GRADUATE DISCLOSES TRADE SECRETS THAT'LL FLOOR YOU!

Reggie Gardiner (with Gertrude Niesen) never dates the same girl two nights in a row!

Recently divorced from Bette Davis' stand-in, John Shelton forgets with Dot Heinz.

Mickey Rooney (with Lois Ranson) is going on twenty-one and is the small fry's Diamond Jim Brady—doles out orchids, expensive perfume and even watches with his ice cream sodas!

happy ending

BY JEANNE KARR

NEW KIND OF LOVE STORY—PROVING THAT TWO UYS CAN LIKE THE SAME GIRL AND STILL BE PALS!

Here's the story of a happy family: New arrangement.

The old arrangement must have been pretty good, too. It couldn't have been bad with Mary Martin as its hub. She's a girl who makes other people feel cheerful. But the old arrangement wasn't perfect. The new one is. Mary Martin thinks so; Richard Halliday, her husband, thinks so; and Larry Hagman, her nine-year-old son, pronounces it keen. While her mother beams at all three and works off her elation by hustling out to sell some more real estate.

There was just one feature of the marriage that disturbed Mary's offspring.

"Darling, I'm married," she told him. She'd flown to Las Vegas with Halliday the night before. Now the news had broken, and telephones were shrilling all over the house with calls from Texas and New York.

"Which one did you marry?"

"Dicky."

"That's good." Then a thought dropped like a pebble into the pool of his satisfaction. "Mimi—" (his name for her since babyhood, though now that he's nine, he's inclined to shorten it to Meem)—"Mimi, I have to talk to you quietly. Come on in here. It's the only place where they don't have telephones."

He led her to the bathroom. "Listen, Mimi, what are you going to do about all those other people?"

"What other people, honey?"

He named a number of Mary's ex-cavaliers. "What're they going to think?"

"Why, they'll think it's all right."

He shook a doubting head. "Those other people're going to feel pretty bad. I'll tell you what we mustn't do. We mustn't tell 'em."

It was shortly thereafter that his grandmother passed his room and heard sounds as of Larry talking to himself. She listened. He was weighing possible forms of address for his new parent. "Dicky—" he said, and let the sound fall on his ear—"Daddy Dick—Pal Dick—Dick, old boy." At the brisk note of the last, she choked and beat a hasty retreat. He settled for Dicky, though once in a while Dad pops out almost unaware and sets up a pleasant glow in Halliday's innards.

It was Larry's first wedding. He watched presents arrive by the bale and drew his own conclusions as to the proper course for a son of the house. Out driving with his grandmother one day, he said: "Stop the car, please, Nanny. I want to see that dog." A white wolfhound lay stretched on a lawn beside a sign that said: "Dog for sale."

"How much is it?" he asked the woman who answered their ring.

She smiled down at the very earnest face. "Too much for you, I'm afraid."

"Well, I want to buy it for my mother for her wedding present, and I picked this one out because it looks like them." (What he meant, nobody knows exactly, though the Princess Olga is long and lean like Dick and—like Mary—a dark-eyed blonde). "I have twenty-five dollars in the bank. Would that be enough?"

Mary, star of "New York Town," is given to whims. She's constantly turning from blonde to brunette!

"Do you think your mother would love the dog? That's pretty important."

"Sure, I guess she would. She loves most anything I give her."

So the bargain was struck. Larry phoned Mary at the studio. "When you get home, there's something in the back yard. You're supposed to love it."

Mary got home early to find a wolfhound so desolate with homesickness that it barked and screamed at its new owner's approach. Larry, who was spending the day with his grandmother, phoned again. "D'you love it?" he inquired anxiously.

"Honey, we're crazy about it," yelled Mary to make herself heard above the howls of the Princess Olga.

Dick thinks Mary's "the most beautiful thing that ever lived." She thinks he's "absolutely a genius—but sweet anyway."

Mary (with Dick Powell) sings constantly for her own and Mr. H's amusement, occasionally for radio listener-inners.

You should see her now, though—the darling of the house and eating it up. "Here comes my husband," says Mary, pricking her ears to the sound of a step on the walk. The door opens. "Hello, beautiful," calls a masculine voice. Olga, the Princess, having more legs, gets there first. You hear murmured endearments in the lobby, then Mary's firm, "Shut up, Princess, he means me," as she clambers over three feet of wriggling wolfhound to get into her husband's arms.

They reappear together—a tall, dark man with his arm round a slim, small girl in a beige skirt and sweater. His features are those of a monk out of the Middle Ages—sensitive, fine-cut, almost ascetic—but his expression is that of a twentieth-century gent in love with his wife. She laughs at him—fetching with her soft brown eyes under soft blonde hair and her infectious good spirits. It seems that Richard, busy at the agency of which he's story editor, hasn't had lunch yet, though it's three o'clock. She's offered, not too convincingly, to fix him some.

"Just the busy little housewife," he leers, "for benefit of press. Look, the press knows perfectly well that you can't cook."

"The press," says Mary, "never tasted my chocolate cake." She speaks with acid deliberation. "The press never made a pig of itself on my chocolate cake. The press never gorged on my chocolate cake till it fairly dripped out of the press' ears."

Richard throws up his hands and flees toward the lunch Mary never had any intention of fixing, leaving her to tell the story of her gradual metamorphosis into a housewife. "Very gradual," she says.

First, there was the house. They had no trouble picking it. They'd fallen in love with it when they'd gone house-hunting with Richard's mother, who was planning to move to the Coast. Her plans fell through, so the junior Hallidays snapped the treasure up. It's white brick and frame, and stands on a minor hill in Bel-Air, the front lawn with its lovely trees sloping toward the road, the garden rising in terraces behind. They moved in twenty days after their marriage.

Then—not before—came the furniture. Mary'd lived in hotels and in homes run by her mother. She had the feeling that furniture came along and walked itself into one's house. She was both hurt and indignant on discovering her error. But the business of Mary's furniture is a twice-told tale, so we'll skip it here.

Then came the servants. Mary handled the servant problem like a general. Her studio maid had proved a dud. "Call somewhere," she told her secretary, "and get somebody."

It was a feverish day on the set. "Hand me this," said Mary. "Hand me that!" This and that were handed her. Not till the end of the day did she look up into a serene and (Continued on page 88)

ON THE SET WITH

ON THE SET WITH

ON THE SET WITH

ON THE SET WITH

"POT O' GOLD"

st the studio woy over $3,000 ented street scenes for the us tomoto-throwing sequence!

Jimmy Roosevelt's father has a good job. He sits in a multiroomed office, runs the nation for $75,000 yearly and laughs off bad reviews because his option's just been lifted, and he knows he can't be as bad as the critics say.

Jimmy Roosevelt admires his father. He thinks he's a great performer—but he doesn't want to play in the same kind of show. Jimmy yearns to be a motion picture producer, and with "Pot O' Gold," a Paulette Goddard-James Stewart classic, he embarks upon his first term as a mighty mogul of the cinema.

"Pot O' Gold" is hokum from the word go. It's slapstick with kid gloves. Jimmy admits it. The principals are constantly being rushed in and out of jail, the villain gets pasted with a tomato, the big-hearted boarding house-keeper almost loses her home-sweet-home, the hero and heroine suffer the usual misunderstandings, and righteousness doesn't triumph till the very last reel. It's the kind of hokum that stuffs theatres, however, and to producer Jimmy, who has $800,000 boiling in the "Pot," a money-making dish is more important than a victory for Art.

As chief ingredients in this "Pot," Paulette and Stewart are two extraordinary morsels. Paulette does a hippy rhumba and warbles for the first time on the screen, and Jimmy portrays a Ferdinand the Bull-ish sort of guy who'd rather lie in the grass and sniff the flowers than go to work in his rich uncle's breakfast food factory. Seasoning for the film is provided by apple-cheeked Charles Winninger now entering his fortieth year in show business and white-haired Mary Gordon who used to tote trays in a studio commissary before getting her picture break at the age of fifty. The dessert, of e comeroman Hol Mohr instructs thusiostic pupil Goddord in that ckiest of tricks—rollin' your own!

Horoce Heidt ond his Musical Knights, whose Pot O' Gold progrom inspired the picture, beat it out in o mellow jive!

One of producer Roosevelt's Morines gets the thrill of a lifetime from a trip to the set ond on introduction to the stors.

Plus the hormanico, Jimmy swings a mean occardion ond a wicked flute!

Paulette's desire ta avoid Jimmy Stewart is matched only by his yen to steer clear of her!

The tomataes Stewart tasses at Winninger ore stuffed with whipped cream, chacalate syrup and tamata catsup so they'll give o photogenic splosh!

GODDARD SWINGS, STEWART SINGS IN THIS SUPER-DUPER COMEDY PACKED WITH THRILLS AND TRILLS!

course, is movie-debuting bandleader Horace Heidt, whose famous "Pot O' Gold" radio show gave producer Roosevelt the inspiration for his picture.

In painful contrast to the easy informality of the script is the off-stage behavior of stars Goddard and Stewart. Though the two have never clashed openly, their side lines manner is frighteningly cool and distant. Not even their first love scene (which Paulette played in a nightgown) kindled the smallest ember of friendship. After completing a torrid take, Paulette invariably rushes off to her dressing-room to jab her energies into a piece of needle-point designed especially for her by Mexican artist Diego Rivera, while Jimmy goes off into a dark corner and sits silently with his elbows dug into his knees, his chin cupped in his hands and his eyes fastened to his feet. They'll clown only if the cameraman begs hard enough—and he seldom does.

Happily for James Roosevelt, little of this star strain is brought before his tired eyes. Shortly before his picture got rolling, he was summoned to Marine Corps duty at the United States Naval Base at San Diego, and now he can't spend more than week-ends at his beloved studio! Daily rushes are flown to him, however, (a distance of one hundred and twenty miles) and run off in the barracks' projection room for the benefit of him and his loyal boys.

Incidentally, so intimately do the young Corps members know the picture, they feel they own part of it, too! You might remember that, when you see "Pot O' Gold, if there's any griping to be done, don't bother Mr. Roosevelt—just tell it to the Marines!

Paulette chats with o script gal when naise from nosey airplanes holds up production.

"Polly" plays o brisk game of gin rummy with ane of the studia cops. To keep worm she takes ta her fur coat.

'Twixt incessont phone calls, visiting praducers and "takes," Poulette tucks in some ice cream with a little admirer.

Glamaur dress designer Helen Taylar turns aut naïve hausedresses by the dazens far this picture!

BY SYLVIA KAHN

IT'S A

Lupe knows about love, about the ways of love, about the ways of lovers. By the time this piece appears, she and Big Boy Williams may be married and living out in the San Fernando Valley on Big Boy's ranch. Or, of course, they may not.

As Lupe, herself, puts it, "We may marry in five hours, in six months, in a year or maybe never. I do not say things unless I am sure. Besides, I have learned that we do not set times for love.

"Big Boy hated me before we met. He was my worst enemy in Hollywood because of the things he read about me. He said, 'that dizzy dame' and things like that. I tell you, girls, it is nothing to be afraid of if a boy starts by hating you."

"But when I met her," Big Boy explained, "she was altogether different from what I had imagined. I had read about the fiery, tempestuous Lupe Velez. I didn't like what I read. She was everything, I thought, that a man dislikes. I know better now. That temperament business was all bluff. Lupe loves her home and takes pride in it and works in it. Why, she even painted two rooms in her house herself with her own hands. And thrifty! She saves everything. The gardener mows the lawn, and she says, 'Don't throw that grass away. Save it for the pigs; they like it.' When she has mashed potatoes for dinner she saves the mashed potatoes, and the next night we have mashed potato soup, the best soup I've ever tasted. As for the famous Velez temper," said Big, "she must have lost it long before we met. All I know is that when we start to have an argument, she gets into her car and drives away, and there is no argument."

No doubt about it. Lupe, who once was wild, has now grown very wise. But when did the metamorphosis of the Mexican Spitfire take place?

Lupe laughed. "It's simpler than that. It's that I'm not a kid any longer. I'm a grown-up woman, and I behave as such. I do not deny my age. I tell it. I am twenty-nine. I do not want to be a Hollywood 'tradition' with curls on my head and baby-talk inside my head when I am fifty. I am young, yes, but not seventeen any longer. . . .

"Now I do not grease my hands with butter before I shake hands with visiting dignitaries. . . . I do not cut pranks on the sets as I did when first I came to Hollywood and played with Douglas Fairbanks, Senior, in 'The Gaucho.' When I first came to Hollywood, Fanny Brice invited me to a party. She told me, 'Wear an evening dress.' I thought, Migod, an evening dress, that is funny. But my mother always told me, 'When in Rome, do as Lupe, who has the most fabulous collection of jewels in Hollywood, says a girl's worst mistake is to make the man she loves jealous!

BY GLADYS HALL

HUSBAND YOU'RE AFTER...

JUST LISTEN TO LUPE! WHEN A GAL'S BEEN IN AND OUT OF LOVE FOR OVER A DOZEN YEARS, SHE CAN REALLY GIVE YOU POINTERS!

the Romans do,' so I went to that party in my night-dress! I did not understand the language, and I thought evening dress meant night-dress. If you should hear of me doing these things now, you would say 'that dame is crazy,' and you would be right.

"I do not scream and yell in public as I used to do, though they will write up that I do. They write of me today as I was ten years ago. That is why I do not let them write about me anymore. Because I am not as I was ten years ago. . . .

"I have travelled all over the world, in the United States, in South America and in Europe. I have had men of many races make love to me. I have been in love, and I have had my heart broken, too. And I have come back recovered and much the wiser.

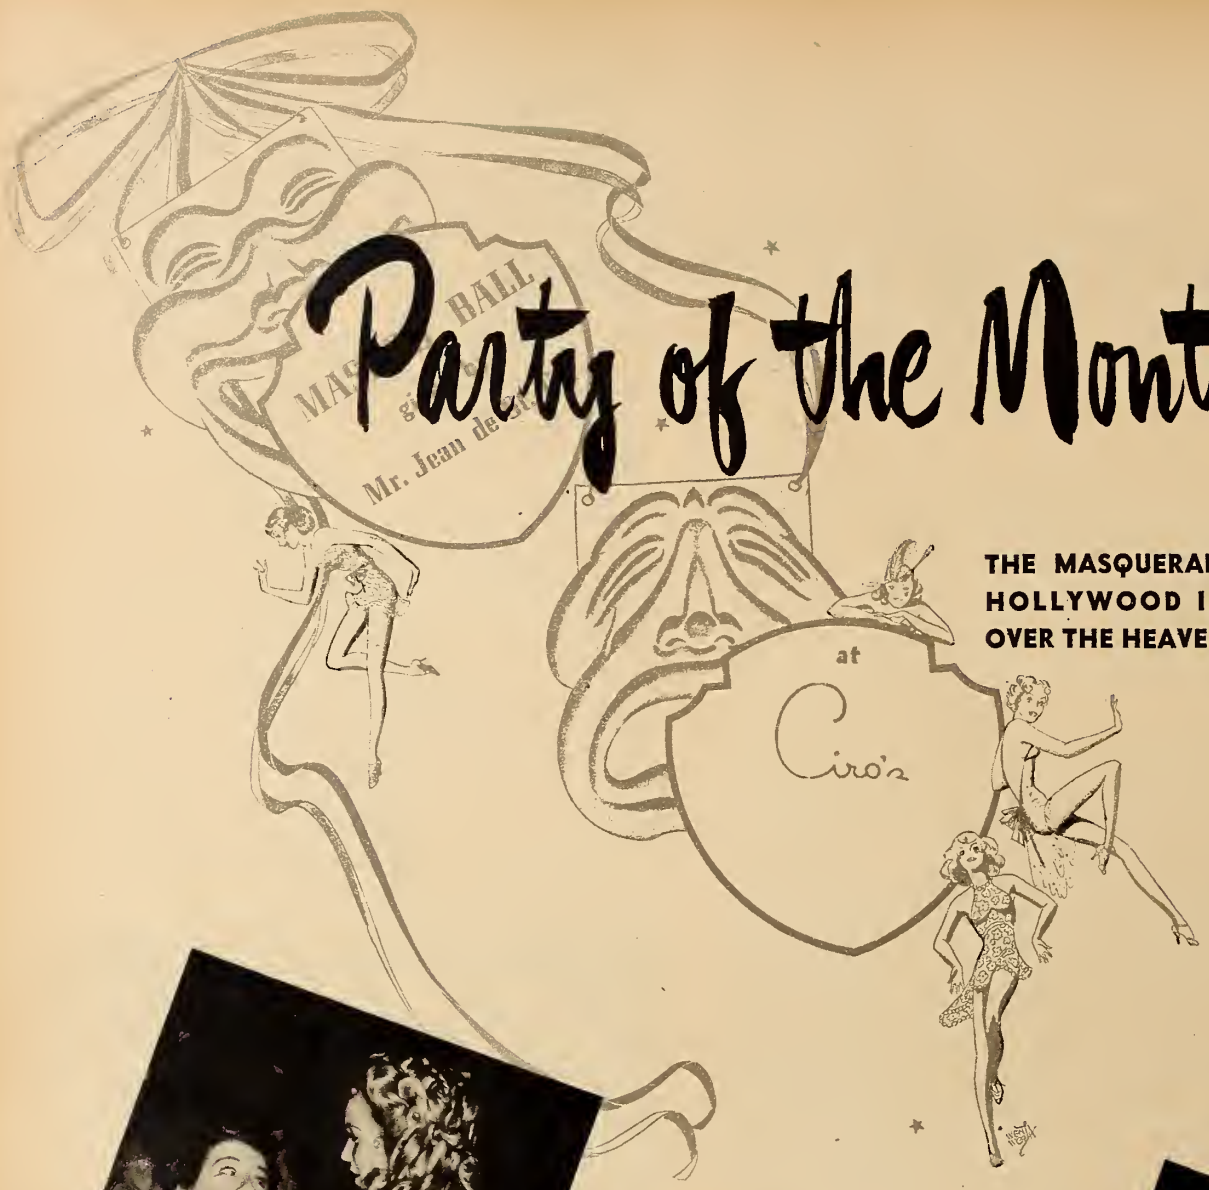
"I have been married to Johnny Weissmuller. I have been divorced. I have had everything of this world—money, fame, flattery, jewels, furs. I still have everything, thank God, and thanks to America. I have worked for what I have; nobody has given me anything.

"A woman like me," said Lupe, "should know about life and love and men and women. I have made many mistakes, yet if I had my life to live again, I would do the same. Because we only learn by making mistakes, our own mistakes. That is why I am hesitating about advising girls about anything. Especially about men.

"But I will say a few down-to-earth truths I have found out about when you are in love—

"You girls say you want to be actresses; all the time you write to me and say you wish you could be actresses. Well, I say to you, you had better be actresses! Wherever you are, no matter what you are doing, whether you are housewives or stenographers or schoolteachers, when you are with men you had better be actresses, and good ones. Because unless a woman is an actress she will never have any success as a woman in love. She will never have any lasting success with men.

"Please do not misunderstand me. I do not mean you must be the phony kind of actress that imitates and does not mean what she is doing. I mean you must be a fine actress who lives your part because you love it and believe it. I mean you must play many characters with men, but you must truly be each one of them.



"My father was a very wise man. He told me, 'In the streets, be a queen; in the church, be a saint; in the home, be whatever you are. . . .' that is how it is with men; with different men, be different women.

"People are saying that I have changed, now, because of Big. No and yes. Let me (Continued on page 90)

In Universal's "Six Lessans fram Madame La Zanga," the diminutive, red-haired Lupe (she's just five feet) ca-stars with "Big Boy" Williams, wha weighs exactly ane hundred paunds more than she does!

Party of the Month

THE MASQUERADE IS OVER, BUT HOLLYWOOD IS STILL A-BUZZ OVER THE HEAVENLY TIME IT HAD!

Guest-of-honor Cobina Wright, Jr., and Fanny Brice at Rex St. Cyr's $6,000 party at Ciro's for Hollywood's 400.

Top-flight society man Alfred Vanderbilt and Ginny Field, who displayed her English patriotism dressed as a British showgirl.

Dennis O'Keefe and wife Steffi Duna were among the 250 costumed guests who danced to Emil Coleman's band until 4:30 A. M.

Photos by staff photographer Nat Dallinger

Warner's new starlet, Juanita Starke—who was an unemployed waitress three months ago, takes over McCarthy's spot on Eddie Bergen's knee.

Roz Russell of the mad millinery danced every dance with agent Freddie Brisson who came garbed as a Russian count.

Greg Bautzer took his costume so seriously he began handing Dottie Lamour (who came as a chorine) a line in Spanish!

Host Rex St. Cyr (with Earl Corroll's latest romonce, Beryl Wolloce) is o tronsplanted New York sociolite. He donced with over o hundred gols! There were guords galore to make sure there were no gotecroshers. The only entertoinment provided wos the music ond o few songs by post-débutonte Cobino.

CONTINUED . . .

That old lady-killer Frank Morgan made a scandalous play for his good pal Paul Lukas' lovely wife, Daisy.

Patricia Morison with "Pierrot" Alan Mowbray, who was the very last one to go home even though he had an 8 o'clock appointment next morning!

Randy Scott (in-name-only hubby of Marion Dupont Somerville) and Britisher June Duprez were muchly photographed.

At 10:30 when masks came off, Raggedy Ann emerged as Ruth Hussey and the Egyptian sheik turned up as her fiancé Raphael Hakim, who's an honest-to-goodness Egyptian in real life!

Wolter Pidgeon (looking like something out of Dickens) come with his wife, from whom he's been seporoted for yeors, but devoted himself exclusively to Goyle Mellott.

HOLLYWOOD SKIN CARE

BY CAROL CARTER

Take a leaf from Hollywood's beauty book and recapture the charm of a skin as fresh as April! Here's how it's done

"All this rapturous talk about soft, silken, rose-petal complexions is just ducky," writes one of our young friends, "but what if a girl has lost that skin-men-love-to-look-at? Can she ever get it back and, if so, how?"

Indeed, you can recapture the loveliness of a flawless complexion. Thousands of glamour girls, careerists, students and busy homebodies everywhere, after slightly rearranging their designs for living and revising their beauty rituals, have discovered underneath that top layer of blemishes a skin as smooth and lovely as a six-year-old's!

That's because skin is constantly changing and renewing itself—the old sloughing off, the new replacing it. As long as your blemishes affect only the top layer, or epidermis, your task will be simple. There are three layers of skin, you know. The top skin is formed of tiny, horny, scale-like cells which are kept smooth and soft by natural lubricating oils. The second, or true skin, contains all the blood vessels, nerves, glands, ducts, hair follicles and also the pigments which decide your skin coloring. The third layer, or subdermis, is sometimes called the fatty skin. But we won't go into these second two layers, for blemishes affecting them should be treated by doctors, not beauticians. What can be done for the top skin is exciting enough. It's a case of save the surface and you save all.

The worst and most common enemies of skin beauty are dirt, a sluggish system and harsh, drying, aging elements, such as steam-heated air and hard water. These, separately, or in combinations, cause enlarged pores, blackheads, acne, rough patches, red blotches, "fever" blisters and practically every other form of surface blemish you can think of.

Enlarged pores are usually the result of a sluggish system, careless cleanliness or a combination of the two. Vigorous and regular outdoor exercise, a diet of light foods, including lots of garden-fresh fruits and vegetables and a minimum of sweet, rich, heavy foods, together with six or eight glasses of water every day may not sound super-glamorous, but they'll do a lot toward restoring your skin to that enviable condition. Add to this care a daily scrubbing with a soft-bristled complexion brush, warm water and mild soap suds. Always follow with a cold water rinse and an ice-cold astringent. Use the finest, fluffiest of creams and powders you can find—and you'll have the perfect formula for a skin as fine as velvet.

Blackheads are enlarged pores that have become clogged, sometimes even infected with a combination of oil and grime, and the overworked pores have relaxed and expanded. To help them back to normal, give them the same care you give to enlarged pores and, in addition, steam the face, either over a bowl of boiling water for five minutes, or via the applied towel-wrung-out-in-piping-hot-water method. This will help soften the hardened masses so they may be more easily dislodged by gentle pressure.

Before either kind of steaming, apply lots of cold or cleansing cream to the skin to aid and hasten the softening process. After your blackheads are thoroughly softened, wrap two fingers in a soft linen towel or two thicknesses of clean facial tissues, and gently press out the contents of each separate pore. There are good little metal gadgets, too, with a tiny hole devised to press down over each blackhead. Either of these methods is safe, but never, never use a bare finger or any part of your finger nail, unless you want a permanent and (Continued on page 93)

Joan Fontaine says that a flawless complexion has boosted her steady climb up the ladder of fame.

NEW FACES

After cleansing, massage your neck from base to jowbone, all over.

With back of hands well-creamed, pat and stroke firmly under chin.

Massage from chin to nose, to ears, then chin to temples.

Massage from chin to nostrils, to cheeks, to temples, in curves.

Stroke forehead firmly from center first up, then up and outward.

ANY DAY now the first crocus is going to poke its bright little face right through your garden wall, the first robin will perch outside your sunny window sill, and you, all of a sudden, saturated with the spirit of spring are going to ransack your wardrobe for clothes to match your mood and scan your mirror in search of a face to go with all this budding loveliness of a newborn season.

But what do you see when you look in that mirror of yours? Does your face go with the rest of the picture? Or is it a bit winter-worn and sorry-looking, lined from dryness and exposure, chapped or clogged, or just a trifle dull and pasty in appearance? No wonder, after a winter full of indoor inactivity, too many changes from wet to dry, from hot to cold and back again, too many colds and too little sunshine, too many pastries and not enough vitamins.

Then out with those cleansing creams, astringents and tissues. Bring on your complexion soap, soft brushes and lotions. That skin of yours is coaxing for a stimulating facial to restore its glowing freshness—and here's how you go about it.

First, bind back your hair with a towel, net or lastex band. Now cleanse your face and neck thoroughly with warm water, soap and a complexion brush.

Second: Slather your face and neck with your favorite cleansing cream and, with the back of your hands also creamed, pat firmly, first, under the chin, stroking from side to side with alternating hands. Then, with fingers on your chin, massage in a crescent stroke from chin to directly in front of each ear. Next, from chin across the cheeks, massage upward toward your temples.

Third: Continuing the massage, start again at the chin and work in firm, rotary, parenthesis-shaped lines around your mouth and up to the base of each nostril, then following the curve of your cheekbone, continue up and out, ending again at the temples. Fourth: With gentler, lighter strokes, massage from the sides of your nose, around under each eye. Repeat this several times, each time beginning higher up beside the bridge of your nose, and always ending at the temples.

Fifth: Place fingers on your forehead, between the brows, and stroke firmly upward, then up and outward, until you've included the entire forehead. Sixth: Massage horizontally across your forehead to relax tired nerves and stimulate circulation.

Seventh: Now remove all the cleansing cream with cotton wrung out in a skin freshener or astringent. Eighth: Your skin is ready for a rich, oily lubricating cream to be left on for five or ten minutes while your eyes are covered with cotton pads soaked in either eye lotion or skin tonic. Ninth: Remove this lubricating cream with skin freshener and go over your entire face and neck lightly with an ice cube wrapped in thin cloth, or a square of cotton wrung out in ice cold astringent.

Tenth: Dry your face with a clean towel and, if you're going out, apply make-up lightly and with care.

Now, take another look in that mirror. What

AWAKEN YOUR WINTER-WEARY SKIN WITH

FOR OLD . . .

Massage acrass torehead, ratating fingers. This relaxes tired nerves.

a different picture! If such a facial massage is repeated once a week throughout the spring, your skin will respond quickly and gratefully with a soft, smooth, fresh and dewy look that will put spring itself in second place.

Between facials, practice some of the exercises pictured on these pages. They will not only make muscles firm and mobile but, by stimulating circulation, they will add extra glow and color, fill out hollows and help ward off those bug-a-boo wrinkles.

You see, the same old faithful trio for skin care—cleansing, stimulation and lubrication—has been at work here in a different but very important guise. Whether glamour girl, careerist or homebody, this same famous combination will work minor miracles for you if you will follow faithfully the way it is practiced in Hollywood. Then, no matter what the season, with a little care your skin can be made to look as fresh and radiant as spring itself.

Beauty masks are another short-cut to skin loveliness which may be achieved in anywhere from five to thirty minutes and are real lifesavers when you're in a hurry. There are several kinds of facial masks. The mildest is the quick pick-up type which creates a temporary illusion of beauty when there's no time for more fundamental refurbishing. These are all in cream form. Some dry on the face and should be washed off with a skin freshener or cold water. Others come off easily with clean, absorbent facial tissues. Such masks make your skin feel by turns both warm and cold. You see, they stimulate surface circulation and create a glowing freshness in even the drabbest complexion. Pick-up masks are usually pleasantly perfumed and their very scent gives your spirits a lift while their magic is at work on your skin. The directions on these cream masks prescribe anywhere from a ten to thirty minute application and, for perfect results, you should follow them explicitly. So before your next big date, put one on and watch your skin blossom with new life and radiance.

Oily, sluggish skins are immensely stimulated and enlivened by the use of what might be called circulation masks. These are more drastic than those just described and should not be applied to thin, sensitive skin or to faces with any trace of broken veins. The action of these masks may be slightly burning or uncomfortable but, if your skin is coarse or heavy, they are just what you need. Three to five minutes is all the time circulation masks usually require. And they should be followed by a softening or lubricating cream, either cold or cleansing.

A third type of mask will help to contract large, relaxed pores. And a first cousin to this one is a mask to help dislodge blackheads and hasten the blooming of blemishes that are still partly concealed under your skin's surface. Both of these might be called pore masks. They are penetrating, stimulating as well as astringent and usually require ten to thirty minutes to do their work and restore the bloom to your cheeks.

Directions on package labels will guide you in the accurate use of all facial masks. A rule which always holds, though, is to start with a thoroughly clean skin and, for best results, rest or relax while your mask is at work. You'll be rewarded.

While massaging flabby cheeks, smile broadly, apen and clase jaws.

For under-eye pauches, draw fingers lightly aver clased eyes.

Far heavy jowls, lift muscles, pinch gently. Increase pressure gradually.

Hearty laughter helps carrect crêpy thraat, stimulates sluggish glands.

Pased by Darathy Darrell, starlet af Universal's "Meet the Chump."

A STIMULATING AND REFRESHING FACIAL

BEAUTY AND THE MALE . . .

Some of them were handsome—not all. But their faces had this in common—they all looked alive, and they all looked sheepish. Wonder why men act so shy about discussing their favorite topic—women!

There were ten of them altogether—ten stars whom we considered authorities on the subject—and we put our problem before them without preamble. "Our girls," we told them, "want to know what you boys consider a beautiful woman, and they wouldn't mind having a few tips on how to get and hold their boy-friends while you're at it! Don't try to squirm out of it by saying a beautiful woman's Hedy Lamarr or Loretta Young. They can't turn themselves into Youngs and Lamarrs. Keep it practical. Give them some hints that'll help them make the most of their good points and tone down the bad. All right. What do you notice first about a woman?"

Cagney, the bravest, stepped forward. "I notice the eyes first," he said. "I think everyone does. Personally, I like them dark. But that's beside the point. Any color can be beautiful—any shape—wide eyes, like a kid's listening to a fairy tale, or the oblong Oriental type. What's important is the way they're set, the surrounding terrain and the expression. They should be far enough apart for good proportion. If they give the impression of trying to meet over the nose, I don't know what a girl can do about it, but anything she does is okay with me.

"There's plenty she can do about the second point. She can stop plucking her eyebrows like an aborigine. I don't mean, if her forehead sprouts thatches, she shouldn't thin 'em out. But if there's anything attractive about a couple of wizened hairs that make the whole face look naked, I'll eat mine. Also, when a man looks into a girl's eyes, it's eyes he wants to see not a smear of make-up. Long lashes are fine, but I'd rather have 'em short than tacked on, and I'd rather see honesty in a woman's eyes than phony allure."

"What about the third point? Is there anything she can do about the expression of her eyes?"

"Sure," Jimmy grinned. "She can be a nice kid. Give me a woman whose eyes are clear and soft and friendly, whether she's stroking a kitten or asking about the price of beans, and there's a woman a man can cleave to. Blue shadows and mascara wash off, and when there's a pair of glazed fish-eyes behind them, you're left with nothing and worse than nothing. So I say, watch the eyes, boys. Whatever she is, good or bad, the eyes will have it."

We summed up. "Eyes clear, friendly and soft, without too much make-up. Who'll give us a mouth?" Several hands shot up. Mr. Milland was called on.

"No rosebud of a mouth," said Ray firmly. "That went out with bustles. Not a finely-chiseled mouth, it's too cold. Not a square-cut mouth, makes you think she'd rather play tennis than—"

"Kissing games?" we inquired.

"Well, I wouldn't put it that way—but I'll take what you'd call a generous mouth—full at the center and curling a little at the corners. There's something ravishing about that curl at the corners, especially when it's downy like a peach. It's as if a direct wire were strung between her mouth and her mind. When she's amused or feels a little devilish, that's where it shows up first—just a fleeting shadow—it's there and it melts away."

"Gosh!" breathed Jackie Cooper.

"May I also ask," continued Ray with some heat, "why women don't leave their mouths alone? Take a purely hypothetical case. Take a man who wants to kiss a girl. He gets close enough to do it, then he sees the lipline here and the lip somewhere else. Being polite, he'll kiss her anyway. But he kisses her, saying nuts. He's disillusioned. Why can't women learn to put on lipstick a little more subtly? A woman's mouth is herself as much as her eyes. She's not fooling anyone when she tries to change it."

Well, we had the eyes and mouth—who, we asked, would give us a beautiful setting for 'em?

Gable elbowed his way forward. "Let me do my stuff and get it over." A nervous huskiness in his throat wore off after a minute or two. "Oval face, high cheekbones, little hollows under 'em. High forehead going up and back. Don't doody it up with a mess of curls. Leave it bare, makes the face look open. Deep-set eyes, arched brows, kind of astonished looking—hope I'm not horning in on you, Cagney. I like 'em that way, kind of tasty touch. A nose that knows where it belongs and stays there, takes up just enough room, no more, no less. Nicely curved ears, close to the head, not too small—and no cracks, brother. Long neck, but long or short, hold your head high on it." He took a step back, paused and added paternally: "Don't put too much junk on your face—scares a man off. That's all."

"No fair, teacher." Crosby was waving his hand. "All he had to do was describe Lombard."

"Who has a better right? You, young man, what are you so excited about?"

"I want hair," said Jackie, "before someone else grabs it."

"Bonita's, huh?" came a derisive chorus.

"Well, if Mr. Gable has a right—" Jackie ploughed in. "I like it blonde—not yellow or platinum—sort of a soft blonde. But if it has to be dark, it ought to have reddish lights. You can almost always get 'em, my girl says, with a lot of brushing. And that's the important thing for any hair, (Continued on page 84)

IF YOU'RE OUT TO CAPTIVATE, TAKE YOUR CUE FROM HOLLYWOOD'S FOREMOST CONNOISSEURS!

Hollywood glamour gal Veronica Lake has more than the usual quota of feminine wiles. She's currently starring in "I Wanted Wings."

BING CROSBY

MELVYN DOUGLAS

CLARK GABLE

JACKIE COOPER

JAMES CAGNEY

HUMPHREY BOGART

BY BETTY HARRIS

Good News

SUPER SCOOPS FROM THE GAY HOLLYWOOD FRONT!

Louis Hayward's puns still stump Ida Lupino even after two years of living with 'em!

SAY IT ISN'T SO

The marriage of the Gary Coopers is the latest to land in the Hollywood frying pan. Friends hope it's not true, but rumor has it that the splutterings and sparks heard around the Cooper home aren't all coming from the kitchen stove. Divorce for shy Gary and his handsome wife would be a tragic, agonizing experience which both would do anything to avoid. If any trouble is brewing, they'll do their darndest to clear it up behind bolted doors, and it's our hunch—as well as our hope—that the last laugh will be theirs and not the gossips'.

PUTTING UP A FRONT

Biggest giggle-getter of the month is the story of a top-notch glamour girl whose boy friend took her to the Arrowhead Springs Hotel pool for her first swimming lesson. The cute little suitful breezed through the preliminaries and then, weary of the water, deposited herself at the poolside to pose casually for the benefit of the other patrons. She was languidly flexing her muscles and squirming her shoulders when her boy-friend got a bright idea. Curious to know how much she'd learned, he sneaked up behind her and dumped her back into the water. The onlookers howled, but not nearly as hard as they did when the poor girl had sputtered her way back from aqua to air. For only then did they realize that the show-offish glamour queen was equipped with a built-in bosom—and that the bosom had slipped its moorings and was nestled coyly under her chin!

LUXURIOUS NECESSITY

It was Paulette Goddard who recently stated that no girl need spend more than $16.50 for a dress in order to be attractively garbed. An intelligent observation, we'll admit. But it's our duty to report that no sooner had Miss Goddard rid herself of this important message, than she was discovered in a swank gown shop ordering a little number that answered to the price of $150! Her explanation? She simply had to have it to properly set off a stunning diamond necklace she'd just received! Modern Screen makes no extra charge for this fashion hint.

DIDJA KNOW

That Tyrone Power is the toughest guy in Hollywood to shoot for color because his heavy beard makes him photograph like one of the Two Black Crows . . . That Cary Grant is now working as Cary Grant's stand-in, the original jobholder being busy with British war relief work . . . That Joan Blondell is president of "Blondes Preferred," an honest-to-goodness corporation dedicated to correcting the impression that "blondes are less desirable mates than brunettes" . . . That George Murphy's recent flu attack laid Discount Bill Holden-Brenda Marshall marriage rumors. It's just an "understanding."

him unconscious for 24 hours . . . That Patsy Kelly is the only Hollywood star mentioned by Gogo Schiaparelli in her list of America's 10 most interesting women . . . That 15-year-old Jane Withers is burning up the town with her new fire-engine red convertible coupé . . . That Bonita Granville is jealous of the time Jackie Cooper spends with his drums, and that's the only reason they fight . . . That Jimmy Stewart, one of the few licensed airplane pilots in the colony, gets woozy when he climbs a ladder . . . That Rita Lowe, asked why she separated from husband Edmund, replied: "I just couldn't stand the man another minute?"

DISSENSION IN THE RANKS

Angel-voiced Susanna Foster can sure pack a mean verbal wallop when the mood is upon her. Unlike most actresses who eternally gush and goo about all the things they lo-ove, Susanna has two pet peeves and doesn't care who knows it! Her first is Mickey Rooney. "I can't stand the way he carries on," says she, "and I wouldn't go out with him even if he asked me!" Her second gripe, aimed at an important star on her lot, is a little more violent. "She makes me sore because she thinks she's so beautiful. And I don't like the way she gets so much publicity out of her romances either. But what gets me good and mad is the way she acts whenever we meet. We've been introduced about four times, and each time she just looks at me sort of empty-faced and says: 'Oh, are you little Susanna Foster?'"

SAD SONG OF INDIA

Producers who dread location trips—because Alicia Applebottom always faints in the sun and Roland Ripplepuss likes to get drunk with the natives—ought to lend an ear to what Michael Gordon, Bombay film producer, has to say. Gordon, just arrived in the United States from India, claims Hollywood location headaches can't hold a candle to what goes on when he takes a troupe away from a studio. "Our big difficulty is feeding the cast," says he. "In America, you ring a dinner bell, and all your actors come scrambling. In India it's different. A Mohammedan won't eat what a Hindu will, a Hindu won't eat at the same table with a Mohammedan, and a Hindu of one caste will scream if a Hindu of another caste prepares his food. We're faced with the problem of setting up a half dozen different kitchens! "That," says long-suffering producer Gordon, "is what I call trouble."

SOME SERVICE!

Spotted at the House of Murphy—Cary Grant and Barbara Hutton chuckling in the candlelight over a table card reading: "In case I'm too G . . D . . . inebriated to get out of this joint, please deliver me and send the bill to: Address ——— Phone Number (Just in case I won't go)——— "

Alice Faye makes news when she lures recluse George Sanders into the social whirl!

BRIEF RAPTURE

Just to give you an idea of what some guys will do for a girl in this town, take the case of Rudy Vallee and Gene Tierney. Rudy lamped Gene at a night club one evening and all but fell on his face with joy. There, he decided, was the answer to his prayers—a girl he absolutely had to know. Not the least dismayed by the fact that they'd never been introduced, he began showering her with flowers, gifts and invitations to dinner. To his astonishment, his efforts drew a complete blank. Gene wouldn't go out with him. She dates no man unless he's okayed by her mother—and her mother hadn't okayed Rudy. But did that stump our hero? Not a bit. For the sole purpose of meeting his lady-love, he persuaded a good-hearted friend to throw a huge party to which Gene would be invited. The friend complied, Gene turned up and Rudy had one blissful evening of basking in her smile. What he'll do about their next meeting, we don't know. After all, even friendship has its limits!

SHORT SHOTS

Confidential to Paramount: Mary Martin would like to have a little girl this year . . . The Robert Prestons have a pact never to appear in a picture together . . . Joel McCrea still wears the 50c hat he bought in Manchester, N H., where he honeymooned with Frances Dee . . . On strict orders from M-G-M, Johnny Weissmuller must snub the barber chair for another year . . . Stirling Hayden is shopping for a houseboat. He wants to anchor it at Santa Monica and live there with one manservant . . . The Dionne kids will trill "There'll Always Be An England" for a British War Relief short. Fox wrote "finis" to their movie career, however, when they failed to lift the quints' option . . . April 1st is the happy day for Ilona Massey and Alan Curtis. His divorce becomes final 18 days earlier . . . Susan Hayward's ice cream company keeps the Brown Derby supplied with the stuff . . . Nigel Bruce, the most English Englishman of them all, was born in San Diego, Calif. His parents were on a world tour at the time . . . Penny Singleton's daughter, "Dee Gee," was guest of honor when her mother honeymooned with Producer Bob Sparks.

POCKET GUIDE TO HOLLYWOOD

Fred Allen, whose coolness toward Hollywood is matched only by Hollywood's coolness toward him, contributes the following Movietown glossary to the "Hollywood Reporter"—BROWN DERBY: A popular café where people from Iowa mistake each other for movie stars. CIRO'S: The Brown Derby with white tie, where movie stars mistake each other for movie stars. NATIVE: A New York actor whose option wasn't taken up in 1926. MOVIE STAR'S HOME: The ultimate in stucco. An edifice erected on a beautiful lawn to keep strangers from getting a direct view of the star's swimming pool from the street. SWIMMING POOL: A demi-tasse pond that draws flies and guests. BARBECUE: A Hollywood function at which food is cooked and served in the back yard. A barbecue enables the hostess to get guests and mice out of the house simultaneously. DOUBLE FEATURE: Twin mistakes made by the same—or two different—picture companies. PRODUCER: A dynamic ulcer in charge of making a picture. ASSOCIATE PROD.: The man who gets fired when the producer makes a bad film.

One reason why Ma Rabinson still adores Eddie after twenty-six years of wedlock!

A MATTER OF OPINION

Barbara Stanwyck ran into Bill Holden a few days after his salary tiff with Paramount. Bill was blue, discouraged, hurt. He was thinking of quitting pictures, he told Barbara. "What'll you do then?" she wanted to know. "Oh, I'll go into my father's business," replied Bill. "He wants me to and, besides, in his business you never have the heartaches you have in the movies." "Zat so?" up-eyebrowed Barbara. "What business is that?" "Why, er, fertilizer, of course," said Bill. Barbara choked. "Fertilizer business! And what the heck do you think you're in now?"

ONE BORN EVERY MINUTE

At the same time he was having contract trouble, Bill got into a little scrap with Brenda Marshall. Feeling lowdown, he hied himself to the Beachcombers where he embarked on a meal consisting exclusively of Dry Martinis. He was soon joined by Wayne Morris, fresh from a tiff with Pat Stewart and a few minutes later, by Buddy Westmore, who'd just scrapped with Rosemary Lane. For hours the unhappy trio sat at a corner table, pouring Martinis into their miserable systems. Finally, feeling considerably mellowed, Wayne and Buddy got up and left, but Bill wouldn't budge. He wasn't mellow enough. He budged plenty though, when a short while later, a grinning waiter informed him that he and his pals had guzzled $35 worth of Martinis—and he was stuck with the check! That wasn't the end of the incident, however. The next day Bill slunk back to the Beachcombers with a little sign in his hand. When no one was looking, he hung it over the table at which he'd "celebrated" and slunk out again. You can see the sign there now. It reads: "This is Bill Holden's table. He paid for it—and how!"

IT'S THE SENTIMENT THAT COUNTS

For months Hollywood has buzzed and whispered about the Great Nelson Eddy Mystery. What, they have asked, is the secret of his closely guarded study? What strange object lies behind the black curtains in a corner of the room? Why does Nelson stare rapturously at the "thing" within when the curtains are parted? And why does his wife lead intimate friends to it as reverently as one might lead a worshipper to the Holy Grail? Modern Screen was intrigued. So intrigued, in fact, that we sent one of our ace scouts to the Eddy home with orders not to return until he had found the reason for these goings-on. Well, he's back now—and with a story that's guaranteed to astound you. The curtains, he reports, conceal a glass-fronted showcase built 18-year-olds Cooper and Granville celebrate fifteen months of mutual adoration!

by Mrs. Eddy herself. Within the showcase is a tiny satin-covered pillow and, on the pillow in sweet repose, is—the toy top Nelson used to play with when he was a little boy!

PARAMOUNT PATTI

Patti McCarty is Dorothy Lamour's secretary. But Patti McCarty is no ordinary secretary. Far from being a mousy little creature staring out of shell-rimmed glasses and consumed with envy for her beautiful boss, Patti is a soft-lipped, well-rounded female, whose private life is as glamorous as Dottie's own. Patti travels in the same circles as Dottie, dates Greg Bautzer's law partner, once made the rounds with Robert Preston and is currently engaged in snapping Bob Stack from the tentacles of a furious movie queen. That's not all that's unusual about Patti, however. What's even more surprising—she's the only secretary in the world who has an agent! Though she capably stenogs and cheerfully runs all errands for the gorgeous Lamour, Patti has strong movie aspirations of her own. "Someday I'll be a great star, too," she says. "Why, I just turned down a movie contract for $100 a week because my agent wouldn't let me sign at such a small salary! What do I get from Miss Lamour, you ask? Oh, that. $25 a week. Nice, isn't it?"

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT

It was midnight at the Mocambo. The lights were dim; music sobbed in the background. Suddenly a woman entered alone. She looked about; took a few steps forward. Finally her eyes found the man she sought. She hurried toward him, oblivious to the gasps and stares that followed her to his table and sunk into a seat beside him. For two hours she sat there, her head close to his, words flowing quickly. Then suddenly she rose, drew her furs about her and, crossing the room, slipped silently into the night. The woman? Alice Faye. The man? David O. Selznick. But hold on a minute! We are not dishing up another juicy scandal! We're merely reporting that David O. is planning another Selznick super-duper, and Alice, long hungry for an important dramatic role, may play a part in same. Their meeting was strictly business and probably sowed the seed from which another great dramatic star will grow.

ALL BUT THE WEDDING MARCH

Mrs. Tierney might have hastened her official okay on Rudy if she knew what a really bright fellow he is. Come to think of it, who but a bright fellow could have dreamed up a stunt such as Rudy inaugurated at his beautiful Maine hunting lodge? Soon after he bought the place, Rudy named every room in the house after a song with which he'd been associated, and in each room installed a music box which plays that special tune. Thus—his barroom is dedicated to the "Stein Song," his study is called "My Sin" and his bedroom—well, you probably guessed it—his bedroom is called "The Vagabond Lover". . . .

by Sylvia Kahn

Gracie Allen watches the ponies at Santa Anita with the perpetually devated Stu Erwins, celebrating their 10th anniversary this summer.

Statistically speaking, it's three years of bliss far 30-year-old Virginia Bruce and hubby, ex-stage player, J. Walter Ruben who's 40.

Bob Taylor chats with Mrs. Gary Cooper, whose jewels contributed to an estimated $100,000 collection of gems at their table.

HORRIBLE PAST

Two suffering sisters who ought to know each other are Hedy Lamarr and Mary Livingstone. Both are bawling in their broth over the same problem, and they might as well bawl together. Their mutual headache is, of course, pictures. Only this time it's not a matter of making them, but of destroying them. Hedy, though she may hee-haw the idea, is still tearing her hair because "Ecstasy," her European contribution to the art of cinematic undress, continues to goose-pimple American audiences. And Mary's trouble is very similar. She'd spend every last cent of Jack Benny's allowance, if she could round up all photographs of herself taken before her recent facial alteration. We just don't understand these actresses. First they knock themselves out trying to get their pictures before the public—then they knock themselves out all over again trying to get them back!

FOR SHAME, HEDY!

Note to Hedy Lamarr: If you've been wondering why George Sanders never phoned for a second date, here's your answer. George went to a lot of trouble getting himself introduced to you. When your first appointment was set up, he looked forward to a full evening of fun. He wanted to hold you in his arms as you danced at Ciro's; to look deep into your eyes as you cocktailed at the Mocambo—and he even hoped he might snatch a kiss before you parted for the night. And do you remember what happened, Hedy? No? Well, we'll tell you. You greeted him warmly, invited him into your dimly-lit living room . . . and spent the entire evening talking philosophy! Not even Hedy Lamarr can get away with that!

LEAVE IT TO ANNIE!

Unless Warner Bros. bigwigs scan this column, they're going to go right on wondering about the identity of the mysterious "Mrs. Finklestein" who's flooding the studio with phone calls. They haven't the slightest suspicion that the lady is none other than their own Ann Sheridan! When the Brothers flipped Annie off their payroll they also forbade her to have any contact with studio employees. But silly regulations can't stop that Sheridan gal! Now, whenever she feels the urge to gab with one of her pals down at the office, she wraps herself around a telephone, dials the studio and blithely informs the operator that "Missie Finklestein is callink Chimmy Cegney, pliz!"

FOWL PLAY

At least one person was saddened by Ann's studio break—her old friend, Cesar Romero. Cesar got to worrying about Annie, one day, and about how she was out of work and all alone in a big house with no one to take care of her. So unhappy did his wondering make him, he was finally moved to go out and buy a little skinny chicken, which he had feathered and delivered to Ann's house. Accompanying the chicken was a note. It read: "Hope this will tide you over till better times arrive!" Topper to the story is that the chicken came on Ann's cook's day off—and Ann was expecting George Brent for dinner. Having nothing ready to feed him, she popped the bird into the oven and that same evening served a delicious roast to her present beau with the unintentional compliments of her old one!

MATER DATA

Joan Crawford hasn't been doing much talking since she returned from New York. However, since one can learn much about a child by studying its parent, we asked our agents to dig up some inside information on Anna LeSueur, Joan's pretty little mother. Here's what they found out: (a) Mrs. LeSueur lives in a seven-room apartment, maintained by Joan. (b) The apartment is furnished with pieces left over from Joan's marriages to Franchot Tone and Doug Fairbanks, Jr. (c) She uses the names "LeSueur" and "Crawford" alternately as the whim takes her. (d) She scorns maids—does all her own housework. (e) She still calls Joan "Lucille." (f) She often drives miles into the country for fresh eggs which she brings to Joan's house. She also brings homemade pies and cakes to the studio. (g) Doug, Jr., is her great friend. He never fails to visit her when he's in the neighborhood. (h) She owns five enormous scrapbooks containing clippings about Joan. (i) She is very proud of two pictures displayed in her living-room. The first is of Joan and her daughter Christina, dressed in identical sweaters, and inscribed "To our dear mother, from her two babies." The second is a portrait of Jeanette MacDonald. That one is inscribed: "To Mrs. LeSueur. How proud you must be! Admiringly, Jeanette MacDonald."

ALOHA DEANNA

Deanna Durbin has chosen her honeymoon spot. It's lush, seductive Hawaii. The newly-wedded Vaughn Pauls will have six weeks on the islands—six weeks of thrilling tropical nights and glorious sun-filled days—before settling down as old married folk in Hollywood. We understand that Deanna named June 7th as her wedding date because there's a boat leaving for Honolulu that same evening. She's fearful of practical jokers and prefers to spend her wedding night risking seasickness on the Pacific to remaining within easy reach of her prankster friends.

FWANTIC MISS FWANCIS

Someday, movie fans of America are going to pick up their morning newspapers and discover that an infuriated writer has clunked Kay Francis over the head with a vase. When that day comes, not even Kay will be surprised. She's been angling for just that for a long time. The whole trouble is her "r's." After all these years, Kay still can't pronounce them! Therefore, whenever she's presented with a new script, she simply sits herself down, cheerfully scratches out every word that contains the offending letter and replaces it with a word of her own! The fact that the author may have labored six months over his beautiful prose doesn't faze Miss Francis in the least. As she explained to fuming writer Eddie Moran on the set of "The Man Who Lost Himself," "I hate to do this, but I must because of those damned cwitics! They just wip me to pieces, evewy time I have a bit of twouble with a scwipt!"

ENTER MAUREEN ELIZABETH

Here's one angle the birth notices skipped when they recorded the début of the Jane Wyman-Ronald Reagan initial production. The morning Jane discovered she was to become a mother, she put in a mental order for a son. Ronnie, meanwhile, began praying passionately that Reagan, Jr., would be a girl. When the day came for Jane's entrance into a hospital, the Reagans were faced with a problem. Should Jane enter the Queen of Angels Hospital, which is famous for its wholesale output of boy babies, or the Cedars of Lebanon which has an almost unbroken record for producing girl babies? Jane and Ronnie debated the question earnestly. But not for long. Being a loving husband, Ronnie yielded to his wife's pleas, and Jane entered the boy hospital. Two days later she gave birth to a girl!

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL

Fred Astaire, nutty about horse racing, keeps a radio in his bathroom so that he can keep up with the Santa Anita bangtails even when he's tubbing. . . . A bowl of guppies, presented to him by a fan, lend a cheerful, if somewhat unique, note to Ray Milland's bathroom . . . A powder blue rug, almost three inches thick, greets Ann Sothern's tootsies when she steps out of her shower. The rug completely covers her bathroom floor.

TIME MARCHES ON

From the casual manner in which Myrna Loy and Joan Crawford hello-ed each other on the Metro lot, the other day, one would think they'd just been introduced. Actually, the pair have known each other 15 years. They probably don't even remember it themselves, but they worked together in a picture in 1926! Neither was a star then, but both were young and so very beautiful that a sharp-eyed director who noticed them, signed them up promptly. Their first assignment demanded that they get into scanty costumes and with a dozen chorines form a "living chandelier" over the head of the star. The name of the picture? "Pretty Ladies." The name of the star? Zasu Pitts.

HOPE AND CHARITY

Bob Hope, whose army of gag writers has risen to the astonishing number of 11, got off the best Hope-ism of the month without the aid of any of his high-salaried funnymen. Asked by a busybody when he was going to quit appearing at "all those darned benefits," Bob spanked back with: "When kids no longer have infantile paralysis, when old folks have enough to eat, and when bombs stop dropping on defenseless people's homes."

BILLS FOR BILL

Marriage to Diana Lewis has done something for William Powell that neither of his previous altar treks could accomplish. It's rid him of the haunting fear that he would someday land in a pauper's grave. In the old days, though he was right up in the chips, Bill always handled his dough caressingly, spent what he had to, and stored the rest away for hard times. Since wedding Diana, however, he's done an amazing turnabout. He's been pouring dollars on his bride from the day he made her Mrs. Powell, and to the moment of this writing, has never come home to dinner without bringing her an expensive gift! Twenty-year-old Diana is said to have more furs than any star in Hollywood, plus a gem collection that could rank with the finest. Why, just the other day, she wandered into a local jewelry shop, admired a $7,000 diamond encrusted cigarette case and wandered out again. When she returned home the case was waiting on her dressing-room table. She doesn't know how Bill learned she wanted it—but we do. Her adoring groom has asked the town's leading merchants to tip him off whenever his wife displays a yen for an item in their stock—and with sables and sapphires involved, you can bet your last year's snood the boys lose no time whatsoever in doing just that!

THE PIPINGS OF PAN

Having taught a thing or two to some of the most terrific women in Hollywood, dance director Hermes Pan (where did he get that name!) is better qualified than most men to name the perfect Movietown star. According to Pan, the gal who would sock Hollywood right between the eyes would be a composite cutie made up of Betty Grable's figure, Marlene Dietrich's legs, Alice Faye's lips (He could stop right there!), Hedy Lamarr's eyes, Greta Garbo's shoulders, Lana Turner's nose, Linda Darnell's complexion, Loretta Young's height and Bette Davis' ability. That's what you say, Mr. Pan! According to some beauties we know, your patchwork doll would still require the interest of a producer before she'd stand a chance of getting ahead!

DISA AND DATA

Tony Martin, excited owner of four new race horses, has named them Lana, Hedy, Judy and Jimmy—after friends you can probably identify . . . Humphrey Bogart and wife returned from New York with 18 dogs, 5 cats and 12 canaries . . . No one's happier than their stand-ins when Dorothy Lamour and Bob Hope are co-starred in a picture. The two stand-ins are husband and wife . . . Jane Withers' salary will soon jump to $2500 weekly . . . Billy Gilbert's mom and pop were once Metropolitan Opera stars. Billy, himself, has a remarkable voice . . . Laraine Day, too busy to do much reading as a youngster, is now catching up on children's books. She's completed "Water Babies" and is ready to start "Elsie Dinsmore" . . . Rumors wafted in from the Riviera say that Danielle Darrieux is separating from her husband and returning to Hollywood shortly . . . Gaylord Hauser's pet name for Garbo is "Liebchen." She calls him "Bengamino" . . . Stirling Hayden receives more phone calls from femmes in a week than he's made to them in a year . . . There's a bedroom and dressing-room standing empty in Cesar Romero's home—waiting for a wife . . . Gene Tierney always leaves her shoes under the table when she gets up to dance with Mickey Rooney. She doesn't want to embarrass him by flaunting her height . . . The bangs which fans will see on Claudette Colbert in "Skylark" are the same ones that have been hanging over her brow for the last ten years.

TURNER-BOUT

Lana Turner has learned from bitter experience what Miriam Hopkins, Constance Bennett, Ina Claire and many others have learned before her. That Hollywood fan magazine photographers are the friends of the star and, for the stars' own sake, mustn't be antagonized. Lately the camera-boys have been of the opinion that Lana has grown less co-operative than she was in her struggling starlet days. To punish her, they completely ignored her at a recent dinner party while they enthusiastically focused their attention on everyone else in her group. Before the evening was out, Lana was sniffling, her mother was in tears, and Louis B. Mayer, himself, had intervened. However, as we go to press, everything is lovely again and Lana is once more dimpling her beautiful phiz for all of the boys with the little black boxes.

SEQUEL

Others who previously have been given the brush-off by the photogs are Adolphe Menjou, who once accused them of being "as annoying as autograph hounds;" Bing Crosby, who used to claim he was getting along well enough without bowing to flashbulbs; and Ginger Rogers, who covered her face with her hands whenever she saw a lens coming at her. Most unfortunate victim of the candid-makers' ire was Carole Lombard. Carole was snubbed for months before the boys realized the whole thing had been a misunderstanding. They later apologized by snapping her so often that poor Carole finally had to beg them to lay off for a little while.

THE CASE OF THE MISSING MISSUS

Though we doubt the applause of the crowd could ever swell Pat O'Brien's head—we're certain it could never swell his wife's. There's no more real, down-to-earth unaffected person in all of Hollywood than Mrs. O'Brien. Here's what we mean. A few months ago, Mrs. O'Brien accompanied her husband to the "Knute Rockne" première in South Bend. There, from the moment they left the train, the O'Briens were wined, dined and hurrah-ed by the town's most distinguished citizens. But the activities of the first few days were just a warm-up for the tremendous parade, luncheon, reception and cocktail party scheduled to precede their departure. When the big day dawned, Pat dressed himself prettily and looked about for his wife. She was nowhere in sight. Pat was upset. He didn't want to leave without her. But South Bend was waiting and though he was ill with worry, he had to push through the day without her. Several hours later Mrs. O'Brien turned up. Shamefacedly she explained her absence. She'd discovered that the firm which had manufactured her new washing machine was located in town. Her new machine wasn't working properly. So, while an entire city was playing host to her husband, she had crept off to see the president of the company and find out what the heck he was going to do about his deficient product! P. S. She got a new machine.

Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger are the living picture of domestic felicity despite widespread rumors of a matrimonial upset.

Arleen Whelan and her Egyptian-born spouse, Alexander D'Arcy, who was recently voted one of the best-dressed men in the world.

It's all come true for Claire Trevor and Clark Andrews who vowed 3 years ago to make marriage the big thing in both their lives!

Cathleen Cordell appearing in the Gabriel Pascal production, "Major Barbara"

ABOUT $15

Have at least one Selective Service print! An Enka rayon in red, white and navy. At Betty Blanc, Hollywood.

Suit Yourself

Inspired by Bing Crosby's KMH hour, a Radio Star print ensemble in navy. Lord & Taylor.

ABOUT $15

ABOUT $11

Wear a blue flower clip on the lapel of your new gold wool suit with tied-in waist. R.H. Macy.

A dashing bolero suit of navy faille outlined in bright red, with white blouse. B. Altman.

ABOUT $18

ABOUT $15

Win fresh praise in a little navy wool suit with peplum and white pique. Bloomingdale's.

By Elizabeth Willguss

Carefree Cottons

Constance Moore featured in Paramount's "I Wanted Wings"

1. Pink rambler roses with dark green leaves are boldly splashed on yellow piqué. Tiny green buttons all the way to hem.

2. For play or for town. A two-piece dress of red and white checked seersucker, tailored stitching on collar and cuffs.

3. A gay seersucker with slim, diagonal lines — red, blue, green and yellow stripes — banded in blue chambray.

All under $6 at Macy's Pam Parker Shop

How to become Some Man's Dream Girl

Lesson #1 - Launching your Campaign

You've just met him—in fact, you're barely past the "how d'you do" stage. But a hopeful flip of your heart indicates that here is a situation with Possibilities. How are you going to make him feel the same way about things? How are you going to catch his wandering eye and hold it? Here are some pointers that'll help you fool-proof your opening campaign:—

DON'T at the first encounter, wheel out your heaviest artillery and aim all your big ammunition straight at him. Men scare so easily!

DO line up a couple of other conquests for decoy. He'll follow the crowd. P.S. In any Battle of the Sexes, your best bet is a complexion of disarming sweetness. Concentrate on Pond's Creams maneuvers. Nightly. Before make-up!

1

DON'T let any other man drag you into a shady corner and tell you the story of his life. If your hero sees you at all, he'll be too polite to break in on such a cozy tête-à-tête.

DO stay in the folksy, 100-watt foreground—if your skin can take the glare! Clinch that with a brisk daily 3-minute pattingin of luscious Pond's Cold Cream. Wipe off cream-softened dirt and old make-up with gentle Pond's Tissues. Repeat! See how this double cleansing and softening with Pond's makes pores seem smaller—little "dry" lines show less!

2

DON'T take the initiative on the cheek-to-cheek stuff when he asks you to dance. If he's a conservative, he may think you a forward miss. If he isn't, you'll soon find out!

DO have a skin that looks and feels so caressable he can't resist it! Pond's Cold Cream, followed by cool Pond's Skin Freshener, lends baby-skin tenderness—and Pond's Vanishing Cream whips off little roughnesses like—that!

3

DON'T try to dazzle him with your wit and beauty when he's already blinded by the shine on your nose. There's nothing—no nothing!—so sad and ridiculous as a shiny-nosed girl trying to be a charmer.

DO look flower-fresh and dream-girly right through to the all-important good-night. Dead or departed make-up won't haunt you a second if you put your powder over a glamorizing foundation of Pond's Vanishing Cream.

4

DON'T sit back and dream wistful dreams of being some big strong man's little dream girl.

DO send for Pond's beauty kit! Such beauties as striking Mrs. John Jacob Astor, sparkling Liz Whitney, winsome Margaret Biddle are Pond's devotees. And don't dally! Another She may be luring him on this very minute!

POND'S, Dept. 9MS-CVD
Clinton, Conn.

I want to launch my dream-girl campaign right! Please send me—pronto!—Pond's Special Beauty Ritual Kit containing Pond's Cold Cream, Pond's Tissues, Pond's Skin Freshener and Pond's Vanishing Cream. I enclose 10¢ for postage and packing.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

(Continued from page 27)

NAME	AGE	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	MATRIMONIAL STATUS
BERGEN, EDGAR	38	5' 8"	135	unmarried
BOGART, HUMPHREY	40	5' 11"	150	married wife working
BOLGER, RAY	38	5' 10½"	135	married wife inactive
BOWMAN, LEE	27	6' 1"	160	unmarried
BOYD, WILLIAM	42	6' 0"	180	married wife working
BOYER, CHARLES	41	5' 9"	150	married wife working
BRENT, GEORGE	36	6' 1"	170	divorced
BROWN, JOE E.	48	5' 7½"	149	married wife inactive five children
BROWN, JOHN MACK	36	6' 1"	165	married wife inactive three children
BROWN, TOM	28	5' 10½"	162	divorced
BURNETTE, SMILEY	30	6' 0"	230	married wife inactive two children
BURNS, BOB	44	6' 2"	201	married wife inactive four children
BURNS, GEORGE	41	5' 9"	151	married wife working two children
BUTTERWORTH, CHARLES	41	5' 7"	145	married wife inactive
BYRD, RALPH	32	6' 1"	180	married wife working
CABOT, BRUCE	36	6' 1½"	180	divorced
CAGNEY, JAMES	36	5' 8½"	150	married wife inactive
CANTOR, EDDIE	48	5' 7"	135	married wife inactive five children
CARLSON, RICHARD	29	6' 0"	170	married
CARRADINE, JOHN	35	6' 1"	150	married wife inactive two children
CARRILLO, LEO	41	5' 10"	178	married wife inactive one child
CARROLL, JOHN	28	6' 1"	196	divorced one child
CARSON, JACK	30	6' 2"	195	married wife working
CHANEY, LON, JR.	26	6' 2"	190	married wife inactive two children
CHAPLIN, CHARLES	52	5' 6"	130	married wife working two children
COLMAN, RONALD	50	5' 11"	158	married wife inactive
CONNOLLY, WALTER	53	5' 9"	190	married one child

(Continued on page 62)

EASY . . . SQUEEZY

Pledge

(Choose your enamel shade by the color on the cap)

New nail glamour straight from a tube!

• Now you just squeeze a manicure! The tube is the brush. It paints your nails in a flash. Try it, and you'll never go back to bottles. Carry the light little tubes with you, keep a set in your desk. Never mind a chip...whip out PLEDGE wherever you are and repair it! Glamorous nails for every date, this new easy-squeezy way. Choose from 15 thrilling new colors. At leading variety chain store cosmetics counters.

Complete manicure in 4 tubes

★ LIQUID NAIL ENAMEL . . . Almost applies itself . . . from new brush-tube.

★ POLISH REMOVER . . . Felt-tip tube does the job . . . no cotton necessary.

★ CUTICLE SOFTENER . . . Flows from tube into small NYLON brush-tip.

★ NAIL CREAM . . . Felt-tipped tube is cleverly shaped to massage the nails.

COPYRIGHT 1941,
THE OHIO COSMETICS CO. • FREMONT, OHIO • NEW YORK CITY

20¢ a tube

"finders keepers . . . losers weepers"

You're fit to be tied! Furious! Your steady—out with somebody else! "It's not fair," you wail jealously. But since when has love been fair?

Nowadays you've got to be on your toes every day to keep some pretty panther from pouncing on your "heart interest"!

Break a date or two, and next thing you know you're sitting home twiddling your thumbs! Popular girls know how to keep going, and keep smiling, regardless of what day of the month it is . . . know how to take "difficult days" in their stride!

How do they do it . . . ? Well—just up and ask 'em! You'll learn something worth knowing . . .

You'll learn that most of those carefree, "always-on-the-go" girls use Kotex sanitary napkins.

Ask why and they'll tell you it's because Kotex is so comfortable!

The more talkative ones will even explain the reason. They'll say Kotex is less bulky . . . less apt to chafe . . . because it's made in soft folds!

Others will praise the flat, invisible ends . . . and rave about the moisture-resistant "safety panel". (They're the girls who value peace of mind!)

But the majority will just say, "Kotex is so comfortable" and let it go at that. After all, comfort is the main thing! And it's comfort that has made Kotex so popular. More popular, in fact, than all other brands put together!

Have you read the much-talked-about booklet "As One Girl To Another"? It's new. It's free! And it tells just what you need to know! Discusses swimming, bathing, dancing, social contacts, mental attitude, good grooming, tampons.

Like to have a copy? Then send your name and address (a penny post-card will do) to Post Office Box 3434, Dept. MM-4, Chicago, Illinois. Send today! Before you forget.

Kotex* means comfort . . . at the time you need it most 20¢

Regular—Junior—Super—sell for the same low price!

*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

LOST AMONG THE LIPSTICKS?...JUST

Be Yourself.. Be Natural!

STOP experimenting with "fad" shades and ask for Tangee NATURAL Lipstick. As you apply it, notice how it changes from orange in the stick to produce your own most flattering shade of vibrant blush rose.

You'll thrill to the smartness of the "Matched Make-Up" that harmonizes with this famous lipstick...Tangee NATURAL Rouge, and the famous Tangee Face Powder.

Remember: Tangee NATURAL Lipstick is made with a pure cream base which helps prevent chapping and ends that dry, "drawn" feeling.

TANGEE Natural

"WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS LIPSTICK"

SEND FOR COMPLETE MAKE-UP KIT

The George W. Luft Co., Dist.,
417 Fifth Ave., New York City
Please rush "Miracle Make-up Kit" of sample Tangee Lipsticks and Rouge in both Natural and Theatrical Red Shades. Also Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). (15¢ in Canada.)
Check Shade of Powder Desired:
☐ Peach ☐ Light Rachel ☐ Flesh
☐ Rachel ☐ Dark Rachel ☐ Tan

Name_____
[Please Print]
Street_____
City_____ State_____ MM41

(Continued from page 60)

NAME	AGE	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	MATRIMONIAL STATUS
COOPER, GARY	39	6' 2"	175	married wife inactive one child
COOPER, JACKIE	18	5' 9"	145	unmarried
CORRIGAN, RAY	34	6' 2"	199	unmarried
CORSON, WILLIAM	31	6' 1"	170	unmarried
CRAIG, JAMES	29	6' 3"	190	unmarried
CRAVEN, FRANK	66	5' 8½"	142	married one child
CRAWFORD, BRODERICK	36	6' 1¼"	190	married wife warking
CROMWELL, RICHARD	31	5' 10"	148	unmarried
CROSBY, BING	36	5' 9"	165	married three children
CROSBY, BOB	27	6' 0"	185	married wife inactive one child
CUMMINGS, BOB	30	6' 1"	178	married wife inactive
CURTIS, ALAN	30	6' 1"	180	married
CURTIS, DICK	39	6' 3"	204	married
DARRO, FRANKIE	23	5' 3"	114	married wife inactive
DAVIS, JOHNNY	31	5' 10"	158	married wife inactive one child
DEKKER, ALBERT	37	6' 2½"	190	married wife inactive twa children
DENNING, RICHARD	25	6' 1"	180	unmarried
DEVINE, ANDY	35	6' 2"	245	married two children
DINEHART, ALAN	51	6' 0"	165	married ane child
DIX, RICHARD	45	6' 0"	180	married two children
DONAT, RICHARD	36	6' 0"	165	married three children
DONLEVY, BRIAN	36	6' 0"	190	married
DOUGLAS, MELVYN	40	6' 1½"	180	married three children
DUNN, JAMES	35	6' 0"	157	married wife inactive
EBSEN, BUDDY	36	6' 2"	174	married wife working
EDDY, NELSON	39	6' 0"	173	married wife inactive ane child
ELLIOTT, BILL	26	6' 1"	173	married wife inactive one child
ELLISON, JAMES	31	6' 3"	170	married ane child
ERIKSON, LEIF	26	6' 3½"	195	married wife warking

(Continued on page 64)

Are your fingernails the most beautiful?

Alluring, boldly lovely, the twinkling brilliance of your fingernails conveys a message, a message to a man's intuition, of the loveliness of all of you! Let Dura-Gloss bring its gift of gem-flashing beauty to your fingernails! Do what millions of thrilled women are doing, switch your affections to Dura-Gloss, the easy-onflow, durable, longer-lasting polish that has swept America like a prairie fire! A tiny dime —ten cents—is all you pay for Dura-Gloss—but compare Dura-Gloss to polishes costing up to ten times as much! Buy Dura-Gloss today!

Genuine 10¢

DURA-GLOSS

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

THE DIFFERENCE between NAIL POLISHES

(1) Some nail polishes "fray" off at the edge of nail within one day. Dura-Gloss doesn't.

(2) Some nail polishes dry so fast that you can't apply them properly. Dura-Gloss goes on evenly and smoothly.

(3) Some nail polishes never dry underneath and are easily "dented." Dura-Gloss never "dents."

(4) Some nail polishes chip off so easily that you have "bald spots" on your nails. Dura-Gloss lasts.

(Continued from page 62)

Key up your fascination by changing your "beauty pace"

THREE DIFFERENT SHADES OF ROUGE MAKE YOU THREE DIFFERENT WOMEN

Miss Gloria Brewster, charming screen actress, smiles her approval of Princess Pat rouge.

"Variety is the spice of life." To keep his interest highly spiced—be one woman today—another tomorrow—still another the next day. Change your "beauty pace"! Varying your shade of rouge does it—amazingly—but you can't perform the miracle successfully with single-tone, flat-color rouges. A strange shade of such rouge would look artificial and out-of-place on you. You CAN do it perfectly with Princess Pat duo-tone rouge—(an undertone and overtone). Any of the shades will so perfectly blend into your skin color as to seem exactly, entirely yours! Try this experiment in the interest of brightening your glamour. Get several shades of Princess Pat rouge. See how a change in your "beauty pace" keys up your fascination! You'll be delighted and thrilled beyond words to tell.

The Right Way to Rouge. Rouge before powder; this makes your rouge glow through the powder with charming natural effect. (1) Smile into your mirror. Note that each cheek has a raised area which forms a > pointing toward the nose. That's Nature's rouge area. (2) Blend rouge outward in all directions, using fingers. This prevents edges. (3) Apply Princess Pat face powder over it—blending smoothly.

PRINCESS PAT
duo-tone Rouge

NAME	AGE	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	MATRIMONIAL STATUS
ERWIN, STUART	39	5' 9"	165	married wife inactive two children
FAIRBANKS, DOUGLAS	33	6' 1"	170	married wife inactive one child
FLYNN, ERROL	31	6' 2"	180	married wife inactive
FONDA, HENRY	32	6' 1"	170	married wife inactive two children
FORAN, DICK	30	6' 2½"	205	separated two children
FORD, GLENN	25	6' 1½"	155	unmarried
FOSTER, PRESTON	38	6' 2"	200	married one child
GABLE, CLARK	39	6' 1"	190	married wife working
GARFIELD, JOHN	28	5' 9"	193	married wife inactive one child
GARGAN, WILLIAM	35	6' 0"	170	married wife inactive two children
GORCEY, LEO	24	5' 7"	145	married wife inactive
GRANT, CARY	31	6' 1"	172	divorced
GREENE, RICHARD	26	6' 0"	170	unmarried
HALE, ALAN	49	6' 2"	210	married wife inactive two children
HALL, JON	28	6' 2"	195	married wife working
HAYDEN, RUSSELL	28	6' 3"	170	married one child
HAYES, GEORGE	52	5' 11"	168	married one child
HAYES, PETER	23	5' 11"	168	married wife working
HAYWARD, LOUIS	32	5' 11"	154	married wife working
HENRY, WILLIAM	34	5' 11"	155	married one child
HERBERT, HUGH	53	5' 8½"	170	married wife inactive
HERSHOLT, JEAN	54	5' 11"	185	married wife inactive one child
HINDS, SAMUEL	66	5' 11"	150	married wife inactive two children
HOLDEN, WILLIAM	23	6' 0"	165	unmarried
HOLT, TIM	21	5' 11"	165	married wife inactive one child
HOLT, JACK	52	6' 0"	180	divorced two children

(Continued on page 66)

She advises millions on marriage but she ruined her own

She was guilty of

"One Neglect"

few husbands ever forgive . . . "Lysol" helps prevent this

HER newspaper column is eagerly read by millions who seek advice on marital problems. When it comes to keeping love and romance alive, she thinks she knows all the answers.

Yet, there is one important answer she has never learned . . . and so, despite all her beauty, talent and charm, her own marriage is a tragic failure.

There is always a reason when a husband's love grows cold. Sometimes the cause is the woman's neglect of intimate, personal hygiene. Thousands of women make sure of their bodily daintiness by the regular use of "Lysol".

"Lysol" is cleansing, deodorizing, germicidal. Probably no other disinfectant is so widely used for feminine hygiene.

6 Speciol Feotures of "Lysol"

1. Non-Caustic . . . "Lysol", in proper dilution, is gentle, efficient; contains no free caustic alkali. 2. Effectiveness . . . "Lysol" is a powerful germicide, active under practical conditions; effective in the presence of organic matter (dirt, mucus, serum, etc.). 3. Spreading . . . "Lysol" solutions spread because of low surface tension; virtually search out germs. 4. Economy . . . Small bottle of "Lysol" makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. 5. Odor . . . The cleanly odor of "Lysol" disappears after use. 6. Stobility . . . "Lysol" keeps its full strength no matter how long it is kept, or how often it might be left uncorked.

Lysol Disinfectant

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

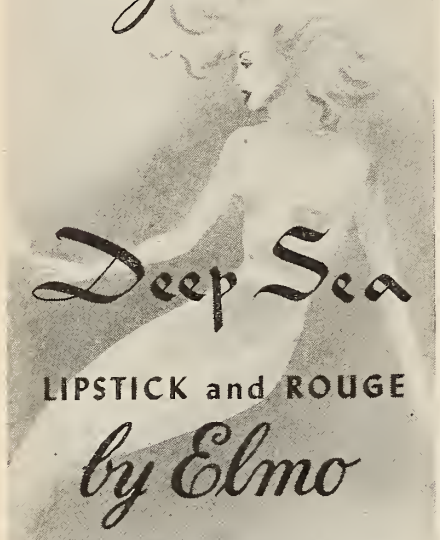
PASTE THIS COUPON ON A PENNY POSTCARD

What Every Woman Should Know

SEND COUPON FOR "LYSOL" BOOKLET

LEHN & FINK PRODUCTS CORP.
Dept. M.S.-441, Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Send me free booklet "War Against Germs" which tells the many uses of "Lysol".



*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

Copyright, 1941, by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

New Make-up Sensation

Deep Sea

LIPSTICK and ROUGE

by Elmo

Deep Sea Make-up, the new Fashion sensation, is now available in fifty-cent sizes. It's utterly smart and very, very flattering—the most glamourous make-up you have ever worn!

Ask for the Varsity size Climatized* Lipstick in these lovely high fashion shades—FIRE CORAL, a deep flaming coral; Fathom Red, a rich luscious red with rose overtones. Made from the same exclusive formula as the luxury size lipstick, giving your lips the same protection from harsh weather. Dry Rouge to match, in a dainty, convenient enamel case.

Varsity Lipstick and Dry Rouge 50¢ EACH

*Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Elmo

PHILADELPHIA SAN FRANCISCO

(Continued from page 64)

NAME	AGE	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	MATRIMONIAL STATUS
HOPE, BOB	33	5' 10"	165	married wife inactive twa children
HOWARD, JOHN	28	5' 10"	150	unmarried
HOWARD, LESLIE	48	5' 10½"	145	married wife inactive twa children
HUBBARD, JOHN	27	6' 0"	165	married wife inactive ane child
HUNTER, IAN	40	6' 0"	195	married wife inactive twa children
JAGGER, DEAN	37	6' 2"	198	married wife inactive
JENKINS, ALLEN	41	5' 10½"	150	married wife inactive ane child
JONES, ALLAN	36	6' 0"	175	married wife warking twa children
JONES, BUCK	51	6' 0"	173	married twa children
JORY, VICTOR	38	6' 1½"	190	married wife inactive ane child
KARLOFF, BORIS	53	6' 0"	175	married wife inactive
KIBBEE, GUY	55	5' 10"	200	married wife inactive faur children
KRUGER, OTTO	55	5' 9"	130	married wife inactive ane child
LAKE, ARTHUR	27	6' 0"	169	married wife warking
LAUGHTON, CHARLES	41	5' 10½"	190	married wife warking
LEDERER, FRANCIS	34	6' 0"	170	divarced
LITEL, JOHN	46	5' 11"	180	married wife inactive
LIVINGSTON, BOB	32	6' 0"	180	married wife inactive
LOCKHART, GENE	48	5' 7"	165	married wife inactive ane child
LORRE, PETER	36	5' 5"	160	married wife inactive
LUGOSI, BELA	52	5' 1"	167	married wife inactive
LUKAS, PAUL	50	6' 2"	182	married wife inactive
LUNDIGAN, WILLIAM	26	6' 2"	170	unmarried
LYNN, JEFFREY	32	6' 0"	158	unmarried
MacLANE, BARTON	38	6' 1"	198	married wife warking

(Continued on page 68)

NOW-RIGHT IN YOUR OWN HOME-HOLLYWOOD BEAUTY CARE!

Lux Soap ACTIVE-LATHER FACIALS are quick, easy and they WORK!

This lovely Hollywood star shows you just how she uses Lux Toilet Soap to guard her priceless complexion. This gentle care removes every trace of dust, dirt, stale cosmetics. Try Active-Lather Facials for 30 days! See what they can do for you!

STAR OF WARNER BROS.' "STRAWBERRY BLONDE"

Milder! Costly Perfume! Pure! ACTIVE lather!

9 out of 10 Screen Stars use it to protect loveliness

SOCIALLY ALERT WOMEN USE TAMPAX

STYLE LEADERS don't just "wonder about" new ideas. They try them out themselves . . . For instance, take Tampax—monthly sanitary protection that does away with pin-and-belt problems and maintains a perfect silhouette in any costume . . .

Tampax was invented by a doctor, to be worn internally. Made of pure surgical cotton, Tampax absorbs gently and naturally, permitting no odor to form; therefore no deodorants are needed. No bulging, no chafing, no visible edge-lines. The wearer does not feel Tampax while it is in place. It is so compact there are no disposal problems.

Tampax comes hygienically sealed in individual one-time-use applicators, so neat and ingenious your hands never touch the Tampax at all! And a month's supply will go in an ordinary purse. Now in three sizes: Regular, Super and Junior. At drugstores and notion counters. Introductory size, 20¢. Economy package of 40 gives you a real bargain.

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association.

MM-41-A

TAMPAX INCORPORATED
New Brunswick, N. J.

Please send me in plain wrapper the new trial package of Tampax. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or silver) to cover cost of mailing. Size is checked below.

( ) REGULAR ( ) SUPER ( ) JUNIOR

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

(Continued from page 66)

NAME	AGE	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	MATRIMONIAL STATUS
MacMURRAY, FRED	32	6' 3½"	185	married wife inactive one child
MARCH, FREDRIC	43	6' 0"	175	married wife working two children
MARSHAL, ALAN	32	6' ½"	165	married wife inactive one child
MARSHALL, HERBERT	47	5' 10"	155	married wife inactive one child
MARTIN, TONY	28	6' 0"	175	divarced
MARX, CHICO	50	5' 6"	135	married wife inactive one child
MARX, GROUCHO	45	5' 7"	155	married wife inactive
MARX, HARPO	47	5' 7"	140	married one child
MASSEY, RAYMOND	44	6' 2"	158	married wife inactive three children
McCREA, JOEL	35	6' 2"	185	married wife working two children
McHUGH, FRANK	42	5' 7"	147	married wife inactive three children
McLAGLEN, VICTOR	54	6' 3"	225	married wife inactive two children
McPHAIL, DOUGLAS	31	6' 0"	170	married wife working one child
MENJOU, ADOLPHE	51	5' 9"	153	married wife working one child
MEREDITH, BURGESS	32	5' 8"	134	divarced
MILLAND, RAY	34	6' ½"	170	married wife inactive one child
MITCHELL, THOMAS	45	5' 9"	160	married wife inactive one child
MONTGOMERY, ROBERT	36	6' 1"	165	married wife inactive two children
MORGAN, DENNIS	30	6' 2"	195	married wife inactive two children
MORGAN, FRANK	50	6' 1"	190	married wife inactive
MORRIS, CHESTER	40	5' 9"	155	married wife inactive two children
MORRIS, WAYNE	27	6' 2"	190	divarced one child
MOWBRAY, ALAN	44	6' 0"	158	married wife inactive two children

(Continued on page 70)

WORLD'S MOST POPULAR NAIL POLISH NOW IN

World's Most Beautiful Bottle

50% BIGGER

ACTUAL SHADE ON THE CAP

10¢

NEW BOTTLE DESIGNED BY DONALD DESKEY, FAMOUS NEW YORK INDUSTRIAL DESIGNER

TRIPLE GOOD NEWS for glamour experts! An exquisite new "dressing-table" bottle! 50% more of the wonderful porous Cutex Polish! And a new cap that has the actual shade you're buying painted right on it. The loveliest, biggest bottle in Cutex history. Try the newest shade—thrilling, startling BLACK RED! All Cutex Polish now on sale is Porous—and as long wearing as ever! Get a bottle today—only 10¢.

CUTEX POLISH is Porous

"I held wonderful cards

You can't HIDE
underarm stain but you CAN PREVENT IT!

25¢

Why be self-conscious and embarrassed, why spoil both your dress and your fun for lack of a little forethought and a pair of Kleinert's Dress Shields! End those unhappy moments of anxiety and useless regret—promise yourself NOW to put Kleinert's Dress Shields in every dress before you wear it even once!

There are so many "Kleinert" ways to daintiness—shields to sew in, shields that require less than a minute to pin in—and shields attached to little bras so they're always ready to wear with any dress. Shields in colors, sizes and shapes to fill every need.

They're inexpensive, too, and simple to keep dainty and fresh. Just swish them through lukewarm Ivory suds and press them with a warm iron. Good Notion Counters offer Kleinert's Dress Shields from 25¢ up—and you can be sure of guaranteed satisfaction if you ask for Kleinert's and look for the name on the shield itself.

TORONTO • NEW YORK • LONDON

You, too, will find it PAYS to buy

Kleinert's
DRESS SHIELDS

(Continued from page 68)

NAME	AGE	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	MATRIMONIAL STATUS
MUNI, PAUL	43	5' 10"	165	married wife inactive
MURPHY, GEORGE	37	5' 11'	178	married wife inactive ane child
NAISH, J. CARROL	41	5' 9½"	152	married wife inactive ane child
NIVEN, DAVID	32	6' 0"	170	married wife inactive
NOLAN, LLOYD	36	5' 10½"	184	married wife inactive
OAKIE, JACK	37	5' 11"	170	married wife inactive
O'BRIEN, EDMOND	25	5' 9"	170	unmarried
O'BRIEN, GEORGE	41	6' 1"	200	married wife inactive two children
O'BRIEN, PAT	41	5' 11"	199	married wife inactive three children
O'KEEFE, DENNIS	29	6' 2"	175	married wife warking
OLIVIER, LAURENCE	34	5' 10"	165	married wife warking ane child
OVERMAN, LYNNE	53	5' 11½"	142	married wife inactive
PALLETTE, EUGENE	51	5' 9"	185	married wife inactive
PAYNE, JOHN	28	6' 2"	175	married wife warking one child
PENDLETON, NAT	41	6' 0"	200	divorced ane child
PIDGEON, WALTER	42	6' 2"	190	separated ane child
POWELL, DICK	36	6' 0"	172	married wife warking two children
POWELL, LEE	32	6' 2"	190	unmarried
POWELL, WILLIAM	48	6' 2"	168	married wife working one child
POWER, TYRONE	26	5' 11"	155	married wife inactive
PRESTON, ROBERT	23	6' 0"	175	married wife warking
PRICE, VINCENT	29	6' 4"	180	married wife inactive one child
QUINN, ANTHONY	26	6' 2"	192	married wife warking one child
RAFT, GEORGE	36	5' 10"	155	separated one child

(Continued on page 72)

Maureen O'Hara IN RKO-RADIO'S "They Met in Argentina"

Does your skin look dull, lifeless?...

Try HOLLYWOOD'S

FACE POWDER

HAVE YOU been looking for a powder that would give your skin the color, the appeal of youthful beauty? Then try this famous face powder created by Max Factor Hollywood.

First, you'll marvel at the glorious beauty of the original color harmony shades. Second, you'll be amazed how the unusual clinging quality aids in creating a lasting, satin-smooth make-up.

Try the color harmony shade for your type... see how it adds loveliness to your looks... $1.00

TRU-COLOR LIPSTICK...
Originated by Max Factor Hollywood, this remarkable lipstick has four features... 1. lifelike red of your lips..2. non-drying, but indelible...3. safe for sensitive lips...4. eliminates lipstick line. Color harmony shades for your type...$1.00

Max Factor • Hollywood

ROUGE...
There's a lifelike shade of Max Factor Hollywood Rouge for your type to complete your make-up in color harmony...50¢

Mail for POWDER, ROUGE AND LIPSTICK IN YOUR COLOR HARMONY

MAX FACTOR MAKE-UP STUDIO, HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Send Purse-Size Box of Powder, Rouge Sampler and miniature Tru-Color Lipstick in my color harmony shade. I enclose ten cents for postage and handling. Also send me my Color Harmony Make-Up Chart and Illustrated Instruction Book, "The New Art of Make-Up".....FREE. 24-4-64

NAME_____

STREET_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

COMPLEXIONS	EYES	HAIR
Very Light ☐	Blue ☐	BLONDE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Fair ☐	Gray ☐	BRUNETTE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Creamy ☐	Green ☐
Medium ☐	Hazel ☐
Ruddy ☐	Brown ☐
Sallow ☐	Black ☐
Freckled ☐	LASHES (Color)	REDHEAD Light ☐ Dark ☐
Olive ☐	Light ☐	If Hair is Gray, check type above and here ☐
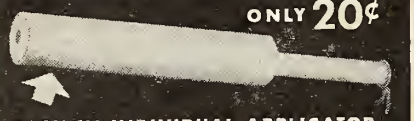
SKIN Dry ☐ Oily ☐ Normal ☐	Dark ☐
	AGE

(Continued from page 70)



NAME	AGE	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	MATRIMONIAL STATUS
RAINS, CLAUDE	41	5' 10½"	165	married wife inactive one child
RATHBONE, BASIL	48	6' 1½"	174	married wife warking one child
RAYMOND, GENE	32	5' 10"	165	married wife warking
REAGAN, RONALD	26	6' 0"	170	married wife warking ane child
ROBINSON, EDWARD G.	47	5' 8"	158	married wife inactive twa children
ROGERS, BUDDY	36	6' 0"	175	married wife inactive
ROGERS, ROY	28	5' 10¾"	155	married wife inactive ane child
ROMERO, CESAR	34	6' 2"	170	unmarried
ROONEY, MICKEY	20	5' 2"	128	unmarried
RUGGLES, CHARLES	51	5' 6"	145	divarced
SANDERS, GEORGE	35	6' 3"	215	unmarried
SCOTT, RANDOLPH	38	6' 2"	190	seporated
SHELTON, JOHN	27	6' 1"	171	divorced
STACK, ROBERT	22	6' 1"	175	unmarried
STARRETT, CHARLES	37	6' 2"	180	married wife inactive two children
STEPHENSON, JAMES	38	6' 0"	172	married wife inactive ane child
STERLING, ROBERT	24	6' 1½"	175	unmarried
STEWART, JAMES	32	6' 3"	158	unmarried
STONE, LEWIS	61	5' 10½"	160	married wife inactive twa children
TAMIROFF, AKIM	42	5' 8"	180	married wife inactive
TAYLOR, ROBERT	29	6' 0"	165	married wife warking
TONE, FRANCHOT	36	6' 0"	160	divarced
TRACY, SPENCER	40	5' 10"	165	married wife inactive two children
TUCKER, FORREST	26	6' 4"	205	married wife warking
WAYNE, JOHN	33	6' 2"	198	married wife inactive three children
WEISSMULLER, JOHNNY	35	6' 3"	190	married wife inactive one child
WELLES, ORSON	25	6' 3"	200	divorced ane child

Why I switched to Meds

—by a school teacher

Ancient history is my subject—but when it comes to sanitary protection, I'm all for the modern, internal way. And I've always wished I didn't have to pay extra to get it. So I certainly was delighted when Modess brought out Meds—a new and improved tampon—at only 20¢ a box of ten. I like Meds far, far better. And they're the only tampons in individual applicators so wonderfully inexpensive.

EACH IN INDIVIDUAL APPLICATOR

MADE BY MODESS

Meds

INTERNAL SANITARY PROTECTION

NOW WE BOTH HAVE LOVELY BLONDE HAIR!

New Shampoo Method—Specially Made for Blondes—Washes Hair Shades Lighter—Safely!

Mothers and daughters stay young together when sunny, golden curls and smart, blonde coiffure are both glowingly lovely. Because of its delicate texture, particular care is needed to keep blonde hair from fading, darkening, losing attractiveness. That's why smart blondes throughout the country use BLONDEX, the shampoo made specially for them. It removes dull, dingy film and brings out every glorious highlight. Costs but a few pennies to use and is absolutely safe. Nothing finer for children's hair. Get BLONDEX at drug, department or 10c stores.

THINK WITH YOUR HEART

(Continued from page 35)

as it had him, allowed her less and less freedom.

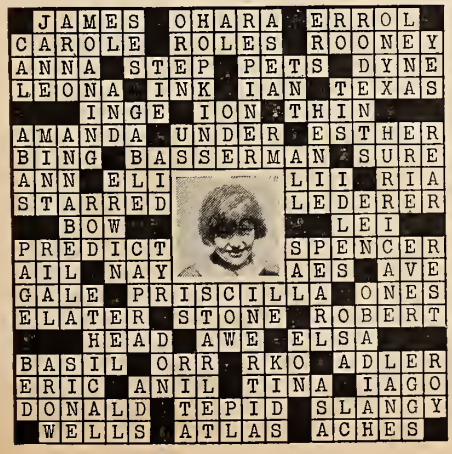
She grew homesick for the warm, simple things of her youth. Behind the constant talk of munitions which had once thrilled her as intrigue, she could hear women crying for the men those munitions were designed to kill. And the jewels bought with their profits lay against her throat and arms cold as death.

"Let me go back to the studios!" she implored Mandl. Work had saved others from unhappiness, and she hoped it would do as much for her. She wanted her marriage to endure.

But Fritz Mandl forbade her even to think of such a thing.

One dog in the kennels Hedy loved more than all the rest. Walking with this dog in the woods that lay beyond the lawns and gardens and meadow, she tried to outdistance her restlessness and apprehension. And it was in those woods, where the moss made a soft carpet, and it was always twilight, that she heard her father's voice again for the first time.

"Hedylendelein?" It came as gently and clearly as when they had been together in the same room. "Hedylendelein?"



Simply enough she explains his voice reaching her. "Either he was there in spirit, or I heard him in spirit," she says. "Which it was doesn't matter in the least." The result was the same! "Hedylendelein" had been her father's endearment for her, and it reminded her of things she had nearly forgotten. It reminded her, among other things, to think with her heart.

In 1937, when Fritz Mandl was in the mountains hunting, Hedy ran away. She went from Austria to France. She crossed the channel to England. She crossed the sea to New York. She crossed the continent to California. For there comes a time when those who listen to their heart must turn away from security and go on alone no matter how rough or uncertain the road may be.

"She's just another foreigner!" Hollywood said. There was no fanfare over her arrival. And Metro, aware Hedy was not an actress of any wide experience, put her to work with a dramatic coach.

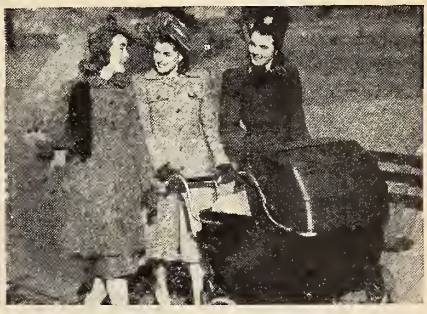
Days turned into weeks, and weeks turned into months, and nothing happened. Hedy might have changed this by impressing many with talk of the splendor she had known and by entertaining

Solution to Puzzle on Page 10

"They said I shouldn't have adopted the baby!"

A new mother teaches an older one a lesson in modern child care

1. The girls didn't realize that I was on the bench behind them, or they wouldn't have been talking about me. I didn't interrupt them because I was naturally curious to hear what they'd say.



2. "She should never have adopted that baby! She's spoiling it terribly," Jane was saying. "Why, I was there the other day and, my dear, I wish you could see the things she has for that child! She's raising her like an orchid!"

3. "Special diapers, foods, soap, and I'll be darned if she didn't even have a special laxative!" That was my cue! "Jane Thompson," I cried, "how can you say I'm spoiling my baby when I'm following the doctor's orders!"

4. "The doctor says you can't treat a baby's delicate system like an adult's. A baby needs things designed especially for her. You give her special foods, so of course she should get a special laxative. The doctor recommended Fletcher's Castoria."

5. "He said Fletcher's Castoria is made especially and only for infants and children. There isn't a single harsh adult drug in it. It's effective but mild. And safe. It works mostly in the lower bowel, so it isn't likely to gripe a child's tiny system."

6. Well, the girls came home with me. And when they saw how the baby loves the taste of Fletcher's Castoria, that clinched it! Jane said if it was that easy, she was certainly going to get a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria on the way home, and try it for her children!

HERE IS THE MEDICAL BACKGROUND

Chief ingredient of Fletcher's Castoria is senna.

Medical literature says: (1) In most cases, senna does not disturb the appetite and digestion or cause nausea . . . (2) Senna works primarily in the lower bowel . . . (3) In regulated dosages, it produces easy elimination and has little tendency to cause irritation or constipation after use.

Senna is especially processed in Fletcher's Castoria to eliminate griping and thus allow gentle laxative action.

Chas. H. Fletcher CASTORIA

The SAFE laxative for children

EVERY day, more and more women are discovering this amazing advancement in feminine hygiene. A method that is not only dainty and safe—but gives continuous medication for hours without the use of poisons. And actually kills germs at contact.

Called Zonitors—these dainty, snow-white suppositories spread a greaseless, protective coating. To kill germs, bacteria on contact. To cleanse antiseptically. To deodorize—not by temporarily masking—but by destroying odor.

Zonitors are most powerful continuous-action suppositories. Yet entirely gentle to delicate tissues. Non-caustic, contain no poison. Don't burn. Even help promote healing.

Greaseless, Zonitors are completely removable with water. Nothing to mix, no apparatus needed. Come 12 in package individually sealed in glass bottles. Get Zonitors at druggists. Follow this amazingly safe way in feminine hygiene women are raving about.

FREE revealing booklet, sent in plain envelope. Write to Zonitors, 370 Lexington Ave., Dept. 3407-B, New York City

Zonitors

FRECKLES? Skin Clear and Exquisitely LOVELY!

DR. C. H. BERRY'S FRECKLE OINTMENT — used for over 40 years. $1.25 and 65c at your druggists! For FREE samples address KREMOLA, Dept. M-6, 2975 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

GRAY HAIR KILLS ROMANCE

You know that gray hair spells the end of romance . . . yet you are afraid to color your hair! You are afraid of dangerous dyes, afraid that it is too difficult, afraid that the dye will destroy your hair's natural lustre—afraid, most of all, that everyone will know your hair is "dyed".

These fears are so needless! Today at your drug or department store, you can buy Mary T. Goldman Gray Hair Coloring Preparation. It transforms gray, bleached, or faded hair to the desired shade—so gradually that your closest friend won't guess. Pronounced a harmless hair dye by competent authorities, this preparation will not hurt your wave, or the texture of your hair. If you can comb your hair, you can't go wrong! Millions of women have been satisfied with Mary T. Goldman's Hair Coloring Preparation in the last fifty years. Results assured or your money back. Send for the free trial kit—so that you may see for yourself the beautiful color which this preparation will give to a lock snipped from your own hair.

Mary T. Goldman Co., 8421 Goldman Bldg.
St. Paul, Minn. Send free test kit. Color checked.
☐ Black ☐ Dark Brown ☐ Light Brown
☐ Medium Brown ☐ Blonde ☐ Auburn

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

lavishly. Instead, heeding the voice she could still hear calling "Hedylendelein . . . Hedylendelein?" she proceeded differently. She worked hard. She lived simply. And she sent every dollar she could spare to her mother in England.

At last Walter Wanger borrowed Hedy from Metro for "Algiers."

Long before "Algiers" was released, Hollywood knew it was a hit. On the opening night they couldn't fill the requests for seats. The crowd in the lobby and on the street was tremendous. There was commotion every time a car discharged a famous star at the marquee. The photographers' flashes were continuous.

"Miss Hedy Lamarr!" announced the master of ceremonies.

You could hear the intake of breath. Most of those who were there were seeing Hedy for the first time. The crowd surged. Men stared. And women, reaching for their little mirrors, freshened their lips and gave reassuring pats to their hair.

Hedy wore orchids. But at home on her bedside table there was a little bouquet of forget-me-nots with one pink rose. Her mother counted this a particular occasion.

They put plenty of pressure on Hedy after "Algiers."

"Follow up this success," they told her. "Play all the publicity angles. Be a glamour girl in everything you do, wear and say. Speak slowly. Be seen with the right men. Live luxuriously."

Hedy was impressed. There was much at stake. She tried to slow down her naturally quick motions. She began looking for a properly luxurious house. She went about more. Then she met Gene Markey, and everything changed. When she was with him, it was as if she closed a door on the cold winds of loneliness and warmed herself by a friendly fire.

The groans which Leo the Lion emitted over Hedy's marriage to Gene grew louder as the pattern of their married life resolved itself. They bought a farm in the hills. They had Scotties named Jack and Jill, a Great Dane named Dona and an amber cat named Mitzi. They raised ducks and chickens, and every day Hedy stamped the eggs that came from the hen house. She painted the weather-vane rooster golden and gave him a red crest. She searched high and low for upholstery for the dining-room chairs that would embrace every color in the wallpaper. She furnished her bedroom with peasant furniture like that she had had in Vienna and bought brown blankets and a brown and white candlewick spread for her simple bed. She wore slacks and shirtwaist dresses which were not unlike the striped frocks of her childhood. She and Gene had their supper outside under the trees. She hung her bird-cage on a green bough that reached across her window. And she was ecstatically happy. But her producers weren't happy at all.

"One picture doesn't make a star," cried Hollywood, still skeptical about her as an actress. "And they can't keep on finding stories like 'Algiers,' in which she doesn't have to do anything but look beautiful!"

Hedy knew what they were saying. She's far from a fool. In fact, she was much concerned over the work she would do in "I Take This Woman," her next production.

"Phyllis," she said to her dramatic coach, Phyllis Laughton, one day, "I'm worried about the scene where Spencer Tracy walks out on me, where I have to cry. I'm afraid I won't be able to do it!"

"Just listen to Spencer," Phyllis told her. "If he can't make you cry, no power on earth can!"

They did the scene in a long shot first. Then Hedy faced the camera alone for the close-up in which her tears must show while Spencer, behind the camera now, read his lines for cues. Being a fine gentleman, Spencer didn't merely read his lines; he gave them everything he had. And Hedy, listening, cried easily enough.

"Print it!" called Van Dyke, who was directing. "Wonderful, Hedy!"

They had said she couldn't act. But hard-boiled Van was satisfied with the first take of her big emotional scene. And they hadn't had to bring glycerine for her tears. Her head rose. She turned proud.

"Hedylendelein . . . Hedylendelein?" Again she heard her father calling.

She went straight to Spencer. "Thank you," she said. "Thank you very much." Her courtesy was the lovely, generous courtesy she had learned as a little girl. It left no doubt in the mind of anyone that she knew full well how much she owed Spencer for her performance. And many who heard her never again were to stand by silently if she was criticized.

"I Take This Woman" was no better than the croakers predicted it would be. Neither was "The Lady of the Tropics," her next picture. This resulted in the pressure being put on harder than ever.

"You can't sit back now!" they warned. "You've got to buy smart clothes, furs, load yourself with jewels, be seen at smart places, pose for seductive pictures and give interviews in which you sound as if you know everything there is to know about men and love. Baby, you're in a spot!"

But Hedy continued to live quietly on the farm, stamp the eggs, play with the dogs, work in the flower garden. She continued to live her life her own way.

Marriages contracted as speedily as Hedy's and Gene's rarely survive. Theirs was no exception. Soon enough both realized that, because of the great loneliness they had known when they met, they had made a mistake.

IT was during this unhappy time that Phyllis Laughton, who had just had her first baby, telephoned Hedy one day. "I've let my nurse go, and this is the maid's afternoon out," she explained, "so I don't think we'd better try to work today."

The maid had been gone only an hour when Hedy arrived. But the baby had brought up some of her bottle, and Phyllis, her hands shaking, was in tears.

"Mary's sick," she sobbed when Hedy came in. "Mary's sick, Hedy!"

Hedy took the baby in one arm and put her other arm around Phyllis.

"And," Phyllis says telling about it. "I can never explain the relief I knew when I saw my Mary in Hedy's arms, I had a feeling she was home."

I think Phyllis Laughton realized then what "Boom Town" and "Comrade X" and "Come Live With Me" have since proven—that, because Hedy didn't allow ambition to drive her away from the things that are important in a woman's life, she slowly and surely is developing into one of the most truly glamorous women Hollywood has ever known.

"Think with your heart, and you'll win in the end," Emil Kiesler told Hedy. He meant, of course, that thinking with her heart she would find her way to the things that are right for a woman, and so in the end find happiness. He didn't know she also would find fame and riches.

As for her future, that's safe, too, unless all signs fail. Because, irrespective of how great her fame and the demands it makes upon her, she won't be allowed to forget to think with her heart. On special occasions for a long time to come, God willing, there'll be a little bouquet of forget-me-nots with one pink rose. And there will be her father's voice calling "Hedylendelein . . . Hedylendelein . . ."

LOVE VS. CAREER

(Continued from page 29)

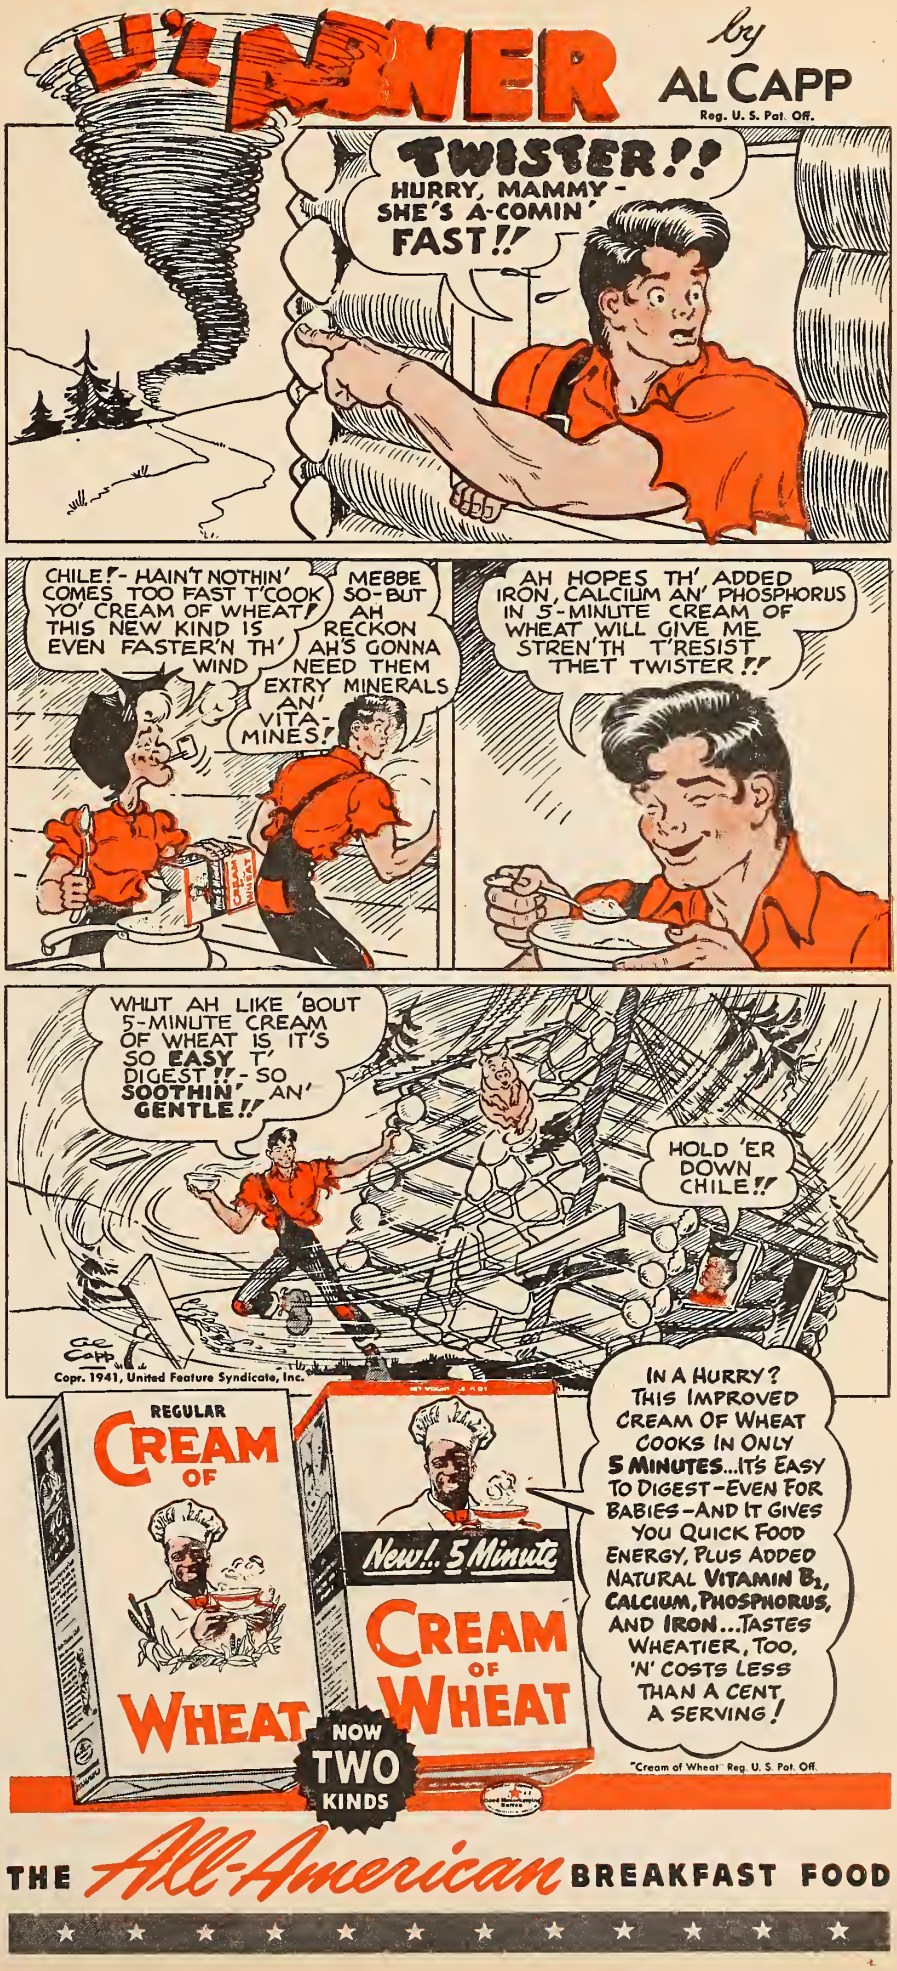
grandmother gathered her daughters, daughters-in-law and their children under the roof of the eighteenth-century house on Fitzwilliam Street in Dublin and kept them there for the duration. Even when the several units scattered, they didn't scatter far and, in spirit, not at all. Family affection reaches back to embrace the more remote ancestors. "It's a haunted house," says Geraldine serenely. "But none of us minds being haunted by his own dear relatives."

Her parents are Edith and Edward Fitzgerald. As far back as the record goes, the men on both sides have been lawyers and jurists. "That's why I'm able to understand my own contracts," she observes, "and have even been known to pick flaws in them." Edward Fitzgerald is a lawyer and citizen of such repute that his daughter winces at the disproportion implied in his being referred to in print as Geraldine Fitzgerald's father.

Her older brother is a lawyer, too, in his father's office. Her younger brother is the first of many generations to forsake the legal tradition for medicine. Geraldine herself, until she was eighteen, had no intention of being an actress, though the idea had often been urged on her by her mother. Mrs. Fitzgerald's younger sister, Sheila Richards, was leading woman at the Abbey Theatre, and it seemed to her that Geraldine, the family clown, might do worse than follow in her aunt's footsteps. But "No, no, no," the daughter protested, "I shouldn't like that a bit." Till one night in bed, a thunderstorm shattering her eardrums, she suddenly decided for no reason she can give a name to that she'd like it very much.

This happened in London, where she'd gone to be near her fiancé. Next morning she betook herself to a theatre. "I want to be an actress," she told the man at the box-office.

"Think of that!" he marveled. "Well, you can't be an actress here. This theatre's gone bankrupt."



So she scurried back to Dublin, and through her aunt's good offices, she was admitted to the Gate Theatre, where she served a successful season. Meantime she'd seen Mr. Lindsay-Hogg only once. Shortly after the indignity at the racetrack, he'd invited her, her brother and her fiancé to spend the week-end at his country place. She's known pleasanter week-ends. The host took a violent dislike to the fiancé, which even Irish courtesy failed to mask. After that, Edward's and Geraldine's ways lay apart. Through her brother, though, she heard of him often and of the beautiful blonde he was engaged to. "References to her always made me very angry," she says.

Their next encounter was in London. Too impatient to wait for the re-opening of the Dublin season, she'd gone down there to find what she could find. She was by now sufficiently tempered to stay away from bankrupt box-offices and go to the only producer she knew—Robert Milton, the American, who was making pictures.

"I have to do something and you have to help me," she informed him.

"Mmm. Well, right now, I have to do something. Go down to Twickenham and see a rough cut of my picture. Want to come along?"

She went along for the ride. At Twickenham an executive appraised her and asked her if she'd like to go into pictures. "No pictures," she said. That was the first time she said it. With the addition of the

"As I see it . .

2 trips out of 3 are free!

—because Super-Coach travel costs only ⅓ as much as driving."

"It's easy to figure out! Since I can travel by Greyhound for only a cent and a fraction per mile—and it costs 4½ cents to operate my own small car—I'm really saving the cost of two trips out of every three. As a result I'm a widely traveled person—I can afford to be, and so can you! In addition to the saving you'll like the freedom from driving strain, the riding ease of fully air-conditioned, well-ventilated Super-Coaches, and the frequent, convenient schedules. Take a tip—take a Greyhound trip!"

Principal Greyhound information offices are located at: New York City • Cleveland, Ohio • Philadelphia, Penna. Boston, Mass. • Chicago, Ill. • San Francisco, Cal. • Ft. Worth, Tex. • Washington, D. C. • Detroit, Mich. • St. Louis, Mo. Minneapolis, Minn. • Lexington, Ky. • Charleston, West Va. Cincinnati, O. • Richmond, Virginia • Memphis, Tennessee New Orleans, La. • Windsor, Ontario (44 London Street, E.) Montreal, Quebec (1188 Dorchester Street, West)

GREYHOUND

Get Brand-New Cartoon Map "This Amazing America"

A humorous, entertaining cartoon map, lithographed in full colors, measuring 20 x 30 inches, picturing and describing more than 100 strange, unusual places in America. For your free copy, send this coupon to GREYHOUND INFORMATION OFFICE at nearest city listed above.

Name _____

Address _____ MO-4

word "more," she was destined to say it often.

It was filthy lucre that changed her mind. The executive phoned a few days later and offered her two hundred a week. "I'd been making ten at the Gate, and the notion of turning millionaire overnight staggered me. I said yes before they could change their minds and went to work.

"Now comes the touching part. I didn't know what a 'quickie' was. Neither do you till you've seen the English brand. I thought I was contributing my art to something colossal. I'd brood for hours over those dreadful lines and how they ought to be read. I'd say to the others, 'D'you suppose they'll like this in New York?' They'd turn away—in sorrow and shame, as I realize now. They hadn't the heart to tell me that these horrors were specially fabricated for third-run houses in the provinces. I don't remember the exact ghastly moment of disillusion. Only that when it came, I said: 'No more pictures.'

"Two hundred a week seemed little enough to pay for the pleasure of regarding myself without loathing."

She was walking gloveless down Bond Street one day, still in the wretched throes of the utter disillusionment. It would take the Irish, perhaps, to understand her reason for going gloveless in all its illogical beauty. "I was making plenty of money, but I wouldn't look at my bankbook, so I felt very poor and as if I couldn't afford to buy gloves."

A cab pulled up at the curb for the traffic light. Inside sat Eddy with a lovely blonde girl. Outside stood Geraldine, with her naked hands and her aching heart that now started a new and furious ache on a separate count.

"Hello," said Eddy—eagerly—that was something. "Are you staying in London? Where do you live?" He introduced her to the menace, whose hands were exquisitely gloved. Then the cab moved on, leaving our heroine desolate on the curbstone and very, very angry with the beautiful blonde.

The following week brought an invitation from Eddy to a house party and the first faint lifting of the gloom. Geraldine took emotional stock and broke her engagement. But she didn't know that the blonde had melted from the horizon till, at a second party, Eddy faced her demanding: "Are you in love with anyone?" Anger and misery fled together. She shook her head. "Well, let's go out and talk about it." They went out and came back engaged to each other.

They went to New York on their honeymoon—because they wanted to see New York and because Geraldine wanted to try for a job on Broadway. An agent took her to Orson Welles, who had also served a season at the Gate. Of course she'd heard tell of the fabulous Orson, and the fabulous Orson had heard of her. He promptly offered her the part of Ellie Dunn in "Heartbreak House," which she as promptly accepted. Came the opening. Came the morning after. Came the critics' raves.

"And then," says Geraldine, "came the wicked, wicked men from the movies with great bags of gold. And I said: 'No more pictures. I'm divorced from them forever.' "

There was always a good reason for saying it and a better one for eating her words. "Heartbreak House" ran for three months. She discovered that as an alien she could do only one play every six months in New York. If the play ran a single night, she'd have to wait six months to become re-eligible.

Hurt and incredulous, she demanded: "When have the Irish ever barred Americans?"

"The Irish stage isn't big enough to mat-

Beautiful NAILS AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

DON'T ENVY long, tapering, smart nails — have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU-NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half-moons. Helps check nail-biting habit. Protects fragile nails while they grow strong again. Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores.

Nu-Nails, Dept. 15-D, 462 No. Parkside, Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails

GIRLS!!

13 to 25 YRS. OLD

Who Suffer Pain, Weak Nervous Spells from Functional Monthly Disturbances. READ THIS!

If you're approaching womanhood or in your early 20's and are troubled by restless, cranky, nervous spells, by cramps, headaches, backache—due to this cause—take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—famous for over 60 years.

Pinkham's Compound is one of the MOST EFFECTIVE women's medicines made to relieve distress of weak, nervous spells due to functional periodic complaints. Beneficial for older women, too, to help build up resistance against distress of "difficult days." WORTH TRYING!

TO QUICKLY Touch up Hair

USE THIS AMAZING HAIR COLOR TOUCH-UP PENCIL

Quick, easy way colors gray, streaked discolored hair to colorful, matching beauty at roots, parting and temples. Used like a lipstick. Won't rub off. Send only 25c for TINTZ Hair Color TOUCH-UP PENCIL today. Comes in Black, Dark Brown, Dark Warm Brown, Med. Brown, Light Brown, Auburn and Blonde. State shade wanted. Order now—if not delighted 25c will be refunded. 25c

TINTZ CO., 207 N. MICHIGAN AVE., DEPT. 1 CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR LOVELY LIPS

IF you want lips that are moist, smooth, sweet and kissable, with the dewy loveliness of a rosebud, try DEWY-SHEEN Lipstick. DEWY-SHEEN comes in exquisite new shades and remains soft and petal-fresh all day. Try DEWY-SHEEN. Only 10 cents at your store or write for it, enclosing 10 cents and name preferred shade. There is no higher quality lipstick at any price.

CLARK-MILLNER SALES CO.
450 W. Superior St., Chicago

10¢

Twin Sisters DEWY-SHEEN LIPSTICK

ter," they grinned. "For our purposes, you're a citizen of Great Britain."

It was after this interview that she began peering gingerly now and then from behind her fingers at the wicked, wicked movies and their hateful bags of gold. At length, with her husband's help she drafted the kind of contract that would be possible for her and impossible, she felt, for any studio. Six months a year, beginning at a specific inviolable date, ending at a specific inviolable date, never to be telescoped, never to be re-arranged.

To her amazement, Warners agreed. She was summoned to Hollywood for a test. Did they understand the contract? They did. "But we don't like it," they said after the test was made.

"You don't like the test?"

"We like the test very much. We don't like the contract."

"But you said—"

"We said we understood it. We still don't like it."

"Goodbye, then," said Geraldine and took ship with her husband for Ireland.

Cosily back among her people, Hollywood seemed more remote and alien than ever. So she proceeded on the theory that if you sit very quiet and don't blink an eyelash, people will forget you're there. All summer she sat like a mouse in Dublin. She didn't answer the cable. She didn't answer the letters that followed. Huddled within a cloak of silence, she'd whisper to herself: "They'll think I'm sick or dead and gone to heaven. They'll look at the test again and say, 'Why bother to drag the wench all the way from Ireland?' "

The ostrich act didn't work. W. B. possessed more acumen than she gave them credit for. As autumn drew near, the cables grew more peremptory, and she had no choice but to crawl out of her hole, to pack and to go. She was rushed off the train into the tweed suit of Bette's friend, "where I stayed for two or three years," she exaggerates like a true daughter of her race.

Because of Michael, now seven months old, she didn't go home last year. But for the war he would have been born in Ireland. It was in Dublin that he announced his approach to the mingled delight and concern of his prospective parents. Their concern was on two scores—how to keep the news from the family who'd be doubly worried with Geraldine on the high seas and war in the air—and how to break the news to the studio, who'd have to adjust an already difficult schedule to accommodate a baby.

Safely in New York, with one problem behind her, she still had the second to face. It haunted her across the continent.

I'M an employer-hater by temperament," she explains. "But this time I felt they had a legitimate grievance. I felt conscience-stricken. I felt guilty and ashamed. And when at last in faltering tones I laid bare my secret, they made matters worse by heaping coals of fire on my head. They were wonderful from the front office down. Never a reproach, not so much as a look of pain. Not even toward the end when they had to resort to shooting me from behind tables." (The picture was "Till We Meet Again.")

Michael was born without untoward incident in a New York hospital, to the joy of an extensive circle of kinfolk whose acquaintance he has yet to make. His mother enjoys talking about him but finds it strange that people should inquire.

"At home," she says, "there were so many children that you took them for granted. 'Out!' is what you said to children, or 'Go away' or 'Take your hands from under my feet.' "

With no nostalgia to bother him, the baby likes Hollywood unreservedly and proves it by laughing and growing fat. If he has a beef, it concerns his mother in studio makeup. He didn't care for it at first but, being a tolerant boy, has come to accept it. "Now when he sees a face that's green today and yellow tomorrow, hair short today and long tomorrow, he thinks, 'Oh, it's mother dear,' and lets it pass."

Mother dear likes Hollywood better than she did. Naturally. "Dark Victory" and "Wuthering Heights" went far toward uprooting the movie-phobia planted by British quickies. She's not too happy about her role in "Flight from Destiny." Neither are her admirers. An otherwise excellent picture, it gave her little scope for her proven ability. Her current picture, "Winged Victory," is another story and a far stronger one for her, made doubly interesting by the fact that her leading man is James Stephenson—he of "The Letter."

"Besides," she says, "if you can't be in the place you love best, then your fondness for the place where you have to be depends on the people. And we've met some people whom we like enormously."

They're enormously liked as well. Ida Lupino says she'd rather go to a party at the Lindsay-Hoggs than anywhere else. Geraldine, she adds, has original ideas about entertaining.

"Not at all," counters Geraldine blandly. "We simply invite eight or nine people who like each other very well or who loathe each other. We give them food and drink, and we turn them loose. If they like each other, they're bound to have fun. If they loathe each other, some kind of drama ensues. Either way, it's interesting."

Nice people or not, good parts or bad, half her heart remains in Ireland.

We hope she'll be able to take Michael back before long.

It's New!... It's Different!... It's Thrilling!

NOW! A SUPER-FOAMY Mar-o-Oil SHAMPOO with Billows of Active Quick-Cleansing Foam!

New Super-Foamy Mar-o-Oil Developed for Those Who Want the Speedy Action of a Foamy Shampoo and the Unique Benefits of an Oil Shampoo!

WOMEN EVERYWHERE will greet this news with cheers! For here is word of the new super-foamy OIL SHAMPOO, created by the makers of famous Mar-o-Oil—world's largest selling oil shampoo.

You'll be amazed at how quickly Super-Foamy Mar-o-Oil bursts into live, light, oily foam—at how quickly it acts to remove dirt, loose dandruff and waste! You'll be delighted, too, at how easily and completely it rinses away—leaving your hair sparkling-clean, gloriously smooth. Super-Foamy Mar-o-Oil actually brings the benefits of an oil shampoo—leaves the hair wonderfully soft and easy-to-manage. Yet because of its foamy action it is decidedly quicker. And there is no need for vinegar or lemon rinses when you use Super-Foamy type Mar-o-Oil Shampoo.

Get a bottle of this new Super-Foamy Mar-o-Oil at your favorite beauty counter today. Or ask your hairdresser for a professional Super-Foamy Mar-o-Oil Shampoo. Let your own mirror show you its remarkable results.

TRY IT TODAY!

NEW SUPER-FOAMY TYPE Mar-o-Oil SHAMPOO

When Gene Autry heard that he was Box Office Star No. 4, he cut loose with one of those he-man yowls that Oklahomans learned from the Indians! He emitted still another "Yee-ow!" that put a strain on the ceiling construction. Then, suddenly, he sobered, stabbed by a thought. "There must be some mistake," he said to himself. "I can't be up THERE!"

When Hollywood read that Gene Autry was Box Office Star No. 4, Hollywood was stunned, too—but instantly. Hollywood said positively, "There's some mistake. He CAN'T be up there!"

How could he be in the Top Ten—when no other Western star in the history of Hollywood had even come close to being there? And how could he be in the Top Ten—when no other star who worked for a small, independent studio had ever been in the running before?

But there was no mistake.

The annual poll that decides the most popular stars in Hollywood is no poll of demon fans who wouldn't hesitate to stuff the ballot boxes for their favorites. It's a poll of theatre managers all over America.

NO. 1 SHOWMAN

BY JAMES REID

Hard-headed business men. They're asked to tell which stars have brought the most people into their theatres in the past year.

And they said unmistakably that, except for Mickey Rooney, Spencer Tracy and Clark Gable—all M-G-M players—no other star brought as many people into theatres in 1940 as did Gene Autry, and his films are shown in nearly 11,000 theatres in the United States!

How did Gene get up in the 11,000 league, making unpretentious pictures for an unpretentious studio? And what's the secret of the satisfied customers, no matter how many times a year they see him?

He isn't a Great Actor, or a Great Singer, or a Great Profile or a Great Lover. But—he's a Great Showman. The greatest in the business. That's the explanation. He has forgotten more about showmanship than most stars will ever learn.

But tell him that he's the most colorful star on the screen today, or ask him how he got that way, and he gives you a quick look to see if you're kidding him. When he sees that you aren't, he grins sort of self-consciously and asks in that unexpectedly quiet voice of his, "Just what do you mean, brother, by 'colorful?' That's a word that can mean a lot of different things to a lot of different people, you know."

What does it mean to him? That's the question.

The grin broadens exposing the whitest teeth in Hollywood. "Well, now, I don't know as I can put my finger on it exactly. I guess Jack Dempsey comes pretty close to being my idea of somebody who's colorful, or Dizzy Dean. Dempsey hasn't fought for years, but you still think of him as a fighter—because of the way he fought when he did fight. He was something to see. And even when Diz isn't pitching so well, people like to watch him pitch—because, win or lose, he always puts on a show."

That's Gene's way of saying that he's just trying to put on a show that will make the customers want to come again. If that's what it takes to be colorful, he hopes he has it.

His dad, an outspoken gent, never misses a chance to say that he doesn't understand how Gene, of all people, ever became a movie star. Why, Oklahoma's full of cowboys who are better-looking and can sing better and maybe could act better.

"And that's no joke," says Gene wryly, indicating that he knows how lucky he has been.

When Gene got out of school, he went to work on a farm ("it wasn't big enough to be called a ranch") for 50c a day, plus room and board. The 50c a day was clear profit, but it dawned on him after a few months that even if he saved every cent (which he didn't), he'd be old and tired before he had enough saved to buy a farm, himself. He thought maybe he could do better at something else, somewhere else. Only he didn't know where he wanted to go or what he wanted to do. While he was making up his mind, he got a job on the railroad—so that when he did decide to leave Oklahoma, he could travel on a pass. He thought ahead, even then.

He worked as night telegrapher in a little town named Sapulpa, one of the loneliest stations on the C. and Q. Messages like trains were few, and the waits between were endless. He had to do something to pass the time and break the long and heavy silences, so he got himself a saxophone and started learning how to play it.

The dismal discords he found himself producing were no comfort even at 3 a. m. Besides, the reed made his lip sore. So he swapped the sax for a guitar. That was easier on the eardrums and, besides, he could sing while he played—hear the sound of a human voice even if it was only his own. He killed many a long hour, picking out old cowboy tunes on that guitar. But singing was just something to pass the time until:

"One night about 7:30 or 8, a man came into the station to send a telegram. He wrote out what he wanted to send, then he happened to notice the guitar. 'Do you play that?' he asked. I said, 'Oh, I sort of peck at it.' He said, 'Let's hear you knock off a tune.' So I sang a couple of old cowboy songs. He said, 'Young fellow, you're just wasting your time here. People would pay to hear that kind of singing.'

"He grinned, then laid some money down on the counter, more than enough to pay for the telegram, and said to me, 'Keep the change, son, and think over what I said.' I still didn't know who he was. I nearly fell through the floor when I read the name signed to the telegram: 'Will Rogers.'

"That started everything. A while after that, the Depression hit. That was 1929. The railroad started reducing its force, and I was one of them that got reduced. I had to decide, sudden-like, what to try next. I said to myself, 'Maybe I could sing. Will Rogers thought I could.' I had a pass coming to me from the railroad, so I decided I'd go to New York and see if I couldn't get a job making phonograph records. I'd noticed something. There seemed to be a million hill-billy singers making phonograph records—but no cowboy singers. I sort of figured maybe that field was uncrowded."

(Gene doesn't say so, but in figuring like that, he was unconsciously obeying one of the first rules of showmanship. Namely: "Give 'em something they haven't had before.")

He grins in reminiscence of his arrival in New York. "I was such a hick, you'd have needed a curry comb to get the cockleburrs out of my hair," he says. "I was just plain numbed by all those big buildings. But I was conscious of one thing. People in the East weren't used to fellows in big hats. They kept turning around to look at me in mine. I got to thinking about the attention a fellow would attract if he wore high-heeled rawhide boots, too, and real cowboy garb."

Gene started making the rounds of the record companies, alphabetically. He didn't get past the front door at any of them. That one question: "Experience?" stopped him. Finally he arrived at the V's and Victor. He knew he wouldn't get an audition there, either, if he made the kind of application that unknowns were expected to make. So he figured out something different to do.

When the receptionist asked him what kind of singing he did, he said, "Why, I sing cowboy songs, ma'am. Would you like to hear one?" And before she could say "no," he had his guitar out!

He had crooned about eight measures of a cowboy lament when two office doors burst open. Out popped two disturbed executives. Gene smiled his best smile at them, as much as to say that they could listen, too; he didn't mind. They couldn't help but listen. They couldn't stop him, short of using physical violence. When he finished his song, the two executives looked at each other, both with the thought that maybe here was a "natural," and said to Gene, "Young man, won't you step inside?" They told him inside that they would like to hear how his voice recorded.

If he hadn't used a little showmanship, he would never have landed that audition—which led to other things.

The audition wasn't a success. The two men told him that he had possibilities, but he needed a little more experience; they invited him to come back in a year. "I had a suspicion they thought that was probably the last they'd ever hear of me," Gene comments, "because that was what I was thinking myself." But he asked them to put the invitation in writing anyway. The way he figured, it wouldn't do any harm to have some proof that he had been there.

Back in Tulsa, he showed that letter to the right people and got himself a job on radio station KVOO at no salary, as "The Oklahoma Yodeling Cowboy." He supported himself by working on a farm again.

But he had made up his mind that singing was what he wanted to do—and he concentrated on how to get himself a reputation as a singer. Since he wasn't bringing any cash into the studio coffers, KVOO didn't spend much on advertising him, and Gene had to be his own press agent.

He started by making a point of answering every fan letter. He figured that if somebody thought enough of him to write a letter, that person was a friend—and he couldn't have too many friends. So he wrote friendly letters back letting them know he was anxious to find out what they personally would like to hear him sing. That encouraged them to write again and to have their friends write, too.

He kept a card index of the people's letters, so that when they wrote again, he would know it and could comment on it when he answered. Week by week, the letters snowballed until he was hard-pressed to answer them all. But he invited more.

A pal of his did him the favor of telling a reporter friend about the honest-to-goodness cowboy who was singing on KVOO. The reporter came around for a story. Gene made a point of being friendly. The reporter reciprocated with a big feature story about him. The publicity began, and, with it, the reputation.

At that time, there wasn't an unlimited supply of cowboy songs. After a while, he ran the danger of wearing out what songs there were. He was smart enough to see that danger in advance and, to sidestep it, he started making up new cowboy songs. Only he wasn't content just to turn out songs that nobody had heard before; he wanted to turn out a

DO YOU INHALE?

All smokers do—sometimes. And so it's very much to your interest to . . . GET THIS!

Found by eminent doctors: on comparing, four other leading cigarette brands average 235% more irritant than the strikingly contrasted Philip Morris—and, the irritation lasts more than five times as long! Philip Morris smokers enjoy the world's finest tobaccos—with no worry about throat irritation—even if you inhale!

CALL FOR PHILIP MORRIS

AMERICA'S FINEST CIGARETTE

*ROGERS
SILVERPLATE
by Oneida Ltd.
silversmiths

*Oneida Ltd. lines, bearing the Trade-Marks:
1881 ® ROGERS ®
WM. A. ROGERS
Simeon L. & George H. Rogers Company

LOOK FOR ONEIDA LTD.

IT MEANS EXTRA SILVER
WHERE YOU NEED IT

"Dev'lish Red"

IMP'S NEWEST LIPSTICK

Lovely as the Spirit of Youth

IMP's newest lipstick shade—DEV'LISH RED—is as new as tomorrow's sunrise. It is a vivid, luminous, youthful shade, so lusciously inviting your lips will never have looked so tempting before. Try Dev'lish Red. Your lips will look moistly tantalizing, satin soft and smooth, and just naughty enough to make you irresistibly kissable. IMP goes on smooth as silk and stays on for hours without drying or cracking. Imp Lipsticks are larger, of finer quality, yet cost only 10c. Other shades are Natural, Vivid, True Red, Dark and Orchid. They are creamy, never greasy or oily. See too, the Imp Lipstick Kit, also 10c, containing three exquisitely matched shades. If your 5 & 10 hasn't Imp write for it enclosing 10 cents.

IMP CO., 740 N. Hudson Ave., Chicago
Enclosed 10c (coin or stamps) for which send me postpaid, IMP DEV'LISH RED Lipstick

Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State .....

hit. Something that would spread the Autry name around. Looking over songs that had been hits, trying to find the formula, he made a discovery: people liked to sing about Mother. That made him wonder why there weren't any songs about Father. And the showman in Gene told him that here was a chance to give people something that they hadn't had. So he and a pal named Jimmy Long wrote "Silver-Haired Daddy of Mine."

It was an instant hit—at least, with Oklahomans and Texans. They deluged Gene with requests to sing it again, and again and then again. They grabbed up the sheet-music as fast as it came off the presses and deluged Sears Roebuck with mail orders for records of it.

The American Record Company, manufacturing for Sears Roebuck, had to do something about that. They tracked down the song, discovered the existence of Gene Autry and asked him to make a recording in New York.

The record people wrote that they were looking forward to meeting a singer who was also a cowboy. He didn't know what they expected, but he had a faint idea, and he didn't want to disappoint them. This might be his big chance. So he went to New York in a five-gallon hat and the fanciest cowboy outfit he could find. "I was dressed like the master of ceremonies at a rodeo," says Gene.

Sears officials attended the recording. They liked this singing cowboy—because he was different from any other radio personality they had ever seen or heard—and they asked him to become the star of their radio program.

A RADIO contract is for 13 weeks—after which your sponsor may or may not take up your option for another 13 weeks, depending on the number of listeners you attract. The number of listeners Gene attracted kept him on that program for 156 weeks with only summers off.

He says now, "I had no idea it would go as it did. I was the first cowboy to sing; I guess that was the answer. Anybody would have clicked in the same spot—though I'm awful happy somebody else didn't."

Gene is too modest. He should tell how he didn't overlook an angle that might encourage more listeners. He should tell how he started wearing nothing but loud clothes—not only to make people ask "Who's that?" but to help people who listened to him on the air keep their illusions about him in case they ever saw him in person. He should tell how, now that he was earning some money, he spent a lot of it on photographs. Anybody who thought enough of him to ask him for one could have one—free. He should tell how he went all over the Middle West making personal appearances, making people everywhere within range of Station WLS Gene Autry-conscious.

Those tours were grueling things; one night stands, sometimes in towns hundreds of miles apart, in all kinds of weather. And there wasn't much money in them—not the way Gene made them. He didn't go solo; he took along a troupe of about eighteen comedians and musicians. He says simply, "I figured that, the more help I had, the better the show would be. That was what I was after. I wanted people to say, after they spent their money, 'He put on a good show.'"

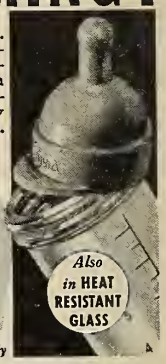
Then Nat Levine, a Hollywood producer of Westerns, had a brainstorm. He had watched people steadily losing interest in Westerns. The formula was worn out. He wondered about trying something new—a Western with music. He broached the idea to his boss, Herbert Yates, who owned Mascot Pictures (which later be-

NO DULL DRAB HAIR

when you use this amazing

4 Purpose Rinse

In one, simple, quick operation, LOVALON will do all of these 4 important things for your hair.
1. Gives lustrous highlights.
2. Rinses away shampoo film.
3. Tints the hair as it rinses.
4. Helps keep hair neatly in place.
LOVALON does not dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, in 12 different shades. Try LOVALON.



At stores which sell toilet goods

25¢ for 5 rinses
10¢ for 2 rinses

BABY COMING?

Consult your doctor regularly. Diet and exercise should be regulated from earliest days of pregnancy. Your doctor's advice on right foods and amount can control your weight and keep baby the right size to facilitate birth. Above all, ask him about feeding infant.

HYGEIA
NURSING BOTTLE AND NIPPLE
SAFER...because easier to clean

See Your Doctor Regularly

NEW KIND OF MAN'S SHOE

ZIPS ON and OFF

The new sensation in men's shoes — The Chippewa Clipper. It zips on and off in a "jiffy". Right now is the right time to get into a dignified and highly profitable shoe business of your own with this fast seller, and a complete line of almost 250 styles of dress, work and sports shoes. Prices as low as $1.98 a pair. Free 10-second demonstrator sells super-comfort air-cushion shoes like magic.

Be the MASON Factory Shoe Man in your locality. Manufacturer established 38 years will send complete line on request including factory-fitting shoe service training. No experience needed. Write for big FREE sales kit.

Mason Shoe Mfg. Co., Dpt. M-11, Chippewa Falls, Wis.

YOU'LL ALWAYS BE CONSTIPATED UNLESS—

You correct faulty living habits—unless liver bile flows freely every day into your intestines to help digest fatty foods. SO USE COMMON SENSE! Drink more water, eat more fruit and vegetables. And if assistance is needed, take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They not only assure gentle yet thorough bowel movements but ALSO stimulate liver bile to help digest fatty foods and tone up intestinal muscular action.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! Used successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards in treating patients for constipation and sluggish liver bile. Test their goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢ and 60¢.

came part of Republic), and who also owned the American Record Company. Yates thought of the "Singing Cowboy" and the way his records sold, and how a movie appearance might sell more records—and that was how Gene Autry happened to get an offer to sing in the picture, "In Old Santa Fe."

If Gene had been primarily interested in money, he wouldn't have been interested in the offer; it was that small. $500! And he had to pay his own expenses to and from Hollywood. But he saw how a movie appearance, even if it cost him money, could boost his stock as an entertainer. So he took the offer.

The picture did good business where he was known on the radio. Levine offered him $1,000 to make a serial. That was chicken feed, too—because by this time Gene was making $500 a week in the East—but he made the serial for publicity. Then Levine offered him a seven-year starring contract. At a starting salary of $150 a week. A quarter of what he was earning back East.

If Gene had been less of a showman, he wouldn't have been interested in making movies—for that kind of money. But he saw farther than his pocketbook. He gave up radio for movies.

HE had a horse back in Oklahoma that he had practised trick riding on during summer vacations—the original "Champ." He sent for the horse, and he invested in an expensive silver saddle. Levine said, "I wouldn't go to that expense, if I were you. What if this doesn't last?" Gene said, "Well, if I look better dressed up, I figure the horse will, too."

And what Gene did after his first picture is also revealing. "I realized that I could make all the pictures in the world, but if salesmen didn't sell 'em or theatres didn't play 'em, people wouldn't see 'em," Gene says. After that first picture, he arranged to make some personal appearances down Texas way. He stopped over in Dallas to meet the manager of the film exchange for that territory, and he stopped in countless other towns to introduce himself to theatre managers. He left behind him a trail of exhibitors who were conscious of Gene Autry pictures for the first time having met Gene Autry in person. They took an interest in this young fellow who seemed interested in seeing exhibitors make some money, and who took the trouble to listen to what they thought about Westerns. They started booking his pictures.

After every picture, he went to some section of the country where he hadn't been before, to build up more good will for Gene Autry. And it paid dividends. By tens, by twenties, by hundreds, more and more theatre managers booked his pictures. Until today, 11,000 U. S. theatres are booking them.

When he did that first singing in "In Old Santa Fe," he was called by his own name in the picture—for the publicity value. And he wondered why that stunt wouldn't have permanent publicity value. If he were Gene Autry on the screen and off, it ought to make it easier for people to believe he was like the characters he played and vice versa.

He had definite ideas about those characters. Most of the cowboy heroes that people had ever seen had been the grim, silent type. Well, he'd give 'em something different. Cowboys who were friendly hombres with senses of humor.

When the fan mail started arriving by the truckload, he didn't toss up his hands and say to the studio, "You've got to handle it for me"—as stars who have never received a quarter of his mail have

(Continued on page 83)

MERLE OBERON STARS IN "THAT UNCERTAIN FEELING", AN ERNST LUBITSCH PRODUCTION

MERLE OBERON TYPE... THE IVORY SKIN TYPE

Creamy skin, ivory tints. For striking clearness, Woodbury Rachel Shade. Or for deep, velvet tone, use Blush Rose.

To win Love's game

DRAMATIZE YOUR TYPE

VIRGINIA BRUCE Type
The Cameo Skin Type
Fair skin with cameo-pink tints. For delicate bloom use Woodbury Flesh. For radiant warmth, use Blush Rose.

DOLORES DEL RIO Type
The Tropic Skin Type
Vivid skin, dusky or olive tones. For luscious richness, use Woodbury Brunette. For copper glow, Champagne.

BRENDA JOYCE Type
The Honey Skin Type
Amber skin with gold tints. For deeper accent, Woodbury Champagne. For a rosy look, use Windsor Rose.

MYRNA LOY Type
The American Beauty Blend
Lovely light-dark blend, peach tones. For accent, use Woodbury Windsor Rose. For exotic effect, Brunette.

TO PLAY leading lady in Love's drama—heed Hollywood directors. They say:

"It's skin, not hair, that determines type." That's why they divide all beauty into 5 skin types. You are one of them.

And for each type, Woodbury has now created Color Controlled Powder shades—shades which do amazing things for beauty.

They're miraculously clear shades, for Woodbury Color Control eliminates color specks that once marred smoothness. And Color Control makes Woodbury fine, soft, clinging. Today, get Woodbury Powder. See your beauty, your romance—come alive!

FREE { 6 Color Controlled Shades and tube of new Woodbury Foundation Cream free—simply address penny postcard to John H. Woodbury, Inc., 8118 Alfred St., Cincinnati, O. (In Canada: Perth, Ont.)

WOODBURY Face Powder

IRRESISTIBLE Charm

YOURS WITH Irresistible LIPSTICK

A new seoson! A new personolity ond IRRESISTIBLE Lipstick to give you glomour! Foshion leoder in the spring porode is the smort womon who chooses her lipstick os port of her costume. FLASH RED for postels! CANDY STRIPE RED for thot potriotic accent to your novy ond white! RUBY RED for sophisticoted block! FUCHSIA PLUM to vibrote with the new South Americon shodes! Secret WHIP-TEXT process meons o softer, creomier, non-drying IRRESISTIBLE Lipstick. Motching ROUGE, FACE POWDER ond POWDER FOUNDATION.

IT'S Whip-Text
LASTS LONGER
SMOOTHER

10c AT ALL
5 & 10¢ STORES

USE IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on films not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

Picture	General Rating
All This, and Heaven Too (Warners)	4★
Angels Over Broadway (Columbia)	2½★
Argentine Nights (Universal)	2½★
Arise, My Love (Paramount)	4★
*Arizona (Columbia)	4★
Bank Dick, The (Universal)	3★
Bitter Sweet (M-G-M)	3★
Blondie Plays Cupid (Columbia)	C 2½★
Boom Town (M-G-M)	3½★
Brigham Young—Frontiersman (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Captain Caution (United Artists)	2½★
Case of the Black Parrot, (Warners)	2½★
Chad Hanna (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Charlie Chan at the Wax Museum (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Charter Pilot (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
*Cheers for Miss Bishop (United Artists)	4★
Christmas in July (Paramount)	3★
City for Conquest (Warners)	3½★
Colorado (Republic)	2½★
*Come Live With Me (M-G-M)	3★
Comin' Round the Mountain (Paramount)	2★
Comrade X (M-G-M)	3★
Dance, Girl, Dance (RKO)	2★
Dancing on a Dime (Paramount)	2★
Devil's Island (Warners)	2½★
Devil's Pipeline, The (Universal)	2★
Diamond Frontier (Universal)	2★
Dispatch From Reuter's, A (Warners)	C 3★
Dr. Kildare's Crisis (M-G-M)	2½★
Down Argentine Way (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Dulcy (M-G-M)	3★
Earl of Puddlestone (Republic)	2★
East of the River (Warners)	2½★
Ellery Queen, Master Detective (Columbia)	2½★
Escape (M-G-M)	3½★
Fantasia (Walt Disney)	C 4★
*Father's Son (Warners)	C 2★
Five Little Peppers in Trouble (Columbia)	C 2★
Flight Command (M-G-M)	3★
Foreign Correspondent (United Artists)	4★
Four Mothers (Warners)	3★
Free, Blonde and 21 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Gallant Sons (M-G-M)	2½★
Gambling on the High Seas (Warners)	2½★
Gay Caballero, The (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Ghost Breakers, The (Paramount)	3★
Girl from Avenue A (20th Century-Fox)	C 2★
Girls Under 21 (Columbia)	2★
Glamour for Sale (Columbia)	2★
Golden Fleecing, The (M-G-M)	3★
Gone With the Wind (M-G-M)	4★
Grapes of Wrath, The (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Great Dictator, The (United Artists)	3½★
Great McGinty, The (Paramount)	3½★
Great Profile, The (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Haunted Honeymoon (M-G-M)	3★
He Stayed for Breakfast (Columbia)	2½★
High Sierra (Warners)	3½★
Hit Parade of 1941 (Republic)	2½★
Honeymoon Deferred (Universal)	2½★
Howards of Virginia, The (Columbia)	3½★
Hudson's Bay (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Hullabaloo (M-G-M)	2★
I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby (Universal)	2★
If I Had My Way (Universal)	C 3★
I Married Adventure (Columbia)	3★
Invisible Woman, The (Universal)	3★
Irene (RKO)	3★
Isle of Destiny (RKO)	2★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
I Want A Divorce (Paramount)	3★
Kit Carson (United Artists)	2½★
Kitty Foyle (RKO)	4★
Knute Rockne—All American (Warners)	C 3½★
*Lady Eve, The (Paramount)	3½★
Lady in Question, The (Columbia)	3★
Lady with Red Hair, The (Warners)	3★
Land of Liberty (M-G-M)	3★
Letter, The (Warners)	4★
Let's Make Music (RKO)	3★
*Life With Henry (Paramount)	2½★
Little Bit of Heaven (Universal)	C 3★
Little Men (RKO)	2½★
Little Nellie Kelly (M-G-M)	C 3★
Long Voyage Home, The (United Artists)	4★
Love Thy Neighbor (Paramount)	3½★
Lucky Partners (RKO)	3★
*Mad Doctor, The (Paramount)	2½★
Maisie Was a Lady (M-G-M)	2½★
Man I Married, The (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Mark of Zorro, The (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Meet the Wildcat (Universal)	2½★
Meet the Missus (Republic)	2★
Mexican Spitfire Out West (RKO)	2★
Michael Shayne, Detective (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Midnight (Paramount)	3★
*Mr. and Mrs. Smith (RKO)	3★
Moon Over Burma (Paramount)	2½★
Mortal Storm, The (M-G-M)	4★
Murder in the Air (Warners)	2★
My Little Chickadee (Universal)	2½★
My Love Came Back (Warners)	3½★
New Moon (M-G-M)	3★
Night at Earl Carroll's, A (Paramount)	2½★
Night Train (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Nobody's Children (Columbia)	2½★
North West Mounted Police (Paramount)	C 3½★
Northwest Passage (M-G-M)	4★
No, No, Nanette (RKO)	2½★
No Time for Comedy (Warners)	3★
Oklahoma Kid, The (Warners)	3★
Oklahoma Renegades (Republic)	2½★
One Million B. C. (United Artists)	C 3★
One Night in the Tropics (Universal)	2½★
Opened by Mistake (Paramount)	2½★
Pastor Hall (United Artists)	3½★
Phantom Raiders (M-G-M)	2★
Philadelphia Story, The (M-G-M)	4★
Pioneers of the Frontier (Columbia)	2★
Playgirl (RKO)	2★
Pop Always Pays (RKO)	2½★
Pride and Prejudice (M-G-M)	3½★
Pride of the Bowery (Monogram)	2½★
Quarterback, The (Paramount)	2½★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Queen of the Yukon (Monogram)	2★
Ragtime Cowboy Joe (Universal)	2★
Ramparts We Watch, The (March of Time-RKO)	3½★
Rangers of Fortune (Paramount)	3★
*Reaching for the Sun (Paramount)	3½★
Road to Singapore, The (Paramount)	2½★
Robin Hood of the Pecos (Republic)	2½★
Romance of the Rio Grande (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Safari (Paramount)	2½★
Sailor's Lady (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Saint in Palm Springs, The (RKO)	2½★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Sandy Gets Her Man (Universal)	2★
Sea Hawk, The (Warners)	3½★
San Francisco Docks (Universal)	2½★
Santa Fe Trail (Warners)	4★
Second Chorus (Paramount)	3½★
Seven Sinners (Universal)	3★
Sky Murder (M-G-M)	2★
Slightly Honorable (United Artists)	3★
Slightly Tempted (Universal)	2★
*So Ends Our Night (United Artists)	3½★
Son of Monte Cristo, The (United Artists)	3★
South of Pago Pago (United Artists)	2½★
So You Won't Talk? (Columbia)	2½★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal)	C 2½★
Sporting Blood (M-G-M)	2½★
Spring Parade (Universal)	C 3★
Stanley and Livingstone (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Stranger on the Third Floor (RKO)	3★
Strike Up the Band (M-G-M)	C 3½★
Stronger Than Desire (M-G-M)	2½★
Susan and God (M-G-M)	3½★
Swiss Family Robinson (RKO)	C 3★
Tall, Dark and Handsome (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Texas Rangers Ride Again (Paramount)	2½★
They Drive by Night (Warners)	3★
They Knew What They Wanted (RKO)	3½★
Thief of Bagdad, The (United Artists)	C 3½★
Third Finger, Left Hand (M-G-M)	3★
*This Thing Called Love (Columbia)	3½★
Those Were the Days (Paramount)	C 2½★
Three Smart Girls Grow Up (Universal)	C 3★
Tin Pan Alley (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Tom Brown's School Days (RKO)	C 3★
Too Many Girls (RKO)	3★
Tower of London (Universal)	2★
Trail of the Vigilantes (Universal)	3★
Triple Justice (RKO)	2★
Tugboat Annie Sails Again (Warners)	2½★
Victory (Paramount)	3★
Virginia (Paramount)	3½★
Westerner, The (United Artists)	C 3★
We Who Are Young (M-G-M)	3★
Wyoming (M-G-M)	3★
You'll Find Out (RKO)	3★
Young As You Feel (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Youth Will Be Served (20th Century-Fox)	2★

(Continued from page 81)

been known to do. He realized the importance of that fan mail and the importance of doing right by it. He had to hire two secretaries to help him handle it, but he handled it himself. He also made sure that everybody who asked for a picture of him got one—free. "They're doing you a mighty big favor, putting your picture up where their friends can see it," is the way Gene looks at it. It costs him hundreds of dollars a month to send out those photos, but he doesn't know how he could spend money better.

People told him that he ought to form a nation-wide fan club of boys—such as another Western star had, but Gene didn't want to give anybody the idea that he was more interested in one kind of fan than another, because he wasn't. The only club he has gone for is the Gene Autry Friendship Club—a letter-writing club, designed to keep Gene posted about what his fans are doing and thinking and to keep his fans posted about him. There's a lot of mutual liking implied in that word "friendship."

He goes out of his way to make people feel that he likes them. Any time, any place, he's willing to meet anybody who wants to meet him—including autograph hunters. He figures that people don't collect autographs to annoy stars but to show their friends which stars they wanted to meet in person. When crowds collect, he doesn't duck out the back way. He walks out the front way smiling, glad to see so many people.

THIS business of being colorful is a costly one. He has $75,000 invested in his wardrobe alone—in specially made cowboy suits of every color and description (white's his favorite), hat to match every outfit and hand-tooled outfits.

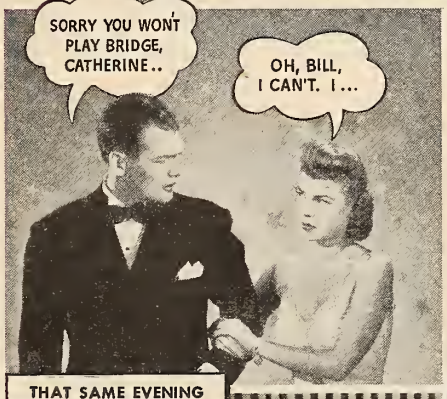
It cost Gene plenty, too, to have a 36-foot trailer truck specially built for "Champ" and his other horses—but wherever that truck goes, it's a colorful ad for Gene and "Champ."

Nobody else would ever have thought of chartering a plane for $3500 to transport a horse across the country as Gene did last year when he flew to New York for the rodeo at Madison Square Garden. But Gene figured that $3500 was a bargain price for a million dollars' worth of publicity.

Two years ago, Republic's distributor in England pleaded with the studio to send Gene over for a personal appearance tour—to make English theatres more conscious of Republic Pictures. Yates, the president of the company, said he was willing to donate $50,000 for an English campaign, if Gene would be willing to donate his time. Gene was willing. He didn't get a cent for his trouble. But millions of people who had never heard of him saw him—and got the idea of seeing his pictures. The first pictures that the British Government bought for army camp entertainment were six Gene Autry Westerns.

When Gene was voted Box Office Star No. 4, the sponsors of the poll, obviously baffled, attempted to explain his popularity by saying that the war had given the American public a taste for Westerns again, Westerns being so far removed from any suggestion of war.

Maybe so. But Gene isn't the only Western star or the only singing cowboy.



A well-known Hollywood agent, visiting Republic the other day, asked how he could join the Gene Autry fan club. He thought maybe he could learn something for the benefit of his clients about how to make fans keep coming back.

In other words, the city slickers can take lessons from the country boy who made good. He's Showman Number 1.

*Jane Russell and Jack Buetel in Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw". For romantic hands, use Jergens Lotion.

"Soft Hands are so truly feminine...adorable" says Jane Russell* (Lovely New Hollywood Discovery)

This Simple Care helps prevent awkward Roughness, Chapping

Quick as a wink—smooth Jergens Lotion on your hands. Many doctors help harsh, hard-used skin to rose-leaf softness by applying 2 fine ingredients—both in Jergens. The favorite Lotion! Never sticky! Be glad when you, too, have darling hands. Get Jergens Lotion today. 50¢, 25¢, 10¢, $1.00.

JERGENS LOTION

FOR SOFT, ADORABLE HANDS

FREE! ...PURSE-SIZE BOTTLE

MAIL THIS COUPON NOW

(Paste on penny postcard, if you wish)

The Andrew Jergens Company, 3722 Alfred Street Cincinnati, Ohio (In Canada: Perth, Ontario)

Let me see how soon Jergens Lotion helps me have lovable, soft hands. Send purse-size bottle, free.

Name _____

Street _____

City _____ State _____

BEAUTY AND THE MALE

(Continued from page 51)

more important than the color. If your hair looks clean and glossy and, you know, with a kind of spring to it, any color's nice. Oh, yes, and I like it to blow. I don't mean untidy. But I hate those pompadours and those tight curls and when it's plastered against your head. I think you should stay in the beauty parlor till you're finished, and I don't think you're finished till your hair looks soft and loose. Even with formals, I like hair a girl can toss. Gee, she looks pretty —I mean—" But Jackie refused to be confounded. "I like it to smell nice, too," he shouted defiantly through the whoops.

"Attaboy, kid," said Bing. "You and me both. Now, may I say a word about this lady's complexion? The skin that's been doused in soap and water is the skin for me. I'd sooner meet Dracula in the dark than a woman with a glazed face in the sunlight. She may look like a flower, but I never did go for wax blooms. Give me a scrubbed-looking skin, clean, fresh and healthy. Make-up's okay—it's swell —if it's not put on with a trowel. We men like our girls tanned in summer—and we even like 'em freckled, what do you think of that? A flock of freckles on a sun-warm face'll draw more money than fake camellia petals."

Mel Douglas stepped up and gravely pumped Bing's hand. "Count me among the nine who agree with you. But I'd like to go farther—"

"Which way?"

"Behind the skin," said Mel blandly. "Behind the mouth and the eyes. I don't feel that beauty of feature is the determining factor in a woman's attractiveness. She could be a Greek goddess and still be a pain in the neck—yes, even to look at, after the first month or two. What makes a woman lovely day by day, year by year, is the expression of her face, and it's character that makes expression. Cagney touched on it when he spoke of the eyes. Some of the most beautiful women I've seen have been old women or women who, taken feature by feature, would have been called homely. But there's a kind of spiritual experience, an inner radiance that comes through—gives the face sweetness, serenity, strength—nobility even. I don't know, boys, maybe I'm getting beyond my depth. I'm certainly beginning to feel self-conscious."

"That was well put," we approved. "But space presses. Mr. Stewart, let's hear from you."

Jimmy ducked his head and swallowed. As always, his voice sounded mournful, though his words didn't. "Well, if I'm not depriving any of you fellows, I'll take the figure. I like 'em small. Purely a personal idiosyncrasy, you understand. Pay no attention to it. Small, tall, or in between, the curve's the thing. A woman should be round in the right places—fore and aft. Put it like this. When you see her in profile, she should look like the letter S. Flat chests are a crime against nature. I like 'em high. I like shoulders broad, waists slender, but not so slender they look squeezed. If squeezing's necessary, the man can take care of it. All bones should be nicely covered. Chicken wings sticking out of the neck and back make a girl look pathetic. I like her a little longer from the waist down than from the waist up. I like round, slim thighs. I like legs—"

Dennis Morgan shoved him aside. "Don't be a hog, Jimmy. I like legs, too. Long slender legs. The kind that look as if they started from under the armpits. Straight in front. Curved at the calf. Not those awful bulges, though. There's no excuse for them. I don't care how much exercise a woman takes. She owes it to herself and her public to massage those bulges out. Trim ankles, but not so thin you start wondering if they're going to snap.

Legs were made to move on, among other things—to support the body. They should look as if they could do the job. Also, except in bed or on the beach, they should be inside stockings. I don't care how lovely they are, silk makes 'em look more so. Silk, and straight seams. As for feet, they can be as long as they like, provided they're shapely. With straight toes that never knew tight shoes. And—nothing's prettier than a dimpled knee—"

"Unless it's a dimpled elbow," said Brent. "Which has this advantage over the knee. It's less likely to be hidden. The professor will take for his discourse, gentlemen, arms and the hand. A good arm, like a good leg, should be long and slender but not fragile. There should be no visible muscle, but neither should it feel like a sausage to the touch. You should be able to sense the ripple of life which comes from elasticity under the skin. The lower arm tapers gently to the wrist, from which the hand flows. The hand is also long and slender but not bony, with tapering fingers if possible, a faintly rosy tint and dimpled knuckles."

"Write 'em a letter, George," said Bogart, "and let me speak my piece. You've got the girl now from tip to toe, but you've got her stationary. The most beautiful woman I ever saw was an actress. She was sitting down. Then her cue was called, and right under our noses beauty turned sour. She moved so badly that you lost sight of the face and figure. All you could see was that ungainly swivel. It was inexcusable in an actress, and almost as inexcusable in any woman. You can learn how to walk in any good school of gymnastics, or you can teach yourself. Carry books on your head the way Indian women carried baskets. They knew how to walk because they didn't have cars to haul them. Throw your shoulders back, hold your head high, swing easily from the hips, don't let your arms dangle. Your movements should flow into each other like a cat's. If any part of you bounces or wiggles, the harmony's destroyed. Try for grace of body and the grace of mind Douglas talks about, and you won't have to worry about the minx next door. Whew!" He wiped his forehead. "Who's the professor now?"

"Class dismissed," we said, "and thank you all."

We left them then and walked down Hollywood Boulevard, mentally reviewing what we'd learned and furtively obeying a few of the commandments. We made our eyes soft and friendly, brushed off some of that excess mouth, tossed our hair a little and walked with our heads high and our shoulders back. Results were instantaneous! For the first time in years we got the horn from a dozen drivers and "the eye" from a couple of drugstore cowboys.

They certainly knew what they were talking about—those guys!

CONSCRIPTION HITS HOLLYWOOD

(Continued from page 26)

an experienced seaman, would definitely be unacceptable to military medicos because his five-feet-eight body weighs only 134 pounds. Cesar Romero might be regarded much too thin to shoulder arms. On the other hand, Smiley Burnette, a setup for army cavalry, would have his 230-pound carriage discounted as too heavy. And Andy Devine, who became 35 nine days before the draft, would certainly be waived because of his 245 poundage. Stirling Hayden, the handsome newcomer, might be too lanky.

But physical aspects of the draft can only be speculative. The decision on each man's person cannot be made in a book of rules—but only upon observing each man's individual body. One thing's certain, America's army in these years of the blitzkrieg demands perfection. Dr. Robert Plunkett, army X-ray expert, admitted recently that $250 was being spent on each young man examined—just in an effort to find tuberculosis and to establish a defensive unit free from tuberculosis.

Second to health as an army exemption would be the business of marriage. This, however, must be clarified. There is, today, no clause in the Burke-Wadsworth Bill stating that a married man is ineligible for the draftee cantonments. There is a clause, though, stating that any man with dependents may be temporarily deferred, and the word "dependent" is defined as:

"Such person who is either the registrant's wife, divorced wife, child, parent, grandparent, brother, or sister, or a person under 18 years of age or a person of any age who is physically or mentally handicapped, whose support the registrant has assumed in good faith."

Concerning dependency, the draft boards are at present being very liberal. A movie star with a wife will probably not be summoned, at least not until a half million men have been trained.

MANY Hollywood bigwigs will, for a time, not be bothered by the army because they are married men who are supporting their wives. Joel McCrea and Dennis Morgan, each married seven years, each the father of two kids, would be deferred. Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Vincent Price and Gene Autry, all wedded, would also be deferred. Don Ameche, father of four boys, and Dick Foran, father of two, would not be bothered. Richard Carlson, Robert Cummings, Doug Fairbanks, Jr., John Garfield, William Gargan, Bob Hope, Johnny Weissmuller, Robert Young—all of them eligible as to health and age—would be deferred because of wives requiring support. John Wayne, with his wife's fourth child on the way, and husband Errol Flynn, who would make a fine able seaman, also would be passed temporarily by the army.

Then there are married men whose wives work. The Selective Service will not be so lenient with this group. As long as their wives can support themselves, these men must forego the camera and kliegs for bugle calls and cusses of top-sergeants.

But now, the big news, straight from California draft boards. The Hollywood actors who, because of their health, ages, lack of dependents, are most likely to become draftees when their mailboxes bear the tidings:

Francis Lederer, William Lundigan, Tony Martin, Bob Stack, Jimmy Stewart, Eddie Albert, Lew Ayres, Cary Grant, William Holden, Franchot Tone.

Of these, only Jimmy Stewart has been called to appear before his local draft board. When he showed up a short time ago, the army doctors gave him a strict going-over. They found his 158 pounds too fragile for his six feet three of height. So, though Stewart, a topnotch commercial pilot, wanted to serve—he was rejected because of the health clause. And, as this is written, others who already have received questionnaires, a prelude to examination and then service, are Vic Mature, Lee Bowman, Broderick Crawford, recently married, Dan Topping, husband of Sonja Henie, and Sterling Holloway, comedian in "Cheers for Miss Bishop."

According to the Burke-Wadsworth Bill, there is one exemption clause reading:

"Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to require any person to be subject to combat training or service in the land or naval forces of the United States who, by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed

BETWEEN TAKES THEY TAKE TO PEPSI-COLA

The "movie lots" in Hollywood are going Pepsi-Cola in a great big way. Different from other cola drinks, Pepsi-Cola appeals because of its finer flavor. Each big bottle pours 12 full ounces . . . a generous helping that really quenches thirst. Enjoy America's BIG favorite—go Pepsi-Cola now.

Pepsi-Cola, Sole Product of Pepsi-Cola Company, Long Island City, N. Y., is bottled locally by authorized bottlers from coast to coast.

Edmond O'Brien and Lucille Ball starred in RKO-Radio Pictures' current hit "Three Girls And A Gob"

FREE: Pepsi-Cola recipe booklet . . . write Pepsi-Cola Company, Long Island City, N. Y. Dept. E.

DOES HE USUALLY PREFER TO . . .

LOOK THE OTHER WAY

BECAUSE YOUR APPEARANCE IS MARRED BY

PSORIASIS

If this is one of the problems you face, why not see what Siroil can do for your psoriasis blemishes? Certainly it is sensible to give Siroil a chance. Siroil tends to remove the crusts and scales of psoriasis which are external in character and located on outer layer of skin. If or when your psoriasis lesions recur, light applications of Siroil will help keep them under control. Applied externally, Siroil does not stain clothing or bed linen—nor does it interfere in any way with your daily routine. Offered to you on a two weeks' satisfaction-or-money-refunded basis.

SIROIL FOR SALE AT ALL DRUG STORES

Write for interesting booklet on psoriasis direct to—

Siroil Laboratories, Inc., Detroit, Mich., Dept. M-11
Please send me your booklet on PSORIASIS.
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____
If you live in Canada, write to Siroil Laboratories of Canada, Ltd., Box 488, Windsor, Ont.

For the Love of Pete

. . . or Jim or Bill

KEEP YOUR EYES LOVELY!

Whatever his name, he'll find you more enchanting if your eyes have the crystal-clearness that brings out the beauty of their coloring.

Wash your eyes with this specialist's formula, today. See how they sparkle . . . how refreshed they feel. Eye-Gene is safe, hygienic, stainless. At all drug, dept., and ten cent stores.

Use

EYE-GENE

to a participation in war in any form, and is so found to be a bona fide objector."

There are no objectors in Hollywood! Every thespian is ready to exercise his trigger finger—but only when his number is announced!

Thus, America's first peacetime draft in history is now in its début year determined to prove that democracy with dynamite in each fist can be dynamic! This year, a million boys trained in countless camps will do their share in giving democracy muscles—and among them, you can be certain, will be the proper quota of movie stars.

Camp life for one year will be a new and strange life for Robert Stack, champion rifle shot, or Cary Grant, reformed acrobat, or Bill Holden. It'll be a gray, hard-hitting world of blasting bugle calls, chow lines, bellowing officers and chattering machine guns.

The movie star will have to leave his sprawling mansion behind for a tent to be shared with five other men, some of them perhaps who had once written fan letters to him, or a barracks to be shared with prize fighters, grocery clerks, mama's boys, rural hayseeds, accountants and dozens of others.

It'll be a new world, but it'll be democracy.

"I wish every boy in the country could have this year of training . . ." stated Dr. John Erskine. "What a great opportunity for all our boys to meet at least for one year on terms of absolute democracy! I should like to see the young conservative bunking in with the young radical . . . I should like the boys from one section of the country to do their year of service in another section."

There will be many surprises for easy-going film celebrities. Cary Grant, for example, used to earning perhaps $20,000 a month, will now have to be satisfied with the regular draftee wage of $30 a month! Topnotch stars, in the habit of wearing $145 suits, will now have to don woolen underwear, khakis, thick-soled shoes, plus blanket pack, a year's attire worth maybe $90!

Franchot Tone, used to dating until early in the morning and sleeping until noon, would have to forget his past the moment he entered camp. At 5:45, in the cool dawn, the bugle call. And no breakfast in bed, sir. Franchot would have to race to the mess hall for grapefruit, oatmeal, bacon and eggs, toast and coffee.

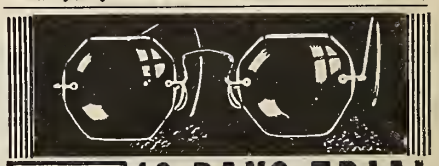
Vic Mature, Tony Martin, Eddie Albert, would find the female situation

It's romance for those up-and-coming youngsters Ruth Hussey and Bob Cummings in their latest, "Free and Easy."

Accent your costume . . . and your personality . . . with the marvelous new Dr. Ellis' Nail Polish. Amazingly long-wearing! Flows on smoothly! Dries quickly to a hard, brilliant finish! Comes in a complete range of 25 lovely new shades! Ask for it at your favorite 5&10 or drug store.

Good Housekeeping Bureau

Dr. Ellis' NAIL POLISH 10¢



Brush Away

GRAY HAIR

. . and Look 10 Years Younger

Now, at home, you can quickly and easily tint telltale streaks of gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Used for 28 years by thousands of women (men, too)—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless. No skin test needed, active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch as new gray appears. Easy to prove by tinting a test lock of your hair. 60c at drug or toilet counters on a money-back guarantee. Retain your youthful charm. Get BROWNATONE today.

GLASSES as Low as $1.95 Pair

16 DAYS TRIAL

Satisfaction Guaranteed or money back. Choice of many styles. Attractive prices.

Send No Money! Write for FREE circular today. Broken glasses repaired.

ADVANCE SPECTACLE CO., 537 S. Dearborn, Dept. MM-4, Chicago.

SCREEN ALBUM for 1941

Glamorous Star Portraits
Intimate Movie Biographies

NOW ON SALE EVERYWHERE—10c

Try ASTHMADOR!

Try Dr. R. Schiffmann's ASTHMADOR the next time an asthmatic attack leaves you gasping for breath. ASTHMADOR'S aromatic fumes aid in reducing the severity of the attack—help you breathe more easily. And it's economical, dependably uniform, produced under sanitary conditions in our modern laboratory—its quality insured through rigid scientific control. Try ASTHMADOR in any of three forms, powder, cigarette or pipe mixture. At all drug stores—or write today for a free sample to R. SCHIFFMANN CO., Los Angeles, Dept. F-43 really a situation. No Lana Turner to take to Ciro's. Oh, there'd be a Recreation Hall, where a pool game or penny ante poker game could be indulged in. And, once a week, a dance or beer party with women from a nearby small town.

Most of the army life will involve basic training—the object being to make the United States military like the Rose Bowl football teams—precise, quick, coordinating, with an answer for every emergency. And so, hour after hour, through baked and sizzling meadows, over hot highways, through slush and rain and hell, draftees will learn to protect their bodies and beings from howling shrapnel and exploding bombs, will toughen their muscles, will learn about tear gas through use of fake smoke pots, will learn about the mechanisms of streamlined coughing rifles and about monstrous tanks.

There will be, in this conscript army, a new language, too, for possible draftees like Wayne Morris and Lew Ayres. There will be words like "hay-burner" meaning cavalry, and "shavetail" meaning second-lieutenant and "stove pipe" meaning trench mortar.

And there will be no worries. An actor forsaking a Bel-Air home, a 1941 roadster half paid for and premiums due on his life insurance will have no fears. Because there exist special laws to protect him. There will be no mortgage foreclosure or repossession of credit wares to harass him. There will be no grabbing of his auto if it's half paid for. And the government will carry his insurance, if it's not over $5,000.

Eventually, during that hectic year after basic training, each man will go into his niche. Thirty per cent will be rushed into the Air Corps, but these must be the most perfect, physically and mentally, to prepare for the blitz in the sky. If married men were eligible, Fred MacMurray would be placed in the army band to give out on swingy, martial music; Henry Fonda, who'd had experience as a scene painter, would be channeled into the painting corps; Ray Milland, or anyone else with draftmen's training, would go into the Engineer Corps.

America may be sure of one thing. Hollywood and its rich and celebrated colony will do its part. Hollywood will have its share of the million conscripts trained during 1941.

Early diagnosis is the first line of defense against cancer. Help the American Society for the Control of Cancer in its educational program. Enlist in the local unit of the Women's Field Army. Annual enlistment fee $1.00. Use the American Society for the Control of Cancer labels on your packages.

If a resident of New York City or the Metropolitan area address New York City Cancer Committee, 125 East 38th Street. Postage labels and the Quarterly Review will be sent to you for your dollar.

AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR THE CONTROL OF CANCER

350 Madison Avenue • New York, N. Y.

ARE YOUR TEETH ALLURING, TOO?

the Answer's on the tip of your tongue

1 Make the Tongue-Test . . .

Run the tip of your tongue over your teeth... inside and out. Feel that filmy coating? That's Materia Alba...and it doesn't belong on teeth! It collects stains, makes teeth dull, dingy-looking.

2 Your Tongue Tells You

Your tongue tells you what others see... the filmy coating that dims the natural brilliance of your teeth, your smile. And it's this filmy coating that makes teeth look dull . . . bars your way to romance.

3 Switch to Pepsodent with Irium

There's a very good reason why Pepsodent makes your teeth feel so wonderfully smooth, look so sparkling bright. For only Pepsodent contains a wonder-working combination that cleans and polishes teeth to a new high brilliance.

First, only Pepsodent contains Irium, the super-cleansing agent that loosens and flushes away the filmy coating your tongue can feel, your friends can see. And Pepsodent alone contains a patented new high-polishing agent that buffs teeth to such a shiny smoothness, this filmy coating slides off before it can collect and stain.

Give yourself the radiant smile that comes from teeth that feel bright, look brighter. And that's no job for a "half-way" tooth paste. Get a tube of Pepsodent with Irium today!

—and for double-power cleansing . . .
PEPSODENT'S NEW
50-TUFT TOOTH BRUSH

When you wish for the comfort of softer, smoother hands

Do your duties tend to redden or roughen your skin—cause you annoying "Household Hands"? Then do try Barrington, the delicate, fragrant Hand Cream that is specially prepared to bring the comfort and relief of softer, smoother, whiter hands. Use it daily—regularly. You'll be thrilled how quickly Barrington Hand Cream helps you have the lovely hands you wish for.

Sold in the better 5 and 10c stores also in drug and department stores. 10c, 25c, 39c.

North American Dye Corporation
Mt. Vernon, New York

Barrington HAND CREAM

A NADCO QUALITY PRODUCT

ANY COLOR
LIGHT BROWN to BLACK

Gives a natural, youthful appearance. Easy to use in the clean privacy of your home; not greasy; will not rub off nor interfere with curling. For 30 years millions have used it with complete satisfaction. $1.35 for sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE

BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. Dept. M4-41
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.

Name.....
Street.....
City..... State.....
GIVE ORIGINAL HAIR COLOR

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

HAPPY ENDING

(Continued from page 39)

gentle face. Her jaw dropped open. "Who are you?"

"I'm Pearl, and I'm working for you."

The soft voice fell like balm on tired nerves. "Pearl," Mary sighed with exquisite relief, "is right."

When the picture was finished, Halliday chartered a boat for a delayed honeymoon of two weeks. They left Pearl in charge of the house and the Princess Olga. Incidentally, it was a birthday as well as a honeymoon boat. Larry was nine on September 21st, and he and Mrs. Martin joined the Hallidays for a celebration. They swam. They fished from dories. At night they had a party with balloons strung up on deck. "I had a wonderful time on your boat, Dicky," said Larry.

"It's not my boat. I just hired it."

"Well, never mind. Maybe by the time my next birthday comes around, it'll be your boat."

He was sent back to the mainland—thrill of thrills!—by plane. His elders returned to a house staffed only by Pearl.

Richard said, "You'd better do something about it."

Mary said, "That's easy." And to her secretary, "Hire me someone, but hire me colored people. I don't understand anyone else." Melissa and Jack arrived that night on approval. Melissa still chuckles over the memory. "Nobody ever hired us like Mrs. Halliday hired us. She walks in, takes a look, says 'Well, all right' and walks out." The question of help is a sore one in the movie colony. Among women it makes conversation by the yard. Mary doesn't know what they're talking about, so she keeps quiet, feeling half guilty and half smug.

She's made three additional concessions to domesticity:

a—flower arrangements, such as they are b—one white sweater
c—one chocolate cake

"I never did arrange flowers in my whole cockeyed life," she says. "My husband's crazy about them. So am I—in gardens and other people's vases. But I thought how pretty, me fixing flowers with my own hands for my own husband's delight. So? So I fix 'em. I go out and cut 'em, come in and try to make 'em stand up. If they stand up, Richard's proud. If they flop, I get 'em out of the way before he comes home.

"I made him the sweater for Christmas. Everyone at the studio was making a sweater for someone, and it suddenly came to me that, in the whole world, no one was making a sweater for my husband. I didn't know how to knit, but one of the girls stood over me and I did what she told me. I decided on a tennis sweater, because that's the kind where you use the heaviest yarn and the biggest needles. No, he doesn't play tennis. He's going to frame it."

One day the phone rang at Mrs. Martin's house and was answered by Bee, the pearl Mary's mother brought from Texas with her. Bee heard a voice she thought she recognized say, "I want that chocolate cake recipe of mother's."

Bee's known Mary for a good many years. "Who did you say you was?"

"It's Mary."

Came a heavy pause. "What for you want to make a choc-late cake?"

"I've got nothing else to do. I can't stand around looking at things."

"Look, honey, you're tired. Why don' you just lay down an' relax yourself?"

EVENTUALLY she got the recipe. As with the sweater, she did what it told her. All went well till she came to the fudge icing. "Here I sat in the middle of the kitchen table with the bowl in my lap—I can't do anything with my feet on the floor. I beat it and beat it, and nothing happened. It was raining, which is bad for any icing, really it is. I took it outdoors—thought the rain'd help cool it off. Melissa and Jack and Pearl all got hysterics. I got furious. I told Melissa she could have the darn old icing—she's nuts about fudge. We poured it, and as it poured, it started getting hard, and I started screaming at Melissa, 'Give me back my fudge!' We finally got it smeared over the cake."

She throned the cake on a silver platter and had it borne into the dining-room that night. "Mmm," said Richard after the first bite. "It's good. Who made it?"

For answer, she pressed the service button. In trooped Pearl and Melissa and Jack, all beaming.

"What is this, a dining-room game?"

"Ask them," said Mary.

"Ask them what?"

"Who made the cake."

"Who made the cake?" he echoed in a slight haze.

"Mrs. Halliday made it," they chorused.

"The effect," says Mary modestly, "was terrific. Like the second act curtain on opening night. When he took a second hunk, I thought maybe he was being nice. But he took a third hunk. No man's nice enough to take a third hunk of chocolate cake at the end of a good meal unless the cake's nice, too."

Larry came in with his grandmother. He goes to military school and wears a cadet's uniform, which suits him fine because, since he's worn pants at all, he's refused to wear them short. At nine, his chubby face retains something of its baby contours. His conversation doesn't. He hugged his mother, bared his teeth and stuck out his foot all at the same time. "We been to the dentist, 'n' we bought new shoes. Know what happened? Tell 'em about the ole lady, Nanny. —All right, I'll tell 'em. Know what she called Nanny, Meem?" His eyes blazed. "'You ole pigheaded fool.' 'Cause she wanted to make a left turn, 'n' Nanny stopped to let her make it. Then a man behind us started honkin', 'n' she thought it was Nanny honkin', so she said 'you ole pigheaded fool.' —I wish she wouldn't have been an ole lady, I'd've socked her one." From the garden

NEW SAFE WAY— TO REMOVE CUTICLE, USE

TRIMAL

Recommended by Leading Beauty Shops

WRAP cotton around the end of an orangewood stick. Saturate with Trimal and apply to cuticle. Watch dead cuticle soften. Wipe it away with a towel. You will be amazed at the results. On sale at drug, department and 10-cent stores. Trimal Labs., Inc., Los Angeles, Cal.

came a piteous whine and a scratching at the door. "Excuse me," said Larry. "Olga needs me."

Mrs. Martin looks like the grandmother every kid should have—pink-cheeked, gray-haired, twinkling-eyed and tranquil. Till she came to Los Angeles, she'd been exclusively a housewife. There, with time and energy on her hands, she looked around and presently found herself selling real estate. "Earned my first check at sixty-three," she says crisply, "and got the thrill of my life."

Guess what she did with it! Bought Larry a set of professional drums and her other grandson a clarinet.

"So they'll have some way of making their living through college," Mrs. Martin explained. "In case we all go broke. —Come along, Larry, we'll be late for the picture."

Larry came along, his hand on the neck of the dog that was almost as tall as he. "Mimi, what are you going to do with those horseshoes?"

The girl Mary played in "New York Town" was a champion horseshoe-tosser. To mark his appreciation at the picture's close, the director sent her four silver horseshoes dripping with flowers. Larry had his eye on them.

"Going to have 'em made into lighting fixtures, honey."

"What's that?"

"Just an idea—"

"Screwy idea—"

"Might work."

"We hope," said her son on a note of disgusted skepticism.

As a movie star, he takes his mother for granted. Till someone else doesn't. He'd gone shopping with Mimi and Dick for the first Christmas tree for their new house. Since it was the first, they were pretty fussy. A salesman decided to put them in their place, informing them in his best Franklin Pangborn manner that "we've sold dozens of trees like this to movie stars." Mary and Dick moved away to look at another. Larry stayed put. A few seconds later the salesman was tagging them, buttering them up, Miss Martin-ing Mary all over the place.

Back in the car, she fixed her child with a baleful eye. "What did you tell that man?"

"Told him 'whaddaya mean, movie star? My mother's a movie star just as much as any other ole movie star.'"

As for Richard, he isn't sure. Not since the day Larry played interlocutor at the school minstrel show. Mary had two broadcasts that day. To make up to both Larry and herself for having to miss his performance, she dashed home between broadcasts to get him togged out in the white dress suit she'd brought him from Havana. He was all agog. He went through the whole business for her, his part and all the other children's. Mrs. Martin and Richard went down to school with him. Mary joined them there after the broadcast, and they drove home together. Seated between two excited entertainers, Richard tried to give his attention to both. "Did I do my song all right, did the people like me?" babbled Larry, while Mary babbled about her radio show.

"Heaven help me," groaned Richard at last, his hands to his ears. "I'm married to two hams."

"Know what I want to be, really honest to goodness? The greatest actress, the greatest singer, the greatest wife, the greatest mother—"

"It's an idea—" says Richard.

"Screwy idea—"

"Might work—"

"We hope," giggles Mary.

Tall (5′ 7″), blonde Alexis Smith is literally on her toes every single minute in "The Bride Came C.O.D."

"MEN CAN'T RESIST THAT MODERN natural LOOK!"

Says
Lovely Jane Goolrick
Sweet Briar '40

AND IT'S YOURS WITH THIS FACE POWDER
YOU CHOOSE BY THE COLOR OF YOUR EYES!

● You can catch the man of your heart . . . if you have that sparkling, youthful look . . . the natural allure men can't resist. And now it can be yours with the new Richard Hudnut Marvelous Face Powder that you choose by the color of your eyes. You see, eye color is definitely related to the color of your skin, your hair . . .

● Authorities agree it is the sure way to find the powder that best suits your complexion . . . to give you natural loveliness. So, whether your eyes are blue, brown, gray, or hazel . . . at last you can get the powder most flattering to you. Simply ask for Hudnut Marvelous Face Powder . . . the new powder that's keyed to the color of your eyes . . .

● You'll be delighted how this pure, gossamer-fine powder goes on . . . clings for hours . . . agrees with even the most sensitive skin. You'll love its exquisite smoothness . . . the way it "feels" on your skin! And you'll be truly thrilled to see how it enhances your natural beauty. And don't forget—for perfect color harmony, use matching Marvelous Rouge and Lipstick, too!

Hudnut Marvelous Face Powder and harmonizing Rouge and Lipstick at drug and department stores—only 55¢ each. (65¢ in Canada.)

CLIP VALUABLE COUPON NOW

RICHARD HUDNUT, Dept. M, 693 Fifth Ave., New York City

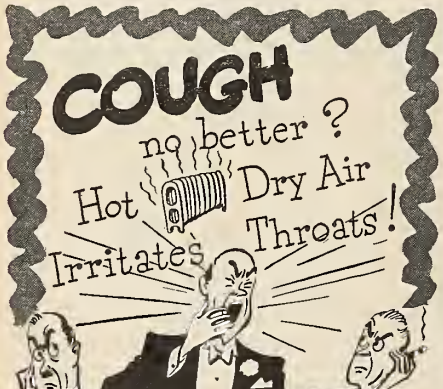
Please send me try-out Makeup Kit containing generous art-metal containers of harmonizing powder, rouge and lipstick. I enclose 10¢ to help cover mailing costs.

Check the color of your eyes! Brown ☐ Blue ☐ Hazel ☐ Gray ☐

Name_____

Street_____ City_____

(Good only in U.S.A., except where legally prohibited.) MM-441



Priscilla Parker
BREATH CORRECTING LIPSTICK

is the pleasing discovery of this delighted young lady who has found it a most pleasant and practical way to neutralize offensive breath, also breath odors that may result after drinking, smoking, or eating highly seasoned food.

A perfectly splendid lipstick for regular use—actually a Dual Purpose lipstick. Four delightful shades — vivid and lovely. Contains effective, yet harmless, deodorizing ingredients which neutralize unpleasant breath as you naturally moisten your lips.

DeLuxe styles, 50c and $1.00. Available in 20c size at your favorite dime store.

PARKER BOULDIN COMPANY
St. Paul, Minn.

Get fast relief with Pertussin "moist-throat" method

Some heating systems make the air dry as a bone. And this parched, harsh atmosphere is bad for a cough due to a cold.

By taking Pertussin, you stimulate the tiny moisture glands of your throat, helping them to pour out their soothing natural moisture. Then you can easily loosen sticky phlegm. And your cough is quickly relieved!

For over 30 years many physicians have prescribed this most effective remedy—Pertussin. Safe even for babies. Get Pertussin today at your druggist's.

A scientific product based on the therapeutic properties of Thyme.

IF IT'S A HUSBAND YOU'RE AFTER

(Continued from page 43)

tell you: No one sees me in public places now. I do not go to night clubs, to the polo, to the fights. Big and I were going together for six months before he saw me in an evening dress. Is this because of Big? Wait . . .

"I do not go out much any more because if I enter a night club and say to my escort, 'Please, my coat,' the next day appear headlines which read, 'LUPE VELEZ SCREAMS IN NIGHT SPOT!' When I go to the fights, which I love more than anything, I sit now like this," (Lupe folded demure hands in her lap, cast her eyes down, compressed her lips) "and the gallery that loves me shouts down, 'What's the matter, Lupe, you sick?' But in spite of how quiet I am, they give me a terrible write-up. They say I have a race prejudice at the fights. If I make a squeak at the polo games, they say I scream at the other players against Big.

"The way they write up about my language drives me crazy. If I tried to talk like they write I do, if I tried to say 'heem' instead of 'him,' 'I lof you!' instead of 'I love you,' I would not know how.

"So what has all this got to do with love and men, you wonder? I tell you this to prove to you that I am not playing a part because of Big. When I stay quiet in my house or work on the ranch with Big, when I say I am content with the pictures that I make now, I am living a part into which I have grown, a part that fits me. I am proving that we can change our roles in life, but we cannot cheat on them.

"The part I play now, the woman I now am, is the part Big gave me to play, yes. But I say this: It is always the man who must cast the woman in the part she is to play. After that, it is up to her how she plays it. But it is the man who gives her the script.

"It is the truth that a girl cannot have only one 'line.' She cannot treat one man as she treats another man.

"Men remind me exactly of horses. There are five-gaited horses, and there are two-gaited ones. And men are the same. You must suit your gait to theirs if you want to walk a long way with them.

"Once I was stupid with men. I was the most stupid when I thought I was very clever, very cute. How exactly was I stupid? By talking too much, by talking too insulting, by being too independent.

"I used to brag, too . . . 'I know a guy who wants to marry me—he's got millions.' I would say, 'I want a great, big house with a swimming pool, limousines and diamonds and trips to Europe.'

"Today, if I think of something I would like to have, I say, 'If we can afford this, someday I would like to have it!'

"Now do you know how I behave with

INFORMATION DESK
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

TWO BLOCKS OF STERLING SILVER ARE INLAID AT POINTS OF WEAR ON MOST USED PIECES FOR LIFETIME BEAUTY.

HERE HERE

HOLMES & EDWARDS STERLING INLAID*
SILVERPLATE

50 PIECE SET $52.75. OTHER SETS AS LOW AS $29.95. AT AUTHORIZED DEALERS.

Copyright 1941, International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Div., Meriden, Conn. In Canada, The T. Eaton Co., Ltd. *Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

STOP Scratching Relieve Itch Fast -or Money Back

For quick relief from itching of eczema, pimples, athlete's foot, scales, scabies, rashes and other externally caused skin troubles, use world-famous, cooling, antiseptic, liquid D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes irritation and quickly stops intense itching. 35c trial bottle proves it, or money back. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION.

DON'T TWIST BABY'S BONES

The X-Ray shows how outgrown shoes injure baby feet. Better buy the correct but inexpensive WEE WALKERS and get a larger size often. Ask your baby doctor. Sold in the Infants' Department of these low-profit stores.

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. Sears, Roebuck and Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. I. Silver & Bros.
McCrory Stores Schulte-United F. & W. Grand
G. R. Kinney Company

FREE: Baby foot measuring scale in pamphlet on fitting. Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKER Shoes
FOR wee WALKERS

men? Just like they are horses. Look, you put some grain in your hands and you pass by a horse. You don't let him know what you have in your hands. And he will follow you for ten miles, and you need never say a word.

"When I meet a man, I watch him for hours before I open my mouth. He may want to talk about politics, he may want to talk about the race-track. Whatever it is, I watch for the thread, and I pick it up.

"Gangsters have the right idea. They don't talk. Girls can learn from them how to get along with men. Girls chase men away by talking more than by any other mistake. I ought to know. I did it many times.

"The very worst mistake that a girl can make is to make a date with another man when she has a little fight with the man she loves. I won't mention names, but I wrecked something pretty fine in my life by just such monkey-shines as that. We had a little fight, this man and I, and what did I do? I go and get it said that I am engaged to a big producer. I get my name in the papers with this producer.

"To make a man jealous is, I know now, a very cheap trick. For if he is a real man, he never comes back. Only if he's a sucker does he come back. Remember that. And then you don't want him back. So, either way, you lose.

"And here is another big, bad mistake —men do not like women who are glamorous and exciting. Women like that scare men away. They may take such a woman out two or three times, but it is like they would take out the purple cow or the Siamese Twins, to be exhibitionists, to have people stare at them. They may marry such women sometimes, but it is not for long, such marriages to such women. They are interludes in men's lives, not the until-death-do-us-part women.

Acting wacky for her role in "Topper Returns" comes easy to Joan Blondell!

"Look what Big said about me. When he read about me being glamorous and exciting, he hated the thought of me. I didn't intrigue him. Not until he found I could paint walls and be an electrician and a plumber and a fine cook did be like me.

"I tell you, men detest extravagant women. I once lost a young man who was in love with me, because I thought I would be smart, and I said, 'Look, I wear eighteen-dollar stockings; I can't wear any cheaper kind.' This young man was rich, himself, but his father had raised a family on eighteen dollars a week. It was enough to scare him away.

"Now, when I meet a man and he says to me, 'Would you like to go to Ciro's?' I say, 'No, thank you, I know a little place in the Valley where we can get hamburgers and dance for five cents a dance.'

"And I mean it. I am not being self-sacrificing. I am not being a phony. I used to go to night clubs all the time. I would put on all the chinchilla and all the rubies, and I would think, I bet they burn when they see me; I bet they burn! But what did it get me? I was the one who burned.

"And here is some wisdom that is real: the first time you buy a house, they rook you maybe. Because you look at it once quickly, you see how pretty the paint is and you say quickly, 'I buy it!' The second time, you are more wise. You look to see if the basement has termites. It is the same with men.

"Don't take one quick look at a man and say 'I buy!' Take many looks. What I mean is, don't, whatever you do, don't marry for physical attraction. Not even if the man has the face of a Gary Cooper,

HOLLYWOOD LOVE—

What It Costs, Who Loses, Who Wins

FALSE STANDARDS that threaten sincere loves like Judy Garland's are exposed in Screen Guide's daring photo-story. Read intimate details of the romances that make headlines.

SCREEN GUIDE, the large-size magazine edited right in Hollywood, tells in PICTURES the truth about the stars. You'll find facts more exciting than press-agents' fiction.

OTHER FEATURES IN APRIL SCREEN GUIDE

Hollywood Scandals: The case of Paulette Goddard explained—how the stars suffer through movie-town's vicious scheme of slander.

Charles Boyer's Private Life Invaded: Inside story in scoop photos reveals the strange personality of the "greatest movie lover."

Horse Sense for Bob Taylor: Is he miscast as "Billy the Kid"?

Lana Turner and Her Men: Startling story about most-headlined starlet.

All this and heavenly color portraits, too—Carole Lombard, Barbara Stanwyck, Carole Landis, Laraine Day. Also gossip, reviews, beauty hints, fashions.

FREE—If you haven't seen SCREEN GUIDE lately, write to Dept. M4 for a sample copy of a recent issue. Address Screen Guide, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Illinois.

SCREEN GUIDE APRIL ISSUE Now on Sale at ALL NEWSSTANDS 10¢

New Lipstick For Brunettes Gives Your Lips That "NAUGHTY LOOK"

Eat, Smoke—Yes Kiss IT STAYS ON

IRENE HERVEY one of Hollywood's Loveliest Who Uses Tayton's

TOREADOR RED . . . It's a knockout for brunettes! A new, flaming, red color. You know how wet lips glisten and attract. That unblotted, moist, naughty look. You see it on the movie queens in their love scenes. Glamour. Sex Appeal, Hollywood calls it. And now the House of Tayton's has produced a new special Moisture-Mix lipstick which gives your mouth that moist, wet, glistening, naughty look, though not actually wet at all . . . And it stays on. Created in Hollywood. An instant hit; neither greasy nor dry . . . Try it. See how glamorous and naughty you look. Lips all shimmery—kiss tempting. So exciting. Romance inviting. Get this naughty Toreador Red for Brunettes (or Barbaric Red for blondes), also 8 other colors of TAYTON'S Moisture-Mix lipsticks in 10c and 25c guest sizes at your dime store. If your store is out ask manager to order or send 25c to Tayton's, Hollywood, Cal., stating whether blonde or brunette.

Tayton's
Lipstick Really Stays On

the physique of a Weissmuller, the bankroll of a Jock Whitney. Don't marry him unless you like what he is under the way he looks.

"Try to find out what a man thinks of women. Not just of you but of all women. Remember that a man in love will say anything to you. It is not what he says to you, but what he does for you that is important. Men play parts when they are after a woman. You cannot trust a man that is in love with you. He will fool you because he fools himself. Try to find out how he is with other women, his mother, his sisters, his friends. Try to find out what kind of a little boy he was.

"Me, I would advise girls to want a hard-working man. A man who can turn his hand to several jobs. Big, for instance, could become a teacher again, could raise cattle, could use his hands and his brains for many things besides acting.

"And the smartest thing I ever did with men was not to let myself completely go. I mean, a girl should always keep something behind her, something to rely on in herself.

"I got married, but I kept on with my work. If I marry again, I shall still and always will keep on with my work. Every woman should have something to do—make the best biscuits or write the best story—something you can do to make money. Because then the man does not feel he owns every little piece of you; then the man knows you have still a door that opens, and it is not good for any one human being to completely own any other human being; love should be free."

Yes, Lupe knows about love.

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send todoy for the new, up-to-dote list of Hollywood stors with their correct studio oddresses. It is o convenient size to hondle or keep in o scrop-book. To receive o list, oll you hove to do is write to us ond osk for it, enclosing o lorge, self-oddressed ond stomped envelope. Don't forget thot lost item, os no request con be complied with otherwise. Pleose send request to Informotion Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Modison Ave., New York, New York.

IMPRDVED CAKE MASCARA!

- Special Spiral Brush darkens all sides of your lashes—curls them automatically!
- Smart new "lipstick" metal case holds hollow tube of Mascara.
- An unusually generous amount, de luxe quality.
- Tearproof—non-smarting.

Modern EYES Mascara

10c If your 5 & 10c store has not yet received "Modern Eyes," send a dime and 2c stamp for mailing.

MODERN COSMETICS, INC.,
Distributors, Dept. D-20
75 East Wacker Drive, Chicago

Trade-mark "Modern Eyes" Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

LOOK AT THIS AMAZING WATCH and RING OFFER

LEATHER OR LINK BRACELET

One Year TO PAY IN FULL

Choice of ELGIN WALTHAM ILLINOIS Movement

LATEST styled 1941 ring. 1/20 14K Rolled Gold Plate shank. Genuine Sterling Silver top, set with ½K. 50 point. Simulated Diamond and six brilliants

YOUR CHOICE of Jeweled Elgin, Waltham or Illinois wrist watch. New styled size 0 case. Reconstructed movement. Accuracy guaranteed. Given with every Simulated Diamond ring when ordered and paid for on our purchase privilege plan. Payments: $3.50 down, within 20 days after arrival, at your post office. Balance of $3.50 anytime within a year (total only $7.00). Remember, the cost of watch is included in price of the ring. Extra surprise free gift enclosed for promptness. Send NO money with order. Just rush name, address, ring size. It comes by return mail in special gift box, postpaid.

A. KENDALL JEWELERS
Dept. MM-441, Topeka, Kan

Marvel WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE For Women

At DRUG COUNTERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Free Booklet—The Marvel Co., Dept. 418, New Haven, Conn.

TEETHING PAINS RELIEVED QUICKLY

WHEN your baby suffers from teething pains, just rub a few drops of Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion on the sore, tender, little gums and the pain will be relieved promptly.

Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion is the prescription of a famous baby specialist and has been used by mothers for over fifty years. One bottle is usually enough for one baby for the entire teething period.

Just rub it on the gums

DR. HAND'S TEETHING LOTION

Buy it from your druggist today

Boyfriend Mischa Auer isn't the only one who appreciates Peggy Moran!

High School at Home

Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Equivalent to resident school work—prepares for entrance to college. Standard H. S. texts supplied. Diplomas awarded. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. Free Bulletin on request.

American School, Dept. H-414, Drexel at 58th, Chicago

Could Henry VIII Have Had Stomach Ulcer Pains?

History tells how Henry VIII would gorge himself with food and suffer afterward. Don't ignore your sufferings. Try a 25c box of Udga for relief of ulcer and stomach pains, indigestion, gas pains, heartburn, burning sensation, bloat and other conditions caused by excess acid. Udga Tablets must help you or your money will be promptly refunded. At drug stores everywhere.

STOVES, HEATERS, FURNACES AT FACTORY PRICES

NEW FREE CATALOG

Send for Free Catalog! 136 Styles and Sizes. Coal-Wood Ranges, Combination Gas-Coal or Oil Ranges; Gas Ranges; Oil Ranges; Oil Heaters; Coal-Wood Heaters; Furnaces. 30 Days Trial. 24 hour shipments. 1,600,000 Satisfied Users. Stoves $5 Down, up to 18 months to pay.

30 Days Trial

EASY TERMS

KALAMAZOO STOVE & FURNACE CO., Mfrs.
405 Rochester Ave., Kalamazoo, Mich.

"A Kalamazoo Direct to You"
Trade Mark Registered

HOLLYWOOD SKIN CARE

(Continued from page 47)

disfiguring pit on your precious physiognomy. Following this treatment, be sure to close each little pore by splashing on cold water or rubbing on ice wrapped in a clean kerchief, followed by a dab of alcohol, toilet water or cold astringent.

Acne requires more attention, but it can be altogether overcome with strict, patient care. Correct diet, plenty of rest, fresh air and exercise are absolute essentials in treating this condition. Rich, greasy, heavy foods are taboo for you. Quarts of drinking water; fresh, green vegetables and fruits; eight to ten hours of sleep every night; and daily exercise, preferably out of doors, should form the basis of your program.

Keep your face scrupulously clean with a soft complexion brush (unless there are open eruptions), warm water and pure soap. Dry your skin very carefully, blotting every inch of it with a fresh, clean towel. One secret of success is to keep acne dry. Use astringents (applied with absolutely clean cotton) and spare the softening creams while this condition is acute. Cream of the vanishing, drying type will be better for your skin. Use powder sparingly temporarily and, more important still, change your puff every single time you powder. This is smart at any time, but essential when there's acne to combat. And, uh uh, don't touch your face with your little white hands however clean you think them. Use disposable cleansing tissues instead of linen hankies—and be sure that each one is fresh and spotless.

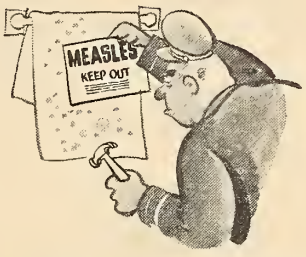
To sum up, a light diet, plenty of rest, exercise, thorough skin cleansing and drying twice daily, antiseptic precautions, topped off with the application of a drying, healing, specially prepared cream or lotion, all mixed with a dash of patience and perseverance—and you'll soon be able to say good-bye forever to that trying traitor to beauty, acne.

While acne usually is accompanied by an over-oily skin, rough patches frequently result from over-dryness. A cold or some local infection may have left an ugly roughness in its wake. Now is the time to apply generously all those rich, oily, lubricating creams after every cleansing as well as regularly every night and morning.

Speaking of colds, this time of year often finds us with pretty discouraging skin hangovers from a series of these winter bugaboos. What to do about that chapped, rough, irritated skin, just when you wanted it to look so lily white and lovely? Of course, first clear up the last vestige of those colds. Drink water and fruit juices by the gallon and rest more than usual. Stow away your linen kerchiefs in that sachet box Aunt Jenifer sent for Christmas, then stock up on soft, disposable cleansing tissues. Use them exclusively for hankies as well as after every cleansing and creaming. They'll prevent reinfection, thus helping to overcome your colds and, used regularly after cleansing or creaming, their clean, soft freshness will safeguard your skin against all kinds of germs and unnecessary irritations.

Red blotches on your face are often traceable to some germ infection caused by ordinary dirt combined with weak skin which, through neglect or ill health, has lost its normal tone. Conscientious scrubbing will help a lot. So will stimulating creams and the use of skin tonics.

TELL ME ANOTHER and win $5.00 - says Kleenex



We will pay $5.00 for every "Kleenex True Confession" published. Mail to KLEENEX, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

IT'S NO SKIN OFF MY NOSE

WHEN I HAVE A COLD, I USE VELVETY-SOFT KLEENEX, THE TISSUE THAT'S EASY ON TENDER SKIN!

(from a letter by A. S., Fresno, Calif.)

My Towels Had Measles

WHEN I USED THEM TO REMOVE POLISH FROM MY FINGERNAILS. NOW I USE KLEENEX, AND THE PLAGUE IS OVER!

(from a letter by G. J. J., Vandalia, Mo.)

I was Driving Blind

...UNTIL I STARTED KEEPING KLEENEX TISSUES IN THE CAR TO WIPE MOISTURE, FOG AND DIRT OFF THE WINDSHIELD

(from a letter by E. W. B., Birmingham, Ala.)

SOME DUMB BELLE!

I DIDN'T REALIZE ONLY KLEENEX HAS THE SERV-A-TISSUE BOX THAT ENDS FUMBLING AND WASTE! PULL A FRESH KLEENEX--ANOTHER POPS UP!

(from a letter by M. M., Ogden, Utah)

Don't put a Cold in your Pocket... Use KLEENEX*

KLEENEX* DISPOSABLE TISSUES (*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

Fever blisters or cold sores may follow a cold, upset tummy or be evidence of generally low resistance. Don't touch them with your hands, and never attempt to open one. An infection and scar may result. Spirits of camphor or a drying powder help soothe and heal cold blisters, but creams, ointment or any moist dressing will spread and prolong these painful little patches. Use soft, safe, disposable tissues for cleansing, then leave the blister strictly alone. If yours multiply or persist get busy at their systemic cause.

Wrinkles may or may not amount to blemishes, but one usually worries you into another, so here's a suggested stitch in time. Wrinkles are a sign of relaxed muscles and require local attention such as that recommended in the preceding article. They also can be warded off and smoothed out by a program of circulation pepper-uppers, such as outdoor exercise, fresh air and sunshine. Try relaxing a few minutes each day with your feet elevated higher than your head. That sends your blood to the rescue of starved, depleted facial tissues that are getting wrinkled from lack of tissue-nourishing circulation. Always keep a film of softening, lubricating cream on skin that tends to wrinkle. This holds moisture in suspension where it is most needed. Cold astringents, skin tonics, ice or icy water all are additional surface circulation raisers which do their share of wrinkle chasing.

That covers those surface blemish problems pretty thoroughly, we'd say. Local and systemic care go hand in hand, and one is handicapped without the other.

You've just got time to get in some telling blows at those blemishes before Easter, and the undressed season conspire to expose them. Take a note from Hollywood's beauty book and never say die till you've recaptured the charm of a skin that is just as fresh and lovely as a morning in April.

SORE TOES
Nature's Warning That
CORNS
Are Coming!

Don't wait until your toes are sore from shoe friction and pressure. At the first sign of sore or tender toes from shoe friction and pressure—protect those tender spots with the New Super-Soft Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. You will have quick relief, save yourself many an unhappy hour in new or tight shoes and keep FREE of corns, sore toes, tender spots and blisters!

Quickly Remove CORNS—CALLOUSES

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads can be used to relieve pain from corns, callouses, bunions, tender spots. Or, they can be used with the separate Medications included in every box for removing corns or callouses. The New flesh color Super-Soft Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads are delightfully soft, soothing, cushioning. 630% softer than before. Easy to apply. Do not come off in the bath, or stick to the stocking.

ECONOMICAL! Get the large family size box of 15 Corn Pads and 12 separate Corn-Removing Medications. Cost but a trifle. Insist on Dr. Scholl's! At all Drug, Shoe, Dept. Stores, and Toilet Goods Counters.

NEW Super-Soft Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads

IF YOU HAVE
GRAY HAIR
and DON'T LIKE a MESSY MIXTURE.... then write today for my
FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

As a Hair Color Specialist with forty years' European American experience, I am proud of my Color Imparter for Grayness. Use it like a hair tonic. Wonderfully GOOD for the scalp and dandruff; it can't leave stains. As you use it, the gray hair becomes a darker, more youthful color. I want to convince you by sending my free trial bottle and book telling All About Gray Hair.
ARTHUR RHODES, Hair Color Expert, Dept. 3, LOWELL, MASS.

MORE HOLLYWOOD INFORMATION THAN EVER BEFORE IN A MAGAZINE!
HOLLYWOOD WHO'S WHO Now On Sale Everywhere

WORLD FAMOUS • STANDARD MAKE TYPEWRITERS

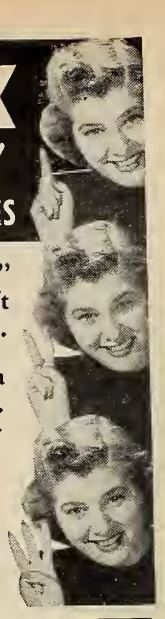
as Low as $29.90
10 DAY TRIAL
No Money Down!
EASY TERMS as low as 60¢ a week

YOUR CHOICE—UNDERWOODS! ROYALS! REMINGTON! L. C. SMITHS: WOODSTOCKS! As low as 1/3 mfgrs. orig. price. Typewriters that cost up to $110.00—as low as $29.90. Genuine, standard, full sized rebuilt office models—up-to-date improvements—standard keyboard, back spacer, ribbon reverse, 2 color ribbon, etc. Never before such rock-bottom prices! Fully GUARANTEED! Backed by 30 years of fair dealing. Ten day trial. Easiest terms in history—as low as 60¢ a week. FREE big price slashing catalog shows all makes in colors, details on 10 day trial and easiest terms. FREE Van Zandt Touch Typing course with your typewriter. See catalog before you buy. Mail coupon now while stock is complete.

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCHANGE
231 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill. (Dept. 461)
Send Free Catalog in colors showing late model standard typewriters at tremendous savings with no money down and 10 days' trial.
Name.....Address.....
Town.....State.....

TAGGING THE HOLLYWOOD PLAYBOYS

(Continued from page 36)



as such he has a certain reputation to uphold. For example, you never see Pat dating an extra or even a small part player. The dignity of his position forbids that. Mothers would grow to distrust him, and Pat is nothing if not trustworthy, safe to bring home and introduce to the family. He is an excellent dancer and is always available to the discriminating hostess in rounding out her table.

Next on our list, we find Jimmy Stewart, a most interesting and highly successful playboy. His technique is different, if not absolutely unique. In the trade, we call it the Little Boy Approach. It is charming and works almost exclusively on a lady's maternal instincts, makes her want to protect him. They say that Jackie Cooper was properly incensed the first time he watched Stewart work on a subject. After all, it is an unwritten law among the gay blades never to pinch another guy's stuff, and Jackie had been looking forward to middle age with considerable anticipation when he, too, could utilize this deadly approach which is characterized by the gently jutting under lip, the slightly hanging head, the from-under-the-eyebrows glance followed quickly by a frankly engaging twinkle and a boyish chuckle. I have seen strong women quiver from head to foot after a five-minute application of this approach. They practically whinny in their eagerness to soothe the furrowed brow.

WE debated for some time whether or not to include Cesar "Butch" Romero on our list. Despite his ardent Latin pan and his fabulous skill on the dance floor, "Butch" is getting a reputation for being safe, and no true man-about-town will ever allow so vicious a rumor to be circulated unchecked. But "Butch's" past success has stood him in good stead. Perhaps, were the truth known, "Butch" is not safe after all but is merely playing a deeper game, or maybe he only needs a good, bracing tonic. In any event, when a local lass needs an entertaining escort with a swell sense of humor and that ineffable ability to make her own rhumba look good, who does she think of? "Butch"—every time. And she can leave her brass knuckles home on the bureau—which is a consideration these days.

Let us consider for a moment Burgess Meredith. His technique is not so very unusual but perhaps well worthy of mention. Meredith is a most effective young actor with a yen for the Little Theatre. Unlike Orson Welles, he relies on an extremely subtle approach. His conversation reeks with references to the experimental theatres where true worth and rarefied art are to be found the year 'round. He insists, quite convincingly, that pictures are not for him. One perhaps, or even two, for the money and the experience, but then—heigh-ho and off to his first, true love—the Living Stage. This approach is virtually guaranteed to entrance any lady whose acting experience has been limited to the screen. The indifference to money as a main objective and the brightly burning flame that cloaks the smell of grease paint and the whir of a curtain rising—all these delivered in a low, tense voice with the eyes far away? Absolutely irresistible!

SITROUX
Triple-Tested
CLEANSING TISSUES

softer! Say "Sit-True" for tissues that are as soft as a kiss on the cheek.

stronger! As strong as a man's fond embrace. Sitroux is made only from pure cellulose.

more absorbent! They drink in moisture. Ideal for beauty care. Useful everywhere.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

NEW! 1941 POCKET MODEL RADIO
No Tubes Batteries Plug In DURABLE PLASTIC CABINETS
Dual Bands—Magictenna—Microdial Fits your pocket or purse—Wt. 6 ozs. Small as cigarette package. Receives standard & some short wave. PATENTED POWER RECTIFIER. No tubes batteries. Hi-ratio easy tuning "MICRO-DIAL." M. L. OF ILL. SAYS: "MIOGET RAOIO WORKS FINE." ONE YEAR SERVICE GUARANTEE! Sent complete ready to listen with instructions & tiny phone for use in homes, offices, hotels, in bed, etc. SIMPLE TO OPERATE—NO ELECTRICITY NEEDED! SEND NO MONEY! Pay postman only $2.99 plus postage charges on arrival or send $2.99 (Check, M. O. Cash) and yours will be sent postpaid. A MOST UNUSUAL VALUE! ORDER NOW! FREE! PLUG IN "MAGICTENNA"—ELIMINATES OUTSIDE WIRES!
MIDGET RAOIO CO. Dept. W. 4 Kearney Nebr.

SEND NO MONEY!

★TRANSPARENT ★ ROOFLESS ★ PARTIAL★

$6.85 to $35 We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. FREE! FREE impression material, directions, catalog and information. Write today to U.S. DENTALCO., Dept. 4-104, Chicago, Ill.
60 DAYS' TRIAL

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)
Use DERMOIL

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on Psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing true photographic proof of results also FREE.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Generous trial bottle sent FREE to those who send in their Druggist's name and address. Make our famous "One Spot Test" yourself. Write today for your test bottle. Print name plainly. Results may surprise you. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box S47, Northwestern Station, Dept. 1809, Detroit, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

Another small—very small—group is typified by Howard Hughes. Here we have a director and producer who is, in a sense, unique. When he promises a girl a part in a picture, she not only gets it, but gets a good one to boot. A man as honest as that really almost loses his amateur standing. The cards are stacked in his favor to such a degree that he doesn't have to try very hard to produce a delighted swoon on the part of the most seasoned of the Hollywood girls.

Horses are always a good approach in Hollywood. Tim Durant—one of Marlene Dietrich's favorite escorts—relies pretty heavily on riding breeches for his appeal. His social position, financial well-being and lack of reliance on any one phase of the industry place him in the category of a true glamour boy who really fits the horsey background. It becomes his quiet knowledge of his own general superiority.

Another comer is John Shelton. His studio feels that he has quite a future, and John is wisely preparing for the advent of that happy day when he grabs top billing. He's in his element with the society girl tourists who infest the town from time to time. Shelton is rarely seen in public with aught but a blue blood. He shies away from actresses but in the company of a socialite is flatteringly able to place himself on the same observing side of the table, so to speak. A guide in, but not of, the industry's lowly social life.

Among the directors there are many, many first-class playboys, some of whom show true genius. For example, Anatole Litvak has been known to hold a girl spellbound for hours with his nimble, if heavily accented, speech and his continental ability to remain debonair, if not aloof, at all times.

None of the lads get around like agent Vic Orsatti. He has been accused of meeting all trains, planes and busses in a pleasantly combined search for talent to represent and new fields to conquer. He has the ability to wear the loveliest of the lovely like a boutonnière—and make them like it. And they do meet such nice people that way, too.

Lest I be accused of forgetting old friends, let me put in a word here and Possessor of one of Hollywood's most perfect chassis is brown-eyed Marie Wilson, 5'5" tall, weighing 104 pounds!

Now Do This If Your Child Has A Cold

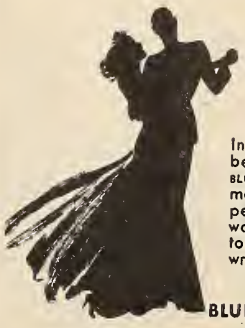
IMPROVED Vicks Way To Relieve Miseries Recommended to Mothers

It's a wise mother who exercises worry-saving care and common-sense when a child catches a cold that causes spasms of coughing, congestion in the upper bronchial tubes, muscular soreness or tightness! And to the wise mother we recommend relieving miseries of colds this improved Vicks way—with a 3-minute "VapoRub" Massage.

Increases Stimulating Penetrating-Vapor Action

THIS MORE THOROUGH TREATMENT actually increases the stimulating and penetrating-vapor action of Vicks VapoRub . . . MORE EFFECTIVELY stimulates chest and back surfaces like a poultice or plaster . . . MORE EFFECTIVELY penetrates the breathing passages with soothing medicinal vapors. And starts right in to work bringing welcome relief!

Works Faster, Longer



To get all the benefits of a 3-minute "VapoRub" Massage, you just massage VapoRub for three full minutes on the RIB-AREA OF THE BACK as well as on throat and chest. Spread a thick layer on chest and cover with warmed cloth. Then watch the results! . . . as this improved Vicks treatment makes VapoRub work faster and longer to relieve distress of colds!

FOR BETTER RESULTS USE VICKS VAPORUB THE IMPROVED DIRECT WAY

Vicks and VapoRub are registered trademarks of Vick Chemical Company

HEAVEN-SCENT for ROMANCE

Blue Waltz

In the spring—or anytime—a young man's fancy will be captivated by the fresh, flower-like fragrance of BLUE WALTZ Perfume. Enchanting as a garden in the moonlight and just as intoxicating! For this is a perfume exquisitely blended from a mixture of the world's loveliest blossoms. Make it your own with a touch of BLUE WALTZ on your hair, your throat, your wrists.

BLUE WALTZ PERFUME 10¢ at all 5 & 10¢ stores

GIRLS!

MAKE MONEY DRAWING

Women Excel in many branches of commercial art, illustrating and designing, a field offering ever widening opportunities for those lucky enough to have artistic talent. If you like to sketch objects, people or designs, don't waste your rare gift. Train yourself to do the pleasant and profitable work for which nature fitted you. You can do it in your spare time—at home—by studying the same lessons that have enabled our many graduates to earn up to $5000 a year—some even more.

Write us for Free Talent Test and Book describing opportunities. Give age and occupation.

4991 FEDERAL SCHOOLS, Inc.
Federal Schools Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

Don't Let GRAY HAIR Dim Your Life!

If you have gray hair, just wet it with Canute Water. A few applications will completely re-color it, similar to its former natural shade . . . in one day, if you wish. After that, attention only once a month will keep it young-looking, always!

Your hair will retain its naturally soft texture and lovely new color even after shampooing, salt-water bathing, perspiration, curling or waving. It remains clean and natural to the touch and looks natural in any light.

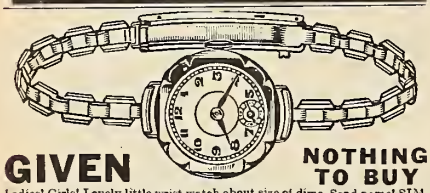
Easy To Use — Canute Water is pure, safe, colorless and crystal-clear . . . remarkably easy to use at home. Experience is not necessary.

SAFE! Canute Water has a remarkable record of 25 years without injury to a single person. In fact, scientific research at one of America's greatest Universities proved Canute Water to be perfectly harmless. Skin test NOT needed.

Only CANUTE WATER Can Make All These Claims

Try it and you will soon understand why leading dealers in most of America's largest Cities sell more Canute Water than all other hair coloring preparations combined.

6 application size.....$1.15 everywhere.



SMARTEST Wave OF ALL

. . . is the becoming, natural wave you set yourself, with genuine Dr. Ellis' Wave Set. Greaseless, quick-drying. Two formulas—Green or Clear. Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Ask for it at your favorite 5 & 10 or drug store.

10¢

Dr. Ellis' WAVE SET

GIVEN NOTHING TO BUY

Ladies! Girls! Lovely little wrist watch about size of dime. Send name! SIMPLY GIVE AWAY FREE beautifully colored pictures of the American Flag and its history with White CLOVERINE Brand SALVE for chaps and surface burns, easily sold to friends at 25c a box (with Flag Picture FREE) and remit per catalog. SPECIAL—Choice of 35 premiums for returning only the $3 collected. We are fair and square. Nothing to buy! Be first! Send for salve and pictures now

WILSON CHEM. CO., INC. DEPT. 10-A TYRONE, PA.

Earn $25 a week

AS A TRAINED PRACTICAL NURSE!

Practical nurses are always needed! Learn at home in your spare time as thousands of men and women —18 to 60 years of age—have done through CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING. Easy-to-understand lessons, endorsed by physicians. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Nurse Cromer, of Iowa, now runs her own nursing home. Others prefer to earn $2.50 to $5.00 a day in private practice.

YOU CAN EARN WHILE YOU LEARN!

Mrs. B. C., of Texas, earned $474.25 while taking course. Mrs. S. E. P. started on her first case after her 7th lesson; in 14 months she earned $1900! You, too, can earn good money, make new friends. High school not necessary. Equipment included. Easy payments. 42nd year. Send coupon now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING

Dept. 234, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.

Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____Age_____

City_____State_____

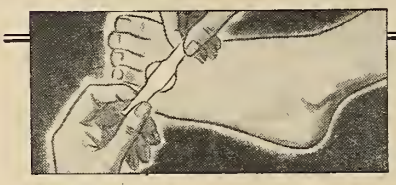
now for a fine old ex-glamour boy—David Niven. Even if David were not already married and therefore no longer officially in good standing, he'd have difficulty in keeping in practice due to the war. David's line was a delight for all concerned. A top-flight comedian at all times, he would laugh the gals into partial insensibility, and from there on it was a walkaway. He was the only man I ever knew who could run a flair for mimicry into a romance without a trace of incongruity. But then, he could mimic almost anything.

There's one other thing I want to point out to you in all due justice. Some of these lads may not consider themselves as predatory. They may be misjudged, and I am the last chap in the world to let that kind of misjudgment go unrevealed. No one knows any better than I how easy it is to be hung for circumstantial evidence.

For example, look what happened to me—and everyone knows I am no philanderer. That is, everyone but Lili, and with her it is just a matter of Gallic impetuosity. Here I was, dog-tired. Ten o'clock at night after a hard day's work. The downy was a siren-like lure, but I had to restrain the impulse for sleep. I had not yet performed my good deed for the day. So, on the way home, I dropped in at Dave Chasen's, searching for some one to befriend. And whom do I run into? Johnny Meyer. A pal. A sharer of vicissitudes. A lad of whom I have always said, "There is a man one can trust absolutely. A stout fellow."

Now Johnny looked badly. Peaked. He toyed with his drink, which is not at all like Johnny in his brighter moments. He does not toy.

At his insistence I joined the table for a bit of egg and salmon.



"Johnny," I said solicitously, "you do not look well. Is there anything that an old pal can do to lighten life's burden?"

"Yes," said Johnny morosely. "You could pay the check." Which cheered me. It showed that Johnny had not lost his sense of humor despite his bitter mood. I laughed softly.

Mary Howard, currently appearing with Frank Morgan in "Wild Man From Borneo," takes her yachting formally in a glamour gown and silver fox jacket!

A Sensible Treatment FOR CORNS —for sensible people

WHY SUFFER from corns? Here's a sensible treatment that helps relieve pain quickly —removes corns effectively. For Blue-Jay Corn Plasters do two important things. First, felt pad helps relieve pain by lifting off pressure. Then medication gently loosens corn so that in a few days it may be removed—including the "core!" (Stubborn cases may require more than one application.)

Blue-Jay costs very little—only a few cents to treat each corn—at all leading drug counters.

FALSE TEETH

LOW AS $6.85

90 DAYS' TRIAL TEST THEM EXAMINE THEM

We make FALSE TEETH for you by mail from your own impressions. You have satisfaction of MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE. Customers report satisfaction, but you be your own judge.

SEND NO MONEY WRITE TODAY for FREE Booklet and Material.

CLEVELAND DENTAL SUPPLY COMPANY

Dept. 97-D1, East St. Louis, Illinois

BECOME AN EXPERT ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $2,000 to $10,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. About 20,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U. S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C.P.A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C.P.A.'s, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession That Pays."

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 4318-H, Chicago

A Correspondence Institution

NASAL IRRITATION due to colds

MENTHOLATUM Quickly Soothes IRRITATED MEMBRANES

MENTHOLATUM

AMERICA'S ★ ★ LEADING ★ PUZZLE MAGAZINE

THE nation's puzzle fans have chosen CROSSWORD PUZZLES as their favorite puzzle magazine. And small wonder, for in it they find everything they want—quality, variety, quantity . . . over 96 pages of fascinating puzzles to suit novice and veteran alike. If you are not familiar with this oldest and foremost puzzle magazine, get a copy at your favorite newsstand.

CROSSWORD PUZZLES

ON SALE AT ALL NEWSDEALERS 10¢

The lady who was with him absented herself for a moment. I caught Johnny's hound-like eyes surveying me with speculation.

"We're pals, aren't we?" asked Johnny.

"Right. Forever and ever. Through thick and thin. What's up?"

He fell into a moody silence, like the time Bud Ernst and I shoved him into a tub of ice water. Then he said, "Do a pal a favor and drive this dame home for me, huh? I don't feel so good."

Despite myself, I could feel a defensive look creep into my eyes. I took myself firmly in hand. "Where does she live?"

"Just around the corner. Couple of blocks. Honest, I don't feel so hot or I'd do it myself."

I considered the girl. She was no Hedy Lamarr. Still she was a woman in distress, and my bosom pal's request was mild. Just a few blocks out of my way and then home to the downy. "Will you pay the check?" I countered.

In a trice the check was paid, and I sallied forth to the car where Max, my man, somnolently dreamt of the good old days in the Nicaraguan constabulary when a man could call his life his own. I slid under the wheel without waking him.

"Where to?" I asked brightly, with that lift that a man gets while performing that daily deed.

"Turn left and go east on Beverly," she said demurely. The top was down, the radio so softly, and the night air was balmy. Sometime later I turned to my silent passenger to see if she was asleep. She wasn't.

"Around here somewhere?" We were three miles from Chasen's.

"Straight ahead."

I DROVE on faintly troubled. I had a six o'clock call, and it was already midnight. My friends, I drove . . . and drove . . . and drove. This designing female lived way the devil the other side of Altadena. About twenty miles from Chasen's. It was one-thirty when I got home after having driven Johnny's girl "just around the block."

Now my point is that those of evil intent could and would accuse me of having tried to wolf my pal's gal Sal. They'd say, "Look, didn't he swipe her right out from under Johnny's nose in the bright light of Chasen's? Didn't he even stick old J.M. with the check? Two hours! Does it take two hours to drive around a corner? You heard Johnny say, 'Just around the corner, old pal,' didn't you? Well, add it up. Add it up!"

And there you have it. Accused of wolfing when all I was, was the victim of a scurrilous knave and his idea of a practical joke. It is such injustice which turns a man's soul. Now it may be that some of the lad's whose techniques we have examined here just act that way in over-compensation for an inferiority complex. They may leer and snort at a delicious bit of femininity just to cover their aching hearts and sense of shyness. Yeah, they may.

However, having bared my heart to you in this manner, I am forced in all honesty to reveal that even now all the Hollywood playboys seem to be converging on my door step, and I think they're out for blood.

Therefore, self-preservation dictates immediate closing of this tale. The Sirocco awaits me at her moorings in Santa Monica Bay. If my footwork is properly nimble, I shall elude them all—and be off for an extended cruise. The sharks of the broad Pacific are as nothing against the aroused pack—but don't say I didn't try to tell you!

FLAME-GLO ... America's Favorite Lipstick

MARSHA HUNT, featured in "Cheers for Miss Bishop"

10c AND 25c

Keeps YOU Kissable!

FLAME-GLO Lipstick sets your lips aflame with a radiant, seductive glow of youth that Keeps you Kissable! No man can resist its satiny lustre, its bewitching fragrance, its captivating colors... specially created to blend perfectly with the new fashion tones! And here's good news . . . a water-repellent film seals the thrilling, vibrant color to your lips; it's longer lasting! Try these popular FLAME-GLO shades TODAY:

RASPBERRY, GLAMOUR RED, ROYAL WINE AND RUBY RED

Flame-Glo
REG. U S PAT. OFF.

AT ALL 5 & 10c STORES

New
MATCHED MAKE-UP

Just out! FLAME-GLO Face Powder will instantly give you new complexion loveliness, for it's scientifically blended to cling for many hours longer! No more continual dabbing... this amazing new powder keeps its lasting smoothness and fragrance. In skin flattering tones that harmonize with the lipstick and rouge!

10c

ALSO ROUGE TO MATCH

WHOA! DON'T LET THE RAG MAN HAVE THEM!

You can dye your accessories in thrilling new colors with INSTANT RIT

It's easy! It's fun! And you'll get professional results, because RIT—and only RIT—contains neomerpin, the same penetrating ingredient used by professionals.

RIT dyes clear through every thread.

RIT dyes evenly . . . no streaks!

NO BOILING

Use Instant RIT to make old things look new!

27 colors . . . at drug and notion counters everywhere

NEVER SAY DYE—SAY RIT

Copyright 1941, Rit Products Corporation

I, Bette, take thee, Arthur . . .

Davis and her newly acquired hubby No. 2, Arthur Farnsworth. He's 34, 5' 11" tall, with the same coloring as hers. Bridesmaid's her younger sister, Barbara Pelgrim.

When Bette Davis sent Los Angeles newspapermen a wire reading: "ARTHUR FARNSWORTH AND I WERE MARRIED AT EIGHT O'CLOCK TUESDAY EVENING AT THE RANCH OF MR. AND MRS. JUSTIN DART IN ARIZONA," she accomplished two things. First, she informed the press that she had become a New Year's Eve bride. And second, she pinned back the ears of all those wiseacres who think women can't keep secrets.

Not since Hollywood came into being has the marriage of one of its children caught it so flat-footed. No one had ever heard of Farnsworth. No one had noticed the lovelight in Bette's eyes. And because they didn't know what to make of it, Hollywood tossed off the wedding as a spur-of-the-moment elopement and predicted its early failure.

Actually, there was nothing madcap about Bette's marriage. The ceremony, performed in the home of Jane Bryan and Justin Dart, just a year to the day after the Darts' own marriage, was as carefully planned as an RAF raid. Bette's white silk jersey wedding gown and exquisite trousseau had been purchased weeks earlier from a tongue-tied department store salesgirl. The bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley with which she faced the pastor had been carefully carried all the way from Hollywood. The simple gold band that made her Mrs. Farnsworth was in her groom's pocket when he flew from New England to Arizona. And the guest cottage which Mrs. Dart had transformed into a bridal suite had been standing ready and waiting for days.

Despite the secrecy with which she carried off the affair, Bette states there was nothing dramatic about her wedding. That is, nothing except the 500-mile trip to the Dart ranch which she made in her station wagon. She was accompanied only by her radio agent and her dog. "And the only thing that worried me," admitted Bette, "was that my flowers would wilt before I got there!"

Of her groom Bette will say little. It's known that he was a childhood friend; that he's the 34-year-old son of a Vermont dentist; that he was divorced two years ago from Betty Jane Adeylotte, Boston art designer and aviatrix; and that he has a snug spot in the upper brackets of Boston society. He was once the assistant manager of a New Hampshire hotel, but his present career is aviation. He flies his own plane, loves horses and rides magnificently, has a quiet sense of humor and a steadiness that is a balance to Bette's own nervous temperament.

When Bette returned from her recent vacation in the East, there was no understanding between them; but Farnsworth proposed and was accepted by courtesy of Mr. Bell!

If there is no hitch in their present plans, Farnsworth will settle into a California aviation post, his wife will go on to greater celluloid glory, and both will be "at home" in the house Bette bought a year ago.

Printed in the U. S. A. by the Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

Karo PRESENTS Cecile

"The Lass with the Delicate Air!"

Chic, full of airs and graces, utterly feminine—that's "Lady" Cecile. Fastidious to a grown-up degree is this daintiest of the Dionne Quintuplets. She loves clothes and would change frocks a dozen times a day if permitted. Cecile's favorite color is blue. She likes contrasting accessories—and insists that gloves, shoes and bag match. She's as fun-loving as her four famous sisters—but mudpie-making is out!

World Copyright 1941, King Features Syndicate

"Cecile" is the 5th portrait in Karo's series "The Quintuplets as Individuals" painted from life by the famous artist, Willy Pogany. In this series each little girl has been presented in a charmingly characteristic pose . . . a gallery of energetic, abundantly healthy children. DR. ALLAN ROY DAFOE says: "Karo is the only syrup served the Dionne Quintuplets. Its maltose and dextrose are ideal carbohydrates for growing children".

New

RICH, NOURISHING KARO BLUE LABEL—NOW AVAILABLE IN Glass

New

WORLD-FAMOUS CRYSTAL WHITE RED LABEL—ALSO COMES IN Glass

KARO IS AMERICA'S FAVORITE TABLE SYRUP

and it has been for over two generations! Children—and grown-ups too—enjoy it as a delicious "Spread" for bread. It's delightful as sweetening for fruits, fruit juices, cereals, milk, beverages. And Karo makes a glorious sauce for puddings and desserts. Karo is as good for you and your children as it is enjoyable. It's rich in dextrins, maltose and dextrose—food-energy sugar.

You'll be proud to put Karo in its new, streamlined container right on your table. The syrup looks so attractive! Let your family enjoy Karo's wholesome goodness at every meal—Karo really gives any meal a "flavor-lift".

OF COURSE—KARO SYRUP STILL COMES IN CANS!

KARO BLUE LABEL
America's favorite "spread". Grand as a dessert sauce.

KARO WAFFLE SYRUP
The new, delicious, different "hot cake" syrup. It has a tang and flavor all its own.

KARO RED LABEL (CRYSTAL WHITE)
Delightful sweetening for fruit, cereals, milk, beverages.

KARO SYRUP ADDS ZEST TO COOKED FOODS

Flavor-wise cooks keep Karo handy on the kitchen shelf! This full-flavored, rich syrup turns old favorite dishes into tempting, zesty, new treats. Try Karo on baked ham, apples or pears. Use it in cake and pie fillings—in frostings, too.

Karo gives frostings smooth, easy-to-cut consistency and superb flavor.

Try Bananas Karo for dessert or as a meat accompaniment: Place 6 peeled bananas in a baking dish . . . Combine 2 tablespoons of lemon juice with ½ cup Karo (Blue Label)—pour over bananas. Bake in moderate oven 15 to 18 minutes, turning bananas three to four times. All grocers sell Karo.

RICH IN DEXTRINS, MALTOSE AND DEXTROSE—FOOD-ENERGY SUGAR

ACCEPTED AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSN.

The smoke of Slower-Burning Camels gives you

EXTRA MILDNESS · EXTRA COOLNESS · EXTRA FLAVOR

and

28% LESS NICOTINE

than the average of the four other largest-selling cigarettes tested—less than any of them—according to independent scientific tests of the smoke itself.

THE slower-burning your cigarette, the greater your smoking pleasure. So remember—it's Camel cigarettes that are slower-burning. Slower-burning for more mildness—more flavor—more coolness!

Now Science confirms another advantage of slower-burning Camels. Less nicotine in the smoke! Yes, 28% less nicotine than the average of the four other largest-selling brands tested—less than any of them! Light up a Camel. The smoke's the thing!

BY BURNING 25% SLOWER than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—Camels also give you a smoking plus equal, on the average, to 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK.

"A cigarette is as mild as it smokes—so I prefer Camels. Extra mild and full of flavor, too!"

MRS. BROOKS HOWARD of Baltimore

ALTHOUGH prominent in Baltimore social life, Mrs. Brooks Howard finds time to work for many charities . . . head a fashionable dress-shop . . . run "Brookwood," her Maryland farm. Quite a collector, Mrs. Howard specializes in Staffordshire pottery dogs and miniature bottles. "And among my day-to-day pleasures," says Mrs. Howard, "I must mention Camels. Every time I smoke a Camel cigarette, I enjoy it thoroughly. Camel's slower way of burning means 'extras' to me. More flavor, more mildness—more coolness, too—all in one grand cigarette! You can be sure that whenever I entertain, I serve Camels."

THE SMOKE'S THE THING!

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Camel—the Slower-Burning cigarette

Even if you were born Plain Jane . . .

TAKE HOPE...If your Smile is Lovely!

"A LOVELY SMILE IS YOUR MOST IMPORTANT BEAUTY ASSET!"

say well-known beauty editors of 23 out of 24 leading magazines

In a recent poll made among the beauty editors of 24 leading magazines all but one of these beauty experts agreed that a lovely smile is a woman's most precious asset. They went on to say that "Even a plain girl has charm and personality if she keeps her smile bright, attractive and sparkling."

Make your smile your beauty talisman. Help keep it sparkling with Ipana and Massage.

TAKE HOPE—plain girl! Look in your mirror—and smile! There's your chance for beauty. For if you keep your teeth sparkling, gums firmer, you, too, have a loveliness to turn the eyes of men.

But truly, how is your smile? Bright and radiant—or dull, dingy? Help make your smile sparkle, make it the real, attractive YOU. Start today with Ipana and massage. Remember, a sparkling smile depends largely on firm, healthy gums.

If you ever see "pink" on your tooth brush—see your dentist right away. He may say your gums only need more work—natural exercise denied them by today's soft foods. And, like thousands of dentists, he may suggest "the extra stimulation of Ipana and massage."

Try Ipana and Massage

For Ipana not only cleans teeth thoroughly but, with massage, is specially designed to aid the gums to sturdier, more resistant firmness. So be sure to massage a little extra Ipana onto your gums every time you brush your teeth.

Start with Ipana Tooth Paste today. Let Ipana and massage help keep your gums firmer, your teeth sparkling, your smile winning and attractive.

IPANA TOOTH PASTE

APR -5 1941

©CIB 495015

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S
LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

The lion roars "See 'Men of Boystown'!"

★ ★ ★ ★

It will be money properly spent.

★ ★ ★ ★

It will blend the golden laughter and tears of April, as in William Watson's poem.

★ ★ ★ ★

In September, 1938, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—conversationally called M-G-M—decided that the world should know more about Father Flanagan and his famous home for homeless boys of all faiths. Result—"Boystown".

★ ★ ★ ★

It was one of the five most successful pictures ever produced. There were letters from the public. There was a demand for more.

And so with time and care a new great hit was created—a worthy sequel—a successful successor.

★ ★ ★ ★

Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney are together again.

★ ★ ★ ★

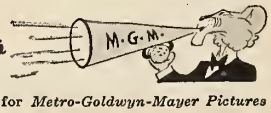
Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney are Father Flanagan and Whitey Marsh again!

★ ★ ★ ★

Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney are wonderful again in "Men of Boystown"!

★ ★ ★ ★

The original screen play by James K. McGuinness was directed by Norman Taurog, produced by John Considine.



★ ★ ★ ★

Time is the master critic and Time has awarded every medal and trophy to M-G-M, the master of entertainment.

★ ★ ★ ★

Sorry. We were told not to blow our own horn.

— Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

MODERN SCREEN

STORIES

Forever and a Day—Tyrone Power 10
My Dates with Mickey by Linda Darnell 24
A Smattering of Levant—Oscar Levant 26
Object—Gayety?—Rosalind Russell and Freddie Brisson 28
Made for Each Other—Granville and Cooper 30
Comedy on Canvas 32
All-American Heart Throb—Tony Martin 34
Is She Another Blonde Bombshell?—Veronica Lake 38
"Who . . . Me?"—Virginia Bruce 42
Memo to Vaughn Paul—Deanna Durbin's fiancé 44
Jimmy's Birthday Suit—Jimmy Stewart 46

BEAUTY

Style Your Smile 47
How to Lose Friends and Discourage Suitors 50

FEATURES

Information Desk 6
Movie Reviews 8
Modern Hostess 14
Portrait Gallery 19
Candidly Yours 36
"One Night in Lisbon" 40
Good News 52
Academy Awards 60
Screen Almanac 62
Our Puzzle Page 70
Movie Scoreboard 78
Tops in Toppers 85
Grooming a Star 87
Hollywood Highlights 88
Happy Birthday 98

FASHIONS

To an Easter Bride 56-57-58

PEARL H. FINLEY, Editor

SYLVIA KAHN, Hollywood Reporter

Vol. 22, No. 6, May, 1941. Copyright, 1941, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office of publicatian ot Washington and Sauth Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single capy price 10c in U. S. and Conada; U. S. subscription price $1.00 o year; Canadian subscription $2.00 a year, foreign subscription $2.20 a year. Entered os second-class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, ot the Postaffice, Dunellen, N. J. under Act of March 3, 1879. Additianal second-class entries at Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Calif.; Houston, Texas; Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept na responsibility far the return af unsolicited materiol. Nomes of characters used in semi-fictianol matter are fictitiaus. If the name of ony living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301773.

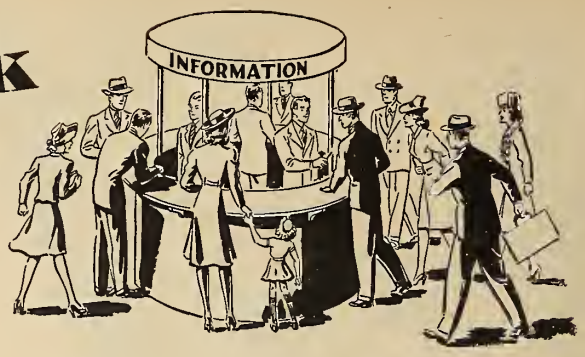
IT'S EVEN BETTER THAN BOYS TOWN

SPENCER TRACY · MICKEY ROONEY

IN

"MEN OF BOYS TOWN"

with



BOBS WATSON · DARRYL HICKMAN · MARY NASH
LARRY NUNN · HENRY O'NEILL · LEE J. COBB

Original Screen Play by James Kevin McGuinness
Directed by Norman Taurog
Produced by JOHN W. CONSIDINE, JR.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S NEW HIT

information desk

THE COMPLETE UNABRIDGED ANSWERS TO ALL THOSE TRICKY QUESTIONS OF YOURS!

NOTE: If you'd like a reply by mail, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, New York.

Dorothy Shenfeld, Denver, Col. Musically speaking, Lew Ayres strums on the banjo and guitar; Claudette Colbert sings a throbby blues number when she's in the tub; Mickey Rooney beats it out on his trap drums and Fred MacMurray wields a sweet 'n' low sax.

Ruth H., Anaconda, Mont. Robert Paige is at Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Cal. . . . Larry Nunn's at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Culver City, Cal.

Lorraine Schnoor, Milwaukee, Wis. You're right, your Dad's wrong—"Waterloo Bridge" takes place during the first World War, all except the very first and very last scenes.

Mildred Byrne, South Boston, Mass. Here's to completing your scrapbook! Jane Wyman's appeared in the following pictures since she's been in Hollywood: "My Man Godfrey," "Cain and Mabel," "Smart Blonde," "Ready, Willing and Able," "The King and the Chorus Girl," "Public Wedding," "The Singing Marine," "Death Flies East," "Fair Warning," "Second Honeymoon," "Under Suspicion," "The Gladiator," "Charlie Chan in Reno," "Gambling on the High Seas," "My Love Came Back," "Tugboat Annie Sails Again" and "Honeymoon for Three." Ronald Reagan's played in "Love Is On the Air," "Submarine D-1," "Sergeant Murphy," "Swing Your Lady," "Accidents Will Happen," "Cowboy from Brooklyn," "Boy Meets Girl," "Girls on Probation," "Going Places," "Dark Victory," "Naughty But Nice," "Hell's Kitchen," "Code of the Secret Service," "Smashing the Money Ring," "Angels Wash Their Faces," "Brother Rat and a Baby," "Secret Service of the Air," "Queer Money," "Murder in the Air," "The Life of Knute Rockne," "Tugboat Annie Sails Again" and "Santa Fe Trail."

Gloria Ozbum, Miami, Fla. Vic Mature's got several "best" girls: Betty Grable, Wendy Barrie, Liz Whitney and Lana Turner. Born in Louisville, Ky., 24 years ago, he left there in an old tin lizzy to try his luck in Hollywood while still a boy. Dead broke when he arrived, he pitched a tent wherein he camped during his term at the Pasadena Playhouse and long after he was playing in the movies. He's an extra-special dancer, somewhat conceited and definitely an unusual character. He's six feet two inches tall, weighs 198 pounds. He's now on Broadway in "Lady in the Dark."

A Hawaiian Fan, Waialua, Hawaii. Your favorite, June Storey, hails from Toronto, Canada, where she was born 23 years ago. She's five feet four inches tall, weighs 108 pounds, has blonde hair and blue eyes. While she was just a child the family moved to Connecticut where she was educated. Her parents were determined that she should be a schoolteacher, but her persistent interest in the stage finally won their cooperation, especially after she went so far as to organize a juvenile stock company! June loves sports (hunting, badminton, golf, tennis, swimming) and dancing and traveling. Her hobbies are collecting old coins, playing the piano and finding new ways to cook eggs. She already knows 32 styles! Her pet delight is southern fried chicken and the bane of her existence is parsnips. She's footloose and fancy free and devotes all her interests to her work. Right now she's just completed "The Lone Wolf Takes a Chance" with Warren William at Columbia Pictures, 1438 N. Gower St., Hollywood, Cal. . . . Bonita Granville is at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Cal.

Mrs. Mabel, Pulaski, Ill. Johnny Mack Brown was born with that name in Dothan, Ala., on Sept. 1, 1904. He's married to Cornelia Foster and has three kids. . . . George O'Brien (that's his real name) was born in San Francisco, Cal., on April 19, 1900. He's wed to Marguerite Churchill and has one little girl. . . . Gene Autry has no children. . . . Jane Withers, who celebrates her 15th birthday on April 12th, has completed "Her First Beau" at Columbia and is now working on "A Very Young Lady" at Twentieth Century-Fox.

Jennifer, Cleveland, Ohio. Billy Halop was 21 on February 11th. Write to Universal Studios, Universal City, Cal., for his picture. . . . Ty Power is 27 years old, five feet eleven inches tall and weighs 155 pounds. You can get his photo at Twentieth Century-Fox, Beverly Hills. . . . Roy Rogers is 28, five feet ten and three-fourths inches tall and weighs 155 pounds. Republic Studios, 4024 Radford Ave., N. Hollywood, sell his likeness for 25c. . . . Bing Crosby will be 36 on May 2nd, is five feet nine inches tall and weighs 165 pounds. You can get his picture at Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon Ave., Hollywood, Cal. . . . and don't forget to enclose 25c for each of the above photos!

Videly Taylor, Oklahoma City, Okla. Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland aren't going to school any more. . . . Nope, Margaret Lindsay isn't married. . . . Ginny Simms is Kay Kysers' vocalist and chief cook and bottle-washer. . . . Billy Halop was born in Brooklyn, but grew up on Long Island. . . . . Yessiree, Jeff Lynn (Continued on page 92)

The most beautiful fingernails in the world!

The continuous use of Dura Gloss will make your fingernails more beautiful!

Be coy, coquette! But let the incandescent beauty of your fingernails blaze out the story of your allure, your exquisite, fastidious charm! Give your fingernails this boon—the flashing loveliness of gem-like lustrous color—give your fingernails the boon of Dura-Gloss, the easy-onflow, durable, longer-lasting nail polish created for the most beautiful fingernails in the world! Dura-Gloss costs only ten cents, a thrifty dime, yet it is as perfect a polish as can possibly be made! See for yourself—try, buy Dura-Gloss today!

Protect your nails—make them more beautiful with

DURA-GLOSS

It's good for Your Nails 10¢

THE DIFFERENCE between NAIL POLISHES

Other polishes put color on your nails, but DURA-GLOSS imparts to them a gleam of brilliance — a LIFE and LUSTER — that you get only from DURA-GLOSS' new nail polish formula. Never before have you been able to get such remarkable, jewel-like brilliance in any nail polish. You, too, can have the most beautiful fingernails in the world. Don't be satisfied with less—don't delay. Get DURA-GLOSS. Use it. It makes your nails more beautiful!

This, of course, is a movie you will want to see no matter what anyone tells you about it. It is not only better than the stage play it stems from, but it is one of the very finest films ever produced.

It has everything you could possibly ask for: Magnificent acting, solid direction, imaginative writing and entrancing photography. The dirt of the novel and stageplay was cleaned up very simply by dropping it completely, and it isn't missed.

The film turns out to be funny! You will laugh and laugh at the antics of the Tobacco Road folks and their curious way of handling the vicissitudes of life. But you will leave the theatre a little ashamed of yourself for having laughed.

The story? Well, Jeeter is the last of a long line of Lesters. The old South is gone, and people like the Lesters now occupy the broken-down, claptrap mansions—practically squatters on their own land. Then along comes the bank and tells 'em they must get off. All this, incredibly, is in a comedy vein, and it's beautifully done.

Charley Grapewin as Jeeter is astonishingly good. The role seems to have been created for him. Gene Tierney doesn't get much to do as Ellie May. The supporting cast, including Elizabeth Patterson, William Tracy, Ward Bond and Marjorie Rambeau, is brilliant. It's the sincerity of the whole cast that makes "Tobacco Road" a truly great film.

There is a happy ending which is a cheater—but it won't distress you, because it completes the circle from futility to futility. Directed by John Ford. Twentieth Century-Fox.

In the screen version of "Tobacco Road," Word Bond appears as Lov Bensey, Charley Grapewin as Jeeter Lester and Gene Tierney as Ellie Moy.

TOBACCO ROAD ★ ★ ★ ½

Movie Reviews

BY WOLFE KAUFMAN

This is primarily a picture for pop and mom. It's a remember-when epic, but everyone of you youngsters should have a good time too. Here's a boisterous conglomeration of shrewdly molded entertainment values with all the elements of fun and hokum you can think of.

You may have seen the story once before, some years back as "One Sunday Afternoon," but don't let that keep you away. The two films have nothing in common. This one is a fast frolic all the way and has a tiptop crew of actors. Jimmy Cagney is at his best, Olivia de Havilland has never been better, and Rita Hayworth is an eyeful.

Jimmy is an ambitious young dentist in the very early 1900's with a yen for Rita, "The Strawberry Blonde," a flirtatious wench who has all the boys on the block popping their eyes as she walks by. Jack Carson marries her, and Jimmy marries Olivia de Havilland. He's got the best of the deal, of course. He's such a dope, though, that Carson kicks him around all through the film, and it's not until the finale that he realizes what a very lucky guy he is and what utter no-goods Rita and Jack are.

Carson carries out one of this department's prophecies by proving that he is ready for lead roles. Alan Hale and George Tobias are both funny in supporting roles. The whole picture is swell, but it's the light, frothy spirit of the production that counts above everything else. That is what makes it the kind of movie you will remember and tell your pals about. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Warner Brothers. (Continued on page 12)

STRAWBERRY BLONDE ★ ★ ★ ½

In "Strowberry Blonde," coquettish Rito Hoyworth of the red hoir upsets the equilibrium of correspondence school dentist Cogney!

BETTE DAVIS

will appear soon in her stunning new triumph

The Great LIE

GEO. BRENT

Her co-star of 'Dark Victory' and 'The Old Maid' in the Warner Bros. drama that magnificently surpasses both!

MARY ASTOR
LUCILE WATSON • HATTIE McDANIEL
Screen Play by Lenore Coffee • From a Novel by Polan Banks • Music by Max Steiner
Directed by EDMUND GOULDING

Note to all BETTE DAVIS FAN CLUBS: My thanks to every one of you for the wonderful things you have written me about 'The Letter'. I appreciate it deeply.
Bette Davis

FOREVER AND A DAY

BY BETTY HARRIS

HERE'S ONE FRANCO-AMERICAN ALLIANCE THAT'S AS SOLID AS GIBRALTAR—TY AND ANNABELLA POWER!

Tyrone, who once ushered in a Cincinnati theatre, is giving a young usher protégé of his a part in the remake of Valentino's "Blood and Sand."

Ty says their rambling, friendly house is a haven of peace and quiet, but he's christened it "Power House."

Late one afternoon about two years ago, two tired people drove up to a house in Brentwood. The man was dark, lean and handsome. The girl was small, blonde and lovely. They were engaged to be married. They'd been looking at houses all day and had reached the point, familiar to any home-hunter, of wondering whether they shouldn't rig up a tent.

Driving through the gate, they eyed without enthusiasm the white brick and stucco building. The slender columns flanking the doorway were nice, but the oval flowerbed facing it looked like an orphan.

"I never did like gray roofs and shutters," said Tyrone.

"I don't like flowerbeds," Annabella said, "unless with flowers in them."

"Come on, let's go—"

"All right—"

The caretaker barred their way. "May I show you the house?"

They hesitated, exchanged glances. "Well—since we're here—"

She showed them over the lower floor, then led them upstairs and into a bedroom that opened on a balcony. They stepped out. The sun was setting—rose-washed clouds against the far blue curve of the sky. Below them a garden—green velvet carpet bordered by viburnum hedges—to the right, a miniature woodland sloping toward the road—flowerbeds cascading with color to the left—an orange tree splashing its gold and emerald against a white wall—the turquoise glint of a pool—a faraway line of poplars stretching on tiptoe to the horizon, and beyond them a square white tower soaring above the foliage and looking as if it had been filched from a castle and etched on the sky for purely decorative purposes. All within a few yards of Sunset Boulevard, yet all so tranquil and cloistered that, as Annabella says, "you don't know if you are in Hollywood or France or the place where the sleeping beauty waited for her prince."

They looked at each other. Her eyes said, this is the place. His eyes answered yes. Gray roofs could be painted. Naked flowerbeds could be filled. But a garden like this happened once in a lifetime, and what fool would turn it down!

"We wanted to laugh and smile," says Annabella, "but we didn't dare, because of the woman. We wanted to say right away, we'll take it, but it wouldn't be good business. So we squeezed our arms and said 'sh!' and told her we'd let her know next day. But in the car we shivered that someone might come in the night to take it first. I can tell you we were there very early next morning to sign for that garden."

It's pleasant to see Tyrone and his wife together. You don't have to hold hands and coo "darling" to make it apparent that you're in love. As a matter of fact, it's more persuasive when you don't. There's something palpable about such a relationship—a fragrance, if you like, as refreshing and inescapable as any other. A word, a smile is enough to bring you the smell of a happy marriage and a happy house. The house with the garden has that fragrance.

You've seen the piquant beauty of Annabella's face in the movies. Add to that grace of manner, warmth of heart and an unforced gayety that sparkles through her talk like light through water, and you'll begin to understand why Tyrone (Continued on page 65)

NIGHT AFTER NIGHT I WAS LONELY

WHY didn't romance come to me in the Springtime as it did to other girls? I asked myself that question one soft and starry night in spring as I sat listening to romantic music on the radio. Then I heard the announcer say, "Dandruff can stand between you and love. That's why you should use Fitch Shampoo regularly each week. It is sold under a money-back guarantee to remove dandruff instantly—a guarantee backed by one of the world's largest insurance firms." He went on to say that Fitch Shampoo lathers richly and rinses out completely in hard or soft water. Penetrates and cleanses tiny hair openings on the scalp. A real reconditioning treatment that leaves hair shining, manageable and completely free of dandruff.

There was my answer! The snapshot on the left shows how good an answer it was. Springtime should bring romance to you, too. Try Fitch Shampoo today!

GOODBYE DANDRUFF

Soap Shampoo

1. This photograph shows germs and dandruff scattered but not removed, by ordinary soap shampoo.

Fitch Shampoo

2. All germs, dandruff and other foreign matter completely destroyed and removed by Fitch Shampoo.

Soap Shampoo

3. Microphoto shows hair shampooed with ordinary soap and rinsed twice. Note dandruff and curd deposit left by soap to mar natural luster of hair.

Fitch Shampoo

4. Microphoto after Fitch Shampoo and hair rinsed twice. Note Fitch Shampoo removes all dandruff and undissolved deposit, and brings out the natural luster of the hair.

Men

After and between Fitch Shampoos, use Fitch's Ideal Hair Tonic. It stimulates the scalp, and keeps the hair neat and good looking!

LISTEN TO THE FITCH BANDWAGON

Presenting your favorite orchestras every Sunday, 7:30 p.m. E.S.T., over N.B.C. Red Network

Fitch's
TRADE MARK

Copr. 1941 F. W. Fitch Co., Des Moines, Iowa

DANDRUFF REMOVER SHAMPOO

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 8)

★★★½ I Wanted Wings

If this movie does nothing else, it marks a new peak in aviation photography. There is some of the most magnificent flying here that you have ever seen or imagined in your whole life. It's real thrill stuff.

The story, which isn't quite worthy of the better-than-average actors, has to do with a group of guys who join Uncle Sam's flying forces. It tells about their various problems in the battle to earn wings—those miniature insignias of aerial superiority. Ray Milland, Wayne Morris and William Holden are a trio of youths who join up as the picture starts. Brian Donlevy is the tough teacher they draw—with the proverbial heart of gold. Constance Moore and Veronica Lake are the two gals who figure most prominently in the plot complications. Which, as you must admit, is a potent combination of acting talent.

Milland is rich, spoiled; Holden is poor, nervous; Morris is more or less the fall-guy—anything anybody says is okay with him. All three boys handle themselves expertly, with Morris a distinct surprise. Connie Moore, as a photographer who falls for Milland, shows great possibilities. Veronica Lake is the heavy, a tough gal with a lot of flash but not much sense of decency; she messes up practically everybody in the picture before the magnificently exciting finale.

You've heard a lot about Veronica, of course, and probably want to know a good deal more. Well, she's a luscious dish with a terrific chassis and lots of ability. She should attract a great deal of attention.

The story gets terribly melodramatic and hokum-y in spots, which seems a shame. But perhaps it doesn't matter. Because what will remain with you—and for a long time, probably—is the really breath-taking thrill and action stuff, of which there is a super-abundance. Directed by Mitchell Leisen.—Paramount.

★★★ Nice Girl?

"Nice Girl?" may not be Deanna Durbin's best picture, but it's real fun, real entertainment and a pleasure to sit through. Deanna is a typical American girl again, a lovely daughter in a lovely American family, and with typical average American family problems to worry her.

Deanna is in love with Robert Stack, who is in love with her. But there is no romance about this, because both of them have grown up together and take each other for granted. Then along comes a really romantic gent, Franchot Tone, for whom Deanna immediately falls. He plays along, very sweetly, in an attempt not to hurt her, and that makes for complications, of course.

Besides Deanna, there is an extra strong cast in this film. Robert Benchley is astonishingly good as Deanna's understanding and kindly father. Franchot Tone is the one who doesn't quite convince, but probably it's a matter of writing; he seems to have tongue in cheek just a bit too much of the time. Bobby Stack, of course, is perfect as Deanna's boy friend; Helen Broderick and Walter Brennan get a lot of fun in support bits, and there is a surprise in little Ann Gillis as Deanna's younger sister. Watch this kid. If she isn't a star very soon, there's something decidedly wrong somewhere. She's absolutely terrific.

The music is not up to par in this picture. There are five songs, four of them brand new but not especially exciting; the fifth is the nearest to being a classic, Stephen Foster's "Old Folks at Home." Directed by William Seiter.—Universal.

★★★ Back Street

Here is an adult movie that will linger long in your memory. It's primarily what is called a woman's picture, full of tears and heartbreak—but it also has the artistry of Margaret Sullavan and

Bonita Granville and her cute mother—who loves costume jewelry and wears an ankle bracelet—have succumbed to Hollywood's newest epidemic, "Gin Rummy."

Charles Boyer in the leading roles; brilliant direction by Robert Stevenson and an exceptionally intelligent script.

By present-day standards, Fannie Hurst's story may seem a bit dated. That is why the writers very carefully laid the plot a couple of decades ago and ended it in 1928. Something happened in 1929 that changed America, something more than a Wall Street collapse; it was an entire era that went. The writers felt this. So look at this yarn, today, as a costume piece, if you would understand it and believe it.

The story is a simple one of a man and woman in love, but who cannot marry because of a series of circumstances over which they have no control. Boyer is in love with Sullavan but marries another woman. Because her love for him is single-tracked and real, she becomes his mistress, living the rest of her life in the shadow of his rising importance in the business and social world.

It is not a pretty story, nor a very logical one, today. The screen play tries hard to soften Boyer's role and give him some decencies, but he remains a selfish gent throughout, and a bit of a heel. Boyer manages to infuse the part with a certain amount of sincerity, but it is by no means his most successful performance. Miss Sullavan, on the other hand, is at her very best, charming, lovable, believable, making her interpretation of Ray Smith extremely sympathetic. Which, of course, means fluttering of handkerchiefs in the audience—and sure box-office.

One distinctly negative note is Boyer's over-long and over-agonized death scene; it is far too clinically realistic. The superb acting of Miss Sullavan on the other end of the telephone would have been sufficient.

Remember the director's name—Robert Stevenson—and get set for some really important work from him in the future. —Universal.

★★★ Adam Had Four Sons

Here is Ingrid Bergman again, and it's about time. Miss Bergman made an (Continued on page 16)

Lana Turner's the lucky gal who nabbed the coveted leading role of showgirl Sheila Regan in "Ziegfeld Girl."

Even a Mask can't disguise the Girl who needs Mum!

Guard underarms against telltale odor. Use Mum every day—before every date!

JUNE isn't fooling anyone! Behind that mask there are tears—under the masquerade there is heartache! June wants the admiration other girls rate—a rush from the stag line, popularity and a man to call her own! But underarm odor is no help to popularity.

The sad part of it is a girl can offend and never even suspect she's at fault. She trusts her bath alone, but a bath can fail her. A bath only takes care of past perspiration—smart girls depend on Mum to prevent risk of odor to come. Just one quick dab of Mum under each arm—takes only 30 seconds—and your bath freshness lasts all day or all evening long.

Every single day—and before every date—play safe with easy, sure Mum.

QUICK! A dab under each arm—and you're through. Takes only 30 seconds—can be used even after you're dressed.

SAFE! Mum has the American Institute of Laundering Seal as being harmless to any kind of fabric. So safe it can be used even after underarm shaving!

SURE! If you want to be popular—get Mum today. Long after your bath has ceased to be effective, Mum will go right on guarding your charm!

MUM SOLVES ANOTHER PROBLEM FOR YOU!

For Sanitary Napkins

More women use Mum for Sanitary Napkins than any other deodorant. Mum is safe . . . guards against unpleasantness.

MUM

TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

CHEERS FOR MISS SCOTT AND HER . . .

SAVING SUGGESTIONS

BY MARJORIE DEEN

The school teacher in "Cheers for Miss Bishop" is charmingly portrayed by Martha Scott.

Get out your notebooks and pencils, girls, for Martha Scott—fresh from new triumphs gained through her fine portrayal of that lovable schoolmistress, Miss Bishop—has consented to take over our cooking class for a Lesson on Left-overs.

Back in the days when Miss Bishop started teaching they knew more about this important subject than we seem to; but then the habit of thrift was learned at an early age, to be observed instinctively forever after. However, "Waste not, want not!" is still a good by-word, so Martha suggests that we start a collection of what she calls "Saving Suggestions." (She refuses to give the uninspiring name of "left-overs" to combinations of foods which, when handled with imagination, can be works of art!)

Such a collection should include recipes for mealtime "Feature Attractions" as well as shorter, but no less helpful, ideas—all carefully classified. Start your collection by noting the suggestions given here. Then continue gathering material from every possible source so that where left-overs are concerned you can claim to be a star pupil—ready to add and subtract ingredients with the best of them to get the right answer to vexatious dinner problems, quickly.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Use left-over fruit juices for sauces. Or, substitute juices for equal amounts of water for desserts made with flavored gelatin, adding lemon juice also, as required. Or, "set" juice with unflavored gelatin in the correct proportions, and when firm cut into cubes and use to "extend" fruit cups and salads.

Pour about a teaspoon of juice left from maraschino cherries over grapefruit to add color, flavor and sweetness.

After meals, place left-overs that might otherwise be thrown away—such as a spoonful of vegetables, an olive or a stalk of celery, a half cup of broth, a little diced meat, a single new potato—in the refrigerator in a bowl with a tight-fitting cover. After a day or so make this collection into a molded salad in this manner: Strain and add to liquid enough tomato juice, bouillon or vegetable water to make 1½ cups. Heat, dissolve in it 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin, softened in ¼ cup cold water. Season well and when it begins to get firm fold in strained left-overs. Chill.

Never waste even a crust of bread! Dry it out in slow oven, roll into crumbs, store in covered jar for use in preparing breaded meats, croquettes, scalloped dishes, etc. Other uses for day-old bread appear under "Feature Attractions."

Day-after meats and fowl appear to fine advantage when made into pies. Use a biscuit topping; or left-over pie dough rolled out and baked on top of pie.

Use left-over yolks to make a smooth custard sauce. Pour this, while still hot, over cubes of stale cake or store sponge cake. Top with small "dabs" of jam or jelly—the spoonful or two so often left in the bottom of the jelly jar. If you have an egg white on hand add that in the form of a meringue topping cooked in fluffy mounds. Stale cake also can be steamed and served with a sauce; or try it instead of bread or macaroon crumbs in desserts where they are called for.

HASH IN TOAST SCALLOPS

A novel presentotion, such as this, ossures a more enthusiastic reception for any dish.

GRAPEFRUIT RITZ

Grapefruit goes "high hat" when it dons o topper of meringue and steps out in style.

OLD-FASHIONED BREAD PUDDING

As nourishing ond thrifty as it is Americon is this fine dessert. Serve with a rich souce.

FEATURE ATTRACTIONS

HASH IN TOAST SCALLOPS

(For left-over meat, potatoes, bread)

Prepare and cook hash in usual fashion in hot well-greased skillet. Good proportions for hash are a cup of diced cooked meat to a cup of diced boiled potato. This should be seasoned to taste . . . with salt and pepper, a few drops of Worcestershire or other bottled sauce, minced parsley, a pinch of mixed herbs, a bit of garlic, a little mustard and, by all means, some finely minced onion in any amount you favor.

TOAST SCALLOPS: For each Scallop allow 2 slices of stale bread. Cut these into rounds—one round to a slice—with a cookie cutter that has a scalloped edge (see illustration) or with a plain round cutter. Remove center from one of these two rounds and place the resulting ring on top of the uncut round. Brush well with egg beaten with ¼ cup milk. Brown slightly in hot oven. Pile hash high in center, serve immediately.

GRAPEFRUIT RITZ

(For left-over egg whites)

2 grapefruit, halved granulated sugar, to sweeten
4 egg whites
6 tablespoons powdered sugar
1½ teaspoons grapefruit juice
1 cup pineapple gems

Select quite large, smooth-skinned Florida grapefruit. Cut each in half, core carefully—removing considerably more of the center than usual. Remove all seeds and with a thin sharp knife cut around sections to loosen them from dividing membranes. Sprinkle generously with sugar; chill thoroughly. When ready to serve make the meringue. Place grapefruit halves on board covered with white paper; fill centers with pineapple gems. Top with meringue, heaped on lightly so as to cover entire top. Brown quickly in hot oven (450°F.) Slip from paper, serve immediately.

MERINGUE: Beat egg whites until stiff, add 4 tablespoons of the powdered sugar; beat until mixture will stand up in peaks. Fold in grapefruit juice and remaining sugar.

This same meringue may be used on top of custards and other puddings (such as the Bread Pudding given here), on baked apples, on cream pies, fruit pies and tarts of all kind. However, for such uses the meringue is baked a longer time (about 10 minutes) in a slow oven (325° F.) and is cooled before serving.

OLD FASHIONED BREAD PUDDING

(For left-over bread, egg yolks)

2 cups scalded milk
2 cups bread cubes (stale, but not dry)
3 yolks, slightly beaten*
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

Soak the bread, crusts and all, in the scalded milk for 10 minutes. Mix and add remaining ingredients. Turn into well-buttered individual molds or custard cups. Set in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 30 minutes or until a knife comes out clean when inserted in center of pudding. Serve hot or cold with fruit sauce.

VARIATION: Add ½ cup chopped seedless raisins, or chopped nuts, or chopped dates, to bread mixture. Or: Substitute 1 cup orange juice for 1 cup of the milk, adding this to the egg mixture. Or: Cut 2 squares semi-sweet chocolate into small pieces and add to cooled milk mixture.

In making the above pudding 2 whole eggs may be used instead of 3 yolks when there are no left-over yolks to dispose of. Or the 3 yolks can be used in the pudding and 1 or 2 egg whites used to make a meringue.*

Lady about to change _her Laundry Soap...

Overworked, roughened hands can cause as much annoyance as anything you can think of . . .

—And it's no secret that this condition is aggravated by a half-way laundry soap.

It's a sensible idea to change to Fels-Naptha Soap for the sake of your hands! Fels-Naptha provides two diligent cleaners to do the hard part of washing. Gentle, active naptha loosens the stubbornest grime. Richer, golden soap fairly floats dirt away.

Try a tub-full of fragrant, foamy, Fels-Naptha suds next wash day. You can forget most of the rubbing that ruins clothes and roughens your hands. And when you use the husky golden chips, you are never bothered with 'washday sneeze'.

Golden bar or Golden chips_ Fels-Naptha banishes "Tattle-Tale Gray"

"I wanted to hide BUT I FELT LIKE THIS!"

You can't HIDE underarm stain but you CAN PREVENT IT!

25¢

Modern society expects a woman to be personally dainty through long hours of strain and excitement — expects her loveliness to last from one engagement to another. Difficult, indeed, without Kleinert's never failing dress shields!

Many women have discovered the clever new ways to wear them . . . attached to a dainty little bra perhaps, or pinned in the seams of dresses and sweaters. Kleinert's makes shields in all shapes and sizes, in colors of course, and even on tiny straps that slip in place in no time at all!

Important to remember — never wear a dress even once without shields, important to remember, too, insist on "Kleinert's" for quality that's guaranteed.

TORONTO • NEW YORK • LONDON

You, too, will find it PAYS to buy

Kleinert's
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
DRESS SHIELDS

(Continued from page 13)

auspicious American début in "Intermezzo," almost two years ago, was hailed by everyone—and hasn't worked since. Which does not make sense. And here she is again, outstanding, strong, competent and practically holding up this entire movie on her own slim, little shoulders.

"Adam" was once entitled "Legacy," which is a better title. It is one of those long-winded but fairly interesting histories of a family. As film fare, it attempts to span too long a period, thereby becoming episodic and slow. Nevertheless, it will touch on familiar points in the lives of almost any parent in the audience, and should appeal to quite a large percentage of filmgoers.

Warner Baxter is Adam, a well-to-do American at the very beginning of the twentieth century. He is married to Fay Wray and they have four sons, with Ingrid Bergman as the governess. Time marches on, Fay dies and the fortune fades. The children grow up, and young David (Johnny Downs) marries Susan Hayward, a pretty minx who proceeds to disrupt the lives of all of them. It is, of course, primarily the story of one rotten apple in a barrel of good ones. But it is more than that. It is a saga of an average American family.

Besides Miss Bergman, who is heroic in her part, Warner Baxter is perfectly cast as a stuffy businessman, and Fay Wray is a pleasant surprise as his wife; she should get a lot more work than she's been getting, too. Susan Hayward doesn't quite manage the tough role she was assigned to. In support roles, Johnny Downs, Helen Westley and June Lockhart are best. Directed by Gregory Ratoff.—Columbia.

★★★ Andy Hardy's Private Secretary

Well, Andy's grown up. It had to happen, of course—and thank goodness it happened entertainingly. This newest of the Hardy series is, in some ways, the best of the lot. It hasn't the simple charm and youthful abandon of some of the earlier pictures, also it's about ten minutes too long—but it is still solid entertainment and good fun. Added to which is the fact that this particular picture introduces two new actors you may expect to hear a good deal about—Todd Karns and pretty little Kathryn Grayson.

Young Karns is Roscoe's boy and an actor of real merit; there should be a lot of work for him. He has personality and individuality. The Grayson lass has a voice and looks; she reminds one a bit of Deanna Durbin in her formative years. With proper handling she can develop into important player status.

Mickey Rooney finds himself with an overdose of his usual muddles in this picture, as he is about to graduate from high school. The business of graduating is a big job and he hires a private secretary to help him. Now he has something else to worry about. He begins trying to straighten out her life, to say nothing of her brother's and father's. He flunks his English exam. Things look blackest, of course, just before he manages to graduate and all is well.

Mickey is his usual boisterous self and the rest of the regular Hardy family cast are swell. Ian Hunter, too, is excellent in a support role. Directed by George B. Seitz.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

★★½ The Hard Boiled Canary

Susannah Foster is a pretty young girl with a lovely voice, and if she were put into pleasant little pictures and told to sing pleasant little songs you'd think she was very good. But, no. She has to keep trying to reach high C and the audience isn't impressed—it's bored.

That is a pretty harsh way to open a review of this movie, because the picture has a good deal of merit—but it really seems necessary to make the point. The career and life of Susannah and other little girls like her, with talent, ability and possibilities, are at stake. They're good, Mr. Producer; give them a chance to be themselves. But don't ask them to be junior Mme. Melbas.

(Continued on page 63)

It's a three-cornered love affair for Tony Martin, Hedy Lamarr and Philip Dorn in M-G-M's dazzling "Ziegfeld Girl"—but this one has a happy ending!

LORETTA YOUNG

Universal's exciting costume film, "The Lady from Cheyenne," is her first Western

RAY JONES

RONALD REAGAN

His next is a romantic comedy, Warner's "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America"

JUDY GARLAND

She's adorable as the dancer who becomes a star in M-G-M's "Ziegfeld Girl"

IDA LUPINO Warner's psychological drama, "The Sea Wolf," involves Ida in a sea-going romance

LAUGHING, FIGHTING, LOVING their way into your heart!
William A. Wellman, Producer of "Beau Geste," brings you three modern musketeers in a rousing, rollicking romance that hits straight at the heart with a wallop!
Paramount Presents
JOEL McCREA
ELLEN DREW
"REACHING FOR THE SUN"
with
Eddie Bracken • Albert Dekker • Billy Gilbert
Produced and Directed by WILLIAM A. WELLMAN • Screen Play by W. L. River

MY dates WITH MICKEY

THE NATION'S MOST LOVABLE ADOLESCENT THROUGH THE EYES OF HIS BEST GIRL!

Mickey and Linda on a rare "big night." He asked for this date in advance—but usually doesn't. Loves Linda in feminine clothes and very little make-up. Sits out all dances but fox trots.

Mickey (with ex-crush Judy Garland) is mad about music. He's written a symphony and lots of what he calls "jive junk."

The versatile Mick beats a Krupa-ish drum, plays "pro" tennis and shoots just under par golf. Calls himself "The Muscle Man."

Every kid in Hollywood's a Rooney fan. He's wonderful to them—signs autographs galore and does impromptu imitations.

BY LINDA DARNELL as told to Gladys Hall

I didn't want to have a date with Mickey.

This is how it happened: We are both with the William Morris agency in Hollywood. One day Mr. Freeman of that agency invited me to go to the Follies with himself and his wife. Then he added:

"By the way, Mickey Rooney is dying to meet you. I thought we might ask him to join us tonight. How about it?"

I thought of all the things I'd heard about him . . . fresh, conceited, smug. "Well," I said, "if you say it's all right, I know it will be."

After that first date with Mickey, I decided that either everyone else was wrong or he was putting on an act!

But now we have been going together for five months, and I know he can't be putting on an act. He never does except for business. Even if he wanted to he couldn't because, believe it or not, he's too shy!

But that first night it was arranged that Mickey should pick me up at my house and drive me to Mr. and Mrs. Freeman's. From there, we'd go on to the Follies.

I thought, I suppose he'll be late. No doubt that's his idea of being important.

Mick was twenty minutes early. He came driving up in that specially built Zephyr of his, with a squeak of brakes against the curb. Mickey as a curb-squeaker has no equal!

That was my first experience with Mickey's punctuality. He is never late for a date; on the contrary, he is apt to be fifteen to thirty minutes early! At first I explained this by the fact that Mickey was a vaudevillian, trained to be quick on his cues and entrances. Now I know it's just that Mick would never keep a lady waiting.

People don't understand him, they really don't. They don't know the serious side of him. You'd be surprised at the thinking that boy does. You'd be surprised how sensitive he is, how easily he can be hurt.

Well, the night of our first date, we had just moved into our new house on Sunset Boulevard. It was a mess. Chairs were standing on tables, rugs were all rolled up, and my pets were wandering about the place as if it were a barnyard. I wasn't dressed when he arrived, so Mother greeted him and was terribly embarrassed. Mick said, "Look, I've moved, too, you know." Then nothing would do but he must see the rest of the house. He was interested in every detail. Mother fell head over heels in love with him.

When Mick and I shook hands after I came down, he said, "Gee, you look awful pretty!" I was wearing my beige suit with black accessories.

That's another surprising thing about Mick. He's kind of old-fashioned. I mean, you'd expect him to say, "Hmm, snappy little dish!" or something like that. Not, "Gee, you look awful pretty," and he was kind of bashful, too, when he said it. He is really very shy. At least, he is with me. He blushes like a sunset, too. Why, he is (Continued on page 76)

. . . A SMATTERING OF

Back in N. Y. after making "Kiss The Boys Goodbye," Oscar's about to kiss the girls hello. They're wife June Gale and daughter Marcia.

Says he's just "a musical Dead End Kid" though he's composed a Nocturne and a magnificent Dirge in memory of George Gershwin.

BY IRVING WALLACE

LEVANT

His best friends and amateur publicists are Harpo Marx and Mary Martin. Adores Mary. Can't bring himself to insult her—even slightly.

At 15, he played the piano for girls' ballet classes at $1 an hour. Now earns about three hundred times that, but is always broke.

A FEW NEW NOTES—NOT STRICTLY MUSICAL—ON OSCAR, THE ECCENTRIC GENIUS!

In Hollywood, a land dedicated, during the last three or four years, to the antics of a juvenile with curls named Shirley, to an animated mouse named Mickey and to a crooning cowboy named Gene—it's not at all startling to find a guy named Oscar, the season's current dramatic sensation!

Oscar Levant is a very strange character, indeed.

Ask him who he thinks is the cleverest person in the world. He answers, "Oscar Levant, and to hell with the rest of them!" Ask him how he broke into Movieland. He replies, "I told them I couldn't act. But I guess my modesty beguiled them!" Ask him if he thinks he'll be back. He sighs, "Unfortunately, yes." Ask him to describe himself. He pinches his face and cracks, "My face? An epic in bloat!"

This is the same fellow who, with only three minor appearances on the cinema screen, has made himself as much a household favorite as termites.

He made his movie début 12 years ago. He had been enacting the piano player in "Burlesque," which ran two years on Broadway. It came to Hollywood, lock, stock and Levant. Hollywood, having paid Havelock Ellis $10,000 for the title of his philosophic essays, now renamed the play, "The Dance of Life," put Barbara Stanwyck and Nancy Carroll in it, and introduced Levant to the masses in the role of an inanimate but musical prop.

Last year he played in his second picture, "Rhythm on the River," which also included someone named Bing Crosby. Levant didn't want to be over-publicized, afraid that the critics would then jump on his neck. As a consequence, he refused to see interviewers and the press—and was called a snob by Hollywood. Actually, he was just plain scared stiff.

Today, Pittsburgh-born, Times Square-bred Oscar Levant, who will be 35 years old two days after next Christmas, is participating in his third flicker. He is playing a press agent in Clare Booth's "Kiss The Boys Goodbye."

The minute he arrived from Manhattan for this picture, Oscar Levant, wearing the same sloppy coat he once borrowed from the fabulous gambler, Nick the Greek, and never gave back, hurried to the Paramount set. He didn't (Continued on page 84)

OBJECT—Gayety?

Cary and Roz night-spotted often in the pre-Barbara Hutton era, and Mr. G's responsible for the Russell-Brisson twosome. They met at his party last summer.

WHO IS THIS FELLOW THAT'S MONOPOLIZING

They met at a party about a year ago—Freddie and Roz—and they've dated steadily, but not exclusively, since. Roz goes out with Barton Lee and with John McClain, the writer, but not as often as with Brisson. He dates other girls, but he dates Roz more. They dance at Ciro's, they dine at Chasen's, their favorite night spot of the moment is the Mocambo—probably because it's the newest.

He spends with generosity but not with folly, tips liberally and finds life brimming with zest. So does she. They both have wit and sparkle. It was these qualities which drew them together, say their friends. They stimulate each other. Phone conversations between them feature a succession of roars from Brisson and answering shrieks of delight from Roz. They also share quieter interests. Ardent lovers of music, they attend concerts and the ballet together. They're both sophisticates. She was

They dance till dawn, as neither requires more than five hours' sleep. Wind up their evenings at a hamburger stand where vegetarian Roz watches Fred stow 'em away.

John McClain, the writer, is Roz's second best beau. He takes her to Santa Anita, reads all the stuff she writes and likes it, and doesn't mind if she breaks dates.

He calls her Roz, she calls him Freddie. Both loathe terms of endearment. He likes tailored clothes—preferably black or white. Hates women who don't wear hats.

OUR ROZ, AND JUST WHAT ARE HIS INTENTIONS?

brought up in New England, he in Europe, but they have in common a background of breeding which gives them the kind of assurance that requires no pose.

Roz says they don't contemplate matrimony. They go together because they have fun together. Either out of conviction or loyalty, their friends say the same.

Fred is the son of Carl Brisson, Danish actor and singer, who had a short-lived Hollywood career some five years ago. It's about eighteen months since the younger Brisson came over from England. A talent agent in London, he joined the Frank Vincent agency here, one of the top outfits in the entertainment industry.

He handles both radio and movie players—among the latter, Nigel Bruce, James Stephenson, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Lloyd Nolan. It was his acumen and persistence that uncovered Stephenson's (Continued on page 71)

Roz and Freddie often double-date with his young and attractive parents, Cleo and Carl, who're back in Hollywood after a narrow escape in a London air raid!

BY IDA ZEITLIN

It's a bull's-eye if she's aiming for fun!

MADE FOR EACH OTHER...

You've heard of "casting to type." A producer picks up a script, sees a gangster character on page nine, and dictates a memo reading "Get Humphrey Bogart." If there's a luscious-looking Lorelei in the story, he'll look up Rita Hayworth's agent. And if he needs a typically American girl and boy of teen age, he'll do his darndest to get Bonita Granville and Jackie Cooper. Because not only do "Bunny" and Jack look the part—they are the part.

The Cooper-Granville steady friendship is a beautiful balance of common sense, fun and mutual interests. Both kids are sportsminded. They swim, bowl and ice-skate—often in that order and on the same day. They spend hours dancing at the Palladium when their favorite orchestra, Tommy Dorsey's, is there. And they like long afternoon drives with the car-top down and the wind whizzing in their ears. He calls her "Bun." She calls him "Jackie" except when she's mad. Then she sternly switches to "Jack." If he's unavoidably late to dinner at her house (he makes a point of always being prompt), he brings her a "forgive me" present. Last time it was a Schiaparelli perfume merry-go-round with a music box concealed in its innards.

Jackie loves to ride horseback, so Bonita resolutely learned to canter and trot. For a less strenuous pastime, they have dinner at the Hillcrest Country Club with a bunch of pals, usually the Forrest Tuckers, Ann Rutherford, Rand Brooks, Helen Parrish and Charles Lang. Then they play gin rummy, with the boys at one table, the girls at another. "Coop" also loves to organize jam sessions in his unsoundproof playroom. However, he's been too busy working lately to get the gang together. The neighbors are complaining about the silence!

Mister Cooper likes to take Bonita to Ciro's and the Cocoanut Grove at least once a week, if possible. That runs into big money, so he has to do a lot of maneuvering to make his $25-a-week allowance stretch over the dress-up dates as well as car expense, presents and "the necessaries." For example, Bonita's birthday caught Jackie financially embarrassed. By snappy salesmanship via his bedside phone (which he had installed after years of pleading) he managed to sell two bicycles he'd received as presents. He only got half as much as they were worth, but he did make enough on the deal to get his girl a bracelet to match the pin, clip and earrings he'd given her for Christmas.

The two eighteen-year-olds love to eat, and every date is climaxed with a stop at a drive-in for steak sandwiches—plus one order of fried onions for two. Jackie's mother once said, "If the girl Jackie marries will feed him well, she won't have a thing to worry about." Bonita doesn't know how to cook . . . yet.

Bonita and Chi Chi listen to Franck's Symphonic Variations—part of "Bun's" huge collection. They also love swing.

She knitted those angora sleeves herself! Received the cedar chest as a gift after posing with it for an ad.

Adores tailored clothes, crazy hats and odd jewelry. Her lovers' knot ring, bracelet and earrings are from Jackie.

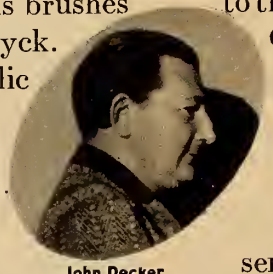
Jackie has thirty pairs of shoes and hundreds of ties. He collects loud sports jackets and pays $40 for each.

The rifle's a gift from uncle Norman Taurog. Picture of Bonita's inscribed: "Jackie, it has been wonderful. My love."

He usually smokes one of his 25 pipes while reading. Loves history and Will James' stories. Reads book-of-the-month.

A CLOSE-UP OF THE CUTEST ROMANCE IN TOWN!

Jackie and Bonita date each other exclusively. They hate people who call their 17-month-old romance "puppy love."



She collects pertume. "Sleeping" (a gift from Jackie's mom) and "Shocking" are her favorites.

Comedy on Canvas . . .

BY SYLVIA KAHN

Shoving art down the throats of Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen is no cinch job. To the citizens, whether they live in Waukegan, Podunk, or even Hollywood, paintings have always been something remote and unattainable—something they might "look at but not touch." And most of the time, they've chosen not even to look. • John Decker is changing all that, for he's learned the secret of making great art palatable. He knows that ordinary folk enjoy anything that gives them a belly laugh, so he offers them comedy on canvas! • A generation ago, Decker was typical of the painters of the time. He worked hard, he prayed hard—and he didn't make any money. Then he turned to caricaturing. For a newspaperman's microscopic salary, he poked pen-and-ink fun at the famous names of the screen and theatre. Slowly his reputation grew. But not his income. Decker came to Hollywood. • Today, in a beautiful Beverly Hills home, he practices his profession by painting Hollywood stars as the old masters might have painted them. He touches his brushes to the canvas and Mickey Rooney emerges in the style of Van Dyck. Clark Gable's he-man face becomes Gainsborough's angelic "Blue Boy." Carole Lombard is a masterpiece by Holbein, and so on. Hollywood roars—but Hollywood pays. • Since introducing his technique by painting Ben Turpin in 1919, Decker has whipped out several hundred of these take-offs. Generally, people recognize that it's all a tongue - in - the - cheek idea, but sometimes, subjects take the paintings seriously. There was the prominent young producer, for example, who on hearing Rembrandt was really dead, murmured: "Too bad, too bad." Then, more cheerfully: "Well, let's get Decker. He's just as good!" It was this same young producer, by the way, who when his portrait was completed (Decker did him as Henry VIII), called Decker so many times to find out "who you did me like," that Decker finally had to have his phone number changed! • Decker also likes to tell about the time he painted Charlie McCarthy as Franz Hals' "Laughing Cavalier." He carried the finished product up to Edgar Bergen's office and showed it to Bergen's secretary. "What do you think of it?" he wanted to know. "It's nice, I guess," came the reply, "But you know—Charlie never wears that kind of costume!" Then there was the no-longer-young wife of a well-known movie star. Unfortunately, Decker painted her as he saw her, and not as she saw herself. The woman was furious. When her cook inadvertently raved about the likeness, she was fired on the spot. When a director friend of the star called it a great work of art, he was turned out of the house. And when the star agreed with the director, his wife almost left him. At last, in desperation,

John Decker

(Continued on page 69)

Decker, who has been painting since he was 12, did Gable as Gainsborough's "Blue Boy." Ty Power owns it.

A liquor manufacturer wants this one of Fields. Would use it on his labels — sloganned "Fit For a Queen."

Decker painted Charlie McCarthy (as Hals' "The Laughing Cavalier") for fun, but works mostly on assignment.

HOLLYWOOD'S IRREPRESSIBLE JOHN DECKER ADDS A MODERN TOUCH TO THE OLD MASTERS' TECHNIQUE AND—BOY—DOES HE MAKE IT PAY!

He rarely does movie kids, for they never come out as their mothers want them to. Mickey's mom loved this.

Garbo done in the Raphael manner. Her classic features made it easy to get the flavor of the old masters.

Most stars like to be flattered, but not Fannie Brice! She paid $1,000 for this take-off on Lawrence's "Pinky."

ALL-AMERICAN HEART

MEMOIRS OF A SUPERMAN—EXPLAINING WHY

BY JOHN FRANCHEY

And now it's Tony Martin who is stepping up the national feminine pulse, kindling the eye and firing the imagination (also feminine). On the air the Martin manner has always been contagious. On the screen there is every indication that it will be fairly fatal, bolstered by the Martin good looks and personal graces.

You would suppose that a gentleman like this would be bogged down in love seven Fridays a week, as the Russians say. But—

"I've got no time for romance," is what Mr. Martin told us when we saw him on the set of "Ziegfeld Girl," not so long ago. "I don't want to seem ungallant—or ungrateful—but right now my problem is how to get by on twenty-four hours a day."

We blinked.

"Romance is a luxury that I can't afford for a while," he went on. "True romance is a full-time job. Not bad employment at that, I used to think. But that was before Martin the gadabout became Martin the greyhound."

He paused to light a cigarette.

"Please don't get me wrong. I get my quota of fun. I'm not exactly a stranger to the local hot spots—and I don't stag it either. But I do my romping as a sideline. And strictly for laughs—not love."

Mr. Martin, we discovered by diligent probing, has something of a case. For the benefit of those unhappy Hollywood ladies whom he never gets around to calling up for a date, we will try to present a brief for the defense.

To begin with, Tony Martin right this minute is astride a comet en route for the Milky Way. This year he ought to pick up something like $200,000, if not more. The Decca record people will probably forward $25,000 and their love. His Tony was born on Christmas day 26 years ago. Always demands both birthday and Christmas presents!

THROB ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

EVERY GAL'S A WOULD-BE MRS. TONY MARTIN!

Ironic that Tony and Lana Turner—who've had stars in their eyes for more than six months now—play no love scenes together in M-G-M's "Ziegfeld Girl."

sponsors on the air are good for $75,000. Metro, always a soft touch, will hand over $100,000. We will not pause to speculate on how much money he may snag from his short story writing, a career always just on the brink of being born but, at this writing, still non-existent.

These chores take time (even if you are a greyhound) especially if you're as hepped up about "keeping in shape" as is Tony Martin. Between his art and his athletics, the man does well to find time to sit down with his business manager to discuss his bank balance or to inquire about his mercury mine in Central America.

You don't have debbies (or dowagers for that matter) making a fuss over your "marvelous voice" merely because you happen to be able to coax pleasant sounds from your vocal chords. For some strange reason, music appreciation is always getting entangled with wavy hair, flashing teeth, a classic profile, eloquent eyes and, above all, a good physique. Of this coincidence Tony Martin is very much aware.

Six feet tall, broad-shouldered, vital as a wild stallion and exuding what the ladies call personality, he weighs exactly 175 pounds, is as hard as nails and means to stay that way at all costs.

Up early, all except Sunday, he goes through a vigorous half-hour workout followed, of course, by a shower. There is a very light breakfast, after which Tony is apt to come out on the lawn and swing at fifty imaginary golf balls. Or do some impromptu leaping over chairs, love seats and hedges, until he's had enough.

A gentleman of tremendous nervous energy, he does a lot of scampering around the Metro lot between shots. A Metro publicist once computed that Tony knocks off approximately six miles every day just churning around the spacious Metro acres!

On free afternoons he heads for the golf course. He does 36 holes and thinks nothing of it, although 18 is more his speed. Those extra 18 get him to fretting; he wonders if he isn't squandering precious time.

Back home in the evening, he spends twenty minutes weight-lifting. No cream puff, his specialty is the one-hand over head lift.

If dinner isn't ready, he's apt to jog around the house a dozen times.

This is Martin the athlete.

Martin the artist is even more occupied.

Mornings, just before he takes off for the studio, he puts in a spell at the pianoforte. He plays very well. And for his enjoyment.

Then off to work—which involves singing with Judy Garland and making love to Hedy Lamarr. Not very grueling, but it does take time. In the evening after dinner, he goes over the songs he plans to do for his next radio show. He gets them down cold, even to that last sighing note that slays the ladies. If there's any time left, he goes over new arrangements, examines songs to see if they look like numbers he ought to be introducing.

Then there are rehearsals at the CBS studios. Between these and the actual show, a good part of three evenings is lost. Admitting to nervousness just before the show goes on, he is glad when it's all over, swoops down on the oases to let up.

Whether he is out "just for laughs" or no, he has an attraction for women that is as terrific as his Crosley index. For a while now, he and Lana Turner have been on the merry-go-round, but when she isn't available, he manages to show up at Ciro's and elsewhere with the most exciting entries in Hollywood. Impersonal as a supreme court justice, he likes blondes, brunettes and redheads—just for laughs, that is. (Cont'd on page 83)

It all started with a mutual love far papcarn, and an Valentine's Day Daug Dawsan and Jean Parker decided that was graunds far a wedding!

Linda Hayes, wha used to be Rachell Germana, a San Francisca hatcheck girl, changed her name again the other day when she became the bride af Lau Crasby, NBC's spartscaster.

Annie Sheridan and Geargе Brent are telling peaple it'll be July in Honalulu—but we caught her twa-timing with attarney Barney Brennan.

CANDIDLY YOURS...

Hank Fonda, who's recavering from an eye aperatian, pampers wife Frances with an expensive evening at the Macamba, before leaving her far a week or twa. He and crany Johnny Payne are off an a Mexican fishing trip.

Cedric Gibbans, whase divorce fram the Welles-wacky Del Ria is pending, is pacing Gene Markey far first place in Carale Landis' date-baak.

Liz Whitney, famaus lacally for wearing tans af jewelry, but almost na make-up, celebrates her brand new movie cantract at the Macamba with champagne cacktails and Bruce Cabat.

Miriam Hapkins, wha calls herself the paar man's Peggy Hapkins Joyce (she's been thrice married) dines with playwright Edwin Justus Mayer.

Temporary blonde, Eleanor Powell, and M-G-M's very handsome art and music director, Merrill Pye, who altered their wedding plans last year, are rumored to be on the verge of altar-ing them—but any minute!

Here's two thirds of Hollywood's intriguing new trio—Ginny Field (who lost thirty pounds in three months) and Alf Vanderbilt. Oscar Levant, the missing third, was on a flying visit to wife and baby in New York.

Remember Claire Windsor? She retired from the movies on account of ill health, but she's all well again and being dined, wined and orchid-ed (these are green ones costing $5 apiece) by man-about-town Frank Kennedy.

Since Gail Patrick divorced her one-in-a-million meal ticket, restaurateur Bob Cobb, Lieutenant "Ace" Hasting of the United States Air Corps has been keeping her in filet mignon. He's smitten!

It's a tenth anniversary for the blissful Mel Douglases. Know how Helen keeps Mr. D. enslaved? She flatters him scandalously, and feeds him Southern-fried chicken (he comes from Georgia) every other night.

IS SHE ANOTHER BLONDE

Veronica, who's starring in "I Wanted Wings," eats two hot fudge sundaes a day, but never weighs more than 98 pounds, and her 21½-inch waist is Hollywood's tiniest. Says that when she retires she'll do nothing but swim (she's a regular Weissmuller, by the way) and bake chocolate cakes all day long.

Bombshell?

BY JAMES REID

SHE DRESSES LIKE AN INGÉNUE, IS MORE DOMESTIC THAN MA HARDY——BUT WITH IT ALL, VERONICA LAKE IS STRICTLY TNT!

For a girl who was supposed to be The Sexiest Find in Years, Veronica Lake was certainly completely out of character.

Waiting to go to lunch, she was sitting in a big armchair in a Paramount office—working on a "shaggy" rug.

"Just being a typical young bride," she said—which was no kind of dialogue for a Blonde Bombshell.

She stuffed her handiwork into a huge knitting bag at her feet, moved the bag to one side and stood up. When she stood up, she didn't look much more than five feet tall. She didn't look as if she weighed a hundred pounds. That was surprising. But, more surprising, the dress that she brushed fuzz from wasn't designed to persuade anybody that a little girl could be a big sensation.

It didn't cling to every curve, and it wasn't a passionate red. It was a simple sports dress—something a trim, young college girl might wear. It was dusty pink, trimmed with powder blue (approximately the color of her eyes). It had long sleeves, it buttoned all the way up to her neck, and it had a hood, lined with powder blue, that almost entirely hid her hair.

There wasn't anything about her that suggested that she was The Dangerous Type. Except that she had a pert, challenging face.

Then, in the commissary, she pushed off her hood.

Instantly, she became a magnet for all the eyes in the place, both male and female. Her hair did it. One look at it, and people were bewitched—the way seamen, in the old legends, were bewitched after one look at the flowing golden hair of a sea-siren.

It was perfectly natural blonde hair. But what made it fascinating was the way she wore it. In a long, unfettered bob that clung close to her head, flowed down past her shoulders, and was unwaved, except on the ends, and then only slightly. It was parted on the left side, and with nothing holding it back on the right side, it had a mischievous tendency to half-hide her right eye and make her look enigmatic, exotic.

Jean Harlow had hair that had the same electric effect on all beholders. And, by a strange coincidence, Jean's first big picture was also an aviation picture ("Hell's Angels"), and she played the same kind of role that Veronica plays in "I Wanted Wings"—a sultry eyeful who demolished men's will power.

But did the sex appeal of her hair, and the emotional havoc that she wrought in her first big screen role, justify the rumors that Veronica Lake was "a second Jean Harlow?" Were there any other grounds for comparison?

She smiled wryly at the question. "There's one," she said feelingly. "People seem determined to believe that I'm like the girl I portray in 'I Wanted Wings'—just as they were determined, at first, to believe that Jean Harlow was like the girl she portrayed in 'Hell's Angels.'"

"I'm learning, too," she continued, "that if the long arm of coincidence reaches out and gives you the same kind of break another girl once had, they immediately say you're trying to be like that girl—even though you don't even remotely resemble her.

"I wish I knew of a way to stop all this 'second Harlow' talk. I happen to know how millions of people feel about Jean Harlow. She was one of my favorites, too. I even had the good luck to meet her once, in New York. I thought then that there could never be anyone else like her, and I haven't changed my mind.

"That's what makes these comparisons so ironic. No one realizes more than I do that no one can ever be 'a second Jean Harlow.'"

She sounded as if she had developed a strong sense of irony—something unexpected in a newcomer hailed as a sensation.

"Oh, I have," she said, with a quick smile. "Another thing I keep thinking about is the irony of my coming to Hollywood, still wet behind the ears, and getting a break like this—when there are so many girls out here with talent and beauty to spare, who can't even get extra work.

"I know there has been gossip about how I got such a break." The girl wasn't afraid to bring that out in the open. "And that gossip hasn't made life any easier. . . . I suppose people can't help being suspicious. How could any unknown become 'famous' overnight just by luck?

"It's incredible to me, too, that anyone could be so lucky. But I've been (Continued on page 90)

ON THE SET WITH

"One Night in Lisbon"

WARTIME IS LOVETIME AND LAUGHTIME, AT LEAST ON PARAMOUNT'S BATTLEFIELD!

"War," said General William Tecumseh Sherman, "is hell." And producers all over Hollywood agree with him. Ever since the outbreak of the European conflagration, the town has ground out so many war films it's beginning to look like a combination of Dunkirk, Coventry and Bardia. Unhappily most of these efforts have gotten a box-office brush-off from moviegoers.

"One Night in Lisbon" doesn't declare any Armistice. But with the aid of blondly beautiful Madeleine Carroll and tall, terrific Fred MacMurray, it does prove that General Sherman was not 100% correct.

"Lisbon," the fourth co-starrer for Madeleine and Fred, is the gay little tale of an American flyer who ferries bombers to Britain and falls in love with an English girl serving as volunteer chauffeur to a British Foreign Office official. The flyer follows the girl to Lisbon where, after a mad week-end interrupted by the arrival of her fiancé (John Loder) and his ex-wife (Patricia Morison), they are convinced that a new Anglo-American alliance is in order.

The plot is as simple as all that—but not the problem of producing the picture. In order to make their English sets look and sound authentic, Paramount carefully erected about $10,000 worth of typical English buildings and then blew them up so they'd look properly bombed. They fabricated a long, tubular air raid shelter of wood and papier-mâché, made it look like steel and concrete and then almost wept when MacMurray, strolling along, poked an elbow through the "bombproof" wall. They sent a newsreel crew all the way to London just to make a sound track during an air raid. The track will be dubbed into the film

Pat Morison, who broke in a new pair of shoes one day, has some sizzling lines that'll probably be cut.

John Loder is a navy man in this film but was in the army in the last war. (Was the youngest commissioned British officer.)

Fred and Madeleine confine their screen dancing to fox trots, but between takes she practices congas with dance director LeRoy Prinz.

and paying customers will hear the actual wail of the air raid alarm, the shriek of falling bombs, the cough of anti-aircraft and finally the "all-clear" call.

Having set its stages, Paramount rolled up its sleeves and went to work on its stars. They taught Madeleine and Fred how to stand on tiptoe and talk with a cork clenched between their teeth—a little trick the English practice to keep their eardrums from breaking during bombings. They had Madeleine, who had never before driven an automobile, learn to handle an English style car. Since English cars are driven on the left-hand side of the street, studio employees, driving their own flivvers around the lot, nearly jumped out of their skins when they encountered Madeleine out for a noon-hour spin. And they also insisted that poor Fred learn to make duck calls!

As we go to press, Paramount's greatest worry (to say nothing of the Portuguese's) is that Portugal will enter the war before they complete their picture. If this occurs, the locale of "One Night in Lisbon," which has already been shifted from Paris and Switzerland, will have to be shifted again. Because it's almost impossible to keep abreast of world events, Paramount even cut from their film a scoop shot of Winston Churchill leaving the famous No. 10 Downing Street. They were afraid that by the time "Lisbon" was released, there would be no No. 10 Downing Street!

Despite the grimness of its behind-the-scenes problems, "Lisbon" is rolling merrily on. Its production gears are greased with a $750,000 budget and, in case you're interested, that's exactly $39,250,000 less than it is costing England to run its war every single day.

Made everyone put on blinders when she did this scene! Ruined a dozen takes with her blushes—which photograph black.

Lisbon" is adapted from the Broadway hit, "There's Always Juliet," and Fred and Madeleine have the original Bart Marshall and Edna Best roles.

Madeleine studied to lose her accent for her American girl portrayals and had to be tutored back to her broad A's for this British part.

"WHO? . .

BY KATHARINE ROBERTS

"Miss Virginia Bruce, please."

"Twenty-third floor," said the clerk in one of New York's swankier hostelries.

"What apartment number?"

"None," said the clerk with a firm look, "just twenty-third floor."

So we went up there, and, as we emerged from the elevator, there was Virginia Bruce and likewise the twenty-third floor—all of it. It was a relief to see that she was all there, too, because we had lately seen a wacky little cream puff of a picture called "The Invisible Woman" in which she was currently appearing—or rather disappearing—both in toto and in sections, and there was a feeling that she might have carried the habit of atomic dissociation into private life.

Mr. J. Walter Ruben, hereinafter known as Jack, was also on the twenty-third floor, and he seemed to have felt very much like ourselves about her because, until 1937, he had known her for nine years, and every time he tried to talk to her she had vanished. His first memory of this early touch-and-go acquaintance goes back to the time when she was a breathless, colt-like young thing in her teens, known as a stock player on the same lot where he was sometimes a writer and sometimes merely one waiting to write. He reports that whenever he approached her, she giggled and ran away. Sometimes when he called to her she stopped just long enough to say, "Who?—Me?" before she dashed.

This "Who?—Me?" seems to have been the theme of Miss Virginia Bruce's song from the beginning right up to now.

Mr. Ruben had advanced through the hectic nine years from writer to director before he was able to get the Bruce eyeful to stay in one spot long enough for a proposal of marriage. When a picture pretty marries a director on the same lot, it is often with the idea of combining business and pleasure. Not so the Bruce. She had no more than said, "I do," when she asked to be released from her contract with the studio and, as a free-lance, immediately

Director Ruben majored in psychology at Columbia University but after graduation got interested in the theatre. Has dabbled in acting and script writing.

GINNY BRUCE IS IN A PERPETUAL STATE

. . . ME?"

started off in all directions. Meanwhile her husband remained where he was and moved on to the job of producer.

Her sudden burst to freedom can scarcely be called a rebellion. There were no battles, not even a measly little argument. It seems the studio had given her a number of sappy parts in succession, and she had protested in a mild way. But as a protester, she makes a butterfly look like a Stuka dive-bomber. They just laughed at her, nicknamed her "Squawkie" and went on with the job in hand. She laughed back politely for a while, because as she says, "They had a lot of important stars they had to take care of."

"So," explains her husband, "she asked for the release and decided to free-lance."

Well, she made six pictures in little more than a year, and she's booked for several more, so free-lancing isn't so bad. "The trouble with me," she confides earnestly, "is that I've always lacked ambition. Besides, I've learned it's better to just let things happen to me instead of trying to make them happen myself."

Some time before things started happening to her in Hollywood, she happened to Fargo, North Dakota. At least, that was the impression of the teaching staff in the Fargo schools. To be sure, she had come there quietly enough at the age of one from Minneapolis where she'd been born, and her kindergarten period was comparatively uneventful. During this time her father, Mr. Earl Briggs, established himself in the insurance business. But by the time little Ginny Briggs got into high school, the brisk prairie air had filled her with a captious energy which she expended upon practically everything but study. It is true that when she played accompaniments for the school's singing programs, she looked almost angelic in her pale, still slightly unhatched beauty. It is also true that her devotion to the football team was balanced only by the devotion of the entire football team to her. She was the only kid in school with a car and she took the lot of them to and from (Continued on page 74)

Ginny and Jack were married in 1937, having known each other 9 years. It was a second marriage for both.

Virginia's daughter, Susan Ann Gilbert, is 7 and unspoiled in spite of ponies, bikes and closets full of dresses. Has brown hair and grey eyes like her mom.

Virginia, who stole the name Bruce at random from the phone book, giggles with Dottie Lamour before a broadcast. Never gets a trace of stage or mike fright.

OF SURPRISE—AND NO WONDER!

1938—Earning $1,500 weekly, but still struggling at studio school 3 hours daily. Loathed algebra, adored languages. Could sing in French and German.

1939—Became the world's only girl boy scout; had stage and operatic ambitions and had amassed her first million.

memo to VAUGHN PAUL

1937—A $300-a-week movie contract and much fan mail. Her hobby at this point was collecting fuzzy toy animals.

1936—Eddie Cantor heard 14-year-old Deanna at a film audition, hired her as a foil for Bobby Breen on his Sunday radio hour—at $50 a week!

1940—Turned into a raving beauty; made her eighth smash hit; averaged 9,000 fan letters a week and got herself engaged to Vaughn Paul.

1941—Mature and lovely, she's planning a future built around associate producer Paul. His mother and dad (left) approve of the match, as do hers.

A PREVIEW OF THE PRACTICALLY PERFECT WIFE—DEANNA DURBIN!

On the historic day of July 7th, you, Vaughn Paul, will take unto yourself a wife named Deanna Durbin, her two-dollar pet mongrel dog named Tippy, her three midget turtles named Penny, Joan and Kay, her boundless personal love and the unconcealed envy of at least ten million eligible American, Japanese, English and Spanish young men.

Let it not be said, though, that you are unaware of your burdens. For, in becoming engaged to the universe's sweetheart, in marrying the girl whose fame and income dwarf your own, you realize you're taking the world on your shoulders. But we hear you're made of sturdy stuff—that you're not in the least worried. You have no reason to be. You realize that Deanna has her virtues and faults, her assets and shortcomings and, having observed the characteristics she has displayed day in and day out, good mood and bad, under happy conditions and under strain, you know you have nothing to fear.

You know, for instance, that she's sensitive. It almost hurts her physically to walk into a room and find it outlandishly decorated or bearing an atrocious design of wallpaper. Also, when someone says something a bit off color and in poor taste, she makes believe she hasn't heard—never objects or makes a scene, but just pretends she hasn't heard.

You've undoubtedly found out how marvelously straightforward she is. Never tells a lie. You'll always know where you stand with Deanna on important things. And, as you know, she's extremely intelligent. Henry Koster, who's directed five of her films, went so far as to call her the most intelligent young lady he'd ever met—professionally or otherwise.

Of course, you must have discovered that Deanna's very self-conscious. There are those around town who thoughtlessly claim that she is conceited and egotistical because she doesn't fall all over everyone she meets and wrap her arms around them. She's reserved, but she's the most unconceited girl in the world.

Not that she's utterly perfect, Vaughn. You wouldn't love her as much if she were. You realize that she's stubborn. For example, one day on the set Deanna was chewing gum. Koster shouted at her to get rid of it immediately. She blushed with embarrassment, but absolutely refused to budge. Activity was suspended until Koster apologized for scolding her publicly.

Incidentally, Vaughn, any apologizing that's done in your house will have to be done by you. Verbal apologies go against the grain with Deanna. She hates to humble herself that much. She'll apologize by her actions, though, and her forgiveness is enormous. She simply cannot bear a grudge.

Another word of warning! It takes her ages to get dressed. She could preen for hours if you'd let her. However, she's (Continued on page 61)

JIMMY'S BIRTHDAY SUIT

When they're going-on-ten, most suits have one foot in a second-hand shop—but not Jimmy's pride and joy!

George Raft may give away his suits the minute a button comes off—but Jimmy sews 'em back on instantly. Even does some light dry cleaning!

Brushes his suit like mad nightly—says it keeps it in candition! He's only had it repaired once, when the lining went completely on the rocks.

The other day Jimmy Stewart ambled down to the corner drugstore and tossed off a chocolate soda birthday toast to an old, old friend. As he puckered his lips about his straw, Jimmy closed his eyes and looked down through the years he and his friend had spent together. Jimmy sighed. He remembered how his friend had clung to him through fair weather and foul, how he had borne abuse without complaint, how he had never forsaken him for another, and how he had stood loyally by, waiting to be called on at all hours of the day and night.

Setting down his glass, Jimmy let his thoughts drift back to the occasion of their first meeting. It was in Princeton in 1932, the year of Jimmy's graduation from the great university. Jimmy had wandered into the campus tailor shop on that fateful day. He had glanced around, bored, disinterested, unimpressed. And then he had seen it. A brown, basket-weave suit, single-breasted, belted in the back, and sporting a huge yellow tag reading, "Price—$50." That was a lot of dough to Jimmy in those days. But he had felt an immediate kinship with the suit and he had bought it. He's grown fonder of it every hour since. The tired, old basket-weave has seen Jimmy through eight years in Hollywood. It has appeared in more than 20 Stewart pictures. Directors wail because it's outmoded, but Jimmy won't give it up. It keeps him comfortable—puts him at his ease when he's working—and he'll wear it till it falls to pieces. Not that that's ever likely to happen. Its heavy tweed is practically indestructible, and its lone pair of pants hasn't yet grown shiny.

Being the grandpappy of the Stewart wardrobe, the suit no longer goes along on Jimmy's social dates. When its day's labors are done, Jimmy hangs it on a hook and permits it to rest. On its ninth anniversary, Modern Screen gives it a fourteen-gun salute—and bows low to its owner, the only man who wasn't born in his birthday suit!

STYLE YOUR SMILE . . .

BY CAROL CARTER

The teeth behind Lynne Roberts' smile account for half its beauty.

HOLLYWOOD TELLS JUST WHAT IT TAKES TO WIN YOUR WAY WITH A SMILE!

Your lips may be lovely, your eyes may shine and, when your mouth is closed, your face may simply radiate personality—but what happens when you start bandying words about—or laugh at the boy friend's favorite jokes? What's behind that smile of yours? Thirty-two straight, white, healthy teeth in two pretty rows? Or do you exhibit an incomplete set of dingy, dull, discouraged cuspids, molars and incisors that look like they ought never to be exposed to the light of day, much less to the critical gaze of friends and family?

Girls bent on carving careers in Hollywood have often felt indignant at their studios' demands for teeth nothing short of perfection. But when the draft came along and exacted equally faultless ivories of all the boys who go to training camps and whose faces, goodness knows, have no connection whatever with glamour or the business of being photogenic—we all began to realize that good teeth are important for two very distinct reasons—appearance and health.

Teeth were well designed by nature to do the work cut out for them, that is, to chew the solid foods we eat. Each tooth consists of three sections: roots, which lie under the gum; crown, which lies outside the gum; and neck, where root and crown join. . . . . .

(Continued on page 49)

RECOGNIZE THE FLASHING SMILES? FROM LEFT TO RIGHT, THEY BELONG TO LANA TURNER, ROCHELLE HUDSON, JANE WYMAN AND PERT JUDY GARLAND

Here's the real reason everyone likes to tell jokes to Nan Grey who's in "Under Age."

The crown is covered by a hard enamel and the roots are covered with cementum, a sort of bone-like material. Inside of all this is the dentine, which is a softer, more vulnerable substance. And inside the dentine itself is a hollow space or pulp chamber where blood vessels and nerves hold forth in a soft, spongy substance.

A child's small jaw isn't big enough to hold a full set of adult-sized teeth, so resourceful old Mother Nature first gives us twenty baby teeth, which start putting in their appearance at the ripe young age of seven to nine months and depart again around the age of six to seven years.

By the time we've reached the so-called age of discretion (twenty-one to you), most of our thirty-two more or less permanent teeth have put in their important appearance. Third molars, or wisdom teeth, though, may hold out on you for several years longer, or even refuse to sprout at all. Then "impaction" exists. Impacted teeth may press on nerves or other nearby molars and have to be extracted, or they may never be heard from at all.

Your four front teeth, or incisors, were built to cut food. The cuspids, on either side of these, were made to tear and shred it. The bicuspids beyond are there to break and crush your viands, and molars are present to finish the job by grinding.

Now that we've settled all that, how shall we care for what we've got? Strong, healthy, beautiful, even teeth depend a great deal upon sound general health; a well-balanced diet, which both nourishes and exercises them; on thorough regular cleanliness and, last but not least, skillful dental care.

Foods rich in calcium, minerals and phosphorus are absolute "musts" for continued tooth health. And which are these, you want to know? Milk, eggs, cheese and butter; tomatoes, citrus fruits (lemons, oranges, grapefruit, limes); leafy vegetables, nuts and fish; meat, bread and cereals. And let us repeat—milk, in one form or another, should never be omitted from the daily diet of young or old, for it is one of the richest sources known for calcium, phosphorus, minerals and Vitamin A.

Dried peas and beans, cod and halibut liver oil preparations will also help to build sound teeth. So will irradiated milk or any products whose Vitamin D content has been increased. Some hard, coarse foods are absolutely essential to healthy teeth, because they exercise gums and jaws and the bony sockets that hold the teeth. Toast, crusts, ready-to-eat cereals, apples, celery and other raw vegetables, all are just what the doctor ordered. Sunshine is important, too, because it helps your body to produce its own Vitamin D, so essential to sound, beautiful teeth.

So much for general health and diet. Now for home care and cleanliness of teeth: A clean tooth is a healthy tooth and a healthy tooth seldom decays. Brushing your teeth has a very definite object. First, it removes bits of food caught between the teeth and which would ferment and decay if allowed to remain. Brushing also helps to break up gummy deposits, which escape ordinary rinsing. Another important function of your tooth brush is to exercise not only the teeth themselves, but also the gums. This strengthens and fortifies both against all the softening and deteriorating germs that constantly wait to attack and break down these regions.

Your tooth brush should be small to medium in size so that it will reach comfortably around all the curves and corners. The bristles should be medium stiff, strong and long enough to get at every crack and crevice, and the bristle groups are most effective when spaced far enough apart to allow for thorough cleansing of the brush. Your tooth brush should be dry and firm each time it's used. When possible, keep it in a clean, airy, preferably sunny corner, rather than in a dark, closed cupboard. Better still, why not have several tooth brushes and alternate them daily?

There are so many excellent dentifrices that the choice is largely one of personal taste. Some like paste, some powder, and others prefer the new liquid dentifrices. Whichever you choose, be sure it is one whose flavor, strength and consistency are pleasing to your taste, for brushing should be frequent and thorough, and fun—not a chore. Teeth should be brushed at least twice daily—when you get up in the morning, the last thing at night, and also after your noon meal, if possible.

When cleaning your teeth, slant the brush diagonally and use a rotary or circular motion—neither straight up and down nor entirely horizontal. Harsh, direct brushing sometimes causes actual injuries. Concentrate on two or three teeth at a time, brush that group thoroughly, then go on to the next.

Dental floss should be in every medicine chest. Used carefully each day, it will break up tartar deposits and reach important surfaces impossible to penetrate with a brush. Don't jerk or pull your floss, though. That might cut or injure sensitive gums. However, used with ordinary care, dental floss is a valuable aid to tooth health.

And don't forget your gums. They need regular massage, exercise and stimulation, if teeth are to stay healthy. Massage them gently with a brush, a special rubber gadget for the purpose or even with your finger wrapped in clean gauze.

If you smoke, drink or indulge in many rich foods, pay especial attention to thorough mouth cleanliness. Be wary, though, of dentifrices that contain very harsh abrasives. They may scratch away the enamel itself and leave teeth exposed to the attacks of all kinds of dangerous infections.

Decayed teeth, you know, are infected and often cause disturbances in entirely remote parts of your body. Anemia, neuritis, rheumatism and even heart and kidney conditions frequently result from toxins originating from such a condition. So, if you wake up some night with an aching cavity, do, for goodness sake, hie yourself the very next day to the nearest and best dentist you can find. And don't stop treatments until the last vestige of decay has been cleaned out and the tooth is sealed (Continued on page 69)

How to Lose Friends Ani

Sit too close and blow smoke in his eyes if he's a confirmed non-smoker.

Pick your teeth after every meal. It's so dainty, clean and feminine.

Forget all about mouth washes and give halitosis a chance. It shouts.

Get lipstick on your teeth and let it stay there, like a misplaced sunset.

Bite your dirty fingernails and chew your thumb. It looks so poised.

Mouth mannerisms are not only distressing and embarrassing to watch, they are extremely deglamorizing. They plunge a girl's popularity as low as a barometer just before a hurricane and the most insidious thing about them is that many otherwise charming girls practice one or several of these offensive little habits without even knowing it.

A famous psychiatrist once told us that people who indulge in them usually have some kind of an inferiority complex—a sense of shyness or inadequacy—unless, of course, such mannerisms originated from a consciousness of actual physical defects in that region, such as poor teeth, defective dentistry, offensive breath and the like.

Take conscientious stock of your mouth mannerisms and remedy the causes first. If your teeth are at fault, the suggestions for daily care in the preceding article may help solve your problem. If your lips don't measure up to your ideal standards, clever make-up will perform minor miracles to bolster up your self-confidence. If your breath is at all questionable, check over every possible cause for its impurity. There's no reason in the world why you can't change it to the breath of spring with just a little care and forethought.

Halitosis may be caused by either local or systemic malconditions. Spongy, infected, bleeding gums may cause it, or perhaps, you have some unsuspected tooth decay present. Possibly all your mouth needs is more thorough tooth brushing with a good mild dentifrice and more frequent rinsing with a good, clean-tasting antiseptic mouth wash. Rinsing with a mouth wash should follow every single brushing and go before every date or any contact with people, whether for business or social purposes. Swish your mouth wash around vigorously and hold it in your mouth for two or three minutes for really effective results.

Drink six to eight glasses of water every day and take a glass of )ISCOURAGE SUITORS . . .

Wipe lipstick an your hostess' best napkins and tawels. She'll adare that.

Let stains stay an your teeth—white is such a glaring calar anyway

Caugh and sneeze in people's faces —they need a shawer bath anyhaw.

Blow your breath down people's necks and in their faces. It's so chummy.

Don't chew gum—all it does is just make your teeth and lips beautiful.

orange, grapefruit juice or lemonade before that extra special date of yours. Try one of these tart drinks the first thing after brushing your teeth in the morning, too. A parched system has caused many a case of halitosis, for without sufficient fluids, toxins accumulate and are reflected in a sour breath.

Over-eating and drinking are sometimes at the bottom of an offensive breath, and so also are strong vegetables, such as onions, garlic and the like. A good tooth brushing and a thorough mouth rinsing should immediately follow the eating of any of these. A bit of milk of magnesia swished around your mouth and teeth just before retiring will help guard against an acid breath. This aids in counteracting tooth acidity, too, which is the commonest cause of decay.

Some of the more remote but potent causes of halitosis may be acid indigestion, infected tonsils, adenoids, sinuses, bronchial or lung conditions or common nasal catarrh. Even infections in far-removed regions of the body may be carried by the blood stream to the lungs and evidence themselves in the form of unpleasant breath. However, most halitosis is due to careless and inadequate local mouth cleanliness—so your most faithful allies against it are thorough scrubbing of all teeth and oral surfaces, and frequent rinsing, as we said before, with a good reliable mouth wash.

If you'll get at the cause of every conscious defect and mouth imperfection you have, you'll be taking the most important step toward curing those unglamorous mouth mannerisms. The rest is a simple matter of poise, self-confidence and the right mental attitude. You'll gain these easily enough, too, with the knowledge that all is as it should be behind that smile of yours.

So, mind your mouth manners and let no mere man ever be able to say of you, "There's a four-star example of the kind of girl who is mistress of the art of losing friends and discouraging suitors."

By Carol Carter

Good News

by Sylvia Kahn

Accent on Youth

It looks as though Gaylord Hauser plans to make a perennial juvenile of Greta Garbo. The good doctor's latest prescription for Greta is a Vitamin B derivative which he promises will prevent gray hair from ever growing on her beautiful Swedish head. However, intimates are wondering what man will be fortunate enough to enjoy the star's eternal youth. When Garbo visited New York recently, she did the hide-away haunts with writer Erich Maria Remarque—and we hear tell that Mr. Hauser's annoyance was second only to that of Mr. Remarque's girl friend—one Marlene Dietrich.

Didja Know

That Gary Cooper never leaves the Warner Bros. commissary without popping two or three toothpicks into his mouth . . . That Joan Crawford's chauffeur actually goes by the name of Robert Taylor . . . That Tyrone Power's hair is so curly, it has to be straightened with oil each morning for his job in "Blood and Sand" . . . That hostlers who shove braces on film horses' ears to make 'em stand up and look glamorous call the things "leather Gables" . . . That after 58 years in show business, May Robson is getting tough. She refuses to appear in anything but comedy roles from now on, because she wants to spend the rest of her career making people laugh . . . That it's rumored Veronica Lake is expecting a package from heaven . . . That director Fritz Lang, who's been spinning Virginia Gilmore around town, is back to Kay Francis . . . That Virginia is now a full-fledged poet, having sold two ditties to a national magazine . . . That Darryl Zanuck has banned Jane Withers' famous "knock-'em-down, drag-'em-out" fights from all her future pictures. Claims she's getting too big for that sort of thing . . . That now they're saying Henry Fonda is so homespun, he's unraveling?

Short Shots

Bob Hope thinks his new starrer, "Caught in the Draft," should be re-titled "Tanks —For The Memory" . . . Speaking of "Caught in the Draft," watch for Marie Blake in the same picture. She's Jeanette MacDonald's sister . . . Bette Davis' aviator husband, Arthur Farnsworth, will do his cloud-soaring alone. There's a no-flying clause in Bette's contract . . . Bob Montgomery's daughter, Elizabeth, owns hundreds of pictures of Clark Gable . . . Gene Autry's fan mail exceeds that of any other film star, past or present. And his records outsell Bing Crosby's . . . Arthur Lake wears dizzily-spotted ties when he broadcasts on the "Blondie" show. They make him feel like Dagwood Bumstead . . . There's talk going round that Judy Garland's been written in for a role opposite Gable . . . Ginger Rogers won't enter a dressing room if there's anyone whistling—not even if Jimmy Stewart's inside . . . Dorothy Lamour's still recovering from the shock. Paramount gifted her with a $20,000 bonus, unexpectedly and voluntarily . . . Humphrey Bogart tenderly refers to his wife as "Sluggy."

Reelism vs. Realism

Vivien Leigh, writing from bomb-pocked Britain, has a very funny story to tell about Winston Churchill. Vivien was introduced to the chunky Churchill immediately after the Prime Minister had attended a London showing of "GWTW." Having been properly congratulated for her own performance, Vivien asked Churchill what he thought of the movie as a whole. Churchill shuddered briefly, according to Vivien, and replied, "That picture reduced me to a pulp. There isn't a bone left in my body. Thank God I can now get back to my own war!"

Recovery Program

Someone ought to found a hospital for repairing broken-down actors. And we're not referring to the has-beens and hangers-on, either. We're talking about the talented attractive players who never get through a picture without suffering a strained back, a blistering sunburn, a broken ankle or a black eye, all in the pursuit of their art. Take Gene Tierney, for example. Gene had to get herself so messed up for her role as the miserable hare-lipped heroine of "Tobacco Road," it'll be months before she's back to normal. Even though she wound up the picture several months ago, her hair still requires frequent oil applications and her skin screams for daily toning treatments. She pays regular calls on a chiropodist who is gradually removing all the callous from her feet, and she swallows gallons of milk to make her fingernails grow. "I'm such a wreck," giggles Gene, "the only way I recognize myself is by a mole on my right shoulder!"

Putting on the Dog

We hope our fashion department won't object, but we picked up an interesting Hollywood style note we'd like to pass on to you. Take one dose of George Raft, one dose of Alfred Vanderbilt, add one toy French poodle—and we guarantee, you'll emerge the smartest-looking gal who ever sauntered beneath the noonday sun. Anyway, that's what Virginia Field did and we'll follow her lead any day. Virginia, it seems, had a brief romance with George which terminated not long ago. Before they called it quits, George gifted her with a little black-haired pup which she named Bah-Bah. Soon after the bust-up, Ginny met young Vanderbilt. Being plenty impressed by the dark-eyed trillionaire, she decided she needed a snappy new outfit for her first date with him. Racking her brain, she finally hit on an idea. Tucking Bah-Bah under her arm, she drove him to her tailor, and ordered the poor dazed man to stitch her a suit that would match the dog! The tailor complied and three days later Virginia, her dog, her suit and her beau were the niftiest quartet that appeared at the Santa Anita betting booths!

Laurence Olivier's in the R.A.F., and Vivien's doing war wark in England. Her 7-year-old daughter, Suzanne, is safe in Canada.

Bette Davis' air-minded husband, Arthur Farnsworth, is bending every effort toward getting a flying instructor's license!

Gene Raymand's famous wife, Jeanette MacDonald, nat only packs U.S. theatres but is also tap box-office star in the Orient.

They Won't Dance

No one knows what's gotten into the good old hip-swinging rhumba set in this town. The ballroom cut-ups certainly have developed leaden legs. The other evening at the Mocambo, we watched Hollywood's newest shiny-eyed romancers, Betty Grable and George Raft, spend three consecutive hours at a tucked-away table, moving nothing but their lips. Nearby sat Cesar Romero and an unidentified lovely, both ignoring the music and busily engaged in something dimly remembered as conversation. We don't mean that the art of the dance is dead in Movietown. Heck no. But the torch sure has changed hands. While Betty and George, and Cesar and his lovely cooed and chattered, nice conservative mamma and papa Gilbert Adrian surprised everyone by swinging and swaying like a gleeful pair of teen-agers. Next thing we know, Edna May Oliver will be leading the conga line!

"Hitch" to a Star

It happened on the set of "Before the Fact." An inspired Cary Grant approached director Alfred Hitchcock with a suggestion for the interpretation of a scene. Forgetting that Hitchcock is the most biting, sarcastic, unpredictable man in the film colony, Cary smiled charmingly, fluttered his script and launched into his speech. "I don't want to bore you, Hitch," he began, "but . . ." Hitchcock eyed him coldly. "People never want to," he interrupted, "but they usually do." And with that he strolled away yawning. Suffice it to say Cary hasn't been the same since.

Herd at Dinner

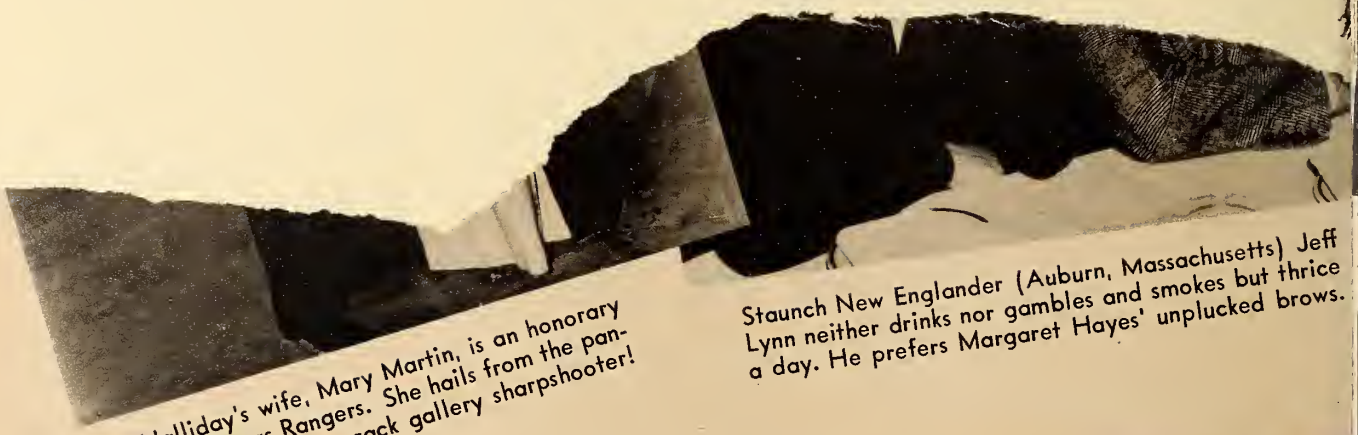
If Cary was embarrassed he ought to meet up with George Raft who not long ago got a real dose of Hitchcock Acid. George and Hitch were guests at a dinner party in the home of a mutual friend. Eventually the conversation switched, as it generally does, to actors. "Tell us, Mr. Hitchcock," queried George, coyly angling for a compliment, "what do you think of actors?" "Actors, Mr. Raft?" snorted Hitchcock. "I think they're cattle!" And before George could answer, Hitch slumped into his chair—and fell asleep!

Genie With the Dye Hair

Thanks to a snip of a scissors and a dip in the dye, Gene Raymond is a new man today. Everyone knows that when Gene had his blonde tresses darkened and his glorious waves chopped away, he was given a new lease on screen life. What few people realize, though, is that his new hair-do has enabled him to kick aside an inferiority complex that has traveled with him since childhood. As a kid, Gene was forced to wear a Buster Brown bob way beyond the time most boys are discovering girls, with the result that a day never went by without some wiseacre calling him "Goldilocks." When he grew older, he took to wearing a hat at every possible moment, but even that didn't help. Gushing females and joshing males still made his life miserable. Since the birth of the new Raymond, however, he's been holding his head high and facing the world like the best of 'em. And what about Jeanette? Well, she fell in love with that blonde hair. But she's a good little woman and even if her husband decides to switch to pigtails, she'll probably stay home nights and braid them for him!

Major Barbara

Paste another gold star next to Barbara Stanwyck's name. Shucks, paste a whole box of gold stars next to Barbara Stanwyck's name. Surely no single person in this whole mad town will ever deserve them more. Barbara's sweet and thoughtful acts are legion, but our favorite is the one that's just come to light about the cute Mrs. Bob Taylor and her adopted son, Dion. Dion is currently a student at the very excellent California Prep School. He is a bright scholar and, in his little military uniform, cuts one of the nattiest figures in his class. But from the day he enrolled, one thing has troubled him. He's been miserably lonesome for his mother. Barbara learned of this recently quite by accident. So now to make up for her son's unhappy hours, she goes up to school once a week, dons a uniform that is an exact replica of Dion's, and falling into line, drills for two solid hours with the boys. The other students are ecstatic —but Dion—well, his small chest marches four inches ahead of the rest of him!



Advance Showing

If you're lucky enough to be invited to dinner at Mary Martin's home, gird yourself for a shock. Mary and hubby Dick Halliday will probably lead you into their upper hallway, point to a portrait of a small girl, quaintly garbed in polka bonnet, crinoline and pantaloons, and proudly announce she's their daughter! When that happens, don't turn tail and run. Mary and Dick aren't crazy. Neither do they have a scarlet past. The truth of the matter is the painting has been in Dick's family for years. The young Hallidays found it one rainy afternoon and, with typical honeymoon balminess, decided their first child would look just like the adorable little Colonial. "We call her Heller Halliday," beams Mary. "Any child of ours is bound to be a heller!"

After You, Jimmy

Bette Davis has Jimmy Cagney in a bad spot. The two are now hard at work in "The Bride Came C.O.D.," a comedy which Bette begged the studio to let her do. When the casting was announced, Bette was delighted and so was Jimmy. But Bill Cagney, Jimmy's brother and producer of the picture, was not. In fact, Bill was a very worried man. Summoning Bette to his office, he spoke as follows: "You know, dear, if you go into this picture, you won't be the star. Jimmy's contract gives him solo billing every film he makes. If you do this one with him, your name will have to appear below his and the picture's." To which Bette is said to have replied, "Of course I know that. I know everything that goes on around here. But that doesn't bother me. I want to make a comedy—and this is it!" And that's how it stands at present. Unless Jimmy waives the rule he fought so hard to have written into his contract, James Cagney will be the star of "The Bride Came C.O.D." and Bette Davis, first lady of the screen, will be listed as a featured player! Our dough is on the Cagney gallantry, however. It hasn't failed yet.

(Continued on page 70)

Dick Halliday's wife, Mary Martin, is an honorary member of Texas Rangers. She hails from the panhandle state and is a crack gallery sharpshooter!

Staunch New Englander (Auburn, Massachusetts) Jeff Lynn neither drinks nor gambles and smokes but thrice a day. He prefers Margaret Hayes' unplucked brows.

George Raft will have the entire Army, Navy and Marine Corps on his neck if he keeps on dating their idol, Betty Grable. She gets more ardent fan letters from enlisted men than any other actress in Hollywood!

The Jon Halls are rarely seen around Hollywood these days. They've practically deserted Calif. for a home and orange groves in Fla.

Shirley Temple and mother go over a script for a radio show, the first of several such broadcasts stipulated on her new $2500-a-week M-G-M contract.

Lupe scandalizes Hollywood by snoozing with a revolver tucked under her pillow! She keeps 'em guessing, too, what with that mysterious new suitor, Armand Delmar, with her at Charlie Foy's.

When Rudy Vallee drinks champagne, Hollywood bistros get only a $2 cork fee. He and Maria Montez bring their own straight from a Vallee-owned winery!

The expectant Gables have done a complete turnabout since their marriage on March 3, 1939, when they vowed they'd never settle down and add little Gables to Clark's ranch house.

To an Easter Bride . . .

The bride wears ninan. Under $25, R. H. Macy. Violets crown her veil and the wedding band matches her engagement ring, an 8-carat marquise diamand!

You want to look extra special for HIM, don't you? Not just the day you're married, but ever after? It's easy to do, and you don't need much money or a raft of clothes. Just remember how you're going to live, then choose clothes to have fun in!

About $9

Add a white sailor and yau're ready ta ga shapping. Plaid gingham, pique callar. Charles A. Stevens, Chicaga. The cute navy Middie shaes by Joléne, abaut $4.

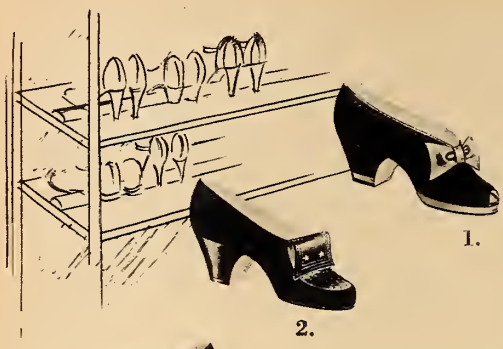
By Elizabeth Willguss

CLOTHES WORN BY LEILA ERNST, PARAMOUNT STARLET, APPEARING IN THE BROADWAY PLAY, "PAL JOEY"

About $17

Go away in a chic navy ensemble, from Franklin Simon.

About $15



"The very fairest in all the land," answers the mirror! Sage green rayon crêpe with smart red corded pockets. Saks Fifth Avenue.

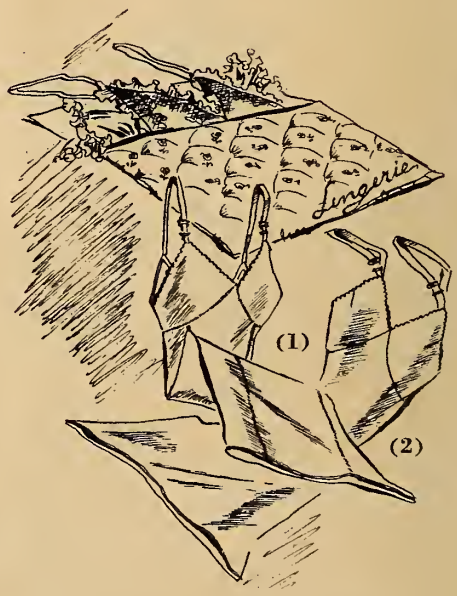
About $15

For gay evenings, a crisp white pique with jacket, blue and white seersucker top. Leon Frohsin, Atlanta, Ga.

It's smart to have Jolène shoes for every mood.

1. Zabbo, in black gabardine with light tan trimming. About $3.
2. Middie, a blue gabardine with white sailor trimming. About $4.
3. Mogul, step-in navy gabardine pump with calf trim. About $3.
4. Cabana, keen spectator pump in brown and white. About $4.

Under $8



Wonderful for chilly days! A soft blue rayon crêpe dress with wool jacket. At John W. Thomas Co., Minneapolis. The Joléne shoe is about $3.

Under $17

A dreom of a negligée in dainty bud-rose chintz. The yoke and sleeves ore voile ond the skirt is ten yards around! Why not weor it dancing? At Lord & Toylor.

When you pack your pretties, remember to put in two tailored Movie Star Slips. (1) The Ziegfeld Girl ana (2) The One Hundred. Both about $1 at leading stores.

Putting him in a Mood for Matrimony

A LESSON IN
How to Become Some Man's Dream Girl—for KEEPS

Your romance is in the crucial stage where you may simmer down to just another telephone number in his little black address book—or you can give him such an acute case of Dream-Girl Fever that he spends his lunch hours pricing solitaires! It's up to you, lass! If your technique's Right, you win. If it's Wrong—well, make it Right—to get huffy or possessive when he smiles at another female. You have to give a man some rope, or what's he going to hang himself with?

1

WRONG

RIGHT

to make mighty sure that no other girl can make you look faded! That's where your complexion casts the deciding vote. When he looks at you, let him see a complexion that radiates the loving care you give it with Pond's every night. The Other Woman menace will vanish into limbo.

2

WRONG

to take him at his word when he phones for a last-minute date and says, "Don't fuss—come just as you are!" He may think he means it, but when he sees your face buried under a layer of smudge and stale make-up, the disillusion will be terrific!

RIGHT

to improve the golden moments between his call and his arrival by whisking through a Pond's glamour treatment. 1. Slather Pond's Cold Cream over your face. Pat like mad with your fingertips. Wipe off with Pond's Tissues. Then "rinse" with more Cold Cream to dispose of the last smitch of dirt and old make-up. 2. Over your immaculate skin, spread a thick white mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Remove after 1 full minute. Then wield the powder puff and you'll glitter with glamour!

3

WRONG

to hold him at a coy arm's length so long that he gets discouraged. Love can't thrive indefinitely on a starvation diet!

RIGHT

a little close-range eye-making and such. Extremely effective unless a close-up of your face reveals clogged pores and a network of squint lines. Help keep pores, "dry" lines and blackheads from blighting romance by thoroughly cleansing and softening your skin with Pond's Cold Cream—every night!

4

WRONG

Fatal, in fact! To fumble nervously in your handbag for a powder compact when the poor fellow is desperately working himself to proposal pitch. He may never reach that point again!

RIGHT

to encourage him by looking sweet and knowing it! No distracting worry of bleary make-up or glistening nose will give you the fidgets, if you have used that amazing 1-minute mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream before your date. The mask smooths away little roughnesses—gives your skin a glorious "mat" finish that you can trust to hold powder right through the crisis!

WRONG

being just terribly brave and noble when he half-heartedly courts you for 7 years without mentioning churches and ministers.

WRITE

Close the deal while it's hot! Get going now on a sweep-him-off-his-feet complexion! Here's a dotted line to sign on—it isn't a wedding license, but one may well follow!

POND'S, Dept. 9MS-CVE, Clinton, Conn.
I'd love to try the same Pond's complexion care followed by Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. St. George Duke and other leading society beauties. Please send me Pond's Special Beauty Ritual Kit containing Pond's Cold Cream, Vanishing Cream, Tissues and Skin Freshener. I enclose 10¢ for postage and packing.

Name .....

Address .....

This offer good in U. S. only.

ODDITIES ON THE OSCARS

GINGER ROGERS AND JIMMY STEWART PLAY UNREHEARSED LEADING ROLES IN ACADEMY AWARDS' 13TH ANNUAL SHOW!

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne present miniature Oscars for best supporting roles to Jane Darwell ("Grapes of Wrath") and Walter Brennan ("The Westerner").

1940 Awards to Ginger for her performance in "Kitty Foyle" and to Jimmy for his trouping in "The Philadelphia Story."

The gardenia-bedecked Hotel Biltmore Bowl was the scene of the 13th Annual Academy Awards banquet . . . 1,500 guests were present; 1,300 were turned away . . . Those who were lucky enough to get in paid from $11 to $25 for a single ticket . . . A giant Oscar, done in glittering neon tubes, was perched atop the hotel's entrance marquee . . . Only one person in the Bowl knew the names of the winners before they were announced. He was the embarrassed representative of the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse and Co. who had custody of the envelopes containing the answers . . . There was considerable betting done at each table before the presentations were made.

Jimmy Stewart had planned to stay at home. On a hunch, two men from M-G-M went and fetched him a half hour before the Oscars were awarded . . . Ginger Rogers refused to appear for the Academy dinner when she was among the nominees a few years back. She was coaxed into coming this time by "Kitty Foyle" producer, David Hempstead . . . President Roosevelt opened the ceremonies with a radio address direct from the White House . . . Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, appearing around the corner from the Biltmore in "There Shall Be No Night," rushed through their performance and arrived in time to present the Stewart-Rogers awards.

Miss Fontanne and this year's Oscar girl met originally in 1930. They were both on the train which was bringing Ginger to Hollywood for the first time. Before they parted, Miss Fontanne told Ginger she was sure she'd make good in Hollywood. As she handed her her statuette, Miss Fontanne whispered in Ginger's ear: "I told you so" . . . Jimmy gulped and stammered before he could make his acceptance speech . . . Ginger came close to sobbing and so did everyone in the room who could see her pretty face twisting with emotion.

Jane Darwell, who won the award for the Best Performance by a Supporting Actress, hasn't had a job in over four months . . . Walter Brennan, 1940's Best Supporting Actor, accepted his third Oscar. He got his first two for "Come And Get It" and "Kentucky" . . . David O. Selznick, two-time Academy winner for the best picture of the year ("GWTW" and "Rebecca") announced there would be no more Selznick productions . . . Preston Sturges makes thousands of dollars a week, but he received his Oscar for the Best Original Screenplay ("The Great McGinty") in a rented tuxedo . . . Buddy DeSylva, new production head of Paramount and himself a noted composer ("Sonny Boy" among others) presented the musical awards. "When You Wish Upon A Star" from "Pinocchio" copped the honors for the best song of the year . . . Nicest surprise of the evening came when Walter Wanger presented Bob Hope with a special plaque for "Achievement in Humanities."

Hope delivered his funniest crack when his boss, Buddy DeSylva, left the podium. Nodding toward DeSylva, Bob chirped: "He just made a deal to loan me to Samuel Goldwyn . . . a sort of lend-louse bill!"

MEMO TO VAUGHN PAUL

(Continued from page 45)

always so beautifully groomed that this particular shortcoming is more than forgivable.

You've learned, no doubt, how very natural the future Mrs. Paul is. She doesn't paint her nails. She uses rouge and lipstick very conservatively. What's more, she's economical. We have designer Vera West's own word for it that her sole extravagance is shoes. She loves variety of footwear and pays $17 for every pair. Buys most of the clothes she wears in her films—and gets them at the second-hand rate—usually about $12.50.

Probably the most wonderful thing about your bride-to-be is her A. M. glamour. Practically any gal can sparkle after dark, but Deanna's ravishing from a dreary seven-thirty on. And cheerful! Her studio hairdresser claims Deanna's disposition is unique among feminine stars.

You can't help being impressed by the fact that she's so well-balanced. She's no helpless Dulcy. She's self-reliant, stands on her own feet. Most important, since she always accomplishes what she sets out to do, she can't fail—because now, we know from listening to her, she's out to establish Hollywood's most successful and happiest marriage.

DEANNA'S musical tastes are wide. She likes classical, certainly. But she also likes boogie-woogie and swing. She's not a musical snob—that is, doesn't think all classical music is good and all popular music bad. She judges a piece on its own individual merits. And since you're a lover of music, but admit you're not an expert, this should be fine for you.

She goes out of her way to be obliging, and that's an asset in any marriage. Remember the time Ray Jones, Universal's still photographer, got that wire from New York requesting still photos of Deanna immediately? And he knew it was impossible since Deanna was going to school, taking fittings, being made up, working on recordings and toiling in a movie. And when Deanna learned of the wire, what did she do? Skipped her entire lunch hour to come over to Ray's department and spend the time posing for the necessary stills.

And that's not all. Without ever being a student of Dale Carnegie, she knows how to win friends. And she doesn't do it consciously. The point is, she's interested in you. There was that other occasion when Deanna learned that a color photo which Ray had taken of her was selected as one of the best of the year and published as the only Hollywood star's photo in the 1941 U. S. Camera Annual. Of course, Ray was secretly proud, though he didn't think it would excite anyone else. But when Deanna got wind of it, she was thrilled, bubbling, congratulatory, and told the whole studio about it. And this trait alone would be a great cement in solidifying her wedlock with you. It shows she'll be interested, by word and by action, in your work as associate producer at Universal.

She's always taken her co-workers' mild gags with a grin. Of course, the gang has never tried practical jokes on her, but now that she's grown up, they will, and she won't mind. Her humor is harmless and innocent. It's this kind of stuff. "Do you know that East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet—because there are no twacks!"

(Continued on page 63)

"I'm a coward about spanking children"

A modern mother learns how to solve an old problem the up-to-date way

1. I dread spanking children—I'd far rather reason with them. But sometimes a child can almost drive you mad! One day, my Janet was so stubborn. I found myself thinking, "A good smack in the right place would save us both a lot of time and energy!"

2. Janet needed a laxative and she refused flatly to take it. I know it tastes awful, so I offered to give her a lollipop if she'd take it like a good girl. And she still refused. So, for the first time, I spanked her and forced her to take it. She didn't cry. She just looked at me.

3. I felt perfectly awful all day. That's why I looked so gloomy when my cousin dropped in. She's a registered nurse for the best child specialist in town. So I asked her what to do about Janet and her laxative. And she said, "Give her a laxative she'll like."

4. "It's dangerous to force a child to take a nasty-tasting laxative," she went on. "It can shock her delicate nervous system. Children should get a laxative made especially for them—not an adult's laxative. I'd give your youngster Fletcher's Castoria."

5. "Children love the taste of Fletcher's Castoria," she added. "And you can be sure it's thorough, but always mild and safe—not a single harsh drug in it. Try it—I know you'll agree with me." So I walked her to the corner and bought a bottle right then and there.

6. The next time Janet needed a laxative, I gave her Fletcher's Castoria. And sure enough—she loved the taste! And me, well, I've settled a difficult problem the way I like best—without spankings. No more laxative tussles in our house!

HERE IS THE MEDICAL BACKGROUND

Chief ingredient of Fletcher's Castoria is senna.

Medical literature says: (1) In most cases, senna does not disturb the appetite and digestion or cause nausea . . . (2) Senna works primarily in the lower bowel . . . (3) In regulated dosages, it produces easy elimination and has little tendency to cause irritation or constipation after use.

Senna is especially processed in Fletcher's Castoria to eliminate griping and thus allow gentle laxative action.

Chas. H. Fletcher CASTORIA

The SAFE laxative for children

SCREEN ALMANAC

The makings of a four-star scrapbook! Pictures, vital statistics and dozens of intimate "little things" about Hollywood's 400

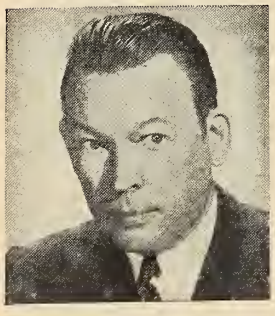
BRIAN AHERNE

Born Brian Aherne; Worcestershire, England; May 2, 1902. Bond Street in every wrinkle . . . Hollywood's top bachelor before he went and fell . . . ducks night clubs and crowds . . . hates red fingernails . . . says "women's first interest should be their husbands" . . . quenchless thirst for tea . . . headful of airplanes and air lanes . . . as versatile as his roles.

RICHARD ARLEN

Born Richard S. Van Mattimore, Sept. 1, 1900; Charlottesville, Va. Hollywood's leading sportsman . . . hobbies: swimming, golf, riding, tennis . . . boating enthusiast . . . deep sea fisherman . . . American boy's model . . . biggest thrill in his life is his son . . . owns a flying school, his ambition since his days as a 17-year-old Canadian R.A.F.er.

EDDIE ALBERT

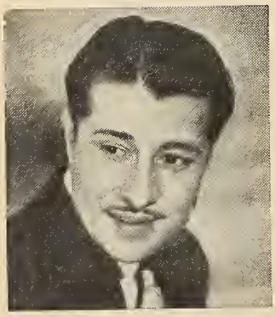


Born Edward Heimberger; Rock Island, Ill.; April 22, 1908. One gal man . . . bashful and bewildered . . . as smart as he is funny . . . hayseed with lady appeal . . . crazy about music and movie idols . . . hates Hollywood gossip, noise and cynics . . . yen to write philosophy . . . chummy with Lady Luck . . . sends invitations and forgets the party . . . no Beau Brummel.

DESI ARNAZ

Born Desi Arnaz, Santiago, Cuba; Mar. 2, 1917. Fled a revolution in Cuba. Came north of the border, found a job cleaning bird cages. Popularized the Conga. Loves chicken, rice, a quick game of soccer and redheaded women. Hates early morning phone calls and ugly girls. Stagestruck, wants to go back to Broadway.

FRED ALLEN



Born John Sullivan, Cambridge, Mass.; May 31, 1894. Born with a glib tongue . . . and not in his cheek. Loves to read in bed. Is a serious student of Shakespeare. Wears expensive clothes, but stuffs pockets full of junk. Always sleepy. Has sign in home telling guests to leave at 2 A. M. An accomplished cud-chewer —if no one is looking.

EDWARD ARNOLD

Born Edward Arnold, Feb. 18, 1890; New York, N. Y. Genial and fat . . . lighthearted . . . shining example of self-made man; sensible, scoffs at luxuries, pooh-poohs college educations and prefers experience for his kids . . . suggests days and ways of Diamond Jim but is as tame and domesticated as Pop . . . self confident . . . definite asset around the kitchen.

DON AMECHE

Born Dominick Felix Amici; May 31, 1910; Kenosha, Wis. Starts day at 6:30 A.M. bewildered and cross . . . loves lots of company, his family, thick steak, poker . . . hates telephoning . . . turnabout black sheep of his family . . . hobby's amusement parks . . . refuses to worry and smiles constantly . . . prefers Dago red to any other shade on earth.

JEAN ARTHUR

Born Gladys Greene, New York City, Oct. 17, 1908. Wanted to be a tight-rope walker . . . gets sick before interviews . . . cries when they're over . . . hates parties . . . positively will not talk politics . . . lives in tweeds and saddle shoes . . . has a way with a garden . . . houses 10 goldfish and a mongrel pup.

(Continued on page 68)

She likes attention, as does every girl. To illustrate, this past Christmas some one gave her a half-dozen victrola records as a present. She wrote not one, but two personal thank you notes and then phoned to say she was playing them over and over. And when you consider that with her money she could buy a million of those records!

She adores kids. When her sister had a child, Deanna stayed up from midnight to five in the morning waiting for the birth of that baby. And reported to work on time, too, without sleep!

We think Deanna rates at least four stars, Vaughn—and before the marriage has even taken place, we're sure that the plot involving Mr. and Mrs. Paul will run true to formula. You know—"and they lived happily ever after!"

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 16)

The movie—which has to do with life at the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Mich.—is fairly good. The title refers to Susannah, who sings in a burlesque theatre. Allan Jones, whose pop runs the music camp, wanders into the theatre, decides to help Susannah, adopts her and drags her to the camp. From there on the scenario grows duller and duller, with every cliché you can imagine popping up, but the actors keep struggling bravely and making almost all of it palatable.

There is a lot of good music, including the Meyerbeer "Shadow Song," Liszt's "Liebestraum," Strauss' "Voices of Spring" and other worthwhile items, but they are so thoroughly hashed up that they lose much of their value.

Susannah ought to go places once she relaxes. She has a lot of talent. There is a boy named Heimo Haitto, who is a Finnish violin prodigy, and he has a really outstanding and impressive personality. Allan Jones is himself again; if you like him, you like him. Lynne Overman is always insurance to any picture, because he is sure to contribute a healthy share of laughs. Margaret Lindsay and Grace Bradley are swell in support femme roles. Directed by Andrew Stone.—Paramount.

★★½ Golden Hoofs

This is a pleasant little yarn with no pretensions to greatness, but it is entertaining and it moves Jane Withers one step nearer to romantic leads. She's not quite there, but it looks as though she will definitely make the transition without trouble. That's important news, of course.

There's another important little bit of news in the casting of this picture. Buddy Rogers, who used to make many girls' hearts flutter not so very long ago, makes his movie comeback here. Hard to say whether it's a successful comeback or not. Buddy belongs in pictures, of course, but the part, here, is not strong enough to tell you much about him. Let's give him another chance before we decide, folks.

INFORMATION DESK
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

BRUNETTES! There's Beauty for you in these 3 questions

MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR has rich auburn hair, blue eyes. She uses Pond's Brunette (Rachel) because it matches her fair skin.

When trying to choose the right shade of powder for yourself, ask yourself only three questions.

Shall I lighten my skin?
Shall I match it?
Shall I warm it?

It's simply a matter of this:

Are you more beautiful when your skin looks frail shell-pink?

Are you lovelier when your skin looks ivory-pale to contrast with the dark lights in your eyes?

Are you more stunning if your skin is a warm, rosy tone to dramatize your brunette coloring?

Pond's has 4 superlative brunette shades to give the effect you desire.

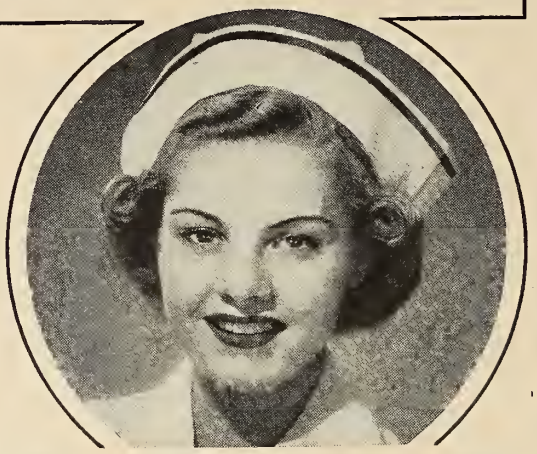
A light rose-pink shade—Rose Dawn. It is light enough to match fair-skinned brunettes. Slightly darker brunettes by the thousands use it to lighten and brighten their skin.

A deep cream shade—Brunette-Rachel. Countless brunettes use this to match their natural creaminess of tone. Some use it to add warmth to a pale ivory skin. Dark brunettes use it to lighten their skin when they prefer an even beige tone without pink in it. By far our most popular brunette shade.

A deeper, sunnier shade—Rose Brunette—in which there is more rose than cream. This is the powder that matches most successfully the brunette skin with a great deal of warmth. Darker brunettes use it to lighten their skin. A third group finds that the pink in the powder takes the dull yellowy tones out of the skin.

And there is also our new Dusk Rose, the darkest, rosiest of our shades. It brightens muddy tans. It matches a deep, rosy tan. Other brunettes who dislike growing paler in winter keep a warm, sunny tan with Dusk Rose.

Pond's Powders give a smooth-as-baby-skin finish to your face. They keep away shine for hours without giving that powdered look.



Brunettes will find their 4 lovely shades and Blondes will find an equally successful group. You can pick your own shade easily.

Free Write to Pond's, Dept. 9MS-PE, Clinton, Conn., and state whether you are a blonde or a brunette—you will receive generous samples FREE.

WANT TO "DO SOMETHING" ABOUT YOUR COMPLEXION?

WHICH OF THESE FAULTS MARS YOUR COMPLEXION BEAUTY?

- √ Externally-caused blemishes?
- √ Enlarged pore openings?
- √ Rough, "dried-out" skin?
- √ Chapped skin and lips?

Most complexions would be lovelier if it weren't for some common skin fault. If you'd really like to "do something" about your complexion, do what thousands of women all over the country are doing every day! Use the greaseless, snow-white MEDICATED cream, Noxzema!

NOXZEMA is not just a cosmetic cream. It contains soothing medication that helps ...heal externally-caused blemishes
...it helps smooth and soften rough skin
...and its mildly astringent action helps reduce enlarged pore openings.

Nurses were the first to discover the remarkable qualities of this delightfully soothing, medicated cream. Now women everywhere use it regularly, both as a night cream and as a powder base. Why not try it? Find out what it may do for you!

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER: For a limited time you can get the special 25¢ Noxzema for only 19¢. Get your jar today at any drug or cosmetic counter.

The story is one of those typical Withers affairs in which she is little Miss Fix-It again. This time she wants to save her home grounds as a breeding place for trotting horses and balk the efforts of Buddy, a commercially-minded gent who doesn't give a hoot about traditions and wants to convert the place into a bangtail proposition. Janie wins out, of course, but at the cost of a broken heart (?). It's full of hokum and stuff you've heard and seen many times before, but it is handled very deftly and pleasantly, and it won't make anybody mad. Directed by Lynn Shores.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

★★½ Blondie Goes Latin

The Blondie pictures, co-starring Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and the Simms tot, have found a peculiar little spot in the hearts of a lot of customers. Result: Columbia is now expanding the pictures, and that's a mistake. This one is a curious goulash which is likely to alienate more customers than it attracts.

The Bumsteads go on a cruise to South America, which permits Arthur Lake to play the drums and Penny to do a rhumba and a couple of songs. There is a band and there is Tito Guizar, a sweet-singing Latin. Also there are a good many romantic and business complications. The whole business, however, adds up to not so very much. Young Larry Simms' dead-pan is the only real fun in the picture (and mighty good he is, too) with his dog, Zero, not far behind. Directed by Frank Strayer.—Columbia.

★★½ Road Show

Some poor pictures annoy you, some make you angry, a few leave you with a feeling of infinite regret. Such a one is "Road Show," which has a lot of laughs, and a basic possibility for good fun—but which just doesn't come off. A little more work and concentration could have made it a smash.

It's one of those screwball yarns, having to do with a millionaire who is scared that some dame is going to knock him off for his bucks. He gets himself sent to a bug-house for a while, joins a half-baked carnival company as roustabout, and in various and sundry ways conducts himself in a manner to suggest the bug-house should have kept him. It's goofy, but the laughs are spotty, with long hunks of nothing in between—and the finale indicates that the producer, writers, and director just plain gave up and said, "Oh, nuts."

Adolphe Menjou is top man, and has a royal good time as a wacky chap who helps John Hubbard conduct himself in true millionaire fashion. Hubbard is plenty okay, too; it's about time he got a break in some movie. Carole Landis is the girl—and she tries hard—but she doesn't look as if she's worth all the ballyhoo. Blame it on poor photography. Patsy Kelly and Charles Butterworth garner some legitimate laughs in small parts. Directed by Hal Roach.—Roach—UA.

★★½ Scattergood Baines

When a magazine and radio serial has as many followers as the character of Scattergood Baines, it is extremely difficult to bring it to the screen without bothering a lot of people who have mental pictures which they've been carrying around for years. If you never read one of the stories or listened to one of the broadcasts, you're liable to think it's pretty good—otherwise, you'll be somewhat disappointed.

Future pictures (the studio plans a series of them) probably will have more dramatic action, since the attempt was made here to establish and introduce the characters, thus seeming somewhat slow. The story itself, once it gets started, is pretty interesting, having to do with a pretty schoolmarm forced to disguise her beautiful face because of a prim school board. Also, there is a secondary theme about a big lumber company trying to cheat Scattergood out of some timber rights. Both yarns are neatly integrated.

Guy Kibbee is pretty good in the title role, once you get used to him. He's not as fat as you've been led to believe Scattergood should be, and his voice doesn't even remotely resemble the Scattergood voice on the radio. So what? Don't look for comparisons, and he's convincing. The supporting cast is only fair, with Francis Trout, who does Pliny on the radio, making a successful movie début in the same role and topping the regulars. Carol Hughes and John Archer handle the romance. Directed by Christy Cabanne.—RKO-Radio.

★★½ The Monster and the Girl

The verdict on this one is pretty much up to you—if you want to play ball, you'll think it's grand fun; if you go to the theatre with a show-me attitude you'll probably be bored. It's a chiller-diller, full of action and thrills.

Young Phillip Terry comes to the big city to avenge his sister, who has been seduced by Robert Paige, head of a vice ring. The gang frames Terry and gets him sent to the electric chair. Before he takes the hot seat, Terry makes a deal with a doctor and his brain is transferred to a giant ape. After he dies, the ape wanders around town systematically knocking off the gangsters one by one. The last gangster manages to kill the ape, which seems a shame, somehow, because the ape has become a sort of avenging hero, despite the fact that he spreads death and destruction. That gives you an idea how screwy the whole yarn is—but there are plenty of us gluttons who love that kind of stuff.

The acting is okay, though uninspired. Ellen Drew is the gal; Paul Lukas, Marc Lawrence and Joseph Calleia are best in support. Director Stuart Heisler manages to keep things moving at a sufficiently torrid pace.—Paramount.

★★½ Trial of Mary Dugan

For many years now, Bayard Veiller's stage play has been excellent entertainment and the current re-filming of it is still okay movie fare. It is told rather slowly at first, but once it gets moving you'll have a swell time.

Laraine Day is Mary Dugan this time. (Norma Shearer did it last time) and it is a distinct step up the ladder for her; she turns in a wholly believable performance in a tough part. The rest of the cast—Robert Young, Tom Conway, Frieda Inescourt and Marsha Hunt—is okay, but it's Laraine you'll talk about when you leave the theatre.

Just in case you've forgotten, the story has to do with the plight of a girl on trial for murder. Bob Young is her lawyer and—when things look absolutely hopeless for the kid—he manages to turn the tables by a clever court-room trick which gives the picture a really exciting kick finish. Save a lot of your plaudits for the understanding which Norman McLeod put into the direction.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

FOREVER AND A DAY

(Continued from page 10)

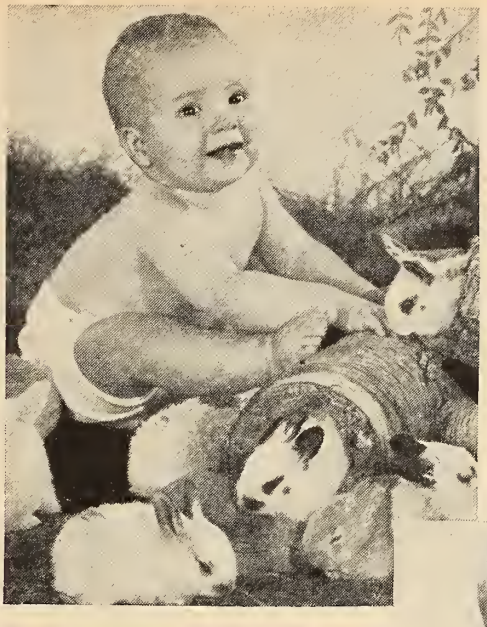
fell. If anyone were silly enough to ask for, and I were silly enough to supply, one of those single-word descriptions, I'd make it sunny.

People ask whether marriage has changed Tyrone. Annabella says not. Some of his friends disagree. As one put it: "When I first met him, he was flying off in all directions. He didn't know where he was going or what he wanted. Now he knows." I detected one difference. His eyes used to be restless. Now they're quiet with the serenity his wife must have brought him, since it wasn't there before.

He's also become a devoted householder, another new role. "I care," he admits barefaced, "about the color of drapes and the hang of pictures."

They had neither drapes nor pictures when they moved in a week after their marriage. They had, says Annabella, the garden furniture, a mattress and a marble game—"one of those things you put a nickel in which somebody gave Tyrone. We ate sometimes on the garden furniture, sometimes on the game."



THIS was because, until Annabella's furniture arrived from France, they couldn't be sure what they'd need. Meantime they had some changes made in the house—painted the roof and shutters green—opened Annabella's balcony and added a little winding staircase that leads directly to the garden—built additional bookshelves—ripped out two fancy fireplaces, an elaborately carved one in the library and the living-room fireplace which was all mirrors, replacing them with plain brick and wood. "I live on movie sets all day long," said Tyrone. "I don't want to come home to a house that looks like one."

Asked for her views on the subject, Annabella looks mildly astonished. "I thought Tyrone had a wonderful taste, because he had mine. There are houses for which you have to wear velvet and satin, you have to dress for that house in negligées with lace. But we are always around in slacks, so how could we suit with such a house?"

Then came the beautiful old family pieces from France—rich in tradition and lustrous with the polishing of generations of hands—consoles and chests—a Spanish desk for the library—an old bishop to bless the hall table—a smaller desk fitting into a niche in the upstairs hall as though designed for it, though its exquisitely painted drawers had originally been built to guard the papers of a monk. Still it probably feels at home, upholding at either end a lovely Mexican bottle-madonna.

When these were placed, they began to fill in. An English dining-room with a silver Lazy Susan service under the window, which they hesitate to refer to lest they startle the cook, whose name is Susan. Chintzes everywhere—"to bring the garden into the house." A modern bedroom for Ty—sandblasted Japanese oak and green blocked linen. A gay child's room for little Anni. Annabella's room, feminine but not fussy, the head and footboards of the bed covered with quilted chintz and looking like a flower-starred field in summer. The night table holds two phones, one recently installed.

"I'd call the house," Tyrone explains,

"Hey! Know any tricks to amuse baby bunnies? I've been putting my best foot forward all morning—but it's no use. They just grumble and take naps. Shucks, there oughta be something the sillies would like . . ."

"Hold on—maybe they feel the way I do when I'm hot and cross and some foolish grownup's trying to make me chuckle. Maybe what they really want more'n anything is something soothing to cool 'em off! . . ."

"Gleeps! That's it! Silky-cool Johnson's Baby Powder! Just two shakes of a rabbit's tail and I'll be back with double rubdowns for everybody. Then see if these fellas don't wiggle their ears and start to frolic."

"What a thrill! A rubdown with soft, soothing Johnson's Baby Powder is the high spot of any baby's day! It's swell for chafes and prickles. Mighty inexpensive, too."

JOHNSON'S BABY POWDER

Johnson & Johnson, New Brunswick, N. J.

From the Private Diary of Gloria N---

Broke a date with Jim for tonight. The way my head aches, I don't feel like seeing anybody! Guess I need a laxative, but I dread taking one.

Aunt Helen tipped me off to Ex-Lax. Said I ought to give it a trial. I hate the taste of laxatives - but Ex-Lax was a pleasant surprise. It tasted just like chocolate!

Slept wonderfully all night. Ex-Lax worked fine this morning. No upsets or anything. Headache's all gone, too. Sure hope Jim calls me tonight.

The action of Ex-Lax is thorough, yet gentle! No shock. No strain. No weakening after-effects. Just an easy, comfortable bowel movement that brings blessed relief. Try Ex-Lax next time you need a laxative. It's good for every member of the family.

10¢ and 25¢

"and the line was always busy. It drove me mad. So I said to Annabella, let's put in a private phone, just for you and me. Now I can never remember the number and central won't tell me. It turned out to be so private I can't get it!"

"Never mind," Annabella soothes him, "we'll have it printed on your key."

After it was finished, they didn't like the living-room.

"It's not warm enough," said he.

"More chintzes maybe," she speculated. "Well—let's sit in the library."

The idea of a living-room they didn't live in irked them both. Last Christmas Ty got an idea. He'd fix it up as a holiday surprise for Annabella.

THIS required management. A decorator came up to take measurements while madame was out. Tyrone picked his pieces—odd tables, soft couches, a honey of a desk, warm-toned chairs. One day Annabella felt ill and stayed in bed. Her husband wasn't pleased exactly, but neither was he displeased. Grabbing the phone, he told the decorator: "This is the day." They hauled his purchases through the front door on tiptoe, arranged them in the living-room to see how they fitted, and hauled them away again. On the afternoon of Christmas Eve they were all brought back and piled up in the garage. Annabella suspected nothing.

"For one month before Christmas," she observes, "everything is a lie. One says, where do you go? You are going out again? I am not going with you? What are you doing? Nothing. Again nothing? Every day we are doing nothing. Each time I was going into his bedroom, he would say, don't touch anything. We know it is for each other, but we get mad anyway, because we can't wait till Christmas. Oh, yes, I thought I would find new things on the tables, but not new tables under the things."

The René Clairs—he directed Annabella's first French picture—came on Christmas Eve to stay overnight and spend the holiday with them.

"René's never forgiven me," says Ty. "When the girls went to bed about midnight, I broke the news. It took hours to tote the old stuff out to the garage, and the new stuff in." Climbing round packages and Christmas trees, in imminent danger of breaking their necks or at least of rousing the household, they managed to finish the job undetected. They even hung pictures—four old French prints Tyrone had unearthed somewhere so that Annabella should find Paris hanging on her wall.

For a moment next morning, surveying this Aladdin-magic, she stood speechless, then turned to her grinning husband. "Do they all go back tomorrow?" she murmured before flinging herself at his neck. Nowadays, when Mr. Clair seats himself on a Power couch, he shakes hands with it. "Yes, I know this one intimately. It's a heavy one."

There's tradition on both sides of the Power family. If Annabella's forebears are present in the furniture they used, Tyrone's are equally in evidence. The chief treasure of his library is a two-volume book, whose title page reads: "Impressions of America—during the years 1833, 1834 and 1835 by Tyrone Power, Esq."

It was published in 1836, dedicated to "My only Patron and gentle Public" by "Your devoted, humble servant," and from its pages breathes as vibrant and kindly a personality as you'd meet in a year of books, as the author tells with modesty and humor of what turned out to be a triumphal tour of these states, up and down the eastern seaboard, south to New Orleans and west to the Mississippi.

Ty undoubtedly knows his great grandfather better than most of us know our contemporary kin. He gets a kick out of comparing his impressions of American cities with those of the hundred-year-back Tyrone. Philadelphia, for instance—"the dwellings are chiefly of brick, of a good colour. . . . The windows are furnished with latticed shutters; these, when not closed, fold back on either hand against the wall, and being painted green, and kept with much care and freshness, would invest humbler dwellings with an attractive air, especially in the eyes of an Englishman, accustomed to the dingy aspect of our city residences."

Too bad that Englishman couldn't have peered into the future when he set out from Liverpool in the packet-ship Europe "yards pointed and sails closely furled." His own son sniffed at the father's frivolous profession, and wrapped himself in the respectable folds of the law. He'd have liked to know that his grandson picked up the sock and buskin where he dropped them, and that his great-grandson keeps his memory green with old playbills and pictures on the curved wall of his bar. There's one portrait on the strength of which Darryl Zanuck would have signed the earlier Tyrone without a test. Four photographs only share the honor of the gallery with him—Lynn Fontanne, Alfred Lunt, Maurice Evans, Noel Coward.

But Tyrone's itching to show you the garden. He leads you along what used to be dirt paths, filled in by himself with decomposed gravel, personally edged in a herringbone pattern of bricks. To date he's laid four thousand.

HE holds the bricks like that," Annabella gibes softly, "and comes in with his shirt all beautiful pink."

To give him his due, though the borders might have been laid more speedily by an expert, to this untrained eye they could hardly have been laid more competently. "Ysidro, the gardener, indulges me," says Tyrone.

He weeds the paths too, and points with pride to the dozen eucalyptus which, when he planted them last year, were as tall as Annabella and are now twice as tall. They gloat over budding almond blossoms and a new tangerine. They pick figs and avocados from their own trees and eat 'em like mad. Ty frowns at the bathhouse awning, beaten to a pulp by the storms California never has. "Joys of owning a home," he growls, "I love it."

Annabella calls all the hedges pittosporum, though some are not. "Because it sounds scientific," she explains. "I don't know how it spells." (Neither does my dictionary. A nurseryman told me how it spells.)

Epatant gambols along beside them. Epatant, whose name means extraordinary or striking, belongs to that most ingratiating tribe of dogs, the French poodle. He's called Eppie for short and Tyrone pretends, with extraordinary or striking lack of success, to be sore at him. Annabella jumps to the defense.

"Of course at the beginning that dog was very young. Well, I don't know, maybe he noticed we don't go very often into Tyrone's room, so maybe he thought, it's a nice, quiet room, if I have something to do, that's where to do it. Always it happened on Tyrone's carpet. But no more, Eppie, hein?" Eppie remains sublimely unself-conscious, a black clown stalking a yellow butterfly.

He's the only house dog. Two police hounds and a mongrel cocker share the grounds with a goat. Annabella's affections embrace all animals, especially small ones. So when Ty was rash enough to come home and tell her that his dentist's goat had given birth to a son whose future looked uncertain, she insisted on taking him in. The baby has now become a menace. He dines, by preference, on roses and, if only for olfactory reasons, has to be kept strictly to his own enclosure.

"Of course we can't give him away," his mistress protests. "Nobody would like to have that thing. Still it isn't his fault if he has grown up like that."

Anni's a dark, quiet little girl who attends the Paulist school in Westwood and thinks America is "good." Her name is Anni because her mother's an individualist. Annabella was christened Suzanne, "and when in school they called Suzanne, twenty-five girls stood up. I thought, rather an ugly name which is yours, than one which belongs to all the world. So to my daughter I gave a name which nobody has in France. Now she is here, where everybody is Ann."

Next to her mother, her grandmother and Tyrone, Anni loves horses. She sits and draws horses, she pores over books on horses, she plans to marry a farmer with a hunded horses. She all but ran a fever when Tyrone brought her from Mexico a charo outfit—the long trousers and little jacket worn by native cowboys. Her mother puzzles over the source of this passion. Between herself and horses there is no affinity.

"A horse can be nice with everybody, but with me at once he begins to jump. He knows I'm scared. Oh, don't say it, please. Or if you say I am scared, then say I am ashamed too."

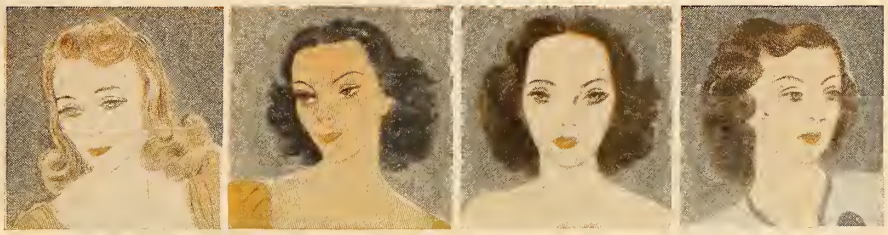
She's ashamed too. Want to make something of it?

I stopped to admire a bowl of azure stock on the patio table. "From the garden," said Ty. "We never have to buy flowers any more."

"No." Annabella slipped her arm through his. "We really were saving money when we bought that house."

Which drew her husband's best grin. Yes, Tyrone's happy. Not perfectly, of course. Who is? What bothers him now is the endless shooting schedule on "Blood and Sand." He still has four thousand bricks to lay.

Eduardo Blasi shows Jack L. Warner, Vice President of Warner Brothers, how they "tee off" down Argentine way.



BRENDA JOYCE, STARRING IN "PRIVATE NURSE", A 20th CENTURY-FOX PRODUCTION

BRENDA JOYCE TYPE...THE HONEY SKIN TYPE Amber skin with gold tints. For deep accent, Woodbury Cbampagne. For a rosy look, use Windsor Rose.

To deepen love interest

ACCENT YOUR TYPE

VIRGINIA BRUCE Type
The Cameo Skin Type
Fair skin with cameo-pink tints. For delicate bloom, use Woodbury Flesh. For radiant warmth, use Blusb Rose.

DOLORES DEL RIO Type
The Tropic Skin Type
Vivid skin, dusky or olive tones. For luscious richness, use Woodbury Brunette. For copper glow, Cbampagne.

MERLE OBERON Type
The Ivory Skin Type
Creamy skin with ivory tints. For striking clearness, WoodburyRachel.For deep, velvet tone, use Blush Rose.

MYRNA LOY Type
The American Beauty Blend
Lovely light-dark blend, peach tones. For accent, use Woodbury Windsor Rose. For exotic effect, Brunette.

To BRING out your full beauty, full appeal, heed Hollywood directors. They say—

"It's skin, not hair, that determines type." That's why they divide all beauty into 5 skin types. You are one of them.

And for each, Woodbury now creates powder shades that "light up" skin tones, make hair and eyes "come alive."

They're miraculously clear shades, for the new Woodbury Color Control clears away color dots, color streaks. And Color Control makes Woodbury fine, soft, clinging. Today, get fragrant Woodbury Powder. Discover new loveliness—new allure.

FREE { 6 Color Controlled Shades and tube of new Woodbury Foundation Creamfree—simply address penny postcard to John H. Woodbury, Inc., 8119 Alfred St., Cincinnati, O. (In Canada: Perth, Ont.)

WOODBURY Face Powder

SCREEN ALMANAC (Continued from page 62)

FRED ASTAIRE

Born Fred Austerlitz; Omaha, Neb., May 10, 1900. Contradictory hoofer of heels. Aspirations to 2nd baseman yet scores all his innings on dance floor. World-famous for grace yet quakes at ballroom dancing. Suave and smooth on surface yet shy and naïve inside. Orders custom-made clothes via mail, yet gets a faultless fit.

•

MARY ASTOR

Born Lucille Langhanke; May 3, 1906; Quincy, Ill. Serene . . . book collector (poetry to mystery thrillers) . . . willing and able—writes fiction, sketches, knits, speaks three tongues—but falls down on cookery . . . loves bric-a-brac . . . hates telephones . . . economizes on stamps . . . fond of pets . . . lives in sweaters, slacks and tailleurs.

•

MISCHA AUER

Born Mischa Ounskowsky; St. Petersburg, Russia; Nov. 17, 1905. To strangers, he's woeful; to his family, he's infatuated with nonsense, to bill collectors, he's automatically asleep; to tie salesmen, he's a weekly sucker; to real-estate agents, he's a renegade renter; to party-goers a chandelier-swinging ape; to sunglasses a kleptomaniac.

GENE AUTRY

Born Gene Autry; Sept. 29, 1907; Tioga, Tex. Everybody's pal (especially Champ's) . . . the real McCoy in Westerners from his genuine Texas drawl to his brightly colored cowboy shirts at $25 a throw . . . wants to die with his boots ($75) on . . . collector of spurs . . . campfire cook par excellence . . . non-drinker, smoker . . . charitable.

•

LEW AYRES

Born Frederick Lewis Ayer; Minneapolis, Minn.; Dec. 28, 1908. NEVER: . . . carries a watch . . . gambles . . . eats candy or big breakfasts . . . talks fast . . . whistles . . . uses dining room. ALWAYS: . . . wears 8-year-old tan sweater around the house . . . sticks to tweeds . . . lives on high hill . . . philosophical . . .

•

LUCILLE BALL

Born Lucille Ball; Butte, Mont.; August 6, 1911. Here's a redhead whose clothes are red withal; whose weekly allowance is $10; whose Great Love is hamburger with onions; whose gun shot South American crocodiles from the air; whose "rep" is best-dressed gal in Hollywood; whose tongue slips into torrid tiffs; whose chassis requires gobs of fattening foods!

LYNN BARI

Born Marjorie Bitzer; Roanoke, Va.; Dec. 18, 1920. Minister's daughter with all the virtues; none of the vices—studious, literary, quiet and unassuming but far from dull. Ex-medical student. Goes overboard every time for blue, chocolate, steak, potatoes, perfume, tailored togs and shoes.

•

BINNIE BARNES

Born Gittell Enouce; London, England; March 25, 1908. Born with tongue in cheek where it's stayed ever since. Youngest of 14. Peddled milk and modeled for Schiaparelli. Early in game learned value of a well-timed fib. Hates publicity and gives reporters run-around. Lives on quiet side, binding her books and real-estating at a profit!

•

JOHN BARRYMORE

Born John Blythe; Phila., Pa.; Feb. 15, 1882. Has had a "hell of a life" dodging women and bill collectors. "Never married a woman, they all married him." Ad libs lines, loves to shock audiences. Collects wives, old glassware, and risqué stories. Believes in astrology. Worked one day on art department of a newspaper . . . was fired.

•

LIONEL BARRYMORE

Born Lionel Blythe; Philadelphia, Pa.; April 28, 1878. Tho' he's a saviour to struggling actors, champ among back fence gabbers, best customer in sandwich shops, most eccentric relaxer in studio (he plays concertos on his dressing room piano), stranger to his comb, idolizer of prize fighters, he's just a scene-snatcher to brother John!

(Continued on page 72)

"QUINTS" GET FIRST CANDY

Naturally, Baby Ruth was selected as the first candy for the carefully nurtured Dionne Quintuplets! For Baby Ruth is pure, wholesome candy made of fine, natural foods.

You'll love its smooth opera cream center; its thick layer of tender, chewy caramel; its abundance of plump, fresh-toasted peanuts; its luscious, mellow coating.

There's deep, delicious candy satisfaction in every bite of Baby Ruth. It's rich in flavor, freshness and good food value. Join the "Quints"—enjoy a big bar of Baby Ruth today.

CURTISS CANDY COMPANY
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

"Baby Ruth, being rich in Dextrose, vital food-energy sugar, and other palatable ingredients, makes a pleasant, wholesome candy for children."

Allan Roy Dafoe, M.D.

Baby Ruth, rich in Dextrose—as well as other nutritious ingredients—helps overcome between-meal hunger and fatigue.

. . . . An American Favorite

STYLE YOUR SMILE

(Continued from page 49)

against further inroads. For skin may renew itself, hair grow in again and nails return after injuries, but once you lose a tooth—it's gone and, though store teeth are certainly better than none, they'll never take the place of the ones you grow yourself.

Crooked teeth may be a problem to some girls, but never forget this: that, although teeth may have been more easily aligned when you were in the pigtail and pinafore years—many a wonderful straightening job has been done long after girls have reached their exciting twenties.

Crooked teeth not only spoil a girl's appearance but also interfere with her digestion, because she can't chew properly. They're harder to clean and are consequently much more easily infected than straight ones. Uneven teeth frequently cause mouth breathing, which is definitely detrimental to good health as well as beauty. For these reasons, your best bet is to go to your dentist and have them attended to—now!

Check up on your teeth regularly. Some may need attention every month. Others may go on as sound as rocks for years—but don't take chances. Many a costly, painful and permanently disfiguring mouth condition can be prevented or indefinitely postponed by a little timely dental care.

If you will give your own precious teeth one half the good care that girls in Hollywood are required to devote to theirs, you'll have a winsome, spontaneous and self-confident smile that girls with dingy, unattractive mouthfuls can never hope to rival. For fashions may come and fashions may go—but the girl with a lovely smile is always in style.

COMEDY ON CANVAS

(Continued from page 32)

Decker tucked the canvas under his arm and marched out the door. He never received a cent for his work. The picture now hangs in his studio. He uses it as a target for his B-B gun. These incidents notwithstanding, Decker is very happy in Hollywood. He knows he'll never starve here. Whenever times get tough, he can always make a living painting Napoleons! He has more calls from actors, directors and producers with Little Corporal complexes than he does from anyone else! In fact, one actor, dying for an important role as the historic Frenchman, ordered himself painted as Napoleon though he looked no more like him than a dish of fried eggs. The actor took his portrait to the producer who was casting the picture—and, with no trouble at all, landed the greatest part of his career!

Decker devotes his leisure hours to serious painting. He hopes to exhibit a collection of these Decker-in-the-style-of-Decker canvases in New York before long. His favorite picture, however, is neither caricature nor serious. It is a sketch of his dearest crony, John Barrymore—a slightly risqué impression of the Great Lover, deep in a chair caressing a bottle, while overhead float two fat Cupids . . . Elaine Barrie and her devoted mother. Thus does one artist pay tribute to another in this startling movietown.

90% more Porous

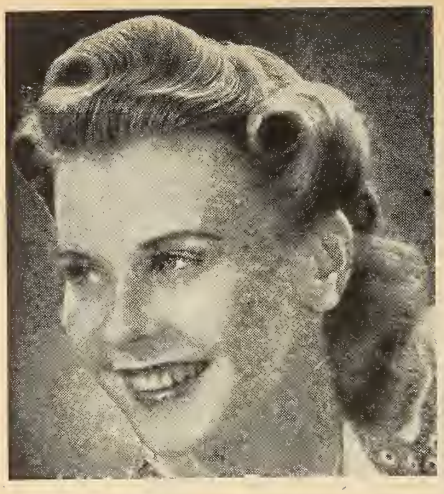
than its nearest competitor selling at the same price

THE FACTS: At both skin and room temperatures, Cutex Nail Polish showed on an average a transmission of 90% more moisture than its nearest competitor. With Cutex, moisture can get through to your nails!

Does your Nail Polish Check on all these Points?

- ✓ Is it porous—does it let moisture through?
- ✓ Does it flow on evenly—dry slowly enough for you to do a smooth job—hard enough to take daily wear and tear?
- ✓ Does it resist chipping and peeling? Does it stay lustrous and gleaming until you are ready for a fresh manicure?
- ✓ Do your nail shades flatter your skin tones as well as your latest costume colors?
- ✓ Is the brush always of even bristles, securely set in an aluminum shaft made in U. S. A.?

Get a bottle of Cutex Porous Polish today—and see for yourself that Cutex checks on all these points!



Only 10¢ in U. S. (20¢ in Canada). In exquisite new bottle, designed by Donald Deskey, famous New York Industrial Designer.

Northam Warren, New York, Montreal, London

BEAUTIFUL NEW BOTTLE 50% BIGGER

CUTEX POLISH is Porous

HAIR REGAINS ITS NATIVE COLOR

after one shampoo with Halo

THE heartbreaking thing about drab, colorless, mousey hair is what it does to the rest of you. You may be as pretty as a movie star, but if your hair-do lacks Oomph, so do you!

Halo is not a soap—it therefore leaves no dulling film to hide the natural luster and color of your hair. And with Halo you don't need a lemon or vinegar rinse.

See how Halo leaves your hair radiant, soft and easy to curl. How it gently cleanses your scalp, and leaves it fragrantly clean.

And Halo, because of its new-type ingredient, makes oceans of lather in hardest water.

Buy Halo Shampoo in generous 10c or larger sizes. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau

HALO SHAMPOO

Soft AS A BUTTERFLY WING

See how smooth, youthful, alluring your skin looks with HAMPDEN'S powder base. It helps conceal blemishes, subtly 'tints' your complexion, gives you a flattering 'portrait finish.'

POWD'R-BASE hampden

25c also 50c & 10c sizes

Over 15 million sold

OUR PUZZLE PAGE

PUZZLE SOLUTION ON PAGE 73

ACROSS

1. Popular actor in "Free and Easy"
7. He's "Tall, Dark, And Handsome"
12. Star of "That Uncertain Feeling"
18. Cagney's wife in "Strawberry Blonde"
19. Femme in "They Met in Argentina"
20. With Stewart in "Come Live With Me"
21. Bark
22. "Alfalfa" Sweitzer
24. Dancer in "Hit Parade of 1941"
26. Affirmative vote
27. Ratlike rodent
29. Hawaiian acacia tree
31. Charlie Ch - - -
32. Endeavors
34. Fawning
35. Silent day star
37. Husband of "Margie"
39. A list
41. "Nice Girl?"
43. A Hottentot
45. Robert Cummings pilots these
47. Blunder
48. Tracts
50. She's in "Phantom Submarine"
52. Distinguished Service Cross: abbr.
53. Mohammedan official
54. A "January" star
55. Actress in "Maisie Was A Lady"
59. She's in "The Bad Man"
63. Mrs. John Payne
64. Prevaricator
65. Impersonator
69. Femme lead of a film
72. S. American evergreen tree
73. Actor in "Buck Privates"
74. "The Wonder Dog"
77 & 80. What actress is pictured above?
82. Birth month of 77 Across: abbr.
85. Actor in "I Wanted Wings"
87. Shellac
89. Weirdly
91. On the sheltered side
92. Actress in "So Ends Our Night"
94. Irish singer
96. Heroine in Westerns
97. Lucille - - - -
99. "- - - Vegas Nights"
101. Clever
102. Learning
103. Evening: poet.
104. She's in "Knockout"
107. Dog star
109. Actress Munson
111. Orchestra leader in "Let's Make Music"
113. Consumed
115. Hardened
117. Emphasize
118. Fear
119. John Brown in "Santa Fe Trail"

DOWN

1. Yodeling cowboy
2. Nelson in "That Hamilton Woman"
3. Having two poles
4. Evelyn Venable: init.
5. Commentator for sports reels
6. Chinese pagoda
7. Comic in "You're The One"
8. Questioning exclamation
9. Director of "Kitty Foyle"
10. Song like Deanna sings
11. Femme in "San Francisco Docks"
12. Swedish comedian
13. Vamp of silent era
14. Printer's measure
15. Actor in "Mr. And Mrs. Smith"
16. Son of Agamemnon
17. Extinct government code
23. Hollywood studio
25. M-G-M's lion
28. Jeffrey - - - n
30. Stuttering comic in "Chad Hanna"
33. Man's name
34. Poem
35. Siren in "Virginia"
36. R - - inald Owen
38. Motion Picture Theatre Owners Ass'n: abbr.
40. Cameramen's organization: abbr.
42. Title
44. Sun god
46. Den
49. Sea eagle
51. Sick
53. Build
55. Parlor
56. Curvacious star
57. Polly in "Andy Hardy" series
58. Fields' daughter in "The Bank Dick"
60. Three: Rom. num.
61. - - - Grey
62. Before
66. Richard Calvert in "Nice Girl?"
67. The original "Charlie Chan"
68. A course
69. Producer of "Topper Returns"
70. Femme in "The Mad Doctor"
71. Comedienne in "Boys From Syracuse"
74. Triumphant exclamation
75. Star of "Arise, My Love"
76. Dancer scheduled for "Panama Hattie"
78. Mixed well
79. Old pronoun
80. Margaret Lindsay's real name
81. Where "Night Train" was filmed
82. Looking glasses
83. One to whom property is transferred
84. Railways: abbr.
86. Dolores - - - Rio
88. Symbol for strontium
90. Film with S. American setting
93. Yale
95. "Those Were The D - - -"
98. Tennis strokes
100. Box
102. Sweater girl
103. "- - - tasy"
105. Lya - - -
106. Summer: Fr.
108. Boyer's son in "Back Street"
110. "Sailor's L - - -"
112. Massachu - - tts
114. Actor in "Meet John Doe:" init.
116. Pronoun

OBJECT—GAYETY?

(Continued from page 29)

buried talents and made a new star. He badgered director William Wyler into badgering Warners to cast the Englishman as Howard Joyce in "The Letter." If he'd done nothing more, he'd have proven himself a gold mine. But he did lots more. Shortly after meeting Roz, for instance, he brought her into the Vincent fold.

He's blonde, blue-eyed, broad-shouldered, stands six-foot-one and has been described as "the laughing Dane." He got his British accent legitimately from the English school in which he was educated. His taste in clothes is quiet. Mostly he wears dark blue, and his ties are either solid in color or pin-striped. Beautiful cuff links are the only touch of sartorial glitter he allows himself. He lives in a swank apartment in a swank apartment house called Brandon Hall and drives a dark blue Buick.

Feature by feature he's pleasant looking rather than handsome, but when he smiles—which is often—girls' hearts do flip-flops. Like Rosalind's, his manner with people is casual, unaffected and friendly. The office force thinks he's swell. Hearing that one of them had smashed up her car, he produced a fat Christmas check to help repair the damage. You can't help liking a man who's both generous and thoughtful. Christmas, however, comes only once a year. It's his day-by-day thoughtfulness that wins people and keeps them won.

ONE'S inclined to credit any statement of Rosalind's, including the one that she doesn't expect to become Roz Brisson. Doubt is bound to sneak in, on the other hand, because of the etiquette among movie players which requires them to deny marriage or divorce until after the accomplished fact. Which still leaves much to be said on her side.

Their attitude toward each other in public smacks more of good fellowship than of orange blossoms. They don't hold hands, they don't cast sheep's eyes. And while that may mean nothing more than a reluctance to wear their hearts on their sleeves, lovers, however discreet, generally manage to give themselves away.

There is also the well-known Hollywood practice of blowing a bubble into a gas-filled Zeppelin. Someone spied a new car in Brisson's garage on Christmas Day. Next morning the gossip columns commented how sweet of Roz to give Fred a car for Christmas. He bought the car himself. Her Christmas gift to him was nothing more extravagant than a desk set —"without a picture frame even," she says dryly.

Then there was the story of the family dinner party, prettily embroidered as the occasion on which the elder Brissons bestowed their blessing on the young folk. Simply and accurately, Fred's parents arrived, Roz was interested in meeting them as she'd have been interested in meeting parents of any good friend, so the four had dinner together.

If they ever do marry, it's likely to be after sober thought and for keeps. Roz isn't one to go for an in-and-out marriage. Lively spirits don't keep her from being level-headed. She comes of level-headed stock. Her father told his large family of girls that as long as they were studying, he'd be glad to have them at home. He wouldn't, however, brook a bunch of idle, bridge-playing, lying-in-

(Continued on page 73)

U. S. SALESGIRLS FIND...

more minutes of flavor in Beech-Nut Gum

. . . AND 2 OUT OF 3 PREFER THE DELICIOUS PEPPERMINT FLAVOR OF BEECH-NUT GUM

PROOF of the extra-lasting goodness of Beech-Nut Peppermint Gum was established by a test among salesgirls in 29 cities.

An independent research organization questioned 245 salesgirls as follows. Each girl was given two different brands (Beech-Nut and one other, both unidentified). Each was asked to tell how long she thought the flavor lasted and which stick tasted better.

The results. According to the girls, Beech-Nut's peppermint flavor lasted, on an average, 14% longer than the peppermint flavor of all other brands tested. Also—2 out of 3 girls preferred the peppermint flavor of Beech-Nut to that of other brands.

Get Beech-Nut today—in the bright yellow package. It's delicious—stays delicious.

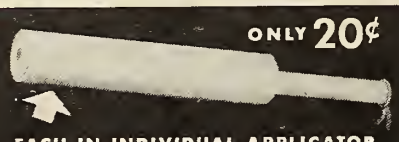
They said:
more minutes of flavor



Why I switched to Meds

—by an airline hostess

We airline hostesses are modern-minded. So I've always preferred internal sanitary protection—though I admit I hated to pay the extra cost. That's why I was so tickled when I learned that Modess had brought out Meds—a new and improved tampon—at only 20¢ a box of ten. Meds certainly are miles ahead. And they're the only tampons in individual applicators that cost so downright little.

EACH IN INDIVIDUAL APPLICATOR

MADE BY MODESS

Meds

INTERNAL SANITARY PROTECTION

NO DULL DRAB HAIR

when you use this amazing

4 Purpose Rinse

In one, simple, quick operation, LOVALON will do all of these 4 important things for your hair.

1. Gives lustrous highlights.
2. Rinses away shampoo film.
3. Tints the hair as it rinses.
4. Helps keep hair neatly in place.

LOVALON does not dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, in 12 different shades. Try LOVALON.

At stores which sell toilet goods

25¢ for 5 rinses

10¢ for 2 rinses

SCREEN ALMANAC (Continued from page 68)

FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW
Born Fred Bartholomew; London, Eng.; March 28, 1924. Six feet and gangly . . . wants to grow up in a hurry and be a top star like his idols Tracy and Garbo . . . loves America for its swing music, football, hot dogs, ice cream and girl friends . . . inheritor of quick Irish tongue from his Irish grandma; an affinity for fisticuffs from Eire.

•

WARNER BAXTER
Born Warner Baxter; Columbus, Ohio; March 29, 1893. Half yachtsman, half farmer; propensity for good clothes . . . fuss budget about his belongings . . . hates to be waited on and abhors female servants . . . hires a chauffeur but always drives own cars . . . cabinful of pelts to prove his prowess as a hunter . . . concoctor of famed chile con carne.

•

WALLACE BEERY
Born Wallace Beery; Kansas City, Mo.; April 1, 1889. Rough stuff over a tender heart. Passionately fond of kids and has adopted four. Crazy about pups. Hunts, flies his own plane and tinkers around in his home-built machine shop. Would walk a mile for a Chaplin film. Steers clear of night clubs. Murders King's English.

•

RALPH BELLAMY
Born Ralph Bellamy; Chicago, Ill.; June 17, 1905. That western drawl's a phony; he's an ex-city slicker! Used to live in a Greenwich Village garret and got to hate all of N. Y. except Bronx Zoo. Shuns night clubs because he can't dance a step and rarely drinks. His only vices: chain-smoking and reckless driving. Loathes hats and bow-ties.

•

ROBERT BENCHLEY
Born Robert Benchley; Worcester, Mass.; Sept. 15, 1889. Businessman with a twinkle. Having swell time. Frank and bellowing laughter. Prize raconteur and life of any party with his dead-panned witticisms. Eye-opening versatility — author, actor, playwright, columnist, critic, commentator and authority on private lives of newts and polyps.

•

CONSTANCE BENNETT
Born Constance Bennett; New York, N. Y.; Oct. 22, 1905. A great friend to those she trusts . . . to be happy means to be working and well-dressed (she's one of the best-garbed ladies in films) . . . animal fancier . . . temperamental . . . keen business acumen . . . works like a trojan for British War Relief . . . owner of huge cosmetic firm.

JOAN BENNETT
Born Joan Bennett; Palisades, N. Y.; Feb. 27, 1910. Hates cheerful early-morning risers . . . likes delicate perfume, French furniture, New York, sensible hats, down hair-do, dogs, rose quartz . . . fastidious gourmet . . . super-sensitive . . . honest . . . positively refuses to light three on a match, walk under ladders or disregard No. 13 . . . initial-wearer.

•

JACK BENNY
Born Benny Kebelsky; Chicago, Ill.; Feb. 14, 1895. Everything's "marvelous." Where there's Benny, there's a cigar. Right eye's bluer than left. Perennial blue and gray double-breasted suits. Changes his shoes thrice a day. Famous cowboy, yet he's rarely seen astride a horse. Such bad taste in socks and ties, his wife has to pick 'em.

•

EDGAR BERGEN
Born Edgar Berggren; Chicago, Ill.; Feb. 1, 1903. Inventor of shoe polish that resisted water but didn't polish and lemonade-ice cream drink (failure) . . . likes parties . . . holds private conversations with Charlie and won't let anyone else handle him . . . gives him a room and closet of his house . . . member of the American Society of Cinematographers . . . crazy about women and caviar.

•

INGRID BERGMAN
Born Ingrid Bergman; Stockholm, Sweden; Aug. 22, 1917. Crazy about music, corn on the cob and the color white. Gets a kick out of New York, double decker busses, drug stores for their triple layer sandwiches and yummy sundaes. Doesn't smoke. Uses no makeup or nail polish. Systematic. Frightened by autograph seekers. Cool as a cucumber!

•

JOAN BLONDELL
Born Rose Blondell; New York, N. Y.; Aug. 30, 1909. A regular gal (they call her "Blondell" on the set) . . . perpetually sun-burned . . . so superstitious she refuses to start a picture on Tuesday . . . two-fingered pianist . . . wants to drive a hook-and-ladder . . . scared of airplanes . . . bad memory . . . sleeps long and hard and on tummy . . . pyjama-proponent.

•

HUMPHREY BOGART
Born Humphrey Bogart; New York, N. Y.; Dec. 25, 1900. A twentieth century realist . . . no Art for Art's sake . . . likes to make money and does . . . despises all crooners, book jackets and new clothes . . . thinks nudism is sensible . . . plays a keen game of chess . . . likes to study political science . . . has suppressed desire to be great pianist.

(Continued on page 94)

(Continued from page 71)

bed-till-noon women about the house. When they quit school they could go out and earn a living.

Such training tells. Roz earns a good living now, but she doesn't splurge. Her house is bought and paid for. It's a white brick affair behind a white brick wall, New England style, attractive, exquisitely furnished but with a modest seven rooms. She'll tell you it's on the wrong side of the tracks which means that it's not up among the haughty estates with their pheasants and nurseries. She's recently installed a paddock swimming pool —and if you don't know what that is, it's the cheapest kind you can get. She had tons of salt poured into it to remind her of the ocean, and at Christmas time she hangs sleigh-bells on the door to remind her of New England winter

She has no chauffeur. Her medium-priced coupé of a soft shade of green is driven either by herself or by Hazel, her maid. Hazel used to work for Garbo, but Garbo doesn't keep a maid between pictures. When she asked Hazel to return after one such interlude, Hazel didn't guess she could leave Miss Russell.

Fashion experts included Roz last year among the ten best-dressed women. She considers smart clothes an essential adjunct to her profession and spends a reasonable proportion of her salary on them. But she doesn't come out in a new mink coat each year, and she spends more thought than money on her wardrobe. Many of her things are bought from Irene, the famous Hollywood designer.

She doesn't go in for much jewelry, either costume or real. And she loves crazy hats. Her hobby is collecting luggage, but she's no snob. A burglar broke into her sister's Florida home while Roz was visiting and took among other treasures her matched bags. She proceeded to New York, laden with cardboard boxes and hat-sacks, ignoring the sniffs of porters all the way.

She's worked out a routine of her own to restore her balance when things go wrong. She hops into a car, leaves the green spaces of Beverly and drives downtown where people stand waiting for busses and streetcars, where stenographers snatch their lunch at drugstore counters, where tired men and women relax in a two-by-four park. "What have you got to kick about?" she asks herself grimly and goes on home.

Nothing stands in the way of marriage for her and Fred. So—

Is Roz telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Have they their own good reasons for waiting?

Will they pack off to Yuma the day this story appears? You figure it out!

Solution to Puzzle on Page 70

R	O	B	E	R	T		C	E	S	A	R		O	B	E	R	O	N
O	L	I	V	I	A		O	H	A	R	A		L	A	M	A	R	R
Y	I	P		C	A	R	L		M	I	L	L	E	R		Y	E	A
	V	O	L	E		K	O	A		A	S	E		A	I	M	S
O	I	L	Y		M	O	N	T	E		T	O	M		R	O	T	A
D	E	A	N	N	A		N	E	G	R	O		P	L	A	N	E	S
E	R	R		A	R	E	A	S		A	N	I	T	A		D	S	C
			E	M	I	R						L	O	I	S
M	A	U	R	E	E	N						L	A	R	A	I	N	E
A	N	N	E											L	I	A	R
E	N	A	C	T	O	R						H	E	R	O	I	N	E
			T	O	L	U						A	L	A	N
A	C	E		N	A	N	C	Y		K	E	L	L	Y		M	A	R
H	O	L	D	E	N			R	E	S	I	N		E	E	R	I	L	Y
A	L	E	E			D	E	E		R	E	G	A	N		I	R	I	S
	B	A	L	L		L	A	S		S	L	Y		L	O	R	E
E	E	N		O	L	Y	M	P	E		A	S	T	A		O	N	A
C	R	O	S	B	Y		E	A	T	E	N		I	N	U	R	E	D
S	T	R	E	S	S		D	R	E	A	D		M	A	S	S	E	Y

Are Your Teeth Alluring, Too?

the Answer's on the tip of your tongue

1 Make the Tongue-Test...

Run the tip of your tongue over your teeth...inside and out. Feel that filmy coating? That's Materia Alba... and it doesn't belong on teeth! It collects stains, makes teeth dull, dingy-looking.

2 Your Tongue Tells You

Your tongue tells you what others see... the filmy coating that dims the natural brilliance of your teeth, your smile. And it's this filmy coating that makes teeth look dull... bars your way to romance.

3 Switch to Pepsodent with Irium

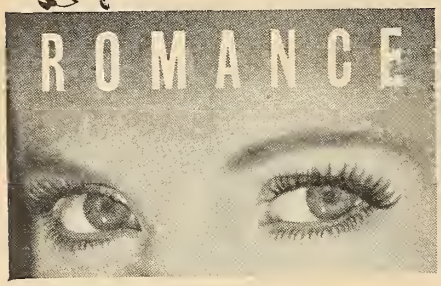
Pepsodent will remove that filmy coating that clings to teeth... the coating your tongue can feel, your friends can see. Only Pepsodent contains IRIUM... super-cleansing agent that loosens and flushes away sticky particles that cling to teeth.

Use Pepsodent regularly. Because Pepsodent also contains an exclusive, new high-polishing agent that safely buffs teeth to such a shiny smoothness, this filmy coating slides off before it can collect and stain.

Only Pepsodent gives you this wonder-working combination that makes your teeth feel so smooth, look so bright. Make sure of the loveliness of your smile. Get a tube of Pepsodent with IRIUM today.



—and for double-power cleansing... PEPSODENT'S NEW 50-TUFT TOOTH BRUSH

Make your eyes whisper

ROMANCE

Beautiful eyes win compliments and 'dates'! Bring out the glamour in yours by using Kurlash, the clever eyelash curler. It curls your lashes upwards—making them appear longer and eyes wider, brighter! Requires no skill—performs "A Miracle in a Minute", without resort to heat or cosmetics! . . . $1.00

IMPORTANT: Get acquainted with KURLENE, the oily base cream that makes lashes appear darker, more luxuriant! Used with KURLASH, KURLENE makes your lash-curl last longer, too 50c

KURLASH

The Only Complete Eye-Beauty Line

THE KURLASH COMPANY, INC.

Rochester, N. Y. • New York City • Toronto, Canada

Send 10c in coin or stamps to Jane Heath, Dept. 5E, Kurlash Co., Inc., Rochester, N. Y., for trial tube of Kurlene. Receive free chart analysis of your eyes.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

Color: Eyes_____ Hair_____ Skin_____

LOOK YOUNGER!

Don't let gray hair put you on the sideline of Life. In this streamlined business and social world—you've got to look young! And why not? Millions of men and women have licked the handicap of Gray Hair—quickly and inexpensively.

Right today, in the privacy of your room, you can comb through your hair a color that will take years off your appearance. You can give your hair the desired shade so gradually even your friends will never guess. It won't rub off, wash off, change the texture of your hair or interfere with your wave.

And it's so easy and inexpensive. Just ask at your drug or department store for your shade of Mary T. Goldman Gray Hair Coloring Preparation—just as millions have been doing for 50 years. Competent medical authorities have pronounced it harmless. No skin test is needed.

Make up your mind to look YOUNG! Get that bottle of Mary T. Goldman's today! It has a money-back guarantee. Or, if you want further proof, clip out the coupon below. We'll send you ABSOLUTELY FREE a complete test kit for coloring a lock snipped from your own hair.

Mary T. Goldman Co., 8424 Goldman Bldg.
Saint Paul, Minn. Send free test kit for:
☐ Black ☐ Dark Brown ☐ Light Brown
☐ Medium Brown ☐ Blonde ☐ Auburn

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

"WHO? . . . ME?"

(Continued from page 43)

the practice field every day. You usually had to untangle the whole squad before you could find the ethereal blonde at the wheel.

The fact that she was expelled from school was due only incidentally to football. It was really a cumulative penalty, she thinks. Three things happened to her in a row. Being easily bored by pedantic loquacity, she rose during assembly one day to interrupt the orating principal with the friendly and candid information that he'd told them the same story in another speech just the day before. This did not start the week off very well. Then they had a test in geometry. The captain of the football team sat just in front of her and, unlike many athletes, was a whiz at mathematics. Little Virginia wasn't. The geometry teacher was the football coach and she didn't want to disappoint him by turning in a blank paper. So she copied the captain's answers very carefully and neatly. Next day when the coach came to class with the exam papers, she saw detection in his eye and before he had a chance to mention the incident, she got up and said, "Yes, I know now it wasn't right, but it was so easy and I thought I ought to put something down. I'm sorry."

She never quite knew why he didn't flunk her. Maybe it was their mutual devotion to the squad. Then when the team went out of town to play, she persuaded her parents to take her to the game. It required more cuts than she was entitled to, considering the demerits that she'd already won and she returned to learn—joy of joys!—that she was expelled. The family was nice about it, and she was very happy. After a wonderful week untrammelled by studies, she got an abrupt summons to return to school. It developed that the musical organizations of all high schools in the state were to have a meeting complete with programs, and the Fargo school couldn't take part because she was their only accompanist. So they had to ask her to come back. She returned in triumph to the spotlight of the piano stool and once more looked angelic as music flowed from her finger tips. She felt that way, too, because everything they had blamed her for had simply happened to her while she was acting with the best of intentions. At last, one day the names of seniors who were to get diplomas were read—and lo, the name of Virginia Briggs was included among the others.

"Who?—Me?" she gasped.

"Yes," said the principal with a look of relief, "You."

Shortly after that her father's business went bad, and he took the family to Los Angeles. One day her aunt sat looking at her thoughtfully and then suggested she might stand a chance in pictures. "Who?" echoed Ginny a bit appalled. "Me?" But she did nothing about it. Finally, her aunt took her to meet director William Beaudine, who also looked at her thoughtfully and put her under personal contract at $25 a week. She was little more than an extra in a couple of films for Fox. But after a singing test, Beaudine placed her at Paramount for $75 a week. She continued to get only $25 because he said he had to get back his investment. It was, she avers, her first understanding of the relation of capital to labor. She and her mother and father and a couple of young brothers lived on the weekly twenty-five. This was the period in which J. Walter Ruben first saw and vainly tried to talk with her.

A little later, Jack Harkrider, designer for Florenz Ziegfeld, arrived on the Coast to scout talent for the screen version of "Whoopee!" He, too, looked at her thoughtfully and signed her as a showgirl. At this bit of good luck, her appendix began acting up. But she could not afford an operation until she'd got the money from the job. It was nip and tuck between the appendix and the finish of the work. But eventually she wakened from the anaesthetic with the knowledge that, even had she died for it, she'd held out long enough to be able to pay the hospital bill. By the time she was up and at it again, she found herself without a sponsor or a contract and with a very strong feeling that Hollywood was not all.

On the set of "Rage in Heaven," stand-in Betty Brooks and director Richard Thorpe help benevolent leading-lady Ingrid Bergman sort donations of tinfoil collected for the benefit of the Los Angeles Children's Hospital.

Harkrider, who was back on Broadway working on a new Ziegfeld show called "Smiles," saved the day. The next thing she knew she was headed for New York and a spot in the Ziegfeld décor at $90 a week, which looked like affluence.

They put some ostrich feathers on her head, a few spangles here and there, and hung a long shimmering train from her shoulders and Ginny Briggs, the erstwhile taxi-maiden for the Fargo footballers, was Virginia Bruce, a Ziegfeld lovely. She also posed for Neysa McMein, who not only painted her for magazine covers but invited her to her home on Long Island and introduced her to a lot of nice people. Life suddenly looked rosy.

It was at this time that she began to get a reputation as one of the most enthusiastic eaters on Broadway. "Men really enjoyed seeing me eat," she relates and adds that she still lays claim to the title of the star best fitted to cope with a good steak and accessories. But at the time when the stage door Johnnies were first discovering the delicate looking gal's gastronomic capacity, they were puzzled by something else.

THEY wondered why she'd never go anywhere that required you to dress up. It just didn't seem natural. In New York as in Fargo, she specialized in the safety of numbers and members of her Broadway squad knew each other. So they got together to solve the problem. They didn't know that a good part of her salary was going to the family on the Coast, but by a process of working through all possible answers and probing their mutual heart's girl friends, they discovered she didn't have an evening dress. They figured she couldn't be offended if they remedied the situation as a group. So, one man chipped in the cost of a dress, another shoes and such things, and a third incidentals and in no time at all, she appeared in a diaphanous blue thing and some new slippers—as desirable a Cinderella as was ever bedecked on a cooperative basis. She managed to become the toast of Broadway without getting burned. When "Smiles" closed, she went into another Ziegfeld show, fittingly called "America's Sweetheart."

Once she actually got a couple of lines to speak. That was when two chorus girls, each of whom had a line on the stage, started slugging each other in the dressing-room. They fought tooth and nail—pulled hair, bit and clawed. "I get terrified when women fight," reports Virginia. "It's different when men sock each other—seems more natural—but the sight of women doing it frightens me." So, she cowered in a far corner of the room and was found there by the frantic stage manager. He'd separated the battling chorines, who were not in fit condition for their one-line speeches, and he gave her both lines that night. But the next day, the girls had made up, so the lines were restored to their former owners.

She was scheduled for a new production for the next autumn called "East Wind," and the saga of the Bruce on Broadway would probably have continued if she hadn't gone home to visit the folks in the summer. Hollywood suddenly opened its eyes, took another look, and M-G-M had her make a film test. They offered a contract, but her mind was set on going back where she'd enjoyed it. She started for New York, leaving a decisive "No" behind her. She stopped off in Fargo to see relatives and the old gang and found a telegram upping the salary of the film offer. She

GONE FOR THE DAY
(and night)

Many husbands grow indifferent because of that may ruin romance... "LYSOL" helps prevent this risk!

"ONE NEGLECT"

WHEN he dashes away for the 8:15, she never knows whether he'll return at dinner time—or in the wee small hours of the morning.

Once upon a time he was an ardent husband. But now . . . in spite of her beauty and charm and her perfect score as a mother and housekeeper . . . she is only another lonesome, neglected wife. (Why doesn't someone tell her about "Lysol" for feminine hygiene?)

Few things can cool a husband's love as quickly as negligence about intimate, personal hygiene. It's a fault few husbands can forgive.

More women should use "Lysol" regularly for intimate bodily daintiness. "Lysol" is cleansing, deodorizing, germicidal. Probably no other preparation has been so widely used by generations of women for feminine hygiene because . . .

1. Non-Caustic . . . "Lysol", in proper dilution, is gentle, efficient; contains no free caustic alkali. 2. Effectiveness . . . "Lysol" is a powerful germicide, active under practical conditions; effective in the presence of organic matter (dirt, mucus, serum, etc.). 3. Spreading . . . "Lysol" solutions spread because of low surface tension; virtually search out germs. 4. Economy . . . Small bottle of "Lysol" makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. 5. Odor . . . The cleanly odor of "Lysol" disappears after use. 6. Stability . . . "Lysol" keeps its full strength no matter how long it is kept, or how often it might be left uncorked.

Lysol Disinfectant

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

PASTE THIS COUPON ON A PENNY POSTCARD

What Every Woman Should Know

SEND COUPON FOR "LYSOL" BOOKLET

LEHN & FINK PRODUCTS CORP.
Dept. M.S.-541, Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Send me free booklet "War Against Germs" which tells the many uses of "Lysol".

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

Copyright, 1941, by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

The old witch put the beautiful princess to sleep before she had time to open her new package of Dentyne (that chewing gum with the truly royal flavor).

Along came the prince and woke her up. Then he spotted Dentyne and cried, "Say, what's this?"

"Have you too been asleep?" laughed the princess. "Dentyne helps keep teeth white and sparkling. But I chew it mostly because it is so spicy and very delicious. Try some."

"Mm—say, it's good!" said the prince, "extra chewy, too."

"Especially made that way," the princess explained, "to give your mouth the exercise it needs, and to help keep teeth free from tartar and decay. Your dentist will tell you so."

"Smart girl," cried the prince. "Will you be my queen?"

Moral: You'll enjoy a royal flavor-treat when you taste fresh delicious Dentyne. And you'll like its smart handy flavortite package.

6 INDIVIDUALLY WRAPPED STICKS IN EVERY PACKAGE

HELPS KEEP TEETH WHITE... MOUTH HEALTHY

said, "No," again. Finally her parents called persuasively on long distance and she gave in. When she reached the Coast again, it looked as though she'd made a mistake. All she did for a time was make tests for parts Jean Harlow always played. Finally, she was in "Sky Brides" and "Winner Take All."

But our fragile heroine had not been the prize eater of all Broadway for nothing. It developed that John Gilbert was to make a picture called "Downstairs," which required a girl who could wade into a bowl of solid meat stew, talk at the same time and still be a fit subject for the camera. The director thought of Virginia. When Gilbert refused to make the test with her, she had one of the few moments of real fury in her life. They put her up against the difficult job of doing it with the director who casually read Gilbert's lines from a chair offstage. She attacked the goulash with vigor, but her mind was on the lines, not on the way she was eating. When it was over, she ran into Gilbert and made a few pertinent remarks about his being too great to bother helping with the test. Well, she got the part and she also got Gilbert. They were married and a little later she retired from films. And after that, they had a daughter—Susan Ann. But two years of married life convinced the parties most concerned that a divorce was in order. So eventually she got that, too.

From the time she returned to the screen, she began to gain real momentum. The same Jack Ruben, who had tried to talk to her when she first went to Hollywood called for a couple of dates, but she said she was busy those evenings. She really was, but he didn't know that and stopped calling. She made "The Mighty Barnum," played the spitfire showgirl in the picture called "The Great Ziegfeld" with all the authority of an unscarred survivor of actual backstage battles, and was called one day for "The Bad Man of Brimstone." The persistent Mr. Ruben had sent the call. He was to direct it.

"You're to play a rugged frontier character and ride a horse—"

"Who?—Me?" she asked, adding several exclamation points to the question. Aside from the fact that her only frontier experience had been in the front line of the Ziegfeld troops, she had once ridden a horse. Perhaps the verb ridden is too strong. The equine, which was a western pony out in Fargo, hadn't really let her get that far. She'd instantly taken a header off his back and had been scared of horses ever since. Somehow, Miss Bruce failed to see herself as a cowgirl — which is understandable. But somehow, Mr. Jack Ruben persuaded her to take the part and, while they were on location up in Utah where the evenings were long enough for uninterrupted conversation, she discovered that he was right about a lot of things, including the fact that it would be nice for them to get married. But he didn't convince her that she and horses were cut out for each other's company. She did another horse opera later called "Let Freedom Ring," and once again the horse thought the title meant "Bounce that blonde." Now whenever a studio press release reads, "Endangered by the wild plunging of an excited horse, Miss Virginia Bruce was badly shaken up today—" it's no publicity blurb. It simply means that she and the horse have met and parted in their usual abrupt fashion. She just can't get firm with the horse and he knows it.

She is, in fact, very no good at exerting discipline over anything or anyone, including seven-year-old Susan Ann who, like her father, is full of mischief. "Every time I try to scold her, it seems so foolish I get to laughing," explains her mother. "She and Jack understand each other perfectly, so now he's taken over the responsibility of training her—which is very good for Susan." And Susan reports she thinks it's swell.

As you can clearly see by the above notes, a lot of things have happened to Miss Virginia Bruce. But conversation still brings out a good deal of Ginny Briggs of Fargo.

"When she does this, she thinks she's sophisticated," says her husband, doing a neat imitation of her tipping her nose in the air, looking haughty, and poking at her back hair with a languorous gesture. "She thinks she's sophisticated—and heaven knows she ought to be—but as a matter of fact she's the most naive thing alive."

"Who?" says Virginia, and far be it from us to suggest that the lazy little smile has anything but acquiescent blue-eyed wonder in it, "Who?—Me?"

MY DATES WITH MICKEY

(Continued from page 25)

no more like "Andy Hardy" than the man in the moon!

On the way to the Freemans we discussed each other's pictures, told each other how wonderful we were. And that's the last time we even mentioned, "shop." Mick never talks about his work, thank goodness. There is nothing duller than an actor who spends the evening telling you what line he spoke perfectly that day. And don't think they don't!

Well, we got to the Freemans. Mick didn't even take a cocktail. We each had a coke. He never takes a drink when he's with me, or any other time that I know of. I guess he's changed, recently. He tells me I've slowed him down, but I think it's more that he's awfully keen about his physical condition. He has to be, with all the work he does.

On the way home fro mthe Follies, we stopped in at Delhavens, in Beverly Hills, and had some ice cream. We always stop in for ice cream on our way home. That was a Monday night. Mick wanted to know if I would see him Wednesday night. I said "Yes."

Wednesday night we had to go to a Mothers' Club party. Most of the mothers of the movie stars have a club, you know, and this was their big shindig. Mick was the whole show, as usual. People have accused him of being a show-off, but he isn't really. The only reason he ever puts on an act in public is because he feels he's getting a terrific salary and that it's the public who have put him where he is. He feels he should give them what they want at all times. People expect so much of him. It's "Do an imitation, Mickey," "Do this, Mickey," "Do that," wherever he is. He never gets any rest, and he never lets people down in any way.

Driving over to the Mothers' Club that night, Mick apologized for being such a poor conversationalist. He isn't a poor conversationalist. He knows so much about music and world conditions. But he isn't glib. When he apologized, I said,

"I'm not good, either—don't take it so hard!"

Mick picked that up like a snap of the fingers. "That's an idea for a song," he said, "Don't Take It So Hard!" He has written the song, too. He played it for me the other night.

We really talk surprisingly little when we have dates, Mick and I. There will be long stretches of time when neither of us says anything. We quit apologizing for that after the second date.

We have had dates three or four times a week for the past five months. In all that time, we have only been to a couple of night clubs.

Mick hates to go anywhere formal. So do I. He hates me to wear hats, and he never wears one himself. His socks are not too loud, and he always wears "Clark Gables"—you know, those spiffy sports jackets with accented shoulders. He saw Clark Gable wearing one once, and nothing would do but he must have the same. Now he owns plenty of them. He doesn't like me to wear gloves, either. That's because he likes to hold my hand, of course, but that's as far as it ever goes. He never gets fresh. On New Year's Eve we were at a party, and when midnight came he kissed me on the cheek. That's the only time he ever kissed me, or even tried to. I have never had to say, "Mick, I'm sorry. I don't like that."

He senses what my standards are. I think a girl can make that very clear on a first date. He knows I can't go any place I want to go, that I can't get home any time I want to, that 11 o'clock is curfew for me. And he never resents it or makes fun of it. He seems to like it!

He is very protecting, too. When we are out, he watches out for me like a mother hen. One night someone was telling a story and when they came to the end and said, "that son ——" Mick broke in, that quick little way of his, "You mean son of a gun, don't you?"

He tells me, "When I'm around you, Linda, I'm not going to let them use any of that language."

He is awfully unselfish, too. Whenever we are going out, it's always, "What do you want to do?" If there's any "falling in" to be done, he does it.

I hate corsages, so Mick never sends me any. He hates to send them, anyway. Says they're about as routine as washing your face every day. When we go to some big studio affair, he sends me those brown orchids with yellow veins. He thinks they suit my coloring better.

HE notices everything—whether I have a new bag, a different shade of hose, a new lapel clip or an unusual color scheme.

Most of our dates consist of having dinner at his house in the Valley. Just his mother and stepfather, Mick and me. There's usually a discussion about the races. Or we sit around and listen to records. Mick goes in for classics and I do, too. We don't dance very often, though Mick is a wonderful dancer, as everyone knows. He is very sensitive about his height. I always wear low-heeled shoes when I go out with him. I bought four pairs with low heels that I call my dates-with-Mick shoes.

We talk a lot about horses, too. Especially Mick's horse which Mr. Mayer gave him. Mick's been training him, goes to the track and clocks him. Mickey christened him "In On Time!"

Once or twice we've gone to Ocean Park and had fun on the roller coasters. Mick's just like any boy about hamburgers and hot dogs. Eats them like crazy! But when we go out in public, it's not a date, it's a Personal Appearance. Why, when you drive down Wilshire Boulevard with him, he calls every newsboy by name and gets home looking like a newsie himself, armed to the teeth with papers.

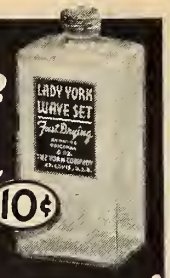
Not long ago, we had a date and Mick went to sleep! We had gone to the sneak preview of "Men of Boys Town," and were both pretty tired. I had done some of my biggest scenes in "Blood and Sand" that day. All the way over, Mick had been entertaining us with his wonderful imitations of Wendell Willkie and of commercial announcers on the radio. We saw the picture and, as usual, Mick said nothing about himself. He thought it was a wonderful picture. It is, and it's his picture—but not a word out of him. On the way home, I said "Now, Mick, you must relax . . . go to sleep, please!" So he just put his head down and slept all the way home! How's that for a date with Mickey?

Believe me, he is a hard worker, Mick is. I went to a broadcast rehearsal with him recently. There wasn't a quip out of him. He knew he was getting $5,000 for that broadcast and he delivered. He's a very serious-minded boy. Level-headed, too. He knows how fleeting Fame can be, and often is. He wants to be a director when he's a little older and he'd like to have an orchestra of his own.

We are not in love. We are a little romantic, of course, on account of our ages. We are perfectly happy in each other's company, but that's as far as it goes with me.

For, much as I like Mick, I wouldn't marry him, or anyone, for a while. I can imagine falling in love with him, oh, yes, and I just hope he doesn't get some fluffy, dizzy little thing when he does marry. Because he wants a home and family. Mickey really has ideals.

Constance Moore and Brian Donlevy, Paramount player, appearing in Paramount's current hit "I Wanted Wings"



Popular Hollywood stars cool off with America's popular flavor...

And Pepsi-Cola is your best bet to keep cool, too! From border to border and coast to coast, Pepsi-Cola's good taste is winning millions. FREE—Send now for the new Pepsi-Cola recipe booklet. Write to Pepsi-Cola Company, Long Island City, N. Y., Dept. E1.

Pepsi-Cola

Pepsi-Cola is made only by Pepsi-Cola Company, Long Island City, N. Y., and is bottled locally by authorized bottlers from coast to coast.

Girls Rave about this Amazing New WAVE SET!

In a recent survey, girls were asked why LADY YORK WAVE SET was their First Choice. Here are typical answers:

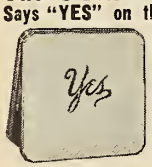
"Easier to apply". . ."Dries more quickly". . ."Wave lasts longer". . ."Leaves no white flakes". . ."Has a lovely odor". . . "Doesn't leave the hair stiff and pasty". . . "Isn't sticky, or messy". . ."Hair combs so silky-soft and fluffy". . ."Gives hair a more beautiful, natural-looking sheen."

You, too, will be enthusiastic about Lady York Wave Set. Comes in clear and 6 lovely, harmless tints (see coupon). If your 5 & 10¢ store or drugstore doesn't have it, send coupon and dime for full-size bottle, postpaid. Money back if not satisfied.

LADY YORK WAVE SET 10¢

Mail Coupon for a Bottle!

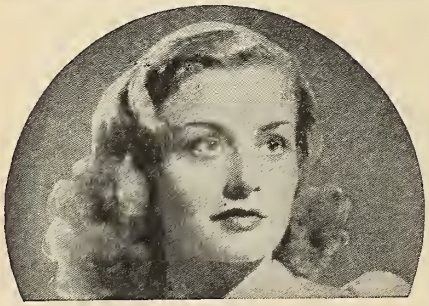
York Company, St. Louis, Mo.—Enclosed is 10¢ (coin or stamps), for a full-size bottle of Lady York Wave Set, postpaid. Check Kind Wanted: CLEAR, Medium Brown, Med. Auburn, Med. Henna, Med. Black, Golden Blonde, Lt. Blonde.



Name_____

Street _____

City_____ St._____ (MM)



The COMPACT HIT of the YEAR!

Says "YES" on the Front Side, "NO" on the Back

You'll make a big hit with your friends when you show them this lovely novelty compact! Beautiful lustrous enamel in white, pink or blue, with contrasting lettering and beveled gold edges. Well built, sturdy construction.

Send $1.00 (plus 10¢ for postage) to Joan Alden, 509 Fifth Ave., N.Y.C.

Her Blonde Hair Was Growing Dark

Until She Discovered This Special New 11 Minute Home Shampoo

A single wash with this new shampoo made specially for blondes makes hair shades lighter, helps keep light hair from darkening and brightens faded blonde hair. Called BLONDEX, it is not a liquid but a fragrant powder that quickly makes a rich cleansing lather. This instantly removes the dingy, dust-laden film that makes blonde hair dark, old-looking. Next, it gives it attractive lustre and highlights and keeps that "Just-Shampooed" look for a whole week. Fine for children, it is absolutely safe. Bears the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval. BLONDEX costs but little to use and is sold at 10c, drug and dept. stores.

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on films not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

Picture	General Rating
*Adam Had Four Sons (Columbia)	3★
All This, and Heaven Too (Warners)	4★
*Andy Hardy's Private Secretary (M-G-M)	3★
Angels Over Broadway (Columbia)	2½★
Arise, My Love (Paramount)	4★
Arizona (Columbia)	4★
Back Street (Universal)	3★
Bank Dick, The (Universal)	3★
Bitter Sweet (M-G-M)	3★
*Blondie Goes Latin (Columbia)	C 2½★
Blondie Plays Cupid (Columbia)	C 2½★
Boom Town (M-G-M)	3½★
Buck Privates (Universal)	2½★
Case of the Black Parrot (Warners)	2½★
Chad Hanna (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Charlie Chan at the Wax Museum (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Charter Pilot (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
*Cheers for Miss Bishop (United Artists)	4★
Christmas in July (Paramount)	3★
Colorado (Republic)	2½★
Come Live With Me (M-G-M)	3★
Comin' Round the Mountain (Paramount)	2★
Comrade X (M-G-M)	3★
Dance, Girl, Dance (RKO)	2★
Dancing on a Dime (Paramount)	2★
Devil Commands (Columbia)	2★
Devil's Island (Warners)	2½★
Devil's Pipeline, The (Universal)	2★
Diamond Frontier (Universal)	2★
Dr. Kildare's Crisis (M-G-M)	2½★
Down Argentine Way (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Dulcy (M-G-M)	3★
Earl of Puddlestone (Republic)	2★
East of the River (Warners)	2½★
Ellery Queen, Master Detective (Columbia)	2½★
Escape (M-G-M)	3½★
Fantasia (Walt Disney)	C 4★
Father's Son (Warners)	C 2★
Five Little Peppers in Trouble (Columbia)	C 2★
Flight Command (M-G-M)	3★
Four Mothers (Warners)	3★
Free, Blonde and 21 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Gallant Sons (M-G-M)	2½★
Gambling on the High Seas (Warners)	2½★
Ghost Breakers, The (Paramount)	3★
Girl from Avenue A (20th Century-Fox)	C 2★
Girls Under 21 (Columbia)	2★
Glamour for Sale (Columbia)	2★
Golden Fleecing, The (M-G-M)	3★
*Golden Hoofs (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Gone With the Wind (M-G-M)	4★
Go West (M-G-M)	C 2½★
Grapes of Wrath, The (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Great Dictator, The (United Artists)	3½★
Great McGinty, The (Paramount)	3½★
Great Profile, The (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
*Hard-Boiled Canary, The (Paramount)	2½★
Haunted Honeymoon (M-G-M)	3★
He Stayed for Breakfast (Columbia)	2½★
High Sierra (Warners)	3½★
Hit Parade of 1941 (Republic)	2½★
Honeymoon Deferred (Universal)	2½★
Honeymoon for Three (Warners)	3★
Hudson's Bay (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Hullabaloo (M-G-M)	2★
If I Had My Way (Universal)	C 3★
Invisible Woman, The (Universal)	3★
Irene (RKO)	3★
Isle of Destiny (RKO)	2★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
It Happened to One Man (RKO)	3★
I Want A Divorce (Paramount)	3★
*I Wanted Wings (Paramount)	3½★
Kit Carson (United Artists)	2½★
Kitty Foyle (RKO)	4★
Knute Rockne—All American (Warners)	C 3½★
Lady Eve, The (Paramount)	3½★
Lady in Question, The (Columbia)	3★
Lady with Red Hair, The (Warners)	3★
Land of Liberty (M-G-M)	3★
Letter, The (Warners)	4★
Let's Make Music (RKO)	3★
Life With Henry (Paramount)	C 2½★
Little Bit of Heaven (Universal)	C 3★
Little Men (RKO)	2½★
Little Nellie Kelly (M-G-M)	C 3★
Long Voyage Home, The (United Artists)	4★
Love Thy Neighbor (Paramount)	3½★
Lucky Partners (RKO)	3★
Mad Doctor, The (Paramount)	2½★
Maisie Was a Lady (M-G-M)	2½★
Mark of Zorro, The (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Meet Boston Blackie (Columbia)	2½★
Meet the Missus (Republic)	2★
Mexican Spitfire Out West (RKO)	2★
Michael Shayne, Detective (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Midnight (Paramount)	3★
Mr. and Mrs. Smith (RKO)	3★
*Monster and the Girl, The (Paramount)	2½★
Moon Over Burma (Paramount)	2½★
Mortal Storm, The (M-G-M)	4★
Murder in the Air (Warners)	2★
My Little Chickadee (Universal)	2½★
My Love Came Back (Warners)	3½★
New Moon (M-G-M)	3★
*Nice Girl? (Universal)	3½★
Night at Earl Carroll's, A (Paramount)	2½★
Night Train (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Nobody's Children (Columbia)	2½★
North West Mounted Police (Paramount)	C 3½★
Northwest Passage (M-G-M)	4★
No, No, Nanette (RKO)	2½★
Oklahoma Kid, The (Warners)	3★
One Million B. C. (United Artists)	C 3★
One Night in the Tropics (Universal)	2½★
Opened by Mistake (Paramount)	2½★
Phantom Raiders (M-G-M)	2★
Philadelphia Story, The (M-G-M)	4★
Pioneers of the Frontier (Columbia)	2★
Playgirl (RKO)	2★
Pride and Prejudice (M-G-M)	3½★
Pride of the Bowery (Monogram)	2½★
Quarterback, The (Paramount)	2½★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Queen of the Yukon (Monogram)	2★
Ragtime Cowboy Joe (Universal)	2★
*Reaching for the Sun (Paramount)	3½★
*Ride, Kelly, Ride (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Road to Singapore, The (Paramount)	2½★
Road Show (United Artists)	2½★
Robin Hood of the Pecos (Republic)	2½★
Romance of the Rio Grande (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Safari (Paramount)	2½★
Sailor's Lady (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Saint in Palm Springs, The (RKO)	2½★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Sandy Gets Her Man (Universal)	2★
Sea Hawk, The (Warners)	3½★
San Francisco Docks (Universal)	2½★
Santa Fe Trail (Warners)	4★
*Scattergood Baines (RKO)	2½★
Second Chorus (Paramount)	3½★
Seven Sinners (Universal)	3★
Six Lessons From Madame La Zonga (Universal)	2★
Sky Murder (M-G-M)	2★
Slightly Honorable (United Artists)	3★
Slightly Tempted (Universal)	2★
So Ends Our Night (United Artists)	3½★
Son of Monte Cristo, The (United Artists)	3★
South of Pago Pago (United Artists)	2½★
So You Won't Talk? (Columbia)	2½★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal)	C 2½★
Sporting Blood (M-G-M)	2½★
Spring Parade (Universal)	C 3★
Stanley and Livingstone (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Strawberry Blonde (Warners)	3½★
Stronger Than Desire (M-G-M)	2½★
Susan and God (M-G-M)	3½★
Swiss Family Robinson (RKO)	C 3★
Tall, Dark and Handsome (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Texas Rangers Ride Again (Paramount)	2½★
They Drive by Night (Warners)	3★
They Knew What They Wanted (RKO)	3½★
Thief of Bagdad, The (United Artists)	C 3½★
Third Finger, Left Hand (M-G-M)	3★
This Thing Called Love (Columbia)	3½★
Those Were the Days (Paramount)	C 2½★
Three Smart Girls Grow Up (Universal)	C 3★
Tin Pan Alley (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Tobacco Road (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Tom Brown's School Days (RKO)	C 3★
Too Many Girls (RKO)	3★
Tower of London (Universal)	2★
Trail of the Vigilantes (Universal)	3★
*Trial of Mary Dugan, The (M-G-M)	2½★
Tugboat Annie Sails Again (Warners)	2½★
Victory (Paramount)	3★
Virginia (Paramount)	3½★
Westerner, The (United Artists)	C 3★
Western Union (20th Century-Fox)	3★
You'll Find Out (RKO)	3★
Young As You Feel (20th Century-Fox)	2★
You're The One (Paramount)	2½★
Youth Will Be Served (20th Century-Fox)	2★

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 53)

Casting Note

We like the way John Barrymore squelched a heckler the other day. John was getting a terrific rib from an ancient graybeard who's known him since he was a toddler. "John," said the graybeard, "your father was a great actor, and so was his father before him. But you! You only pretend to know what it's all about—and I don't like you for it!" "Zat so?" snapped the Profile, "Well, sir, the only thing I like about you is that you're a great part for Lionel!"

Shopworn Angels

If ever Mrs. Ray Milland comes upon her husband appreciatively eyeing the models in the Gown Department at I. Magnin's, she won't pack her bags and head for Reno. Instead she'll just hurry up to him, peck him on the forehead, and say: "Oh, you darling!" A woman of great forgiveness? No, not exactly. It's just that Mrs. Milland knows that Ray's favorite indoor sport is shopping for fancy duds for her. The girls in the Ladies' Wear Division all know him and marvel at his superb taste as well as his astonishing memory for his wife's measurements. They're thrilled by his liberality, also. No wonder. The last time Ray went off on a shopping binge, he returned home with a half-dozen street frocks—and a $275 dinner dress! Alexander Korda's another who braves the tape measure and stray pin brigade, to give his wife a hand. Whenever Merle's too busy to get around to the stores, Korda orders her up a batch of clothes, ranging from the fluffy to the severely tailored type—and has yet to select an item that doesn't fit her perfectly!

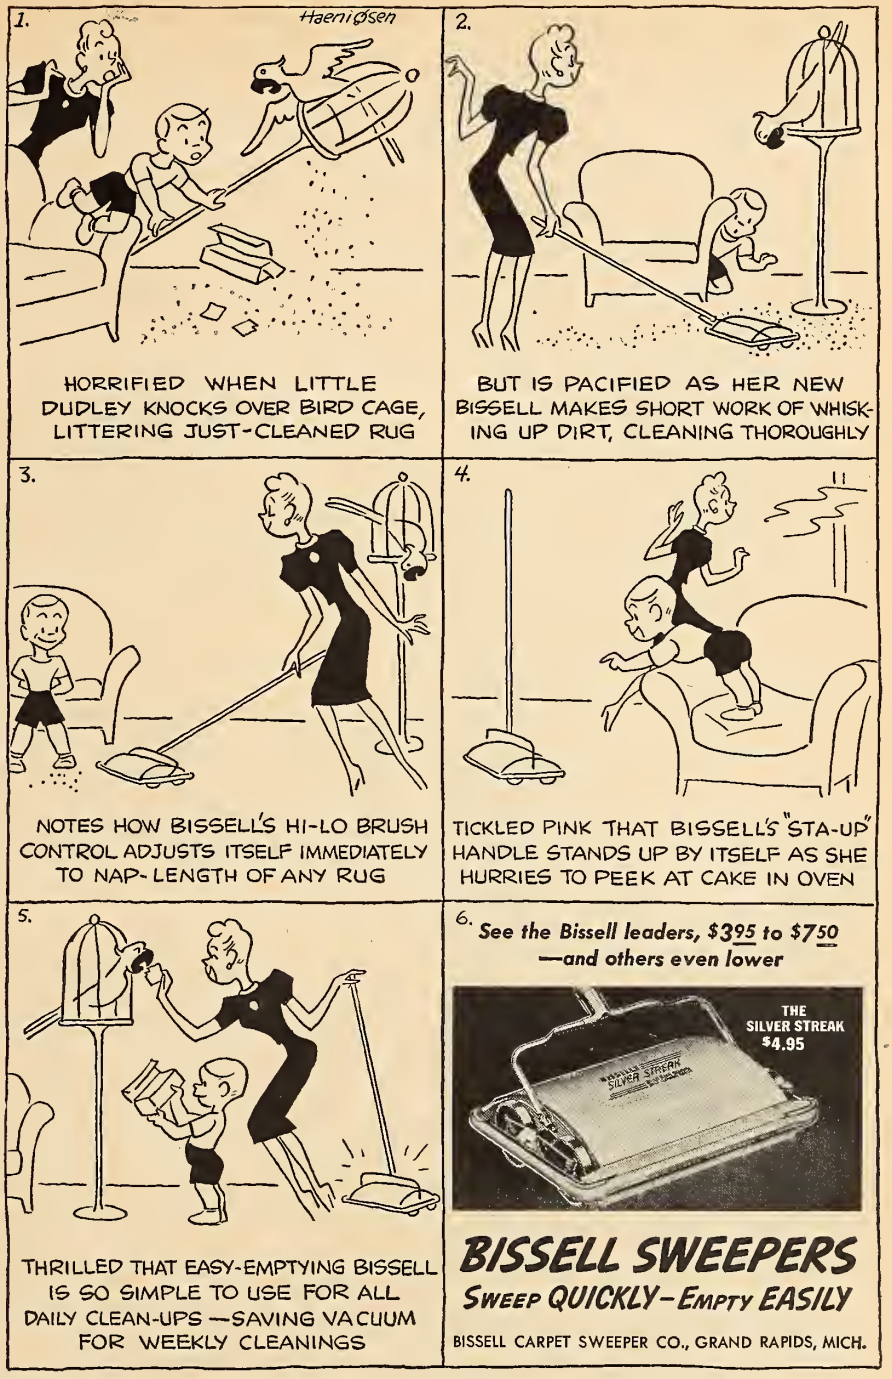
Pride is Thicker Than Dollars

The Milwaukee Militants who sound like a bunch of Nazi Bundists or Kuklux Klan-ers have sent more than one studio head diving for the blessed relief of an aspirin tablet. Though they don't deck themselves out in white sheets or swastikas, the Militants have been working like devils to destroy what the studios have spent thousands of dollars to build. We mean the name Dennis Morgan. The Militants, you see, are a group of civic-minded citizens of Milwaukee who are banded together for the purpose of boosting famous Milwaukeeans. Dennis is one of them. So, for years, whenever a Dennis Morgan picture has come to town, the Militants have gone around, buzzed in theatre owners' ears, and up in lights has gone the name 'Stanley Morner,'—the original Morgan moniker. Hollywood's been screaming, but they haven't been able to do a thing. Only recently did they find a way to deal with the offenders. They made Dennis Morgan a full-fledged star—and the Militants have docilely agreed, now that their Stan has officially arrived, to bill him with his Hollywood tag.

Charity Begins in Bed

Autograph hounds grouped outside of Ciro's were startled the other evening when a young woman broke their ranks and rushed up to Joan Crawford, exclaiming, "Miss Crawford! Miss Crawford! I just had a baby in your bed!" Equally surprised were the saleswomen at a local department store when a shabbily dressed man hurried up to the star, gripped her hand, and cried: "How can I ever thank you! I spent two weeks in your bed, healing a broken leg!" It's a tribute to Joan that neither the autograph hounds nor the salespeople will know, until they read this column, why their favorite was playing hostess to perfect strangers in anything as intimate as a bed. Certainly Joan will never tell them she is supporting four permanent rooms in a local hospital where the needy may go and free of charge receive the best of attention in addition to treatment from Joan's own private, and very expensive, physician. It's things like that that make Hollywood proud of Hollywood.

Under the Influence



The Hollywood Reporter reports this one: Director Rouben Mamoulian spent an entire afternoon rehearsing Linda Darnell and Ty Power in a scene for "Blood and Sand." Next morning they ran through it again, and Mamoulian stopped them after one try. "Linda," he said, "you're not doing it the same way as I told you to yesterday—you have different touches. How come?" To which Linda replied, "Well, I was out with Mickey Rooney last night—he suggested 'em."

Vital Statistics

Carole Landis probably has the most interesting statistics in town. Besides her 1½ inch fingernails and her waspish 23 inch waist, Carole boasts a chest measurement of 37 inches. Asked by the studio publicity department if she wouldn't rather have the figure released as 36, Carole exclaimed, "Indeed not! I measure 37—and I don't care who knows it!" The Hays office seems to care who knows it, however. They sent a special memo to Fox officials reminding them that all portraits of the seductive Carole must be sent to them for a purity seal before they are turned loose on the impressionable public.

Love At First Hate

Of all goofy distinctions! Among his friends, W. C. Fields is famous as the man who loves to hate! Yep, we're giving it to you straight. Unlike most men who, at his age, come to enjoy the gentle things of life, W. C. brazenly disdains the birds, the bees and the flowers, and finds his pleasure in despising as many objects as is humanly possible. This adorable trait was best revealed when the columnist wife of a man high up in American politics came to Hollywood on a recent lecture tour. Fields has had fun detesting the lady for years. So, on the night of her appearance, he dug deep into his notoriously thrift-bound pockets, pulled out the enormous sum of $2.50, and had the time of his life sitting in the very first row, just looking up and hating her!

Perfect Host

All of Mr. Fields' loathings aren't as highly specialized as the one we mentioned above. The poppy-nosed comic doesn't like people in general. To keep them away, his strange brain has devised enough wild schemes to scare the German army. His most ingenious, we think, is the one he uses on well-meaning—but uninvited—guests. When he hears the unsuspecting innocents tripping blithely up his front walk, W. C. peels his eye through a slit in the door to see who's coming, and then scurries to his desk and turns on his "gadget machine." This infernal contraption crashes dishes, rattles tin cans, and plays a recording of himself having a battle royal with a screeching woman. The unwelcome guests, startled by the racket, are generally so afraid of becoming involved, they turn on their heels and scramble away, while the delighted Fields, chuckling blissfully, returns to his solitude and sarsaparilla.

Class-Conscious

Time was when all an actor needed to get along was a pair of broad shoulders and a silky line. But not any more. Now he apparently needs culture, too! From faraway New York comes the astonishing news that Victor (Muscle Man) Mature is sneaking away from his débutante worshippers and spending his free afternoons taking special courses at Columbia University. And right here in Hollywood, Dottie Lamour's boy friend, Greg Bautzer, is resisting her allure and spending several evenings a week going to night school! If this "back-to-the-classroom" movement keeps up, we look for the Wednesday Afternoon Debating Society to become the event of the week, and the Public Library the Ciro's of the future! Can't you just see Betty Grable and George Raft armed with butterfly nets, disappearing into the hills to pursue specimens for next Tuesday's biology period?

16-Cylinder Palace

Automobile owners who boast that their $4,000 buses are equipped with everything but the kitchen sink, have nothing on Preston Foster. His car is equipped with a kitchen sink! And it has a full-sized bed, a stove, an air-conditioning unit, a bar, an electric light plant, and hot and cold running water, besides! Pres paid $2,500 to have these trifling conveniences built into his station wagon (which he uses for hunting trips) and next year, if times are good, he'll install a swimming pool!

Hollywood Economizes

If you're one of those people who thinks Hollywood producers are so dizzy with wealth, they merrily toss their dough into the wind and never give a care, you ought to take a trip to Warner Bros. You'd find out how really mistaken you are. At the brothers' studio, economy has reached a high that not even your stingy Aunt Elsie could hope to beat. On one stage, Edward G. Robinson as "The Sea Wolf" is bossing an enormous ship called the "Ghost." But the "Ghost" is just Errol Flynn's old "Sea Hawk"—with a new set of sails! And two stages down, Brenda Marshall is winding up "Singapore Woman," which the studio decided to film simply because it had all the rubber plantation sets that were used in "The Letter"—and didn't want them to be wasted!

Budget Blues

Should followers of the Brenda Marshall-Bill Holden romance desire some really cozy gossip about their favorites, they can snub all newspaper columnists, radio commentators and studio informants. For intimate details, all they need do is go to the little man who does the laundry for the Brown Derby. And how does he know all? By simply studying the table-cloths! Brenda and Bill both receive weekly allowances from their business managers (Brenda gets $20; Bill gets $35) and, in order to keep their finances straight, the kids invariably spend their dinner hour outlining their budgets on the Derby linen. The laundry-man deciphers their pencil marks, and so far has discovered (a) that Brenda had to sacrifice her ice cream for a bottle of perfume; (b) that she then lost the money in one hour at Santa Anita; and (c) that the last time they dined at the place Brenda and Bill had to pool their funds to pay the check because Bill had spent everything up to his last quarter on shells for his new gun!

Paper Passion

When you go to the movies and watch a sizzling love scene between Clark Gable and Hedy Lamarr, or Marlene Dietrich and George Raft, maybe you wonder who dreamed up their scorching dialogue and passionate embraces. Maybe, if you ponder on it long enough, you visualize a writer who is pale and poetic—or perhaps a two-fisted ladies' man who knows what women want (verbally, that is)—and gives it to them. Well, here's where you get disillusioned. Scenario writers are too often pretty prosaic fellows who fix the car on Sunday and like to play poker with the boys on Monday. Furthermore, many of them are ashamed of their work. No matter how beautifully it pours from the lips of Charles Boyer, Errol Flynn or Ginger Rogers, they think it's sissy stuff. In a survey taken among them it was learned that male writers are so shy, they usually write their steaming love passages alone, behind locked doors and then sheepishly slip their manuscripts to a typist. Women scenarists, on the other hand, are less self-conscious. They boldly dictate the tender sequences, complete with commas and colons, before rushing off for a lettuce-and-tomato sandwich, or a date with Hattie, the hairdresser.

Angora Anguish

Has anyone reported this one about Rosalind Russell? Roz was in a swank gown shop, the other afternoon, looking for a new dinner dress. She discovered a knock-out number and would have bought it immediately. But one glance at the price tag stopped her. The dress was just too, too expensive. Regretfully, Roz hung it back on its rack and started for home. But all the way, the thought of it nagged her. The dress was a stunner, and she wanted it badly. Finally, damning her budget, she turned on her heel and sped back to the shop to buy it. There, to her chagrin, she saw her beloved gown—on the body of another woman! Poor Roz, you say? Well, save your sympathy. The unbeatable Russell promptly went into a huddle with the salesgirl and learned that the other woman, a regular customer, was allergic to angora. Grabbing an angora sweater, Roz pulled it over her head and proceded to flit about the room. As the tickly fluff flew into the air, the other woman began to choke and cough and, at last, desperate for relief, slipped out of the gown and fled from the store. A few minutes later, Rosalind Russell plunked down her check and, smiling like a babe, left the shop with the gown tucked neatly under her arm!

Disa and Data

The reason for Jack Carson's long face these days is the buck-a-week allowance dictated by his wife . . . Since beginning work in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," Spencer Tracy refers to himself as "we" . . . Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner and Ida Lupino have all had wisdom tooth trouble in the past few weeks . . . George Raft has a hatter fly over from Texas when he wants some new lids designed . . . Judy Canova puts sugar in her milk . . . The John Waynes have tagged their new daughter Melinda . . M-G-M is training twenty deer and twelve bears in their studio zoo, for use in "The Yearling" . . . Mary Astor is dabbling with short stories . . . Loretta Young's kid sister, Georgianna, is grown up enough to have fun with Dead Ender Billy Halop . . . Mary Martin will be off on a "classics and swing" concert tour come autumn . . . Maria Ouspenskaya, whose weight hopped from 90 to 92 pounds, is dieting to take off the "excess fat" . . .

DRAW ME!

TRY FOR AN Art SCHOLARSHIP

Copy this girl and send us your drawing — perhaps you'll win a COMPLETE FEDERAL COURSE FREE! This contest is for amateurs, so if you like to draw do not hesitate to enter.

Prizes for Five Best Drawings — FIVE COMPLETE ART COURSES FREE, including drawing outfits. (Value of each course, $185.00.)

FREE! Each contestant whose drawing shows sufficient merit will receive a grading and advice as to whether he or she has, in our estimation, artistic talent worth developing.

Nowadays design and color play an important part in the sale of almost everything. Therefore the artist, who designs merchandise or illustrates advertising has become a real factor in modern industry. Machines can never displace him. Many Federal students, both men and girls who are now commercial designers or illustrators capable of earning up to $5000 yearly have been trained by the Federal Course. Here's a splendid opportunity to test your talent. Read the rules and send your drawing to the address below.

RULES: This contest open ONLY TO AMATEURS, 16 YEARS OLD OR MORE. Professional commercial artists and Federal students are not eligible. 1. Make drawing of girl 5 inches wide, on paper 7 inches wide. Draw only the girl, not the lettering. 2. Use only pencil or pen. 3. No drawings will be returned. 4. Print your name, address (town, county, state), age and present occupation on back of drawing. 5. All drawings must be received by Apr. 30, 1941. Prizes will be awarded for drawings best in proportion and neatness by Federal Schools Faculty.

FEDERAL SCHOOLS INC

5991, Federal Schools Building, Minneapolis, Minnesota

IS YOUR HAIR A HALO OF Loveliness?

Does your hair glisten with lustrous highlights that reflect lovely, soft tones in your complexion? It will—when you use Nestle Colorinse. Colorinse helps remove the dull soap film that robs hair of its natural lustre. This magic-like rinse, created by Nestle, originators of permanent waving—rinses sparkling highlights into the hair—gives it a new richer tone and a beautiful silkier sheen. Colorinse leaves hair softer and more manageable—helps curls stay in place longer. Not an ordinary dye nor a bleach, Colorinse washes out easily with shampooing. Whatever the color of your hair, there is a shade of Colorinse to glorify it. Choose your own shade from the Nestle Color Chart at beauty counters. For best results with Colorinse, use Nestle Liquid Shampoo.

10¢ for package of 2 rinses at 10¢ stores

25¢ for five rinses at drug and department stores

Jackie Cooper won't go to college for three more years. He wants to take advantage of his movie popularity while he's got it . . . Hedy Lamarr's one-time spouse, Fritz Mandl, provided the bankroll for the Ilona Massey-Alan Curtis opus, "New Wine" . . . Herbert Marshall and Nat Wolff, former and present husbands of Edna Best, have been seen dining and night-clubbing together . . . Joan Crawford's favorite song is "None But the Lonely Heart." She plays a recording of it between "takes" . . . Dennis Morgan is hotly denying those divorce rumors . . . Intimates say the stork is bound for the Justin Darts (Jane Bryan) . . . Richard Ainley, quitting Hollywood for service with the RAF, has broken his engagement to Ouida LaBranche, Basil Rathbone's niece, "out of fairness to her" . . . John Qualen, who will never be forgotten for his role as the frightened film father of the quints, will soon pay them a visit—his first . . . Nils Asther and Norman Kerry, last-generation idols, are back in Hollywood being bombarded with picture offers . . . Milton Berle authors a column called "The Berle-ing Point."

A Tip From the Stars

Are actors generous tippers? That is a question everyone asks us, so we decided to ask someone who really knows—a parking lot attendant at Ciro's. Here's what we found out:—On the whole, the stars are very liberal. If they are solid, substantial family men like Gary Cooper, Eddie Robinson and Clark Gable, they slip the car-boys a 50c piece before claiming their flivvers. If they're play-boys of the George Raft-Franchot Tone calibre, they never tip less than a dollar. And if they're plain, ordinary guys who don't care about impressing the gal on their arm, they hand over a quarter. The car-boys sometimes run into cheap-skates, too. When that happens, they deal with the offender in a novel way. They wait until a mob of important people are within earshot, and then sweetly inquire: "And what kind of car are you waiting for, Mr. er . . . .?" Or if the star is extremely tight-fisted, which is very rare, they handle him as one of the boys did the other evening. When a famous leading man passed him a five-cent piece, the car-boy handed it back, saying: "Keep it. I don't need it as badly as you do!"

Grand Reunion

As we go to press, the Lupe Velez-"Big Boy" Williams marriage plans are still at the "maybe-we-will, maybe-we-won't" stage. "Big" is confiding to pals that the whole deal is no go because Lupe bawls him out in public and he won't take it. And Lupe is saying there'll be no wedding, because she's rich enough to remain single! Frankly, we don't know what to make of it, or of a little incident which occurred the other evening. It was fight night at a local sports stadium when Johnny Weissmuller, Lupe's "ex," wandered in and found himself seated directly behind his former wife and her new boy-friend. Johnny flushed and fidgeted for several minutes and, the next time we looked, was seated a half-dozen rows farther back!

Board and Rumors

Ask Anne Shirley and Cesar Romero how easy it is to start a scandal without realizing it! On second thought, you'd better not ask them. They may not even know that a few years ago rumors of a secret marriage between them were galloping up and down the country! The whispering started when eagle-eyed fans noticed some very interesting details in a series of "at home" pictures published in two different magazines. In one magazine, Cesar was shown swimming in "his" azure pool, relaxing in "his" leafy patio, and descending "his" winding staircase. That was all right. But the other magazine ran photographs of Miss Shirley taken in her home—and Anne was seen cavorting in the very same pool, knitting in the very same patio and waving from the top step of the very same staircase! What the magazines forgot to mention was that both Cesar and Anne leased apartments in the same building—and their monthly rent checks gave both the right to call the outside surroundings "home!"

Warning To Warners

Speaking of photographing stars in their homes—Joan Leslie's neighbors are still wondering what happened to her the other afternoon. The neighbors saw a huge truck back up to the curb, and watched wide-eyed while dozens of heavily-shrouded articles were carried into Joan's house. And an hour later they were just as wide-eyed when the stuff was all carried out again. It seems, Warners wanted some "at homes" of Joan, but felt that her home was too comfortable and cozy-looking to match the public's idea of a glamour girl's nest. So, on order from the higher-ups, the studio prop department was raided and the necessary plush-stuffed divans, for rugs and chaise longues were set up within the Leslie portals. After the "shooting" was over, the boys again piled the borrowed "oomph" on their truck and toted it back to the studio. Here's a tip for the Warners, though. If they want to avoid anything like the Romero-Shirley buzzing, they'd better be darned certain they don't pick up the same bits of atmosphere when they go over to Eddie Albert's for pictures!

Better Luck Next Time

At two o'clock one morning, last week, Lloyd Nolan was awakened by a telephone call from the woman who manages the Beverly Hills apartment building he owns. The woman's voice was frantic. "Mr. Nolan!" she cried. "There's been a murder! Come right over!" Lloyd, who has often portrayed a detective on the screen, saw his chance to play an honest-to-gosh Sherlock. Yanking on his pants, he grabbed equipment ranging from magnifying glass to hunting rifle, and rushed to the scene of the crime. There he found the landlady, pale and trembling. She pointed to the ceiling of her bedroom. In the center was a growing red blotch—significant, frightening. "I'll start right on this," whooped Lloyd. "But call the police." In a few minutes, with the aid of the law, Lloyd led the expedition upstairs. Breathing hard, he smashed in the door, and there, on the floor, on its side, gushing crimson, lay—a bottle of California port wine which had fallen from a table! "Nuts," groaned Lloyd. "Give me a good, old movie murder with a script. I never did like comedy anyway!"

Comes "the Dawn"

When you see Paulette Goddard, Olivia deHavilland and Charles Boyer in "Hold Back The Dawn," you might remember that the authoress, Ketti Frings, used to interview these same stars for magazines like Modern Screen. Miss Frings understands movie audiences pretty well and, when she sold her little drama to Paramount, she specified that it be called "Yonder Lies Paradise" because she thought fans would go for that. But Paramount had another idea. They pointed out that since the saga concerned an American girl who was able to spend only one night a week with her refugee husband below the Mexican border—she would want that night to be a long one, and, if the husband were Charles Boyer, she would certainly want to "Hold Back The Dawn!"

ALL-AMERICAN HEART THROB

(Continued from page 35)

At least three of the Martin accomplishments are the envy of rival glamour boys.

First off, he has a way of wooing that pays dividends. Knowing his ladies, he sends them gifts he's sure they'll like, dances attendance on them, notices what they're wearing. Secondly, he's a careful dresser, smooth but not flashy. Finally, he's a dancer of parts, as Miss Turner discovered to her delight.

The Tony Martin who is giving romance the brush-off knows exactly what he is doing. For one thing, with Metro expecting big things from him, he is at the pinnacle of his career. He's going to town.

He's been waiting for this chance to vanquish Hollywood for ten years.

Back in 1931, a Metro scout heard him sing on the Lucky Strike program and was so impressed with his voice that he induced him to come to Hollywood. Nothing wonderful happened. Three years later he was tested for a part opposite Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee." Studio bosses nixed the proposition because of his youth.

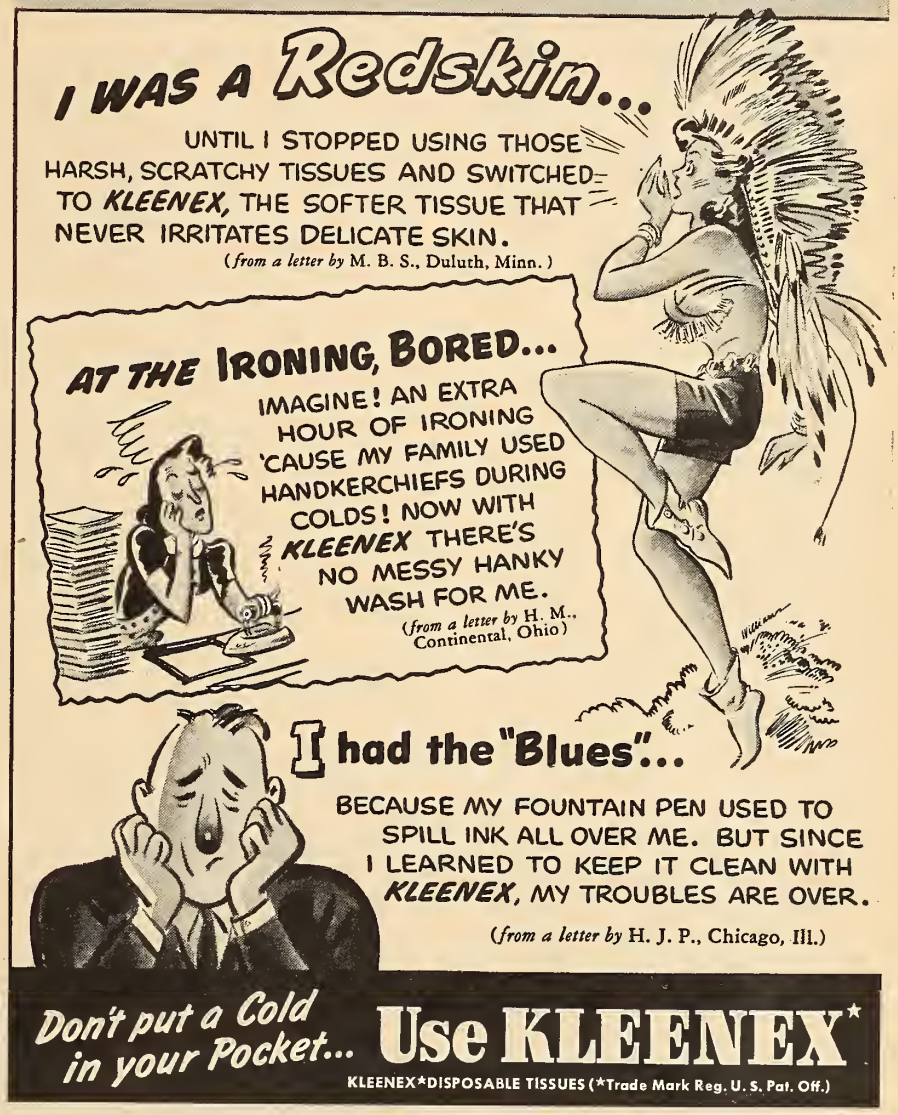
Early in 1936 he was crooning with an orchestra in San Francisco when an RKO scout spotted him. He was given a contract. For six months he hung around and did nothing. Chagrined, he asked for his release and got it. That very same night he went to work at the Trocadero. His opening number was "You Hit the Spot," a sentiment which was echoed by Darryl Zanuck, one of the patrons that night. Mr. Zanuck promptly hired him.

At Twentieth Century-Fox he was given a spot in "Sing, Baby, Sing." He was having trouble getting his numbers recorded properly when a luscious blonde swished up to him and offered to give him some pointers, "since I've had a little experience." Her name was Alice Faye. He saw stars. But promptly. He fell in love with her.

There was every reason under the sun why something wonderful should have come of the romance.

Tony Martin, born Alfred Morris, and brought up by his stepfather who owned a ladies' ready-to-wear shop in Oakland, California, had much in common with the pert, scenic blonde. For one thing she was Miss Simplicity. And who was he but Mr. Down-To-Earth? This quality in their make-up wasn't all they shared.

YIPPEE, FANS!



At last we have it for you—that biographical chart of your favorite "westerns" that you've been begging for! Imagine having at your fingertips the real names, birthplaces, birthdates, heights, weights, how they got their start, and studio addresses of over sixty of those rough-riding heroes, leering villains and wide-eyed heroines of your pet "horse opries!" Made up in a most attractive form, it will make your album proud as anything. Just send five cents in coin or stamps with the coupon below and your chart is as good as lassoed!

Information Desk, Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave., New York City
I am enclosing five cents in stamps or coin for which kindly send me your chart of the Western Stars.

Name .....
Street .....
City..... State.....
Please print name and address plainly

TELL ME ANOTHER AND WIN $5.00 —Says KLEENEX...

We will pay $5.00 for every "Kleenex True Confession" published. Mail to KLEENEX, 919 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

Don't put a Cold in your Pocket... Use KLEENEX*

KLEENEX*DISPOSABLE TISSUES (*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

Both loved to sing. Alice Faye was already a name. Tony Martin had quit St. Mary's College at eighteen (at the invitation of the authorities, he admits) to toot a saxophone. Crooning had been thrust upon him accidentally. He was astonished that anyone applauded. However, he took the hint, concentrated on his voice.

Finally, the two were ambitious beyond belief. To Alice Faye, alumna of Manhattan's Tenth Avenue and ex-member of the "line" of "George White's Scandals" Tony Martin was her kind, a plugger and a winner.

Marriage, therefore, was inevitable.

At Twentieth Century-Fox, Alice Faye caught on like an epidemic and became a box-office name overnight. Meanwhile, as an actor, Tony Martin was not setting the studio, much less the world, on fire. Instead he found himself slowly slipping into a role he despised—that of Mr. Alice Faye. To make matters worse, after his début in "Sing, Baby, Sing" he was assigned no parts. Fiercely proud, he bought back his contract (for $30,000). Then he set out to salvage his career. And above all, his confidence in himself.

He salvaged both career and self-confidence in short order, and in such spectacular style as to exceed his fondest dreams. He did it via a series of personal appearances at $7,000 per week. There was one tragic postscript to the success he was winning. Alice Faye brought suit for divorce and got it.

His sensational tour brought immediate reactions from Hollywood. He was offered $50,000 to do "Music in My Heart." He accepted somewhat cynically, mindful of the ill luck that dogged him in pictures. "Music in My Heart" did very well for itself, and for all concerned.

One of the screen's best bets for 1941, Tony Martin is in an eminently fine scoring position. With television on its way to the big time, he will be sitting even prettier.

It would seem that Tony Martin is all set. And so he is—except for one important item, which is probably the most important reason why he's so emphatic when he insists he has no time for romance.

Something he said the night he opened at the New York night club, the Versailles, was the tip-off. When the lights were dimmed so that Tony could croon in the gloaming, one of the admiring debbies shrieked:

"But, Tony, I can't see you."

"Neither can Alice," he came back, with a noticeable touch of melancholy.

THAT is just what the Thynmold Perforated Rubber Girdle will do for you! But you won't believe such a drastic change can be possible unless you actually try it yourself.

Test THYNMOLD For 10 Days ... at our expense!

If you cannot be fitted with a dress smaller than you normally wear . . . it won't cost you a penny!

Appear Slimmer At Once! Broad hips, bulging waistline, and diaphragm rolls . . . are smoothed out instantly. Made of the famous PERFOLAS-TIC pure Para rubber, perforated for ventilation, lined with soft fabric, THYNMOLD is delightfully comfortable. Separate overlapping Brassiere gives support and freedom of action.

Send for FREE trial Offer.

DIRECT PRODUCTS CO., INC.
Dept. 165S 358 Fifth Avenue, New York
Send illustrated folder, sample of perforated material, details of 10-day Trial Offer and $1.00 down plan.

Name .....

Address .....

There's good reason why PAZO ointment has been used by so many millions of sufferers from simple Piles. First, PAZO soothes inflamed areas—relieves pain and itching. Second, PAZO lubricates hardened, dried parts—helps prevent cracking and soreness. Third, PAZO tends to reduce swelling and check bleeding. Fourth, it's easy to use. PAZO's perforated Pile Pipe makes application simple, thorough. Your doctor can tell you about PAZO ointment. Get PAZO ointment from your druggist, today.

Grove Laboratories, Inc.
Dept. 202 MM-2, St. Louis, Mo.
FREE Offer Limited, MAIL TODAY! (Good only in U. S. A.)
Gentlemen: I want PAZO, FREE! (Mailed in a plain wrapper)

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State .....

A SMATTERING OF LEVANT

(Continued from page 27)

greet director Schertzinger. Didn't greet Don Ameche or Mary Martin, the stars. Didn't greet the crew members, who love his puns and between-scenes piano playing. He ignored everyone, asking only one question, "Where's the make-up man I had last time? He was telling me his life story and still had three years to go!"

Levant promptly injected some of his own gags into the script, had the studio hire two Steinway grand pianos for him (one for the set and another for practice at his apartment), tried to avoid the special wardrobe man, whose job was to see that hat-hater Levant didn't try to hide the gray felt he wears in the picture. (Said Levant, "I don't want a hat. It doesn't fit my character." Said the director, "In this picture you're supposed to look as if you have enough money to buy a hat!")

Asked if he likes Hollywood, he admits he does, very much. "But I won't ballyhoo the place. My enemies'll say I'm on the Chamber of Commerce payroll."

What he doesn't like about the place is the way it disrupts his curious erratic way of life. For instance, the studio demands he be on the set at nine in the morning. Levant is notorious for putting himself to sleep, after reading five newspapers and taking two sleeping pills, at five in the morning and waking at one in the afternoon to breakfast at a drugstore counter.

Other Levant habits are equally famous. In New York, he visits a psychiatrist almost daily. He practices his piano every afternoon. He doesn't drink whiskey, but averages 33 cups of coffee a day. He is a chain cigarette smoker, and smokes through an entire meal. He never walks, takes cabs everywhere, and cabbies know him as "Mr. Oscar." He is

(Continued on page 86)

The cast of Republic's "A Man Betrayed," (co-starring John Wayne and Frances Dee) played hookey one day to help John celebrate the arrival of a baby girl! She's his fourth child.

SITROUX Triple-Tested CLEANSING TISSUES

SOFTER Say "Sit-True" for tissues that are as soft as a kiss on the cheek.

STRONGER As strong as a man's fond embrace. Sitroux is made from pure cellulose.

MORE ABSORBENT Drinks in moisture. Ideal for beauty care and a thousand and one uses everywhere.

AT 5 & 10¢—DRUG & DEPT. STORES

● Now, at home, you can quickly and easily tint telltale streaks of gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Used for 28 years by thousands of women (men, too)—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless. No skin test needed, active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch as new gray appears. Easy to prove by tinting a test lock of your hair. 60c at drug or toilet counters on a money-back guarantee. Retain your youthful charm. Get BROWNATONE today.

Did "Diamond Jim" Have Stomach or Ulcer Pains?

